Acknowledgments

Many people contributed to this project in important ways. Each of them deserves acknowledgment and thanks.

The expert members of the Curriculum Design Work Group, whose names are listed on the following pages, provided critical advice and guidance throughout the project.

We would also like to express appreciation to the excellent faculty for teaching at the pilot program: Judge Susan P. Finlay (ret.), Mr. Carson L. Fox.; Judge Stephen V. Manley, Mr. Michael Rempel, and Judge Darrell W. Stevens.

This curriculum could not have been developed without the expertise of Kathleen Sikora, who wrote the curriculum and whose invaluable knowledge of educational methods contributed immensely to this product.

Thank you also to the participants at the pilot program: Making a Difference by Incorporating Collaborative Court Principles (September 2005) for their participation in this curriculum and for providing valuable feedback which will allow us to improve it.

We also owe acknowledgment to the Collaborative Justice Courts Advisory Committee chaired by Judge Jean Leonard and the Collaborative Courts Education Committee chaired by Judge Darrell W. Stevens (ret.) for their support throughout the project. Their names are listed on the following pages.

Last, but not least, thank you to the State Justice Institute and Kathy Schwartz for not only providing the monetary resources to develop the curriculum, but also for providing great guidance and support throughout the process.

Preface

This workbook is designed to be used by courts that are in the beginning stages of planning a collaborative court program. The material contained within however, has a much broader application. It can be effectively used by existing operational collaborative courts to review and refine their existing policies and procedures. A program may, for example, decide to use one or more of the modules to guide an annual strategic planning session. The modules may help a team develop an orientation plan when team member transition occurs. The modules can provide direction for ongoing cross-training. Any of the sections or subsections can also act as a framework for a steering committee or workgroup meeting agenda. Overall, this workbook is a tool that can be used in many ways by collaborative court programs at various stages in their planning and operations.
