Tribal Justice

A new documentary about tribal judges creating justice systems from their traditions, modeling restorative justice in action

Raw and honest, Tribal Justice takes an unflinching look at criminal justice in Indian country... Alongside a fearless portrayal of reservation life and those caught up in the criminal justice system, this film highlights the potentially redemptive force of restorative justice in tribal communities. It's not to be missed.

—Angela R. Riley, Law Professor, Director, Native Nations Law and Policy Center, UCLA

This film is a wonderful way to educate people about tribal sovereignty and the ways we use it to resolve disputes in our tribal communities. —John Echohawk, Executive Director, Native American Rights Fund

Phenomenal, emotional, captures tribal courts and two wonderful spirits.

—Judge Richard Blake, Chief Judge of the Hoopa Tribe
