Use this instruction in a negligence case if the only damages sought are for emotional distress. The doctrine of "negligent infliction of emotional distress" is not a separate tort or cause of action. It simply allows certain persons to recover damages for emotional distress only on a negligence cause of action even though they were not otherwise injured or harmed. (See Molien v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1980) 27 Cal.3d 916, 928 [167 Cal.Rptr. 831, 616 P.2d 813].)

A "bystander" case is one in which a plaintiff seeks recovery for damages for emotional distress suffered as a percipient witness of an injury to another person. If the plaintiff is a direct victim of tortious conduct, use CACI No. 1620, Negligence—Recovery of Damages for Emotional Distress—No Physical Injury—Direct Victim—Essential Factual Elements. For instructions for use for emotional distress arising from exposure to carcinogens, HIV, or AIDS, see CACI No. 1622, Negligence—Recovery of Damages for Emotional Distress—No Physical Injury—Fear of Cancer, HIV, or AIDS—Essential Factual Elements, and CACI No. 1623, Negligence—Recovery of Damages for Emotional Distress—No Physical Injury—Fear of Cancer, HIV, or AIDS—Malicious, Oppressive, or Fraudulent Conduct—Essential Factual Elements.

This instruction should be read in conjunction with instructions in the Negligence series (see CACI No. 400 et seq.) to further develop element 1.

Whether the plaintiff had a sufficiently close relationship with the victim should be determined as an issue of law because it is integral to the determination of whether a duty was owed to the plaintiff.

Include the optional language in element 2 only if the plaintiff claims virtual presence at the scene through technological means, and specify the technology used to assist the jury in understanding the concept of "virtual" presence. (See Ko v. Maxim Healthcare Services, Inc. (2020) 58 Cal.App.5th 1144, 1159 [272 Cal.Rptr.3d 906].)

There is some uncertainty as to how the "event" should be defined in element 2 and then just exactly what the plaintiff must perceive in element 3. When the event is something dramatic and visible, such as a traffic accident or a fire, it would seem that the plaintiff need not know anything about why the event occurred. (See Wilks v. Hom (1992) 2 Cal.App.4th 1264, 1271 [3 Cal.Rptr.2d 803].) And the California Supreme Court has stated that the bystander plaintiff need not contemporaneously understand the defendant's conduct as negligent, as opposed to harmful. (Bird v. Saenz (2002) 28 Cal.4th 910, 920 [123 Cal.Rptr.2d 465, 51 P.3d 324], original italics.)

But what constitutes perception of the event is less clear when the victim is clearly in observable distress, but the cause of that distress may not be observable. It has been held that the manufacture of a defective product is the event, which is not observable, despite the fact that the result was observable distress resulting in death. (See Fortman v. Förvaltningsbolaget Insulan AB (2013) 212 Cal.App.4th 830, 843–844 [151 Cal.Rptr.3d 320].) In another observable-distress case, medical negligence that led to distress resulting in death was found to be perceivable because the relatives who were present observed the decedent's acute respiratory distress and were aware that defendant's inadequate response caused her death. (See Keys v. Alta Bates Summit Medical Center (2015) 235 Cal.App.4th 484, 489–490 [185 Cal.Rptr.3d 313], emphasis added.) It might be argued that observable distress is the event and that the bystanders need not perceive anything about the cause of the distress. However, these cases indicate that is not the standard. But if it is not necessary to comprehend that negligence is causing the distress, it is not clear what it is that the bystander must perceive in element 3. Because of this uncertainty, the Advisory Committee has elected not to try to express element 3 any more specifically.

The explanation in the last paragraph of what constitutes "serious" emotional distress comes from the California Supreme Court. (See Molien, supra, 27 Cal.3d at p. 928.) In Wong v. Jing, an appellate court subsequently held that serious emotional distress from negligence without other injury is the same as "severe" emotional distress for the tort of intentional infliction of emotional distress. (Wong v. Jing (2010) 189 Cal.App.4th 1354, 1378 [117 Cal.Rptr.3d 747]; but see Keys, supra, 235 Cal.App.4th at p. 491 [finding last sentence of this instruction to be a correct description of the distress required].)

Sources and Authority

- "California's rule that plaintiff's fear for his own safety is compensable also presents a strong argument for the same rule as to fear for others; otherwise, some plaintiffs will falsely claim to have feared for themselves, and the honest parties unwilling to do so will be penalized. Moreover, it is incongruous and somewhat revolting to sanction recovery for the mother if she suffers shock from fear for her own safety and to deny it for shock from the witnessed death of her own daughter." (Dillon v. Legg (1968) 68 Cal.2d 728, 738, fn. 4 [69 Cal.Rptr. 72, 441 P.2d 912].)
- "As an introductory note, we observe that plaintiffs . . . framed both negligence and negligent infliction of emotional distress causes of action. To be precise, however, 'the [only] tort with which we are concerned is negligence. Negligent infliction of emotional distress is not an independent tort . . . .' " (Catsouras v. Department of California Highway Patrol (2010) 181 Cal.App.4th 856, 875–876 [104 Cal.Rptr.3d 352].)
- "In the absence of physical injury or impact to the plaintiff himself, damages for emotional distress should be recoverable only if the plaintiff: (1) is closely related to the injury victim, (2) is present at the scene of the injury-producing event at the time it occurs and is then aware that it is causing injury to the victim and, (3) as a result suffers emotional distress beyond that which would be anticipated in a disinterested witness." (Thing v. La Chusa (1989) 48 Cal.3d 644, 647 [257 Cal.Rptr. 865, 771 P.2d 814].)
- "[T]o satisfy the second Thing requirement the plaintiff must experience a contemporaneous sensory awareness of the causal connection between the defendant's infliction of harm and the injuries suffered by the close relative." (Fortman, supra, 212 Cal.App.4th at p. 836.)
- "Where plaintiffs allege they were virtually present at the scene of an injury-producing event sufficient for them to have a contemporaneous sensory awareness of the event causing injury to their loved one, they satisfy the second Thing requirement to state a cause of action for NIED. Just as the Supreme Court has ruled a 'plaintiff may recover based on an event perceived by other senses so long as the event is contemporaneously understood as causing injury to a close relative', so too can the [plaintiffs] pursue an NIED claim where, as alleged, they contemporaneously saw and heard [their child's] abuse, but with their senses technologically extended beyond the walls of their home." (Ko, supra, 58 Cal.App.5th at p. 1159, internal citation omitted.)

- "[A] plaintiff need not contemporaneously understand the defendant's conduct as negligent, as opposed to harmful. But the court confused awareness of negligence, a legal conclusion, with contemporaneous, understanding awareness of the event as causing harm to the victim." (Bird, supra, 28 Cal.4th at p. 920.)
- "Bird does not categorically bar plaintiffs who witness acts of medical negligence from pursuing NIED claims. 'This is not to say that a layperson can never perceive medical negligence or that one who does perceive it cannot assert a valid claim for NIED.' Particularly, a NIED claim may arise when . . . caregivers fail 'to respond significantly to symptoms obviously requiring immediate medical attention.' " (Keys, supra, 235 Cal.App.4th at p. 489.)
- "The injury-producing event here was defendant's lack of acuity and response to [decedent]'s inability to breathe, a condition the plaintiffs observed and were aware was causing her injury." (Keys, supra, 235 Cal.App.4th at p. 490.)
- "Thing does not require that the plaintiff have an awareness of what caused the injury-producing event, but the plaintiff must have an understanding perception of the 'event as causing harm to the victim.' " (Fortman, supra, 212 Cal.App.4th at p. 841, fn. 4.)
- "[W]e also reject [plaintiff]'s attempt to expand bystander recovery to hold a product manufacturer strictly liable for emotional distress when the plaintiff observes injuries sustained by a close relative arising from an unobservable product failure. To do so would eviscerate the second Thing requirement." (Fortman, supra, 212 Cal.App.4th at pp. 843–844.)
- "Absent exceptional circumstances, recovery should be limited to relatives residing in the same household, or parents, siblings, children, and grandparents of the victim." (Thing, supra, 48 Cal.3d at p. 668, fn. 10.)
- "[A]n unmarried cohabitant may not recover damages for emotional distress based on such injury." (Elden v. Sheldon (1988) 46 Cal.3d 267, 273 [250 Cal.Rptr. 254, 758 P.2d 582].)
- "Although a plaintiff may establish presence at the scene through nonvisual sensory perception, 'someone who hears an accident but does not then know it is causing injury to a relative does not have a viable [bystander] claim for [negligent infliction of emotional distress], even if the missing knowledge is acquired moments later.' " (Ra v. Superior Court (2007) 154 Cal.App.4th 142, 149 [64 Cal.Rptr.3d 539], internal citation omitted.)
- "[I]t is not necessary that a plaintiff bystander actually have witnessed the infliction of injury to her child, provided that the plaintiff was at the scene of the accident and was sensorially aware, in some important way, of the accident and the necessarily inflicted injury to her child." (Wilks, supra, 2 Cal.App.4th at p. 1271.)
- " '[S]erious mental distress may be found where a reasonable man, normally constituted, would be unable to adequately cope with the mental stress engendered by the circumstances of the case.' " (Molien, supra, 27 Cal.3d at pp. 927–928.)

- "In our view, this articulation of 'serious emotional distress' is functionally the same as the articulation of 'severe emotional distress' [as required for intentional infliction of emotional distress]. Indeed, given the meaning of both phrases, we can perceive no material distinction between them and can conceive of no reason why either would, or should, describe a greater or lesser degree of emotional distress than the other for purposes of establishing a tort claim seeking damages for such an injury." (Wong, supra, 189 Cal.App.4th at p. 1378.)
- "We have no reason to question the jury's conclusion that [plaintiffs] suffered serious emotional distress as a result of watching [decedent]'s struggle to breathe that led to her death. The jury was properly instructed, as explained in Thing, that '[s]erious emotional distress exists if an ordinary, reasonable person would be unable to cope with it.' The instructions clarify that 'Emotional distress includes suffering, anguish, fright, . . . nervousness, grief, anxiety, worry, shock . . . .' Viewed through this lens there is no question that [plaintiffs'] testimony provides sufficient proof of serious emotional distress." (Keys, supra, 235 Cal.App.4th at p. 491, internal citation omitted.)
- "[W]here a participant in a sport has expressly assumed the risk of injury from a defendant's conduct, the defendant no longer owes a duty of care to bystanders with respect to the risk expressly assumed by the participant. The defendant can therefore assert the participant's express assumption of the risk against the bystanders' NIED claims." (Eriksson v. Nunnink (2015) 233 Cal.App.4th 708, 731 [183 Cal.Rptr.3d 234].)

Secondary Sources

6 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 1144–1158

Croskey et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch. 11-F, Negligent Infliction Of Emotional Distress, ¶ 11:101 (The Rutter Group)

1 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 5, Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress, § 5.04 (Matthew Bender)

32 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 362, Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress, § 362.11 (Matthew Bender)

15 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 153*, Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress*, §§ 153.31 et seq., 153.45 et seq. (Matthew Bender)

1622. Negligence—Recovery of Damages for Emotional Distress—No Physical Injury—Fear of Cancer, HIV, or AIDS—Essential Factual Elements

---

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant]'s conduct caused [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] to suffer serious emotional distress by exposing [name of plaintiff] to [insert applicable carcinogen, toxic substance, HIV, or AIDS]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] was exposed to [insert applicable carcinogen, toxic substance, HIV, or AIDS] as a result of [name of defendant]'s negligence;
2. That [name of plaintiff] suffered serious emotional distress from a fear that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] will develop [insert applicable cancer, HIV, or AIDS] as a result of the exposure;
3. That reliable medical or scientific opinion confirms that it is more likely than not that [name of plaintiff] will develop [insert applicable cancer, HIV, or AIDS] as a result of the exposure; and
4. That [name of defendant]'s negligence was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s serious emotional distress.

Emotional distress includes suffering, anguish, fright, horror, nervousness, grief, anxiety, worry, shock, humiliation, and shame. Serious emotional distress exists if an ordinary, reasonable person would be unable to cope with it.

New September 2003; Revised June 2014, December 2014

Directions for Use

Use this instruction in a negligence case if the only damages sought are for emotional distress. The doctrine of "negligent infliction of emotional distress" is not a separate tort or cause of action. It simply allows certain persons to recover damages for emotional distress only on a negligence cause of action even though they were not otherwise currently injured or harmed. (See Molien v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1980) 27 Cal.3d 916, 928 [167 Cal.Rptr. 831, 616 P.2d 813].)

Recovery for emotional distress without other current harm or injury is allowed for negligent exposure to a disease-causing substance, but only if the plaintiff can establish that it is more likely than not that the plaintiff will contract the disease. (See Potter v. Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. (1993) 6 Cal.4th 965, 997 [25 Cal.Rptr.2d 550, 863 P.2d 795.) There may be other harmful agents and medical conditions that could support this claim for damages.

This instruction should be read in conjunction with either CACI No. 401, Basic Standard of Care, or CACI No. 418, Presumption of Negligence per se.

If plaintiff alleges that defendant's conduct constituted oppression, fraud, or malice, then CACI No. 1623, Negligence—Recovery of Damages for Emotional Distress—No Physical Injury—Fear of Cancer, HIV, or AIDS—Malicious, Oppressive, or Fraudulent Conduct—Essential Factual Elements, should be read.

The explanation in the last paragraph of what constitutes "serious" emotional distress comes from the California Supreme Court. (See Molien, supra, 27 Cal.3d at p. 928.) In Wong v. Jing, an appellate court subsequently held that serious emotional distress from negligence without other injury is the same as "severe" emotional distress for the tort of intentional infliction of emotional distress. (Wong v. Jing (2010) 189 Cal.App.4th 1354, 1378 [117 Cal.Rptr.3d 747].)

Sources and Authority

- " '[D]amages for negligently inflicted emotional distress may be recovered in the absence of physical injury or impact . . . .' " (Potter, supra, 6 Cal.4th at p. 986, internal citation omitted.)
- "[T]he way to avoid damage awards for unreasonable fear, i.e., in those cases where the feared cancer is at best only remotely possible, is to require a showing of the actual likelihood of the feared cancer to establish its significance." (Potter, supra, 6 Cal.4th at p. 990.)
- "[D]amages for fear of cancer may be recovered only if the plaintiff pleads and proves that (1) as a result of the defendant's negligent breach of a duty owed to the plaintiff, the plaintiff is exposed to a toxic substance which threatens cancer; and (2) the plaintiff's fear stems from a knowledge, corroborated by reliable medical or scientific opinion, that it is more likely than not that the plaintiff will develop the cancer in the future due to the toxic exposure." (Potter, supra, 6 Cal.4th at p. 997.)
- " '[S]erious mental distress may be found where a reasonable man, normally constituted, would be unable to adequately cope with the mental stress engendered by the circumstances of the case.' " (Molien, supra, 27 Cal.3d at pp. 927–928.)
- "In our view, this articulation of 'serious emotional distress' is functionally the same as the articulation of 'severe emotional distress' [as required for intentional infliction of emotional distress]. Indeed, given the meaning of both phrases, we can perceive no material distinction between them and can conceive of no reason why either would, or should, describe a greater or lesser degree of emotional distress than the other for purposes of establishing a tort claim seeking damages for such an injury." (Wong, supra, 189 Cal.App.4th at p. 1378.)
- "[W]e hold that the cost of medical monitoring is a compensable item of damages where the proofs demonstrate, through reliable medical expert testimony, that the need for future monitoring is a reasonably certain consequence of a plaintiff's toxic exposure and that the recommended monitoring is reasonable." (Potter, supra, 6 Cal.4th at p. 1009.)

- "All of the policy concerns expressed in Potter apply with equal force in the fear of AIDS context." (Kerins v. Hartley (1994) 27 Cal.App.4th 1062, 1074 [33 Cal.Rptr.2d 172].)
- "[Plaintiff parent] claims the likelihood of actual injury to [child] is immaterial and that, in short, the rule announced in Potter regarding fear of cancer should not be applied to a case involving fear of AIDS. We disagree." (Herbert v. Regents of University of California (1994) 26 Cal.App.4th 782, 786 [31 Cal.Rptr.2d 709].)
- "[W]hen a defendant demonstrates that a plaintiff's smoking is negligent and that a portion of the plaintiff's fear of developing cancer is attributable to the smoking, comparative fault principles may be applied in determining the extent to which the plaintiff's emotional distress damages for such fear should be reduced to reflect the proportion of such damages for which the plaintiff should properly bear the responsibility." (Potter, supra, 6 Cal.4th at pp. 965, 1011.)

Secondary Sources

6 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, § 1174

Haning et al., California Practice Guide: Personal Injury, Ch. 3-C, Specific Items Of Compensatory Damages, ¶ 3:218.6 (The Rutter Group)

1 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 5, Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress, § 5.02 (Matthew Bender)

32 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 362, Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress, § 362.11[3][c] (Matthew Bender)

15 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 153, Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress, § 153.38 (Matthew Bender)

1623. Negligence—Recovery of Damages for Emotional Distress—No Physical Injury—Fear of Cancer, HIV, or AIDS—Malicious, Oppressive, or Fraudulent Conduct—Essential Factual Elements

---

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] acted with [malice/oppression/fraudulent intent] in exposing [name of plaintiff] to [insert applicable carcinogen, toxic substance, HIV, or AIDS] and that this conduct caused [name of plaintiff] to suffer serious emotional distress. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] was exposed to [insert applicable carcinogen, toxic substance, HIV, or AIDS] as a result of [name of defendant]'s negligent conduct;

2. That [name of defendant] acted with [malice/oppression/fraudulent intent] because [insert one or more of the following, as applicable]:

   [[*Name of defendant] intended to cause injury to [name of plaintiff];] [or]

   [[*Name of defendant]'s conduct was despicable and was carried out with a willful or conscious disregard of [name of plaintiff]'s rights or safety;] [or]

   [[*Name of defendant]'s conduct was despicable and subjected [name of plaintiff] to cruel and unjust hardship in conscious disregard of [name of plaintiff]'s rights;] [or]

   [[*Name of defendant] intentionally misrepresented or concealed a material fact known to [name of defendant], intending to cause [name of plaintiff] harm;]

3. That [name of plaintiff] suffered serious emotional distress from a fear that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] will develop [insert applicable cancer, HIV, or AIDS] as a result of the exposure;

4. That reliable medical or scientific opinion confirms that [name of plaintiff]'s risk of developing [insert applicable cancer, HIV, or AIDS] was significantly increased by the exposure and has resulted in an actual risk that is significant; and

5. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s serious emotional distress.

Emotional distress includes suffering, anguish, fright, horror, nervousness, grief, anxiety, worry, shock, humiliation, and shame. Serious emotional distress exists if an ordinary, reasonable person would be unable to cope with it.

"Despicable conduct" is conduct that is so mean, vile, base, or contemptible that it would be looked down on and despised by reasonable people.

New September 2003; Revised June 2014, December 2014

Directions for Use

Use this instruction in a negligence case if the only damages sought are for emotional distress. There is no separate tort or cause of action for "negligent infliction of emotional distress." The doctrine is one that allows certain persons to recover damages for emotional distress only on a negligence cause of action even though they were not otherwise currently injured or harmed. (See Molien v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1980) 27 Cal.3d 916, 928 [167 Cal.Rptr. 831, 616 P.2d 813].)

Recovery for emotional distress without other current harm or injury is allowed for negligent exposure to a disease-causing substance. If the plaintiff can prove oppression, fraud, or malice, it is not necessary to establish that it is more likely than not that the plaintiff will contract the disease. (See Potter v. Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. (1993) 6 Cal.4th 965, 998 [25 Cal.Rptr.2d 550, 863 P.2d 795.) Use CACI No. 1622, Negligence—Recovery of Damages for Emotional Distress—No Physical Injury—Fear of Cancer, HIV, or AIDS—Essential Factual Elements, if plaintiff alleges exposure without oppression, fraud, or malice.

This instruction should be read in conjunction with either CACI No. 401, Basic Standard of Care, or CACI No. 418, Presumption of Negligence per se.

"Oppression, fraud, or malice" is used here as defined by Civil Code section 3294, except that the higher "clear and convincing" burden of proof is not required in this context. (See Potter, supra, 6 Cal.4th at p. 1000.)

In some cases the judge should make clear that the defendant does not need to have known of the individual plaintiff where there is a broad exposure and plaintiff is a member of the class that was exposed.

The explanation in the next-to-last paragraph of what constitutes "serious" emotional distress comes from the California Supreme Court. (See Molien, supra, 27 Cal.3d at p. 928.) In Wong v. Jing, an appellate court subsequently held that serious emotional distress from negligence without other injury is the same as "severe" emotional distress for the tort of intentional infliction of emotional distress. (Wong v. Jing (2010) 189 Cal.App.4th 1354, 1378 [117 Cal.Rptr.3d 747].)

Sources and Authority

- Punitive Damages: Malice, Oppression, and Fraud Defined. Civil Code section 3294(c).
- " '[D]amages for negligently inflicted emotional distress may be recovered in the absence of physical injury or impact . . . .' " (Potter, supra, 6 Cal.4th at p. 986.)
- "[A] toxic exposure plaintiff need not meet the more likely than not threshold for fear of cancer recovery in a negligence action if the plaintiff pleads and proves that the defendant's conduct in causing the exposure amounts to 'oppression, fraud, or malice' as defined in Civil Code section 3294." (Potter, supra, 6 Cal.4th at p. 998.)

- " '[S]erious mental distress may be found where a reasonable man, normally constituted, would be unable to adequately cope with the mental stress engendered by the circumstances of the case.' " (Molien, supra, 27 Cal.3d at pp. 927–928.)
- "[D]amages for fear of cancer may be recovered only if the plaintiff pleads and proves that (1) as a result of the defendant's negligent breach of a duty owed to the plaintiff, the plaintiff is exposed to a toxic substance which threatens cancer; and (2) the plaintiff's fear stems from a knowledge, corroborated by reliable medical or scientific opinion, that it is more likely than not that the plaintiff will develop the cancer in the future due to the toxic exposure." (Potter, supra, 6 Cal.4th at p. 997.)
- "In our view, this articulation of 'serious emotional distress' is functionally the same as the articulation of 'severe emotional distress' [as required for intentional infliction of emotional distress]. Indeed, given the meaning of both phrases, we can perceive no material distinction between them and can conceive of no reason why either would, or should, describe a greater or lesser degree of emotional distress than the other for purposes of establishing a tort claim seeking damages for such an injury." (Wong, supra, 189 Cal.App.4th at p. 1378.)
- "All of the policy concerns expressed in Potter apply with equal force in the fear of AIDS context." (Kerins v. Hartley (1994) 27 Cal.App.4th 1062, 1074 [33 Cal.Rptr.2d 172].)
- "[Plaintiff parent] claims the likelihood of actual injury to [child] is immaterial and that, in short, the rule announced in Potter regarding fear of cancer should not be applied to a case involving fear of AIDS. We disagree." (Herbert v. Regents of University of California (1994) 26 Cal.App.4th 782, 786 [31 Cal.Rptr.2d 709].)
- "Despicable conduct is conduct which is so vile, base, contemptible, miserable, wretched or loathsome that it would be looked down upon and despised by ordinary decent people." (Mock v. Mich. Millers Mut. Ins. Co. (1992) 4 Cal.App.4th 306, 331 [5 Cal.Rptr.2d 594].)
- "Used in its ordinary sense, the adjective 'despicable' is a powerful term that refers to circumstances that are 'base,' 'vile,' or 'contemptible.' " (College Hospital, Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 8 Cal.4th 704, 725 [34 Cal.Rptr.2d 898, 882 P.2d 894].)
- "Civil Code section 3294 requires a plaintiff to prove oppression, fraud, or malice by 'clear and convincing evidence' for purposes of punitive damages recovery. We decline to impose this stringent burden of proof for recovery of fear of cancer damages in negligence cases for two reasons. First, we have already adopted strict limitations on the availability of damages for negligently inflicted fear of cancer; an additional hurdle at this point is unnecessary for public policy purposes. Second, to recover compensatory damages in an action for intentional infliction of emotional distress, a plaintiff need only prove the fact that a defendant intentionally inflicted such distress by a preponderance of the evidence. It is therefore both logical and consistent to utilize the same burden of proof for recovery of compensatory damages when a defendant has acted with 'oppression, fraud or malice' to negligently inflict emotional distress." (Potter, supra, 6 Cal.4th at p. 1000, fn. 20.)

- "[W]hen a defendant demonstrates that a plaintiff's smoking is negligent and that a portion of the plaintiff's fear of developing cancer is attributable to the smoking, comparative fault principles may be applied in determining the extent to which the plaintiff's emotional distress damages for such fear should be reduced to reflect the proportion of such damages for which the plaintiff should properly bear the responsibility." (Potter, supra, 6 Cal.4th at p. 1011.)

Secondary Sources

6 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, § 1174

Haning et al., California Practice Guide: Personal Injury, Ch. 3-C, Specific Items Of Compensatory Damages, ¶¶ 3:881–3:883 (The Rutter Group)

1 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 5, Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress, § 5.02 (Matthew Bender)

32 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 362, Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress, § 362.11[3][c] (Matthew Bender)

15 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 153, Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress, § 153.38 (Matthew Bender)

1624–1699. Reserved for Future Use

VF-1600. Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct outrageous?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. [Did [name of defendant] intend to cause [name of plaintiff] emotional distress?] [or]

   [Did [name of defendant] act with reckless disregard of the probability that [name of plaintiff] would suffer emotional distress, knowing that [name of plaintiff] was present when the conduct occurred?]

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of plaintiff] suffer severe emotional distress?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s severe emotional distress?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

   [a. Past economic loss

   [lost earnings $_____]

   [lost profits $_____]

   [medical expenses $_____]

   [other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1600, Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 5 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest.

This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-1601. Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress—Affirmative Defense—Privileged Conduct

---

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of defendant] exercising [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] legal rights or protecting [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] economic interests?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, skip questions 2 and 3 and answer question 4.

2. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct lawful and consistent with community standards?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, skip question 3 and answer question 4.

3. Did [name of defendant] have a good-faith belief that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] had a legal right to engage in the conduct?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is no, then answer question 4. If you answered yes, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct outrageous?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. [Did [name of defendant] intend to cause [name of plaintiff] emotional distress?]

   [or]

   [Did [*name of defendant] act with reckless disregard of the probability that [name of plaintiff] would suffer emotional distress, knowing that [name of plaintiff] was present when the conduct occurred?]

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Did [name of plaintiff] suffer severe emotional distress?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s severe emotional distress?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 7 is yes, then answer question 8. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

8. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. [Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. [Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1600, Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress—Essential Factual Elements, and CACI No. 1605, Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress—Affirmative Defense-Privileged Conduct.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 8 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-1602. Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress—Fear of Cancer, HIV, or AIDS

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct outrageous?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of defendant]'s conduct expose [name of plaintiff] to [insert applicable carcinogen, toxic substance, HIV, or AIDS]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. [Did [name of defendant] intend to cause [name of plaintiff] emotional distress?] [or]

   [Did [name of defendant] act with reckless disregard of the probability that [[name of plaintiff]/the group of individuals including [name of plaintiff]] would suffer emotional distress, knowing that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/they] [was/were] present when the conduct occurred?]

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did [name of plaintiff] suffer severe emotional distress from a reasonable fear of developing [insert cancer, HIV, or AIDS]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s severe emotional distress?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1601, Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress—Fear of Cancer, HIV, or AIDS.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 6 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-1603. Negligence—Recovery of Damages for Emotional Distress—No Physical Injury—Direct Victim

---

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of defendant] negligent?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of plaintiff] suffer serious emotional distress?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Was [name of defendant]'s negligence a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s serious emotional distress?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

   [a. Past economic loss

   [lost earnings $_____]

   [lost profits $_____]

   [medical expenses $_____]

   [other past economic loss $_____]

   Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

   [b. Future economic loss

   [lost earnings $_____]

   [lost profits $_____]

   [medical expenses $_____]

   [other future economic loss $_____]

   Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, June 2014, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1620, Negligence—Recovery of Damages for Emotional Distress—No Physical Injury—Direct Victim—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 4 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-1604. Negligence—Recovery of Damages for Emotional Distress—No Physical Injury—Bystander

---

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of defendant] negligently cause [injury to/the death of] [name of victim]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. When the [describe event, e.g., traffic accident] that caused [injury to/the death of] [name of victim] occurred, was [name of plaintiff] [virtually] present at the scene [through [specify technological means]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Was [name of plaintiff] then aware that the [e.g., traffic accident] was causing [injury to/the death of] [name of victim]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did [name of plaintiff] suffer serious emotional distress?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s serious emotional distress?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, June 2014, December 2016, May 2022, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1621, Negligence—Recovery of Damages for Emotional Distress—No Physical Injury—Bystander—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 6 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-1605. Negligence—Recovery of Damages for Emotional Distress—No Physical Injury—Fear of Cancer, HIV, or AIDS

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of plaintiff] exposed to [insert applicable carcinogen, toxic substance, HIV, or AIDS] as a result of [name of defendant]'s negligence?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of plaintiff] suffer serious emotional distress from a fear that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] would develop [insert applicable cancer, HIV, or AIDS] as a result of the exposure?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Does reliable medical or scientific opinion confirm that it is more likely than not that [name of plaintiff] will develop [insert applicable cancer, HIV, or AIDS] as a result of the exposure?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was [name of defendant]'s negligence a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s serious emotional distress?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

   [a. Past economic loss

   [lost earnings $_____]

   [lost profits $_____]

   [medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, June 2014, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1622, Negligence—Recovery of Damages for Emotional Distress—No Physical Injury—Fear of Cancer, HIV, or AIDS—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 5 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-1606. Negligence—Recovery of Damages for Emotional Distress—No Physical Injury—Fear of Cancer, HIV, or AIDS—Malicious, Oppressive, or Fraudulent Conduct

---

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of plaintiff] exposed to [insert applicable carcinogen, toxic substance, HIV, or AIDS] as a result of [name of defendant]'s conduct?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of defendant] act with [malice/oppression/fraudulent intent] because [insert one or more of the following, as applicable:]

   [[*name of defendant] intended to cause injury to [name of plaintiff]?] [or]

   [[*name of defendant]'s conduct was despicable and was carried out with a willful or conscious disregard of [name of plaintiff]'s rights or safety?] [or]

   [[*name of defendant]'s conduct was despicable and subjected [name of plaintiff] to cruel and unjust hardship in conscious disregard of [name of plaintiff]'s rights?] [or]

   [[*name of defendant] intentionally misrepresented or concealed a material fact known to [name of defendant], intending to cause [name of plaintiff] harm?]

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of plaintiff] suffer serious emotional distress from a fear, confirmed by reliable medical or scientific opinion, that [name of plaintiff]'s risk of developing [insert applicable cancer, HIV, or AIDS] was significantly increased by the exposure and has resulted in an actual risk that is significant?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s serious emotional distress?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, June 2014, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1623, Negligence—Recovery of Damages for Emotional Distress—No Physical Injury—Fear of Cancer, HIV, or AIDS—Malicious, Oppressive, or Fraudulent Conduct—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 5 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-1607–VF-1699. Reserved for Future Use

DEFAMATION

1700. Defamation per se—Essential Factual Elements (Public Officer/Figure and Limited Public Figure)

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] harmed [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] by making [one or more of] the following statement(s): [list all claimed per se defamatory statements]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove that all of the following are more likely true than not true:

Liability

1. That [name of defendant] made [one or more of] the statement(s) to [a person/persons] other than [name of plaintiff];
2. That [this person/these people] reasonably understood that the statement(s) [was/were] about [name of plaintiff];
3. [That [this person/these people] reasonably understood the statement(s) to mean that [insert ground(s) for defamation per se, e.g., "[name of plaintiff] had committed a crime"]]; and
4. That the statement(s) [was/were] false.

In addition, [name of plaintiff] must prove by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] knew the statement(s) [was/were] false or had serious doubts about the truth of the statement(s).

Actual Damages

If [name of plaintiff] has proved all of the above, then [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] is entitled to recover [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] actual damages if [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] proves that [name of defendant]'s wrongful conduct was a substantial factor in causing any of the following:

a. Harm to [name of plaintiff]'s property, business, trade, profession, or occupation;
b. Expenses [name of plaintiff] had to pay as a result of the defamatory statements;
c. Harm to [name of plaintiff]'s reputation; or
d. Shame, mortification, or hurt feelings.

Assumed Damages

Even if [name of plaintiff] has not proved any actual damages for harm to reputation or shame, mortification, or hurt feelings, the law nonetheless assumes that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] has suffered this harm. Without presenting evidence of damage, [name of plaintiff] is entitled to receive compensation for this assumed harm in whatever sum you believe is reasonable. You must award at least a nominal sum, such as one dollar.

Punitive Damages

[*Name of plaintiff] may also recover damages to punish [name of defendant] if [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] proves by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] acted with malice, oppression, or fraud.

[*For specific provisions, see CACI Nos. 3940–3949.]

New September 2003; Revised April 2008, June 2016, December 2016, January 2018

Directions for Use

Special verdict form CACI No. VF-1700, Defamation per se (Public Officer/Figure and Limited Public Figure), should be used in this type of case.

Use the bracketed element 3 only if the statement is not defamatory on its face (i.e., if the judge has not determined that the statement is defamatory as a matter of law). For statutory grounds of defamation per se, see Civil Code sections 45 (libel) and 46 (slander). Note that certain specific grounds of libel per se have been defined by case law.

An additional element of a defamation claim is that the alleged defamatory statement is "unprivileged." (Hui v. Sturbaum (2014) 222 Cal.App.4th 1109, 1118 [166 Cal.Rptr.3d 569].) If this element presents an issue for the jury, an instruction on the "unprivileged" element should be given.

Under the common-interest privilege of Civil Code section 47(c), the defendant bears the initial burden of showing facts to bring the communication within the privilege. The plaintiff then must prove that the statement was made with malice. (Lundquist v. Reusser (1994) 7 Cal.4th 1193, 1203 [31 Cal.Rptr.2d 776, 875 P.2d 1279].) If the common-interest privilege is at issue, give CACI No. 1723, Common Interest Privilege—Malice. The elements of CACI No. 1723 constitute the "unprivileged" element of this basic claim.

If the privilege of Civil Code section 47(d) for a privileged publication or broadcast is at issue, give CACI No. 1724, Fair and True Reporting Privilege. (See J-M Manufacturing Co., Inc. v. Phillips & Cohen LLP (2016) 247 Cal.App.4th 87 [201 Cal.Rptr.3d 782].) If some other privilege is at issue, an additional element or instruction targeting that privilege will be required. (See, e.g., Civ. Code, § 47(b); Argentieri v. Zuckerberg (2017) 8 Cal.App.5th 768, 780–787 [214 Cal.Rptr.3d 358] [litigation privilege].)

Sources and Authority

- Defamation. Civil Code section 44.
- Libel Defined. Civil Code section 45.
- Libel per se. Civil Code section 45a.

- Slander Defined. Civil Code section 46.
- "Defamation is the intentional publication of a statement of fact that is false, unprivileged, and has a natural tendency to injure or that causes special damage." (Grenier v. Taylor (2015) 234 Cal.App.4th 471, 486 [183 Cal.Rptr.3d 867].)
- "The elements of a defamation claim are (1) a publication that is (2) false, (3) defamatory, (4) unprivileged, and (5) has a natural tendency to injure or causes special damage. 'In general, . . . a written communication that is false, that is not protected by any privilege, and that exposes a person to contempt or ridicule or certain other reputational injuries, constitutes libel.' The defamatory statement must specifically refer to, or be ' "of [or] concerning," ' the plaintiff." (Jackson v. Mayweather (2017) 10 Cal.App.5th 1240, 1259 [217 Cal.Rptr.3d 234], internal citations omitted.)
- " 'A statement is defamatory when it tends "directly to injure [a person] in respect to [that person's] office, profession, trade or business, either by imputing to [the person] general disqualification in those respects which the office or other occupation peculiarly requires, or by imputing something with reference to [the person's] office, profession, trade, or business that has a natural tendency to lessen its profits." ' " (Issa v. Applegate (2019) 31 Cal.App.5th 689, 702 [242 Cal.Rptr.3d 809], internal citation omitted.)
- "In a case in which a plaintiff seeks to maintain an action for defamation by implication, the plaintiff must demonstrate that (1) his or her interpretation of the statement is reasonable; (2) the implication or implications to be drawn convey defamatory facts, not opinions; (3) the challenged implications are not ' "substantially true" '; and (4) the identified reasonable implications could also be reasonably deemed defamatory." (Issa, supra, 31 Cal.App.5th at p. 707.)
- " 'If the person defamed is a public figure, he cannot recover unless he proves, by clear and convincing evidence . . . , that the libelous statement was made with " 'actual malice'—that is, with knowledge that it was false or with reckless disregard of whether it was false or not." ' 'The rationale for such differential treatment is, first, that the public figure has greater access to the media and therefore greater opportunity to rebut defamatory statements, and second, that those who have become public figures have done so voluntarily and therefore "invite attention and comment." ' " (Jackson, supra, 10 Cal.App.5th at p. 1259, footnotes and internal citations omitted.)
- "[S]tatements cannot form the basis of a defamation action if they cannot be reasonably interpreted as stating actual facts about an individual. Thus, rhetorical hyperbole, vigorous epithets, lusty and imaginative expressions of contempt and language used in a loose, figurative sense will not support a defamation action." (Grenier, supra, 234 Cal.App.4th at p. 486.)
- " ' "If no reasonable reader would perceive in a false and unprivileged publication a meaning which tended to injure the subject's reputation in any of the enumerated respects, then there is no libel at all. If such a reader would perceive a defamatory meaning without extrinsic aid beyond his or her own intelligence and common sense, then . . . there is a libel per se. But if the reader would be able to recognize a defamatory meaning only by virtue of his or her knowledge of specific facts and circumstances, extrinsic to the publication, which are not matters of common knowledge rationally attributable to all reasonable persons, then . . . the libel cannot be libel per se but will be libel per quod," requiring pleading and proof of special damages.' " (Barker v. Fox & Associates (2015) 240 Cal.App.4th 333, 351–352 [192 Cal.Rptr.3d 511].)

- "A slander that falls within the first four subdivisions of Civil Code section 46 is slander per se and requires no proof of actual damages. A slander that does not fit into those four subdivisions is slander per quod, and special damages are required for there to be any recovery for that slander." (The Nethercutt Collection v. Regalia (2009) 172 Cal.App.4th 361, 367 [90 Cal.Rptr.3d 882], internal citations omitted.)
- "With respect to slander per se, the trial court decides if the alleged statement falls within Civil Code section 46, subdivisions 1 through 4. It is then for the trier of fact to determine if the statement is defamatory. This allocation of responsibility may appear, at first glance, to result in an overlap of responsibilities because a trial court determination that the statement falls within those categories would seemingly suggest that the statement, if false, is necessarily defamatory. But a finder of fact might rely upon extraneous evidence to conclude that, under the circumstances, the statement was not defamatory." (The Nethercutt Collection, supra, 172 Cal.App.4th at pp. 368–369.)
- "[T]he jury was instructed that if it found that defendant published matter that was defamatory on its face and it found by clear and convincing evidence that defendant knew the statement was false or published it in reckless disregard of whether it was false, then the jury 'also may award plaintiff presumed general damages.' Presumed damages 'are those damages that necessarily result from the publication of defamatory matter and are presumed to exist. They include reasonable compensation for loss of reputation, shame, mortification, and hurt feeling. No definite standard or method of calculation is prescribed by law by which to fix reasonable compensation for presumed damages, and no evidence of actual harm is required. Nor is the opinion of any witness required as to the amount of such reasonable compensation. In making an award for presumed damages, you shall exercise your authority with calm and reasonable judgment and the damages you fix shall be just and reasonable in the light of the evidence. You may in the exercise of your discretion award nominal damages only, namely an insignificant sum such as one dollar.' [¶] . . . [¶] . . . [T]he instant instruction, which limits damages to 'those damages that necessarily result from the publication of defamatory matter,' constitutes substantial compliance with [Civil Code] section 3283. Thus, the instant instructions, 'if obeyed, did not allow the jurors to "enter the realm of speculation" regarding future suffering.' " (Sommer v. Gabor (1995) 40 Cal.App.4th 1455, 1472–1473 [48 Cal.Rptr.2d 235], internal citations omitted.)

- "In defamation actions generally, factual truth is a defense which it is the defendant's burden to prove. In a defamation action against a newspaper by a private person suing over statements of public concern, however, the First Amendment places the burden of proving falsity on the plaintiff. As a matter of constitutional law, therefore, media statements on matters of public interest, including statements of opinion which reasonably imply a knowledge of facts, 'must be provable as false before there can be liability under state defamation law.' " (Eisenberg v. Alameda Newspapers (1999) 74 Cal.App.4th 1359, 1382 [88 Cal.Rptr.2d 802], internal citations omitted.)
- In matters involving public concern, the First Amendment protection applies to nonmedia defendants, putting the burden of proving falsity of the statement on the plaintiff. (Nizam-Aldine v. City of Oakland (1996) 47 Cal.App.4th 364, 375 [54 Cal.Rptr.2d 781].)
- "Publication means communication to some third person who understands the defamatory meaning of the statement and its application to the person to whom reference is made. Publication need not be to the 'public' at large; communication to a single individual is sufficient." (Smith, supra, 72 Cal.App.4th at p. 645, internal citations omitted.)
- "[W]hen a party repeats a slanderous charge, he is equally guilty of defamation, even though he states the source of the charge and indicates that he is merely repeating a rumor." (Jackson v. Paramount Pictures Corp. (1998) 68 Cal.App.4th 10, 26 [80 Cal.Rptr.2d 1], internal citation omitted.)
- "At common law, one who republishes a defamatory statement is deemed thereby to have adopted it and so may be held liable, together with the person who originated the statement, for resulting injury to the reputation of the defamation victim. California has adopted the common law in this regard, although by statute the republication of defamatory statements is privileged in certain defined situations." (Khawar v. Globe Internat. (1998) 19 Cal.4th 254, 268 [79 Cal.Rptr.2d 178, 965 P.2d 696], internal citations omitted.)
- The general rule is that "a plaintiff cannot manufacture a defamation cause of action by publishing the statements to third persons; the publication must be done by the defendant." There is an exception to this rule. [When it is foreseeable that the plaintiff] " 'will be under a strong compulsion to disclose the contents of the defamatory statement to a third person after he has read it or been informed of its contents.' " (Live Oak Publishing Co. v. Cohagan (1991) 234 Cal.App.3d 1277, 1284 [286 Cal.Rptr. 198], internal citations omitted.)
- Whether a plaintiff in a defamation action is a public figure is a question of law for the trial court. (Reader's Digest Assn. v. Superior Court (1984) 37 Cal.3d 244, 252 [208 Cal.Rptr. 137, 690 P.2d 610].)
- "To qualify as a limited purpose public figure, a plaintiff 'must have undertaken some voluntary [affirmative] act[ion] through which he seeks to influence the resolution of the public issues involved.' " (Rudnick v. McMillan (1994) 25 Cal.App.4th 1183, 1190 [31 Cal.Rptr.2d 193]; see also Mosesian v. McClatchy Newspapers (1991) 233 Cal.App.3d 1685, 1689 [285 Cal.Rptr. 430].)

- "Characterizing a plaintiff as a limited purpose public figure requires the presence of certain elements. First, there must be a public controversy about a topic that concerns a substantial number of people. In other words, the issue was publicly debated. Second, the plaintiff must have voluntarily acted to influence resolution of the issue of public interest. To satisfy this element, the plaintiff need only attempt to thrust himself or herself into the public eye. Once the plaintiff places himself or herself in the spotlight on a topic of public interest, his or her private words and acts relating to that topic become fair game. However, the alleged defamation must be germane to the plaintiff's participation in the public controversy." (Grenier, supra, 234 Cal.App.4th at p. 484, internal citations omitted.)
- "The First Amendment limits California's libel law in various respects. When, as here, the plaintiff is a public figure, he cannot recover unless he proves by clear and convincing evidence that the defendant published the defamatory statement with actual malice, i.e., with 'knowledge that it was false or with reckless disregard of whether it was false or not.' Mere negligence does not suffice. Rather, the plaintiff must demonstrate that the author 'in fact entertained serious doubts as to the truth of his publication,' or acted with a 'high degree of awareness of . . . probable falsity.' " (Masson v. New Yorker Magazine (1991) 501 U.S. 496, 510 [111 S.Ct. 2419, 115 L.Ed.2d 447], internal citations omitted; see St. Amant v. Thompson (1968) 390 U.S. 727, 731 [88 S.Ct. 1323, 20 L.Ed.2d 262]; New York Times v. Sullivan (1964) 376 U.S. 254, 279–280 [84 S.Ct. 710, 11 L.Ed.2d 686].)
- The New York Times v. Sullivan standard applies to private individuals with respect to presumed or punitive damages if the statement involves a matter of public concern. (Gertz v. Robert Welch, Inc. (1974) 418 U.S. 323, 349 [94 S.Ct. 2997, 41 L.Ed.2d 789].)
- "California . . . permits defamation liability so long as it is consistent with the requirements of the United States Constitution." (Melaleuca, Inc. v. Clark (1998) 66 Cal.App.4th 1344, 1359 [78 Cal.Rptr.2d 627], citing Brown v. Kelly Broadcasting Co. (1989) 48 Cal.3d 711, 740–742 [257 Cal.Rptr. 708, 771 P.2d 406].)
- "Actual malice under the New York Times standard should not be confused with the concept of malice as an evil intent or a motive arising from spite or ill will. . . . In place of the term actual malice, it is better practice that jury instructions refer to publication of a statement with knowledge of falsity or reckless disregard as to truth or falsity." (Masson, supra, 501 U.S. at pp. 510–511, internal citations omitted.)
- Actual malice "does not require that the reporter hold a devout belief in the truth of the story being reported, only that he or she refrain from either reporting a story he or she knows to be false or acting in reckless disregard of the truth." (Jackson, supra, 68 Cal.App.4th at p. 35.)

- "The law is clear [that] the recklessness or doubt which gives rise to actual or constitutional malice is subjective recklessness or doubt." (Melaleuca, Inc., supra, 66 Cal.App.4th at p. 1365.)
- To show reckless disregard, "[t]here must be sufficient evidence to permit the conclusion that the defendant in fact entertained serious doubts as to the truth of his publication. Publishing with such doubts shows reckless disregard for truth or falsity and demonstrates actual malice." (St. Amant, supra, 390 U.S. at p. 731.)
- " 'A defamation plaintiff may rely on inferences drawn from circumstantial evidence to show actual malice. [Citation.] "A failure to investigate [fn. omitted] [citation], anger and hostility toward the plaintiff [citation], reliance upon sources known to be unreliable [citations], or known to be biased against the plaintiff [citations]—such factors may, in an appropriate case, indicate that the publisher himself had serious doubts regarding the truth of his publication." ' " (Sanders v. Walsh (2013) 219 Cal.App.4th 855, 873 [162 Cal.Rptr.3d 188].)
- " ' "[Evidence] of negligence, of motive and of intent may be adduced for the purpose of establishing, by cumulation and by appropriate inferences, the fact of a defendant's recklessness or of his knowledge of falsity." [Citations.] A failure to investigate [citation], anger and hostility toward the plaintiff [citation], reliance upon sources known to be unreliable [citations], or known to be biased against the plaintiff [citations]—such factors may, in an appropriate case, indicate that the publisher himself had serious doubts regarding the truth of his publication. [¶][] We emphasize that such evidence is relevant only to the extent that it reflects on the subjective attitude of the publisher. [Citations.] The failure to conduct a thorough and objective investigation, standing alone, does not prove actual malice, nor even necessarily raise a triable issue of fact on that controversy. [Citations.] Similarly, mere proof of ill will on the part of the publisher may likewise be insufficient. [Citation.]' " (Young v. CBS Broadcasting, Inc. (2012) 212 Cal.App.4th 551, 563 [151 Cal.Rptr.3d 237], quoting Reader's Digest Assn., supra, 37 Cal.3d at pp. 257–258, footnote omitted.)
- "An entity other than a natural person may be libeled." (Live Oak Publishing Co., supra, 234 Cal.App.3d at p. 1283.)
- "A political challenger must be afforded leeway to characterize the conduct of his opponent, even if such characterization takes the most negative perspective, in order to ensure 'uninhibited, robust, and wide-open' debate on public issues. Again, '[h]yperbole, distortion, invective, and tirades' are 'a part of American politics,' and while providing protection for such speech may allow 'candidates and their supporters to express . . . the most vile sentiments,' it is nevertheless necessary in order to ensure the 'opportunity to criticize and comment upon government and the issues of the day.' " (Issa, supra, 31 Cal.App.5th at p. 709, internal citation omitted.)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 623–654, 705–718

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 5(I)-E, Employment Torts And Related Claims—Defamation, ¶¶ 5:472, 5:577 (The Rutter Group)

4 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 45, Defamation, §§ 45.04, 45.13 (Matthew Bender)

30 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, §§ 340.10 et seq. (Matthew Bender)

14 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 142, Libel and Slander (Defamation), §§ 142.24–142.27 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Torts §§ 21:1–21:2, 21:22–21:25, 21:44–21:52 (Thomson Reuters)

1701. Defamation per quod—Essential Factual Elements (Public Officer/Figure and Limited Public Figure)

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] harmed [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] by making [one or more of] the following statement(s): [list all claimed per quod defamatory statements].

Liability

To establish this claim, [*name of plaintiff] must prove that all of the following are more likely true than not true:

1. That [name of defendant] made [one or more of] the statement(s) to [a person/persons] other than [name of plaintiff];
2. That [this person/these people] reasonably understood that the statement(s) [was/were] about [name of plaintiff];
3. That because of the facts and circumstances known to the [listener(s)/reader(s)] of the statement(s), [it/they] tended to injure [name of plaintiff] in [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] occupation [or to expose [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] to hatred, contempt, ridicule, or shame] [or to discourage others from associating or dealing with [him/her/nonbinary pronoun]];
4. That the statement(s) [was/were] false;
5. That [name of plaintiff] suffered harm to [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] property, business, profession, or occupation [including money spent as a result of the statement(s)]; and
6. That the statement(s) [was/were] a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

In addition, [*name of plaintiff] must prove by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] knew the statement(s) [was/were] false or had serious doubts about the truth of the statement(s).

Actual Damages

If [*name of plaintiff] has proved all of the above, then [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] is entitled to recover if [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] proves it is more likely true than not true that [name of defendant]'s wrongful conduct was a substantial factor in causing any of the following actual damages:

a. Harm to [name of plaintiff]'s property, business, trade, profession, or occupation;
b. Expenses [name of plaintiff] had to pay as a result of the defamatory statements;

c. Harm to [name of plaintiff]'s reputation; or

d. Shame, mortification, or hurt feelings.

Punitive Damages

[Name of plaintiff] may also recover damages to punish [name of defendant] if [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] proves by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] acted with malice, oppression, or fraud.

[*For specific provisions, see CACI Nos. 3940–3949.]

New September 2003; Revised April 2008, June 2016, December 2016, January 2018

Directions for Use

Special verdict form CACI No. VF-1701, Defamation per quod (Public Officer/Figure and Limited Public Figure), should be used in this type of case.

Presumed damages either are not available or will likely not be sought in a per quod case.

An additional element of a defamation claim is that the alleged defamatory statement is "unprivileged." (Hui v. Sturbaum (2014) 222 Cal.App.4th 1109, 1118 [166 Cal.Rptr.3d 569].) If this element presents an issue for the jury, an instruction on the "unprivileged" element should be given.

Under the common-interest privilege of Civil Code section 47(c), the defendant bears the initial burden of showing facts to bring the communication within the privilege. The plaintiff then must prove that the statement was made with malice. (Lundquist v. Reusser (1994) 7 Cal.4th 1193, 1203 [31 Cal.Rptr.2d 776, 875 P.2d 1279].) If the common-interest privilege is at issue, give CACI No. 1723, Common Interest Privilege—Malice. The elements of CACI No. 1723 constitute the "unprivileged" element of this basic claim.

If the privilege of Civil Code section 47(d) for a privileged publication or broadcast is at issue, give CACI No. 1724, Fair and True Reporting Privilege. (See J-M Manufacturing Co., Inc. v. Phillips & Cohen LLP (2016) 247 Cal.App.4th 87 [201 Cal.Rptr.3d 782].) If some other privilege is at issue, an additional element or instruction targeting that privilege will be required. (See, e.g., Civ. Code, § 47(b); Argentieri v. Zuckerberg (2017) 8 Cal.App.5th 768, 780–787 [214 Cal.Rptr.3d 358] [litigation privilege].)

See also the Sources and Authority to CACI No. 1700, Defamation per se—Essential Factual Elements (Public Officer/Figure and Limited Public Figure).

Sources and Authority

- Defamation. Civil Code section 44.
- Libel Defined. Civil Code section 45.
- Libel per se. Civil Code section 45a.

- Slander Defined. Civil Code section 46.
- Special Damages. Civil Code section 48a(4)(b).
- "The elements of a defamation claim are (1) a publication that is (2) false, (3) defamatory, (4) unprivileged, and (5) has a natural tendency to injure or causes special damage." (Wong v. Jing (2011) 189 Cal.App.4th 1354, 1369 [117 Cal.Rptr.3d 747].)
- " ' "If no reasonable reader would perceive in a false and unprivileged publication a meaning which tended to injure the subject's reputation in any of the enumerated respects, then there is no libel at all. If such a reader would perceive a defamatory meaning without extrinsic aid beyond his or her own intelligence and common sense, then . . . there is a libel per se. But if the reader would be able to recognize a defamatory meaning only by virtue of his or her knowledge of specific facts and circumstances, extrinsic to the publication, which are not matters of common knowledge rationally attributable to all reasonable persons, then . . . the libel cannot be libel per se but will be libel per quod," requiring pleading and proof of special damages.' " (Barker v. Fox & Associates (2015) 240 Cal.App.4th 333, 351–352 [192 Cal.Rptr.3d 511].)
- "If [a] defamatory meaning would appear only to readers who might be able to recognize it through some knowledge of specific facts and/or circumstances, not discernible from the face of the publication, and which are not matters of common knowledge rationally attributable to all reasonable persons, then the libel cannot be libel per se but will be libel per quod." (Palm Springs Tennis Club v. Rangel (1999) 73 Cal.App.4th 1, 5 [86 Cal.Rptr.2d 73], internal citation omitted.)
- "The question whether challenged statements convey the requisite factual imputation is ordinarily a question of law for the court. However, . . . , some statements are ambiguous and cannot be characterized as factual or nonfactual as a matter of law. 'In these circumstances, it is for the jury to determine whether an ordinary reader would have understood the article as a factual assertion . . . .' " (Kahn v. Bower (1991) 232 Cal.App.3d 1599, 1608 [284 Cal.Rptr. 244].)
- "In pleading a case of libel per quod the plaintiff cannot assume that the court has access to the reader's special knowledge of extrinsic facts but must specially plead and prove those facts." (Palm Springs Tennis Club, supra, 73 Cal.App.4th at p. 7.)
- "A libel 'per quod,' . . . requires that the injurious character or effect be established by allegation and proof." (Slaughter v. Friedman (1982) 32 Cal.3d 149, 153–154 [185 Cal.Rptr. 244, 649 P.2d 886].)
- " 'The purpose of the rule requiring proof of special damages when the defamatory meaning does not appear on the face of the language used is to protect publishers who make statements innocent in themselves that are defamatory only because of extrinsic facts known to the reader.' 'In the libel context, "inducement" and "innuendo" are terms of art: "[W]here the language is ambiguous and an explanation is necessary to establish the defamatory meaning, the pleader must do two things: (1) Allege his interpretation of the defamatory meaning of the language (the 'innuendo,' . . .); (2) support that interpretation by alleging facts showing that the readers or hearers to whom it was published would understand it in that defamatory sense (the 'inducement')." [Citation.] "The office of an innuendo is to declare what the words meant to those to whom they were published." "In order to plead . . . ambiguous language into an actionable libel . . . it is incumbent upon the plaintiff also to plead an inducement, that is to say, circumstances which would indicate that the words were understood in a defamatory sense showing that the situation or opinion of the readers was such that they derived a defamatory meaning from them. [Citation.]" ' " (Bartholomew v. YouTube, LLC. (2017) 17 Cal.App.5th 1217, 1227 [225 Cal.Rptr.3d 917], original italics, internal citations omitted.)

- "For libel per quod, which [plaintiff] herself emphasizes is the cause of action at issue here, it is 'necessary that the words should have been published concerning the plaintiff and should have been understood by at least one third person to have concerned him [or her]. [Citations.] "Defamatory words to be actionable must refer to some ascertained or ascertainable person, and that person must be plaintiff [citations]. If the words used really contain no reflection upon any particular individual, no averment can make them defamatory. It is not necessary that plaintiff should be mentioned by name if the words used in describing the person meant, can be shown to have referred to him and to have been so understood [citation]." [Citation].' ' "It is the office of the inducement to narrate the extrinsic circumstances which, coupled with the language published, affect its construction and render it actionable, where, standing alone and not thus explained, the language would appear either not to concern the plaintiff, or, if concerning him, not to affect him injuriously. [Citation.]" ' " (Bartholomew, supra, 17 Cal.App.5th at p. 1231, internal citation omitted.)
- "A slander that falls within the first four subdivisions of Civil Code section 46 is slander per se and requires no proof of actual damages. A slander that does not fit into those four subdivisions is slander per quod, and special damages are required for there to be any recovery for that slander." (The Nethercutt Collection v. Regalia (2009) 172 Cal.App.4th 361, 367 [90 Cal.Rptr.3d 882], internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 623–654, 705–718

4 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 45, Defamation, §§ 45.04, 45.13 (Matthew Bender)

30 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, §§ 340.10–340.75 (Matthew Bender)

14 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 142, Libel and Slander (Defamation), §§ 142.24–142.27 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Torts, §§ 21:1–21:2, 21:22–21:25, 21:44–21:52 (Thomson Reuters)

1702. Defamation per se—Essential Factual Elements (Private Figure—Matter of Public Concern)

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] harmed [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] by making [one or more of] the following statement(s): [list all claimed per se defamatory statement(s)]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

Liability

1. That [name of defendant] made [one or more of] the statement(s) to [a person/persons] other than [name of plaintiff];
2. That [this person/these people] reasonably understood that the statement(s) [was/were] about [name of plaintiff];
3. [That [this person/these people] reasonably understood the statement(s) to mean that [insert ground(s) for defamation per se, e.g., "[name of plaintiff] had committed a crime"];]
4. That the statement(s) [was/were] false; and
5. That [name of defendant] failed to use reasonable care to determine the truth or falsity of the statement(s).

Actual Damages

If [*name of plaintiff] has proved all of the above, then [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] is entitled to recover [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] actual damages if [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] proves that [name of defendant]'s wrongful conduct was a substantial factor in causing any of the following:

a. Harm to [name of plaintiff]'s property, business, trade, profession, or occupation;
b. Expenses [name of plaintiff] had to pay as a result of the defamatory statements;
c. Harm to [name of plaintiff]'s reputation; or
d. Shame, mortification, or hurt feelings.

Assumed Damages

If [*name of plaintiff] has not proved any actual damages for harm to reputation or shame, mortification, or hurt feelings but proves by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] knew the statement(s) [was/were] false or that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] had serious doubts about the truth of the statement(s), then the law assumes that [name of plaintiff]'s reputation has been harmed and that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] has suffered shame, mortification, or hurt feelings. Without presenting evidence of damage, [*name of plaintiff] is entitled to receive compensation for this assumed harm in whatever sum you believe is reasonable. You must award at least a nominal sum, such as one dollar.

Punitive Damages

[*Name of plaintiff] may also recover damages to punish [name of defendant] if [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] proves by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] either knew the statement(s) [was/were] false or had serious doubts about the truth of the statement(s), and that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] acted with malice, oppression, or fraud.

[*For specific provisions, see CACI Nos. 3940–3949.]

New September 2003; Revised April 2008, October 2008, December 2009, June 2016, December 2016, January 2018

Directions for Use

Special verdict form CACI No. VF-1702, Defamation per se (Private Figure—Matter of Public Concern), should be used in this type of case.

For statutes and cases on libel and slander and on the difference between defamation per se and defamation per quod, see the Sources and Authority to CACI No. 1700, Defamation per se—Essential Factual Elements (Public Officer/Figure and Limited Public Figure).

Use the bracketed element 3 only if the statement is not defamatory on its face (i.e., if the judge has not determined that the statement is defamatory as a matter of law). For statutory grounds of defamation per se, see Civil Code sections 45 (libel) and 46 (slander). Note that certain specific grounds of libel per se have been defined by case law.

An additional element of a defamation claim is that the alleged defamatory statement is "unprivileged." (Hui v. Sturbaum (2014) 222 Cal.App.4th 1109, 1118 [166 Cal.Rptr.3d 569].) If this element presents an issue for the jury, an instruction on the "unprivileged" element should be given.

Under the common-interest privilege of Civil Code section 47(c), the defendant bears the initial burden of showing facts to bring the communication within the privilege. The plaintiff then must prove that the statement was made with malice. (Lundquist v. Reusser (1994) 7 Cal.4th 1193, 1203 [31 Cal.Rptr.2d 776, 875 P.2d 1279].) If the common-interest privilege is at issue, give CACI No. 1723, Common Interest Privilege—Malice. The elements of CACI No. 1723 constitute the "unprivileged" element of this basic claim.

If the privilege of Civil Code section 47(d) for a privileged publication or broadcast is at issue, give CACI No. 1724, Fair and True Reporting Privilege. (See J-M Manufacturing Co., Inc. v. Phillips & Cohen LLP (2016) 247 Cal.App.4th 87 [201 Cal.Rptr.3d 782].) If some other privilege is at issue, an additional element or instruction targeting that privilege will be required. (See, e.g., Civ. Code, § 47(b); Argentieri v. Zuckerberg (2017) 8 Cal.App.5th 768, 780–787 [214 Cal.Rptr.3d 358] [litigation privilege].)

Sources and Authority

- "Defamation is an invasion of the interest in reputation. The tort involves the intentional publication of a statement of fact that is false, unprivileged, and has a natural tendency to injure or which causes special damage." (Smith v. Maldonado (1999) 72 Cal.App.4th 637, 645 [85 Cal.Rptr.2d 397].)
- "The question whether a plaintiff is a public figure is to be determined by the court, not the jury." (Stolz v. KSFM 102 FM (1994) 30 Cal.App.4th 195, 203–204 [35 Cal.Rptr.2d 740], internal citation omitted.)
- "Our accommodation of the competing values at stake in defamation suits by private individuals allows the States to impose liability on the publisher or broadcaster of defamatory falsehood on a less demanding showing than that required by New York Times. This conclusion is not based on a belief that the considerations which prompted the adoption of the New York Times privilege for defamation of public officials and its extension to public figures are wholly inapplicable to the context of private individuals. Rather, we endorse this approach in recognition of the strong and legitimate state interest in compensating private individuals for injury to reputation. But this countervailing state interest extends no further than compensation for actual injury. For the reasons stated below, we hold that the States may not permit recovery of presumed or punitive damages, at least when liability is not based on a showing of knowledge of falsity or reckless disregard for the truth." (Gertz v. Robert Welch, Inc. (1974) 418 U.S. 323, 348–349 [94 S.Ct. 2997, 41 L.Ed.2d 789].)
- " '[I]f the issue was being debated publicly and if it had foreseeable and substantial ramifications for nonparticipants, it was a public controversy.' " (Copp v. Paxton (1996) 45 Cal.App.4th 829, 845 [52 Cal.Rptr.2d 831].)
- "[T]he jury was instructed that if it found that defendant published matter that was defamatory on its face and it found by clear and convincing evidence that defendant knew the statement was false or published it in reckless disregard of whether it was false, then the jury 'also may award plaintiff presumed general damages.' Presumed damages 'are those damages that necessarily result from the publication of defamatory matter and are presumed to exist. They include reasonable compensation for loss of reputation, shame, mortification, and hurt feeling. No definite standard or method of calculation is prescribed by law by which to fix reasonable compensation for presumed damages, and no evidence of actual harm is required. Nor is the opinion of any witness required as to the amount of such reasonable compensation. In making an award for presumed damages, you shall exercise your authority with calm and reasonable judgment and the damages you fix shall be just and reasonable in the light of the evidence. You may in the exercise of your discretion award nominal damages only, namely an insignificant sum such as one dollar.' [¶¶] . . . [T]he instant instruction, which limits damages to 'those damages that necessarily result from the publication of defamatory matter,' constitutes substantial compliance with [Civil Code] section 3283. Thus, the instant instructions, 'if obeyed, did not allow the jurors to "enter the realm of speculation" regarding future suffering.' " (Sommer v. Gabor (1995) 40 Cal.App.4th 1455, 1472–1473 [48 Cal.Rptr.2d 235], internal citations omitted.)

- The jury should be instructed that the defendant's negligence is an element of libel if the plaintiff is a private figure. (Carney v. Santa Cruz Women Against Rape (1990) 221 Cal.App.3d 1009, 1016 [271 Cal.Rptr. 30].)
- "When the speech involves a matter of public concern, a private-figure plaintiff has the burden of proving the falsity of the defamation." (Brown v. Kelly Broadcasting Co. (1989) 48 Cal.3d 711, 747 [257 Cal.Rptr. 708, 771 P.2d 406].)
- "Suffice it to say that actual injury is not limited to out-of-pocket loss. Indeed, the more customary types of actual harm inflicted by defamatory falsehood include impairment of reputation and standing in the community, personal humiliation, and mental anguish and suffering. Of course, juries must be limited by appropriate instructions, and all awards must be supported by competent evidence concerning the injury, although there need be no evidence which assigns an actual dollar value to the injury." (Gertz, supra, 418 U.S. at p. 350.)
- Private-figure plaintiffs must prove actual malice to recover punitive or presumed damages for defamation if the matter is one of public concern. They are only required to prove negligence to recover damages for actual injury to reputation. (Khawar v. Globe Internat. (1998) 19 Cal.4th 254, 273–274 [79 Cal.Rptr.2d 178, 965 P.2d 696].)
- "A private-figure plaintiff must prove at least negligence to recover any damages and, when the speech involves a matter of public concern, he must also prove New York Times malice . . . to recover presumed or punitive damages. This malice must be established by 'clear and convincing proof.' " (Brown, supra, 48 Cal.3d at p. 747, internal citations omitted.)
- When the court is instructing on punitive damages, it is error to fail to instruct that New York Times malice is required when the statements at issue involve matters of public concern. (Carney, supra, 221 Cal.App.3d at p. 1022.)
- "To prove actual malice . . . a plaintiff must 'demonstrate with clear and convincing evidence that the defendant realized that his statement was false or that he subjectively entertained serious doubts as to the truth of his statement.' " (Khawar, supra, 19 Cal.4th at p. 275, internal citation omitted.)
- "Because actual malice is a higher fault standard than negligence, a finding of actual malice generally includes a finding of negligence . . . ." (Khawar, supra, 19 Cal.4th at p. 279.)
- "The inquiry into the protected status of speech is one of law, not fact." (Nizam-Aldine v. City of Oakland (1996) 47 Cal.App.4th 364, 375 [54 Cal.Rptr.2d 781], quoting Connick v. Myers (1983) 461 U.S. 138, 148, fn. 7 [103 S.Ct. 1684, 75 L.Ed.2d 708].)

- "For the New York Times standard to be met, 'the publisher must come close to willfully blinding itself to the falsity of its utterance.' " (Brown, supra, 48 Cal.3d at p. 747, internal citation omitted.)
- " 'While such speech is not totally unprotected by the First Amendment, its protections are less stringent' [than that applying to speech on matters of public concern]." (Savage v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1993) 21 Cal.App.4th 434, 445 [26 Cal.Rptr.2d 305], internal citation omitted.)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 623–654, 719–721

4 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 45, Defamation, §§ 45.04, 45.13 (Matthew Bender)

30 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, §§ 340.12–340.13, 340.18 (Matthew Bender)

14 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 142, Libel and Slander (Defamation), §§ 142.30–142.40, 142.87 et seq. (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Torts, §§ 21:1–21:2, 21:22–21:25, 21:51 (Thomson Reuters)

1703. Defamation per quod—Essential Factual Elements (Private Figure—Matter of Public Concern)

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] harmed [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] by making [one or more of] the following statement(s): [insert all claimed per quod defamatory statements]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

Liability

1. That [name of defendant] made [one or more of] the statement(s) to [a person/persons] other than [name of plaintiff];
2. That [this person/these people] reasonably understood that the statement(s) [was/were] about [name of plaintiff];
3. That because of the facts and circumstances known to the [listener(s)/reader(s)] of the statement(s), [it/they] tended to injure [name of plaintiff] in [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] occupation [or to expose [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] to hatred, contempt, ridicule, or shame] [or to discourage others from associating or dealing with [him/her/nonbinary pronoun]];
4. That the statement(s) [was/were] false;
5. That [name of defendant] failed to use reasonable care to determine the truth or falsity of the statement(s);
6. That [name of plaintiff] suffered harm to [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] property, business, profession, or occupation [including money spent as a result of the statement(s)]; and
7. That the statements [was/were] a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

Actual Damages

If [name of plaintiff] has proved all of the above, then [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] is entitled to recover if [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] proves that [name of defendant]'s wrongful conduct was a substantial factor in causing any of the following actual damages:

a. Harm to [name of plaintiff]'s property, business, trade, profession, or occupation;
b. Expenses [name of plaintiff] had to pay as a result of the defamatory statements;
c. Harm to [name of plaintiff]'s reputation; or
d. Shame, mortification, or hurt feelings.

Punitive Damages

[*Name of plaintiff] may also recover damages to punish [name of defendant] if [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] proves by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] either knew the statement(s) [was/were] false or had serious doubts about the truth of the statement(s), and that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] acted with malice, oppression, or fraud.

[*For specific provisions, see CACI Nos. 3940–3949.]

New September 2003; Revised April 2008, December 2009, June 2016, December 2016, January 2018

Directions for Use

Special verdict form VF-1703, Defamation per quod (Private Figure—Matter of Public Concern), should be used in this type of case.

Presumed damages either are not available or will likely not be sought in a per quod case.

An additional element of a defamation claim is that the alleged defamatory statement is "unprivileged." (Hui v. Sturbaum (2014) 222 Cal.App.4th 1109, 1118 [166 Cal.Rptr.3d 569].) If this element presents an issue for the jury, an instruction on the "unprivileged" element should be given.

Under the common-interest privilege of Civil Code section 47(c), the defendant bears the initial burden of showing facts to bring the communication within the privilege. The plaintiff then must prove that the statement was made with malice. (Lundquist v. Reusser (1994) 7 Cal.4th 1193, 1203 [31 Cal.Rptr.2d 776, 875 P.2d 1279].) If the common-interest privilege is at issue, give CACI No. 1723, Common Interest Privilege—Malice. The elements of CACI No. 1723 constitute the "unprivileged" element of this basic claim.

If the privilege of Civil Code section 47(d) for a privileged publication or broadcast is at issue, give CACI No. 1724, Fair and True Reporting Privilege. (See J-M Manufacturing Co., Inc. v. Phillips & Cohen LLP (2016) 247 Cal.App.4th 87 [201 Cal.Rptr.3d 782].) If some other privilege is at issue, an additional element or instruction targeting that privilege will be required. (See, e.g., Civ. Code, § 47(b); Argentieri v. Zuckerberg (2017) 8 Cal.App.5th 768, 780–787 [214 Cal.Rptr.3d 358] [litigation privilege].)

For statutes and cases on libel and slander and on the difference between defamation per se and defamation per quod, see the Sources and Authority to CACI No. 1701, Defamation per quod—Essential Factual Elements (Public Officer/Figure and Limited Public Figure).

Sources and Authority

- Libel per se. Civil Code section 45a.
- Special Damages. Civil Code section 48a(4)(b).

- "Libel is recognized as either being per se (on its face), or per quod (literally meaning, 'whereby'), and each requires a different standard of pleading." (Palm Springs Tennis Club v. Rangel (1999) 73 Cal.App.4th 1, 5 [86 Cal.Rptr.2d 73].)
- "If [a] defamatory meaning would appear only to readers who might be able to recognize it through some knowledge of specific facts and/or circumstances, not discernible from the face of the publication, and which are not matters of common knowledge rationally attributable to all reasonable persons, then the libel cannot be libel per se but will be libel per quod." (Palm Springs Tennis Club, supra, 73 Cal.App.4th at p. 5, internal citation omitted.)
- "In pleading a case of libel per quod the plaintiff cannot assume that the court has access to the reader's special knowledge of extrinsic facts but must specially plead and prove those facts." (Palm Springs Tennis Club, supra, 73 Cal.App.4th at p. 7, footnote omitted.)
- "A libel 'per quod' . . . requires that the injurious character or effect be established by allegation and proof." (Slaughter v. Friedman (1982) 32 Cal.3d 149, 153–154 [185 Cal.Rptr. 244, 649 P.2d 886].)
- "In the libel context, 'inducement' and 'innuendo' are terms of art: '[W]here the language is ambiguous and an explanation is necessary to establish the defamatory meaning, the pleader must do two things: (1) Allege his interpretation of the defamatory meaning of the language (the "innuendo," . . .); (2) support that interpretation by alleging facts showing that the readers or hearers to whom it was published would understand it in that defamatory sense (the "inducement").' " (Barnes-Hind, Inc. v. Superior Court (1986) 181 Cal.App.3d 377, 387 [226 Cal.Rptr. 354].)
- "A defamatory publication not libelous on its face is not actionable unless the plaintiff alleges that he has suffered special damages as a result thereof." (Selleck v. Globe Int'l, Inc. (1985) 166 Cal.App.3d 1123, 1130 [212 Cal.Rptr. 838].)
- "The question whether a statement is reasonably susceptible to a defamatory interpretation is a question of law for the trial court. Only once the court has determined that a statement is reasonably susceptible to such a defamatory interpretation does it become a question for the trier of fact whether or not it was so understood." (Smith v. Maldonado (1999) 72 Cal.App.4th 637, 647 [85 Cal.Rptr.2d 397], internal citations omitted.)
- Private-figure plaintiffs must prove actual malice to recover punitive or presumed damages for defamation if the matter is one of public concern. They are only required to prove negligence to recover damages for actual injury to reputation. (Khawar v. Globe Internat. (1998) 19 Cal.4th 254, 273–274 [79 Cal.Rptr.2d 178, 965 P.2d 696].)
- " '[I]f the issue was being debated publicly and if it had foreseeable and substantial ramifications for nonparticipants, it was a public controversy.' " (Copp v. Paxton (1996) 45 Cal.App.4th 829, 845 [52 Cal.Rptr.2d 831], quoting Waldbaum v. Fairchild Publications, Inc. (D.C. Cir. 1980) 627 F.2d 1287, 1297.)

- If the language is not defamatory on its face, there is no distinction between libel and slander: "In either case, the fact that a statement is not defamatory on its face requires only that the plaintiff plead and prove the defamatory meaning and special damages." (Savage v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1993) 21 Cal.App.4th 434, 447 [26 Cal.Rptr.2d 305].)
- A plaintiff must prove that the defendant was at least negligent in failing to ascertain the truth or falsity of the statement. (Gertz v. Robert Welch, Inc. (1974) 418 U.S. 323, 345–347 [94 S.Ct. 2997, 41 L.Ed.2d 789].)
- "The question whether a plaintiff is a public figure is to be determined by the court, not the jury." (Stolz v. KSFM 102 FM (1994) 30 Cal.App.4th 195, 203–204 [35 Cal.Rptr.2d 740], internal citation omitted.)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 623–654, 719–721

4 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 45, Defamation, §§ 45.04, 45.13 (Matthew Bender)

30 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, §§ 340.11, 340.13 (Matthew Bender)

14 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 142, Libel and Slander (Defamation), §§ 142.30–142.40 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Torts §§ 21:1–21:2, 21:22–21:25, 21:51 (Thomson Reuters)

1704. Defamation per se—Essential Factual Elements (Private Figure—Matter of Private Concern)

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] harmed [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] by making [one or more of] the following statement(s): [list all claimed per se defamatory statement(s)]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

Liability

1. That [name of defendant] made [one or more of] the statement(s) to [a person/persons] other than [name of plaintiff];
2. That [this person/these people] reasonably understood that the statement(s) [was/were] about [name of plaintiff];
3. [That [this person/these people] reasonably understood the statement(s) to mean that [insert ground(s) for defamation per se, e.g., "[name of plaintiff] had committed a crime"]];
4. That [name of defendant] failed to use reasonable care to determine the truth or falsity of the statement(s).

Actual Damages

If [*name of plaintiff] has proved all of the above, then [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] is entitled to recover [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] actual damages if [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] proves that [name of defendant]'s wrongful conduct was a substantial factor in causing any of the following:

a. Harm to [name of plaintiff]'s property, business, trade, profession, or occupation;
b. Expenses [name of plaintiff] had to pay as a result of the defamatory statements;
c. Harm to [name of plaintiff]'s reputation; or
d. Shame, mortification, or hurt feelings.

Assumed Damages

Even if [*name of plaintiff] has not proved any actual damages for harm to reputation or shame, mortification, or hurt feelings, the law assumes that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] has suffered this harm. Without presenting evidence of damage, [name of plaintiff] is entitled to receive compensation for this assumed harm in whatever sum you believe is reasonable. You must award at least a nominal sum, such as one dollar.

Punitive Damages

[Name of plaintiff] may also recover damages to punish [name of defendant] if [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] proves by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] acted with malice, oppression, or fraud.

[*For specific provisions, see CACI Nos. 3940–3949.]

New September 2003; Revised April 2008, December 2009, June 2016, December 2016, January 2018

Directions for Use

Special verdict form VF-1704, Defamation per se—Affirmative Defense—Truth (Private Figure—Matter of Private Concern), may be used in this type of case.

Use the bracketed element 3 only if the statement is not defamatory on its face (i.e., if the judge has not determined that the statement is defamatory as a matter of law). For statutory grounds of defamation per se, see Civil Code sections 45 (libel) and 46 (slander). Note that certain specific grounds of libel per se have been defined by case law.

An additional element of a defamation claim is that the alleged defamatory statement is "unprivileged." (Hui v. Sturbaum (2014) 222 Cal.App.4th 1109, 1118 [166 Cal.Rptr.3d 569].) If this element presents an issue for the jury, an instruction on the "unprivileged" element should be given.

Under the common-interest privilege of Civil Code section 47(c), the defendant bears the initial burden of showing facts to bring the communication within the privilege. The plaintiff then must prove that the statement was made with malice. (Lundquist v. Reusser (1994) 7 Cal.4th 1193, 1203 [31 Cal.Rptr.2d 776, 875 P.2d 1279].) If the common-interest privilege is at issue, give CACI No. 1723, Common Interest Privilege—Malice. The elements of CACI No. 1723 constitute the "unprivileged" element of this basic claim.

If the privilege of Civil Code section 47(d) for a privileged publication or broadcast is at issue, give CACI No. 1724, Fair and True Reporting Privilege. (See J-M Manufacturing Co., Inc. v. Phillips & Cohen LLP (2016) 247 Cal.App.4th 87 [201 Cal.Rptr.3d 782].) If some other privilege is at issue, an additional element or instruction targeting that privilege will be required. (See, e.g., Civ. Code, § 47(b); Argentieri v. Zuckerberg (2017) 8 Cal.App.5th 768, 780–787 [214 Cal.Rptr.3d 358] [litigation privilege].)

For statutes and cases on libel and slander and on the difference between defamation per se and defamation per quod, see the Sources and Authority to CACI No. 1700, Defamation per se—Essential Factual Elements (Public Officer/Figure and Limited Public Figure).

Sources and Authority

- "Defamation is an invasion of the interest in reputation. The tort involves the intentional publication of a statement of fact that is false, unprivileged, and has a natural tendency to injure or which causes special damage." (Smith v. Maldonado

(1999) 72 Cal.App.4th 637, 645 [85 Cal.Rptr.2d 397].)

- "The question whether a plaintiff is a public figure [or not] is to be determined by the court, not the jury." (Stolz v. KSFM 102 FM (1994) 30 Cal.App.4th 195, 203–204 [35 Cal.Rptr.2d 740], internal citation omitted.)
- The jury should be instructed that the defendant's negligence is an element of libel if the plaintiff is a private figure. (Carney v. Santa Cruz Women Against Rape (1990) 221 Cal.App.3d 1009, 1016 [271 Cal.Rptr. 30].)
- "A private-figure plaintiff must prove at least negligence to recover any damages and, when the speech involves a matter of public concern, he must also prove New York Times malice . . . to recover presumed or punitive damages." (Brown v. Kelly Broadcasting Co. (1989) 48 Cal.3d 711, 747 [257 Cal.Rptr. 708, 771 P.2d 406].)
- "The First Amendment trumps the common law presumption of falsity in defamation cases involving private-figure plaintiffs when the allegedly defamatory statements pertain to a matter of public interest." (Nizam-Aldine v. City of Oakland (1996) 47 Cal.App.4th 364, 375 [54 Cal.Rptr.2d 781].)
- "Thus, in a defamation action the burden is normally on the defendant to prove the truth of the allegedly defamatory communications. However, in accommodation of First Amendment considerations (which are implicated by state defamation laws), where the plaintiff is a public figure, the 'public-figure plaintiff must show the falsity of the statements at issue in order to prevail in a suit for defamation.' " (Stolz, supra, 30 Cal.App.4th at p. 202, internal citations omitted.)
- "Since the statements at issue here involved a matter of purely private concern communicated between private individuals, we do not regard them as raising a First Amendment issue. 'While such speech is not totally unprotected by the First Amendment, its protections are less stringent' [than that applying to speech on matters of public concern]." (Savage v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1993) 21 Cal.App.4th 434, 445 [26 Cal.Rptr.2d 305], quoting Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. v. Greenmoss Builders, Inc. (1985) 472 U.S. 749, 760 [105 S.Ct. 2939, 86 L.Ed.2d 593], internal citation omitted.)
- "We conclude that permitting recovery of presumed and punitive damages in defamation cases absent a showing of 'actual malice' does not violate the First Amendment when the defamatory statements do not involve matters of public concern." (Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., supra, 472 U.S. at p. 763.)
- "When the speech is of exclusively private concern and the plaintiff is a private figure, as in Dun & Bradstreet, the constitutional requirements do not necessarily force any change in at least some of the features of the common-law landscape." (Philadelphia Newspapers, Inc. v. Hepps (1986) 475 U.S. 767, 775 [106 S.Ct. 1558, 89 L.Ed.2d 783].)
- "[T]he jury was instructed that if it found that defendant published matter that was defamatory on its face and it found by clear and convincing evidence that defendant knew the statement was false or published it in reckless disregard of whether it was false, then the jury 'also may award plaintiff presumed general damages.' Presumed damages 'are those damages that necessarily result from the publication of defamatory matter and are presumed to exist. They include reasonable compensation for loss of reputation, shame, mortification, and hurt feeling. No definite standard or method of calculation is prescribed by law by which to fix reasonable compensation for presumed damages, and no evidence of actual harm is required. Nor is the opinion of any witness required as to the amount of such reasonable compensation. In making an award for presumed damages, you shall exercise your authority with calm and reasonable judgment and the damages you fix shall be just and reasonable in the light of the evidence. You may in the exercise of your discretion award nominal damages only, namely an insignificant sum such as one dollar.' [¶¶] . . . [T]he instant instruction, which limits damages to 'those damages that necessarily result from the publication of defamatory matter,' constitutes substantial compliance with [Civil Code] section 3283. Thus, the instant instructions, 'if obeyed, did not allow the jurors to "enter the realm of speculation" regarding future suffering.' " (Sommer v. Gabor (1995) 40 Cal.App.4th 1455, 1472–1473 [48 Cal.Rptr.2d 235], internal citations omitted.)

- "In defamation actions generally, factual truth is a defense which it is the defendant's burden to prove. In a defamation action against a newspaper by a private person suing over statements of public concern, however, the First Amendment places the burden of proving falsity on the plaintiff." (Eisenberg v. Alameda Newspapers (1999) 74 Cal.App.4th 1359, 1382 [88 Cal.Rptr.2d 802].)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 623–654, 721

4 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 45, Defamation, §§ 45.04, 45.13 (Matthew Bender)

30 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, § 340.18 (Matthew Bender)

14 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 142, Libel and Slander (Defamation), § 142.87 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Torts, §§ 21:1–21:2, 21:22–21:25, 21:51 (Thomson Reuters)

1705. Defamation per quod—Essential Factual Elements (Private Figure—Matter of Private Concern)

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] harmed [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] by making [one or more of] the following statement(s): [insert all claimed per quod defamatory statements]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

Liability

1. That [name of defendant] made [one or more of] the statement(s) to [a person/persons] other than [name of plaintiff];
2. That [this person/these people] reasonably understood that the statement(s) [was/were] about [name of plaintiff];
3. That because of the facts and circumstances known to the [listener(s)/reader(s)] of the statement(s), [it/they] tended to injure [name of plaintiff] in [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] occupation [or to expose [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] to hatred, contempt, ridicule, or shame] [or to discourage others from associating or dealing with [him/her/nonbinary pronoun]];
4. That [name of defendant] failed to use reasonable care to determine the truth or falsity of the statement(s);
5. That [name of plaintiff] suffered harm to [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] property, business, profession, or occupation [including money spent as a result of the statement(s)]; and
6. That the statement(s) [was/were] a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

Actual Damages

If [*name of plaintiff] has proved all of the above, then [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] is entitled to recover if [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] proves that [name of defendant]'s wrongful conduct was a substantial factor in causing any of the following actual damages:

a. Harm to [name of plaintiff]'s property, business, trade, profession, or occupation;
b. Expenses [name of plaintiff] had to pay as a result of the defamatory statements;
c. Harm to [name of plaintiff]'s reputation; or
d. Shame, mortification, or hurt feelings.

Punitive Damages

[Name of plaintiff] may also recover damages to punish [name of defendant] if [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] proves by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] acted with malice, oppression, or fraud.

[*For specific provisions, see CACI Nos. 3940–3949.]

New September 2003; Revised April 2008, December 2009, June 2016, December 2016, January 2018

Directions for Use

Special verdict form VF-1705, Defamation per quod (Private Figure—Matter of Private Concern), should be used in this type of case.

Presumed damages either are not available or will likely not be sought in a per quod case.

An additional element of a defamation claim is that the alleged defamatory statement is "unprivileged." (Hui v. Sturbaum (2014) 222 Cal.App.4th 1109, 1118 [166 Cal.Rptr.3d 569].) If this element presents an issue for the jury, an instruction on the "unprivileged" element should be given.

Under the common-interest privilege of Civil Code section 47(c), the defendant bears the initial burden of showing facts to bring the communication within the privilege. The plaintiff then must prove that the statement was made with malice. (Lundquist v. Reusser (1994) 7 Cal.4th 1193, 1203 [31 Cal.Rptr.2d 776, 875 P.2d 1279].) If the common-interest privilege is at issue, give CACI No. 1723, Common Interest Privilege—Malice. The elements of CACI No. 1723 constitute the "unprivileged" element of this basic claim.

If the privilege of Civil Code section 47(d) for a privileged publication or broadcast is at issue, give CACI No. 1724, Fair and True Reporting Privilege. (See J-M Manufacturing Co., Inc. v. Phillips & Cohen LLP (2016) 247 Cal.App.4th 87 [201 Cal.Rptr.3d 782].) If some other privilege is at issue, an additional element or instruction targeting that privilege will be required. (See, e.g., Civ. Code, § 47(b); Argentieri v. Zuckerberg (2017) 8 Cal.App.5th 768, 780–787 [214 Cal.Rptr.3d 358] [litigation privilege].)

For statutes and cases on libel and slander and on the difference between defamation per se and defamation per quod, see the Sources and Authority to CACI No. 1701, Defamation per quod—Essential Factual Elements (Public Officer/Figure and Limited Public Figure).

Sources and Authority

- Libel per se. Civil Code section 45a.
- Special Damages. Civil Code section 48a(4)(b).
- "Libel is recognized as either being per se (on its face), or per quod (literally meaning, 'whereby'), and each requires a different standard of pleading." (Palm Springs Tennis Club v. Rangel (1999) 73 Cal.App.4th 1, 5 [86 Cal.Rptr.2d 73].)
- "If [a] defamatory meaning would appear only to readers who might be able to recognize it through some knowledge of specific facts and/or circumstances, not discernible from the face of the publication, and which are not matters of common knowledge rationally attributable to all reasonable persons, then the libel cannot be libel per se but will be libel per quod." (Palm Springs Tennis Club, supra, 73 Cal.App.4th at p. 5, internal citation omitted.)

- "In pleading a case of libel per quod the plaintiff cannot assume that the court has access to the reader's special knowledge of extrinsic facts but must specially plead and prove those facts." (Palm Springs Tennis Club, supra, 73 Cal.App.4th at p. 7, footnote omitted.)
- "A libel 'per quod' . . . requires that the injurious character or effect be established by allegation and proof." (Slaughter v. Friedman (1982) 32 Cal.3d 149, 153–154 [185 Cal.Rptr. 244, 649 P.2d 886].)
- "In the libel context, 'inducement' and 'innuendo' are terms of art: '[W]here the language is ambiguous and an explanation is necessary to establish the defamatory meaning, the pleader must do two things: (1) allege his interpretation of the defamatory meaning of the language (the "innuendo," . . .); (2) support that interpretation by alleging facts showing that the readers or hearers to whom it was published would understand it in that defamatory sense (the "inducement").' " (Barnes-Hind, Inc. v. Superior Court (1986) 181 Cal.App.3d 377, 387 [226 Cal.Rptr. 354].)
- "A defamatory publication not libelous on its face is not actionable unless the plaintiff alleges that he has suffered special damages as a result thereof." (Selleck v. Globe Int'l, Inc. (1985) 166 Cal.App.3d 1123, 1130 [212 Cal.Rptr. 838].)
- "The question whether a statement is reasonably susceptible to a defamatory interpretation is a question of law for the trial court. Only once the court has determined that a statement is reasonably susceptible to such a defamatory interpretation does it become a question for the trier of fact whether or not it was so understood." (Smith v. Maldonado (1999) 72 Cal.App.4th 637, 647 [85 Cal.Rptr.2d 397], internal citations omitted.)
- Private-figure plaintiffs must prove actual malice to recover punitive or presumed damages for defamation if the matter is one of public concern. They are required to prove only negligence to recover damages for actual injury to reputation. (Khawar v. Globe Internat. (1998) 19 Cal.4th 254, 273–274 [79 Cal.Rptr.2d 178, 965 P.2d 696].)
- If the language is not defamatory on its face, there is no distinction between libel and slander: "In either case, the fact that a statement is not defamatory on its face requires only that the plaintiff plead and prove the defamatory meaning and special damages." (Savage v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1993) 21 Cal.App.4th 434, 447 [26 Cal.Rptr.2d 305].)
- A plaintiff must prove that the defendant was at least negligent in failing to ascertain the truth or falsity of the statement. (Gertz v. Robert Welch, Inc. (1974) 418 U.S. 323, 345–347 [94 S.Ct. 2997, 41 L.Ed.2d 789].)

- "The question whether a plaintiff is a public figure is to be determined by the court, not the jury." (Stolz v. KSFM 102 FM (1994) 30 Cal.App.4th 195, 203–204 [35 Cal.Rptr.2d 740], internal citation omitted.)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 623–654, 721

4 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 45, Defamation, §§ 45.04, 45.13 (Matthew Bender)

30 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, §§ 340.12–340.13 (Matthew Bender)

14 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 142, Libel and Slander (Defamation), §§ 142.20–142.32 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Torts §§ 21:1–21:2, 21:22–21:25, 21:51 (Thomson Reuters)

1706. Definition of Statement

The word "statement" in these instructions refers to any form of communication or representation, including spoken or written words [or] pictures [or] [*insert audible or visual representations].

New September 2003

Directions for Use

This instruction may be necessary in every case, but could be useful in cases where defamatory material is not written or verbal.

Sources and Authority

- Libel. Civil Code section 45.
- Slander. Civil Code section 46.

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 623–654

4 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 45, Defamation, § 45.02 (Matthew Bender)

30 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, § 340.18 (Matthew Bender)

14 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 142, Libel and Slander (Defamation), § 142.21 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Torts § 21:2 (Thomson Reuters)

1707. Fact Versus Opinion

For [name of plaintiff] to recover, [name of defendant]'s statement(s) must have been [a] statement(s) of fact, not opinion. A statement of fact is one that can be proved to be true or false. In some circumstances, [name of plaintiff] may recover if a statement phrased as an opinion implies that a false statement of fact is true.

In deciding this issue, you should consider whether the average [reader/listener] would conclude from the language of the statement and its context that [name of defendant] was implying that a false statement of fact is true.

New September 2003; Revised June 2013

Directions for Use

Give this instruction only if the court concludes that a statement could reasonably be construed as implying a false assertion of fact. (See Campanelli v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1996) 44 Cal.App.4th 572, 578 [51 Cal.Rptr.2d 891].)

Sources and Authority

- " 'Because [a defamatory] statement must contain a provable falsehood, courts distinguish between statements of fact and statements of opinion for purposes of defamation liability. Although statements of fact may be actionable as libel, statements of opinion are constitutionally protected. [Citation.]' That does not mean that statements of opinion enjoy blanket protection. On the contrary, where an expression of opinion implies a false assertion of fact, the opinion can constitute actionable defamation. The 'crucial question of whether challenged statements convey the requisite factual imputation is ordinarily a question of law for the court. [Citation.]' 'Only once the court has determined that a statement is reasonably susceptible to such a defamatory interpretation does it become a question for the trier of fact whether or not it was so understood. [Citations.]' " (Summit Bank v. Rogers (2012) 206 Cal.App.4th 669, 695–696 [142 Cal.Rptr.3d 40], internal citations omitted.)
- " 'In determining whether a statement is libelous we look to what is explicitly stated as well as what insinuation and implication can be reasonably drawn from the communication.' ' " '[I]f the defendant juxtaposes [a] series of facts so as to imply a defamatory connection between them, or [otherwise] creates a defamatory implication . . . he may be held responsible for the defamatory implication, . . . even though the particular facts are correct.' " ' The 'pertinent question' is whether a 'reasonable fact finder' could conclude that the statements 'as a whole, or any of its parts, directly made or sufficiently implied a false assertion of defamatory fact that tended to injure' plaintiff's reputation." (Issa v.

Applegate (2019) 31 Cal.App.5th 689, 703 [242 Cal.Rptr.3d 809], internal citations omitted.)

- "In defining libel and slander, Civil Code sections 45 and 46 both refer to a 'false . . . publication . . . .' This statutory definition can be meaningfully applied only to statements that are capable of being proved as false or true." (Savage v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1993) 21 Cal.App.4th 434, 445 [26 Cal.Rptr.2d 305].)
- "Thus, 'rhetorical hyperbole,' 'vigorous epithet[s],' 'lusty and imaginative expressions[s] of . . . contempt,' and language used 'in a loose, figurative sense' have all been accorded constitutional protection." (Ferlauto v. Hamsher (1999) 74 Cal.App.4th 1394, 1401 [88 Cal.Rptr.2d 843].)
- "Deprecatory statements regarding the merits of litigation are "nothing more than 'the predictable opinion' of one side to the lawsuit" and cannot be the basis for a defamation claim." (GetFugu, Inc. v. Patton Boggs LLP (2013) 220 Cal.App.4th 141, 156 [162 Cal.Rptr.3d 831].)
- "If a speaker says, 'In my opinion John Jones is a liar,' he implies a knowledge of facts which lead to the conclusion that Jones told an untruth. Even if the speaker states the facts upon which he bases his opinion, if those facts are either incorrect or incomplete, or if his assessment of them is erroneous, the statement may still imply a false assertion of fact." (Milkovich v. Lorain Journal Co. (1990) 497 U.S. 1, 18 [110 S.Ct. 2695, 111 L.Ed.2d 1].)
- "[W]hen a communication identifies non-defamatory facts underlying an opinion, or the recipient is otherwise aware of those facts, a negative statement of opinion is not defamatory. As explained in the Restatement Second of Torts, a 'pure type of expression of opinion' occurs 'when both parties to the communication know the facts or assume their existence and the comment is clearly based on those assumed facts and does not imply the existence of other facts in order to justify the comment. The assumption of the facts may come about because someone else has stated them or because they were assumed by both parties as a result of their notoriety or otherwise.' Actionable statements of opinion are 'the mixed type, [where] an opinion in form or context, is apparently based on facts regarding the plaintiff or his conduct that have not been stated by the defendant [but] gives rise to the inference that there are undisclosed facts that justify the forming of the opinion.' " (John Doe 2 v. Superior Court (2016) 1 Cal.App.5th 1300, 1314 [206 Cal.Rptr.3d 60], internal citation omitted.)
- "Even if an opinion can be understood as implying facts capable of being proved true or false, however, it is not actionable if it also discloses the underlying factual bases for the opinion and those statements are true." (J-M Manufacturing Co., Inc. v. Phillips & Cohen LLP (2016) 247 Cal.App.4th 87, 100 [201 Cal.Rptr.3d 782].)
- "California courts have developed a 'totality of the circumstances' test to determine whether an alleged defamatory statement is one of fact or of opinion. First, the language of the statement is examined. For words to be defamatory, they must be understood in a defamatory sense. Where the language of the statement is 'cautiously phrased in terms of apparency,' the statement is less likely to be reasonably understood as a statement of fact rather than opinion." (Baker v. Los Angeles Herald Examiner (1986) 42 Cal.3d 254, 260 [228 Cal.Rptr. 206, 721 P.2d 87].)

- "The court must put itself in the place of an average reader and decide the natural and probable effect of the statement." (Hofmann Co. v. E.I. Du Pont de Nemors & Co. (1988) 202 Cal.App.3d 390, 398 [248 Cal.Rptr. 384].)
- "[S]ome statements are ambiguous and cannot be characterized as factual or nonfactual as a matter of law. 'In these circumstances, it is for the jury to determine whether an ordinary reader would have understood the article as a factual assertion . . . .' " (Kahn v. Bower (1991) 232 Cal.App.3d 1599, 1608 [284 Cal.Rptr. 244], internal citations omitted.)
- "Use of 'hyperbolic, informal' ' "crude, [or] ungrammatical" language, satirical tone, [or] vituperative, "juvenile name-calling" ' provide support for the conclusion that offensive comments were nonactionable opinion. Similarly, overly vague statements, and ' "generalized" comments . . . "lack[ing] any specificity as to the time or place of" alleged conduct may be a "further signal to the reader there is no factual basis for the accusations." ' On the other hand, if a statement is 'factually specific,' 'earnest', or 'serious' in tone, or the speaker 'represents himself as "unbiased," ' ' "having specialized" ' or ' "first-hand experience," ' or ' "hav[ing] personally witnessed . . . abhorrent behavior" ', this may signal the opposite, rendering the statement actionable." (ZL Technologies, Inc. v. Does 1–7 (2017) 13 Cal.App.5th 603, 624 [220 Cal.Rptr.3d 569], internal citations omitted.)
- "Whether a challenged statement 'declares or implies a provable false assertion of fact is a question of law for the court to decide . . . , unless the statement is susceptible of both an innocent and a libelous meaning, in which case the jury must decide how the statement was understood.' " (Overhill Farms, Inc. v. Lopez (2010) 190 Cal.App.4th 1248, 1261 [119 Cal.Rptr.3d 127].)
- "We next turn to the broader context of his statements—posting on an Internet site under an assumed user name. [Defendant] contends Internet fora are notorious as 'places where readers expect to see strongly worded opinions rather than objective facts,' and that 'anonymous, or pseudonymous,' opinions should be ' "discount[ed] . . . accordingly." ' However, the mere fact speech is broadcast across the Internet by an anonymous speaker does not ipso facto make it nonactionable opinion and immune from defamation law." (Bently Reserve LP v. Papaliolios (2013) 218 Cal.App.4th 418, 429 [160 Cal.Rptr.3d 423], internal citation omitted.)
- "Rather, a defendant's anonymity, the name of the Internet forum, the nature, language, tone, and complete content of the remarks all are relevant." (ZL Technologies, Inc., supra, 13 Cal.App.5th at p. 625.)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 643–646

4 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 45, Defamation, §§ 45.05–45.06 (Matthew Bender)

30 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, § 340.16 (Matthew Bender)

14 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 142, Libel and Slander (Defamation), § 142.86 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Torts §§ 21:20–21:21 (Thomson Reuters)

1708. Coerced Self-Publication

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] is responsible for [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] harm even though [name of defendant] did not communicate the statement(s) to anyone other than [name of plaintiff]. To succeed, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] made the statement(s) to [name of plaintiff];
2. That [name of plaintiff] was under strong pressure to communicate [name of defendant]'s statement(s) to another person; and
3. That when [name of defendant] made the statements, [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] should have known that [name of plaintiff] would be under strong pressure to communicate them to another person.

If [*name of plaintiff] has proved all of the above, then you must find that [name of defendant] was responsible for the communication of the statement(s).

New September 2003

Sources and Authority

- The general rule is that "[a] plaintiff cannot manufacture a defamation cause of action by publishing the statements to third persons; the publication must be done by the defendant." The exception to the rule occurs "when it [is] foreseeable that the defendant's act would result in plaintiff's publication to a third person." (Live Oak Publishing Co. v. Cohagan (1991) 234 Cal.App.3d 1277, 1284 [286 Cal.Rptr. 198].)
- [A] "self-publication of the alleged defamatory statement may be imputed to the originator of the statement if 'the person defamed is operating under a strong compulsion to republish the defamatory statement and the circumstances which create the strong compulsion are known to the originator of the defamatory statement at the time he communicates it to the person defamed.' " (Davis v. Consolidated Freightways (1994) 29 Cal.App.4th 354, 373 [34 Cal.Rptr.2d 438], quoting McKinney v. County of Santa Clara (1980) 110 Cal.App.3d 787, 797–798 [168 Cal.Rptr. 89].)
- "This exception has been limited to a narrow class of cases, usually where a plaintiff is compelled to republish the statements in aid of disproving them." (Live Oak Publishing Co., supra, 234 Cal.App.3d at p. 1285.)
- To determine if the coercion exception applies, the test is "whether 'because of some necessity he was under to communicate the matter to others, it was reasonably to be anticipated that he would do so.' " (Live Oak Publishing Co., supra, 234 Cal.App.3d at p. 1285.)

- "[W]hile compelled self-published defamation per se technically eliminates the need for publication by the defendant to a third party, a plaintiff cannot manufacture the defamation claim by simply publishing statements to a third party because the plaintiff must disclose contents of the employer's statement to a third party after reading or being informed of the contents. The originator of the statement is liable for the foreseeable repetition because of the causal link between the originator and the presumed damage to the plaintiff's reputation, but the publication must be foreseeable. The presumed injury is no less damaging because the plaintiff was compelled to make the statement instead of the employer making it directly to the third party." (Tilkey v. Allstate Ins. Co. (2020) 56 Cal.App.5th 521, 542 [270 Cal.Rptr.3d 559], original italics, internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 633, 722

14 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 142, Libel and Slander (Defamation), § 142.22 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Torts § 21:15 (Thomson Reuters)

1709. Retraction: News Publication or Broadcast (Civ. Code, § 48a)

Because [name of defendant] is a [[daily/weekly] news publication/broadcaster], [name of plaintiff] may recover only the following:

(a) Damages to property, business, trade, profession, or occupation; and

(b) Damages for money spent as a result of the defamation.

However, this limitation does not apply if [name of plaintiff] proves both of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] demanded a correction of the statement within 20 days of discovering the statement; and
2. That [name of defendant] did not publish an adequate correction;

   [or]

   That [name of defendant]'s correction was not substantially as conspicuous as the original [publication/broadcast];

   [or]

   That [name of defendant]'s correction was not [published/broadcast] within three weeks of [name of plaintiff]'s demand.

New September 2003; Revised June 2016, May 2017; Renumbered from CACI No. 1722 November 2017

Directions for Use

The judge should decide whether the demand for a retraction was served in compliance with the statute. (O'Hara v. Storer Communications, Inc. (1991) 231 Cal.App.3d 1101, 1110 [282 Cal.Rptr. 712].)

The statute is limited to actions "for damages for the publication of a libel in a daily or weekly news publication, or of a slander by radio broadcast." (Civ. Code, § 48a(a).) However, a "radio broadcast" includes television. (Civ. Code, § 48.5(4) [the terms "radio," "radio broadcast," and "broadcast," are defined to include both visual and sound radio broadcasting]; Kalpoe v. Superior Court (2013) 222 Cal.App.4th 206, 210, 166 Cal.Rptr.3d 80].)

Sources and Authority

- Demand for Correction. Civil Code section 48a.
- "Under California law, a newspaper gains immunity from liability for all but 'special damages' when it prints a retraction satisfying the requirements of section 48a." (Pierce v. San Jose Mercury News (1989) 214 Cal.App.3d 1626, 1631 [263 Cal.Rptr. 410]; see also Twin Coast Newspapers, Inc. v. Superior Court (1989) 208 Cal.App.3d 656, 660–661 [256 Cal.Rptr. 310].)

- "An equivocal or incomplete retraction obviously serves no purpose even if it is published in 'substantially as conspicuous a manner . . . as were the statements claimed to be libelous.' " (Weller v. American Broadcasting Companies, Inc. (1991) 232 Cal.App.3d 991, 1011 [283 Cal.Rptr. 644].)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 735–744

4 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 45, Defamation, § 45.24 (Matthew Bender)

30 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, § 340.53 (Matthew Bender)

14 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 142, Libel and Slander (Defamation), § 142.37 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Torts §§ 21:55–21:57 (Thomson Reuters)

1710–1719. Reserved for Future Use

1720. Affirmative Defense—Truth

[Name of defendant] is not responsible for [name of plaintiff]'s harm, if any, if [name of defendant] proves that [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] statement(s) about [name of plaintiff] [was/were] true. [Name of defendant] does not have to prove that the statement(s) [was/were] true in every detail, so long as the statement(s) [was/were] substantially true.

New September 2003; Revised October 2008, May 2017

Directions for Use

This instruction is to be used only in cases involving private plaintiffs on matters of private concern. In cases involving public figures or matters of public concern, the burden of proving falsity is on the plaintiff. (Sonoma Media Investments, LLC v. Superior Court (2019) 34 Cal.App.5th 24, 37 [247 Cal.Rptr.3d 5].)

Sources and Authority

- "Truth, of course, is an absolute defense to any libel action." (Campanelli v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1996) 44 Cal.App.4th 572, 581–582 [51 Cal.Rptr.2d 891].)
- "California law permits the defense of substantial truth and would absolve a defendant even if she cannot 'justify every word of the alleged defamatory matter; it is sufficient if the substance of the charge be proved true, irrespective of slight inaccuracy in the details.' 'Minor inaccuracies do not amount to falsity so long as 'the substance, the gist, the sting, of the libelous charge be justified.' " (GetFugu, Inc. v. Patton Boggs LLP (2013) 220 Cal.App.4th 141, 154 [162 Cal.Rptr.3d 831], internal citation omitted.)
- "Put another way, the statement is not considered false unless it 'would have a different effect on the mind of the reader from that which the pleaded truth would have produced.' " (Jackson v. Mayweather (2017) 10 Cal.App.5th 1240, 1262–1263 [217 Cal.Rptr.3d 234].)
- "In defamation actions generally, factual truth is a defense which it is the defendant's burden to prove. [¶] In a defamation action against a newspaper by a private person suing over statements of public concern, however, the First Amendment places the burden of proving falsity on the plaintiff. As a matter of constitutional law, therefore, media statements on matters of public interest, including statements of opinion which reasonably imply a knowledge of facts, 'must be provable as false before there can be liability under state defamation law.' " (Eisenberg v. Alameda Newspapers, (1999) 74 Cal.App.4th 1359, 1382 [88 Cal.Rptr.2d 802], original italics, internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 655–659, 720

4 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 45, Defamation, § 45.10 (Matthew Bender)

30 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, § 340.55 (Matthew Bender)

14 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 142, Libel and Slander (Defamation), § 142.39 (Matthew Bender)

1 California Civil Practice: Torts §§ 21:19, 21:52 (Thomson Reuters)

1721. Affirmative Defense—Consent

[Name of defendant] is not responsible for [name of plaintiff]'s harm, if any, if [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] proves that [name of plaintiff] consented, by words or conduct, to [name of defendant]'s communication of the statement(s) to others. In deciding whether [name of plaintiff] consented to the communication, you should consider the circumstances surrounding the words or conduct.

New September 2003; Revised October 2008

Sources and Authority

- Restatement Second of Torts, section 583, provides, in part: "[T]he consent of another to the publication of defamatory matter concerning him is a complete defense to his action for defamation."
- "One of the oldest and most widely recognized defenses to the publication of defamatory matter is the doctrine of consent, which has been classified as a form of absolute privilege." (Royer v. Steinberg (1979) 90 Cal.App.3d 490, 498 [153 Cal.Rptr. 499].)
- "One of the primary purposes of the doctrine of consent in defamation law is to prevent a party from inviting or inducing indiscretion and thereby laying the foundation of a lawsuit for his own pecuniary gain." (Royer, supra, 90 Cal.App.3d at p. 499.)
- This rule applies when the plaintiff asks the defendant to repeat the statement to others and when the plaintiff himself repeats the statements to others. (Royer, supra, 90 Cal.App.3d at p. 498 [but see CACI No. 1708, Coerced Self-Publication].)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, § 694

30 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, § 340.68 (Matthew Bender)

14 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 142, Libel and Slander (Defamation), § 142.54 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Torts § 21:28 (Thomson Reuters)

1722. Affirmative Defense—Statute of Limitations—Defamation

[*Name of defendant] contends that [name of plaintiff]'s lawsuit was not filed within the time set by law. To succeed on this defense, [name of defendant] must prove that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] first communicated the alleged defamatory statement to a person other than [name of plaintiff] before [insert date one year before date of filing]. [For statements made in a publication, the claimed harm occurred when the publication was first generally distributed to the public.]

[If, however, [*name of plaintiff] proves that on [insert date one year before date of filing] [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] had not discovered the facts constituting the defamation, and with reasonable diligence could not have discovered those facts, the lawsuit was filed on time.]

New April 2009; Renumbered from CACI No. 1724 November 2017

Directions for Use

This instruction is for use if the defendant claims that the plaintiff's action was not filed within the applicable one-year limitation period for defamation. (See Code Civ. Proc., § 340(c).)

If the defamation was published in a publication such as a book, newspaper, or magazine, include the last sentence of the first paragraph, and do not include the second paragraph The delayed-discovery rule does not apply to these statements. (Shively v. Bozanich (2003) 31 Cal.4th 1230, 1250–1251 [7 Cal.Rptr.3d 576, 80 P.3d 676].) Otherwise, include the second paragraph if the plaintiff alleges that the delayed-discovery rule avoids the limitation defense.

The plaintiff bears the burden of pleading and proving delayed discovery. (See McKelvey v. Boeing North Am. Inc. (1999) 74 Cal.App.4th 151, 160 [86 Cal.Rptr.2d 645].) See also the Sources and Authority to CACI No. 455, Statute of Limitations—Delayed Discovery.

The delayed discovery rule can apply to matters published in an inherently secretive manner. (Hebrew Academy of San Francisco v. Goldman (2007) 42 Cal.4th 883, 894 [70 Cal.Rptr.3d 178, 173 P.3d 1004]. Modify the instruction if inherent secrecy is at issue and depends on disputed facts. It is not clear whether the plaintiff has the burden of proving inherent secrecy or the defendant has the burden of proving its absence.

Sources and Authority

- One-Year Statute of Limitations. Code of Civil Procedure section 340.
- "In a claim for defamation, as with other tort claims, the period of limitations commences when the cause of action accrues. . . . [A] cause of action for defamation accrues at the time the defamatory statement is 'published' (using the term 'published' in its technical sense). [¶] [I]n defamation actions the general rule is that publication occurs when the defendant communicates the defamatory statement to a person other than the person being defamed. As also has been noted, with respect to books and newspapers, publication occurs (and the cause of action accrues) when the book or newspaper is first generally distributed to the public." (Shively, supra, 31 Cal.4th at pp. 1246–1247, internal citations omitted.)

- "This court and other courts in California and elsewhere have recognized that in certain circumstances it may be appropriate to apply the discovery rule to delay the accrual of a cause of action for defamation or to impose an equitable estoppel against defendants who assert the defense after the limitations period has expired." (Shively, supra, 31 Cal.4th at pp. 1248–1249.)
- "[A]pplication of the discovery rule to statements contained in books and newspapers would undermine the single-publication rule and reinstate the indefinite tolling of the statute of limitations intended to be cured by the adoption of the single-publication rule. If we were to recognize delayed accrual of a cause of action based upon the allegedly defamatory statement contained in the book . . . on the basis that plaintiff did not happen to come across the statement until some time after the book was first generally distributed to the public, we would be adopting a rule subjecting publishers and authors to potential liability during the entire period in which a single copy of the book or newspaper might exist and fall into the hands of the subject of a defamatory remark. Inquiry into whether delay in discovering the publication was reasonable has not been permitted for publications governed by the single-publication rule. Nor is adoption of the rule proposed by plaintiff appropriate simply because the originator of a privately communicated defamatory statement may, together with the author and the publisher of a book, be liable for the defamation contained in the book. Under the rationale for the single-publication rule, the originator, who is jointly responsible along with the author and the publisher, should not be liable for millions of causes of action for a single edition of the book. Similarly, consistent with that rationale, the originator, like the author or the publisher, should not be subject to suit many years after the edition is published." (Shively, supra, 31 Cal.4th at p. 1251.)
- "The single-publication rule as described in our opinion in Shively and as codified in Civil Code section 3425.3 applies without limitation to all publications." (Hebrew Academy of San Francisco, supra, 42 Cal.4th at p. 893.)
- "[T]he single-publication rule applies not only to books and newspapers that are published with general circulation (as we addressed in Shively), but also to publications like that in the present case that are given only limited circulation and, thus, are not generally distributed to the public. Further, the discovery rule, which we held in Shively does not apply when a book or newspaper is generally distributed to the public, does not apply even when, as in the present case, a publication is given only limited distribution." (Hebrew Academy of San Francisco, supra, 42 Cal.4th at p. 890.)

- " '. . . [C]ourts uniformly have rejected the application of the discovery rule to libels published in books, magazines, and newspapers,' stating that 'although application of the discovery rule may be justified when the defamation was communicated in confidence, that is, "in an inherently secretive manner," the justification does not apply when the defamation occurred by means of a book, magazine, or newspaper that was distributed to the public. [Citation.]' " (Hebrew Academy of San Francisco, supra, 42 Cal.4th at p. 894, original italics, internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

Haning et al., California Practice Guide: Personal Injury, Ch. 5-B, Filing Suit: Time Bars and Pleading Concerns, ¶ 5:176.10 (The Rutter Group)

4 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 45, Defamation, § 45.21 (Matthew Bender)

30 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, § 340.290 (Matthew Bender)

14 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 142, Libel and Slander (Defamation), § 142.56 (Matthew Bender)

1723. Common Interest Privilege—Malice (Civ. Code, § 47(c))

[*Name of plaintiff] cannot recover damages from [name of defendant], even if the statement(s) [was/were] false, unless [name of plaintiff] also proves either:

1. That in making the statement(s), [name of defendant] acted with hatred or ill will toward [him/her/nonbinary pronoun], showing [name of defendant]'s willingness to vex, annoy, or injure [him/her/nonbinary pronoun]; or
2. That [name of defendant] had no reasonable grounds for believing the truth of the statement(s).

New September 2003; Revised June 2014

Directions for Use

This instruction involves what is referred to as the "common interest" privilege of Civil Code section 47(c). This statute grants a privilege against defamation to communications made without malice on subjects of mutual interest. The defendant bears the initial burden of showing facts to bring the communication within the privilege. The plaintiff then must prove malice. (Lundquist v. Reusser (1994) 7 Cal.4th 1193, 1203 [31 Cal.Rptr.2d 776, 875 P.2d 1279].)

Sources and Authority

- Common-Interest Privilege: Civil Code section 47(c).
- Malice Not Inferred: Civil Code section 48.
- "So, defendants contended, any publication was protected by the common interest privilege in Civil Code section 47, subdivision (c), which extends a privilege to statements made 'without malice, to a person interested therein, (1) by one who is also interested, or (2) by one who stands in such a relation to the person interested as to afford a reasonable ground for supposing the motive for the communication to be innocent, or (3) who is requested by the person interested to give the information.' " (Barker v. Fox & Associates (2015) 240 Cal.App.4th 333, 353 [192 Cal.Rptr.3d 511].)
- "Civil Code section 47 'extends a conditional privilege against defamation to statements made without malice on subjects of mutual interests. [Citation.] This privilege is "recognized where the communicator and the recipient have a common interest and the communication is of a kind reasonably calculated to protect or further that interest." [Citation.] The "interest" must be something other than mere general or idle curiosity, such as where the parties to the communication share a contractual, business or similar relationship or the defendant is protecting his own pecuniary interest. [Citation.] Rather, it is restricted to 'proprietary or narrow private interests." [Citations.]' " (Hui v.

Sturbaum (2014) 222 Cal.App.4th 1109, 1118–1119 [166 Cal.Rptr.3d 569].)

- "This definition is not exclusive, however, and the cases have taken an 'eclectic approach' toward interpreting the statute." (Klem v. Access Ins. Co. (2017) 17 Cal.App.5th 595, 617 [225 Cal.Rptr.3d 711].)
- "Communications made in a commercial setting relating to the conduct of an employee have been held to fall squarely within the qualified privilege for communications to interested persons." (Cornell v. Berkeley Tennis Club (2017) 18 Cal.App.5th 908, 949 [227 Cal.Rptr.3d 286].)
- " 'Ordinarily, the common interest of the members of a church in church matters is sufficient to give rise to a qualified privilege to communications between members on subjects relating to the church's interest.' This reasoning applies by analogy to communications between parents of parochial school children and church authorities overseeing the school on subjects relating to the school." (Hicks v. Richard (2019) 39 Cal.App.5th 1167, 1177 [252 Cal.Rptr.3d 578].)
- "For the purposes of section 47's qualified privilege, 'malice' means that the defendant (1) ' "was motivated by hatred or ill will towards the plaintiff," ' or (2) ' "lacked reasonable grounds for [its] belief in the truth of the publication and therefore acted in reckless disregard of the plaintiff's rights." ' " (Schep v. Capital One, N.A. (2017) 12 Cal.App.5th 1331, 1337 [220 Cal.Rptr.3d 408].)
- "The malice required to defeat the common interest privilege is actual malice." (Hicks, supra, 39 Cal.App.5th at p. 1178.)
- "[M]alice [as used in Civil Code section 47(c)] has been defined as 'a state of mind arising from hatred or ill will, evidencing a willingness to vex, annoy or injure another person.' " (Brown v. Kelly Broadcasting Co. (1989) 48 Cal.3d 711, 723 [257 Cal.Rptr. 708, 771 P.2d 406], internal citation omitted.)
- "[M]alice focuses upon the defendant's state of mind, not his [or her] conduct." (Cornell, supra, 18 Cal.App.5th at p. 951.)
- "[M]alice may not be inferred from the mere fact of the communication." (Barker, supra, 240 Cal.App.4th at p. 354.)
- "For purposes of establishing a triable issue of malice, 'the issue is not the truth or falsity of the statements but whether they were made recklessly without reasonable belief in their truth.' A triable issue of malice would exist if [defendant] made a statement in reckless disregard of Employee's rights that [defendant] either did not believe to be true (i.e., he actually knew better) or unreasonably believed to be true (i.e., he should have known better). In either case, a fact finder would have to ascertain what [defendant] subjectively knew and believed about the topic at the time he spoke." (McGrory v. Applied Signal Technology, Inc. (2013) 212 Cal.App.4th 1510, 1540 [152 Cal.Rptr.3d 154], internal citation omitted.)
- "[M]aliciousness cannot be derived from negligence. Malice entails more than sloppiness or, as in this case, an easily explained typo." (Bierbower v. FHP, Inc. (1999) 70 Cal.App.4th 1, 9 [82 Cal.Rptr.2d 393].)

- "[I]f malice is shown, the privilege is not merely overcome; it never arises in the first instance. . . . [T]he characterization of the privilege as qualified or conditional is incorrect to the extent that it suggests the privilege is defeasible." (Brown, supra, 48 Cal.3d at p. 723, fn. 7.)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 92, 655, 690–704

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 5(I)-E, Employment Torts And Related Claims—Defamation, ¶ 5:471 et seq. (The Rutter Group)

4 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 45, Defamation, § 45.12 (Matthew Bender)

30 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, § 340.66 (Matthew Bender)

14 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 142, Libel and Slander (Defamation), § 142.53 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Torts §§ 21:40–21:41 (Thomson Reuters)

1724. Fair and True Reporting Privilege (Civ. Code, § 47(d))

[*Name of plaintiff] cannot recover damages from [name of defendant] if [name of defendant] proves all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant]'s statement(s) [was/were] [reported in/communicated to] [specify public journal in which statement(s) appeared];
2. The [report/communication] was of [select the applicable statutory context]

   [a judicial, legislative, or other public official proceeding;]

   [something said in the course of a judicial, legislative, or other public official proceeding;]

   [a verified charge or complaint made by any person to a public official on which a warrant was issued;]

   and

3. The [report/communication] was both fair and true.

New November 2017

Directions for Use

This instruction involves what is referred to as the "fair and true reporting privilege" of Civil Code section 47(d). This statute grants an absolute privilege against defamation for a fair and true report in, or a communication to, a public journal, of a judicial, legislative, or other public official proceeding; or for anything said in the course of the proceeding; or for a verified charge or complaint made by any person to a public official, on which complaint a warrant has been issued.

An element of defamation is that the alleged defamatory statement is "unprivileged." (Hui v. Sturbaum (2014) 222 Cal.App.4th 1109, 1118 [166 Cal.Rptr.3d 569].) That would seem to suggest that the plaintiff must prove that a privilege does not apply. Nevertheless, courts have held that it is the defendant's burden to prove that the statement is within the scope of the privilege, including that it was fair and true. (Burrill v. Nair (2013) 217 Cal.App.4th 357, 396 [158 Cal.Rptr.3d 332], disapproved on another ground in Baral v. Schnitt (2016) 1 Cal.5th 376, 396, fn. 11 [205 Cal.Rptr.3d 475, 376 P.3d 604].)

Sources and Authority

- Fair and True Reporting Privilege. Civil Code section 47(d).
- "Under section 47, subdivision (d), the fair and true reporting privilege protects a 'fair and true report in, or a communication to, a public journal, of . . . a judicial . . . proceeding, or . . . anything said in the course thereof.' It too is an absolute privilege—that is, it applies regardless of the defendants' motive for making the report—and forecloses a plaintiff from showing a probability of prevailing on the merits." (Argentieri v. Zuckerberg (2017) 8 Cal.App.5th 768, 787 [214 Cal.Rptr.3d 358].)

- "The purpose of this privilege is to ensure the public interest is served by the dissemination of information about events occurring in official proceedings and with respect to verified charges or complaints resulting in the issuance of a warrant." (Burrill, supra, 217 Cal.App.4th at p. 397.)
- "Prior to 1997 subdivision (d) applied only to a fair and true report in a public journal. Senate Bill No. 1540 (1995–1996 Reg. Sess.), sponsored by the California Newspapers Publishers Association, amended the provision, effective January 1, 1997, to add 'or a communication to,' so the privilege would extend, as it does now, to both a fair and true report in and a communication to a public journal concerning judicial, legislative or other public proceedings." (J-M Manufacturing Co., Inc. v. Phillips & Cohen LLP (2016) 247 Cal.App.4th 87, 97 [201 Cal.Rptr.3d 782], original italics.)
- "The privilege applies if the substance of the publication or broadcast captures the gist or sting of the statements made in the official proceedings." (Burrill, supra, 217 Cal.App.4th at p. 398.)
- "The defendant is entitled to a certain degree of ' "flexibility/literary license" ' in this regard, such that the privilege will apply even if there is a slight inaccuracy in details—one that does not lead the reader to be affected differently by the report than he or she would be by the actual truth." (Argentieri, supra, 8 Cal.App.5th at pp. 787–788.)
- "[Plaintiff] further contends it was for a jury, not the trial court, to decide whether [defendant]'s Statement was a fair and true report. Courts have stated that the fairness and truth of a report is an issue of fact for the jury, if there is any material factual dispute on the issue." (Argentieri, supra, 8 Cal.App.5th at p. 791, original italics.)
- " '[W]hether or not a privileged occasion exists is for the court to decide, while the effect produced by the particular words used in an article [or broadcast] and the fairness of the report is a question of fact for the jury [citation].' '[T]he publication is to be measured by the natural and probable effect it would have on the mind of the average reader [citations]. The standard of interpretation to be used in testing alleged defamatory language is how those in the community where the matter was published would reasonably understand it [citation]. In determining whether the report was fair and true, the article [or broadcast] must be regarded from the standpoint of persons whose function is to give the public a fair report of what has taken place. The report is not to be judged by the standard of accuracy that would be adopted if it were the report of a professional law reporter or a trained lawyer [citation].' " (Burrill, supra, 217 Cal.App.4th at p. 398, internal citation omitted.)
- "At the very least, the difference between these accusations presents a question of fact with respect to whether the average listener would understand the broadcast to capture the gist or sting of the citizen's complaint, or whether the charge made in the broadcast would affect the listener differently than that made in the citizen's complaint." (Burrill, supra, 217 Cal.App.4th at p. 398.)

- "In evaluating the effect a publication has on the average reader, the challenged language must be viewed in context to determine whether, applying a 'totality of the circumstances' test, it is reasonably susceptible to the defamatory meaning alleged by the plaintiff: ' "[A] defamatory meaning must be found, if at all, in a reading of the publication as a whole." [Citation.] "This is a rule of reason. Defamation actions cannot be based on snippets taken out of context." ' (J-M Manufacturing Co., Inc., supra, 247 Cal.App.4th at p. 97, internal citations omitted.)
- "[Defendant] bears the burden of proving the privilege applies." (Burrill, supra, 217 Cal.App.4th at p. 396.)
- " 'A report of a judicial proceeding implies that some official action has been taken by the officer or body whose proceedings are thus reported. The publication, therefore, of the contents of preliminary pleadings such as a complaint or petition, before any judicial action has been taken is not within the rule stated in this Section. An important reason for this position has been to prevent implementation of a scheme to file a complaint for the purpose of establishing a privilege to publicize its content and then dropping the action. (See Comment c). It is not necessary, however, that a final disposition be made of the matter in question; it is enough that some judicial action has been taken so that, in the normal progress of the proceeding, a final decision will be rendered.' " (Burrill, supra, at p. 397, quoting Restatement 2d of Torts, § 611, comment e.)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, § 691

4 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 45, Intentional Torts and Other Theories of Recovery, § 45.11 (Matthew Bender)

30 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, § 340.64 (Matthew Bender)

14 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 142, Libel and Slander, § 142.51 (Matthew Bender)

1725–1729. Reserved for Future Use

1730. Slander of Title—Essential Factual Elements

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] harmed [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] by [making a statement/taking an action] that cast doubts about [name of plaintiff]'s ownership of [describe real or personal property, e.g., the residence located at [address]]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] [made a statement/[specify other act, e.g., recorded a deed] that cast doubts about [name of plaintiff]'s ownership of the property;
2. That the [statement was made to a person other than [name of plaintiff]/[specify other publication, e.g., deed became a public record]];
3. That [the statement was untrue and] [name of plaintiff] did in fact own the property;
4. That [name of defendant] [knew that/acted with reckless disregard of the truth or falsity as to whether] [name of plaintiff] owned the property;
5. That [name of defendant] knew or should have recognized that someone else might act in reliance on the [statement/e.g., deed], causing [name of plaintiff] financial loss;
6. That [name of plaintiff] did in fact suffer immediate and direct financial harm [because someone else acted in reliance on the [statement/e.g., deed]/ [or] by incurring legal expenses necessary to remove the doubt cast by the [statement/e.g., deed] and to clear title];
7. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New December 2012; Revised May 2018, November 2018

Directions for Use

Slander of title may be either by words or an act that clouds title to the property. (See, e.g., Alpha & Omega Development, LP v. Whillock Contracting, Inc. (2011) 200 Cal.App.4th 656, 661 [132 Cal.Rptr.3d 781] [filing of lis pendens].) If the slander is by means other than words, specify the means in element 1. If the slander is by words, select the first option in element 2.

An additional element of a slander of title claim is that the alleged slanderous statement was without privilege or justification. (Schep v. Capital One, N.A. (2017) 12 Cal.App.5th 1331, 1336 [220 Cal.Rptr.3d 408].) If this element presents an issue for the jury, an instruction on it must be given.

Under the common-interest privilege of Civil Code section 47(c), the defendant bears the initial burden of showing facts to bring the communication within the privilege. The plaintiff then must prove that the statement was made with malice. (Lundquist v. Reusser (1994) 7 Cal.4th 1193, 1203 [31 Cal.Rptr.2d 776, 875 P.2d 1279].) If the common-interest privilege is at issue, give CACI No. 1723, Common Interest Privilege—Malice. The elements of CACI No. 1723 constitute the "unprivileged" element of this basic claim.

If the privilege of Civil Code section 47(d) for a privileged publication or broadcast is alleged, give CACI No. 1724, Fair and True Reporting Privilege. (See J-M Manufacturing Co., Inc. v. Phillips & Cohen LLP (2016) 247 Cal.App.4th 87 [201 Cal.Rptr.3d 782].) If some other privilege is at issue, an additional element or instruction targeting that privilege will be required.

Beyond the privilege of Civil Code section 47(c), it would appear that actual malice in the sense of ill will toward and intent to harm the plaintiff is not required and that malice may be implied in law from absence of privilege (see Gudger v. Manton (1943) 21 Cal.2d 537, 543–544 [134 P.2d 217], disapproved on other grounds in Albertson v. Raboff (1956) 46 Cal.2d 375, 381 [295 P.2d 405]) or from the attempt to secure property to which the defendant had no legitimate claim (see Spencer v. Harmon Enterprises, Inc. (1965) 234 Cal.App.2d 614, 623 [44 Cal.Rptr. 683]) or from accusations made without foundation (element 4). (See Contra Costa County Title Co. v. Waloff (1960) 184 Cal.App.2d 59, 67 [7 Cal.Rptr. 358].)

Sources and Authority

- "[S]lander of title is not a form of deceit. It is a form of the separate common law tort of disparagement, also sometimes referred to as injurious falsehood." (Finch Aerospace Corp. v. City of San Diego (2017) 8 Cal.App.5th 1248, 1253 [214 Cal.Rptr.3d 628].)
- "The Supreme Court has recently determined a viable disparagement claim, which necessarily includes a slander of title claim, requires the existence of a 'misleading statement that (1) specifically refers to the plaintiff's product or business and (2) clearly derogates that product or business. Each requirement must be satisfied by express mention or by clear implication.' " (Finch Aerospace Corp., supra, 8 Cal.App.5th at p. 1253.)
- " 'Slander of title is effected by one who without privilege publishes untrue and disparaging statements with respect to the property of another under such circumstances as would lead a reasonable person to foresee that a prospective purchaser or lessee thereof might abandon his intentions. It is an invasion of the interest in the vendibility of property. In order to commit the tort actual malice or ill will is unnecessary. Damages usually consist of loss of a prospective purchaser. To be disparaging a statement need not be a complete denial of title in others, but may be any unfounded claim of an interest in the property which throws doubt upon its ownership.' 'However, it is not necessary to show that a particular pending deal was hampered or prevented, since recovery may be had for the depreciation in the market value of the property.' " (M.F. Farming, Co. v. Couch Distributing Co. (2012) 207 Cal.App.4th 180, 198–199 [143 Cal.Rptr.3d 160], internal citations omitted.)

- "Slander of title 'occurs when a person, without a privilege to do so, publishes a false statement that disparages title to property and causes pecuniary loss. [Citation.]' The false statement must be ' "maliciously made with the intent to defame." ' " (Cyr v. McGovran (2012) 206 Cal.App.4th 645, 651 [142 Cal.Rptr.3d 34], internal citations omitted.)
- "One who publishes a false statement harmful to the interests of another is subject to liability for pecuniary loss resulting to the other if (a) he intends for publication of the statement to result in harm to interests of the other having a pecuniary value, or either recognizes or should recognize that it is likely to do so, and (b) he knows that the statement is false or acts in reckless disregard of its truth or falsity." (Appel v. Burman (1984) 159 Cal.App.3d 1209, 1214 [206 Cal.Rptr. 259], quoting Rest. 2d Torts § 623A.)
- "One who, without a privilege to do so, publishes matter which is untrue and disparaging to another's property in land, chattels or intangible things under such circumstances as would lead a reasonable man to foresee that the conduct of a third person as purchaser or lessee thereof might be determined thereby is liable for pecuniary loss resulting to the other from the impairment of vendibility thus caused." (Chrysler Credit Corp. v. Ostly (1974) 42 Cal.App.3d 663, 674 [117 Cal.Rptr. 167], quoting Rest. Torts, § 624 [motor vehicle case].)
- "Sections 623A, 624 and 633 of the Restatement Second of Torts further refine the definition so it is clear included elements of the tort are that there must be (a) a publication, (b) which is without privilege or justification and thus with malice, express or implied, and (c) is false, either knowingly so or made without regard to its truthfulness, and (d) causes direct and immediate pecuniary loss." (Howard v. Schaniel (1980) 113 Cal.App.3d 256, 263–264 [169 Cal.Rptr. 678], footnote and internal citations omitted.)
- "In an action for wrongful disparagement of title, a plaintiff may recover (1) the expense of legal proceedings necessary to remove the doubt cast by the disparagement, (2) financial loss resulting from the impairment of vendibility of the property, and (3) general damages for the time and inconvenience suffered by plaintiff in removing the doubt cast upon his property." (Klem v. Access Ins. Co. (2017) 17 Cal.App.5th 595, 624 [225 Cal.Rptr.3d 711].)
- "While it is true that an essential element of a cause of action for slander of title is that the plaintiff suffered pecuniary damage as a result of the disparagement of title, the law is equally clear that the expense of legal proceedings necessary to remove the doubt cast by the disparagement and to clear title is a recognized form of pecuniary damage in such cases." (Sumner Hill Homeowners' Assn., Inc. v. Rio Mesa Holdings, LLC (2012) 205 Cal.App.4th 999, 1032 [141 Cal.Rptr.3d 109], internal citations omitted; see Rest.2d Torts, § 633, subd. (1)(b).)
- "Although attorney fees and litigation expenses reasonably necessary to remove the memorandum from the record were recoverable, those incurred merely in pursuit of damages against . . . defendants were not." (Seeley v. Seymour (1987) 190 Cal.App.3d 844, 865–866 [237 Cal.Rptr. 282].)

- "Although the gravamen of an action for disparagement of title is different from that of an action for personal defamation, substantially the same privileges are recognized in relation to both torts in the absence of statute. Questions of privilege relating to both torts are now resolved in the light of section 47 of the Civil Code." (Albertson, supra, 46 Cal.2d at pp. 378–379, internal citations omitted.)
- "[The privilege of Civil Code section 47(c)] is lost, however, where the person making the communication acts with malice. Malice exists where the person making the statement acts out of hatred or ill will, or has no reasonable grounds for believing the statement to be true, or makes the statement for any reason other than to protect the interest for the protection of which the privilege is given." (Earp v. Nobmann (1981) 122 Cal.App.3d 270, 285 [175 Cal.Rptr. 767], disapproved on other grounds in Silberg v. Anderson (1990) 50 Cal.3d 205, 219 [266 Cal.Rptr. 638, 786 P.2d 365].)
- "The existence of privilege is a defense to an action for defamation. Therefore, the burden is on the defendant to plead and prove the challenged publication was made under circumstances that conferred the privilege." (Palmer v. Zaklama (2003) 109 Cal.App.4th 1367, 1380 [1 Cal.Rptr.3d 116] [applying rule to slander of title].)
- "The principal issue presented in this case is whether the trial court properly instructed the jury that, in the jury's determination whether the common-interest privilege set forth in section 47(c) has been established, defendants bore the burden of proving not only that the allegedly defamatory statement was made upon an occasion that falls within the common-interest privilege, but also that the statement was made without malice. Defendants contend that, in California and throughout the United States, the general rule is that, although a defendant bears the initial burden of establishing that the allegedly defamatory statement was made upon an occasion falling within the purview of the common-interest privilege, once it is established that the statement was made upon such a privileged occasion, the plaintiff may recover damages for defamation only if the plaintiff successfully meets the burden of proving that the statement was made with malice. As stated above, the Court of Appeal agreed with defendants on this point. Although, as we shall explain, there are a few (primarily early) California decisions that state a contrary rule, both the legislative history of section 47(c) and the overwhelming majority of recent California decisions support the Court of Appeal's conclusion. Accordingly, we agree with the Court of Appeal insofar as it concluded that the trial court erred in instructing the jury that defendants bore the burden of proof upon the issue of malice, for purposes of section 47(c)." (Lundquist, supra, 7 Cal.4th at pp. 1202–1203, internal citations omitted.)
- "Civil Code section 47(b)(4) clearly describes the conditions for application of the [litigation] privilege to a recorded lis pendens as follows: 'A recorded lis pendens is not a privileged publication unless it identifies an action previously filed with a court of competent jurisdiction which affects the title or right of possession of real property, as authorized or required by law.' Those conditions are (1) the lis pendens must identify a previously filed action and (2) the previously filed action must be one that affects title or right of possession of real property. We decline to add a third requirement that there must also be evidentiary merit." (La Jolla Group II v. Bruce (2012) 211 Cal.App.4th 461, 476 [149 Cal.Rptr.3d 716], internal citation omitted.)

- "[T]he property owner may recover for the impairment of the vendibility 'of his property' without showing that the loss was caused by prevention of a particular sale. 'The most usual manner in which a third person's reliance upon disparaging matter causes pecuniary loss is by preventing a sale to a particular purchaser. . . . The disparaging matter may, if widely disseminated, cause pecuniary loss by depriving its possessor of a market in which, but for the disparagement, his land or other thing might with reasonable certainty have found a purchaser.' " (Glass v. Gulf Oil Corp. (1970) 12 Cal.App.3d 412, 424 [96 Cal.Rptr. 902].)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts §§ 747, 1886

3 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 40, Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts, § 40.80 et seq. (Matthew Bender)

30 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, § 340.90 (Matthew Bender)

1731. Trade Libel—Essential Factual Elements

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] harmed [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] by making a statement that disparaged [name of plaintiff]'s [specify product]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] made a statement that [would be clearly or necessarily understood to have] disparaged the quality of [name of plaintiff]'s [product/service];
2. That the statement was made to a person other than [name of plaintiff];
3. That the statement was untrue;
4. That [name of defendant] [knew that the statement was untrue/ acted with reckless disregard of the truth or falsity of the statement];
5. That [name of defendant] knew or should have recognized that someone else might act in reliance on the statement, causing [name of plaintiff] financial loss;
6. That [name of plaintiff] suffered direct financial harm because someone else acted in reliance on the statement; and
7. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New December 2013; Revised June 2015, May 2018

Directions for Use

The tort of trade libel is a form of injurious falsehood similar to slander of title. (See Polygram Records, Inc. v. Superior Court (1985) 170 Cal.App.3d 543, 548 [216 Cal.Rptr. 252]; Erlich v. Etner (1964) 224 Cal.App.2d 69, 74 [36 Cal.Rptr. 256].) The tort has not often reached the attention of California's appellate courts (see Polygram Records, Inc., supra, 170 Cal.App.3d at p. 548), perhaps because of the difficulty in proving damages. (See Erlich, supra, 224 Cal.App.2d at pp. 73–74.)

Include the optional language in element 1 if the plaintiff alleges that disparagement may be reasonably implied from the defendant's words. Disparagement by reasonable implication requires more than a statement that may conceivably or plausibly be construed as derogatory. A "reasonable implication" means a clear or necessary inference. (Hartford Casualty Ins. Co. v. Swift Distribution, Inc. (2014) 59 Cal.4th 277, 295 [172 Cal.Rptr.3d 653, 326 P.3d 253].)

Elements 4 and 5 are supported by section 623A of the Restatement 2d of Torts, which has been accepted in California. (See Melaleuca, Inc. v. Clark (1998) 66 Cal.App.4th 1344, 1360–1361 [78 Cal.Rptr.2d 627].) There is some authority, however, for the proposition that no intent or reckless disregard is required (element 4) if the statement was understood in its disparaging sense and if the understanding is a reasonable construction of the language used or the acts done by the publisher. (See Nichols v. Great Am. Ins. Cos. (1985) 169 Cal.App.3d 766, 773 [215 Cal.Rptr. 416].)

The privileges of Civil Code section 47 almost certainly apply to actions for trade libel. (See Albertson v. Raboff (1956) 46 Cal.2d 375, 378–379 [295 P.2d 405] [slander-of-title case]; 117 Sales Corp. v. Olsen (1978) 80 Cal.App.3d 645, 651 [145 Cal.Rptr. 778] [publication by filing small claims suit is absolutely privileged].) If a privilege is claimed, additional instructions will be necessary to frame the privilege.

Under the common-interest privilege of Civil Code section 47(c), the defendant bears the initial burden of showing facts to bring the communication within the privilege. The plaintiff then must prove that the statement was made with malice. (Lundquist v. Reusser (1994) 7 Cal.4th 1193, 1203 [31 Cal.Rptr.2d 776, 875 P.2d 1279].) If the common-interest privilege is at issue, give CACI No. 1723, Common Interest Privilege—Malice. The elements of CACI No. 1723 constitute the "unprivileged" element of this basic claim.

If the privilege of Civil Code section 47(d) for a privileged publication or broadcast is at issue, give CACI No. 1724, Fair and True Reporting Privilege. (See J-M Manufacturing Co., Inc. v. Phillips & Cohen LLP (2016) 247 Cal.App.4th 87 [201 Cal.Rptr.3d 782].) If some other privilege is at issue, an additional element or instruction targeting that privilege will be required.

Limitations on liability arising from the First Amendment apply. (Hofmann Co. v. E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. (1988) 202 Cal.App.3d 390, 397 [248 Cal.Rptr. 384]; see CACI Nos. 1700–1703, instructions on public figures and matters of public concern.) See also CACI No. 1707, Fact Versus Opinion.

Sources and Authority

- "Trade libel is the publication of matter disparaging the quality of another's property, which the publisher should recognize is likely to cause pecuniary loss to the owner. [Citation.] The tort encompasses 'all false statements concerning the quality of services or product of a business which are intended to cause that business financial harm and in fact do so.' [Citation.] [¶] To constitute trade libel, a statement must be false." (City of Costa Mesa v. D'Alessio Investments, LLC (2013) 214 Cal.App.4th 358, 376 [154 Cal.Rptr.3d 698].)
- "To constitute trade libel the statement must be made with actual malice, that is, with knowledge it was false or with reckless disregard for whether it was true or false." (J-M Manufacturing Co., Inc. v. Phillips & Cohen LLP (2016) 247 Cal.App.4th 87, 97 [201 Cal.Rptr.3d 782].)
- "The distinction between libel and trade libel is that the former concerns the person or reputation of plaintiff and the latter relates to his goods." (Shores v.

Chip Steak Co. (1955) 130 Cal.App.2d 627, 630 [279 P.2d 595].)

- "[A]n action for 'slander of title' . . . is a form of action somewhat related to trade libel . . . ." (Erlich, supra, 224 Cal.App.2d at p. 74.)
- "Confusion surrounds the tort of 'commercial disparagement' because not only is its content blurred and uncertain, so also is its very name. The tort has received various labels, such as 'commercial disparagement,' 'injurious falsehood,' 'product disparagement,' 'trade libel,' 'disparagement of property,' and 'slander of goods.' These shifting names have led counsel and the courts into confusion, thinking that they were dealing with different bodies of law. In fact, all these labels denominate the same basic legal claim." (Hartford Casualty Ins. Co., supra, 59 Cal.4th at p. 289.)
- "The protection the common law provides statements which disparage products as opposed to reputations is set forth in the Restatement Second of Torts sections 623A and 626. Section 623A provides: 'One who publishes a false statement harmful to the interests of another is subject to liability for pecuniary loss resulting to the other if [P] (a) he intends for publication of the statement to result in harm to interests of the other having a pecuniary value, or either recognizes or should recognize that it is likely to do so, and P he knows that the statement is false or acts in reckless disregard of its truth or falsity.' [¶] Section 626 of Restatement Second of Torts in turn states: 'The rules on liability for the publication of an injurious falsehood stated in § 623A apply to the publication of matter disparaging the quality of another's land, chattels or intangible things, that the publisher should recognize as likely to result in pecuniary loss to the other through the conduct of a third person in respect to the other's interests in the property.' " (Melaleuca, Inc., supra, 66 Cal.App.4th at pp. 1360–1361, original italics.)
- "According to section 629 of the Restatement Second of Torts (1977), '[a] statement is disparaging if it is understood to cast doubt upon the quality of another's land, chattels or intangible things, or upon the existence or extent of his property in them, and [¶] (a) the publisher intends the statement to cast the doubt, or [¶] (b) the recipient's understanding of it as casting the doubt was reasonable.' " (Hartford Casualty Ins. Co., supra, 59 Cal.4th at p. 288.)
- "What distinguishes a claim of disparagement is that an injurious falsehood has been directed specifically at the plaintiff's business or product, derogating that business or product and thereby causing that plaintiff special damages." (Hartford Casualty Ins. Co., supra, 59 Cal.4th at p. 294, original italics.)
- "The Restatement [2d Torts] view is that, like slander of title, what is commonly called 'trade libel' is a particular form of the tort of injurious falsehood and need not be in writing." (Polygram Records, Inc., supra, 170 Cal.App.3d at p. 548.)
- "While . . . general damages are presumed in a libel of a businessman, this is not so in action for trade libel. Dean Prosser has discussed the problems in such actions as follows: 'Injurious falsehood, or disparagement, then, may consist of the publication of matter derogatory to the plaintiff's title to his property, or its quality, or to his business in general, . . . The cause of action founded upon it resembles that for defamation, but differs from it materially in the greater burden of proof resting on the plaintiff, and the necessity for special damage in all cases. . . . [The] plaintiff must prove in all cases that the publication has played a material and substantial part in inducing others not to deal with him, and that as a result he has suffered special damages. . . . Usually, . . . the damages claimed have consisted of loss of prospective contracts with the plaintiff's customers. Here the remedy has been so hedged about with limitations that its usefulness to the plaintiff has been seriously impaired. It is nearly always held that it is not enough to show a general decline in his business resulting from the falsehood, even where no other cause for it is apparent, and that it is only the loss of specific sales that can be recovered. This means, in the usual case, that the plaintiff must identify the particular purchasers who have refrained from dealing with him, and specify the transactions of which he claims to have been deprived.' " (Erlich, supra, 224 Cal.App. 2d at pp. 73–74.)

- "Because the gravamen of the complaint is the allegation that respondents made false statements of fact that injured appellant's business, the 'limitations that define the First Amendment's zone of protection' are applicable. '[It] is immaterial for First Amendment purposes whether the statement in question relates to the plaintiff himself or merely to his property . . . .' " (Hofmann Co., supra, 202 Cal.App.3d at p. 397, internal citation omitted.)
- "If respondents' statements about appellant are opinions, the cause of action for trade libel must of course fail. 'Under the First Amendment there is no such thing as a false idea. However pernicious an opinion may seem, we depend for its correction not on the conscience of judges and juries but on the competition of other ideas. But there is no constitutional value in false statements of fact.' Statements of fact can be true or false, but an opinion—'a view, judgment, or appraisal formed in the mind . . . [a] belief stronger than impression and less strong than positive knowledge'—is the result of a mental process and not capable of proof in terms of truth or falsity." (Hofmann Co., supra, 202 Cal.App.3d at p. 397, footnote and internal citation omitted.)
- "[I]t is not absolutely necessary that the disparaging publication be intentionally designed to injure. If the statement was understood in its disparaging sense and if the understanding is a reasonable construction of the language used or the acts done by the publisher, it is not material that the publisher did not intend the disparaging statement to be so understood." (Nichols, supra, 169 Cal.App.3d at p. 773.)
- "Disparagement by 'reasonable implication' requires more than a statement that may conceivably or plausibly be construed as derogatory to a specific product or business. A 'reasonable implication' in this context means a clear or necessary inference." (Hartford Casualty Ins. Co., supra, 59 Cal.4th at p. 295, internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 747–750

3 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 40, Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts, § 40.70 et seq. (Matthew Bender)

30 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 340, Libel and Slander, § 340.103 (Matthew Bender)

1 Matthew Bender Practice Guide: California Unfair Competition and Business Torts, Ch. 9, Commercial Defamation, 9.04

1732–1799. Reserved for Future Use

VF-1700. Defamation per se (Public Officer/Figure and Limited Public Figure)

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of defendant] make the following statement to [a person/persons] other than [name of plaintiff]? [Insert claimed per se defamatory statement.]

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did the [person/people] to whom the statement was made reasonably understand that the statement was about [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [this person/these people] reasonably understand the statement to mean that [insert ground(s) for defamation per se, e.g., "[name of plaintiff] had committed a crime"]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was the statement false?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Did [name of plaintiff] prove by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] knew the statement was false or had serious doubts about the truth of the statement?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer questions 6, 7, and 8. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

ACTUAL DAMAGES

6. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff] actual harm?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, skip question 7 and answer question 8.

7. What are [name of plaintiff]'s actual damages for:

[a. Harm to [name of plaintiff]'s property, business, trade, profession, or occupation? . . . . . $_____]

[b. Expenses [name of plaintiff] had to pay as a result of the defamatory statements? . . . . . $_____]

[c. Harm to [name of plaintiff]'s reputation? . . . . . $_____]

[d. Shame, mortification, or hurt feelings? . . . . . $_____]

[If [name of plaintiff] has not proved any actual damages for either c or d, then answer question 8. If [name of plaintiff] has proved actual damages for both c and d, skip question 8 and answer question 9.]

ASSUMED DAMAGES

8. What are the damages you award [name of plaintiff] for the assumed harm to [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] reputation, and for shame, mortification, or hurt feelings? You must award at least a nominal sum.

$ _____

PUNITIVE DAMAGES

9. Did [name of plaintiff] prove by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] acted with malice, oppression, or fraud?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 9 is yes, then answer question 10. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

10. What is your award of punitive damages, if any, against [name of defendant]?

$ _____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised December 2005, April 2008, October 2008, December 2010, December 2016, May 2017, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1700, Defamation per se—Essential Factual Elements (Public Officer/Figure and Limited Public Figure).

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

Multiple statements may need to be set out separately, and if separate damages are claimed as to each statement, separate verdict forms may be needed for each statement because all the elements may need to be found as to each statement.

Give the jury question 3 only if the statement is not defamatory on its face.

In question 7, omit damage items c and d if the plaintiff elects not to present proof of actual damages for harm to reputation and for shame mortification, or hurt feelings. Whether or not proof for both categories is offered, include question 8. For these categories, the jury may find that no actual damages have been proven but must still make an award of assumed damages.

Omit question 10 if the issue of punitive damages has been bifurcated.

If there is a dispute as to whether the statement in question 1 is one of fact or opinion, an additional question or questions will be needed. See CACI No. 1707, Fact Versus Opinion.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-1701. Defamation per quod (Public Officer/Figure and Limited Public Figure)

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of defendant] make the following statement to [a person/persons] other than [name of plaintiff]? [Insert claimed per quod defamatory statement.]

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did the [person/people] to whom the statement was made reasonably understand that the statement was about [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Was the statement false?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did [name of plaintiff] prove by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] knew the statement was false or had serious doubts about the truth of the statement?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Is the statement, because of facts known to the people who heard or read it, the kind that would tend to injure [name of plaintiff] in [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] occupation?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Did [name of plaintiff] suffer Harm to [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] property, business, profession, or occupation [including money spent as a result of the statement]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

ACTUAL DAMAGES

7. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff] actual harm?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 7 is yes, then answer questions 8. If you answered no, skip question 8 and answer question 9.

8. What are [name of plaintiff]'s actual damages?

[$ _____]

PUNITIVE DAMAGES

9. Did [name of plaintiff] prove by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] acted with malice, oppression, or fraud?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 9 is yes, then answer question 10. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

10. What is your award of punitive damages, if any, against [name of defendant]?

$ _____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised December 2005, December 2010, December 2016, May 2017, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1701, Defamation per quod—Essential

Factual Elements (Public Officer/Figure and Limited Public Figure).

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

Multiple statements may need to be set out separately, and if separate damages are claimed as to each statement, separate verdict forms may be needed for each statement because all the elements may need to be found as to each statement.

Users may need to itemize all the damages listed in question 8 if, for example, there are multiple defendants and issues regarding apportionment of damages under Proposition 51.

Question 5 may be modified by referring to one of the other two grounds listed in element 3 of CACI No. 1701, Defamation per quod—Essential Factual Elements (Public Officer/Figure and Limited Public Figure), depending on which ground is applicable in the case.

Additional questions may be needed on the issue of punitive damages if the defendant is a corporate or other entity.

Omit question 10 if the issue of punitive damages has been bifurcated.

If there is a dispute as to whether the statement in question 1 is one of fact or opinion, an additional question or questions will be needed. See CACI No. 1707, Fact Versus Opinion.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-1702. Defamation per se (Private Figure—Matter of Public Concern)

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of defendant] make the following statement to [a person/persons] other than [name of plaintiff]? [Insert claimed per se defamatory statement.]

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did the [person/people] to whom the statement was made reasonably understand that the statement was about [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [this person/these people] reasonably understand the statement to mean that [insert ground(s) for defamation per se, e.g., "[name of plaintiff] had committed a crime"]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was the statement false?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Did [name of defendant] fail to use reasonable care to determine the truth or falsity of the statement?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

ACTUAL DAMAGES

6. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff] actual harm?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, skip question 7 and answer question 8.

7. What are [name of plaintiff]'s actual damages for:

[a. Harm to [name of plaintiff]'s property, business, trade, profession, or occupation? . . . . . $_____]

[b. Expenses [name of plaintiff] had to pay as a result of the defamatory statements? . . . . . $_____]

[c. Harm to [name of plaintiff]'s reputation? . . . . . $_____]

[d. Shame, mortification, or hurt feelings?. . . . . $_____]

[If [name of plaintiff] has not proved any actual damages for either c or d, answer question 8. If [name of plaintiff] has proved actual damages for both c and d, skip questions 8 and 9 and answer question 10.]

ASSUMED DAMAGES

8. Did [name of plaintiff] prove by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] knew the statement was false or had serious doubts about the truth of the statement?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 8 is yes, then answer question 9. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

9. What are the damages you award [name of plaintiff] for the assumed harm to [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] reputation and for shame, mortification, or hurt feelings? You must award at least a nominal sum.

$ _____

Regardless of your answer to question 9, skip question 10 and answer question 11.

PUNITIVE DAMAGES

10. Did [name of plaintiff] prove by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] knew the statement was false or had serious doubts about the truth of the statement?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 10 is yes, then answer question 11. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

11. Did [name of plaintiff] prove by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] acted with malice, oppression, or fraud?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 11 is yes, then answer question 12. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

12. What amount, if any, do you award as punitive damages against [name of defendant]?

$ _____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised December 2005, April 2008, October 2008, December 2010, December 2016, May 2017, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1702, Defamation per se—Essential Factual Elements (Private Figure—Matter of Public Concern).

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

Multiple statements may need to be set out separately, and if separate damages are claimed as to each statement, separate verdict forms may be needed for each statement because all the elements may need to be found as to each statement.

Give the jury question 3 only if the statement is not defamatory on its face.

In question 7, omit damage items c and d if the plaintiff elects not to present proof of actual damages for harm to reputation and for shame, mortification, or hurt feelings. Whether or not proof for both categories is offered, include question 8. For these categories, the jury may find that no actual damages have been proven but must still make an award of assumed damages.

Additional questions may be needed on the issue of punitive damages if the defendant is a corporate or other entity.

Omit question 12 if the issue of punitive damages has been bifurcated.

If there is a dispute as to whether the statement in question 1 is one of fact or opinion, an additional question or questions will be needed. See CACI No. 1707, Fact Versus Opinion.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-1703. Defamation per quod (Private Figure—Matter of Public Concern)

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of defendant] make the following statement to [a person/persons] other than [name of plaintiff]? [Insert claimed per quod defamatory statement.]

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did the [person/people] to whom the statement was made reasonably understand that the statement was about [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Was the statement false?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did [name of defendant] fail to use reasonable care to determine the truth or falsity of the statement?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Is the statement, because of facts known to the people who heard or read the statement, the kind of statement that would tend to injure [name of plaintiff] in [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] occupation?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Did [name of plaintiff] suffer Harm to [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] property, business, profession, or occupation [including money spent as a result of the statement]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. Was the statement a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 7 is yes, then answer question 8. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

ACTUAL DAMAGES

8. What are [name of plaintiff]'s actual damages?

[$ _____]

If [name of plaintiff] has not proved any actual damages, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form. If you awarded actual damages, answer question 9.

PUNITIVE DAMAGES

9. Did [name of plaintiff] prove by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] knew the statement was false or had serious doubts about the truth of the statement?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 9 is yes, then answer question 10. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

10. Has [name of plaintiff] proved by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] acted with malice, oppression, or fraud?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 10 is yes, then answer question 11. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

11. What amount, if any, do you award as punitive damages against [name of defendant]?

$ _____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised December 2005, December 2010, December 2016, May 2017, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1703, Defamation per quod—Essential Factual Elements (Private Figure—Matter of Public Concern).

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

Multiple statements may need to be set out separately, and if separate damages are claimed as to each statement, separate verdict forms may be needed for each statement because all the elements may need to be found as to each statement.

Users may need to itemize all the damages listed in question 8 if, for example, there are multiple defendants and issues regarding apportionment of damages under Proposition 51.

Question 5 may be modified by referring to one of the other two grounds listed in element 3 of CACI No. 1703, Defamation per quod—Essential Factual Elements (Private Figure—Matter of Public Concern), depending on which ground is applicable in the case.

Additional questions may be needed on the issue of punitive damages if the defendant is a corporate or other entity.

Omit question 11 if the issue of punitive damages has been bifurcated.

If there is a dispute as to whether the statement in question 1 is one of fact or opinion, an additional question or questions will be needed. See CACI No. 1707, Fact Versus Opinion.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-1704. Defamation per se—Affirmative Defense—Truth (Private Figure—Matter of Private Concern)

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of defendant] make the following statement to [a person/persons] other than [name of plaintiff]? [Insert claimed per se defamatory statement.]

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did the [person/people] to whom the statement was made reasonably understand that the statement was about [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [this person/these people] reasonably understand the statement to mean that [insert ground(s) for defamation per se, e.g., "[name of plaintiff] had committed a crime"]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was the statement substantially true?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is no, then answer question 5. If you answered yes, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Did [name of defendant] fail to use reasonable care to determine the truth or falsity of the statement?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

ACTUAL DAMAGES

6. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff] actual harm?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, skip question 7 and answer question 8.

7. What are [name of plaintiff]'s actual damages for:

[a. Harm to [name of plaintiff]'s property, business, trade, profession, or occupation? . . . . . $_____]

[b. Expenses [name of plaintiff] had to pay as a result of the defamatory statements? . . . . . $_____]

[c. Harm to [name of plaintiff]'s reputation? . . . . . $_____]

[d. Shame, mortification, or hurt feelings? . . . . . $_____]

TOTAL $ _____

[If [name of plaintiff] has not proved any actual damages for either c or d, then answer question 8. If [name of plaintiff] has proved actual damages for both c and d, skip question 8 and answer question 9.]

ASSUMED DAMAGES

8. What are the damages you award [name of plaintiff] for the assumed harm to [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] reputation and for shame, mortification, or hurt feelings? You must award at least a nominal sum.

$ _____

Regardless of your answer to question 8, answer question 9.

PUNITIVE DAMAGES

9. Has [name of plaintiff] proved by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] acted with malice, oppression, or fraud?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 9 is yes, then answer question 10. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

10. What amount, if any, do you award as punitive damages against [name of defendant]?

$ _____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised December 2005, April 2008, October 2008, December 2010, December 2016, May 2017, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1704, Defamation per se—Essential Factual Elements (Private Figure—Matter of Private Concern), and CACI No. 1720, Affirmative Defense—Truth. Delete question 4 if the affirmative defense of the truth is not at issue.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If there is a dispute as to whether the statement in question 1 is one of fact or opinion, an additional question or questions will be needed. See CACI No. 1707, Fact Versus Opinion.

Multiple statements may need to be set out separately in question 1, and if separate damages are claimed as to each statement, separate verdict forms may be needed for each statement because all the elements will need to be found as to each statement.

Give the jury question 3 only if the statement is not defamatory on its face.

In question 7, omit damage items c and d if the plaintiff elects not to present proof of actual damages for harm to reputation and for shame, mortification, or hurt feelings. Whether or not proof for both categories is offered, include question 8. For these categories, the jury may find that no actual damages have been proven but must still make an award of assumed damages.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 7. The breakdown is optional depending on the circumstances.

Additional questions on the issue of punitive damages may be needed if the defendant is a corporate or other entity.

Omit question 10 if the issue of punitive damages has been bifurcated.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-1705. Defamation per quod (Private Figure—Matter of Private Concern)

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of defendant] make the following statement to [a person/persons] other than [name of plaintiff]? [Insert claimed per quod defamatory statement.]

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did the [person/people] to whom the statement was made reasonably understand that the statement was about [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of defendant] fail to use reasonable care to determine the truth or falsity of the statement?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did the statement tend to injure [name of plaintiff] in [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] occupation?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Did [name of plaintiff] suffer Harm to [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] property, business, profession, or occupation [including money spent as a result of the statement]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Was the statement a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer questions 7 and 8. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

ACTUAL DAMAGES

7. What are [name of plaintiff]'s actual damages?

[a. Past economic loss, including harm to [name of plaintiff]'s property, business, trade, profession, or occupation, and expenses [name of plaintiff] had to pay as a result of the defamatory statements

$ _____]

[b. Future economic loss, including harm to [name of plaintiff]'s property, business, trade, profession, or occupation, and expenses [name of plaintiff] will have to pay as a result of the defamatory statements

$ _____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss including shame, mortification, or hurt feelings, and harm to [name of plaintiff]'s reputation

$ _____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss including shame, mortification, or hurt feelings, and harm to [name of plaintiff]'s reputation

$ _____]

TOTAL $ _____

If [name of plaintiff] has not proved any actual damages, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form. If you awarded actual damages, answer question 8.

PUNITIVE DAMAGES

8. Has [name of plaintiff] proved by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] acted with malice, oppression, or fraud?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 8 is yes, then answer question 9. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

9. What amount, if any, do you award as punitive damages against [name of defendant]?

$ _____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised December 2005, December 2010, December 2016, May 2017, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1703, Defamation per quod—Essential Factual Elements (Private Figure—Matter of Public Concern).

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If there is a dispute as to whether the statement in question 1 is one of fact or opinion, an additional question or questions will be needed. See CACI No. 1707, Fact Versus Opinion.

Multiple statements may need to be set out separately in question 1, and if separate damages are claimed as to each statement, separate verdict forms may be needed for each statement because all the elements will need to be found as to each statement.

Question 4 may be modified by referring to one of the other two grounds listed in element 3 of CACI No. 1705, Defamation per quod—Essential Factual Elements (Private Figure—Matter of Private Concern), depending on which ground is applicable in the case.

If the affirmative defense of truth is at issue (see CACI No. 1720, Affirmative Defense—Truth), include question 4 from VF-1704, Defamation per se—Affirmative Defense—Truth (Private Figure—Matter of Private Concern). Additional questions may be needed on the issue of punitive damages if the defendant is a corporate or other entity.

Users may need to itemize all the damages listed in question 7 if, for example, there are multiple defendants and issues regarding apportionment of damages under Proposition 51.

Omit question 9 if the issue of punitive damages has been bifurcated.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-

3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-1706–VF-1719. Reserved for Future Use

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of defendant] [make a statement/[specify other act, e.g., record a deed] that cast doubts about [name of plaintiff]'s ownership of the property?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. [Was the statement made to a person other than [name of plaintiff]/[Specify other publication, e.g., Did the deed become a public record]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of plaintiff] in fact own the property?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did [name of defendant] [know that/act with reckless disregard of the truth or falsity as to whether] [name of plaintiff] owned the property?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Did [name of defendant] know or should [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] have recognized that someone else might act in reliance on the [statement/e.g., deed], causing [name of plaintiff] financial loss?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Did [name of plaintiff] in fact suffer immediate and direct financial harm because someone else acted in reliance on the [statement/e.g., deed]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 7 is yes, then answer question 8. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

8. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss: $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New December 2015; Revised December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1730, Slander of Title—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

Slander of title may be either by words or an act that clouds title to the property. (See, e.g., Alpha & Omega Development, LP v. Whillock Contracting, Inc. (2011) 200 Cal.App.4th 656, 661 [132 Cal.Rptr.3d 781] [filing of lis pendens].) If the slander is by words, select the first option in question 2. If the slander is by means other than words, specify the means in question 1 and how it became known to others in question 2.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 8 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional; depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of defendant] make a statement that [would be clearly or necessarily understood to have] disparaged the quality of [name of plaintiff]'s [product/service]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Was the statement made to a person other than [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Was the statement untrue?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did [name of defendant] [know that the statement was untrue/act with reckless disregard of the truth or falsity of the statement]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Did [name of defendant] know or should [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] have recognized that someone else might act in reliance on the statement, causing [name of plaintiff] financial loss?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Did [name of plaintiff] suffer direct financial harm because someone else acted in reliance on the statement?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 7 is yes, then answer question 8. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

8. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss $_____]

[b. Future economic loss $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New December 2015; Revised December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1731, Trade Libel—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 8 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional; depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-1722–VF-1799. Reserved for Future Use

Table A. Defamation Per Se

Table A Defamation Per Se

		Public Figure			Private Figure
	Cause of Action	Assumed by Law	Actual	Punitive Damages	Cause of Action	Assumed by Law	Actual	Punitive Damages
Public Issue	New York Times Malice	Yes	Yes, if shown by a preponderance of the evidence	Yes, if shown by Civil Code, § 3294	New York Times Malice	Yes	Yes, if shown by a preponderance of the evidence	Yes, if shown by Civil Code, § 3294
	Negligence	—	—	—	Negligence	No	Yes, if shown by a preponderance of the evidence	No
Private Issue	New York Times Malice	Yes	Yes, if shown by a preponderance of the evidence	Yes, if shown by Civil Code, § 3294	New York Times Malice	—	—	—
	Negligence	—	—	—	Negligence	Yes	Yes, if shown by a preponderance of the evidence	Yes, if shown by Civil Code, § 3294

Information provided by Judge Michael B. Orfield (Ret.), Superior Court of California, County of San Diego

Table B. Defamation Per Quod

Table B
Defamation Per Quod

		Public Figure			Private Figure
	Cause of Action	Assumed by Law	Actual	Punitive Damages	Cause of Action	Assumed by Law	Actual	Punitive Damages
Public Issue	New York Times Malice	No	Yes, if shown by a preponderance of the evidence	Yes, if shown by Civil Code, § 3294	New York Times Malice	No	Yes, if shown by a preponderance of the evidence	Yes, if shown by Civil Code, § 3294
	Negligence	—	—	—	Negligence	No	Yes, if shown by a preponderance of the evidence	No
Private Issue	New York Times Malice	No	Yes, if shown by a preponderance of the evidence	Yes, if shown by Civil Code, § 3294	New York Times Malice	—	—	—
	Negligence	—	—	—	Negligence	No	Yes, if shown by a preponderance of the evidence	Yes, if shown by Civil Code, § 3294

Information provided by Judge Michael B. Orfield (Ret.), Superior Court of California, County of San Diego

RIGHT OF PRIVACY

1800. Intrusion Into Private Affairs

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] violated [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] right to privacy. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] had a reasonable expectation of privacy in [specify place or other circumstance];
2. That [name of defendant] intentionally intruded in [specify place or other circumstance];
3. That [name of defendant]'s intrusion would be highly offensive to a reasonable person;
4. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
5. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

In deciding whether [*name of plaintiff] had a reasonable expectation of privacy in [specify place or other circumstance], you should consider, among other factors, the following:

(a) The identity of [*name of defendant];

(b) The extent to which other persons had access to [*specify place or other circumstance] and could see or hear [name of plaintiff]; and

(c) The means by which the intrusion occurred.

In deciding whether an intrusion is highly offensive to a reasonable person, you should consider, among other factors, the following:

(a) The extent of the intrusion;

(b) [*Name of defendant]'s motives and goals; and

(c) The setting in which the intrusion occurred.

New September 2003; Revised June 2010

Directions for Use

If the plaintiff is asserting more than one privacy right, give an introductory instruction stating that a person's right to privacy can be violated in more than one way and listing the legal theories under which the plaintiff is suing.

Sources and Authority

- "Seventy years after Warren and Brandeis proposed a right to privacy, Dean William L. Prosser analyzed the case law development of the invasion of privacy tort, distilling four distinct kinds of activities violating the privacy protection and giving rise to tort liability: (1) intrusion into private matters; (2) public disclosure of private facts; (3) publicity placing a person in a false light; and (4) misappropriation of a person's name or likeness. . . . Prosser's classification was adopted by the Restatement Second of Torts in sections 652A–652E. California common law has generally followed Prosser's classification of privacy interests as embodied in the Restatement." (Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal.4th 1, 24 [26 Cal.Rptr.2d 834, 865 P.2d 633].)

- "[The tort of intrusion] encompasses unconsented-to physical intrusion into the home, hospital room or other place the privacy of which is legally recognized, as well as unwarranted sensory intrusions such as eavesdropping, wiretapping, and visual or photographic spying." (Shulman v. Group W Productions, Inc. (1998) 18 Cal.4th 200, 230–231 [74 Cal.Rptr.2d 843, 955 P.2d 469], internal citation omitted.)
- "The foregoing arguments have been framed throughout this action in terms of both the common law and the state Constitution. These two sources of privacy protection 'are not unrelated' under California law. (Shulman, supra, 18 Cal.4th 200, 227; accord, Hill, supra, 7 Cal.4th 1, 27; but see Katzberg v. Regents of University of California (2002) 29 Cal.4th 300, 313, fn. 13 [127 Cal.Rptr.2d 482, 58 P.3d 339] [suggesting it is an open question whether the state constitutional privacy provision, which is otherwise self-executing and serves as the basis for injunctive relief, can also provide direct and sole support for a damages claim].)" (Hernandez v. Hillsides, Inc. (2009) 47 Cal.4th 272, 286 [97 Cal.Rptr.3d 274, 211 P.3d 1063].)
- "[W]e will assess the parties' claims and the undisputed evidence under the rubric of both the common law and constitutional tests for establishing a privacy violation. Borrowing certain shorthand language from Hill, supra, 7 Cal.4th 1, which distilled the largely parallel elements of these two causes of action, we consider (1) the nature of any intrusion upon reasonable expectations of privacy, and (2) the offensiveness or seriousness of the intrusion, including any justification and other relevant interests." (Hernandez, supra, 47 Cal.4th at p. 288.)
- "Whether an expectation of privacy is reasonable in any given circumstance is a context-specific inquiry, and ' "[t]he protection afforded to the plaintiff's interest in his [or her] privacy must be relative to the customs of the time and place, to the occupation of the plaintiff[,] and to the habits of his [or her] neighbors and fellow citizens." ' Burrows . . . recognizes as much in identifying 'compulsion by legal process' as a factor potentially affecting the expectation of privacy. Ultimately, 'whether a legally recognized privacy interest exists is a question of law, and whether the circumstances give rise to a reasonable expectation of privacy and a serious invasion thereof are mixed questions of law and fact.' " (Garrabrants v. Erhart (2023) 98 Cal.App.5th 486, 500 [316 Cal.Rptr.3d 792], original italics, internal citations omitted.)
- "The cause of action . . . has two elements: (1) intrusion into a private place, conversation or matter, (2) in a manner highly offensive to a reasonable person.

The first element . . . is not met when the plaintiff has merely been observed, or even photographed or recorded, in a public place. Rather, 'the plaintiff must show the defendant penetrated some zone of physical or sensory privacy surrounding, or obtained unwanted access to data about, the plaintiff.' " (Sanders v. American Broadcasting Co. (1999) 20 Cal.4th 907, 914–915 [85 Cal.Rptr.2d 909, 978 P.2d 67], internal citations omitted.)

- "As to the first element of the common law tort, the defendant must have 'penetrated some zone of physical or sensory privacy . . . or obtained unwanted access to data' by electronic or other covert means, in violation of the law or social norms. In either instance, the expectation of privacy must be 'objectively reasonable.' In Sanders [supra, at p. 907] . . . , this court linked the reasonableness of privacy expectations to such factors as (1) the identity of the intruder, (2) the extent to which other persons had access to the subject place, and could see or hear the plaintiff, and (3) the means by which the intrusion occurred." (Hernandez, supra, 47 Cal.4th at pp. 286–287.)
- "Privacy for purposes of the intrusion tort must be evaluated with respect to the identity of the alleged intruder and the nature of the intrusion." (Sanders, supra, 20 Cal.4th at pp. 917–918.)
- "The second common law element essentially involves a 'policy' determination as to whether the alleged intrusion is 'highly offensive' under the particular circumstances. Relevant factors include the degree and setting of the intrusion, and the intruder's motives and objectives. Even in cases involving the use of photographic and electronic recording devices, which can raise difficult questions about covert surveillance, 'California tort law provides no bright line on ["offensiveness"]; each case must be taken on its facts.' " (Hernandez, supra, 47 Cal.4th at p. 287, internal citations omitted.)
- "While what is 'highly offensive to a reasonable person' suggests a standard upon which a jury would properly be instructed, there is a preliminary determination of 'offensiveness' which must be made by the court in discerning the existence of a cause of action for intrusion. . . . A court determining the existence of 'offensiveness' would consider the degree of intrusion, the context, conduct and circumstances surrounding the intrusion as well as the intruder's motives and objectives, the setting into which he intrudes, and the expectations of those whose privacy is invaded." (Miller v. National Broadcasting Co. (1986) 187 Cal.App.3d 1463, 1483–1484 [232 Cal.Rptr. 668].)
- "Plaintiffs must show more than an intrusion upon reasonable privacy expectations. Actionable invasions of privacy also must be 'highly offensive' to a reasonable person, and 'sufficiently serious' and unwarranted as to constitute an 'egregious breach of the social norms.' " (Hernandez, supra, 47 Cal.4th at p. 295, internal citation omitted.)
- " '[T]he extent and gravity of the invasion is an indispensable consideration in assessing an alleged invasion of privacy.' The impact on the plaintiff's privacy rights must be more than 'slight or trivial.' " (Mezger v. Bick (2021) 66

Cal.App.5th 76, 87 [280 Cal.Rptr.3d 720], internal citations omitted.)

- "[L]iability under the intrusion tort requires that the invasion be highly offensive to a reasonable person, considering, among other factors, the motive of the alleged intruder." (Sanders, supra, 20 Cal.4th at p. 911, internal citations omitted.)
- "[T]he damages flowing from an invasion of privacy logically would include an award for mental suffering and anguish." (Miller, supra, 187 Cal.App.3d at p. 1484, citing Fairfield v. American Photocopy Equipment Co. (1955) 138 Cal.App.2d 82 [291 P.2d 194].)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 756, 757, 762–765

6 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, § 1887

4 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 46, Invasion of Privacy, § 46.02 (Matthew Bender)

37 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.16 (Matthew Bender)

18 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 183, Privacy: State Constitutional Rights, § 183.30 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Torts § 20:8 (Thomson Reuters)

1801. Public Disclosure of Private Facts

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] violated [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] right to privacy. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] publicized private information concerning [name of plaintiff];
2. That a reasonable person in [name of plaintiff]'s position would consider the publicity highly offensive;
3. That [name of defendant] knew, or acted with reckless disregard of the fact, that a reasonable person in [name of plaintiff]'s position would consider the publicity highly offensive;
4. That the private information was not of legitimate public concern [or did not have a substantial connection to a matter of legitimate public concern];
5. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
6. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

In deciding whether the information was a matter of legitimate public concern, you should consider, among other factors, the following:

(a) The social value of the information;

(b) The extent of the intrusion into [name of plaintiff]'s privacy; [and]

(c) Whether [name of plaintiff] consented to the publicity explicitly or by voluntarily seeking public attention or a public office; [and]

(d) [Insert other applicable factor].

[In deciding whether [name of defendant] publicized the information, you should determine whether it was made public either by communicating it to the public at large or to so many people that the information was substantially certain to become public knowledge.]

New September 2003

Directions for Use

If the plaintiff is asserting more than one privacy right, give an introductory instruction stating that a person's right to privacy can be violated in more than one way and listing the legal theories under which the plaintiff is suing.

Comment (a) to Restatement Second of Torts, section 652D states that "publicity" "means that the matter is made public, by communicating it to the public at large, or to so many persons that the matter must be regarded as substantially certain to become one of public knowledge." This point has been placed in brackets because it may not be an issue in every case.

Sources and Authority

- "[T]he allegations involve a public disclosure of private facts. The elements of this tort are ' "(1) public disclosure (2) of a private fact (3) which would be offensive and objectionable to the reasonable person and (4) which is not of legitimate public concern." ' The absence of any one of these elements is a complete bar to liability." (Moreno v. Hanford Sentinel, Inc. (2009) 172 Cal.App.4th 1125, 1129–1130 [91 Cal.Rptr.3d 858], internal citations omitted.)
- "California common law has generally followed Prosser's classification of privacy interests as embodied in the Restatement." (Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal.4th 1, 24 [26 Cal.Rptr.2d 834, 865 P.2d 633], internal citation omitted.)
- "Generally speaking, matter which is already in the public domain is not private, and its publication is protected." (Diaz v. Oakland Tribune (1983) 139 Cal.App.3d 118, 131 [188 Cal.Rptr. 762], internal citations omitted.) "[M]atter which was once of public record may be protected as private facts where disclosure of that information would not be newsworthy." (Id. at p. 132.)
- "[W]e find it reasonable to require a plaintiff to prove, in each case, that the publisher invaded his privacy with reckless disregard for the fact that reasonable men would find the invasion highly offensive." (Briscoe v. Reader's Digest Assn., Inc. (1971) 4 Cal.3d 529, 542–543 [93 Cal.Rptr. 866, 483 P.2d 34].)
- "If a jury finds that a publication discloses private facts which are 'highly offensive and injurious to the reasonable man' [citation] then it would inter alia also satisfy the reckless disregard requirement." (Johnson v. Harcourt, Brace, Jovanovich, Inc. (1974) 43 Cal.App.3d 880, 891, fn. 11 [118 Cal.Rptr. 370].)
- "Diaz . . . expressly makes the lack of newsworthiness part of the plaintiff's case in a private facts action. . . . We therefore agree with defendants that under California common law the dissemination of truthful, newsworthy material is not actionable as a publication of private facts." (Shulman v. Group W Productions, Inc. (1998) 18 Cal.4th 200, 215 [74 Cal.Rptr.2d 843, 955 P.2d 469], internal citations omitted.)
- "In analyzing the element of newsworthiness, appellate decisions 'balance[] the public's right to know against the plaintiff's privacy interest by drawing a protective line at the point the material revealed ceases to have any substantial connection to the subject matter of the newsworthy report.' " (Jackson v. Mayweather (2017) 10 Cal.App.5th 1240, 1257 [217 Cal.Rptr.3d 234].)
- " '[N]ewsworthiness is not limited to "news" in the narrow sense of reports of current events. "It extends also to the use of names, likenesses or facts in giving information to the public for purposes of education, amusement or enlightenment, when the public may reasonably be expected to have a legitimate interest in what is published" ' " (Jackson, supra, 10 Cal.App.5th at p. 1257.)

- "[T]here is a public interest which attaches to people who by their accomplishments, mode of living, professional standing or calling, create a legitimate and widespread attention to their activities. Certainly, the accomplishments and way of life of those who have achieved a marked reputation or notoriety by appearing before the public such as actors and actresses [and] professional athletes, . . . may legitimately be mentioned and discussed in print or on radio or television. Such public figures have to some extent lost the right of privacy, and it is proper to go further in dealing with their lives and public activities than with those of entirely private persons." (Jackson, supra, 10 Cal.App.5th at pp. 1257–1258.)
- "In the matter before us, however, there is no indication that any issue of public interest or freedom of the press was involved. ' "In determining what is a matter of legitimate public interest, account must be taken of the customs and conventions of the community; and in the last analysis what is proper becomes a matter of the community mores. The line is to be drawn when the publicity ceases to be the giving of information to which the public is entitled, and becomes a morbid and sensational prying into private lives for its own sake, with which a reasonable member of the public, with decent standards, would say that he had no concern." ' Put another way, morbid and sensational eavesdropping or gossip 'serves no legitimate public interest and is not deserving of protection. [Citations.]' " (Catsouras v. Department of California Highway Patrol (2010) 181 Cal.App.4th 856, 874 [104 Cal.Rptr.3d 352], internal citation omitted.)
- "Almost any truthful commentary on public officials or public affairs, no matter how serious the invasion of privacy, will be privileged." (Briscoe, supra, 4 Cal.3d at p. 535, fn. 5.)
- "We have previously set forth criteria for determining whether an incident is newsworthy. We consider '[1] the social value of the facts published, [2] the depth of the article's intrusion into ostensibly private affairs, and [3] the extent to which the party voluntarily acceded to a position of public notoriety.' " (Briscoe, supra, 4 Cal.3d at p. 541, internal citations omitted.)
- "[T]he right of privacy is purely personal. It cannot be asserted by anyone other than the person whose privacy has been invaded." (Moreno, supra, 172 Cal.App.4th at p. 1131.)
- "[L]imiting liability for public disclosure of private facts to those recorded in a writing is contrary to the tort's purpose, which has been since its inception to allow a person to control the kind of information about himself made available to the public—in essence, to define his public persona. While this restriction may have made sense in the 1890's—when no one dreamed of talk radio or confessional television—it certainly makes no sense now. Private facts can be just as widely disclosed—if not more so—through oral media as through written ones. To allow a plaintiff redress for one kind of disclosure but not the other, when both can be equally damaging to privacy, is a rule better suited to an era when the town crier was the principal purveyor of news. It is long past time to discard this outmoded rule." (Ignat v. Yum! Brands, Inc. (2013) 214 Cal.App.4th 808, 819 [154 Cal.Rptr.3d 275], internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 772–775

4 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 46, Invasion of Privacy, § 46.03 (Matthew Bender)

37 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.32 (Matthew Bender)

18 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 184, Privacy: Invasion of Privacy, § 184.20 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Torts §§ 20:1–20:2 (Thomson Reuters)

1802. False Light

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] violated [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] right to privacy. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] publicly disclosed information or material that showed [name of plaintiff] in a false light;
2. That the false light created by the disclosure would be highly offensive to a reasonable person in [name of plaintiff]'s position;
3. [That there is clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] knew the disclosure would create a false impression about [name of plaintiff] or acted with reckless disregard for the truth;]

   [or]

   [That [name of defendant] was negligent in determining the truth of the information or whether a false impression would be created by its disclosure;]
4. [That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and]

   [or]

   [That [name of plaintiff] sustained harm to [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] property, business, profession, or occupation [including money spent as a result of the statement(s)]; and]
5. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003; Revised November 2017, May 2018, November 2018

Directions for Use

If the plaintiff is asserting more than one privacy right, give an introductory instruction stating that a person's right to privacy can be violated in more than one way and listing the legal theories under which the plaintiff is suing.

False light claims are subject to the same constitutional protections that apply to defamation claims. (Briscoe v. Reader's Digest Assn. (1971) 4 Cal.3d 529, 543 [93 Cal.Rptr. 866, 483 P.2d 34], overruled on other grounds in Gates v. Discovery Communications, Inc. (2004) 34 Cal.4th 679, 696, fn. 9 [21 Cal.Rptr.3d 663, 101 P.3d 552] [false light claim should meet the same requirements of a libel claim, including proof of malice when required].) Thus, a knowing violation of or reckless disregard for the plaintiff's rights is required if the plaintiff is a public figure. (See Brown v. Kelly Broadcasting Co. (1989) 48 Cal.3d 711, 721–722 [257 Cal.Rptr. 708, 771 P.2d 406].) Give the first option for element 3 if the disclosure involves a public figure. Give the second option for a private citizen, at least with regard to a matter of private concern. (See id. at p. 742 [private person need prove only negligence rather than malice to recover for defamation].)

There is perhaps some question as to which option for element 3 to give for a private person if the matter is one of public concern. For defamation, a private figure plaintiff must prove malice to recover presumed and punitive damages for a matter of public concern, but not to recover for damages to reputation. (Khawar v. Globe Internat. (1998) 19 Cal.4th 254, 273–274 [79 Cal.Rptr.2d 178, 965 P.2d 696].) No case has been found that provides for presumed damages for a false light violation. Therefore, the court will need to decide whether proof of malice is required from a private plaintiff even though the matter may be one of public concern.

If the jury will also be instructed on defamation, an instruction on false light would be superfluous and therefore need not be given. (See Eisenberg v. Alameda Newspapers (1999) 74 Cal.App.4th 1359, 1385, fn. 13 [88 Cal.Rptr.2d 802]; see also Briscoe, supra, 4 Cal.3d at p. 543.) For defamation, utterance of a defamatory statement to a single third person constitutes sufficient publication. (Cunningham v. Simpson (1969) 1 Cal.3d 301, 307 [81 Cal.Rptr. 855, 461 P.2d 39]; but see Warfield v. Peninsula Golf & Country Club (1989) 214 Cal.App.3d 646, 660 [262 Cal.Rptr. 890] [false light case holding that "account" published in defendant's membership newsletter does not meet threshold allegation of a general public disclosure].)

Sources and Authority

- " 'False light is a species of invasion of privacy, based on publicity that places a plaintiff before the public in a false light that would be highly offensive to a reasonable person, and where the defendant knew or acted in reckless disregard as to the falsity of the publicized matter and the false light in which the plaintiff would be placed." (Jackson v. Mayweather (2017) 10 Cal.App.5th 1240, 1264 [217 Cal.Rptr.3d 234].)
- "A 'false light' claim, like libel, exposes a person to hatred, contempt, ridicule, or obloquy and assumes the audience will recognize it as such." (De Havilland v. FX Networks, LLC (2018) 21 Cal.App.5th 845, 865 [230 Cal.Rptr.3d 625].)
- "California common law has generally followed Prosser's classification of privacy interests as embodied in the Restatement." (Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal.4th 1, 24 [26 Cal.Rptr.2d 834, 865 P.2d 633], internal citation omitted.)
- "In order to be actionable, the false light in which the plaintiff is placed must be highly offensive to a reasonable person. Although it is not necessary that the plaintiff be defamed, publicity placing one in a highly offensive false light will in most cases be defamatory as well." (Fellows v. National Enquirer (1986) 42 Cal.3d 234, 238–239 [228 Cal.Rptr. 215, 721 P.2d 97], internal citation omitted.)
- "When a false light claim is coupled with a defamation claim, the false light claim is essentially superfluous, and stands or falls on whether it meets the same requirements as the defamation cause of action." (Eisenberg, supra, 74 Cal.App.4th at p. 1385, fn. 13, internal citations omitted.)

- "[A] 'false light' cause of action 'is in substance equivalent to . . . [a] libel claim, and should meet the same requirements of the libel claim . . . including proof of malice and fulfillment of the requirements of [the retraction statute] section 48a [of the Civil Code].' " (Briscoe, supra, 4 Cal.3d at p. 543, internal citation omitted.)
- "Because in this defamation action [plaintiff] is a private figure plaintiff, he was required to prove only negligence, and not actual malice, to recover damages for actual injury to his reputation. But [plaintiff] was required to prove actual malice to recover punitive or presumed damages . . . ." (Khawar, supra, 19 Cal.4th at p. 274.)
- "To defeat [defendant] 's anti-SLAPP motion on her false light claim, [plaintiff], as a public figure, must demonstrate a reasonable probability she can prove [defendant] broadcast statements that are (1) assertions of fact, (2) actually false or create a false impression about her, (3) highly offensive to a reasonable person or defamatory, and (4) made with actual malice." (De Havilland, supra, 21 Cal.App.5th at p. 865.)
- "[Plaintiff] does not dispute that she is a public figure. . . . Accordingly, the Constitution requires [plaintiff] to prove by clear and convincing evidence that [defendant] 'knew the [docudrama] would create a false impression about [her] or acted with reckless disregard for the truth.' (CACI No. 1802.)" (De Havilland, supra, 21 Cal.App.5th at p. 869.)
- "Publishing a fictitious work about a real person cannot mean the author, by virtue of writing fiction, has acted with actual malice." (De Havilland, supra, 21 Cal.App.5th at p. 869.)
- "[I]n cases where the claimed highly offensive or defamatory aspect of the portrayal is implied, courts have required plaintiffs to show that the defendant ' "intended to convey the defamatory impression." ' [Plaintiff] must demonstrate 'that [defendant] either deliberately cast [her] statements in an equivocal fashion in the hope of insinuating a defamatory import to the reader, or that [it] knew or acted in reckless disregard of whether [its] words would be interpreted by the average reader as defamatory statements of fact.' Moreover, because actual malice is a 'deliberately subjective' test, liability cannot be imposed for an implication that merely ' "should have been foreseen." ' " (De Havilland, supra, 21 Cal.App.5th at pp. 869–870, internal citations omitted.)
- "The New York Times decision defined a zone of constitutional protection within which one could publish concerning a public figure without fear of liability. That constitutional protection does not depend on the label given the stated cause of action; it bars not only actions for defamation, but also claims for invasion of privacy." (Reader's Digest Assn., Inc. v. Superior Court (1984) 37 Cal.3d 244, 265 [208 Cal.Rptr. 137, 690 P.2d 610], internal citations omitted.)

- "[T]he constitutional protections for speech and press preclude the application of the New York statute to redress false reports of matters of public interest in the absence of proof that the defendant published the report with knowledge of its falsity or in reckless disregard of the truth." (Time, Inc. v. Hill (1967) 385 U.S. 374, 387–388 [87 S.Ct. 534, 17 L.Ed.2d 456].)
- "We hold that whenever a claim for false light invasion of privacy is based on language that is defamatory within the meaning of section 45a, pleading and proof of special damages are required." (Fellows, supra, 42 Cal.3d at p. 251.)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 781–783

4 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 46, Invasion of Privacy, § 46.04 (Matthew Bender)

37 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.33 (Matthew Bender)

18 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 184, Privacy: Invasion of Privacy, § 184.21 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Torts §§ 20:12–20:15 (Thomson Reuters)

1803. Appropriation of Name or Likeness—Essential Factual Elements

---

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] violated [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] right to privacy. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] used [name of plaintiff]'s name, likeness, or identity;
2. That [name of plaintiff] did not consent to this use;
3. That [name of defendant] gained a commercial benefit [or some other advantage] by using [name of plaintiff]'s name, likeness, or identity;
4. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
5. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003; Revised December 2014, November 2017, May 2020

Directions for Use

If the plaintiff is asserting more than one privacy right, give an introductory instruction stating that a person's right to privacy can be violated in more than one way and listing the legal theories under which the plaintiff is suing.

If the alleged "benefit" is not commercial, the judge will need to determine whether the advantage gained by the defendant qualifies as "some other advantage."

If suing under both the common law and Civil Code section 3344, the judge may need to explain that a person's voice, for example, may qualify as "identity" if the voice is sufficient to cause listeners to identify the plaintiff. The two causes of action overlap, and the same conduct should be covered by both.

Even if the elements are established, the First Amendment may require that the right to be protected from unauthorized publicity be balanced against the public interest in the dissemination of news and information. (See Gionfriddo v. Major League Baseball (2001) 94 Cal.App.4th 400, 409 [114 Cal.Rptr.2d 307].) In a closely related right-of-publicity claim, the California Supreme Court has held that an artist who is faced with a challenge to the artist's work may raise as affirmative defense that the work is protected by the First Amendment because it contains significant transformative elements or that the value of the work does not derive primarily from the celebrity's fame. (Comedy III Productions, Inc. v. Gary Saderup, Inc. (2001) 25 Cal.4th 387, 407 [106 Cal.Rptr.2d 126, 21 P.3d 797]; see CACI No. 1805, Affirmative Defense to Use or Appropriation of Name or Likeness—First Amendment (Comedy III).) Therefore, if there is an issue of fact regarding a First Amendment balancing test, it most probably should be considered to be an affirmative defense. (Cf. Gionfriddo, supra, 94 Cal.App.4th at p. 414 ["Given the significant public interest in this sport, plaintiffs can only prevail if they demonstrate a substantial competing interest"].)

Sources and Authority

- "A common law misappropriation claim is pleaded by 'alleging: "(1) the defendant's use of the plaintiff's identity; (2) the appropriation of plaintiff's name or likeness to defendant's advantage, commercially or otherwise; (3) lack of consent; and (4) resulting injury. [Citations.]" [Citation.]' " (Maxwell v. Dolezal (2014) 231 Cal.App.4th 93, 97 [179 Cal.Rptr.3d 807].)
- " '[T]he right of publicity has come to be recognized as distinct from the right of privacy'. 'What may have originated as a concern for the right to be left alone has become a tool to control the commercial use and, thus, protect the economic value of one's name, voice, signature, photograph, or likeness.' 'What the right of publicity holder possesses is . . . a right to prevent others from misappropriating the economic value generated . . . through the merchandising of the 'name, voice, signature, photograph, or likeness' of the [holder].' " (Timed Out, LLC v. Youabian, Inc. (2014) 229 Cal.App.4th 1001, 1006 [177 Cal.Rptr.3d 773], internal citations omitted.)
- "The common law cause of action may be stated by pleading the defendant's unauthorized use of the plaintiff's identity; the appropriation of the plaintiff's name, voice, likeness, signature, or photograph to the defendant's advantage, commercially or otherwise; and resulting injury." (Ross v. Roberts (2013) 222 Cal.App.4th 677, 684–685 [166 Cal.Rptr.3d 359].)
- "[B]oth the statutory and common law versions of a right of publicity claim require that the defendant actually use the plaintiff's likeness . . . ." (Cross v. Facebook, Inc. (2017) 14 Cal.App.5th 190, 210 [222 Cal.Rptr.3d 250].)
- "California common law has generally followed Prosser's classification of privacy interests as embodied in the Restatement." (Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal.4th 1, 24 [26 Cal.Rptr.2d 834, 865 P.2d 633], internal citation omitted.)
- "Consent to the use of a name or likeness is determined by traditional principles of contract interpretation." (Local TV, LLC v. Superior Court (2016) 3 Cal.App.5th 1, 8 [206 Cal.Rptr.3d 884].)
- "[T]he appearance of an 'endorsement' is not the sine qua non of a claim for commercial appropriation." (Eastwood v. Superior Court (1983) 149 Cal.App.3d 409, 419 [198 Cal.Rptr. 342].)
- "[N]o cause of action will lie for the '[p]ublication of matters in the public interest, which rests on the right of the public to know and the freedom of the press to tell it.' " (Montana v. San Jose Mercury News (1995) 34 Cal.App.4th 790, 793 [40 Cal.Rptr.2d 639], internal citation omitted.)
- "The difficulty in defining the boundaries of the right, as applied in the publication field, is inherent in the necessity of balancing the public interest in the dissemination of news, information and education against the individuals' interest in peace of mind and freedom from emotional disturbances. When words relating to or actual pictures of a person or his name are published, the circumstances may indicate that public interest is predominant. Factors deserving consideration may include the medium of publication, the extent of the use, the public interest served by the publication, and the seriousness of the interference with the person's privacy." (Gill v. Curtis Publishing Co. (1952) 38 Cal.2d 273, 278–279 [239 P.2d 630].)

- "Even if each of these elements is established, however, the common law right does not provide relief for every publication of a person's name or likeness. The First Amendment requires that the right to be protected from unauthorized publicity 'be balanced against the public interest in the dissemination of news and information consistent with the democratic processes under the constitutional guaranties of freedom of speech and of the press.' " (Gionfriddo, supra, 94 Cal.App.4th at pp. 409–410, internal citations and footnote omitted.)
- "Public interest attaches to people who by their accomplishments or mode of living create a bona fide attention to their activities." (Dora v. Frontline Video, Inc. (1993) 15 Cal.App.4th 536, 542 [18 Cal.Rptr.2d 790], internal citation omitted.)
- "[T]he fourth category of invasion of privacy, namely, appropriation, 'has been complemented legislatively by Civil Code section 3344, adopted in 1971.' " (Eastwood, supra, 149 Cal.App.3d at pp. 416–417.)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 784–786

4 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 46, Invasion of Privacy, § 46.05 (Matthew Bender)

37 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 429, Privacy, §§ 429.35, 429.36 (Matthew Bender)

18 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 184, Privacy: Invasion of Privacy, § 184.21 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Torts § 20:16 (Thomson Reuters)

1804A. Use of Name or Likeness (Civ. Code, § 3344)

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] violated [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] right to privacy. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] knowingly used [name of plaintiff]'s [name/voice/signature/photograph/likeness] [on merchandise/ [or] to advertise or sell [describe what is being advertised or sold]];
2. That the use did not occur in connection with a news, public affairs, or sports broadcast or account, or with a political campaign;
3. That [name of defendant] did not have [name of plaintiff]'s consent;
4. That [name of defendant]'s use of [name of plaintiff]'s [name/voice/signature/photograph/likeness] was directly connected to [name of defendant]'s commercial purpose;
5. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
6. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

Derived from former CACI No. 1804 April 2008; Revised April 2009

Directions for Use

If the plaintiff is asserting more than one privacy right, give an introductory instruction stating that a person's right to privacy can be violated in more than one way and listing the legal theories under which the plaintiff is suing. One's name and likeness are protected under both the common law and under Civil Code section 3344. As the statutory remedy is cumulative (Civ. Code, § 3344(g)), both this instruction and CACI No. 1803, Appropriation of Name or Likeness, which sets forth the common-law cause of action, will normally be given.

Different standards apply if the use is in connection with a news, public affairs, or sports broadcast or account, or with a political campaign. (See Civ. Code, § 3344(d); Eastwood v. Superior Court (1983) 149 Cal.App.3d 409, 421–426 [198 Cal.Rptr. 342].) The plaintiff bears the burden of proving the nonapplicability of these exceptions. (Gionfriddo v. Major League Baseball (2001) 94 Cal.App.4th 400, 416–417 [114 Cal.Rptr.2d 307].) Element 2 may be omitted if there is no question of fact with regard to this issue. See CACI No. 1804B, Use of Name or Likeness—Use in Connection With News, Public Affairs, or Sports Broadcast or Account, or Political Campaign, for an instruction to use if one of the exceptions of Civil Code section 3344(d) applies.

If plaintiff alleges that the use was not covered by Civil Code section 3344(d) (e.g., not a "news" account) but that even if it were covered it is not protected under the standards of Eastwood, then both this instruction and CACI No. 1804B should be given in the alternative. In that case, it should be made clear to the jury that if the plaintiff fails to prove the inapplicability of Civil Code section 3344(d) as set forth in element 2, the claim is still viable if the plaintiff proves all the elements of CACI No. 1804B.

Note that a plaintiff is entitled to the sum of $750 under Civil Code section 3344(a) even if actual damages are not proven. (See Miller v. Collectors Universe, Inc. (2008) 159 Cal.App.4th 988, 1008 [72 Cal.Rptr.3d 194] [claim for 14,060 misappropriations of plaintiff's name under section 3344(a) constitutes single cause of action for which statutory damages are $750].)

Sources and Authority

- Liability for Use of Name or Likeness. Civil Code section 3344.
- "Civil Code section 3344 provides a statutory cause of action for commercial misappropriation that complements, rather than codifies, the common law misappropriation cause of action." (Local TV, LLC v. Superior Court (2016) 3 Cal.App.5th 1, 13 [206 Cal.Rptr.3d 884].)
- "[C]alifornia's appropriation statute is not limited to celebrity plaintiffs." (KNB Enters v. Matthews (2000)78 Cal.App.4th 362, 367 [92 Cal.Rptr.2d 713].)
- "There are two vehicles a plaintiff can use to protect this right: a common law cause of action for commercial misappropriation and a section 3344 claim. To prove the common law cause of action, the plaintiff must establish: ' "(1) the defendant's use of the plaintiff's identity; (2) the appropriation of plaintiff's name or likeness to defendant's advantage, commercially or otherwise; (3) lack of consent; and (4) resulting injury." [Citation.]' To prove the statutory remedy, a plaintiff must present evidence of 'all the elements of the common law cause of action' and must also prove 'a knowing use by the defendant as well as a direct connection between the alleged use and the commercial purpose.' " (Orthopedic Systems, Inc. v. Schlein (2011) 202 Cal.App.4th 529, 544 [135 Cal.Rptr.3d 200], internal citations omitted.)
- "The differences between the common law and statutory actions are: (1) Section 3344, subdivision (a) requires a knowing use whereas under case law, mistake and inadvertence are not a defense against commercial appropriation; and (2) Section 3344, subdivision (g) expressly provides that its remedies are cumulative and in addition to any provided for by law." (Eastwood, supra, 149 Cal.App.3d at p. 417, fn. 6, internal citation omitted.)
- "[B]oth the statutory and common law versions of a right of publicity claim require that the defendant actually use the plaintiff's likeness . . . ." (Cross v. Facebook, Inc. (2017) 14 Cal.App.5th 190, 210 [222 Cal.Rptr.3d 250].)
- "Plaintiffs assert that Civil Code section 3344's 'commercial use' requirement does not need to 'involve some form of advertising or endorsement.' This is simply incorrect, as Civil Code section 3344, subdivision (a) explicitly provides for possible liability on '[a]ny person who knowingly uses another's name, voice, signature, photograph, or likeness, in any manner . . . for purposes of advertising . . . without such person's prior consent.' The statute requires some 'use' by the advertiser aimed at obtaining a commercial advantage for the advertiser." (Cross, supra, 14 Cal.App.5th at p. 210.)

- "[T]he single-publication rule as codified in [Civil Code] section 3425.3 applies, in general, to a cause of action for unauthorized commercial use of likeness." (Christoff v. Nestle USA, Inc. (2009) 47 Cal.4th 468, 476 [97 Cal.Rptr.3d 798, 213 P.3d 132].)
- "Any facts which tend to disprove one of the allegations raised in a complaint may be offered in the defendant's answer based upon a general denial and need not be raised by affirmative defense. . . . Throughout this litigation plaintiffs have borne the burden of establishing that their names and likenesses were used in violation of section 3344, and this burden has always required proof that the disputed uses fell outside the exemptions granted by subdivision (d)." (Gionfriddo, supra, 94 Cal.App.4th at pp. 416–417, internal citation omitted.)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 789–791

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 5-L, Invasion Of Privacy, ¶¶ 5:1116–5:1118 (The Rutter Group)

4 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 46, Invasion of Privacy, § 46.05 (Matthew Bender)

37 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 429, Privacy, §§ 429.35–429.36 (Matthew Bender)

18 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 184, Privacy: Invasion of Privacy, §§ 184.22–184.24 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Torts § 20:17 (Thomson Reuters)

1804B. Use of Name or Likeness—Use in Connection With News, Public Affairs, or Sports Broadcast or Account, or Political Campaign (Civ. Code, § 3344(d))

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] violated [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] right to privacy. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] knowingly used [name of plaintiff]'s [name/voice/signature/photograph/likeness] [on merchandise/ [or] to advertise or sell [describe what is being advertised or sold]];
2. That the use occurred in connection with a [[news/public affairs/ sports] broadcast or account/political campaign];
3. That the use contained false information;
4. [Use for public figure: That [name of defendant] knew the [broadcast or account/campaign material] was false or that [he/ she/nonbinary pronoun/it] acted with reckless disregard of its falsity;]

   [*or]

   [*Use for private individual: That [name of defendant] was negligent in determining the truth of the [broadcast or account/campaign material];]
5. That [name of defendant]'s use of [name of plaintiff]'s [name/voice/ signature/photograph/likeness] was directly connected to [name of defendant]'s commercial purpose;
6. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
7. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

Derived from former CACI No. 1804 April 2008; Revised April 2009

Directions for Use

Give this instruction if the plaintiff's name or likeness has been used in connection with a news, public affairs, or sports broadcast or account, or with a political campaign. In this situation, consent is not required. (Civ. Code, § 3344(d).) However, in Eastwood v. Superior Court, the court held that the constitutional standards under defamation law apply under section 3344(d) and that the statute as it applies to news does not provide protection for a knowing or reckless falsehood. (Eastwood v. Superior Court (1983) 149 Cal.App.3d 409, 421–426 [198 Cal.Rptr. 342].) Under defamation law, this standard applies only to public figures, and private individuals may sue for negligent publication of defamatory falsehoods. (Id. at p. 424.) Presumably, the same distinction between public figures and private individuals would apply under Civil Code section 3344(d). Element 4 provides for the standards established and suggested by Eastwood.

Give CACI No. 1804A, Use of Name or Likeness, if there is no issue whether one of the exceptions of Civil Code section 3344(d) applies. If plaintiff alleges that the use was not covered by subdivision (d) (e.g., not a "news" account) but that even if it were covered it is not protected under the standards of Eastwood, then both this instruction and CACI No. 1804A should be given in the alternative. In that case, it should be made clear to the jury that if the plaintiff fails to prove the inapplicability of Civil Code section 3344(d) as set forth element 2 of CACI No. 1804A, the claim is still viable if the plaintiff proves all the elements of this instruction.

If the plaintiff is asserting more than one privacy right, give an introductory instruction stating that a person's right to privacy can be violated in more than one way and listing the legal theories under which the plaintiff is suing. One's name and likeness are protected under both the common law and under Civil Code section 3344. As the statutory remedy is cumulative (Civ. Code, § 3344(g)), both this instruction and CACI No. 1803, Appropriation of Name or Likeness, which sets forth the common-law cause of action, will normally be given.

Note that a plaintiff is entitled to the sum of $750 under Civil Code section 3344(a) even if actual damages are not proven. (See Miller v. Collectors Universe, Inc. (2008) 159 Cal.App.4th 988, 1008 [72 Cal.Rptr.3d 194] [claim for 14,060 misappropriations of plaintiff's name under section 3344(a) constitutes single cause of action for which statutory damages are $750].)

Even though consent is not required, it may be an affirmative defense. CACI No. 1721, Affirmative Defense—Consent (to defamation), may be used in this situation.

Sources and Authority

- Liability for Use of Name or Likeness. Civil Code section 3344.
- Civil Code section 3344 is "a commercial appropriation statute which complements the common law tort of appropriation." (KNB Enters. v. Matthews (2000) 78 Cal.App.4th 362, 366–367 [92 Cal.Rptr.2d 713].)
- "[C]alifornia's appropriation statute is not limited to celebrity plaintiffs." (KNB Enters., supra, 78 Cal.App.4th at p. 367.)
- "There are two vehicles a plaintiff can use to protect this right: a common law cause of action for commercial misappropriation and a section 3344 claim. To prove the common law cause of action, the plaintiff must establish: ' "(1) the defendant's use of the plaintiff's identity; (2) the appropriation of plaintiff's name or likeness to defendant's advantage, commercially or otherwise; (3) lack of consent; and (4) resulting injury." [Citation.]' To prove the statutory remedy, a plaintiff must present evidence of 'all the elements of the common law cause of action' and must also prove 'a knowing use by the defendant as well as a direct connection between the alleged use and the commercial purpose.' " (Orthopedic Systems, Inc. v. Schlein (2011) 202 Cal.App.4th 529, 544 [135 Cal.Rptr.3d 200], internal citations omitted.)

- "The differences between the common law and statutory actions are: (1) Section 3344, subdivision (a) requires a knowing use whereas under case law, mistake and inadvertence are not a defense against commercial appropriation; and (2) Section 3344, subdivision (g) expressly provides that its remedies are cumulative and in addition to any provided for by law." (Eastwood, supra, 149 Cal.App.3d at p. 417, fn. 6, internal citation omitted.)
- "The spacious interest in an unfettered press is not without limitation. This privilege is subject to the qualification that it shall not be so exercised as to abuse the rights of individuals. Hence, in defamation cases, the concern is with defamatory lies masquerading as truth. Similarly, in privacy cases, the concern is with nondefamatory lies masquerading as truth. Accordingly, we do not believe that the Legislature intended to provide an exemption from liability for a knowing or reckless falsehood under the canopy of 'news.' We therefore hold that Civil Code section 3344, subdivision (d), as it pertains to news, does not provide an exemption for a knowing or reckless falsehood." (Eastwood, supra, 149 Cal.App.3d at p. 426, internal citations omitted.)
- The burden of proof as to knowing or reckless falsehood under Civil Code section 3344(d) is on the plaintiff. (See Eastwood, supra, 149 Cal.App.3d at p. 426.)
- "[T]he single-publication rule as codified in [Civil Code] section 3425.3 applies, in general, to a cause of action for unauthorized commercial use of likeness." (Christoff v. Nestle USA, Inc. (2009) 47 Cal.4th 468, 476 [97 Cal.Rptr.3d 798, 213 P.3d 132].)
- "Any facts which tend to disprove one of the allegations raised in a complaint may be offered in the defendant's answer based upon a general denial and need not be raised by affirmative defense. . . . Throughout this litigation plaintiffs have borne the burden of establishing that their names and likenesses were used in violation of section 3344, and this burden has always required proof that the disputed uses fell outside the exemptions granted by subdivision (d)." (Gionfriddo v. Major League Baseball (2001) 94 Cal.App.4th 400, 416–417 [114 Cal.Rptr.2d 307], internal citation omitted.)
- "We presume that the Legislature intended that the category of public affairs would include things that would not necessarily be considered news. Otherwise, the appearance of one of those terms in the subsection would be superfluous, a reading we are not entitled to give to the statute. We also presume that the term 'public affairs' was intended to mean something less important than news. Public affairs must be related to real-life occurrences." (Dora v. Frontline Video, Inc. (1993) 15 Cal.App.4th 536, 546 [18 Cal.Rptr.2d 790], internal citations omitted.)
- "[N]o cause of action will lie for the 'publication of matters in the public interest, which rests on the right of the public to know and the freedom of the press to tell it.' " (Montana v. San Jose Mercury News (1995) 34 Cal.App.4th 790, 793 [40 Cal.Rptr.2d 639], internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 789–791

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 5-:L, Invasion Of Privacy, ¶¶ 5:1116–5:1118 (The Rutter Group)

4 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 46, Invasion of Privacy, § 46.05 (Matthew Bender)

37 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.36 (Matthew Bender)

18 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 184, Privacy: Invasion of Privacy, § 184.35 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Torts § 20:17 (Thomson Reuters)

1805. Affirmative Defense to Use or Appropriation of Name or Likeness—First Amendment (Comedy III)

[*Name of defendant] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] has not violated [name of plaintiff]'s right of privacy because the [insert type of work, e.g., "picture"] is protected by the First Amendment's guarantee of freedom of speech and expression. To succeed, [name of defendant] must prove either of the following:

1. That the [insert type of work, e.g., "picture"] adds something new to [name of plaintiff]'s likeness, giving it a new expression, meaning, or message; or
2. That the value of the [insert type of work, e.g., "picture"] does not result primarily from [name of plaintiff]'s fame.

New September 2003; Revised October 2008

Directions for Use

This instruction assumes that the plaintiff is the celebrity whose likeness is the subject of the trial. This instruction will need to be modified if the plaintiff is not the actual celebrity.

Sources and Authority

- "In sum, when an artist is faced with a right of publicity challenge to his or her work, he or she may raise as affirmative defense that the work is protected by the First Amendment inasmuch as it contains significant transformative elements or that the value of the work does not derive primarily from the celebrity's fame." (Comedy III Productions, Inc. v. Gary Saderup, Inc. (2001) 25 Cal.4th 387, 407 [106 Cal.Rptr.2d 126, 21 P.3d 797].)
- "We have explained that '[o]nly if [a defendant] is entitled to the [transformative] defense as a matter of law can it prevail on its motion to strike,' because the California Supreme Court 'envisioned the application of the defense as a question of fact.' As a result, [defendant] 'is only entitled to the defense as a matter of law if no trier of fact could reasonably conclude that the [game] [i]s not transformative.' " (Keller v. Elec. Arts Inc. (In re NCAA Student-Athlete Name & Likeness Licensing Litig.) (9th Cir. 2013) 724 F.3d 1268, 1274, original italics.)
- "[C]ourts can often resolve the question as a matter of law simply by viewing the work in question and, if necessary, comparing it to an actual likeness of the person or persons portrayed. Because of these circumstances, an action presenting this issue is often properly resolved on summary judgment or, if the complaint includes the work in question, even demurrer." (Winter v. DC Comics

(2003) 30 Cal.4th 881, 891–892 [134 Cal.Rptr.2d 634, 69 P.3d 473], internal citation omitted.)

- "[T]he First Amendment . . . safeguards the storytellers and artists who take the raw materials of life—including the stories of real individuals, ordinary or extraordinary—and transform them into art, be it articles, books, movies, or plays." (De Havilland v. FX Networks, LLC (2018) 21 Cal.App.5th 845, 860 [230 Cal.Rptr.3d 625].)
- "Although surprisingly few courts have considered in any depth the means of reconciling the right of publicity and the First Amendment, we follow those that have in concluding that depictions of celebrities amounting to little more than the appropriation of the celebrity's economic value are not protected expression under the First Amendment." (Comedy III Productions, Inc., supra, 25 Cal.4th at p. 400.)
- "Furthermore, in determining whether a work is sufficiently transformative, courts may find useful a subsidiary inquiry, particularly in close cases: does the marketability and economic value of the challenged work derive primarily from the fame of the celebrity depicted? If this question is answered in the negative, then there would generally be no actionable right of publicity. When the value of the work comes principally from some source other than the fame of the celebrity—from the creativity, skill, and reputation of the artist—it may be presumed that sufficient transformative elements are present to warrant First Amendment protection. If the question is answered in the affirmative, however, it does not necessarily follow that the work is without First Amendment protection—it may still be a transformative work." (Comedy III Productions, Inc., supra, 25 Cal.4th at p. 407.)
- "As the Supreme Court has stated, the central purpose of the inquiry into this fair use factor 'is to see . . . whether the new work merely "supersede[s] the objects" of the original creation, or instead adds something new, with a further purpose or different character, altering the first with new expression, meaning, or message; it asks, in other words, whether and to what extent the new work is "transformative." ' " (Comedy III Productions, Inc., supra, 25 Cal.4th at p. 404, internal citations omitted.)
- "We emphasize that the transformative elements or creative contributions that require First Amendment protection are not confined to parody and can take many forms, from factual reporting to fictionalized portrayal, from heavy-handed lampooning to subtle social criticism." (Comedy III Productions, Inc., supra, 25 Cal.4th at p. 406.)
- "[Defendant] contends the plaintiffs' claims are barred by the transformative use defense formulated by the California Supreme Court in Comedy III . . . . 'The defense is "a balancing test between the First Amendment and the right of publicity based on whether the work in question adds significant creative elements so as to be transformed into something more than a mere celebrity likeness or imitation." ' " (Davis v. Elec. Arts, Inc. (9th Cir. 2015) 775 F.3d 1172, 1177, internal citation omitted.)

- "Simply stated, the transformative test looks at 'whether the celebrity likeness is one of the "raw materials" from which an original work is synthesized, or whether the depiction or imitation of the celebrity is the very sum and substance of the work in question. We ask, in other words, whether a product containing a celebrity's likeness is so transformed that it has become primarily the defendant's own expression rather than the celebrity's likeness.' This transformative test is the court's primary inquiry when resolving a conflict between the right of publicity and the First Amendment." (Ross v. Roberts (2013) 222 Cal.App.4th 677, 686 [166 Cal.Rptr.3d 359], internal citations omitted.)
- "Comedy III's 'transformative' test makes sense when applied to products and merchandise—'tangible personal property,' in the Supreme Court's words. Lower courts have struggled mightily, however, to figure out how to apply it to expressive works such as films, plays, and television programs." (De Havilland, supra, 21 Cal.App.5th at p. 863, internal citation omitted.)
- "The First Amendment defense does not apply only to visual expressions, however. 'The protections may extend to all forms of expression, including written and spoken words (fact or fiction), music, films, paintings, and entertainment, whether or not sold for a profit.' " (Ross, supra, 222 Cal.App.4th at p. 687.)
- "The distinction between parody and other forms of literary expression is irrelevant to the Comedy III transformative test. It does not matter what precise literary category the work falls into. What matters is whether the work is transformative, not whether it is parody or satire or caricature or serious social commentary or any other specific form of expression." (Winter, supra, 30 Cal.4th at p. 891.)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, § 788

Gaab & Reese, California Practice Guide: Civil Procedure Before Trial—Claims & Defenses, Ch. 4(VII)-C, Harm to Reputation and Privacy Interests, ¶ 4:1385 et seq. (The Rutter Group)

37 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.36 (Matthew Bender)

18 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 184, Privacy: Invasion of Privacy, § 184.38 (Matthew Bender)

1806. Affirmative Defense to Invasion of Privacy—First Amendment Balancing Test—Public Interest

---

[*Name of defendant] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] has not violated [name of plaintiff]'s right of privacy because the public interest served by [name of defendant]'s [specify privacy violation, e.g., use of [name of plaintiff]'s name, likeness, or identity] outweighs [name of plaintiff]'s privacy interests. In deciding whether the public interest outweighs [name of plaintiff]'s privacy interest, you should consider all of the following:

a. Where the information was used;

b. The extent of the use;

c. The public interest served by the use;

d. The seriousness of the interference with [*name of plaintiff]'s privacy; and

e. [*specify other factors].

New June 2015

Directions for Use

This instruction sets forth a balancing test for a claim for invasion of privacy. A defendant's First Amendment right to freedom of expression and freedom of the press can, in some cases, outweigh the plaintiff's right of privacy (See Gionfriddo v. Major League Baseball (2001) 94 Cal.App.4th 400, 409–410 [114 Cal.Rptr.2d 307]; see also Gill v. Hearst Publishing Co. Inc. (1953) 40 Cal.2d 224, 228–231 [253 P.2d 441].) This balancing test is an affirmative defense. (See Comedy III Productions, Inc. v. Gary Saderup, Inc. (2001) 25 Cal.4th 387, 407 [106 Cal.Rptr.2d 126, 21 P.3d 797]; CACI No. 1805, Affirmative Defense to Use or Appropriation of Name or Likeness—First Amendment (Comedy III).)

A First-Amendment defense based on newsworthiness has been allowed for the defendant's use of the plaintiff's name or likeness. (See Gionfriddo, supra, 94 Cal.App.4th at pp. 409–411; see CACI No. 1804A.) It has also been allowed for privacy claims based on intrusion into private affairs (see CACI No. 1800) and public disclosure of private facts (See CACI No. 1802; Shulman v. Group W Productions, Inc. (1998) 18 Cal.4th 200, 214–242 [74 Cal.Rptr.2d 843, 955 P.2d 469].) It has also been allowed for a claim that the plaintiff had been presented in a false light (See CACI No. 1802; Gill v. Curtis Publishing Co. (1952) 38 Cal.2d 273, 278–279 [239 P.2d 630] [magazine's use of plaintiffs' picture in connection with article on divorce suggested that they were not happily married].)

Sources and Authority

- "[N]o cause of action will lie for the '[p]ublication of matters in the public interest, which rests on the right of the public to know and the freedom of the press to tell it.' " (Montana v. San Jose Mercury News, Inc. (1995) 34 Cal.App.4th 790, 793 [40 Cal.Rptr.2d 639], internal citation omitted.)
- "The sense of an ever-increasing pressure on personal privacy notwithstanding, it has long been apparent that the desire for privacy must at many points give way before our right to know, and the news media's right to investigate and relate, facts about the events and individuals of our time." (Shulman, supra, 18 Cal.4th at p. 208.)
- "The difficulty in defining the boundaries of the right, as applied in the publication field, is inherent in the necessity of balancing the public interest in the dissemination of news, information and education against the individuals' interest in peace of mind and freedom from emotional disturbances. When words relating to or actual pictures of a person or his name are published, the circumstances may indicate that public interest is predominant. Factors deserving consideration may include the medium of publication, the extent of the use, the public interest served by the publication, and the seriousness of the interference with the person's privacy." (Gill v. Curtis Publishing Co. (1952) 38 Cal.2d 273, 278–279 [239 P.2d 630].)
- "[T]he common law right does not provide relief for every publication of a person's name or likeness. The First Amendment requires that the right to be protected from unauthorized publicity 'be balanced against the public interest in the dissemination of news and information consistent with the democratic processes under the constitutional guaranties of freedom of speech and of the press.' " (Gionfriddo, supra, 94 Cal.App.4th at pp. 409–410, internal citations and footnote omitted.)
- "Public interest attaches to people who by their accomplishments or mode of living create a bona fide attention to their activities." (Dora v. Frontline Video, Inc. (1993) 15 Cal.App.4th 536, 542 [18 Cal.Rptr.2d 790], internal citation omitted.)
- "Although surprisingly few courts have considered in any depth the means of reconciling the right of publicity and the First Amendment, we follow those that have in concluding that depictions of celebrities amounting to little more than the appropriation of the celebrity's economic value are not protected expression under the First Amendment." (Comedy III Productions, Inc., supra, 25 Cal.4th at p. 400.)
- "The First Amendment defense does not apply only to visual expressions, however. 'The protections may extend to all forms of expression, including written and spoken words (fact or fiction), music, films, paintings, and entertainment, whether or not sold for a profit.' " (Ross v. Roberts (2013) 222 Cal.App.4th 677, 687 [166 Cal.Rptr.3d 359].)
- "Producers of films and television programs may enter into agreements with individuals portrayed in those works for a variety of reasons, including access to the person's recollections or 'story' the producers would not otherwise have, or a desire to avoid litigation for a reasonable fee. But the First Amendment simply does not require such acquisition agreements." (De Havilland v. FX Networks, LLC (2018) 21 Cal.App.5th 845, 861 [230 Cal.Rptr.3d 625].)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, § 681 et seq.

4 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 46, Invasion of Privacy, § 46.05 (Matthew Bender)

37 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.35 (Matthew Bender)

18 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 184, Privacy: Invasion of Privacy, § 184.27 (Matthew Bender)

1807. Affirmative Defense—Invasion of Privacy Justified

[*Name of defendant] claims that even if [name of plaintiff] has proven all of the above, [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] conduct was justified. [Name of defendant] must prove that the circumstances justified the invasion of privacy because the invasion of privacy substantially furthered [insert relevant legitimate or compelling competing interest].

If [*name of defendant] proves that [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] conduct was justified, then you must find for [name of defendant] unless [name of plaintiff] proves that there was a practical, effective, and less invasive method of achieving [name of defendant]'s purpose.

New September 2003; Revised October 2008, June 2010

Sources and Authority

- "A defendant may prevail in a state constitutional privacy case by negating any of the three elements just discussed or by pleading and proving, as an affirmative defense, that the invasion of privacy is justified because it substantively furthers one or more countervailing interests. The plaintiff, in turn, may rebut a defendant's assertion of countervailing interests by showing there are feasible and effective alternatives to defendant's conduct which have a lesser impact on privacy interests. Of course, a defendant may also plead and prove other available defenses, e.g., consent, unclean hands, etc., that may be appropriate in view of the nature of the claim and the relief requested." (Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal.4th 1, 40 [26 Cal.Rptr.2d 834, 865 P.2d 633].)
- "The existence of a sufficient countervailing interest or an alternative course of conduct present threshold questions of law for the court. The relative strength of countervailing interests and the feasibility of alternatives present mixed questions of law and fact. Again, in cases where material facts are undisputed, adjudication as a matter of law may be appropriate." (Hill, supra, 7 Cal.4th at p. 40.)
- "Hill and its progeny further provide that no constitutional violation occurs, i.e., a 'defense' exists, if the intrusion on privacy is justified by one or more competing interests. For purposes of this balancing function—and except in the rare case in which a 'fundamental' right of personal autonomy is involved—the defendant need not present a ' "compelling" ' countervailing interest; only 'general balancing tests are employed.' To the extent the plaintiff raises the issue in response to a claim or defense of competing interests, the defendant may show that less intrusive alternative means were not reasonably available. A relevant inquiry in this regard is whether the intrusion was limited, such that no confidential information was gathered or disclosed." (Hernandez v. Hillsides, Inc. (2009) 47 Cal.4th 272, 288 [97 Cal.Rptr.3d 274, 211 P.3d 1063], internal citations omitted.)

- Note that whether the countervailing interest needs to be "compelling" or "legitimate" depends on the status of the defendant. "In general, where the privacy violation is alleged against a private entity, the defendant is not required to establish a 'compelling interest' but, rather, one that is 'legitimate' or 'important.' " (Pettus v. Cole (1996) 49 Cal.App.4th 402, 440 [57 Cal.Rptr.2d 46].)

Secondary Sources

7 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Constitutional Law, §§ 642–670

4 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 46, Invasion of Privacy, § 46.06 (Matthew Bender)

37 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.16 (Matthew Bender)

18 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 183, Privacy: State Constitutional Rights, § 183.20 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Torts §§ 20:18–20:20 (Thomson Reuters)

1808. Stalking (Civ. Code, § 1708.7)

Revoked June 2015. See Stats 2014, Ch. 853 (AB 1356), substantially amending Civ. Code, § 1708.7.

1809. Recording of Confidential Information (Pen. Code, §§ 632, 637.2)

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] violated [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] right to privacy. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] intentionally [eavesdropped on/recorded] [name of plaintiff]'s conversation by using an electronic device;
2. That [name of plaintiff] had a reasonable expectation that the conversation was not being overheard or recorded; [and]
3. That [name of defendant] did not have the consent of all parties to the conversation to [eavesdrop on/record] it;
4. [That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and]
5. [That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.]

New September 2003

Directions for Use

If the plaintiff is asserting more than one privacy right, give an introductory instruction stating that a person's right to privacy can be violated in more than one way and listing the legal theories under which the plaintiff is suing.

Elements 4 and 5 are in brackets because if there is no actual harm, plaintiff can recover the statutory penalty. If plaintiff is seeking actual damages, such damages must be proven along with causation.

Sources and Authority

- Recording Confidential Communication. Penal Code section 632(a).
- Civil Action for Recording Confidential Communication. Penal Code section 637.2.
- "[A] conversation is confidential under section 632 if a party to that conversation has an objectively reasonable expectation that the conversation is not being overheard or recorded." (Flanagan v. Flanagan (2002) 27 Cal.4th 766, 776–777 [117 Cal.Rptr.2d 574, 41 P.3d 575].)
- " 'A communication must be protected if either party reasonably expects the communication to be confined to the parties.' " (Coulter v. Bank of America National Trust and Savings Assn. (1994) 28 Cal.App.4th 923, 929 [33 Cal.Rptr.2d 766], internal citation omitted.)
- "While one who imparts private information risks the betrayal of his confidence by the other party, a substantial distinction has been recognized between the secondhand repetition of the contents of a conversation and its simultaneous dissemination to an unannounced second auditor, whether that auditor be a person or a mechanical device." (Ribas v. Clark (1985) 38 Cal.3d 355, 360–361 [212 Cal.Rptr. 143, 696 P.2d 637].)

- "We hold that an actionable violation of section 632 does not require disclosure of a confidential communication to a third party." (Friddle v. Epstein (1993) 16 Cal.App.4th 1649, 1660 [21 Cal.Rptr.2d 85].)
- "The right to recover [the] statutory minimum accrue[s] at the moment the privacy act [is] violated." (Friddle, supra, 16 Cal.App.4th at p. 1661.)
- "If the plaintiff has suffered injuries akin to those for emotional distress, 'i.e., anxiety, embarrassment, humiliation, shame, depression, feelings of powerlessness, anguish, etc.,' these are 'actual' damages which shall be trebled." (Friddle, supra, 16 Cal.App.4th at p. 1660.)
- "Because the right to [the statutory] award accrues at the moment of the violation, it is not barred by the judicial privilege. . . . Section 637.2 therefore permits him to pursue his statutory remedy of a civil lawsuit for $3,000, even though the judicial privilege bars his recovery for the only actual damage he claims to have suffered." (Ribas, supra, 38 Cal.3d at p. 365.)

Secondary Sources

7 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 728, 729, 736

4 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 46, Invasion of Privacy, § 46.07[8] (Matthew Bender)

37 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.283 (Matthew Bender)

18 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 184, Privacy: Invasion of Privacy, § 184.25A (Matthew Bender)

1810. Distribution of Private Sexually Explicit Materials—Essential Factual Elements (Civ. Code, § 1708.85)

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] violated [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] right to privacy by distributing private sexually explicit materials. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] intentionally distributed by [specify means, e.g., posting online] [a] [photograph(s)/film(s)/videotape(s)/ recording(s)/[specify other reproduction]] of [name of plaintiff];
2. That [name of plaintiff] did not consent to the distribution of the [specify, e.g., photographs];
3. That [name of defendant] knew, or reasonably should have known, that [name of plaintiff] had a reasonable expectation that the [e.g., photographs] would remain private;
4. That the [e.g., photographs] [exposed an intimate body part of [name of plaintiff]/ [or] showed [name of plaintiff] engaging in an act of [intercourse/oral copulation/sodomy/ [or] [specify other act of sexual penetration]]];
5. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
6. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

[An "intimate body part" is any part of the genitals[, and, in the case of a female, also includes any portion of the breast below the top of the areola,] that is uncovered or visible through less than fully opaque clothing.]

New December 2015; Revised May 2022

Directions for Use

This instruction is for use for an invasion-of-privacy cause of action for the dissemination of sexually explicit materials. (See Civ. Code, § 1708.85(a).) It may not be necessary to include the last definitional paragraph as the court may rule as a matter of law that an image of an intimate body part has been distributed. (See Civ. Code, § 1708.85(b).)

Plaintiff may recover general or special damages as defined in subdivision (d) of Civil Code section 48a. (Civ. Code, § 1708.85(a).) "General damages" are damages for loss of reputation, shame, mortification and hurt feelings. (Civ. Code, § 48a(d)(1).) "Special damages" are essentially economic loss. (Civ. Code, § 48a(d)(2).)

Sources and Authority

- Right of Action Against Distributor of Private Sexually Explicit Material. Civil Code section 1708.85
- General and Special Damages. Civil Code section 48a(d)(1), (2)

Secondary Sources

4 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 46, Invasion of Privacy, § 46.07 (Matthew Bender)

37 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.36A (Matthew Bender)

18 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 184, Privacy: Invasion of Privacy, § 184.25B (Matthew Bender)

1811. Reserved for Future Use

1812. Comprehensive Computer Data and Access Fraud Act—Essential Factual Elements (Pen. Code, § 502)

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] has violated the Comprehensive Computer Data and Access Fraud Act. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] is the [owner/lessee] of the [specify computer, computer system, computer network, computer program, and/or data];
2. That [name of defendant] knowingly [specify one or more prohibited acts from Pen. Code, § 502(c), e.g., accessed [name of plaintiff]'s data on a computer, computer system, or computer network];

[3. That [*name of defendant]'s [specify conduct from Pen. Code, § 502(c), e.g., use of the computer services] was without [name of plaintiff]'s permission;]

[4.] That [*name of plaintiff] was harmed; and

[5.] That [*name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New May 2020

Directions for Use

Give this instruction for a claim under the Comprehensive Computer Data Access and Fraud Act (CDAFA). CDAFA makes civil remedies available to any person who suffers damage or loss by reason of the commission of certain computer-related offenses. (Pen. Code, § 502(c), (e)(1).)

For element 1, the court may need to define the technology (e.g., "computer network," "computer program or software," "computer system," or "data") or other statutory term depending on the facts and circumstances of the particular case. (See Pen. Code, § 502(b) [defining various terms].) For a definition of "access," see CACI No. 1813, Definition of "Access."

Some of the prohibited acts for element 2 may also require that the defendant do something specific with the access or that the defendant have a specific purpose. For example, if the defendant allegedly deleted or used plaintiff's computer data, it must have been done without permission and either to (a) devise or execute any scheme or artifice to defraud, deceive, or extort, or (b) wrongfully control or obtain money, property, or data. (See Pen. Code, § 502(c)(1).) Modify the instruction to include these elements where required.

Include element 3 regarding lack of permission depending on the violation(s) alleged. Lack of permission is a required element for violations of subdivisions

(c)(1)–(7) and (c)(9)–(13), but not for violations of subdivisions (c)(8) and (c)(14). Modify element 3 accordingly. Delete element 3 for violations of the latter subdivisions.

If plaintiff's claim involves a "government computer system" or a "public safety infrastructure computer system" and there is a factual dispute about the type of computer system involved, this instruction should be modified to add that issue as an element. (See Pen. Code, § 502(c)(10), (11), (12), (13), and (14).)

Sources and Authority

- Comprehensive Computer Data Access and Fraud Act. Penal Code section 502.
- "Penal Code section 502, subdivision (e)(1) permits a civil action to recover expenses related to investigating the unauthorized computer access." (Verio Healthcare, Inc. v. Superior Court (2016) 3 Cal.App.5th 1315, 1321 fn. 3 [208 Cal.Rptr.3d 436].)
- "Whether [plaintiff] owned the data in [defendant's] possession was a question of fact for the jury to decide. By assuming or asking whether [plaintiff] had an unspecified interest in the data in question, the instruction as given removed from the jury's consideration an element that [plaintiff] had to prove to prevail on his claim." (Garrabrants v. Erhart (2023) 98 Cal.App.5th 486, 509 [316 Cal.Rptr.3d 792], original italics.)
- "Four of the section 502, subdivision (c) offenses include access as an element. The provision under which [defendant] was charged does not. When different words are used in adjoining subdivisions of a statute that were enacted at the same time, that fact raises a compelling inference that a different meaning was intended. The Legislature's requirement of unpermitted access in some section 502 offenses and its failure to require that element in other parts of the same statute raise a strong inference that the subdivisions that do not require unpermitted access were intended to apply to persons who gain lawful access to a computer but then abuse that access." (People v. Childs (2013) 220 Cal.App.4th 1079, 1102 [164 Cal.Rptr.3d 287], internal citations omitted.)
- "[The CDAFA] does not require unauthorized access. It merely requires knowing access. What makes that access unlawful is that the person 'without permission takes, copies, or makes use of' data on the computer. A plain reading of the statute demonstrates that its focus is on unauthorized taking or use of information." (United States v. Christensen (9th Cir. 2015) 828 F.3d 763, 789, original italics, internal citations omitted.)
- "Because [defendant] had implied authorization to access [plaintiff]'s computers, it did not, at first, violate the [CDAFA]. But when [plaintiff] sent the cease and desist letter, [defendant], as it conceded, knew that it no longer had permission to access [plaintiff]'s computers at all. [Defendant], therefore, knowingly accessed and without permission took, copied, and made use of [plaintiff]'s data." (Facebook, Inc. v. Power Ventures, Inc. (9th Cir. 2016) 844 F.3d 1058, 1069.)

- "[T]aking data using a method prohibited by the applicable terms of use, when the taking itself generally is permitted, does not violate the CDAFA." (Oracle USA, Inc. v. Rimini Street, Inc. (9th Cir. 2018) 879 F.3d 948, 962, reversed in part on other grounds by Rimini Street, Inc. v. Oracle USA, Inc. (2019) 586 U.S. 334, 346 [139 S.Ct. 873, 203 L.Ed.2d 180], original italics.)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, California Criminal Law (4th ed. 2012) Crimes Against Property, § 229 et seq.

31 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 349, Literary Property and Copyright, § 349.41[5] (Matthew Bender)

1813. Definition of "Access" (Pen. Code, § 502(b)(1))

The term "access" means to gain entry to, instruct, cause input to, cause output from, cause data processing with, or communicate with the logical, arithmetical, or memory function resources of a computer, computer system, or computer network.

A person can access a computer, computer system, or computer network in different ways. For example, access can be accomplished by sitting down at a computer and using the mouse and keyboard, or by using a wireless network or some other method or tool to gain remote entry.

New May 2020

Directions for Use

This instruction should be read with CACI No. 1812, Comprehensive Computer Data and Access Fraud Act—Essential Factual Elements, for claims that require that the defendant "access" a computer, computer system, or computer network. (See Pen. Code, § 502 (c)(1), (2), (4), (7), and (11).)

Sources and Authority

- "Access" Defined. Penal Code section 502(b)(1).
- "Underscoring that 'accessing' a computer's 'logical, arithmetical, or memory function' is different from the ordinary, everyday use of a computer to which people are accustomed when they speak of 'using' a computer, another subdivision criminalizes 'us[ing] or caus[ing] to be used computer services' without permission. Principles of statutory interpretation obligate us to give different meanings to the words 'use' and 'access' in order to avoid rendering either word redundant." (Chrisman v. City of Los Angeles (2007) 155 Cal.App.4th 29, 34 [65 Cal.Rptr.3d 701], internal citation and footnote omitted.)
- "Public access computer terminals are increasingly common in the offices of many governmental bodies and agencies, from courthouses to tax assessors. We believe subdivision (c)(7) was designed to criminalize unauthorized access to the software and data in such systems, even where none of the other illegal activities listed in subdivision (c) have occurred." (People v. Lawton (1996) 48 Cal.App.4th Supp. 11, 15 [56 Cal.Rptr.2d 521].)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, California Criminal Law (4th ed. 2012) Crimes Against Property, § 229 et seq.

1814. Damages for Investigating Violations of Comprehensive Computer Data and Access Fraud Act (Pen. Code, § 502(e)(1))

To recover damages for money spent to investigate or verify whether [name of plaintiff]'s computer system, computer network, computer program, or data was or was not altered, damaged, or deleted by [specify wrongful conduct under section 502(c) that led to accessing the plaintiff's computer system, computer network, or computer program], [name of plaintiff] must prove the amount of money reasonably and necessarily spent to conduct such an investigation.

New May 2020; Revised November 2020

Directions for Use

Give this instruction for violations of the Comprehensive Computer Data and Access Fraud Act in which there is evidence that the plaintiff spent money to investigate or verify the defendant's wrongful conduct. (See Pen. Code, § 502; CACI No. 1812, Comprehensive Computer Data and Access Fraud Act—Essential Factual Elements.) In some cases, it may be appropriate to tailor the instruction to specify the technology or data at issue (e.g., the name of a computer program or the plaintiff's data files).

For other damages instructions, see the Damages series, CACI No. 3900 et seq.

Punitive or exemplary damages are available for willful violations. (Pen. Code, § 502(e)(4).) For instructions on punitive damages, see CACI Nos. 3940–3949.

Sources and Authority

- Compensatory Damages. Penal Code section 502(e)(1).

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, California Criminal Law (4th ed. 2012) Crimes Against Property, § 229 et seq.

31 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 349, Literary Property and Copyright, § 349.91 (Matthew Bender)

1815–1819. Reserved for Future Use

1820. Damages

If you decide that [name of plaintiff] has proved [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] claim against [name of defendant], you also must decide how much money will reasonably compensate [name of plaintiff] for the harm. This compensation is called "damages."

The amount of damages must include an award for all harm that was caused by [name of defendant], even if the particular harm could not have been anticipated.

[Name of plaintiff] must prove the amount of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] damages. However, [name of plaintiff] does not have to prove the exact amount of damages that will provide reasonable compensation for the harm. You must not speculate or guess in awarding damages.

The following are the specific items of damages claimed by [name of plaintiff]:

1. [Mental suffering/anxiety/humiliation/emotional distress;]
2. [Harm to reputation and loss of standing in the community;]
3. [The commercial value of [name of plaintiff]'s name or likeness;]
4. [Insert other applicable item of damage.]

No fixed standard exists for deciding the amount of damages for [insert item of mental or emotional distress]. You must use your judgment to decide a reasonable amount based on the evidence and your common sense.

[To recover for future [insert item of mental or emotional distress], [name of plaintiff] must prove that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] is reasonably certain to suffer that harm.]

New September 2003

Directions for Use

This instruction is not intended for cases involving invasion of privacy by false light. Damages for false light are similar to the damages available in defamation (see CACI Nos. 1700 to 1705).

Item 2 will probably not be relevant in all cases. It will have particular application to the aspect of this tort involving the publication of private facts. (See Diaz v. Oakland Tribune, Inc. (1983) 139 Cal.App.3d 118, 137 [188 Cal.Rptr. 762].)

Item 3 is intended only for cases involving violation of privacy by appropriation.

Sources and Authority

- Restatement Second of Torts, section 652H provides:

One who has established a cause of action for invasion of his privacy is entitled to recover damages for

(a) the harm to his interest in privacy resulting from the invasion;

(b) his mental distress proved to have been suffered if it is of a kind that normally results from such an invasion; and

(c) special damage of which the invasion is a legal cause.

Note that this Restatement section has not been cited by any published California cases.

- "Damages recoverable in California for invasion of a privacy right were discussed in detail in Fairfield v. American Photocopy Equipment Co. The Court of Appeal declared that because the interest involved privacy, the damages flowing from its invasion logically would include an award for mental suffering and anguish. Fairfield was an appropriation case, but the principles it laid down concerning damage awards in privacy cases relied on a body of California law which had already recognized violation of the right of privacy as a tort." (Miller v. National Broadcasting Co. (1986) 187 Cal.App.3d 1463, 1484 [232 Cal.Rptr. 668], internal citation omitted.)
- "The elements of emotional distress damages, i.e., anxiety, embarrassment, humiliation, shame, depression, feelings of powerlessness, anguish, etc., would thus be subjects of legitimate inquiry by a jury in the action before us, taking into account all of the consequences and events which flowed from the actionable wrong." (Miller, supra, 187 Cal.App.3d at p. 1485.)
- "The actual injury involved herein is not limited to out-of-pocket loss. It generally includes 'impairment of reputation and standing in the community, personal humiliation, and mental anguish and suffering.' " (Diaz, supra, 139 Cal.App.3d at p. 137, internal citation omitted.)
- In Time, Inc. v. Hill (1967) 385 U.S. 374, 384, fn. 9 [87 S.Ct. 534, 17 L.Ed.2d 456], the court stated: "In the 'right of privacy' cases the primary damage is the mental distress from having been exposed to public view, although injury to reputation may be an element bearing upon such damage."
- "There is a distinction between causes of action for invasion of privacy and defamation with regard to the respective interests protected and compensated by each. 'The gist of a cause of action in a privacy case is not injury to the character or reputation but a direct wrong of a personal character resulting in injury to the feelings without regard to any effect which the publication may have on the property, business, pecuniary interest, or the standing of the individual in the community. The right of privacy concerns one's own peace of mind, while the right of freedom from defamation concerns primarily one's reputation. The injury is mental and subjective.' " (Selleck v. Globe Int'l, Inc. (1985) 166 Cal.App.3d 1123, 1135 [212 Cal.Rptr. 838], internal citations omitted.)
- "California recognizes the right to profit from the commercial value of one's identity as an aspect of the right of publicity." (Gionfriddo v. Major League Baseball (2001) 94 Cal.App.4th 400, 409 [114 Cal.Rptr.2d 307], internal citations omitted.)

- "What may have originated as a concern for the right to be left alone has become a tool to control the commercial use and, thus, protect the economic value of one's name, voice, signature, photograph, or likeness." (KNB Enterprises v. Matthews (2000) 78 Cal.App.4th 362, 366 [92 Cal.Rptr.2d 713].)
- "The first type of appropriation is the right of publicity . . . which is 'in essence that the reaction of the public to name and likeness, which may be fortuitous or which may be managed or planned, endows the name and likeness of the person involved with commercially exploitable opportunities.' The other is the appropriation of the name and likeness that brings injury to the feelings, that concerns one's own peace of mind, and that is mental and subjective." (Dora v. Frontline Video, Inc. (1993) 15 Cal.App.4th 536, 541–542 [18 Cal.Rptr.2d 790], internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

4 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 46, Invasion of Privacy, § 46.13 (Matthew Bender)

37 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.46 (Matthew Bender)

1821. Damages for Use of Name or Likeness (Civ. Code § 3344(a))

If you decide that [*name of plaintiff] has proved [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] claim against [name of defendant], you also must decide how much money will reasonably compensate [name of plaintiff] for the harm. This compensation is called "damages."

[*Name of plaintiff] must prove the amount of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] damages. [Name of plaintiff] does not have to prove the exact amount of damages that will provide reasonable compensation for the harm. However, you must not speculate or guess in awarding damages.

The following are the specific items of damages claimed by [*name of plaintiff]:

1. [Humiliation, embarrassment, and mental distress, including any physical symptoms;]
2. [Harm to [name of plaintiff]'s reputation;] [and]
3. [Insert other item(s) of claimed harm].

In addition, [*name of plaintiff] may recover any profits that [name of defendant] received from the use of [name of plaintiff]'s [name/voice/signature/photograph/likeness] [that have not already been taken into account with regard to the above damages]. To establish the amount of these profits you must:

1. Determine the gross, or total, revenue that [name of defendant] received from the use;
2. Determine the expenses that [name of defendant] had in obtaining the gross revenue; and
3. Deduct [name of defendant]'s expenses from the gross revenue.

[*Name of plaintiff] must prove the amount of gross revenue, and [name of defendant] must prove the amount of expenses.

New September 2003; Revised June 2012, December 2012

Directions for Use

Under Civil Code section 3344(a), an injured party may recover either actual damages or $750, whichever is greater, as well as profits from the unauthorized use that were not taken into account in calculating actual damages. (Orthopedic Systems, Inc. v. Schlein (2011) 202 Cal.App.4th 529, 547 [135 Cal.Rptr.3d 200].) If no actual damages are sought, the first part of the instruction may be deleted or modified to simply instruct the jury to award $750 if it finds liability.

The plaintiff might claim that the plaintiff would have earned the same profits that the defendant wrongfully earned. In such a case, to avoid a double recovery, the advisory committee recommends computing damages to recover the defendant's wrongful profits separately from actual damages, that is, under the second part of the instruction and not under actual damages item 3 ("other item(s) of claimed harm"). See also CACI No. VF-1804, Privacy—Use of Name or Likeness. Give the bracketed phrase in the paragraph that introduces the second part of the instruction if the plaintiff alleges lost profits that are different from the defendant's wrongful profits and that are claimed under actual damages item 3.

Sources and Authority

- Liability for Use of Name or Likeness. Civil Code section 3344.
- "[Plaintiff] alleges, and submits evidence to show, that he was injured economically because the ad will make it difficult for him to endorse other automobiles, and emotionally because people may be led to believe he has abandoned his current name and assume he has renounced his religion. These allegations suffice to support his action. Injury to a plaintiff's right of publicity is not limited to present or future economic loss, but 'may induce humiliation, embarrassment, and mental distress.' " (Abdul-Jabbar v. General Motors Corp. (9th Cir. 1996) 85 F.3d 407, 416, internal citation omitted.)
- "The statutory language of section 3344 is unambiguous—the plaintiff bears the burden of presenting proof of the gross revenue attributable to the defendant's unauthorized use of the plaintiff's likeness, and the defendant must then prove its deductible expenses. CACI No. 1821 mirrors the language of section 3344: '[plaintiff] must prove the amount of gross revenue, and [. . . defendant] must prove the amount of expenses.' (CACI No. 1821.)" (Olive v. General Nutrition Centers, Inc. (2018) 30 Cal.App.5th 804, 814 [242 Cal.Rptr.3d 15], internal citation omitted.)
- "CACI No. 1821 adequately explained the applicable law to the jury." (Olive, supra, 30 Cal.App.5th at p. 815.)
- "We can conceive no rational basis for the Legislature to limit the $750 as an alternative to all other damages, including profits. If someone profits from the unauthorized use of another's name, it makes little sense to preclude the injured party from recouping those profits because he or she is entitled to statutory damages as opposed to actual damages. Similar reasoning appears to be reflected in the civil jury instructions for damages under section 3344, which provides: 'If [name of plaintiff] has not proved the above damages, or has proved an amount of damages less than $750, then you must award [him/her] $750. [¶] In addition, [name of plaintiff] may recover any profits that [name of defendant] received from the use of [name of plaintiff]'s [name . . .] [that have not already been taken into account in computing the above damages].' (CACI No. 1821, italics omitted.)." (Orthopedic Systems, Inc., supra, 202 Cal.App.4th at p. 546.)

Secondary Sources

6 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 1715–1724

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 5-L, Invasion Of Privacy, ¶¶ 5:1116–5:1118 (The Rutter Group)

4 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 46, Invasion of Privacy, § 46.13 (Matthew Bender)

37 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 429, Privacy, § 429.36 (Matthew Bender)

18 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 184, Privacy: Invasion of Privacy, § 184.35 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice, Torts § 20:17 (Thomson Reuters)

1822–1899. Reserved for Future Use

VF-1800. Privacy—Intrusion Into Private Affairs

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of plaintiff] have a reasonable expectation of privacy in [specify place or other circumstance]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of defendant] intentionally intrude in [specify place or other circumstance]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Would [name of defendant]'s intrusion be highly offensive to a reasonable person?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

   [a. Past economic loss

   [lost earnings $_____]

   [lost profits $_____]

   [medical expenses $_____]

   [other past economic loss $_____]

   Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1800, Intrusion Into Private Affairs.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 5 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of defendant] publicize private information concerning [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Would a reasonable person in [name of plaintiff]'s position consider the publicity highly offensive?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of defendant] know or act with reckless disregard of the fact that a reasonable person in [name of plaintiff]'s position would consider the publicity highly offensive?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was the private information of legitimate public concern [or did it have a substantial connection to a matter of legitimate public concern]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is no, then answer question 5. If you answered yes, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1801, Public Disclosure of Private Facts.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 6 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-1802. Privacy—False Light

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of defendant] publicize information or material that showed [name of plaintiff] in a false light?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Would a reasonable person in [name of plaintiff]'s position consider the false light created by the publication to be highly offensive?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Is there clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] either knew the publication would create a false impression about [name of plaintiff] or acted with reckless disregard for the truth?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

   [a. Past economic loss

   [lost earnings $_____]

   [lost profits $_____]

   [medical expenses $_____]

   [other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1802, False Light.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If the conduct does not involve a matter of public concern, then substitute the following for question number 3: "Was [name of defendant] negligent in determining the truth of the information or whether a false impression would be created by its publication?" If the conduct involved material that is not defamatory on its face, the following question should be added to this form: "Did [name of plaintiff] sustain harm to [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] property, business, profession, or occupation [including money spent as a result of the statements(s)]?"

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 5 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-1803. Privacy—Appropriation of Name or Likeness

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of defendant] use [name of plaintiff]'s name, likeness, or identity?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of plaintiff] consent to the use of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] name, likeness, or identity?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is no, then answer question 3. If you answered yes, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of defendant] gain a commercial benefit [or some other advantage] by using [name of plaintiff]'s name, likeness, or identity?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

   [a. Past economic loss

   [lost earnings $_____]

   [lost profits $_____]

   [medical expenses $_____]

   [other past economic loss $_____]

   Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, December 2016, November 2017, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1803, Appropriation of Name or Likeness.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 5 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of defendant] knowingly use [name of plaintiff]'s [name/voice/signature/photograph/likeness] on merchandise or to advertise or sell products or services?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of defendant] have [name of plaintiff]'s consent?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is no, then answer question 3. If you answered yes, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Was [name of defendant]'s use of [name of plaintiff]'s [name/voice/signature/photograph/likeness] directly connected to [name of defendant]'s commercial purpose?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

[5. Did [name of plaintiff] suffer any actual damages or is [name of plaintiff] reasonably likely to suffer any actual damages in the future?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer questions 6 and 7. If you answered no, answer question 7.]

6. What are [name of plaintiff]'s actual damages?

   [a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [humiliation/embarrassment/mental distress including any physical symptoms:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [humiliation/embarrassment/mental distress including any physical symptoms:] $_____]

TOTAL ACTUAL DAMAGES $_____

[7. Did [name of defendant] receive any profits from the use of [name of plaintiff]'s [name/voice/signature/photograph/likeness] that you did not include under [name of plaintiff]'s actual damages for lost profits in Question 6 above?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 7 is yes, then answer question 8. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

8. What amount of those profits did [name of defendant] receive from the use of [name of plaintiff]'s [name/voice/signature/photograph/likeness]?

TOTAL PROFITS RECEIVED BY DEFENDANT $_____]

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, April 2008, December 2010, June 2012, December 2012, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1804A, Use of Name or Likeness, and CACI No. 1821, Damages for Use of Name or Likeness.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

Under Civil Code section 3344(a), the plaintiff may recover actual damages or $750, whichever is greater. The plaintiff may also recover any profits that the defendant received from the unauthorized use that were not taken into account in calculating actual damages. (Orthopedic Systems Inc. v. Schlein (2011) 202 Cal.App.4th 529, 547 [135 Cal.Rptr.3d 200].) The advisory committee recommends calculating the defendant's profits to be disgorged separately from actual damages. Questions 5 through 8 take the jury through the recommended course. If no actual damages are sought, question 5 may be omitted and the jury instructed to enter $750 as the total actual damages in question 6. If the jury awards actual damages of less than $750, the court should raise the amount to $750. If there is no claim to disgorge the defendant's wrongful profits, questions 7 and 8 may be omitted.

Additional questions may be necessary if the facts implicate Civil Code section 3344(d) (see Directions for Use under CACI No. 1804B, Use of Name or Likeness—Use in Connection With News, Public Affairs, or Sports Broadcast or Account, or Political Campaign).

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the actual damages listed in question 6 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-1805–VF-1806. Reserved for Future Use

VF-1807. Privacy—Recording of Confidential Information (Pen. Code, §§ 632, 637.2)

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of defendant] intentionally [eavesdrop on/record] [name of plaintiff]'s conversation by using an electronic device?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of plaintiff] have a reasonable expectation that the conversation was not being overheard or recorded?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of defendant] have the consent of all parties to the conversation to [eavesdrop on/record] it?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is no, then answer question 4. If you answered yes, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

   [a. Past economic loss

   [lost earnings $_____]

   [lost profits $_____]

   [medical expenses $_____]

   [other past economic loss $_____]

   Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1809, Recording of Confidential Information.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

Questions 4 and 5 do not have to be read if the plaintiff is seeking the statutory penalty only.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 5 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-1808–VF-1899. Reserved for Future Use

FRAUD OR DECEIT

1900. Intentional Misrepresentation

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] made a false representation that harmed [him/her/nonbinary pronoun/it]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] represented to [name of plaintiff] that a fact was true;
2. That [name of defendant]'s representation was false;
3. That [name of defendant] knew that the representation was false when [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] made it, or that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] made the representation recklessly and without regard for its truth;
4. That [name of defendant] intended that [name of plaintiff] rely on the representation;
5. That [name of plaintiff] reasonably relied on [name of defendant]'s representation;
6. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
7. That [name of plaintiff]'s reliance on [name of defendant]'s representation was a substantial factor in causing [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] harm.

New September 2003; Revised December 2012, December 2013

Directions for Use

Give this instruction in a case in which it is alleged that the defendant made an intentional misrepresentation of fact. (See Civ. Code, § 1710(1).) If element 5 is contested, give CACI No. 1907, Reliance, and CACI No. 1908, Reasonable Reliance. If it is disputed that a representation was made, the jury should be instructed that "a representation may be made orally, in writing, or by nonverbal conduct." (See Thrifty-Tel, Inc. v. Bezenek (1996) 46 Cal.App.4th 1559, 1567 [54 Cal.Rptr.2d 468].)

The representation must ordinarily be an affirmation of fact, as opposed to an opinion. (See Cohen v. S&S Construction Co. (1983) 151 Cal.App.3d 941, 946 [201 Cal.Rptr. 173].) Opinions are addressed in CACI No. 1904, Opinions as Statements of Fact.

Sources and Authority

- Actionable Deceit. Civil Code section 1709.
- Intentional Misrepresentation. Civil Code section 1710(1).
- Fraud in Contract Formation. Civil Code section 1572.

- "The elements of fraud that will give rise to a tort action for deceit are: " '(a) misrepresentation (false representation, concealment, or nondisclosure); (b) knowledge of falsity (or 'scienter'); (c) intent to defraud, i.e., to induce reliance; (d) justifiable reliance; and (e) resulting damage.' " (Engalla v. Permanente Medical Group, Inc. (1997) 15 Cal.4th 951, 974 [64 Cal.Rptr.2d 843, 938 P.2d 903], internal quotation marks omitted.)
- "A complaint for fraud must allege the following elements: (1) a knowingly false representation by the defendant; (2) an intent to deceive or induce reliance; (3) justifiable reliance by the plaintiff; and (4) resulting damages." (Service by Medallion, Inc. v. Clorox Co. (1996) 44 Cal.App.4th 1807, 1816 [52 Cal.Rptr.2d 650] [combining misrepresentation and scienter as a single element].)
- "Puffing," or sales talk, is generally considered opinion, unless it involves a representation of product safety. (Hauter v. Zogarts (1975) 14 Cal.3d 104, 112 [120 Cal.Rptr. 681, 534 P.2d 377].)
- "Fraud is an intentional tort; it is the element of fraudulent intent, or intent to deceive, that distinguishes it from actionable negligent misrepresentation and from nonactionable innocent misrepresentation. It is the element of intent which makes fraud actionable, irrespective of any contractual or fiduciary duty one party might owe to the other." (City of Atascadero v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith (1998) 68 Cal.App.4th 445, 482 [80 Cal.Rptr.2d 329], internal citations omitted.)
- "[F]raudulent intent is an issue for the trier of fact to decide." (Beckwith v. Dahl (2012) 205 Cal.App.4th 1039, 1061 [141 Cal.Rptr.3d 142].)
- "[T]he trial court failed to consider that a cause of action based in fraud may arise from conduct that is designed to mislead, and not only from verbal or written statements." (Tenet Healthsystem Desert, Inc. v. Blue Cross of California (2016) 245 Cal.App.4th 821, 839 [199 Cal.Rptr.3d 901].)
- "[A] cause of action for misrepresentation requires an affirmative statement, not an implied assertion." (RSB Vineyards, LLC v. Orsi (2017) 15 Cal.App.5th 1089, 1102 [223 Cal.Rptr.3d 458].)
- " '[F]alse representations made recklessly and without regard for their truth in order to induce action by another are the equivalent of misrepresentations knowingly and intentionally uttered.' " (Engalla, supra, 15 Cal.4th at p. 974, quoting Yellow Creek Logging Corp. v. Dare (1963) 216 Cal.App.2d 50, 55 [30 Cal.Rptr. 629].)
- "[T]here are two causation elements in a fraud cause of action. First, the plaintiff's actual and justifiable reliance on the defendant's misrepresentation must have caused him to take a detrimental course of action. Second, the detrimental action taken by the plaintiff must have caused his alleged damage." (Beckwith, supra, 205 Cal.App.4th at p. 1062.)
- "A 'complete causal relationship' between the fraud or deceit and the plaintiff's damages is required. . . . Causation requires proof that the defendant's conduct was a " 'substantial factor' " in bringing about the harm to the plaintiff." (Williams v. Wraxall (1995) 33 Cal.App.4th 120, 132 [39 Cal.Rptr.2d 658], internal citations omitted.)

- " ' "Misrepresentation, even maliciously committed, does not support a cause of action unless the plaintiff suffered consequential damages." ' " [Citation.]' [Citation.] Indeed, ' " '[a]ssuming . . . a claimant's reliance on the actionable misrepresentation, no liability attaches if the damages sustained were otherwise inevitable or due to unrelated causes.' [Citation.]" [Citation.] [If the defrauded plaintiff would have suffered the alleged damage even in the absence of the fraudulent inducement, causation cannot be alleged and a fraud cause of action cannot be sustained.' " (Orcilla v. Big Sur, Inc. (2016) 244 Cal.App.4th 982, 1008 [198 Cal.Rptr.3d 715].)
- "The law is well established that actionable misrepresentations must pertain to past or existing material facts. Statements or predictions regarding future events are deemed to be mere opinions which are not actionable." (Cansino v. Bank of America (2014) 224 Cal.App.4th 1462, 1469 [169 Cal.Rptr.3d 619], internal citation omitted.)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 294, 883, 939, 943, 944, 949

3 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 40, Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts, §§ 40.02, 40.05 (Matthew Bender)

23 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit, § 269.19 (Matthew Bender)

10 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 105, Fraud and Deceit, § 105.80 et seq. (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Torts § 22:12 (Thomson Reuters)

1901. Concealment

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was harmed because [name of defendant] concealed certain information. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

[1. (a) That [*name of defendant] and [name of plaintiff] were [insert type of fiduciary relationship, e.g., "business partners"]; and

(b) That [*name of defendant] intentionally failed to disclose certain facts to [name of plaintiff];]

[or]

[1. That [*name of defendant] disclosed some facts to [name of plaintiff] but intentionally failed to disclose [other/another] fact[s], making the disclosure deceptive;]

[or]

[1. That [*name of defendant] intentionally failed to disclose certain facts that were known only to [him/her/nonbinary pronoun/it] and that [name of plaintiff] could not have discovered;]

[or]

[1. That [*name of defendant] prevented [name of plaintiff] from discovering certain facts;]

2. That [*name of plaintiff] did not know of the concealed fact[s];

3. That [*name of defendant] intended to deceive [name of plaintiff] by concealing the fact[s];

4. That had the omitted information been disclosed, [*name of plaintiff] reasonably would have behaved differently;

5. That [*name of plaintiff] was harmed; and

6. That [*name of defendant]'s concealment was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003; Revised October 2004, December 2012, June 2014, June 2015

Directions for Use

Give this instruction if it is alleged that the defendant concealed certain information to the detriment of the plaintiff. (See Civ. Code, § 1710(3).) Element 2 may be deleted if the third option for element 1 is selected.

Regarding element 1, before there can be liability for concealment, there must usually be a duty to disclose arising from a fiduciary or confidential relationship between the parties. However, in transactions that do not involve fiduciary or confidential relations, a duty to disclose material facts may arise in at least three instances: (1) the defendant makes representations but does not disclose facts that materially qualify the facts disclosed, or that render his disclosure likely to mislead (option 2); (2) the facts are known or accessible only to defendant, and defendant knows they are not known to or reasonably discoverable by the plaintiff (option 3); (3) the defendant actively conceals discovery from the plaintiff (option 4). (See Warner Constr. Corp. v. L.A. (1970) 2 Cal.3d 285, 294 [85 Cal. Rptr. 444, 466 P.2d 996].) For the second, third, and fourth options, if the defendant asserts that there was no relationship based on a transaction giving rise to a duty to disclose, the jury should also be instructed to determine whether the requisite relationship existed. (See Hoffman v. 162 North Wolfe LLC (2014) 228 Cal.App.4th 1178, 1187 [175 Cal.Rptr.3d 820].)

If element 4 is contested, give CACI No. 1907, Reliance, and CACI No. 1908, Reasonable Reliance. To avoid any possible confusion created by using "rely on the concealment" (see Mirkin v. Wasserman (1993) 5 Cal.4th 1082, 1093 [23 Cal.Rptr.2d 101, 858 P.2d 568].), CACI Nos. 1907 and 1908 may be modified to replace the words "rely," "relied," and "reliance" with language based on "behave differently" from element 4. It must have been reasonable for the plaintiff to have behaved differently had the omitted information been disclosed. (See Hoffman, supra, 228 Cal.App.4th at p. 1194 [concealment case].)

Sources and Authority

- Concealment. Civil Code section 1710(3).
- "[T]he elements of an action for fraud and deceit based on a concealment are: (1) the defendant must have concealed or suppressed a material fact, (2) the defendant must have been under a duty to disclose the fact to the plaintiff, (3) the defendant must have intentionally concealed or suppressed the fact with the intent to defraud the plaintiff, (4) the plaintiff must have been unaware of the fact and would not have acted as he did if he had known of the concealed or suppressed fact, and (5) as a result of the concealment or suppression of the fact, the plaintiff must have sustained damage." (Boschma v. Home Loan Center, Inc. (2011) 198 Cal.App.4th 230, 248 [129 Cal.Rptr.3d 874].)
- "A duty to speak may arise in four ways: it may be directly imposed by statute or other prescriptive law; it may be voluntarily assumed by contractual undertaking; it may arise as an incident of a relationship between the defendant and the plaintiff; and it may arise as a result of other conduct by the defendant that makes it wrongful for him to remain silent." (SCC Acquisitions, Inc. v. Central Pacific Bank (2012) 207 Cal.App.4th 859, 860 [143 Cal.Rptr.3d 711].)
- "In transactions which do not involve fiduciary or confidential relations, a cause of action for non-disclosure of material facts may arise in at least three instances: (1) the defendant makes representations but does not disclose facts which materially qualify the facts disclosed, or which render his disclosure likely to mislead; (2) the facts are known or accessible only to defendant, and defendant knows they are not known to or reasonably discoverable by the plaintiff; (3) the defendant actively conceals discovery from the plaintiff." (Warner Construction Corp., supra, 2 Cal.3d at p. 294, footnotes omitted.)

- "[O]ther than the first instance, in which there must be a fiduciary relationship between the parties, 'the other three circumstances in which nondisclosure may be actionable: presuppose[] the existence of some other relationship between the plaintiff and defendant in which a duty to disclose can arise. . . . "[W]here material facts are known to one party and not to the other, failure to disclose them is not actionable fraud unless there is some relationship between the parties which gives rise to a duty to disclose such known facts." [Citation.]' A relationship between the parties is present if there is 'some sort of transaction between the parties. [Citations.] Thus, a duty to disclose may arise from the relationship between seller and buyer, employer and prospective employee, doctor and patient, or parties entering into any kind of contractual agreement.' " (Hoffman, supra, 228 Cal.App.4th at p. 1187, original italics, internal citations omitted.)
- "Even if a fiduciary relationship is not involved, a non-disclosure claim arises when the defendant makes representations but fails to disclose additional facts which materially qualify the facts disclosed, or which render the disclosure likely to mislead." (Roddenberry v. Roddenberry (1996) 44 Cal.App.4th 634, 666 [51 Cal.Rptr.2d 907], internal citations omitted.)
- " '[T]he rule has long been settled in this state that although one may be under no duty to speak as to a matter, "if he undertakes to do so, either voluntarily or in response to inquiries, he is bound not only to state truly what he tells but also not to suppress or conceal any facts within his knowledge which materially qualify those stated. If he speaks at all he must make a full and fair disclosure." ' " (Marketing West, Inc. v. Sanyo Fisher (USA) Corp. (1992) 6 Cal.App.4th 603, 613 [7 Cal.Rptr.2d 859].)
- "While a reasonable jury could, and in this case did, find these warnings inadequate for product liability purposes given [defendant]'s knowledge of the risk of NFCI's, these statements are not 'misleading "half-truths" ' that give rise to a duty to disclose in the absence of an otherwise sufficient relationship or transaction. To hold otherwise would unduly conflate two distinct areas of law, products liability and fraud, and transform every instance of inadequate product warning into a potential claim for fraud." (Bigler-Engler v. Breg, Inc. (2017) 7 Cal.App.5th 276, 313-314 [213 Cal.Rptr.3d 82].)
- "[F]raudulent intent is an issue for the trier of fact to decide." (Beckwith v. Dahl (2012) 205 Cal.App.4th 1039, 1061 [141 Cal.Rptr.3d 142].)
- "[T]here are two causation elements in a fraud cause of action. First, the plaintiff's actual and justifiable reliance on the defendant's misrepresentation must have caused him to take a detrimental course of action. Second, the detrimental action taken by the plaintiff must have caused his alleged damage."

(Beckwith, supra, 205 Cal.App.4th at p. 1062.)

- "[P]laintiffs argue that actual reliance cannot logically be an element of a cause of action for deceit based on an omission because it is impossible to demonstrate reliance on something that one was not told. In support of the argument, plaintiffs cite Affiliated Ute Citizens v. United States, supra, 406 U.S. 128 (Ute) . . . , Interpreting Rule 10b-5, the high court held that 'positive proof of reliance is not a prerequisite to recovery' in a case 'involving primarily a failure to disclose . . . .' [¶] Contrary to plaintiffs' assertion, it is not logically impossible to prove reliance on an omission. One need only prove that, had the omitted information been disclosed, one would have been aware of it and behaved differently." (Mirkin, supra, 5 Cal.4th at p. 1093.)
- "The fact that a false statement may be obviously false to those who are trained and experienced does not change its character, nor take away its power to deceive others less experienced. There is no duty resting upon a citizen to suspect the honesty of those with whom he [or she] transacts business. Laws are made to protect the trusting as well as the suspicious. [T]he rule of caveat emptor should not be relied upon to reward fraud and deception." (Boschma, supra, 198 Cal.App.4th at p. 249, original italics.)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 912–919

Greenwald et al., California Practice Guide: Real Property Transactions, Ch. 11-E, Damages For Fraud, ¶ 11:354 (The Rutter Group)

3 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 40, Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts, § 40.03[2][b] (Matthew Bender)

23 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit, § 269.26 (Matthew Bender)

10 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 105, Fraud and Deceit, § 105.70 et seq. (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Torts § 22:16 (Thomson Reuters)

1902. False Promise

[Name of plaintiff] claims [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was harmed because [name of defendant] made a false promise. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] made a promise to [name of plaintiff];
2. That [name of defendant] did not intend to perform this promise when [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] made it;
3. That [name of defendant] intended that [name of plaintiff] rely on this promise;
4. That [name of plaintiff] reasonably relied on [name of defendant]'s promise;
5. That [name of defendant] did not perform the promised act;
6. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
7. That [name of plaintiff]'s reliance on [name of defendant]'s promise was a substantial factor in causing [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] harm.

New September 2003; Revised December 2012, December 2013

Directions for Use

Give this instruction in a case in which it is alleged that the defendant made a promise without any intention of performing it. (See Civ. Code, § 1710(4).) If element 4 is contested, give CACI No. 1907, Reliance, and CACI No. 1908, Reasonable Reliance.

Sources and Authority

- Deceit. Civil Code section 1710.
- " ' "Promissory fraud" is a subspecies of fraud and deceit. A promise to do something necessarily implies the intention to perform; hence, where a promise is made without such intention, there is an implied misrepresentation of fact that may be actionable fraud.' " (Engalla v. Permanente Medical Group, Inc. (1997) 15 Cal.4th 951, 973–974 [64 Cal.Rptr.2d 843, 938 P.2d 903], internal citations omitted.)
- "Under Civil Code section 1709, one is liable for fraudulent deceit if he 'deceives another with intent to induce him to alter his position to his injury or risk . . . .' Section 1710 of the Civil Code defines deceit for the purposes of Civil Code section 1709 as, inter alia, '[a] promise, made without any intention of performing it.' ' "The elements of fraud, which give rise to the tort action for deceit, are (a) misrepresentation (false representation, concealment, or nondisclosure); (b) knowledge of falsity (or 'scienter'); (c) intent to defraud, i.e., to induce reliance; (d) justifiable reliance; and (e) resulting damage." [Citations.]' Each element must be alleged with particularity." (Beckwith v. Dahl (2012) 205 Cal.App.4th 1039, 1059–1060 [141 Cal.Rptr.3d 142], internal citations omitted.)

- "A promise of future conduct is actionable as fraud only if made without a present intent to perform. 'A declaration of intention, although in the nature of a promise, made in good faith, without intention to deceive, and in the honest expectation that it will be fulfilled, even though it is not carried out, does not constitute a fraud.' Moreover, ' "something more than nonperformance is required to prove the defendant's intent not to perform his promise." . . . [I]f plaintiff adduces no further evidence of fraudulent intent than proof of nonperformance of an oral promise, he will never reach a jury.' " (Magpali v. Farmers Group, Inc. (1996) 48 Cal.App.4th 471, 481 [55 Cal.Rptr.2d 225], internal citations omitted.)
- "[I]n a promissory fraud action, to sufficiently allege[] defendant made a misrepresentation, the complaint must allege (1) the defendant made a representation of intent to perform some future action, i.e., the defendant made a promise, and (2) the defendant did not really have that intent at the time that the promise was made, i.e., the promise was false." (Beckwith, supra, 205 Cal.App.4th at p. 1060.)
- "[F]raudulent intent is an issue for the trier of fact to decide." (Beckwith, supra, 205 Cal.App.4th at p. 1061.)
- "[T]here are two causation elements in a fraud cause of action. First, the plaintiff's actual and justifiable reliance on the defendant's misrepresentation must have caused him to take a detrimental course of action. Second, the detrimental action taken by the plaintiff must have caused his alleged damage." (Beckwith, supra, 205 Cal.App.4th at p. 1062.)
- "An action for promissory fraud may lie where a defendant fraudulently induces the plaintiff to enter into a [written] contract. [Citations.] In such cases, the plaintiff's claim does not depend upon whether the defendant's promise is ultimately enforceable as a contract." (Austin v. Medicis (2018) 21 Cal.App.5th 577, 588 [230 Cal.Rptr.3d 528].)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 899–904

3 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 40, Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts, § 40.03[1][a] (Matthew Bender)

23 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit, § 269.12 (Matthew Bender)

10 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 105, Fraud and Deceit, § 105.30 et seq. (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Torts § 22:20 (Thomson Reuters)

1903. Negligent Misrepresentation

[Name of plaintiff] claims [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] was harmed because [name of defendant] negligently misrepresented a fact. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] represented to [name of plaintiff] that a fact was true;
2. That [name of defendant]'s representation was not true;
3. That [although [name of defendant] may have honestly believed that the representation was true,] [[name of defendant]/he/she/nonbinary pronoun] had no reasonable grounds for believing the representation was true when [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] made it;
4. That [name of defendant] intended that [name of plaintiff] rely on this representation;
5. That [name of plaintiff] reasonably relied on [name of defendant]'s representation;
6. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
7. That [name of plaintiff]'s reliance on [name of defendant]'s representation was a substantial factor in causing [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] harm.

New September 2003; Revised December 2009, December 2013

Directions for Use

Give this instruction in a case in which it is alleged that the defendant made certain representations with no reason to believe that they were true. (See Civ. Code, § 1710(2).) If element 5 is contested, give CACI No. 1907, Reliance, and CACI No. 1908, Reasonable Reliance.

If both negligent misrepresentation and intentional misrepresentation are alleged in the alternative, give both this instruction and CACI No.1900, Intentional Misrepresentation. If only negligent misrepresentation is alleged, the bracketed reference to the defendant's honest belief in the truth of the representation in element 3 may be omitted. (See Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal.4th 370, 407–408 [11 Cal.Rptr.2d 51, 834 P.2d 745].)

Sources and Authority

- Negligent Misrepresentation. Civil Code section 1710.
- "Negligent misrepresentation is a separate and distinct tort, a species of the tort of deceit. 'Where the defendant makes false statements, honestly believing that they are true, but without reasonable ground for such belief, he may be liable for negligent misrepresentation, a form of deceit.' " (Bily, supra, 3 Cal.4th at p. 407, internal citations omitted.)

- "This is not merely a case where the defendants made false representations of matters within their personal knowledge which they had no reasonable grounds for believing to be true. Such acts clearly would constitute actual fraud under California law. In such situations the defendant believes the representations to be true but is without reasonable grounds for such belief. His liability is based on negligent misrepresentation which has been made a form of actionable deceit. On the contrary, in the instant case, the court found that the defendants did not believe in the truth of the statements. Where a person makes statements which he does not believe to be true, in a reckless manner without knowing whether they are true or false, the element of scienter is satisfied and he is liable for intentional misrepresentation." (Yellow Creek Logging Corp. v. Dare (1963) 216 Cal.App.2d 50, 57 [30 Cal.Rptr. 629], original italics, internal citations omitted.)
- "Negligent misrepresentation requires an assertion of fact, falsity of that assertion, and the tortfeasor's lack of reasonable grounds for believing the assertion to be true. It also requires the tortfeasor's intent to induce reliance, justifiable reliance by the person to whom the false assertion of fact was made, and damages to that person. An implied assertion of fact is 'not enough' to support liability." (SI 59 LLC v. Variel Warner Ventures, LLC (2018) 29 Cal.App.5th 146, 154 [239 Cal.Rptr.3d 788], internal citation omitted.)
- " 'To be actionable deceit, the representation need not be made with knowledge of actual falsity, but need only be an "assertion, as a fact, of that which is not true, by one who has no reasonable ground for believing it to be true" and made "with intent to induce [the recipient] to alter his position to his injury or his risk. . . .' " The elements of negligent misrepresentation also include justifiable reliance on the representation, and resulting damage." (B.L.M. v. Sabo & Deitsch (1997) 55 Cal.App.4th 823, 834 [64 Cal.Rptr.2d 335], internal citations omitted.)
- "[Plaintiffs] do not allege negligence. They allege negligent misrepresentation. They are different torts, as the Supreme Court expressly observed in [Bily, supra, 3 Cal.4th at p. 407]: '[N]either the courts (ourselves included), the commentators, nor the authors of the Restatement Second of Torts have made clear or careful distinctions between the tort of negligence and the separate tort of negligent misrepresentation. The distinction is important not only because of the different statutory bases of the two torts, but also because it has practical implications for the trial of cases in complex areas . . . . [¶] Negligent misrepresentation is a separate and distinct tort, a species of the tort of deceit.' In short, the elements of each tort are different. Perhaps more importantly, the policies behind each tort sometimes call for different results even when applied to the same conduct." (Bock v. Hansen (2014) 225 Cal.App.4th 215, 227–228 [170 Cal.Rptr.3d 293].)
- "As is true of negligence, responsibility for negligent misrepresentation rests upon the existence of a legal duty, imposed by contract, statute or otherwise, owed by a defendant to the injured person. The determination of whether a duty exists is primarily a question of law." (Eddy v. Sharp (1988) 199 Cal.App.3d 858, 864 [245 Cal.Rptr. 211], internal citations omitted.)

- "The tort of negligent misrepresentation is similar to fraud, except that it does not require scienter or an intent to defraud. . . . [T]he same elements of intentional fraud also comprise a cause of action for negligent misrepresentation, with the exception that there is no requirement of intent to induce reliance . . . ." (Tenet Healthsystem Desert, Inc. v. Blue Cross of California (2016) 245 Cal.App.4th 821, 845 [199 Cal.Rptr.3d 901], internal citation omitted.)
- "In our view, and to clarify, the proper formulation of the elements is that negligent misrepresentation does require proof of ' "intent to induce another's reliance on the fact misrepresented[.]" ' However, negligent misrepresentation does not require proof of an intent to defraud." (Borman v. Brown (2021) 59 Cal.App.5th 1048, 1061 [273 Cal.Rptr.3d 868], original italics, internal citation omitted.)
- " ' "Where the defendant makes false statements, honestly believing that they are true, but without reasonable ground for such belief, he may be liable for negligent misrepresentation, a form of deceit." ' If defendant's belief 'is both honest and reasonable, the misrepresentation is innocent and there is no tort liability.' " (Diediker v. Peelle Financial Corp. (1997) 60 Cal.App.4th 288, 297 [70 Cal.Rptr.2d 442], internal citations omitted.)
- "[A] cause of action for misrepresentation requires an affirmative statement, not an implied assertion." (RSB Vineyards, LLC v. Orsi (2017) 15 Cal.App.5th 1089, 1102 [223 Cal.Rptr.3d 458].)
- "Whether a defendant had reasonable ground for believing his or her false statement to be true is ordinarily a question of fact." (Quality Wash Group V, Ltd. v. Hallak (1996) 50 Cal.App.4th 1687, 1696 [58 Cal.Rptr.2d 592], internal citations omitted.)
- "[T]here are two causation elements in a fraud cause of action. First, the plaintiff's actual and justifiable reliance on the defendant's misrepresentation must have caused him to take a detrimental course of action. Second, the detrimental action taken by the plaintiff must have caused his alleged damage." (Beckwith v. Dahl (2012) 205 Cal.App.4th 1039, 1062 [141 Cal.Rptr.3d 142].)
- "The law is well established that actionable misrepresentations must pertain to past or existing material facts. Statements or predictions regarding future events are deemed to be mere opinions which are not actionable." (Cansino v. Bank of America (2014) 224 Cal.App.4th 1462, 1469 [169 Cal.Rptr.3d 619], internal citation omitted.)
- "Where, as here, a negligent misrepresentation claim is brought against the provider of a professional opinion based on special knowledge, information or expertise regarding a company's value, the California Supreme Court requires the following: 'The representation must have been made with the intent to induce plaintiff, or a particular class of persons to which plaintiff belongs, to act in reliance upon the representation in a specific transaction, or a specific type of transaction, that defendant intended to influence. Defendant is deemed to have intended to influence [its client's] transaction with plaintiff whenever defendant knows with substantial certainty that plaintiff, or the particular class of persons to which plaintiff belongs, will rely on the representation in the course of the transaction. [However,] [i]f others become aware of the representation and act upon it, there is no liability even though defendant should reasonably have foreseen such a possibility.' " (Public Employees' Retirement System v. Moody's Investors Service, Inc. (2014) 226 Cal.App.4th 643, 667–668 [172 Cal.Rptr.3d 238].)

- "[P]laintiffs rely on section 311 of the Restatement Second of Torts (section 311), which addresses negligent misrepresentation involving physical harm. Under section 311(1), '[o]ne who negligently gives false information to another is subject to liability for physical harm caused by action taken by the other in reasonable reliance upon such information, where such harm results [¶] . . . [¶] to such third persons as the actor should expect to be put in peril by the action taken.' [¶] Section 311's theory of liability is intended to be 'somewhat broader' than that for mere pecuniary loss. It 'finds particular application where it is a part of the actor's business or profession to give information upon which the safety of the recipient or a third person depends.' This court applied and followed section 311 . . ." (T.H. v. Novartis Pharmaceuticals Corp. (2017) 4 Cal.5th 145, 162–163 [226 Cal.Rptr.3d 336, 407 P.3d 18], internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 940–942, 946–949

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 5(I)-H, Negligent Misrepresentation, ¶ 5:781 et seq. (The Rutter Group)

Croskey et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch. 11-D, Negligent Misrepresentation, ¶ 11:41 et seq. (The Rutter Group)

3 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 40, Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts, § 40.10 (Matthew Bender)

23 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit, § 269.14 (Matthew Bender)

10 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 105, Fraud and Deceit, § 105.270 et seq. (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Torts §§ 22:13–22:15 (Thomson Reuters)

1904. Opinions as Statements of Fact

Ordinarily, an opinion is not considered a representation of fact. An opinion is a person's belief that a fact exists, a statement regarding a future event, or a judgment about quality, value, authenticity, or similar matters. However, [*name of defendant]'s opinion is considered a representation of fact if [name of plaintiff] proves that:

[[*Name of defendant] claimed to have special knowledge about the subject matter that [name of plaintiff] did not have;] [or]

[[*Name of defendant] made a representation, not as a casual expression of belief, but in a way that declared the matter to be true;] [or]

[[*Name of defendant] had a relationship of trust and confidence with [name of plaintiff];] [or]

[[*Name of defendant] had some other special reason to expect that [name of plaintiff] would rely on the defendant's opinion.]

New September 2003; Revised April 2004, May 2020

Directions for Use

This is not a stand-alone instruction. It should be read in conjunction with one of the elements instructions (CACI Nos. 1900–1903).

The second bracketed option appears to be limited to cases involving professional opinions. (Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal.4th 370, 408 [11 Cal.Rptr.2d 51, 834 P.2d 745].)

Alternative bracketed options that do not apply to the facts of the case may be deleted.

Sources and Authority

- "Representations of opinion, particularly involving matters of value, are ordinarily not actionable representations of fact. A representation is an opinion ' "if it expresses only (a) the belief of the maker, without certainty, as to the existence of a fact; or (b) his judgment as to quality, value . . . or other matters of judgment." ' " (Graham v. Bank of America, N.A. (2014) 226 Cal.App.4th 594, 606–607 [172 Cal.Rptr.3d 218], internal citations omitted.)
- "Plaintiffs cite the exceptions to the general rule that, to be actionable, a misrepresentation must be of an existing fact, not an opinion or prediction of future events. They arise '(1) where a party holds himself out to be specially qualified and the other party is so situated that he may reasonably rely upon the former's superior knowledge; (2) where the opinion is by a fiduciary or other trusted person; (3) where a party states his opinion as an existing fact or as implying facts which justify a belief in the truth of the opinion. [Citation.]' " (Brakke v. Economic Concepts, Inc. (2013) 213 Cal.App.4th 761, 769 [153 Cal.Rptr.3d 1], internal citation omitted.)

- "[W]hen one of the parties possesses, or assumes to possess, superior knowledge or special information regarding the subject matter of the representation, and the other party is so situated that he may reasonably rely upon such supposed superior knowledge or special information, a representation made by the party possessing or assuming to possess such knowledge or information, though it might be regarded as but the expression of an opinion if made by any other person, is not excused if it be false." (Jolley v. Chase Home Finance, LLC (2013) 213 Cal.App.4th 872, 892 [153 Cal.Rptr.3d 546].)
- "Since the appraisal is a value opinion performed for the benefit of the lender, there is no representation of fact upon which a buyer may reasonably rely." (Graham, supra, 226 Cal.App.4th at p. 607.)
- "Whether a statement is nonactionable opinion or actionable misrepresentation of fact is a question of fact for the jury." (Furla v. Jon Douglas Co. (1998) 65 Cal.App.4th 1069, 1080–1081 [76 Cal.Rptr.2d 911], internal citations omitted.)
- "If defendants' assertion of safety is merely a statement of opinion—mere 'puffing'—they cannot be held liable for its falsity." (Hauter v. Zogarts (1975) 14 Cal.3d 104, 111 [120 Cal.Rptr. 681, 534 P.2d 377].)
- "The alleged false representations in the subject brochures were not statements of 'opinion' or mere 'puffing.' They were, in essence, representations that the DC-10 was a safe aircraft. In Hauter, [supra,] the Supreme Court held that promises of safety are not statements of opinion—they are 'representations of fact.' " (Continental Airlines, Inc. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1989) 216 Cal.App.3d 388, 424 [264 Cal.Rptr. 779].)
- "Under certain circumstances, expressions of professional opinion are treated as representations of fact. When a statement, although in the form of an opinion, is 'not a casual expression of belief' but 'a deliberate affirmation of the matters stated,' it may be regarded as a positive assertion of fact. Moreover, when a party possesses or holds itself out as possessing superior knowledge or special information or expertise regarding the subject matter and a plaintiff is so situated that it may reasonably rely on such supposed knowledge, information, or expertise, the defendant's representation may be treated as one of material fact." (Bily, supra, 3 Cal.4th at p. 408, internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 892–896

3 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 40, Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts, § 40.03[1][b] (Matthew Bender)

23 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit, § 269.17 (Matthew Bender)

10 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 105, Fraud and Deceit, § 105.50 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Torts, §§ 22:21–22:28 (Thomson Reuters)

1905. Definition of Important Fact/Promise

Revoked December 2013

See CACI No. 1908, Reasonable Reliance.

1906. Misrepresentations Made to Persons Other Than the Plaintiff

---

[*Name of defendant] is responsible for a representation that was not made directly to [name of plaintiff] if [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] made the representation [to a group of persons including [name of plaintiff]] [or] [to another person, intending or reasonably expecting that it would be repeated to [name of plaintiff]].

New September 2003

Directions for Use

An instruction on concealment made to a person other than the plaintiff is not necessary; this point is covered by the third option of element 1 in CACI No. 1901, Concealment.

Sources and Authority

- Intent to Defraud Class. Civil Code section 1711.
- "It is true that in order for a defendant to be liable for fraud, he or she must intend that a particular representation (or concealment) be relied upon by a specific person or persons. However, it is also established that a defendant cannot escape liability if he or she makes a representation to one person while intending or having reason to expect that it will be repeated to and acted upon by the plaintiff (or someone in the class of persons of which plaintiff is a member). This is the principle of indirect deception described in section 533 of the Restatement Second of Torts (section 533): 'The maker of a fraudulent misrepresentation is subject to liability for pecuniary loss to another who acts in justifiable reliance upon it if the misrepresentation, although not made directly to the other, is made to a third person and the maker intends or has reason to expect that its terms will be repeated or its substance communicated to the other, and that it will influence his conduct in the transaction or type of transaction involved.' Comment d to section 533 makes it clear the rule of section 533 applies where the maker of the misrepresentation has information that gives him special reason to expect that the information will be communicated to others and will influence their conduct. Comment g goes on to explain that it is not necessary that the maker of the misrepresentation have the particular person in mind. It is enough that it is intended to be repeated to a particular class of persons." (Shapiro v. Sutherland (1998) 64 Cal.App.4th 1534, 1548 [76 Cal.Rptr.2d 101], internal citations omitted; see also Geernaert v. Mitchell (1995) 31 Cal.App.4th 601, 605–606 [37 Cal.Rptr.2d 483].)
- "[L]iability for a fraud worked on an agent is imposed where it is the agent who not only places reliance on the misrepresentations, but also makes the decision and takes action based upon the misrepresentations." (Hasso v. Hapke (2014)

227 Cal.App.4th 107, 129 [173 Cal.Rptr.3d 356].)

- "The maker of a fraudulent misrepresentation is subject to liability for pecuniary loss to another who acts in justifiable reliance upon it if the misrepresentation, although not made directly to the other, is made to a third person and the maker intends or has reason to expect that its terms will be repeated or its substance communicated to the other, and that it will influence his conduct in the transaction or type of transactions involved." (Hasso, supra, 227 Cal.App.4th at p. 130.)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 922–926

3 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 40, Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts, § 40.05[3] (Matthew Bender)

23 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit, § 269.14 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Torts, § 22:34 (Thomson Reuters)

1907. Reliance

[*Name of plaintiff] relied on [name of defendant]'s [misrepresentation/concealment/false promise] if:

1. The [misrepresentation/concealment/false promise] substantially influenced [him/her/nonbinary pronoun/it] to [insert brief description of the action, e.g., "buy the house"]; and
2. [He/She/Nonbinary pronoun/It] would probably not have [e.g., bought the house] without the [misrepresentation/concealment/false promise].

It is not necessary for a [misrepresentation/concealment/false promise] to be the only reason for [*name of plaintiff]'s conduct.

New September 2003; Revised December 2013

Directions for Use

Give this instruction with one of the fraud causes of action (see CACI Nos. 1900–1903), all of which require actual reliance on the statement or omission at issue. Reliance must be both actual and reasonable. Give also CACI No. 1908, Reasonable Reliance.

Sources and Authority

- "It is settled that a plaintiff, to state a cause of action for deceit based on a misrepresentation, must plead that he or she actually relied on the misrepresentation." (Mirkin v. Wasserman (1993) 5 Cal.4th 1082, 1088 [23 Cal.Rptr.2d 101, 858 P.2d 568], internal citations omitted.)
- "Actual reliance occurs when a misrepresentation is ' "an immediate cause of [a plaintiff's] conduct, which alters his legal relations," ' and when, absent such representation, ' "he would not, in all reasonable probability, have entered into the contract or other transaction." ' 'It is not . . . necessary that [a plaintiff's] reliance upon the truth of the fraudulent misrepresentation be the sole or even the predominant or decisive factor in influencing his conduct. . . . It is enough that the representation has played a substantial part, and so has been a substantial factor, in influencing his decision.' " (Engalla v. Permanente Medical Group, Inc. (1997) 15 Cal.4th 951, 976–977 [64 Cal.Rptr.2d 843, 938 P.2d 903], internal citations omitted.)
- "In establishing the reliance element of a cause of action for fraud, it is settled that the alleged fraud need not be the sole cause of a party's reliance. Instead, reliance may be established on the basis of circumstantial evidence showing the alleged fraudulent misrepresentation or concealment substantially influenced the party's choice, even though other influences may have operated as well."

(Sangster v. Paetkau (1998) 68 Cal.App.4th 151, 170 [80 Cal.Rptr.2d 66], internal citations omitted.)

- "[A] presumption, or at least an inference, of reliance arises wherever there is a showing that a misrepresentation was material. A misrepresentation is judged to be 'material' if 'a reasonable man would attach importance to its existence or nonexistence in determining his choice of action in the transaction in question' and as such, materiality is generally a question of fact unless the 'fact misrepresented is so obviously unimportant that the jury could not reasonably find that a reasonable man would have been influenced by it.' " (Engalla, supra, 15 Cal.4th at p. 977.)
- " 'It must be shown that the plaintiff actually relied upon the misrepresentation; i.e., that the representation was "an immediate cause of his conduct which alters his legal relations," and that without such representation, "he would not, in all reasonable probability, have entered into the contract or other transaction." ' " (Okun v. Morton (1988) 203 Cal.App.3d 805, 828 [250 Cal.Rptr. 220], internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 928–937

3 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 40, Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts, §§ 40.05–40.06 (Matthew Bender)

23 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit, § 269.15 et seq. (Matthew Bender)

10 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 105, Fraud and Deceit, § 105.200 et seq. (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Torts § 22:31 (Thomson Reuters)

1908. Reasonable Reliance

In determining whether [name of plaintiff]'s reliance on the [misrepresentation/concealment/false promise] was reasonable, [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] must first prove that the matter was material. A matter is material if a reasonable person would find it important in deciding what to do.

If you decide that the matter is material, you must then decide whether it was reasonable for [name of plaintiff] to rely on the [misrepresentation/concealment/false promise]. In making this decision, take into consideration [name of plaintiff]'s intelligence, knowledge, education, and experience.

However, it is not reasonable for anyone to rely on a [misrepresentation/concealment/false promise] that is preposterous. It also is not reasonable for anyone to rely on a [misrepresentation/concealment/false promise] if facts that are within [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] observation show that it is obviously false.

New September 2003; Revised October 2004, December 2013, May 2020

Directions for Use

There would appear to be three considerations in determining reasonable reliance. First, the representation or promise must be material, as judged by a reasonable-person standard. (Charpentier v. Los Angeles Rams (1999) 75 Cal.App.4th 301, 312–313 [89 Cal.Rptr.2d 115].) Second, if the matter is material, reasonableness must take into account the plaintiff's own knowledge, education, and experience; the objective reasonable person is irrelevant at this step. Third, some matters are simply too preposterous to be believed by anyone, notwithstanding limited knowledge, education, and experience. (Blankenheim v. E. F. Hutton, Co., Inc. (1990) 217 Cal.App.3d 1463, 1474 [266 Cal.Rptr. 593].)

See also CACI No. 1907, Reliance.

Sources and Authority

- "After establishing actual reliance, the plaintiff must show that the reliance was reasonable by showing that (1) the matter was material in the sense that a reasonable person would find it important in determining how he or she would act, and (2) it was reasonable for the plaintiff to have relied on the misrepresentation." (Hoffman v. 162 North Wolfe LLC (2014) 228 Cal.App.4th 1178, 1194 [175 Cal.Rptr.3d 820], internal citations omitted.)
- "According to the Restatement of Torts, '[r]eliance upon a fraudulent misrepresentation is not justifiable unless the matter misrepresented is material. . . . The matter is material if . . . a reasonable [person] would attach importance to its existence or nonexistence in determining his choice of action in the transaction in question . . . .' But materiality is a jury question, and a 'court may [only] withdraw the case from the jury if the fact misrepresented is so obviously unimportant that the jury could not reasonably find that a reasonable man would have been influenced by it.' " (Charpentier, supra, 75 Cal.App.4th at pp. 312–313, internal citations omitted.)

- "[T]he issue is whether the person who claims reliance was justified in believing the representation in the light of his own knowledge and experience." (Gray v. Don Miller & Associates, Inc. (1984) 35 Cal.3d 498, 503 [198 Cal.Rptr. 551, 674 P.2d 253], internal citations omitted.)
- "[N]or is a plaintiff held to the standard of precaution or of minimum knowledge of a hypothetical, reasonable man. Exceptionally gullible or ignorant people have been permitted to recover from defendants who took advantage of them in circumstances where persons of normal intelligence would not have been misled. 'No rogue should enjoy his ill-gotten plunder for the simple reason that his victim is by chance a fool.' " (Blankenheim, supra, 217 Cal.App.3d at p. 1474, internal citations omitted.)
- "[G]enerally speaking, ' "[a] plaintiff will be denied recovery only if his conduct is manifestly unreasonable in the light of his own intelligence or information. It must appear that he put faith in representations that were 'preposterous' or 'shown by facts within his observation to be so patently and obviously false that he must have closed his eyes to avoid discovery of the truth.' [Citation.] Even in case of a mere negligent misrepresentation, a plaintiff is not barred unless his conduct, in the light of his own information and intelligence, is preposterous and irrational. . . . The effectiveness of disclaimers is assessed in light of these principles. [Citation.]" ' " (Public Employees' Retirement System v. Moody's Investors Service, Inc. (2014) 226 Cal.App.4th 643, 673 [172 Cal.Rptr.3d 238].)
- "[I]f the conduct of the plaintiff in the light of his own intelligence and information was manifestly unreasonable, however, he will be denied a recovery." (Thrifty Payless, Inc. v. The Americana at Brand, LLC (2013) 218 Cal.App.4th 1230, 1239 [160 Cal.Rptr.3d 718].)
- "Except in the rare case where the undisputed facts leave no room for a reasonable difference of opinion, the question of whether a plaintiff's reliance is reasonable is a question of fact." (Beckwith v. Dahl (2012) 205 Cal.App.4th 1039, 1067 [141 Cal.Rptr.3d 142].)
- " 'What would constitute fraud in a given instance might not be fraudulent when exercised toward another person. The test of the representation is its actual effect on the particular mind . . . .' " (Blankenheim, supra, 217 Cal.App.3d at p. 1475, internal citation omitted.)
- "[Plaintiff]'s deposition testimony on which appellants rely also reveals that she is a practicing attorney and uses releases in her practice. In essence, she is asking this court to rule that a practicing attorney can rely on the advice of an equestrian instructor as to the validity of a written release of liability that she executed without reading. In determining whether one can reasonably or justifiably rely on an alleged misrepresentation, the knowledge, education and experience of the person claiming reliance must be considered. Under these circumstances, we conclude as a matter of law that any such reliance was not reasonable." (Guido v. Koopman (1991) 1 Cal.App.4th 837, 843–844 [2 Cal.Rptr.2d 437], internal citations omitted.)

- "[I]t is inherently unreasonable for any person to rely on a prediction of future IRS enactment, enforcement, or non-enforcement of the law by someone unaffiliated with the federal government. As such, the reasonable reliance element of any fraud claim based on these predictions fails as a matter of law." (Brakke v. Economic Concepts, Inc. (2013) 213 Cal.App.4th 761, 769 [153 Cal.Rptr.3d 1].)
- "[A] presumption, or at least an inference, of reliance arises wherever there is a showing that a misrepresentation was material. A misrepresentation is judged to be 'material' if 'a reasonable man would attach importance to its existence or nonexistence in determining his choice of action in the transaction in question' and as such, materiality is generally a question of fact unless the 'fact misrepresented is so obviously unimportant that the jury could not reasonably find that a reasonable man would have been influenced by it.' " (Engalla v. Permanente Medical Group, Inc. (1997) 15 Cal.4th 951, 977 [64 Cal.Rptr.2d 843, 938 P.2d 903], internal citations omitted.)
- "[I]t is well established that the kind of disclaimers and exculpatory documents—such as the 'estoppel' attached to the lease and signed by [plaintiff] that disavowed any representations made by landlord or its agents to him—do not operate to insulate defrauding parties from liability or preclude [plaintiff] from demonstrating justifiable reliance on misrepresentations." (Orozco v. WPV San Jose, LLC (2019) 36 Cal.App.5th 375, 393 [248 Cal.Rptr.3d 623].)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 933–937

3 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 40, Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts, § 40.06 (Matthew Bender)

23 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit, § 269.19 (Matthew Bender)

10 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 105, Fraud and Deceit, § 105.229 (Matthew Bender)

2 California Civil Practice: Torts, § 22:32 (Thomson Reuters)

1909. Reserved for Future Use

1910. Real Estate Seller's Nondisclosure of Material Facts

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] failed to disclose certain information, and that because of this failure to disclose, [name of plaintiff] was harmed. In order to establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] purchased [describe real property] from [name of defendant];
2. That [name of defendant] knew that [specify information that was not disclosed];
3. That [name of defendant] did not disclose this information to [name of plaintiff];
4. That [name of plaintiff] did not know, and could not reasonably have discovered, this information;
5. That [name of defendant] knew that [name of plaintiff] did not know, and could not reasonably have discovered, this information;
6. That this information significantly affected the value or desirability of the property;
7. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
8. That [name of defendant]'s failure to disclose the information was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New December 2009; Revised May 2020

Directions for Use

This instruction sets forth the common law duty of disclosure that a real estate seller has to a buyer. Nondisclosure is tantamount to a misrepresentation. (See Calemine v. Samuelson (2009) 171 Cal.App.4th 153, 161 [89 Cal.Rptr.3d 495].)

For certain transfers, there is also a statutory duty of disclosure. (See Civ. Code, § 1102 et seq.) The scope of the required disclosure is set forth on a statutory form. (See Civ. Code, § 1102.6.) The common law duty is not preempted by the statutory duty (see Civ. Code, § 1102.1(a)), but breach of the statutory duty can constitute proof of breach of the common law duty if all of the elements are established. (See, e.g., Calemine, supra, 171 Cal.App.4th at pp. 164–165 [seller did not disclose earlier lawsuits, as required by statutory form].)

Sources and Authority

- Real Estate Buyer's Action Against Seller. Civil Code section 1102.13.

- " 'A real estate seller has both a common law and statutory duty of disclosure. . . . "In the context of a real estate transaction, '[i]t is now settled in California that where the seller knows of facts materially affecting the value or desirability of the property . . . and also knows that such facts are not known to, or within the reach of the diligent attention and observation of the buyer, the seller is under a duty to disclose them to the buyer. [Citations.]' [Citations.] Undisclosed facts are material if they would have a significant and measurable effect on market value. [Citation.]" . . . Where a seller fails to disclose a material fact, he may be subject to liability 'for mere nondisclosure since his conduct in the transaction amounts to a representation of the nonexistence of the facts which he has failed to disclose [citation]." [Citation.]' " (RSB Vineyards, LLC v. Orsi (2017) 15 Cal.App.5th 1089, 1097 [223 Cal.Rptr.3d 458], original italics.)
- "Generally, whether the undisclosed matter was of sufficient materiality to have affected the value or desirability of the property is a question of fact." (Calemine, supra, 171 Cal.App.4th at p. 161, internal citations omitted.)
- "Actual knowledge can, and often is, shown by inference from circumstantial evidence. In that case, however, ' "actual knowledge can be inferred from the circumstances only if, in the light of the evidence, such inference is not based on speculation or conjecture. Only where the circumstances are such that the defendant 'must have known' and not 'should have known' will an inference of actual knowledge be permitted." ' " (RSB Vineyards, LLC, supra, 15 Cal.App.5th at p. 1098, internal citation omitted.)
- "Generally, where one party to a transaction has sole knowledge or access to material facts and knows that such facts are not known or reasonably discoverable by the other party, then a duty to disclose exists." (See Shapiro v. Sutherland (1998) 64 Cal.App.4th 1534, 1544 [76 Cal.Rptr.2d 101].)
- "Failure of the seller to fulfill [the] duty of disclosure constitutes actual fraud." (Lingsch v. Savage (1963) 213 Cal.App.2d 729, 736 [29 Cal.Rptr. 201].)
- "When and where the action by the purchaser is based on conditions that are visible and that a personal inspection at once discloses and, when it is admitted that such personal inspection was in fact made, then manifestly it cannot be successfully contended that the purchaser relied upon any alleged misrepresentations with regard to such visible conditions. But personal inspection is no defense when and where the conditions are not visible and are known only to the seller, and 'where material facts are accessible to the vendor only and he knows them not to be within the reach of the diligent attention and observation of the vendee, the vendor is bound to disclose such facts to the vendee.' " (Buist v. C. Dudley De Velbiss Corp. (1960) 182 Cal.App.2d 325, 331 [6 Cal.Rptr. 259].)
- "In enacting [Civil Code section 1102 et seq.], the Legislature made clear it did not intend to alter a seller's common law duty of disclosure. The purpose of the enactment was instead to make the required disclosures specific and clear.

(Calemine, supra, 171 Cal.App.4th at pp. 161–162.)

- "The legislation was sponsored by the California Association of Realtors to provide a framework for formal disclosure of facts relevant to a decision to purchase realty. The statute therefore confirms and perhaps clarifies a disclosure obligation that existed previously at common law." (Shapiro, supra, 64 Cal.App.4th at p. 1539, fn. 6.)

Secondary Sources

1 California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 71, Real Property Purchase and Sale Agreements, § 71.30 (Matthew Bender)

10 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 103, Brokers, § 103.31 (Matthew Bender)

50 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 569, Vendor and Purchaser of Real Property, § 569.11 (Matthew Bender)

2A California Points and Authorities, Ch. 31, Brokers and Salesperson, § 31.142 (Matthew Bender)

Greenwald et al., California Practice Guide: Real Property Transactions, Ch. 4-E, Purchase and Sale Agreement—Terms and Conditions, ¶ 4:351 et seq. (The Rutter Group)

1911–1919. Reserved for Future Use

1920. Buyer's Damages for Purchase or Acquisition of Property

---

If you decide that [*name of plaintiff] has proved [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] claim against [name of defendant], you also must decide how much money will reasonably compensate [name of plaintiff] for the harm. This compensation is called "damages."

[*Name of plaintiff] must prove the amount of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] damages. However, [name of plaintiff] does not have to prove the exact amount of damages that will provide reasonable compensation for the harm. You must not speculate or guess in awarding damages.

The following are the specific items of damages claimed by [*name of plaintiff]:

1. The difference between [the amount that [name of plaintiff] paid] [or] [the fair market value of what [name of plaintiff] exchanged for the property] and the fair market value of the property at the time of sale;
2. Amounts that [name of plaintiff] reasonably spent in reliance on [name of defendant]'s [false representation/failure to disclose/promise] if those amounts would not otherwise have been spent in the purchase or acquisition of the property; [and]
3. [Insert additional harm arising from the transaction] to the extent that [name of defendant]'s [false representation/failure to disclose/promise] was a substantial factor in causing that [insert additional harm arising from the transaction]; [and]
4. [Lost profits [or other gains].]

New September 2003

Directions for Use

For an instruction on damages for loss of use, see CACI No. 3903G, Loss of Use of Real Property (Economic Damage).

The first element of this instruction should be modified in cases involving promissory fraud: "In cases of promissory fraud, the damages are measured by market value as of the date the promise was breached because that is the date when the damage occurred." (Glendale Fed. Sav. & Loan Assn. v. Marina View Heights Dev. Co. (1977) 66 Cal.App.3d 101, 145–146 [135 Cal.Rptr. 802].)

Sources and Authority

- Fraud in Sale of Property: Buyer's Damages. Civil Code section 3343.
- "As they apply to damages for fraud, subdivisions (a)(2) and (a)(3) of section

3343 are limited to recovery of damages by sellers of real property, while subdivision (a)(4) deals with purchasers of real property." (Channell v. Anthony (1976) 58 Cal.App.3d 290, 309 [129 Cal.Rptr. 704], footnote omitted.)

- "Before 1935 the California courts had no statutory mandate on the measure of damages for fraud. While the 'benefit of the bargain' measure of damages was generally employed, on occasion California courts sometimes applied the 'out of pocket' rule when the 'loss of bargain' rule was difficult to apply or would work a hardship on plaintiff or defendant." (Channell, supra, 58 Cal.App.3d at p. 309.)
- "We find nothing in section 3343 as amended which requires that a plaintiff show 'out-of-pocket' loss (i.e., an amount by which the consideration paid exceeded the value of the property received) in order to be entitled to any recovery for fraud in a property transaction." (Stout v. Turney (1978) 22 Cal.3d 718, 729 [150 Cal.Rptr. 637, 586 P.2d 1228].)
- "All doubt concerning this matter was set at rest, however, in the carefully considered opinion in Bagdasarian v. Gragnon (1948) 31 Cal.2d 744, 753 [192 P.2d 935] where it was definitely and finally determined that the term 'actual value,' as used in the statute, was that same market value so frequently defined in actions for condemnation." (Nece v. Bennett (1963) 212 Cal.App.2d 494, 497 [28 Cal.Rptr. 117], internal citation omitted.)
- "[P]ursuant to Civil Code section 3343, amounts paid for escrow fees, moving to and from the property, building permits, telephone connections, fences, yard cleaning, garage materials, door locks, shrubbery, taxes, rent and labor are examples of recoverable damages when reasonably expended in reliance on the fraud." (Cory v. Villa Properties (1986) 180 Cal.App.3d 592, 603 [225 Cal.Rptr. 628], internal citations omitted.)
- "To recover damages for fraud, a plaintiff must have sustained damages proximately caused by the misrepresentation. A damage award for fraud will be reversed where the injury is not related to the misrepresentation." (Las Palmas Associates v. Las Palmas Center Associates (1991) 235 Cal.App.3d 1220, 1252 [1 Cal.Rptr.2d 301], internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

6 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 1897–1899

3 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 40, Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts, § 40.23 (Matthew Bender)

23 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender)

10 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 105, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender)

1921. Buyer's Damages for Purchase or Acquisition of Property—Lost Profits

---

[Name of plaintiff] may recover damages for profits [or other gains] [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] would have made if the property had been as represented. [Name of plaintiff] can recover these profits [or other gains] only if [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] has proved all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] acquired the property for the purpose of using or reselling it for a [profit/gain];
2. That [name of plaintiff] reasonably relied on [name of defendant]'s [false representation/failure to disclose/promise] in entering into the transaction and in anticipating [profits/gains] from the use or sale of the property; and
3. That [name of defendant]'s [false representation/failure to disclose/promise] and [name of plaintiff]'s reliance on it were both substantial factors in causing the lost profits.

You do not have to calculate the amount of the lost profits with mathematical precision, but there must be a reasonable basis for computing the loss.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

This instruction should be read immediately after CACI No. 1920, Buyer's Damages for Purchase or Acquisition of Property, if the plaintiff is claiming lost profits.

Sources and Authority

- Fraud in Sale of Property: Buyer's Damages for Lost Profits. Civil Code section 3343(a)(4).
- "With glaring inconsistency, California's statutory structure before 1971 permitted recovery of lost profits and earnings under Civil Code section 3333 in fraud cases which did not concern the 'purchase, sale or exchange of property,' and even in simple negligence cases and breach of contract cases the injured parties could recover lost profits and earnings, while the 'out of pocket' rule barred the fraud victim in property transaction cases from recovering more than the difference between the amount he paid for the property and its actual value." (Channell v. Anthony (1976) 58 Cal.App.3d 290, 312 [129 Cal.Rptr. 704], internal citations and footnote omitted.)
- "The Legislature removed all doubt concerning the recovery of loss of profits resulting from the fraudulently induced property acquisition. Clearly and specifically, lost profits proximately caused are recoverable. The cases cited, the arguments made concerning Civil Code section 3343 limitations are simply not relevant to post-1971 proceedings, where profits are the claimed loss. Civil Code section 3343 as amended, in so many words, authorizes recovery of lost profits." (Hartman v. Shell Oil Co. (1977) 68 Cal.App.3d 240, 247 [137 Cal.Rptr. 244].)

Secondary Sources

6 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 1897–1899

3 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 40, Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts, § 40.23 (Matthew Bender)

23 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender)

10 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 105, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender)

1922. Seller's Damages for Sale or Exchange of Property

If you decide that [*name of plaintiff] has proved [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] claim against [name of defendant], you also must decide how much money will reasonably compensate [name of plaintiff] for the harm. This compensation is called "damages."

[*Name of plaintiff] must prove the amount of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] damages. However, [name of plaintiff] does not have to prove the exact amount of damages that will provide reasonable compensation for the harm. You must not speculate or guess in awarding damages.

The following are the specific items of damages claimed by [*name of plaintiff]:

1. The difference between the fair market value of the property at the time of sale and [the amount that [name of plaintiff] received] [or] [the fair market value of what [name of plaintiff] received in exchange for the property];
2. Amounts that [name of plaintiff] reasonably spent in reliance on [name of defendant]'s [false representation/failure to disclose/promise] if those amounts would not otherwise have been spent in the sale or exchange of the property;
3. Loss of use and enjoyment of the property from [insert beginning date] to [insert end date], to the extent that [name of defendant]'s [false representation/failure to disclose/promise] was a substantial factor in causing that loss of use and enjoyment of the property;
4. Profits or other gains from [insert beginning date] to [insert end date], that [name of plaintiff] might reasonably have earned by use of the property if [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] had kept it; and
5. Any additional damage arising from the particular transaction.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

This instruction should be tailored to fit the facts and evidence in the particular case: "If the seller parts with title and elects to forego his right of rescission and sue for damages only, then of course subdivisions (a)(2) and (a)(3) of section 3343 do not apply and should not be given by the trial court (unless, as here, the contract itself creates such rights). In each case in which a seller of property is defrauded by a buyer, the trial court will have to examine the circumstances of the particular case and decide whether the questioned portions of section 3343 do or do not apply." (Channell v. Anthony (1976) 58 Cal.App.3d 290, 317 [129 Cal.Rptr. 704].)

The first element of this instruction should be modified in cases involving promissory fraud: "In cases of promissory fraud, the damages are measured by market value as of the date the promise was breached because that is the date when the damage occurred." (Glendale Fed. Sav. & Loan Assn. v. Marina View Heights Dev. Co. (1977) 66 Cal.App.3d 101, 145–146 [135 Cal.Rptr. 802].)

For an instruction on lost profits, see CACI No. 3903N, Lost Profits (Economic Damage).

Sources and Authority

- Fraud in Sale of Property: Seller's Damages. Civil Code section 3343.
- "As they apply to damages for fraud, subdivisions (a)(2) and (a)(3) of section 3343 are limited to recovery of damages by sellers of real property, while subdivision (a)(4) deals with purchasers of real property." (Channell, supra, 58 Cal.App.3d at p. 309, footnote omitted.)
- "Before 1935 the California courts had no statutory mandate on the measure of damages for fraud. While the 'benefit of the bargain' measure of damages was generally employed, on occasion California courts sometimes applied the 'out of pocket' rule when the 'loss of bargain' rule was difficult to apply or would work a hardship on plaintiff or defendant." (Channell, supra, 58 Cal.App.3d at p. 309, footnote omitted.)
- "The 1971 amendment to section 3343 took the form of an addition to the 'out of pocket' rule. The statute had previously permitted recovery of 'additional damages,' but the 1971 amendment enumerated specific types of consequential damages which are included within the term 'additional damages.' " (Channell, supra, 58 Cal.App.3d at p. 312, footnote omitted.)
- "[T]he legislature clearly ruled out by the 1971 amendment any recovery of damages for fraud measured by the traditional 'loss of bargain' formula." (Channell, supra, 58 Cal.App.3d at p. 313, footnote omitted.)
- "[O]ut of pocket" loss under section 3343 is "the difference between what [plaintiffs] received for their property and the fair market value of the same at the time of the transfer." (Channell, supra, 58 Cal.App.3d at p. 314.)
- "[N]othing in section 3343 as amended . . . requires that a plaintiff show 'out-of-pocket' loss (i.e., an amount by which the consideration paid exceeded the value of the property received) in order to be entitled to any recovery for fraud in a property transaction." (Stout v. Turney (1978) 22 Cal.3d 718, 730 [150 Cal.Rptr. 637, 586 P.2d 1228].)
- "In the absence of a fiduciary relationship, section 3343 governs the measure of damages in fraudulent property transactions." (Croeni v. Goldstein (1994) 21 Cal.App.4th 754, 759 [26 Cal.Rptr.2d 412].)
- "In the case of a seller . . . the defrauded victim is entitled to recover not only the difference between the actual value of that with which he parted and the actual value of that which he received (out-of-pocket) but also any additional damage arising from the particular transaction including any of the following: 1. amounts expended in reliance upon the fraud; 2. amounts compensating for loss of use and enjoyment of the property due to the fraud; and 3. an amount which would compensate him for the profits or other gains by the use of the property had he retained it." (Channell, supra, 58 Cal.App.3d at p. 312, internal citation omitted.)

- "What that time span [for damages for lost use and lost profits] should be would be determined by the peculiar circumstances of the particular case before the court and should present no insurmountable difficulty for a court in fixing a reasonable period contemplated by the statute." (Channell, supra, 58 Cal.App.3d at p. 317, footnote omitted.)
- "To recover damages for fraud, a plaintiff must have sustained damages proximately caused by the misrepresentation. A damage award for fraud will be reversed where the injury is not related to the misrepresentation." (Las Palmas Associates v. Las Palmas Center Associates (1991) 235 Cal.App.3d 1220, 1252 [1 Cal.Rptr.2d 301], internal citations omitted.)
- "Mental distress is not an element of damages allowable under Civil Code section 3343." (Channell, supra, 58 Cal.App.3d at p. 315, internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

6 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 1897–1899

3 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 40, Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts, § 40.23 (Matthew Bender)

23 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender)

10 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 105, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender)

1923. Damages—"Out of Pocket" Rule

If you decide that [*name of plaintiff] has proved [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] claim against [name of defendant], you also must decide how much money will reasonably compensate [name of plaintiff] for the harm. This compensation is called "damages."

The amount of damages must include an award for all harm that [*name of defendant] was a substantial factor in causing, even if the particular harm could not have been anticipated.

[*Name of plaintiff] must prove the amount of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] damages. However, [name of plaintiff] does not have to prove the exact amount of damages that will provide reasonable compensation for the harm. You must not speculate or guess in awarding damages.

To decide the amount of damages you must determine the [fair market] value of what [*name of plaintiff] gave and subtract from that amount the [fair market] value of what [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] received.

["Fair market value" is the highest price that a willing buyer would have paid on the date of the transaction to a willing seller, assuming:

1. That there is no pressure on either one to buy or sell; and
2. That the buyer and seller know all the uses and purposes for which the [insert item] is reasonably capable of being used.]

[*Name of plaintiff] may also recover amounts that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] reasonably spent in reliance on [name of defendant]'s [false representation/failure to disclose/false promise] if those amounts would not otherwise have been spent.

New September 2003; Revised December 2009

Directions for Use

For discussion of damages if there is both a breach of fiduciary duty and intentional misrepresentation, see the Directions for Use to CACI No. 1924, Damages—"Benefit of the Bargain" Rule.

Sources and Authority

- Damages for Fraud. Civil Code section 1709.
- Measure of Damages in Tort. Civil Code section 3333.
- Damages for Fraud in Sale of Property. Civil Code section 3343.
- This instruction should be modified in cases involving promissory fraud: "In cases of promissory fraud, the damages are measured by market value as of the date the promise was breached because that is the date when the damage occurred." (Glendale Fed. Sav. & Loan Assn. v. Marina View Heights Dev. Co. (1977) 66 Cal.App.3d 101, 145–146 [135 Cal.Rptr. 802].)

- "There are two measures of damages for fraud: out of pocket and benefit of the bargain. The 'out-of-pocket' measure of damages 'is directed to restoring the plaintiff to the financial position enjoyed by him prior to the fraudulent transaction, and thus awards the difference in actual value at the time of the transaction between what the plaintiff gave and what he received. The "benefit-of-the-bargain" measure, on the other hand, is concerned with satisfying the expectancy interest of the defrauded plaintiff by putting him in the position he would have enjoyed if the false representation relied upon had been true; it awards the difference in value between what the plaintiff actually received and what he was fraudulently led to believe he would receive.' 'In California, a defrauded party is ordinarily limited to recovering his "out-of-pocket" loss . . . .' " (Alliance Mortgage Co. v. Rothwell (1995) 10 Cal.4th 1226, 1240 [44 Cal.Rptr.2d 352, 900 P.2d 601], internal citations omitted.)
- "Of the two measures the 'out-of-pocket' rule has been termed more consistent with the logic and purpose of the tort form of action (i.e., compensation for loss sustained rather than satisfaction of contractual expectations) while the 'benefit-of-the-bargain' rule has been observed to be a more effective deterrent (in that it contemplates an award even when the property received has a value equal to what was given for it)." (Stout v. Turney (1978) 22 Cal.3d 718, 725 [150 Cal.Rptr. 637, 586 P.2d 1228].)
- "In fraud cases involving the 'purchase, sale or exchange of property,' the Legislature has expressly provided that the 'out-of-pocket' rather than the 'benefit-of-the-bargain' measure of damages should apply. Civil Code section 3343 provides the exclusive measure of damages for fraud in such cases." (Fragale v. Faulkner (2003) 110 Cal.App.4th 229, 236 [1 Cal.Rptr.3d 616].)
- "Civil Code section 3343 does not apply, however, 'when a victim is defrauded by its fiduciaries.' Instead, in the case of fraud by a fiduciary, 'the "broader" measure of damages provided by sections 1709 and 3333 applies.' . . . [¶] In the case of a negligent misrepresentation by a fiduciary, 'a plaintiff is only entitled to its actual or "out-of-pocket" losses suffered because of [the] fiduciary's negligent misrepresentation under section 3333.' [¶] The Supreme Court has not decided whether 'the measure of damages under section 3333 might be greater for a fiduciary's intentional misrepresentation . . . .' " (Fragale, supra, 110 Cal.App.4th at pp. 236–237, original italics, internal citations omitted.)
- "We have previously held that a plaintiff is only entitled to its actual or 'out-of-pocket' losses suffered because of fiduciary's negligent misrepresentation under section 3333. While the measure of damages under section 3333 might be greater for a fiduciary's intentional misrepresentation, we need not address that issue here." (Alliance Mortgage Co., supra, 10 Cal.4th at pp. 1249–1250.)
- "To recover damages for fraud, a plaintiff must have sustained damages proximately caused by the misrepresentation. A damage award for fraud will be reversed where the injury is not related to the misrepresentation." (Las Palmas Associates v. Las Palmas Center Associates (1991) 235 Cal.App.3d 1220, 1252 [1 Cal.Rptr.2d 301], internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

6 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 1893–1900

3 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 40, Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts, § 40.23 (Matthew Bender)

23 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit § 269.27 (Matthew Bender)

10 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 105, Fraud and Deceit § 105.252 (Matthew Bender)

1924. Damages—"Benefit of the Bargain" Rule

If you decide that [*name of plaintiff] has proved [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] claim against [name of defendant], you also must decide how much money will reasonably compensate [name of plaintiff] for the harm. This compensation is called "damages."

The amount of damages must include an award for all harm that [*name of defendant] was a substantial factor in causing, even if the particular harm could not have been anticipated.

[*Name of plaintiff] must prove the amount of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] damages. However, [name of plaintiff] does not have to prove the exact amount of damages that will provide reasonable compensation for the harm. You must not speculate or guess in awarding damages.

To determine the amount of damages, you must:

1. Determine the fair market value that [name of plaintiff] would have received if the representations made by [name of defendant] had been true; and
2. Subtract the fair market value of what [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] did receive.

The resulting amount is [*name of plaintiff]'s damages. "Fair market value" is the highest price that a willing buyer would have paid to a willing seller, assuming:

1. That there is no pressure on either one to buy or sell; and
2. That the buyer and seller know all the uses and purposes for which the [insert item] is reasonably capable of being used.

Fair market value must be determined as of the date that [*name of plaintiff] discovered [name of defendant]'s [false representation/ failure to disclose].

[*Name of plaintiff] may also recover amounts that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] reasonably spent in reliance on [name of defendant]'s [false representation/failure to disclose/false promise] if those amounts would not otherwise have been spent.

New September 2003; Revised December 2009

Directions for Use

There is a split of authority regarding whether benefit-of-the-bargain damages can ever be recovered for intentional misrepresentation in the sale or exchange of property. It is settled that in a nonfiduciary relationship, damages are limited to the out-of-pocket measure, even if the misrepresentation is intentional. (See Alliance Mortgage Co. v. Rothwell (1995) 10 Cal.4th 1226, 1240 [44 Cal.Rptr.2d 352, 900 P.2d 601]; Civ. Code, § 3343.) However, there is disagreement on the proper measure if there is a fiduciary relationship.

Some courts have held that benefit-of-the-bargain damages are available if there is both a fiduciary relationship and intentional misrepresentation. (See Fragale v. Faulkner (2003) 110 Cal.App.4th 229, 235–239 [1 Cal.Rptr.3d 616]; Salahutdin v. Valley of California, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 555, 564 [29 Cal.Rptr.2d 463]; see also Alfaro v. Community Housing Improvement System & Planning Assn., Inc. (2009) 171 Cal.App.4th 1356, 1383 [89 Cal.Rptr.3d 659].) At least one court has held to the contrary, that only out-of-pocket losses may be recovered. (See Hensley v. McSweeney (2001) 90 Cal.App.4th 1081, 1086 [109 Cal.Rptr.2d 489].)

This instruction should be modified in cases involving promissory fraud: "In cases of promissory fraud, the damages are measured by market value as of the date the promise was breached because that is the date when the damage occurred." (Glendale Fed. Sav. & Loan Assn. v. Marina View Heights Dev. Co. (1977) 66 Cal.App.3d 101, 145–146 [135 Cal.Rptr. 802].)

Sources and Authority

- Damages for Fraud. Civil Code section 1709.
- Measure of Damages in Tort. Civil Code section 3333.
- "There are two measures of damages for fraud: out of pocket and benefit of the bargain. The 'out-of-pocket' measure of damages 'is directed to restoring the plaintiff to the financial position enjoyed by him prior to the fraudulent transaction, and thus awards the difference in actual value at the time of the transaction between what the plaintiff gave and what he received. The "benefit-of-the-bargain" measure, on the other hand, is concerned with satisfying the expectancy interest of the defrauded plaintiff by putting him in the position he would have enjoyed if the false representation relied upon had been true; it awards the difference in value between what the plaintiff actually received and what he was fraudulently led to believe he would receive.' 'In California, a defrauded party is ordinarily limited to recovering his "out-of-pocket" loss . . . .' " (Alliance Mortgage Co. supra, 10 Cal.4th at p. 1240, internal citations omitted.)
- "Of the two measures the 'out-of-pocket' rule has been termed more consistent with the logic and purpose of the tort form of action (i.e., compensation for loss sustained rather than satisfaction of contractual expectations) while the 'benefit-of-the-bargain' rule has been observed to be a more effective deterrent (in that it contemplates an award even when the property received has a value equal to what was given for it.)" (Stout v. Turney (1978) 22 Cal.3d 718, 725 [150 Cal.Rptr. 637, 586 P.2d 1228].)
- "We have previously held that a plaintiff is only entitled to its actual or 'out-of-pocket' losses suffered because of fiduciary's negligent misrepresentation under section 3333. While the measure of damages under section 3333 might be greater for a fiduciary's intentional misrepresentation, we need not address that issue here." (Alliance Mortgage Co., supra, 10 Cal.4th at pp. 1249–1250.)

- "The measure of damages for a real estate broker's intentional misrepresentation to a buyer for whom he acts as agent is not limited to the out-of-pocket losses suffered by the buyer. Because the broker is a fiduciary, damages for intentional fraud may be measured by the broader benefit-of-the-bargain rule." (Fragale, supra, 110 Cal.App.4th at p. 232.)
- "[T]he measure of damages for fraud by a fiduciary is out-of-pocket damages, not the benefit of the bargain computation normally applicable to contract causes of action." (Hensley, supra, 90 Cal.App.4th at p. 1085.)
- "Recognizing a split of authority on the matter, we follow those cases adopting the broader measure of damages under sections 1709 and 3333, a course that is not only consonant with the position we have taken in the past but just. This division has consistently applied the broader measure of damages for fiduciary fraud, refusing to limit damages to the 'out of pocket' measure." (Salahutdin, supra, 24 Cal.App.4th at pp. 566–567.)
- "Unlike the 'out of pocket' measure of damages, which are usually calculated at the time of the transaction, 'benefit of the bargain' damages may appropriately be calculated as of the date of discovery of the fraud." (Salahutdin, supra, 24 Cal.App.4th at p. 568.)
- "To recover damages for fraud, a plaintiff must have sustained damages proximately caused by the misrepresentation. A damage award for fraud will be reversed where the injury is not related to the misrepresentation." (Las Palmas Associates v. Las Palmas Center Associates (1991) 235 Cal.App.3d 1220, 1252 [1 Cal.Rptr.2d 301], internal citations omitted.)
- "[O]ne may recover compensation for time and effort expended in reliance on a defendant's misrepresentation." (Block v. Tobin (1975) 45 Cal.App.3d 214, 220 [119 Cal.Rptr. 288], internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

6 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 1893–1900

3 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 40, Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts, § 40.23

23 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit, § 269.27 (Matthew Bender)

10 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 105, Fraud and Deceit, § 105.131 et seq. (Matthew Bender)

1925. Affirmative Defense—Statute of Limitations—Fraud or Mistake

---

[*Name of defendant] contends that [name of plaintiff]'s lawsuit was not filed within the time set by law. To succeed on this defense, [name of defendant] must prove that [name of plaintiff]'s claimed harm occurred before [insert date three years before date of filing].

[If [*name of defendant] proves that [name of plaintiff]'s claimed harm occurred before [insert date three years before date of filing], [name of plaintiff]'s lawsuit was still filed on time if [name of plaintiff] proves that before that date, [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] did not discover facts constituting the fraud or mistake, and with reasonable diligence could not have discovered those facts.]

New April 2008

Directions for Use

This instruction is for use if the defendant claims that the plaintiff's action was not filed within the applicable three-year period for fraud or mistake. (See Code Civ. Proc., § 338(d).) Include the second paragraph if the plaintiff alleges that the delayed-discovery rule applies to avoid the limitation defense. The plaintiff bears the burden of pleading and proving delayed discovery. (See E-Fab, Inc. v. Accountants, Inc. Services (2007) 153 Cal.App.4th 1308, 1319 [64 Cal.Rptr.3d 9] [regardless of which limitation statute applied to case, burden was on plaintiff].)

Sources and Authority

- Statute of Limitations for Fraud or Mistake. Code of Civil Procedure section 338(d).
- "The [Code of Civil Procedure section 338(d) three-year] limitations period . . . 'does not begin to run until the discovery, by the aggrieved party, of the facts constituting the fraud or mistake.' " (Sun'n Sand, Inc. v. United California Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 671, 701 [148 Cal.Rptr. 329, 582 P.2d 920].)
- "The discovery rule 'may be expressed by the Legislature or implied by the courts.' By statute, the discovery rule applies to fraud actions. (Code Civ. Proc., § 338, subd. (d).) In addition, 'judicial decisions have declared the discovery rule applicable in situations where the plaintiff is unable to see or appreciate a breach has occurred.' " (E-Fab, Inc., supra, 153 Cal.App.4th at p. 1318, internal citations omitted.)
- "Code of Civil Procedure section 338, subdivision (d), effectively codifies the delayed discovery rule in connection with actions for fraud, providing that a cause of action for fraud 'is not to be deemed to have accrued until the discovery, by the aggrieved party, of the facts constituting the fraud or mistake.'

In a case such as this, that date is the date the complaining party learns, or at least is put on notice, that a representation was false." (Brandon G. v. Gray (2003) 111 Cal.App.4th 29, 35 [3 Cal.Rptr.3d 330].)

- "This discovery element has been interpreted to mean 'the discovery by the aggrieved party of the fraud or facts that would lead a reasonably prudent person to suspect fraud.' " (Doe v. Roman Catholic Bishop of Sacramento (2010) 189 Cal.App.4th 1423, 1430 [117 Cal.Rptr.3d 597], original italics.)
- "Case law has interpreted this accrual provision to mean that 'a cause of action [under Code Civ. Proc., § 338(d)] accrues, and the limitations period commences to run, when the aggrieved party could have discovered the . . . mistake through the exercise of reasonable diligence.' " (Creditors Collection Serv. v. Castaldi (1995) 38 Cal.App.4th 1039, 1044 [45 Cal.Rptr. 2d 511].)
- "One [exception to the limitations period] is the doctrine of fraudulent concealment, which tolls the statute of limitations if a defendant's deceptive conduct 'has caused a claim to grow stale.' " (Fuller v. First Franklin Financial Corp. (2013) 216 Cal.App.4th 955, 962 [163 Cal.Rptr.3d 44].)
- " 'Technical rules as to when a cause of action accrues apply therefore only in those cases which are free from fraud committed by the defendant. Said section 338, subdivision 4, . . . recognizes the nonapplicability of those technical rules where the fraud of the defendant may be so concealed that in the absence of circumstances imposing greater diligence on the plaintiff, the cause of action is deemed not to accrue until the fraud is discovered. Otherwise, in such cases, the defendant by concealing his fraud, would effectively block recovery by the plaintiff because of the intervention of the statute of limitations.' " (Snow v. A. H. Robins Co. (1985) 165 Cal.App.3d 120, 127–128 [211 Cal.Rptr. 271], internal citation omitted.)
- "[C]ourts have relied on the nature of the relationship between defendant and plaintiff to explain application of the delayed accrual rule. The rule is generally applicable to confidential or fiduciary relationships. The fiduciary relationship carries a duty of full disclosure, and application of the discovery rule 'prevents the fiduciary from obtaining immunity for an initial breach of duty by a subsequent breach of the obligation of disclosure.' " (Parsons v. Tickner (1995) 31 Cal.App.4th 1513, 1526 [37 Cal.Rptr. 2d 810], internal citations omitted.)
- " 'The provision tolling operation of [section 338(d)] until discovery of the fraud has long been treated as an exception and, accordingly, this court has held that if an action is brought more than three years after commission of the fraud, plaintiff has the burden of pleading and proving that he did not make the discovery until within three years prior to the filing of his complaint.' " (Samuels v. Mix (1999) 22 Cal.4th 1, 14 [91 Cal.Rptr.2d 273, 989 P.2d 701], internal citation omitted.)
- "Only causes of action based on actual fraud are governed by section 338, subdivision (d). This includes . . . causes of action based on fraudulent concealment, which 'is a species of fraud or deceit. [Citations.]' " (Stueve Bros.

Farms, LLC v. Berger Kahn (2013) 222 Cal.App.4th 303, 322 [166 Cal.Rptr.3d 116].)

- "[T]he section 338, subdivision (d), three-year statute of limitations applies to an unjust enrichment cause of action based on mistake." (Federal Deposit Ins. Corp. v. Dintino (2008), 167 Cal.App.4th 333, 348 [84 Cal.Rptr.3d 38], original italics.)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, California Procedure (6th ed. 2021) Actions, §§ 708–718

Rylaarsdam & Edmon, California Practice Guide: Civil Procedure Before Trial, Ch. 6-C, Answer, ¶¶ 6:462–6:462.2 (The Rutter Group)

California Civil Procedure Before Trial, Ch. 25, Answer (Cont.Ed.Bar 4th ed.) § 25.46

43 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 489, Relief From Judgments and Orders, § 489.261 (Matthew Bender)

7 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 70A, Defaults and Relief From Orders and Judgments: Equitable Remedies, §§ 70A.32, 70A.52 et seq. (Matthew Bender)

1926–1999. Reserved for Future Use

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of defendant] make a false representation of [a] fact[s] to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of defendant] know that the representation was false, or did [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] make the representation recklessly and without regard for its truth?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of defendant] intend that [name of plaintiff] rely on the representation?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did [name of plaintiff] reasonably rely on the representation?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Was [name of plaintiff]'s reliance on [name of defendant]'s representation a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

   [a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $ _____]
[lost profits $ _____]
[medical expenses $ _____]
[other past economic loss $ _____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $ _____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $ _____]
[lost profits $ _____]
[medical expenses $ _____]
[other future economic loss $ _____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $ _____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:]

$ _____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:]

$ _____]

TOTAL $ _____]

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2009, December 2010, June 2014, December 2016, May 2017, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1900, Intentional Misrepresentation.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If the defendant alleges that the representations referred to in question 1 were opinions only, additional questions may be required on this issue. See CACI No. 1904, Opinions as Statements of Fact.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 6. The breakdown is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. However, if both intentional misrepresentation and negligent misrepresentation (see CACI No. 1903) are to be presented to the jury in the alternative, the preferred practice would seem to be that this verdict form and VF-1903, Negligent Misrepresentation, be kept separate and presented in the alternative. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

With respect to the same misrepresentation, question 2 above cannot be answered "yes" and question 3 of VF-1903 cannot also be answered "no." The jury may continue to answer the next question from one form or the other, but not both.

If both intentional and negligent misrepresentation are before the jury, it is important to distinguish between a statement made recklessly and without regard for the truth (see question 2 above) and one made without reasonable grounds for believing it is true (see CACI No. VF-1903, question 3). Question 2 of VF-1903 should be included to clarify that the difference is that for negligent misrepresentation, the defendant honestly believes that the statement is true. (See Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal.4th 370, 407–408 [11 Cal.Rptr.2d 51, 834 P.2d 745].)

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-1901. Concealment

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of defendant] intentionally fail to disclose [a] fact[s] that [name of plaintiff] did not know and could not reasonably have discovered?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of defendant] intend to deceive [name of plaintiff] by concealing the fact?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Had the omitted information been disclosed, would [name of plaintiff] reasonably have behaved differently?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was [name of defendant]'s concealment a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

   [a. Past economic loss

   [lost earnings $_____]

   [lost profits $_____]

   [medical expenses $_____]

   [other past economic loss $_____]

   Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, June 2014, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1901, Concealment.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

Modify question 1 by referring to one of the other three grounds for concealment listed in element 1 of CACI No. 1901, Concealment, depending on which ground is applicable to the facts of the case.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 5. The breakdown is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of defendant] make a promise to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of defendant] intend to perform this promise when [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] made it?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is no, then answer question 3. If you answered yes, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of defendant] intend that [name of plaintiff] rely on this promise?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did [name of plaintiff] reasonably rely on this promise?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Did [name of defendant] perform the promised act?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is no, then answer question 6. If you answered yes, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Was [name of plaintiff]'s reliance on [name of defendant]'s promise a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings	$ _____]
[lost profits	$ _____]
[medical expenses	$ _____]
[other past economic loss	$ _____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $ _____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings	$ _____]
[lost profits	$ _____]
[medical expenses	$ _____]
[other future economic loss	$ _____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $ _____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:]

$ _____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:]

$ _____]

TOTAL $ _____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, June 2014, December 2015, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1902, False Promise.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If multiple promises are at issue, question 1 should be repeated to specify each one; for example: "1. Did [name of defendant] promise [name of plaintiff] that [specify promise]?" (See Ryan v. Crown Castle NG Networks, Inc. (2016) 6 Cal.App.5th 775, 794 [211 Cal.Rptr.3d 743].) The rest of the questions will need to be repeated for each promise.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 7. The breakdown is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action (or from different promises), replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-1903. Negligent Misrepresentation

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of defendant] make a false representation of [a] fact[s] to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

[2. Did [name of defendant] honestly believe that the representation was true when [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] made it?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.]

3. Did [name of defendant] have reasonable grounds for believing the representation was true when [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] made it?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is no, then answer question 4. If you answered yes, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did [name of defendant] intend that [name of plaintiff] rely on the representation?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Did [name of plaintiff] reasonably rely on the representation?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Was [name of plaintiff]'s reliance on [name of defendant]'s representation a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings	$ _____]
[lost profits	$ _____]
[medical expenses	$ _____]
[other past economic loss	$ _____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $ _____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings	$ _____]
[lost profits	$ _____]
[medical expenses	$ _____]
[other future economic loss	$ _____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $ _____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:]

$ _____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:]

$ _____]

TOTAL $ _____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2009, December 2010, June 2014, December 2016, May 2017, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 1903, Negligent Misrepresentation.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If the defendant alleges that the representations referred to in question 1 were opinions only, additional questions may be required on this issue. See CACI No. 1904, Opinions as Statements of Fact.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 7. The breakdown is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. However, if both negligent misrepresentation and intentional misrepresentation (see CACI No. 1903) are to be presented to the jury in the alternative, the preferred practice would seem to be that this verdict form and VF-1900, Intentional Misrepresentation, be kept separate and presented in the alternative. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

With respect to the same misrepresentation, question 3 above cannot be answered "no" and question 2 of VF-1900 cannot also be answered "yes." The jury may continue to answer the next question from one form or the other, but not both.

If both intentional and negligent misrepresentation are before the jury, it is important to distinguish between a statement made without reasonable grounds for believing it is true (see question 3 above) and one made recklessly and without regard for the truth (see CACI No. VF-1900, question 2). Include question 2 to clarify that the difference is that for negligent misrepresentation, the defendant honestly believes that the statement is true. (See Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal.4th 370, 407–408 [11 Cal.Rptr.2d 51, 834 P.2d 745].)

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-1904–VF-1999. Reserved for Future Use

TRESPASS

2000. Trespass—Essential Factual Elements

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] trespassed on [his/her/ *nonbinary pronoun/its] property. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] [owned/leased/occupied/controlled] the property;
2. That [name of defendant] [intentionally/, although not intending to do so, [recklessly [or] negligently]] entered [name of plaintiff]'s property] [or]

   [intentionally/, although not intending to do so, [recklessly [or] negligently]] caused [another person/[*insert name of thing]] to enter [name of plaintiff]'s property];
3. That [name of plaintiff] did not give permission for the entry [or that [name of defendant] exceeded [name of plaintiff]'s permission];
4. That [name of plaintiff] was [actually] harmed; and
5. That [name of defendant]'s [entry/conduct] was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

[Entry can be on, above, or below the surface of the land.]

[Entry may occur indirectly, such as by causing vibrations that damage the land or structures or other improvements on the land.]

New September 2003; Revised June 2013, May 2020

Directions for Use

With regard to element 2, liability for trespass may be imposed for conduct that is intentional, reckless, negligent, or the result of an extra-hazardous activity. (Staples v. Hoefke (1987) 189 Cal.App.3d 1397, 1406 [235 Cal.Rptr. 165].) However, intent to trespass means only that the person intended to be in the particular place where the trespass is alleged to have occurred. (Miller v. National Broadcasting Corp. (1986) 187 Cal.App.3d 1463, 1480–1481 [232 Cal.Rptr. 668].) Liability may be also based on the defendant's unintentional, but negligent or reckless, act, for example, an automobile accident. An intent to damage is not necessary. (Meyer v. Pacific Employers Insurance Co. (1965) 233 Cal.App.2d 321, 326 [43 Cal.Rptr. 542].)

It is no defense that the defendant mistakenly, but in good faith, believed that the defendant had a right to be in that location. (Cassinos v. Union Oil Co. (1993) 14 Cal.App.4th 1770, 1780 [18 Cal.Rptr.2d 574].) In such a case, the word "intentionally" in element 2 might be confusing to the jury. To alleviate this possible confusion, give the third option to CACI No. 2004, "Intentional Entry" Explained.

If plaintiff is seeking nominal damages as an alternative to actual damages, insert the following paragraph above element 4, add "and" at the end of element 2, and adjust punctuation accordingly:

> If you find all of the above, then the law assumes that [name of plaintiff] has been harmed and [name of plaintiff] is entitled to a nominal sum such as one dollar. [Name of plaintiff] is entitled to additional damages if [name of plaintiff] proves the following:

The last sentence of the above paragraph, along with the final two elements of this instruction, should be omitted if plaintiff is seeking nominal damages only. Read "actually" in the fourth element only if nominal damages are also being sought.

Nominal damages alone are not available in cases involving intangible intrusions such as noise and vibrations; proof of actual damage to the property is required: "[T]he rule is that actionable trespass may not be predicated upon nondamaging noise, odor, or light intrusion . . . ." (San Diego Gas & Electric Co. v. Superior Court (1996) 13 Cal.4th 893, 936 [55 Cal.Rptr.2d 724, 920 P.2d 669], internal citation omitted.)

For an instruction on control of property, see CACI No. 1002, Extent of Control Over Premises Area, in the Premises Liability series.

Sources and Authority

- "Generally, landowners and tenants have a right to exclude persons from trespassing on private property; the right to exclude persons is a fundamental aspect of private property ownership." (Ralphs Grocery Co. v. Victory Consultants, Inc. (2017) 17 Cal.App.5th 245, 258 [225 Cal.Rptr.3d 305].)
- " 'Trespass is an unlawful interference with possession of property.' The elements of trespass are: (1) the plaintiff's ownership or control of the property; (2) the defendant's intentional, reckless, or negligent entry onto the property; (3) lack of permission for the entry or acts in excess of permission; (4) harm; and (5) the defendant's conduct was a substantial factor in causing the harm. (See CACI No. 2000.)" (Ralphs Grocery Co., supra, 17 Cal.App.5th at pp. 261–262, internal citation omitted.)
- "[I]n order to state a cause of action for trespass a plaintiff must allege an unauthorized and tangible entry on the land of another, which interfered with the plaintiff's exclusive possessory rights." (McBride v. Smith (2018) 18 Cal.App.5th 1160, 1174 [227 Cal.Rptr.3d 390].)
- "The emission of sound waves which cause actual physical damage to property constitutes a trespass. Liability for trespass may be imposed for conduct which is intentional, reckless, negligent or the result of an extra-hazardous activity." (Staples, supra, 189 Cal.App.3d at p. 1406, internal citations omitted.)
- "California's definition of trespass is considerably narrower than its definition of nuisance. ' "A trespass is an invasion of the interest in the exclusive possession of land, as by entry upon it . . . . A nuisance is an interference with the interest in the private use and enjoyment of the land and does not require interference with the possession." ' California has adhered firmly to the view that '[t]he cause of action for trespass is designed to protect possessory—not necessarily ownership—interests in land from unlawful interference.' " (Capogeannis v. Superior Court (1993) 12 Cal.App.4th 668, 674 [15 Cal.Rptr.2d 796], internal citations omitted.)

- "In the context of a trespass action, 'possession' is synonymous with 'occupation' and connotes a subjection of property to one's will and control." (Veiseh v. Stapp (2019) 35 Cal.App.5th 1099, 1105 [247 Cal.Rptr.3d 868].)
- " '[A] trespass may be committed by the continued presence on the land of a structure, chattel, or other thing which the actor has tortiously placed there, whether or not the actor has the ability to remove it.' Under this definition, 'tortious conduct' denotes that conduct, whether of act or omission, which subjects the actor to liability under the principles of the law of torts." (Newhall Land & Farming Co. v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal.App.4th 334, 345 [23 Cal.Rptr.2d 377], internal citations omitted.)
- The common-law distinction between direct and constructive trespass is not followed in California. A trespass may be committed by consequential and indirect injuries as well as by direct and forcible harm. (Gallin v. Poulou (1956) 140 Cal.App.2d 638, 641 [295 P.2d 958].)
- " 'It is a well-settled proposition that the proper party plaintiff in an action for trespass to real property is the person in actual possession. No averment of title in plaintiff is necessary. [Citations.]' . . . 'A defendant who is a mere stranger to the title will not be allowed to question the title of a plaintiff in possession of the land. It is only where the trespasser claims title himself, or claims under the real owner, that he is allowed to attack the title of the plaintiff whose peaceable possession he has disturbed.' " (Veiseh, supra, 35 Cal.App.5th at p. 1104, internal citation omitted.)
- "An action for trespass may technically be maintained only by one whose right to possession has been violated; however, an out-of-possession property owner may recover for an injury to the land by a trespasser which damages the ownership interest." (Smith v. Cap Concrete, Inc. (1982) 133 Cal.App.3d 769, 774 [184 Cal.Rptr. 308], internal citation omitted.)
- "Under the forcible entry statutes the fact that a defendant may have title or the right to possession of the land is no defense. The plaintiff's interest in peaceable even if wrongful possession is secured against forcible intrusion by conferring on him the right to restitution of the premises, the primary remedy, and incidentally awarding damages proximately caused by the forcible entry." (Allen v. McMillion (1978) 82 Cal.App.3d 211, 218–219 [147 Cal.Rptr. 77], internal citations omitted.)
- "Where there is a consensual entry, there is no tort, because lack of consent is an element of the wrong." (Civic Western Corp. v. Zila Industries, Inc. (1977) 66 Cal.App.3d 1, 16–17 [135 Cal.Rptr. 915].)
- " 'A conditional or restricted consent to enter land creates a privilege to do so only insofar as the condition or restriction is complied with.' " (Civic Western Corp., supra, 66 Cal.App.3d at p. 17, quoting Rest.2d Torts, § 168.)

- "Where one has permission to use land for a particular purpose and proceeds to abuse the privilege, or commits any act hostile to the interests of the lessor, he becomes a trespasser. [¶] 'A good faith belief that entry has been authorized or permitted provides no excuse for infringement of property rights if consent was not in fact given by the property owner whose rights are at issue. Accordingly, by showing they gave no authorization, [plaintiffs] established the lack of consent necessary to support their action for injury to their ownership interests.' " (Cassinos, supra, 14 Cal.App.4th at p. 1780, internal citations omitted.)
- " '[T]he intent required as a basis for liability as a trespasser is simply an intent to be at the place on the land where the trespass allegedly occurred . . . . The defendant is liable for an intentional entry although he has acted in good faith, under the mistaken belief, however reasonable, that he is committing no wrong.' " (Miller, supra, 187 Cal.App.3d at pp. 1480–1481, internal citation omitted.)
- "The general rule is simply that damages may be recovered for annoyance and distress, including mental anguish, proximately caused by a trespass." (Armitage v. Decker (1990) 218 Cal.App.3d 887, 905 [267 Cal.Rptr. 399], internal citations omitted.)
- "Causes of action for conversion and trespass support an award for exemplary damages." (Krieger v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1981) 119 Cal.App.3d 137, 148 [173 Cal.Rptr. 751], internal citation omitted.)
- "It is true that an action for trespass will support an award of nominal damages where actual damages are not shown. However, nominal damages need not be awarded where no actual loss has occurred. 'Failure to return a verdict for nominal damages is not in general ground for reversing a judgment or granting a new trial.' " (Staples, supra, 189 Cal.App.3d at p. 1406, internal citations omitted.)
- "Trespass may be ' "by personal intrusion of the wrongdoer or by his failure to leave; by throwing or placing something on the land; or by causing the entry of some other person." ' A trespass may be on the surface of the land, above it, or below it. The migration of pollutants from one property to another may constitute a trespass, a nuisance, or both." (Martin Marietta Corp. v. Insurance Co. of North America (1995) 40 Cal.App.4th 1113, 1132 [47 Cal.Rptr.2d 670], internal citations omitted.)
- "Respondent's plant was located in a zone which permitted its operation. It comes within the protection of section 731a of the Code of Civil Procedure which, subject to certain exceptions, generally provides that where a manufacturing or commercial operation is permitted by local zoning, no private individual can enjoin such an operation. It has been determined, however, that this section does not operate to bar recovery for damages for trespassory invasions of another's property occasioned by the conduct of such manufacturing or commercial use." (Roberts v. Permanente Corp. (1961) 188 Cal.App.2d 526, 529 [10 Cal.Rptr. 519], internal citations omitted.)

- "[A]s a matter of law, [plaintiff] cannot state a cause of action against the [defendants] for trespassing on the Secondary Access Easement because they own that land and her easement does not give her a possessory right, not to mention an exclusive possessory right in that property." (McBride, supra, 18 Cal.App.5th at p. 1174.)
- "[A] failure to comply with one or more provisions of the California Uniform Transfers to Minors Act does not render the grantor's continued possession and control of the real property unlawful for purposes of the tort of trespass to realty." (Veiseh, supra, 35 Cal.App.5th at p. 1107.)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 803–805

2 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 17, Nuisance and Trespass, § 17.20 (Matthew Bender)

48 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass, §§ 550.11, 550.19 (Matthew Bender)

22 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 225, Trespass, § 225.20 (Matthew Bender)

1 California Civil Practice: Torts §§ 18:1, 18:4–18:8, 18:10 (Thomson Reuters)

2001. Trespass—Extrahazardous Activities

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] trespassed on [his/her/ *nonbinary pronoun/its] property. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] [owned/leased/occupied/controlled] the property;
2. That [name of defendant] was engaged in [insert extrahazardous activity];
3. That [insert extrahazardous activity] caused [insert thing] to enter [name of plaintiff]'s property;
4. That [name of plaintiff] did not give permission for the entry [or that [name of defendant] exceeded [name of plaintiff]'s permission];
5. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
6. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

[Entry can be on, above, or below the surface of the land.]

[Entry may occur indirectly, such as by causing vibrations that damage the land or property on the land.]

New September 2003

Directions for Use

Nominal damages alone are not available in cases involving intangible intrusions such as noise and vibrations; proof of actual damage to the property is required: "[T]he rule is that actionable trespass may not be predicated upon nondamaging noise, odor, or light intrusion . . . ." (San Diego Gas & Electric Co. v. Superior Court (1996) 13 Cal.4th 893, 936 [55 Cal.Rptr.2d 724, 920 P.2d 669], internal citation omitted.)

"Whether an activity is ultrahazardous is a question of law to be determined by the court." (Smith v. Lockheed Propulsion Co. (1967) 247 Cal.App.2d 774, 785 [56 Cal.Rptr. 128].)

Sources and Authority

- "[W]e conclude that the rule of the Restatement is sound, and that in this state there is no liability for a trespass unless the trespass is intentional, the result of recklessness or negligence, or the result of engaging in an extra-hazardous activity." (Gallin v. Poulou (1956) 140 Cal.App.2d 638, 645 [295 P.2d 958].)
- "Section 520 of the Restatement of Torts defines ultrahazardous activity as follows: 'An activity is ultrahazardous if it (a) necessarily involves a risk of serious harm to the person, land or chattels of others which cannot be eliminated by the exercise of the utmost care, and (b) is not a matter of common usage.' California has apparently accepted the Restatement definition." (Smith v. Lockheed Propulsion Co., supra, 247 Cal.App.2d at p. 785.)

- "Trespass may be ' "by personal intrusion of the wrongdoer or by his failure to leave; by throwing or placing something on the land; or by causing the entry of some other person. . . ." ' A trespass may be on the surface of the land, above it, or below it. The migration of pollutants from one property to another may constitute a trespass, a nuisance, or both." (Martin Marietta Corp. v. Insurance Co. of North America (1995) 40 Cal.App.4th 1113, 1132 [47 Cal.Rptr.2d 670], internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 803–805

2 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 17, Nuisance and Trespass, § 17.20 (Matthew Bender)

48 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass, § 550.15 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Torts §§ 18:1, 18:4–18:8, 18:10 (Thomson Reuters)

2002. Trespass to Timber—Essential Factual Elements (Civ. Code, § 3346)

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] trespassed on [his/her/ *nonbinary pronoun/its] property and [cut down or damaged trees/took timber]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] [owned/leased/occupied/controlled] the property;
2. That [name of defendant] intentionally entered [name of plaintiff]'s property and [cut down or damaged trees/took timber] located on the property;

   [*or]

   That [*name of defendant], although not intending to do so, [recklessly/ [or] negligently] entered [name of plaintiff]'s property and damaged trees located on the property;
3. That [name of plaintiff] did not give permission to [cut down or damage the trees/take timber] [or that [name of defendant] exceeded [name of plaintiff]'s permission];
4. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
5. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

[In considering whether [*name of plaintiff] was harmed, you may take into account the lost aesthetics and functionality of an injured tree.]

New September 2003; Revised June 2013, May 2020

Directions for Use

Give this instruction for loss of timber or damages to trees. Note that actual damages are to be doubled regardless of the defendant's intent. (See Civ. Code, § 3346(a).) If treble damages for willful and malicious conduct are sought, also give CACI No. 2003, Damage to Timber—Willful and Malicious Conduct.

With regard to element 2, liability for trespass may be imposed for conduct that is intentional, reckless, negligent, or the result of an extra-hazardous activity. (Staples v. Hoefke (1987) 189 Cal.App.3d 1397, 1406 [235 Cal.Rptr. 165].) However, intent to trespass means only that the person intended to be in the particular place where the trespass is alleged to have occurred. (Miller v. National Broadcasting Corp. (1986) 187 Cal.App.3d 1463, 1480–1481 [232 Cal.Rptr. 668].) Liability may be also based on the defendant's unintentional, but negligent or reckless, act; for example an automobile accident that damages a tree. An intent to damage is not necessary. (Meyer v. Pacific Employers Insurance Co. (1965) 233 Cal.App.2d 321 [43 Cal.Rptr. 542].)

It is no defense that the defendant mistakenly, but in good faith, believed that the defendant had a right to be in that location. (Cassinos v. Union Oil Co. (1993) 14 Cal.App.4th 1770, 1780 [18 Cal.Rptr.2d 574].) In such a case, the word "intentionally" in element 2 might be confusing to the jury. To alleviate this possible confusion, give the third option to CACI No. 2004, "Intentional Entry" Explained. See also the Sources and Authority to CACI No. 2000, Trespass—Essential Factual Elements.

Include the last paragraph if the plaintiff claims harm based on lost aesthetics and functionality.

Sources and Authority

- Damages for Injury to Timber. Civil Code section 3346(a).
- "[T]he effect of [Civil Code] section 3346 as amended, read together with [Code of Civil Procedure] section 733, is that the Legislature intended, insofar as wilful and malicious trespass is concerned under either section, to leave the imposition of treble damages discretionary with the court, but to place a floor upon that discretion at double damages which must be applied whether the trespass be wilful and malicious or casual and involuntary, etc. There are now three measures of damages applicable to the pertinent types of trespass: (1) for wilful and malicious trespass the court may impose treble damages but must impose double damages; (2) for casual and involuntary trespass, etc., the court must impose double damages; and (3) for trespass under authority actual damages." (Salazar v. Matejcek (2016) 245 Cal.App.4th 634, 645, fn.3 [199 Cal.Rptr.3d 705].)
- "The measure of damages to be doubled or trebled under Code of Civil Procedure section 733 and Civil Code section 3346 is not limited to the value of the timber or the damage to the trees. The statutes have been interpreted to permit doubling or trebling the full measure of compensable damages for tortious injury to property." (Fulle v. Kanani (2017) 7 Cal.App.5th 1305, 1312 [212 Cal.Rptr.3d 920] [annoyance and discomfort damages resulting from tortious injuries to timber or trees are subject to the damage multiplier under Code of Civil Procedure section 733 and Civil Code section 3346].)
- The damages provisions in sections 3346 and 733 must be "treated as penal and punitive." (Baker v. Ramirez (1987) 190 Cal.App.3d 1123, 1138 [235 Cal.Rptr. 857], internal citation omitted.)
- " 'However, due to the penal nature of these provisions, the damages should be neither doubled nor tripled under section 3346 if punitive damages are awarded under section 3294. That would amount to punishing the defendant twice and is not necessary to further the policy behind section 3294 of educating blunderers (persons who mistake location of boundary lines) and discouraging rogues

(persons who ignore boundary lines).' " (Hassoldt v. Patrick Media Group, Inc. (2000) 84 Cal.App.4th 153, 169 [100 Cal.Rptr.2d 662], internal citations omitted.)

- "Diminution in market value . . . is not an absolute limitation; several other theories are available to fix appropriate compensation for the plaintiff's loss. . . . [¶] One alternative measure of damages is the cost of restoring the property to its condition prior to the injury. Courts will normally not award costs of restoration if they exceed the diminution in the value of the property; the plaintiff may be awarded the lesser of the two amounts." (Heninger v. Dunn (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 858, 862 [162 Cal.Rptr. 104], internal citations omitted.)
- "The rule precluding recovery of restoration costs in excess of diminution in value is, however, not of invariable application. Restoration costs may be awarded even though they exceed the decrease in market value if 'there is a reason personal to the owner for restoring the original condition,' or 'where there is reason to believe that the plaintiff will, if fact, make the repairs.' " (Heninger, supra, 101 Cal.App.3d at p. 863, internal citations omitted.)
- "Courts have stressed that only reasonable costs of replacing destroyed trees with identical or substantially similar trees may be recovered." (Heninger, supra, 101 Cal.App.3d at p. 865.)
- "As a tree growing on a property line, the Aleppo pine tree was a 'line tree.' Civil Code section 834 provides: 'Trees whose trunks stand partly on the land of two or more coterminous owners, belong to them in common.' As such, neither owner 'is at liberty to cut the tree without the consent of the other, nor to cut away the part which extends into his land, if he thereby injures the common property in the tree.' " (Kallis v. Sones (2012) 208 Cal.App.4th 1274, 1278 [146 Cal.Rptr.3d 419].)
- "[W]hen considering the diminished value of an injured tree, the finder of fact may account for lost aesthetics and functionality." (Rony v. Costa (2012) 210 Cal.App.4th 746, 755 [148 Cal.Rptr.3d 642].)
- "Although [plaintiff] never quantified the loss of aesthetics at $15,000, she need not have done so. As with other hard-to-quantify injuries, such as emotional and reputational ones, the trier of fact court was free to place any dollar amount on aesthetic harm, unless the amount was ' "so grossly excessive as to shock the moral sense, and raise a reasonable presumption that the [trier of fact] was under the influence of passion or prejudice." ' " (Rony, supra, 210 Cal.App.4th at p. 756.)
- "[P]laintiffs here showed (i) the tree's unusual size and form made it very unusual for a 'line tree'—it functioned more like two trees growing on the separate properties; (ii) the tree's attributes, such as its broad canopy, provided significant benefits to the [plaintiffs'] property; and (iii) the [plaintiffs] placed great personal value on the tree. The trial court correctly recognized that it could account for these factors when determining damages, including whether or not damages should be reduced." (Kallis, supra, 208 Cal.App.4th at p. 1279.)

Secondary Sources

6 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 1917–1919

2 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 17, Nuisance and Trespass, § 17.20 (Matthew Bender)

48 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass, § 550.10 (Matthew Bender)

22 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 225, Trespass, § 225.161 et seq. (Matthew Bender)

2003. Damage to Timber—Willful and Malicious Conduct

[Name of plaintiff] also claims that [name of defendant]'s conduct in cutting down, damaging, or harvesting [name of plaintiff]'s trees was willful and malicious.

"Willful" simply means that [name of defendant]'s conduct was intentional.

"Malicious" means that [name of defendant] acted with intent to vex, annoy, harass, or injure, or that [name of defendant]'s conduct was done with a knowing disregard of the rights or safety of another. A person acts with knowing disregard when the person is aware of the probable dangerous consequences of the person's conduct and deliberately fails to avoid those consequences.

New September 2003; Revised December 2010, May 2020

Directions for Use

Read this instruction if the plaintiff is seeking double or treble damages because the defendant's conduct was willful and malicious. (See Civ. Code, § 3346; Code Civ. Proc., § 733; Ostling v. Loring (1994) 27 Cal.App.4th 1731, 1742 [33 Cal.Rptr.2d 391].) The judge should ensure that this finding is noted on the special verdict form. The jury should find the actual damages suffered. If the jury finds willful and malicious conduct, the court must award double damages and may award treble damages. (See Ostling, supra, 27 Cal.App.4th at p. 1742.)

Sources and Authority

- Damages for Injury to Timber. Civil Code section 3346(a).
- Treble Damages for Injury to Timber. Code of Civil Procedure section 733.
- "[T]he effect of [Civil Code] section 3346 as amended, read together with [Code of Civil Procedure] section 733, is that the Legislature intended, insofar as wilful and malicious trespass is concerned under either section, to leave the imposition of treble damages discretionary with the court, but to place a floor upon that discretion at double damages which must be applied whether the trespass be wilful and malicious or casual and involuntary, etc. There are now three measures of damages applicable to the pertinent types of trespass: (1) for wilful and malicious trespass the court may impose treble damages but must impose double damages; (2) for casual and involuntary trespass, etc., the court must impose double damages; and (3) for trespass under authority actual damages." (Salazar v. Matejcek (2016) 245 Cal.App.4th 634, 645, fn. 3 [199 Cal.Rptr.3d 705].)
- "The measure of damages to be doubled or trebled under Code of Civil Procedure section 733 and Civil Code section 3346 is not limited to the value of the timber or the damage to the trees. The statutes have been interpreted to permit doubling or trebling the full measure of compensable damages for tortious injury to property." (Fulle v. Kanani (2017) 7 Cal.App.5th 1305, 1312 [212 Cal.Rptr.3d 920] [annoyance and discomfort damages resulting from tortious injuries to timber or trees are subject to the damage multiplier under Code of Civil Procedure section 733 and Civil Code section 3346].)

- The damages provisions in sections 3346 and 733 must be "treated as penal and punitive." (Baker v. Ramirez (1987) 190 Cal.App.3d 1123, 1138 [235 Cal.Rptr. 857], internal citation omitted.)
- " 'However, due to the penal nature of these provisions, the damages should be neither doubled nor tripled under section 3346 if punitive damages are awarded under section 3294. That would amount to punishing the defendant twice and is not necessary to further the policy behind section 3294 of educating blunderers (persons who mistake location of boundary lines) and discouraging rogues (persons who ignore boundary lines).' " (Hassoldt v. Patrick Media Group, Inc. (2000) 84 Cal.App.4th 153, 169 [100 Cal.Rptr.2d 662], internal citations omitted.)
- " ' " '[T]reble damages may only be awarded when the wrongdoer intentionally acted wilfully or maliciously. The intent required is the intent to vex, harass, or annoy or injure the plaintiff. It is a question of fact for the trial court whether or not such intent exists.' [Civil Code section 3346 and Code of Civil Procedure section 733] are permissive and not mandatory and while they 'prescribe the degree of penalty to be invoked they commit to the sound discretion of the trial court the facts and circumstances under which it shall be invoked.' " ' " (Salazar, supra, 245 Cal.App.4th at p. 646, internal citation omitted.)
- "Although neither section [3346 or 733] expressly so provides, it is now settled that to warrant such an award of treble damages it must be established that the wrongful act was willful and malicious." (Caldwell v. Walker (1963) 211 Cal.App.2d 758, 762 [27 Cal.Rptr. 675], internal citations omitted.)
- "A proper and helpful analogue here is the award of exemplary damages under section 3294 of the Civil Code when a defendant has been guilty, inter alia, of 'malice, express or implied.' . . . 'In order to warrant the allowance of such damages the act complained of must not only be wilful, in the sense of intentional, but it must be accompanied by some aggravating circumstance, amounting to malice. Malice implies an act conceived in a spirit of mischief or with criminal indifference towards the obligations owed to others. There must be an intent to vex, annoy or injure. Mere spite or ill will is not sufficient.' . . . Malice may consist of a state of mind determined to perform an act with reckless or wanton disregard of or indifference to the rights of others. Since a defendant rarely admits to such a state of mind, it must frequently be established from the circumstances surrounding his allegedly malicious acts." (Caldwell, supra, 211 Cal.App.2d at pp. 763–764, internal citations omitted.)
- "Under [Health and Safety Code] section 13007, a tortfeasor generally is liable to the owner of property for damage caused by a negligently set fire. '[T]he statute places no restrictions on the type of property damage that is compensable.' Such damages might include, for example, damage to structures, to movable personal property, to soil, or to undergrowth; damages may even include such elements as the lost profits of a business damaged by fire. If the fire also damages trees—that is, causes 'injuries to . . . trees . . . upon the land of another'—then the actual damages recoverable under section 13007 may be doubled (for negligently caused fires) or trebled (for fires intended to spread to the plaintiff's property) pursuant to section 3346." (Kelly v. CB&I Constructors, Inc. (2009) 179 Cal.App.4th 442, 461 [102 Cal.Rptr.3d 32], internal citations omitted; but see Gould v. Madonna (1970) 5 Cal.App.3d 404, 407–408 [85 Cal.Rptr. 457] [Civ. Code, § 3346 does not apply to fires negligently set; Health & Saf. Code, § 13007 provides sole remedy].)

Secondary Sources

6 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, § 1918

4 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 52, Recovery for Medical Expenses and Economic Loss, § 52.34 (Matthew Bender)

31 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 350, Logs and Timber, § 350.12 (Matthew Bender)

22 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 225, Trespass, § 225.161 et seq. (Matthew Bender)

2004. "Intentional Entry" Explained

[An entry is intentional if a person knowingly goes onto the property of another or knowingly causes something to go onto that property.]

[An entry is intentional if a person engages in conduct that is substantially certain to cause something to go onto that property.]

[Intent to trespass means only that a person intended to be in the particular location where the trespass is alleged to have occurred. An entry is intentional even if the person reasonably but mistakenly thought that the person had a right to come onto that property.]

An intent to do harm to the property or to the owner is not required.

New September 2003; Revised June 2013, May 2020

Directions for Use

This instruction is not intended for general use in every case. Give one of the three bracketed options if an issue regarding the intent of the entry is raised and further explanation is required. The third option should be given if the entry could appear to the jury to be unintentional, such as if the defendant was not aware that the defendant was trespassing. (See Miller v. National Broadcasting Corp. (1986) 187 Cal.App.3d 1463, 1480–1481 [232 Cal.Rptr. 668].)

Sources and Authority

- "The doing of an act which will to a substantial certainty result in the entry of foreign matter upon another's land suffices for an intentional trespass to land upon which liability may be based. It was error to instruct the jury that an 'intent to harm' was required." (Roberts v. Permanente Corp. (1961) 188 Cal.App.2d 526, 530–531 [10 Cal.Rptr. 519], internal citation omitted.)
- An instruction on the definition of intentional trespass is considered a proper statement of law. Failure to give this instruction on request where appropriate is error. (Staples v. Hoefke (1987) 189 Cal.App.3d 1397, 1407 [235 Cal.Rptr. 165].)
- "As Prosser and Keeton on Torts . . . explained, '[t]he intent required as a basis for liability as a trespasser is simply an intent to be at the place on the land where the trespass allegedly occurred . . . . The defendant is liable for an intentional entry although he has acted in good faith, under the mistaken belief, however reasonable, that he is committing no wrong.' " (Miller, supra, 187 Cal.App.3d at pp. 1480–1481, internal citation omitted.)
- "Intent to cause damage was not, however, an element of [trespass] and . . . the trespasser was liable for such damage as he caused even though that damage was not intended or foreseen by him." (Meyer v. Pacific Employers Ins. Co. (1965) 233 Cal.App.2d 321, 326 [43 Cal.Rptr. 542].)

Secondary Sources

2 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 17, Nuisance and Trespass, § 17.20[3] (Matthew Bender)

48 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass, § 550.15 (Matthew Bender)

22 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 225, Trespass, § 225.40 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Torts § 18:4 (Thomson Reuters)

2005. Affirmative Defense—Necessity

[Name of defendant] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] is not responsible for [name of plaintiff]'s harm, if any, because the entry on to [name of plaintiff]'s property was lawful. To succeed, [name of defendant] must prove that it was necessary, or reasonably appeared to [him/her/nonbinary pronoun/it] to be necessary, to enter the land to prevent serious harm to a person or property.

New September 2003; Revised October 2008

Sources and Authority

- "[I]t has long [been] recognized that '[n]ecessity often justifies an action which would otherwise constitute a trespass, as where the act is prompted by the motive of preserving life or property and reasonably appears to the actor to be necessary for that purpose.' " (People v. Ray (1999) 21 Cal.4th 464, 473 [88 Cal.Rptr.2d 1, 981 P.2d 928], internal citations omitted.)
- Restatement Second of Torts, section 197 provides:

  (1) One is privileged to enter or remain on land in the possession of another if it is or reasonably appears to be necessary to prevent serious harm to

  (a) the actor, or his land or chattels, or

  (b) the other or a third person, or the land or chattels of either, unless the actor knows or has reason to know that the one for whose benefit he enters is unwilling that he shall take such action.

  (2) Where the entry is for the benefit of the actor or a third person, he is subject to liability for any harm done in the exercise of the privilege stated in Subsection (1) to any legally protected interest of the possessor in the land or connected with it, except where the threat of harm to avert which the entry is made is caused by the tortious conduct or contributory negligence of the possessor.

- This Restatement section was noted as having been previously cited in People v. Ray, supra, 21 Cal.4th at p. 474.

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 771, 772

2 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 17, Nuisance and Trespass, § 17.22[2] (Matthew Bender)

48 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass, §§ 550.22, 550.51 (Matthew Bender)

22 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 225, Trespass, §§ 225.220, 225.221 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Torts § 18:11 (Thomson Reuters)

2006–2019. Reserved for Future Use

2020. Public Nuisance—Essential Factual Elements

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] suffered harm because [name of defendant] created a nuisance. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant], by acting or failing to act, created a condition or permitted a condition to exist that [insert one or more of the following:]

   [was harmful to health;] [or]

   [was indecent or offensive to the senses;] [or]

   [was an obstruction to the free use of property, so as to interfere with the comfortable enjoyment of life or property;] [or]

   [unlawfully obstructed the free passage or use, in the customary manner, of any navigable lake, or river, bay, stream, canal, or basin, or any public park, square, street, or highway;] [or]

   [was [a/an] [fire hazard/specify other potentially dangerous condition] to [name of plaintiff]'s property;]

2. That the condition affected a substantial number of people at the same time;
3. That an ordinary person would be reasonably annoyed or disturbed by the condition;
4. That the seriousness of the harm outweighs the social utility of [name of defendant]'s conduct;

[5. That [name of plaintiff] did not consent to [name of defendant]'s conduct;]

6. That [name of plaintiff] suffered harm that was different from the type of harm suffered by the general public; and
7. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003; Revised December 2007, June 2016, November 2017, May 2019, November 2019

Directions for Use

Give this instruction for a claim for public nuisance. For an instruction on private nuisance, give CACI No. 2021, Private Nuisance—Essential Factual Elements. While a private nuisance is designed to vindicate individual land ownership interests, a public nuisance is not dependent on an interference with any particular rights of land: The public nuisance doctrine aims at the protection and redress of community interests. (Citizens for Odor Nuisance Abatement v. City of San Diego (2017) 8 Cal.App.5th 350, 358 [213 Cal.Rptr.3d 538].)

There is some uncertainty as to whether lack of consent is an element (element 5) or consent is a defense. Cases clearly list lack of consent with the elements. (See Department of Fish & Game v. Superior Court (2011) 197 Cal.App.4th 1323, 1352 [129 Cal.Rptr.3d 719]; Birke v. Oakwood Worldwide (2009) 169 Cal.App.4th 1540, 1548 [87 Cal.Rptr.3d 602].) However, other cases have referred to consent as a defense, albeit in the context of a nuisance action involving parties with interests in the same property. (See Newhall Land & Farming Co. v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal.App.4th 334, 341–345 [23 Cal.Rptr. 2d 377]; Mangini v. Aerojet-General Corp. (1991) 230 Cal.App.3d 1125, 1138–1140 [281 Cal.Rptr. 827].)

Sources and Authority

- "Nuisance" Defined. Civil Code section 3479.
- Public Nuisance. Civil Code section 3480.
- Action by Private Person for Public Nuisance. Civil Code section 3493.
- Act Done Under Express Authority of Statute. Civil Code section 3482.
- Property Used for Dogfighting and Cockfighting. Civil Code section 3482.8.
- "[T]he exculpatory effect of Civil Code section 3482 has been circumscribed by decisions of this court. . . . ' "A statutory sanction cannot be pleaded in justification of acts which by the general rules of law constitute a nuisance, unless the acts complained of are authorized by the express terms of the statute under which the justification is made, or by the plainest and most necessary implication from the powers expressly conferred, so that it can be fairly stated that the Legislature contemplated the doing of the very act which occasions the injury." ' " (Varjabedian v. City of Madera (1977) 20 Cal.3d 285, 291 [142 Cal.Rptr. 429, 572 P.2d 43], internal citation omitted.)
- "Public nuisance and private nuisance 'have almost nothing in common except the word "nuisance" itself.' Whereas private nuisance is designed to vindicate individual land ownership interests, the public nuisance doctrine has historically distinct origins and aims at 'the protection and redress of community interests.' With its roots tracing to the beginning of the 16th century as a criminal offense against the crown, public nuisances at common law are 'offenses against, or interferences with, the exercise of rights common to the public,' such as public health, safety, peace, comfort, or convenience." (Citizens for Odor Nuisance Abatement, supra, 8 Cal.App.5th at p. 358, original italics, internal citation omitted.)
- "The elements of a public nuisance, under the circumstances of this case, are as follows: (1) the 2007 poisoning obstructed the free use of property, so as to interfere with the comfortable enjoyment of life or property; (2) the 2007 poisoning affected a substantial number of people; (3) an ordinary person would be unreasonably annoyed or disturbed by the 2007 poisoning; (4) the seriousness of the harm occasioned by the 2007 poisoning outweighed its social utility; (5) plaintiffs did not consent to the 2007 poisoning; (6) plaintiffs suffered harm as a result of the 2007 poisoning that was different from the type of harm suffered by the general public; and (7) the 2007 poisoning was a substantial factor in causing plaintiffs' harm." (Department of Fish & Game, supra, 197 Cal.App.4th at p. 1352 [citing this instruction].)

- "Where the nuisance alleged is not also a private nuisance as to a private individual he does not have a cause of action on account of a public nuisance unless he alleges facts showing special injury to himself in person or property of a character different in kind from that suffered by the general public." (Venuto v. Owens Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1971) 22 Cal.App.3d 116, 124 [99 Cal.Rptr. 350], internal citations omitted; but see Birke, supra, 169 Cal.App.4th at p. 1550 ["to the extent Venuto . . . can be read as precluding an action to abate a public nuisance by a private individual who has suffered personal injuries as a result of the challenged condition, we believe it is an incorrect statement of the law"].)
- "Unlike the private nuisance—tied to and designed to vindicate individual ownership interests in land—the 'common' or public nuisance emerged from distinctly different historical origins. The public nuisance doctrine is aimed at the protection and redress of community interests and, at least in theory, embodies a kind of collective ideal of civil life which the courts have vindicated by equitable remedies since the beginning of the 16th century." (People ex rel. Gallo v. Acuna (1997) 14 Cal.4th 1090, 1103 [60 Cal.Rptr.2d 277, 929 P.2d 596].)
- "[W]hen the nuisance is a private as well as a public one, there is no requirement the plaintiff suffer damage different in kind from that suffered by the general public. That is, the plaintiff ' "does not lose his rights as a landowner merely because others suffer damage of the same kind, or even of the same degree . . . ." ' " (Birke, supra, 169 Cal.App.4th at p. 1551, internal citations omitted.)
- "A public nuisance cause of action is established by proof that a defendant knowingly created or assisted in the creation of a substantial and unreasonable interference with a public right." (People v. ConAgra Grocery Products Co. (2017) 17 Cal.App.5th 51, 79 [227 Cal.Rptr.3d 499].)
- "Of course, not every interference with collective social interests constitutes a public nuisance. To qualify . . . the interference must be both substantial and unreasonable." (People ex rel. Gallo, supra, 14 Cal.4th at p. 1105.)
- "It is substantial if it causes significant harm and unreasonable if its social utility is outweighed by the gravity of the harm inflicted." People v. ConAgra Grocery Products Co., supra, 17 Cal.App.5th at p. 112.)
- "The fact that the defendants' alleged misconduct consists of omission rather than affirmative actions does not preclude nuisance liability." (Birke, supra, 169 Cal.App.4th at p. 1552 [citing this instruction], internal citation omitted.)
- "A nuisance may be either a negligent or an intentional tort." (Stoiber v.

Honeychuck (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 903, 920 [162 Cal.Rptr. 194], internal citation omitted.)

- "Nuisance liability is not necessarily based on negligence, thus, 'one may be liable for a nuisance even in the absence of negligence. [Citations.]' However, ' "where liability for the nuisance is predicated on the omission of the owner of the premises to abate it, rather than on his having created it, then negligence is said to be involved. . . ." [Citations.]' " (City of Pasadena v. Superior Court (2014) 228 Cal.App.4th 1228, 1236 [176 Cal.Rptr.3d 422], internal citations omitted.)
- "An essential element of a cause of action for nuisance is damage or injury." (Helix Land Co., Inc. v. City of San Diego (1978) 82 Cal.App.3d 932, 950 [147 Cal.Rptr. 683].)
- "[M]ere apprehension of injury from a dangerous condition may constitute a nuisance where it interferes with the comfortable enjoyment of property . . . ." (McIvor v. Mercer-Fraser Co. (1946) 76 Cal.App.2d 247, 254 [172 P.2d 758].)
- "A fire hazard, at least when coupled with other conditions, can be found to be a public nuisance and abated." (People v. Oliver (1948) 86 Cal.App.2d 885, 889 [195 P.2d 926].)
- "By analogy to the rules governing tort liability, courts apply the same elements to determine liability for a public nuisance." (People ex rel. Gallo, supra, 14 Cal.4th at p. 1105, fn. 3, internal citation omitted.)
- "The elements 'of a cause of action for public nuisance include the existence of a duty and causation.' " (Melton v. Boustred (2010) 183 Cal.App.4th 521, 542 [107 Cal.Rptr.3d 481], internal citations omitted.)
- "[L]iability for nuisance does not hinge on whether the defendant owns, possesses or controls the property, nor on whether he is in a position to abate the nuisance; the critical question is whether the defendant created or assisted in the creation of the nuisance." (People v. ConAgra Grocery Products Co., supra, 17 Cal.App.5th at p. 109, original italics.)
- "Causation is an essential element of a public nuisance claim. A plaintiff must establish a 'connecting element' or a 'causative link' between the defendant's conduct and the threatened harm." (Citizens for Odor Nuisance Abatement, supra, 8 Cal.App.5th at p. 359 [citing this instruction], internal citation omitted.)
- "Causation may consist of either '(a) an act; or [¶] (b) a failure to act under circumstances in which the actor is under a duty to take positive action to prevent or abate the interference with the public interest or the invasion of the public interest.' A plaintiff must show the defendant's conduct was a 'substantial factor' in causing the alleged harm." (Citizens for Odor Nuisance Abatement, supra, 8 Cal.App.5th at p. 359 [citing this instruction], internal citation omitted.)
- " 'Where negligence and nuisance causes of action rely on the same facts about lack of due care, the nuisance claim is a negligence claim.' The nuisance claim 'stands or falls with the determination of the negligence cause of action' in such cases." (Melton, supra, 183 Cal.App.4th at p. 542, internal citations omitted.)

- "[W]here, as here, an owner of property seeks damages for creation of a nuisance by a prior lessee, the lessee has a defense that his use of the property was lawful and was authorized by the lease; i.e., his use of the property was undertaken with the consent of the owner." (Mangini, supra, 230 Cal.App.3d at p. 1138, original italics.)
- "Nor is a defense of consent vitiated simply because plaintiffs seek damages based on special injury from public nuisance. 'Where special injury to a private person or persons entitles such person or persons to sue on account of a public nuisance, both a public and private nuisance, in a sense, are in existence.' " (Mangini, supra, 230 Cal.App.3d at p. 1139.)
- "[W]here the law expressly declares something to be a nuisance, then no inquiry beyond its existence need be made and in this sense its mere existence is said to be a nuisance per se. [Citation.] But, to rephrase the rule, to be considered a nuisance per se the object, substance, activity or circumstance at issue must be expressly declared to be a nuisance by its very existence by some applicable law." (People v. ConAgra Grocery Products Co., supra, 17 Cal.App.5th at p. 114.)

Secondary Sources

13 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Equity, § 152

Greenwald & Asimow, California Practice Guide: Real Property Transactions, Ch. 5-D, Common Law Environmental Hazards Liability, ¶¶ 5:140–5:179 (The Rutter Group)

California Real Property Remedies and Damages (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Ch. 11, Remedies for Nuisance and Trespass, § 11.7

2 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 17, Nuisance and Trespass, §§ 17.01–17.04, 17.06 (Matthew Bender)

34 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance, § 391.12 (Matthew Bender)

16 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 167, Nuisance, § 167.20 et seq. (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Torts §§ 17:1–17:3 (Thomson Reuters)

2021. Private Nuisance—Essential Factual Elements

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] suffered harm because [name of defendant] created a nuisance. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] [owned/leased/occupied/controlled] the property;
2. That [name of defendant], by acting or failing to act, created a condition or permitted a condition to exist that [insert one or more of the following:]

   [was harmful to health;] [or]

   [was indecent or offensive to the senses;] [or]

   [was an obstruction to the free use of property, so as to interfere with the comfortable enjoyment of life or property;] [or]

   [unlawfully obstructed the free passage or use, in the customary manner, of any navigable lake, or river, bay, stream, canal, or basin, or any public park, square, street, or highway;] [or]

   [was [a/an] [fire hazard/*specify other potentially dangerous condition] to [name of plaintiff]'s property;]
3. That [[name of defendant]'s conduct in acting or failing to act was [intentional and unreasonable/unintentional, but negligent or reckless]/[the condition that [name of defendant] created or permitted to exist was the result of an abnormally dangerous activity]];
4. That this condition substantially interfered with [name of plaintiff]'s use or enjoyment of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] land;
5. That an ordinary person would reasonably be annoyed or disturbed by [name of defendant]'s conduct;

[6. That [*name of plaintiff] did not consent to [name of defendant]'s conduct;]

7. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed;
8. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm; and
9. That the seriousness of the harm outweighs the public benefit of

[name of defendant]'s conduct.

New September 2003; Revised February 2007, December 2011, December 2015, June 2016, May 2017, May 2018, May 2019

Directions for Use

Private nuisance liability depends on some sort of conduct by the defendant that either directly and unreasonably interferes with the plaintiff's property or creates a condition that does so. (Lussier v. San Lorenzo Valley Water Dist. (1988) 206 Cal.App.3d 92, 100 [253 Cal.Rptr. 470].) Element 2 requires that the defendant have acted to create a condition or allowed a condition to exist by failing to act.

The act that causes the interference may be intentional and unreasonable. Or it may be unintentional but caused by negligent or reckless conduct. Or it may result from an abnormally dangerous activity for which there is strict liability. However, if the act is intentional but reasonable, or if it is entirely accidental, there is generally no liability. (Lussier, supra, 206 Cal.App.3d at p. 100.)

The intent required is only to do the act that interferes, not an intent to cause harm. (Lussier, supra, 206 Cal.App.3d at pp. 100, 106; see Rest.2d Torts, § 822.) For example, it is sufficient that one intend to chop down a tree; it is not necessary to intend that it fall on a neighbor's property.

If the condition results from an abnormally dangerous activity, it must be one for which there is strict liability. (Lussier, supra, 206 Cal.App.3d at p. 100; see Rest.2d Torts, § 822).

There may be an exception to the scienter requirement of element 3 for at least some harm caused by trees. There are cases holding that a property owner is strictly liable for damage caused by tree branches and roots that encroach on neighboring property. (See Lussier, supra, 206 Cal.App.3d at p.106, fn. 5; see also Mattos v. Mattos (1958) 162 Cal.App.2d 41, 43 [328 P.2d 269] [absolute liability of an owner to remove portions of his fallen trees that extend over and upon another's land]; cf. City of Pasadena v. Superior Court (2014) 228 Cal.App.4th 1228, 1236 [176 Cal.Rptr.3d 422] [plaintiff must prove negligent maintenance of trees that fell onto plaintiff's property in a windstorm].) Do not give element 3 if the court decides that there is strict liability for damage caused by encroaching or falling trees.

There is some uncertainty as to whether lack of consent is an element (element 6) or consent is a defense. Cases clearly list lack of consent with the elements. (See Department of Fish & Game v. Superior Court (2011) 197 Cal.App.4th 1323, 1352 [129 Cal.Rptr.3d 719]; Birke v. Oakwood Worldwide (2009) 169 Cal.App.4th 1540, 1548 [87 Cal.Rptr.3d 602].) However, other cases have referred to consent as a defense, albeit in the context of a nuisance action involving parties with interests in the same property. (See Newhall Land & Farming Co. v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal.App.4th 334, 341–345, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377; Mangini v. Aerojet-General Corp. (1991) 230 Cal.App.3d 1125, 1138–1140 [281 Cal.Rptr. 827].)

If the claim is that the defendant failed to abate a nuisance, negligence must be proved. (City of Pasadena, supra, 228 Cal.App.4th at p. 1236.)

Element 9 must be supplemented with CACI No. 2022, Private Nuisance—Balancing-Test Factors—Seriousness of Harm and Public Benefit. (See Wilson v. Southern California Edison Co. (2015) 234 Cal.App.4th 123, 160–165 [184 Cal.Rptr.3d 26].) For instruction on control of property, see CACI No. 1002, Extent of Control Over Premises Area, in the Premises Liability series.

Sources and Authority

- "Nuisance" Defined. Civil Code section 3479.
- Acts Done Under Express Authority of Statute. Civil Code section 3482.
- "A nuisance is considered a 'public nuisance' when it 'affects at the same time an entire community or neighborhood, or any considerable number of persons, although the extent of the annoyance or damage inflicted upon individuals may be unequal.' A 'private nuisance' is defined to include any nuisance not covered by the definition of a public nuisance, and also includes some public nuisances. 'In other words, it is possible for a nuisance to be public and, from the perspective of individuals who suffer an interference with their use and enjoyment of land, to be private as well.' " (Mendez v. Rancho Valencia Resort Partners, LLC (2016) 3 Cal.App.5th 248, 261–262 [207 Cal.Rptr.3d 532], internal citations omitted.)
- "The elements of a public nuisance, under the circumstances of this case, are as follows: (1) the 2007 poisoning obstructed the free use of property, so as to interfere with the comfortable enjoyment of life or property; (2) the 2007 poisoning affected a substantial number of people; (3) an ordinary person would be unreasonably annoyed or disturbed by the 2007 poisoning; (4) the seriousness of the harm occasioned by the 2007 poisoning outweighed its social utility; (5) plaintiffs did not consent to the 2007 poisoning; (6) plaintiffs suffered harm as a result of the 2007 poisoning that was different from the type of harm suffered by the general public; and (7) the 2007 poisoning was a substantial factor in causing plaintiffs' harm.[¶][] The elements of a private nuisance are the same except there is no requirement that plaintiffs prove a substantial number of people were harmed and plaintiffs suffered harm that was different from that suffered by the general public, but there are additional elements that plaintiffs owned, leased, occupied or controlled real property, that the 2007 poisoning interfered with plaintiffs' use of their property, and that plaintiffs were harmed thereby" (Department of Fish & Game, supra, 197 Cal.App.4th at p. 1352 [citing this instruction].)
- "In their first cause of action, plaintiffs allege the 2007 poisoning adversely affected tourism for a substantial period of time, caused plaintiffs to suffer serious losses, obstructed the free use of plaintiffs' property, and interfered with plaintiffs' comfortable enjoyment of their property or their businesses. Strictly speaking, this does not state a claim for either public or private nuisance. There is no allegation that plaintiffs did not consent to the 2007 poisoning, that an ordinary person would have been annoyed or disturbed by the 2007 poisoning, or that the seriousness of the harm caused by the 2007 poisoning outweighed its public benefit." (Department of Fish & Game, supra, 197 Cal.App.4th at p. 1352.)

- "In distinction to trespass, liability for nuisance does not require proof of damage to the plaintiff's property; proof of interference with the plaintiff's use and enjoyment of that property is sufficient." (San Diego Gas & Electric Co. v. Superior Court (1996) 13 Cal.4th 893, 937 [55 Cal.Rptr.2d 724, 920 P.2d 669].)
- "[T]he essence of a private nuisance is its interference with the use and enjoyment of land. The activity in issue must 'disturb or prevent the comfortable enjoyment of property,' such as smoke from an asphalt mixing plant, noise and odors from the operation of a refreshment stand, or the noise and vibration of machinery." (Oliver v. AT&T Wireless Services (1999) 76 Cal.App.4th 521, 534 [90 Cal.Rptr.2d 491], internal citations omitted.)
- "A nuisance is an interference with the interest in the private use and enjoyment of the land and does not require interference with the possession." (McBride v. Smith (2018) 18 Cal.App.5th 1160, 1178 [227 Cal.Rptr.3d 390].)
- "[T]o proceed on a private nuisance theory the plaintiff must prove an injury specifically referable to the use and enjoyment of his or her land. The injury, however, need not be different in kind from that suffered by the general public." (Koll-Irvine Center Property Owners Assn. v. County of Orange (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 1036, 1041 [29 Cal.Rptr.2d 664], internal citation omitted.)
- "So long as the interference is substantial and unreasonable, and such as would be offensive or inconvenient to the normal person, virtually any disturbance of the enjoyment of the property may amount to a nuisance; . . . ." (Mendez, supra, 3 Cal.App.5th at p. 262.)
- "The requirements of substantial damage and unreasonableness are not inconsequential. These requirements stem from the law's recognition that: ' "Life in organized society and especially in populous communities involves an unavoidable clash of individual interests. Practically all human activities unless carried on in a wilderness interfere to some extent with others or involve some risk of interference, and these interferences range from mere trifling annoyances to serious harms. It is an obvious truth that each individual in a community must put up with a certain amount of annoyance, inconvenience and interference and must take a certain amount of risk in order that all may get on together. The very existence of organized society depends upon the principle of 'give and take, live and let live,' and therefore the law of torts does not attempt to impose liability or shift the loss in every case in which one person's conduct has some detrimental effect on another. Liability . . . is imposed in those cases in which the harm or risk to one is greater than he ought to be required to bear under the circumstances, at least without compensation." ' " (Mendez, supra, 3 Cal.App.5th at p. 263, original italics.)
- "The first additional requirement for recovery of damages on a nuisance theory is proof that the invasion of the plaintiff's interest in the use and enjoyment of the land was substantial, i.e., that it caused the plaintiff to suffer 'substantial actual damage.' The Restatement recognizes the same requirement as the need for proof of 'significant harm,' which it variously defines as 'harm of importance' and a 'real and appreciable invasion of the plaintiff's interests' and an invasion that is 'definitely offensive, seriously annoying or intolerable.' The degree of harm is to be judged by an objective standard, i.e., what effect would the invasion have on persons of normal health and sensibilities living in the same community? 'If normal persons in that locality would not be substantially annoyed or disturbed by the situation, then the invasion is not a significant one, even though the idiosyncrasies of the particular plaintiff may make it unendurable to him.' This is, of course, a question of fact that turns on the circumstances of each case." (San Diego Gas & Electric Co., supra, 13 Cal.4th at p. 938, internal citations omitted.)

- "The second additional requirement for nuisance is superficially similar but analytically distinct: 'The interference with the protected interest must not only be substantial, but it must also be unreasonable', i.e., it must be 'of such a nature, duration or amount as to constitute unreasonable interference with the use and enjoyment of the land.' The primary test for determining whether the invasion is unreasonable is whether the gravity of the harm outweighs the social utility of the defendant's conduct, taking a number of factors into account. Again the standard is objective: the question is not whether the particular plaintiff found the invasion unreasonable, but 'whether reasonable persons generally, looking at the whole situation impartially and objectively, would consider it unreasonable.' And again this is a question of fact: 'Fundamentally, the unreasonableness of intentional invasions is a problem of relative values to be determined by the trier of fact in each case in the light of all the circumstances of that case.' " (San Diego Gas & Electric Co., supra, 13 Cal.4th at pp. 938–939, internal citations omitted.)
- "Appellant first argues that the judgment is erroneous because there is no showing that any act or conduct of his caused the damage. It is true that there is neither showing nor finding of any negligent or wrongful act or omission of defendant proximately causing the falling of the trees. But no such showing is required. If the trees remained upright, with some of their branches extending over or upon plaintiff's land, they clearly would constitute a nuisance, which defendant could be required to abate." (Mattos, supra, 162 Cal.App.2d at p. 42.)
- "Although the central idea of nuisance is the unreasonable invasion of this interest and not the particular type of conduct subjecting the actor to liability, liability nevertheless depends on some sort of conduct that either directly and unreasonably interferes with it or creates a condition that does so. 'The invasion may be intentional and unreasonable. It may be unintentional but caused by negligent or reckless conduct; or it may result from an abnormally dangerous activity for which there is strict liability. On any of these bases the defendant may be liable. On the other hand, the invasion may be intentional but reasonable; or it may be entirely accidental and not fall within any of the categories mentioned above. In these cases there is no liability.' " (Lussier, supra, 206 Cal.App.3d at p. 100, internal citations omitted.)

- "A finding of an actionable nuisance does not require a showing that the defendant acted unreasonably. As one treatise noted, '[c]onfusion has resulted from the fact that the intentional interference with the plaintiff's use of his property can be unreasonable even when the defendant's conduct is reasonable. This is simply because a reasonable person could conclude that the plaintiff's loss resulting from the intentional interference ought to be allocated to the defendant.' " (Wilson v. Southern California Edison Co. (2018) 21 Cal.App.5th 786, 804 [230 Cal.Rptr.3d 595], quoting Prosser & Keeton (5th ed. 1984) Torts § 88.)
- "We do not intend to suggest, however, that one is strictly liable for damages that arise when a natural condition of one's land interferes with another's free use and enjoyment of his property. Such a rule would, quite anomalously, equate natural conditions with dangerous animals, ultrahazardous activities, or defective products, for which strict liability is reserved." (Lussier, supra, 206 Cal.App.3d at pp. 101–102.)
- "Clearly, a claim of nuisance based on our example is easier to prove than one based on negligent conduct, for in the former, a plaintiff need only show that the defendant committed the acts that caused injury, whereas in the latter, a plaintiff must establish a duty to act and prove that the defendant's failure to act reasonably in the face of a known danger breached that duty and caused damages." (Lussier, supra, 206 Cal.App.3d at p. 106.)
- "We note, however, a unique line of cases, starting with Grandona v. Lovdal (1886) 70 Cal. 161 [11 P. 623], which holds that to the extent that the branches and roots of trees encroach upon another's land and cause or threaten damage, they may constitute a nuisance. Superficially, these cases appear to impose nuisance liability in the absence of wrongful conduct." (Lussier, supra, 206 Cal.App.3d at p. 102, fn. 5 [but questioning validity of such a rule], internal citations omitted.)
- "The fact that the defendants' alleged misconduct consists of omission rather than affirmative actions does not preclude nuisance liability." (Birke, supra, 169 Cal.App.4th at p. 1552, internal citations omitted.)
- "A nuisance may be either a negligent or an intentional tort." (Stoiber v. Honeychuck (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 903, 920 [162 Cal.Rptr. 194], internal citation omitted.)
- "Nuisance liability is not necessarily based on negligence, thus, 'one may be liable for a nuisance even in the absence of negligence. [Citations.]' However, ' " 'where liability for the nuisance is predicated on the omission of the owner of the premises to abate it, rather than on his having created it, then negligence is said to be involved. . . .' [Citations.]' " (City of Pasadena, supra, 228 Cal.App.4th at p. 1236, internal citations omitted.)

- "We acknowledge that to recover on a nuisance claim the harm the plaintiff suffers need not be a physical injury. Thus, the absence of evidence in this case to establish that [plaintiff] 's physical injuries were caused by the stray voltage would not preclude recovery on her nuisance claim." (Wilson, supra, 234 Cal.App.4th at p. 159, internal citations omitted.)
- "[M]ere apprehension of injury from a dangerous condition may constitute a nuisance where it interferes with the comfortable enjoyment of property. . . ." (McIvor v. Mercer-Fraser Co. (1946) 76 Cal.App.2d 247, 254 [172 P.2d 758].)
- "It is the general rule that the unreasonable, unwarrantable or unlawful use by a person of his own property so as to interfere with the rights of others is a nuisance [citation]. In fact, any unwarranted activity which causes substantial injury to the property of another or obstructs its reasonable use and enjoyment is a nuisance which may be abated. And, even a lawful use of one's property may constitute a nuisance if it is part of a general scheme to annoy a neighbor and if the main purpose of the use is to prevent the neighbor from reasonable enjoyment of his own property [citation]." (McBride, supra, 18 Cal.App.5th at p. 1180.)
- " 'Occupancy goes to the holding, possessing or residing in or on something.' 'The rights which attend occupancy may be, arguably, many.' ' "Invasion of the right of private occupancy" resembles the definition of nuisance, an " 'interference with the interest in the private use and enjoyment of the land.' " [Citations.] 'The typical and familiar nuisance claim involves an activity or condition which causes damage or other interference with the enjoyment of adjoining or neighboring land." ' " (Albert v. Truck Ins. Exchange (2018) 23 Cal.App.5th 367, 380 [232 Cal.Rptr.3d 774, internal citations omitted.)
- "An invasion of the right of private occupancy does not have to be a physical invasion of the land; a nonphysical invasion of real property rights can interfere with the use and enjoyment of real property." (Albert, supra, 23 Cal.App.5th at p. 380.)
- "A fire hazard, at least when coupled with other conditions, can be found to be a public nuisance and abated." (People v. Oliver (1948) 86 Cal.App.2d 885, 889 [195 P.2d 926].)
- "[T]he exculpatory effect of Civil Code section 3482 has been circumscribed by decisions of this court. . . . ' "A statutory sanction cannot be pleaded in justification of acts which by the general rules of law constitute a nuisance, unless the acts complained of are authorized by the express terms of the statute under which the justification is made, or by the plainest and most necessary implication from the powers expressly conferred, so that it can be fairly stated that the Legislature contemplated the doing of the very act which occasions the injury.' " " (Varjabedian v. City of Madera (1977) 20 Cal.3d 285, 291 [142 Cal.Rptr. 429, 572 P.2d 43], internal citation omitted.)
- "[W]here, as here, an owner of property seeks damages for creation of a nuisance by a prior lessee, the lessee has a defense that his use of the property was lawful and was authorized by the lease; i.e., his use of the property was undertaken with the consent of the owner." (Mangini, supra, 230 Cal.App.3d at p. 1138, original italics.)

Secondary Sources

13 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Equity, § 174

2 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 17, Nuisance and Trespass, §§ 17.01–17.05 (Matthew Bender)

34 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance, § 391.13 (Matthew Bender)

16 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 167, Nuisance, § 167.20 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Torts §§ 17:1, 17:2, 17:4 (Thomson Reuters)

2022. Private Nuisance—Balancing-Test Factors—Seriousness of Harm and Public Benefit

---

In determining whether the seriousness of the harm to [name of plaintiff] outweighs the public benefit of [name of defendant]'s conduct, you should consider a number of factors.

To determine the seriousness of the harm [name of plaintiff] suffered, you should consider the following:

a. The extent of the harm, meaning how much the condition [name of defendant] caused interfered with [name of plaintiff]'s use or enjoyment of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] property, and how long that interference lasted.

b. The character of the harm, that is, whether the harm involved a loss from the destruction or impairment of physical things that [name of plaintiff] was using, or personal discomfort or annoyance.

c. The value that society places on the type of use or enjoyment invaded. The greater the social value of the particular type of use or enjoyment of land that is invaded, the greater is the seriousness of the harm from the invasion.

d. The suitability of the type of use or enjoyment invaded to the nature of the locality. The nature of a locality is based on the primary kind of activity at that location, such as residential, industrial, or other activity.

e. The extent of the burden (such as expense and inconvenience) placed on [name of plaintiff] to avoid the harm.

To determine the public benefit of [name of defendant]'s conduct, you should consider:

a. The value that society places on the primary purpose of the conduct that caused the interference. The primary purpose of the conduct means [name of defendant]'s main objective for engaging in the conduct. How much social value a particular purpose has depends on how much its achievement generally advances or protects the public good.

b. The suitability of the conduct that caused the interference to the nature of the locality. The suitability of the conduct depends upon its compatibility to the primary activities carried on in the locality.

c. The practicability or impracticality of preventing or avoiding the invasion.

New December 2015

Directions for Use

This instruction must be given with CACI No. 2021, Private Nuisance—Essential Factual Elements. (See Wilson v. Southern California Edison Co. (2015) 234 Cal.App.4th 123, 160–165 [184 Cal.Rptr.3d 26].) CACI No. 2021 has been found to be inadequate to express the requirement that the plaintiff must suffer serious harm without this additional guidance to the jury on how to determine whether the seriousness of the plaintiff's harm outweighs the public benefit of the defendant's conduct (CACI No. 2021, element 8). (See Id. at pp. 162–163.)

Sources and Authority

- " 'The interference with the protected interest must not only be substantial, but it must also be unreasonable', i.e., it must be 'of such a nature, duration or amount as to constitute unreasonable interference with the use and enjoyment of the land.' The primary test for determining whether the invasion is unreasonable is whether the gravity of the harm outweighs the social utility of the defendant's conduct, taking a number of factors into account. Again the standard is objective: the question is not whether the particular plaintiff found the invasion unreasonable, but 'whether reasonable persons generally, looking at the whole situation impartially and objectively, would consider it unreasonable.' And again this is a question of fact: 'Fundamentally, the unreasonableness of intentional invasions is a problem of relative values to be determined by the trier of fact in each case in the light of all the circumstances of that case.' " (San Diego Gas & Electric Co. v. Superior Court (1996) 13 Cal.4th 893, 938–939 [55 Cal.Rptr.2d 724, 920 P.2d 669], internal citations omitted.)
- "Had the jury been instructed on the proper factors to consider when weighing the gravity of the harm against the social utility of [defendant]'s conduct and found [defendant] liable, the statement of these elements would be sufficient because in finding in favor of [plaintiff] the jury necessarily would have concluded that the harm was substantial. Without such instruction, it is not." (Wilson, supra, 234 Cal.App.4th at p. 163.)
- Restatement Second of Torts, section 827 provides:

  In determining the gravity of the harm from an intentional invasion of another's interest in the use and enjoyment of land, the following factors are important:

  (a) the extent of the harm involved;

  (b) the character of the harm involved;

  (c) the social value that the law attaches to the type of use or enjoyment invaded;

  (d) the suitability of the particular use or enjoyment invaded to the character of the locality; and

(e) the burden on the person harmed of avoiding the harm.

- Restatement Second of Torts, section 828 provides:

  In determining the utility of conduct that causes an intentional invasion of another's interest in the use and enjoyment of land, the following factors are important:

  (a) the social value that the law attaches to the primary purpose of the conduct;

  (b) the suitability of the conduct to the character of the locality; and

  (c) the impracticability of preventing or avoiding the invasion.

Secondary Sources

13 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Equity, § 190

2 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 17, Nuisance and Trespass, § 17.05 (Matthew Bender)

9 California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 320, The Law of Nuisance, § 320.15 (Matthew Bender)

34 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 391, Nuisance, § 391.20 (Matthew Bender)

16 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 167, Nuisance, § 167.47 (Matthew Bender)

2023. Failure to Abate Artificial Condition on Land Creating Nuisance

---

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] unreasonably failed to put an end to an artificial condition on [name of defendant]'s land that was a [public/private] nuisance. To establish this claim, in addition to proving that the condition created a nuisance, [name of plaintiff] must also prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] was in possession of the land where the artificial condition existed;
2. That [name of defendant] knew or should have known of the condition and that it created a nuisance or an unreasonable risk of nuisance;
3. That [name of defendant] knew or should have known that [[name of plaintiff]/the affected members of the public] did not consent to the condition; and
4. That after a reasonable opportunity, [name of defendant] failed to take reasonable steps to put an end to the condition or to protect [[name of plaintiff]/the public] from the nuisance.

New November 2018

Directions for Use

This instruction is based on the Restatement Second of Torts, section 839 (see Leslie Salt Co. v. San Francisco Bay Conservation etc. Com. (1984) 153 Cal.App.3d 605, 618–622 [200 Cal.Rptr. 575]), which applies to both public and private nuisances. (Rest. 2d Torts, § 839, comment (a).) For a private nuisance, select the plaintiff in elements 3 and 4.

Give this instruction with either CACI No. 2020, Public Nuisance—Essential Factual Elements, or CACI No. 2021, Private Nuisance—Essential Factual Elements. For public nuisance, modify element 1 of CACI No. 2020 to replace "created a condition" with "allowed a condition to exist." For private nuisance, this instruction replaces element 3 of CACI No. 2021.

Sources and Authority

- "Under the common law, liability for a public nuisance may result from the failure to act as well as from affirmative conduct. Thus, for example, section 839 of the Restatement Second of Torts declares that 'A possessor of land is subject to liability for a nuisance caused while he is in possession by an abatable artificial condition on the land [such as the placement of fill], if the nuisance is otherwise actionable [e.g., prohibited by statute], and [para.] (a) the possessor knows or should know of the condition and the nuisance or unreasonable risk of nuisance involved, and [para.] (b) he knows or should know that it exists without the consent of those affected by it, and [para.] (c) he has failed after a reasonable opportunity to take reasonable steps to abate the condition or to protect the affected persons against it.'" (Leslie Salt Co., supra, 153 Cal.App.3d at pp. 619–620.)

Secondary Sources

13 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Equity, § 160

12 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Real Property, § 1045

6 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 1230, 1300

2024–2029. Reserved for Future Use

2030. Affirmative Defense—Statute of Limitations—Trespass or Private Nuisance

---

[*Name of defendant] contends that [name of plaintiff]'s lawsuit was not filed within the time set by law. To succeed on this defense, [name of defendant] must prove that [name of plaintiff]'s claimed harm occurred before [insert date three years before date of filing].

[If [*name of defendant] proves that [name of plaintiff]'s claimed harm occurred before [insert date three years before date of filing], the lawsuit was still filed on time if [name of plaintiff] proves that the [trespass/nuisance] is continuous. A [trespass/nuisance] is continuous if it can be discontinued. Among the factors that indicate that the [trespass/nuisance] can be discontinued are the following:

(a) That the [trespass/nuisance] is currently continuing;

(b) That the impact of the condition will vary over time;

(c) That the [trespass/nuisance] can be discontinued at any time, in a reasonable manner, and for reasonable cost, considering the benefits and detriments if it is discontinued.

[You must consider the continuous nature of the damage to the property that a nuisance causes, not the continuous nature of the acts causing the nuisance to occur.]]

New April 2008

Directions for Use

This instruction is for use if the defendant claims that the plaintiff's action was not filed within the applicable three-year period for injury to real property. (See Code Civ. Proc., § 338(b).) This instruction may be used for a permanent trespass other than an action for damages for wrongful damage to timber, to which a five-year statute applies. (See Civ. Code, § 3346(c).) It may also be used for a permanent private nuisance. There is no limitation period for a public nuisance. (See Civ. Code, § 3490.) There is also essentially no statute of limitation for a continuing trespass or continuing private nuisance, but damages for future harm are not recoverable. (See Lyles v. State of California (2007) 153 Cal.App.4th 281, 291 [62 Cal.Rptr.3d 696] [nuisance]; Starrh & Starrh Cotton Growers v. Aera Energy LLC (2007) 153 Cal.App.4th 583, 592 [63 Cal.Rptr.3d 165] [trespass].)

Include the optional second paragraph if there is an issue of fact as to whether the trespass or nuisance is permanent or continuous. If applicable, include the last sentence in the case of a nuisance.

If the plaintiff alleges that the delayed-discovery rule applies to avoid the limitation defense, CACI No. 455, Statute of Limitations—Delayed Discovery, may be adapted for use.

See also CACI No. 3903F, Damage to Real Property (Economic Damage), and CACI No. 3903G, Loss of Use of Real Property (Economic Damage).

Sources and Authority

- Three-Year Statute of Limitations. Code of Civil Procedure section 338.
- No Lapse of Time Can Legalize Public Nuisance. Civil Code section 3490.
- "[A] trespass may be continuing or permanent. A permanent trespass is an intrusion on property under circumstances that indicate an intention that the trespass shall be permanent. In these cases, the law considers the wrong to be completed at the time of entry and allows recovery of damages for past, present, and future harm in a single action, generally the diminution in the property's value. The cause of action accrues and the statute of limitations begins to run at the time of entry. . . . [¶] In contrast, a continuing trespass is an intrusion under circumstances that indicate the trespass may be discontinued or abated. In these circumstances, damages are assessed for present and past damages only; prospective damages are not awarded because the trespass may be discontinued or abated at some time, ending the harm. . . . Continuing trespasses are essentially a series of successive injuries, and the statute of limitations begins anew with each injury. In order to recover for all harm inflicted by a continuing trespass, the plaintiff is required to bring periodic successive actions." (Starrh & Starrh Cotton Growers, supra, 153 Cal.App.4th at p. 592.)
- "Two distinct classifications have emerged in nuisance law which determine the remedies available to injured parties and the applicable statute of limitations. On the one hand, permanent nuisances are of a type where 'by one act a permanent injury is done, [and] damages are assessed once for all.' . . . In such cases, plaintiffs ordinarily are required to bring one action for all past, present and future damage within three years after the permanent nuisance is erected. The statutory period is shorter for claims against public entities. (Gov. Code, § 911.2.) Damages are not dependent upon any subsequent use of the property but are complete when the nuisance comes into existence. [¶] On the other hand, if a nuisance is a use which may be discontinued at any time, it is considered continuing in character and persons harmed by it may bring successive actions for damages until the nuisance is abated. Recovery is limited, however, to actual injury suffered prior to commencement of each action. Prospective damages are unavailable." (Baker v. Burbank-Glendale-Pasadena Airport Auth. (1985) 39 Cal.3d 862, 868–869 [218 Cal.Rptr. 293, 705 P.2d 866], internal citations and footnotes omitted.)
- "Historically, the application of the statute of limitations for trespass has been the same as for nuisance and has depended on whether the trespass has been continuing or permanent." (Mangini v. Aerojet-General Corp. (1991) 230 Cal.App.3d 1125, 1148 [281 Cal.Rptr. 827].)
- "[G]enerally the principles governing the permanent or continuing nature of a trespass or nuisance are the same and the cases discuss the two causes of action without distinction." (Starrh & Starrh Cotton Growers, supra, 153 Cal.App.4th at p. 594.)

- "Generally, whether a trespass is continuing or permanent is a question of fact properly submitted to the jury. A trial court may remove the issue of fact from the jury by directed verdict only if there is no evidence tending to prove the case of the party opposing the motion." (Starrh & Starrh Cotton Growers, supra, 153 Cal.App.4th at p. 597, internal citations omitted.)
- "[T]he key question [in determining whether a trespass is continuous or permanent] is whether the trespass or nuisance can be discontinued or abated and there are a number of tests used to answer this question. A respected legal treatise summarizes the various tests as follows: '[W]hether (1) the offense activity is currently continuing, which indicates that the nuisance is continuing, (2) the impact of the condition will vary over time, indicating a continuing nuisance, or (3) the nuisance can be abated at any time, in a reasonable manner and for reasonable cost, and is feasible by comparison of the benefits and detriments to be gained by abatement.' " (Starrh & Starrh Cotton Growers, supra, 153 Cal.App.4th at pp. 593–594, citing 8 Miller & Starr, Cal. Real Estate (3d ed. 2000) § 22.39, pp. 148–149.)
- "The jury's conclusion that it was unknown whether the soil contamination could be abated by reasonable means at a reasonable cost means that plaintiff had failed to prove her claims of continuing nuisance and trespass." (McCoy v. Gustafson (2009) 180 Cal.App.4th 56, 86 [103 Cal.Rptr.3d 37].)
- "[T]he 'continuing' nature of a nuisance 'refers to the continuing damage caused by the offensive condition, not to the acts causing the offensive condition to occur.' " (Lyles, supra, 153 Cal.App.4th at p. 291, internal citation omitted.)
- "[A] cause of action for damage to real property accrues when the defendant's act causes 'immediate and permanent injury' to the property or, to put it another way, when there is '[a]ctual and appreciable harm' to the property." (Siegel v. Anderson Homes, Inc. (2004) 118 Cal.App.4th 994, 1005 [13 Cal.Rptr.3d 462], original italics, internal citations omitted.)
- "Property damage cases . . . are different from medical malpractice cases in the sense that, when property is damaged, there is ordinarily some wrongful cause. Thus, when one's property is damaged, one should reasonably suspect that someone has done something wrong to him and, accordingly, be charged with knowledge of the information that would have been revealed by an investigation. That particular property damage could result from natural causes does not mean that the same property damage could result only from natural causes." (Lyles, supra, 153 Cal.App.4th at pp. 287–288.)
- "The traditional rule in tort cases is that the statute of limitations begins to run upon the occurrence of the last fact essential to the cause of action. Although sometimes harsh, the fact that plaintiff is neither aware of his cause of action nor of the identity of a wrongdoer will not toll the statute. [¶] The harshness of this rule has been ameliorated in some cases where it is manifestly unjust to deprive plaintiffs of a cause of action before they are aware that they have been injured. This modified rule has been applied to latent defects in real property and improvements. In the case of such latent defects the statute of limitations begins to run only when 'noticeable damage occurs.' " (Leaf v. City of San Mateo (1980) 104 Cal.App.3d 398, 406–407 [163 Cal.Rptr. 711], internal citations omitted, disapproved on another ground in Trope v. Katz (1995) 11 Cal.4th 274, 292 [45 Cal.Rptr.2d 241, 902 P.2d 259], original italics.)

Secondary Sources

2 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 17, Nuisance and Trespass, § 17.09[5] (Matthew Bender)

Brown et al., California Practice Guide: Civil Procedure Before Trial, Ch. 6-C, Pleadings ¶¶ 6:462–6:462.2 (The Rutter Group)

2 California Real Property Remedies and Damages, Ch. 11, Remedies for Nuisance and Trespass (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) §§ 11.38–11.40

1 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 11, Adjoining Landowners, § 11.24 (Matthew Bender)

22 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 225, Trespass, §§ 225.240–225.245 (Matthew Bender)

16 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 167, Nuisance, § 167.44 (Matthew Bender)

2031. Damages for Annoyance and Discomfort—Trespass or Nuisance

---

If you decide that [*name of plaintiff] has proved that [name of defendant] committed a [trespass/nuisance], [name of plaintiff] may recover damages that would reasonably compensate [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] for the annoyance and discomfort, including emotional distress or mental anguish, caused by the injury to [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] peaceful enjoyment of the property that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] occupied.

New December 2010; Revised November 2017

Directions for Use

Give this instruction if the plaintiff claims damages for annoyance and discomfort resulting from a trespass or nuisance, including emotional distress or mental anguish proximately caused by the trespass or nuisance. (Hensley v. San Diego Gas & Electric Co. (2017) 7 Cal.App.5th 1337, 1348–1349 [213 Cal.Rptr.3d 803]; but see Kelly v. CB&I Constructors, Inc. (2009) 179 Cal.App.4th 442, 456 [102 Cal.Rptr.3d 32] [damages for annoyance and discomfort are distinct from general damages for mental or emotional distress]; see also Vieira Enterprises, Inc. v. McCoy (2017) 8 Cal.App.5th 1057, 1094 [214 Cal.Rptr.3d 193 [workability of distinction between damages for annoyance and discomfort and general damages "may be questioned"].)

There may also be a split of authority as to whether the plaintiff must have been in immediate possession of the property in order to recover for annoyance and discomfort. (Compare Hensley, supra, 7 Cal.App.5th at pp. 1352–1355 [no limitation] with Kelly, supra, 179 Cal.App.4th at p. 458 [plaintiff must be in immediate possession of the property]; see also Vieira Enterprises, Inc., supra, 8 Cal.App.5th at p. 1094 [not necessary that the plaintiff be present at the moment of a tortious invasion of the property].)

Sources and Authority

- "Once a cause of action for trespass or nuisance is established, an occupant of land may recover damages for annoyance and discomfort that would naturally ensue therefrom." (Kornoff v. Kingsburg Cotton Oil Co. (1955) 45 Cal.2d 265, 272 [288 P.2d 507].)
- "[T]he restrictions on emotional distress damages involved in breach of contract or negligence cases do not apply when a plaintiff's emotional distress is the result of the defendant's commission of a tort arising from an invasion of a property interest." (Hensley, supra, 7 Cal.App.5th at pp. 1356–1357.)
- "[O]nce a cause of action for trespass or nuisance is established, a landowner may recover for annoyance and discomfort, including emotional distress or mental anguish, proximately caused by the trespass or nuisance. . . . [¶] This is so even where the trespass or nuisance involves solely property damage."

(Hensley, supra, 7 Cal.App.5th at pp. 1348–1349, original italics.)

- "[Plaintiff]'s fear, stress and anxiety suffered as a direct and proximate result of the fire and its attendant damage, loss of use and enjoyment are compensable as damages for annoyance and discomfort." (Hensley, supra, 7 Cal.App.5th at p. 1351.)
- "We reject [defendant]'s contention that in order for emotional distress damages to 'naturally ensue' from a trespass or nuisance, the owner or occupant must be personally or physically present on the invaded property during the trespass or nuisance." (Hensley, supra, 7 Cal.App.5th at p. 1352.)
- "We do not question that a nonresident property owner may suffer mental or emotional distress from damage to his or her property. But annoyance and discomfort damages are distinct from general damages for mental and emotional distress. Annoyance and discomfort damages are intended to compensate a plaintiff for the loss of his or her peaceful occupation and enjoyment of the property. . . . 'We recognize that annoyance and discomfort by their very nature include a mental or emotional component, and that some dictionary definitions of these terms include the concept of distress. Nevertheless, the "annoyance and discomfort" for which damages may be recovered on nuisance and trespass claims generally refers to distress arising out of physical discomfort, irritation, or inconvenience caused by odors, pests, noise, and the like. Our cases have permitted recovery for annoyance and discomfort damages on nuisance and trespass claims while at the same time precluding recovery for "pure" emotional distress.' " (Kelly, supra, 179 Cal.App.4th at p. 456, internal citations omitted.)
- "California cases upholding an award of annoyance and discomfort damages have involved a plaintiff who was in immediate possession of the property as a resident or commercial tenant. We are aware of no California case upholding an award of annoyance and discomfort damages to a plaintiff who was not personally in immediate possession of the property." (Kelly, supra, 179 Cal.App.4th at p. 458, internal citations omitted.)
- "Kelly stands only for the proposition that legal occupancy is required to recover damages for annoyance and discomfort in a trespass case, and that standard requires immediate and personal possession, as a resident or commercial tenant would have. Here, there is no dispute the [plaintiffs] both owned and resided on their property, and they meet the legal standard of occupancy necessary to claim damages for annoyance, discomfort, inconvenience or mental anguish proximately caused by the trespass, as the jury was instructed without controversy in Kelly. Kelly does not hold that an occupant must be personally or physically present at the time of the harmful invasion to deem emotional distress damages "naturally ensuing" therefrom." (Hensley, supra, 7 Cal.App.5th at pp. 1354–1355, original italics, internal citation omitted.)
- "[I]t is not necessary that the plaintiff be present at the moment of a tortious invasion of the property. But it is necessary that the annoyance and discomfort arise from and relate to some personal effect of the interference with use and enjoyment which lies at the heart of the tort of trespass." (Vieira Enterprises, Inc., supra, 8 Cal.App.5th at p. 1094, original italics.)

- "[A] plaintiff may recover damages for annoyance and discomfort proximately caused by tortious injuries to trees on her property if she was in immediate and personal possession of the property at the time of the trespass." (Fulle v. Kanani (2017) 7 Cal.App.5th 1305, 1313 [212 Cal.Rptr.3d 920], internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

6 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, § 1915

2 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 17, Nuisance and Trespass, § 17.23 (Matthew Bender)

48 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass, § 550.21 (Matthew Bender)

22 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 225, Trespass, § 225.145 (Matthew Bender)

2032–2099. Reserved for Future Use

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of plaintiff] [own/lease/occupy/control] the property?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. [Did [name of defendant] intentionally [enter/ [or] cause [another person/[insert name of thing]] to enter] [name of plaintiff]'s property?]

   [or]

   [Did [name of defendant], although not intending to do so, [recklessly/ [or] negligently] [enter/ [or] cause [another person/ [insert name of thing]] to enter] [name of plaintiff]'s property?]

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of defendant] enter the property without [name of plaintiff]'s permission?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was [name of defendant]'s [entry/conduct] a substantial factor in causing [actual] harm to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

   [a. Past economic loss

   [lost earnings $_____]

   [lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised February 2005, April 2007, December 2010, June 2013, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2000, Trespass—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 5 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If there is an issue regarding whether the defendant exceeded the scope of plaintiff's consent, question 3 can be modified, as in element 3 in CACI No. 2000.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2001. Trespass—Affirmative Defense—Necessity

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of plaintiff] [own/lease/occupy/control] the property?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of defendant] intentionally [enter/ [or] cause [another person/[insert name of thing]] to enter] [name of plaintiff]'s property?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of defendant] enter the property without [name of plaintiff]'s permission?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was it necessary, or did it reasonably appear to [name of defendant] to be necessary, to enter the land to prevent serious harm to a person or property?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is no, then answer question 5. If you answered yes, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Was [name of defendant]'s [entry/conduct] a substantial factor in causing [actual] harm to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

   [a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised February 2005, April 2007, October 2008, December 2010, June 2013, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2000, Trespass—Essential Factual Elements, and CACI No. 2005, Affirmative Defense—Necessity.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If there is an issue regarding whether the defendant exceeded the scope of plaintiff's consent, question 3 can be modified, as in element 3 in CACI No. 2000.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 6 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2002. Trespass—Extrahazardous Activities

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of plaintiff] [own/lease/occupy/control] the property?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Was [name of defendant] engaged in [insert extrahazardous activity]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [insert extrahazardous activity] cause [insert thing] to enter [name of plaintiff]'s property?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did [name of plaintiff] give permission for the entry?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is no, then answer question 5. If you answered yes, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

   [a. Past economic loss

   [lost earnings $_____]

   [lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2001, Trespass—Extrahazardous Activities.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 6 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If there is an issue regarding whether the defendant exceeded the scope of plaintiff's consent, question 4 can be modified.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2003. Trespass to Timber (Civ. Code, § 3346)

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of plaintiff] [own/lease/occupy/control] the property?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. [Did [name of defendant] intentionally enter [name of plaintiff]'s property and [cut down or damage trees/take timber] located on the property?]

   [or]

   [Did [name of defendant], although not intending to do so, [recklessly/ [or] negligently] enter [name of plaintiff]'s property and damage trees located on the property?]

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of plaintiff] give permission to [cut down or damage the trees/take timber]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is no, then answer question 4. If you answered yes, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

   [a. Past economic loss

   [lost earnings $_____]

   [lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, June 2013, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2002, Trespass to Timber—Essential Factual Elements. The amount of actual damages found by the jury is to be doubled. (See Civ. Code, § 3346(a).) The court can do the computation based on the jury's award.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If there is an issue regarding whether the defendant exceeded the scope of plaintiff's consent, question 3 can be modified, as in element 3 in CACI No. 2002.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 5 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2004. Trespass to Timber—Willful and Malicious Conduct (Civ. Code, § 3346; Code Civ. Proc., § 733)

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of plaintiff] [own/lease/occupy/control] the property?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. [Did [name of defendant] intentionally enter [name of plaintiff]'s property and [cut down or damage trees/take timber] located on the property?]

   [or]

   [Did [name of defendant], although not intending to do so, recklessly enter [name of plaintiff]'s property and damage trees located on the property?]

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of plaintiff] give permission to [cut down or damage the trees/take timber]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is no, then answer question 4. If you answered yes, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Did [name of defendant] act willfully and maliciously?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   Answer question 6.

6. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, June 2013, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2002, Trespass to Timber—Essential Factual Elements, and CACI No. 2003, Damage to Timber—Willful and Malicious Conduct.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If there is an issue regarding whether the defendant exceeded the scope of the plaintiff's consent, question 3 can be modified as in element 3 in CACI No. 2002.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 7 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2005. Public Nuisance

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of defendant], by acting or failing to act, create a condition that was harmful to health?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did the condition affect a substantial number of people at the same time?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Would an ordinary person have been reasonably annoyed or disturbed by the condition?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did the seriousness of the harm outweigh the social utility of [name of defendant]'s conduct?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Did [name of plaintiff] consent to [name of defendant]'s conduct?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is no, then answer question 6. If you answered yes, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Did [name of plaintiff] suffer harm that was different from the type of harm suffered by the general public?

   _____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 7 is yes, then answer question 8. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

8. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2007, December 2010, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This form is based on CACI No. 2020, Public Nuisance—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

Other factual situations may be substituted in question 1 as in element 1 of CACI No. 2020.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 8 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

Depending on the facts of the case, question 1 can be modified, as in element 1 of CACI No. 2020.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2006. Private Nuisance

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of plaintiff] [own/lease/occupy/control] the property?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of defendant], by acting or failing to act, create a condition or permit a condition to exist that was harmful to health?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did this condition substantially interfere with [name of plaintiff]'s use or enjoyment of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] land?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Would an ordinary person have reasonably been annoyed or disturbed by [name of defendant]'s conduct?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Did [name of plaintiff] consent to [name of defendant]'s conduct?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is no, then answer question 6. If you answered yes, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. Did the seriousness of the harm outweigh the public benefit of [name of defendant]'s conduct?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 7 is yes, then answer question 8. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

8. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings	$ _____]
[lost profits	$ _____]
[medical expenses	$ _____]
[other past economic loss	$ _____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $ _____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings	$ _____]
[lost profits	$ _____]
[medical expenses	$ _____]
[other future economic loss	$ _____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $ _____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:]

$ _____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:]

$ _____]

TOTAL $ _____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2007, December 2010, December 2011, December 2016, May 2017, May 2024

Directions for Use

This form is based on CACI No. 2021, Private Nuisance—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

Depending on the facts of the case, question 2 may be replaced with one of the other options from element 2 of CACI No. 2021.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 8 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2007–VF-2099. Reserved for Future Use

CONVERSION

2100. Conversion—Essential Factual Elements

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] wrongfully exercised control over [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] personal property. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] [owned/possessed/had a right to possess] [a/an] [insert item of personal property];
2. That [name of defendant] substantially interfered with [name of plaintiff]'s property by knowingly or intentionally [insert one or more of the following:]

   [taking possession of the [*insert item of personal property];] [or]

   [preventing [*name of plaintiff] from having access to the [insert item of personal property];] [or]

   [destroying the [*insert item of personal property];] [or]

   [refusing to return the [*insert item of personal property] after [name of plaintiff] demanded its return.]
3. That [name of plaintiff] did not consent;
4. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
5. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003; Revised December 2009, December 2010, May 2017

Directions for Use

The last option for element 2 may be used if the defendant's original possession of the property was not tortious. (See Atwood v. S. Cal. Ice Co. (1923) 63 Cal.App. 343, 345 [218 P. 283], disapproved on other grounds in Wilson v. Crown Transfer & Storage Co. (1927) 201 Cal. 701 [258 P. 596].)

Sources and Authority

- "Conversion is the wrongful exercise of dominion over the property of another. The elements of a conversion claim are: (1) the plaintiff's ownership or right to possession of the property; (2) the defendant's conversion by a wrongful act or disposition of property rights; and (3) damages." (Lee v. Hanley (2015) 61 Cal.4th 1225, 1240 [191 Cal.Rptr.3d 536, 354 P.3d 334].)
- "It is not necessary that there be a manual taking of the property; it is only necessary to show an assumption of control or ownership over the property, or that the alleged converter has applied the property to his own use." . . .' "

(Shopoff & Cavallo LLP v. Hyon (2008) 167 Cal.App.4th 1489, 1507 [85 Cal.Rptr.3d 268].)

- "[A]ny act of dominion wrongfully exerted over the personal property of another inconsistent with the owner's rights thereto constitutes conversion." (Plummer v. Day/Eisenberg, LLP (2010) 184 Cal.App.4th 38, 50 [108 Cal.Rptr.3d 455].)
- "To prove a cause of action for conversion, the plaintiff must show the defendant acted intentionally to wrongfully dispose of the property of another." (Duke v. Superior Court (2017) 18 Cal.App.5th 490, 508 [226 Cal.Rptr.3d 807].)
- "[Conversion] must be knowingly or intentionally done, but a wrongful intent is not necessary. Because the act must be knowingly done, 'neither negligence, active or passive, nor a breach of contract, even though it result in injury to, or loss of, specific property, constitutes a conversion.' It follows therefore that mistake, good faith, and due care are ordinarily immaterial, and cannot be set up as defenses in an action for conversion." (Taylor v. Forte Hotels Int'l (1991) 235 Cal.App.3d 1119, 1124 [1 Cal.Rptr.2d 189], original italics, internal citations omitted.)
- "[C]onversion is a strict liability tort. It does not require bad faith, knowledge, or even negligence; it requires only that the defendant have intentionally done the act depriving the plaintiff of his or her rightful possession." (Voris v. Lampert (2019) 7 Cal.5th 1141, 1158 [250 Cal.Rptr.3d 779, 446 P.3d 284].)
- " ' "Conversion is a strict liability tort," ' so the Bank cannot defeat the claim on the grounds that it accepted a forged signature in good faith. Financial institutions can be liable to their depositors for transferring money out of their accounts on forged instruments." (Fong v. East West Bank (2018) 19 Cal.App.5th 224, 235 [227 Cal.Rptr.3d 838], internal citation omitted.)
- "The rule of strict liability applies equally to purchasers of converted goods, or more generally to purchasers from sellers who lack the power to transfer ownership of the goods sold. That is, there is no general exception for bona fide purchasers." (Regent Alliance Ltd. v. Rabizadeh (2014) 231 Cal.App.4th 1177, 1181 [180 Cal.Rptr.3d 610], internal citations omitted.)
- "There are recognized exceptions to the general rule of strict liability. Some exceptions are based on circumstances in which 'the person transferring possession may have the legal power to convey to a bona fide transferee a good title,' as, for example, when 'a principal has clothed an agent in apparent authority exceeding that which was intended.' Another exception concerns goods obtained by means of a fraudulent misrepresentation. If the party who committed the fraud then sells the goods to 'a bona fide purchaser' who 'takes for value and without notice of the fraud, then such purchaser gets good title to the chattel and may not be held for conversion (though the original converter may be).' " (Regent Alliance Ltd., supra, 231 Cal.App.4th at p. 1183, internal citation omitted.)
- "[I]t is generally acknowledged that conversion is a tort that may be committed only with relation to personal property and not real property." (Munger v. Moore (1970) 11 Cal.App.3d 1, 7 [89 Cal.Rptr. 323], disagreeing with Katz v. Enos (1945) 68 Cal.App.2d 266, 269 [156 P.2d 461].)

- "The first element of that cause of action is his ownership or right to possession of the property at the time of the conversion. Once it is determined that [plaintiff] has a right to reinstate the contract, he has a right to possession of the vehicle and standing to bring conversion. Unjustified refusal to turn over possession on demand constitutes conversion even where possession by the withholder was originally obtained lawfully and of course so does an unauthorized sale." (Cerra v. Blackstone (1985) 172 Cal.App.3d 604, 609 [218 Cal.Rptr. 15], internal citations omitted.)
- " 'To establish a conversion, plaintiff must establish an actual interference with his ownership or right of possession. . . . Where plaintiff neither has title to the property alleged to have been converted, nor possession thereof, he cannot maintain an action for conversion.' " (Moore v. Regents of the Univ. of Cal. (1990) 51 Cal.3d 120, 136 [271 Cal.Rptr. 146, 793 P.2d 479], internal citations omitted.)
- "In a conversion action the plaintiff need show only that he was entitled to possession at the time of conversion; the fact that plaintiff regained possession of the converted property does not prevent him from suing for damages for the conversion." (Enterprise Leasing Corp. v. Shugart Corp. (1991) 231 Cal.App.3d 737, 748 [282 Cal.Rptr. 620], internal citation omitted.)
- "Neither legal title nor absolute ownership of the property is necessary. . . . A party need only allege it is 'entitled to immediate possession at the time of conversion. . . .' . . . However, a mere contractual right of payment, without more, will not suffice." (Plummer, supra, 184 Cal.App.4th at p. 45, internal citation omitted.)
- "[A] claim for unpaid wages resembles other actions for a particular amount of money owed in exchange for contractual performance—a type of claim that has long been understood to sound in contract, rather than as the tort of conversion." (Voris, supra, 7 Cal.5th at p. 1156.)
- "The existence of a lien . . . can establish the immediate right to possess needed for conversion. 'One who holds property by virtue of a lien upon it may maintain an action for conversion if the property was wrongfully disposed of by the owner and without authority . . . .' Thus, attorneys may maintain conversion actions against those who wrongfully withhold or disburse funds subject to their attorney's liens." (Plummer, supra, 184 Cal.App.4th at p. 45, internal citation omitted.)
- "Where the conduct complained of does not amount to a substantial interference with possession or the right thereto, but consists of intermeddling with or use of or damages to the personal property, the owner has a cause of action for trespass or case, and may recover only the actual damages suffered by reason of the impairment of the property or the loss of its use. As [plaintiff] was a cotenant and had the right of possession of the realty, which included the right to keep his personal property thereon, [defendant]'s act of placing the goods in storage, although not constituting the assertion of ownership and a substantial interference with possession to the extent of a conversion, amounted to an intermeddling. Therefore, [plaintiff] is entitled to actual damages in an amount sufficient to compensate him for any impairment of the property or loss of its use." (Zaslow v. Kroenert (1946) 29 Cal.2d 541, 551–552 [176 P.2d 1], internal citation omitted.)

- "[T]he law is well settled that there can be no conversion where an owner either expressly or impliedly assents to or ratifies the taking, use or disposition of his property." (Farrington v. A. Teichert & Son, Inc. (1943) 59 Cal.App.2d 468, 474 [139 P.2d 80], internal citations omitted.)
- "As to intentional invasions of the plaintiff's interests, his consent negatives the wrongful element of the defendant's act, and prevents the existence of a tort. 'The absence of lawful consent,' said Mr. Justice Holmes, 'is part of the definition of an assault.' The same is true of false imprisonment, conversion, and trespass." (Tavernier v. Maes (1966) 242 Cal.App.2d 532, 552 [51 Cal.Rptr. 575], internal citations omitted.)
- "If a defendant is authorized to make a specific use of a plaintiff's property, use in excess of that authorized may subject the defendant to liability for conversion, if such use seriously violates another's right to control the use of the property." (Duke, supra, 18 Cal.App.5th at p. 506.)
- "[D]amages for emotional distress growing out of a defendant's conversion of personal property are recoverable." (Hensley v. San Diego Gas & Electric Co. (2017) 7 Cal.App.5th.1337, 1358 [213 Cal.Rptr.3d 803].)
- " 'Money cannot be the subject of a cause of action for conversion unless there is a specific, identifiable sum involved, such as where an agent accepts a sum of money to be paid to another and fails to make the payment.' A 'generalized claim for money [is] not actionable as conversion.' " (PCO, Inc. v. Christensen, Miller, Fink, Jacobs, Glaser, Weil & Shapiro, LLP (2007) 150 Cal.App.4th 384, 395 [58 Cal.Rptr.3d 516], internal citations omitted.)
- "Generally, conversion has been held to apply to the taking of intangible property rights when 'represented by documents, such as bonds, notes, bills of exchange, stock certificates, and warehouse receipts.' As one authority has written, 'courts have permitted a recovery for conversion of assets reflected in such documents as accounts showing amounts owed, life insurance policies, and other evidentiary documents. These cases are far removed from the paradigm case of physical conversion; they are essentially financial or economic tort cases, not physical interference cases.' " (Welco Electronics, Inc. v. Mora (2014) 223 Cal.App.4th 202, 209 [166 Cal.Rptr.3d 877], internal citation omitted.)
- "[I]t is 'well settled in California that shares of corporate stock are subject to an action in conversion' and 'it is not necessary that possession of the certificate evidencing title be disturbed.' Instead, it is sufficient that there is interference with the owner's 'free and unhampered right to dispose of property without limitations imposed by strangers to the title.' " (Applied Medical Corp. v. Thomas (2017) 10 Cal.App.5th 927, 938 [217 Cal.Rptr.3d 169].)

- "[T]here is no special rule preventing a depositor from pursuing a conversion action against the bank that holds his or her money. . . . 'The law applicable to conversion of personal property applies to instruments,' which includes certificates of deposit." (Fong, supra, 19 Cal.App.5th at pp. 232–233.)
- "Credit card, debit card, or PayPal information may be the subject of a conversion." (Welco Electronics, Inc., supra, 223 Cal.App.4th at p. 212, footnote omitted.)
- "One who buys property in good faith from a party lacking title and the right to sell may be liable for conversion. The remedies for conversion include specific recovery of the property, damages, and a quieting of title." (State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1997) 53 Cal.App.4th 1076, 1081–1082 [62 Cal.Rptr.2d 178], internal citations omitted.)
- "In order to establish a conversion, the plaintiff 'must show an intention or purpose to convert the goods and to exercise ownership over them, or to prevent the owner from taking possession of his property.' Thus, a necessary element of the tort is an intent to exercise ownership over property which belongs to another. For this reason, conversion is considered an intentional tort." (Collin v. American Empire Insurance Co. (1994) 21 Cal.App.4th 787, 812 [26 Cal.Rptr.2d 391], internal citations omitted.)
- "A conversion can occur when a willful failure to return property deprives the owner of possession." (Fearon v. Department of Corrections (1984) 162 Cal.App.3d 1254, 1257 [209 Cal.Rptr. 309], internal citation omitted.)
- "A demand for return of the property is not a condition precedent to institution of the action when possession was originally acquired by a tort as it was in this case." (Igauye v. Howard (1952) 114 Cal.App.2d 122, 127 [249 P.2d 558].)
- " 'Negligence in caring for the goods is not an act of dominion over them such as is necessary to make the bailee liable as a converter.' Thus a warehouseman's negligence in causing a fire which destroyed the plaintiffs' goods will not support a conversion claim." (Gonzales v. Pers. Storage (1997) 56 Cal.App.4th 464, 477 [65 Cal.Rptr.2d 473], internal citations omitted.)
- "Although damages for conversion are frequently the equivalent to the damages for negligence, i.e., specific recovery of the property or damages based on the value of the property, negligence is no part of an action for conversion." (Taylor, supra 235 Cal.App.3d at p. 1123, internal citation omitted.)
- "A person without legal title to property may recover from a converter if the plaintiff is responsible to the true owner, such as in the case of a bailee or pledgee of the property." (Department of Industrial Relations v. UI Video Stores, Inc. (1997) 55 Cal.App.4th 1084, 1096 [64 Cal.Rptr.2d 457], internal citation omitted.)

- "With respect to plaintiffs' causes of action for conversion, '[o]ne is privileged to commit an act which would otherwise be a trespass to or a conversion of a chattel in the possession of another, for the purpose of defending himself or a third person against the other, under the same conditions which would afford a privilege to inflict a harmful or offensive contact upon the other for the same purpose.' 'For the purpose of defending his own person, an actor is privileged to make intentional invasions of another's interests or personality when the actor reasonably believes that such other person intends to cause a confinement or a harmful or offensive contact to the actor, of that such invasion of his interests is reasonably probable, and the actor reasonably believes that the apprehended harm can be safely prevented only by the infliction of such harm upon the other. A similar privilege is afforded an actor for the protection of certain third persons.' " (Church of Scientology v. Armstrong (1991) 232 Cal.App.3d 1060, 1072 [283 Cal.Rptr. 917], internal citations omitted [labeled "defense of justification"]; see Rest.2d Torts, § 261.)
- "We recognize that the common law of conversion, which developed initially as a remedy for the dispossession or other loss of chattel, may be inappropriate for some modern intangible personal property, the unauthorized use of which can take many forms. In some circumstances, newer economic torts have developed that may better take into account the nature and uses of intangible property, the interests at stake, and the appropriate measure of damages. On the other hand, if the law of conversion can be adapted to particular types of intangible property and will not displace other, more suitable law, it may be appropriate to do so. (Fremont Indemnity Co. v. Fremont General Corp. (2007) 148 Cal.App.4th 97, 124 [55 Cal.Rptr.3d 621], internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 810–831

Ahart, California Practice Guide: Enforcing Judgments & Debts, Ch. 2-C, Tort Liability, ¶ 2:427.4 et seq. (The Rutter Group)

Rylaarsdam & Turner, California Practice Guide: Civil Procedure Before Trial—Statutes of Limitations, Ch. 4-D, Actions Involving Personal Property (Including Intangibles), ¶ 4:1101 et seq. (The Rutter Group)

3 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 40, Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts, § 40.40 (Matthew Bender)

13 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 150, Conversion, §§ 150.10, 150.40, 150.41 (Matthew Bender)

5 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 51, Conversion, § 51.21[3][b] (Matthew Bender)

2101. Trespass to Chattels—Essential Factual Elements

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] wrongfully trespassed on [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] personal property. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] [owned/possessed/had a right to possess] a [insert item of personal property];
2. That [name of defendant] intentionally [insert one or more of the following:]

   [interfered with [*name of plaintiff]'s use or possession of the [insert item of personal property];]

   [or]

   [damaged the [*insert item of personal property];]
3. That [name of plaintiff] did not consent;
4. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
5. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003

Sources and Authority

- "Trespass to chattel, although seldom employed as a tort theory in California . . . , lies where an intentional interference with the possession of personal property has proximately caused injury. Prosser notes trespass to chattel has evolved considerably from its original common law application—concerning the asportation of another's tangible property—to include even the unauthorized use of personal property: 'Its chief importance now,' according to Prosser, 'is that there may be recovery . . . for interferences with the possession of chattels which are not sufficiently important to be classed as conversion, and so to compel the defendant to pay the full value of the thing with which he has interfered. Trespass to chattels survives today, in other words, largely as a little brother of conversion.' " (Thrifty-Tel, Inc. v. Bezenek (1996) 46 Cal.App.4th 1559, 1566–1567 [54 Cal.Rptr.2d 468], footnotes and internal citations omitted.)
- "Where the conduct complained of does not amount to a substantial interference with possession or the right thereto, but consists of intermeddling with or use of or damages to the personal property, the owner has a cause of action for trespass or case, and may recover only the actual damages suffered by reason of the impairment of the property or the loss of its use." (Zaslow v. Kroenert (1946) 29 Cal.2d 541, 551 [176 P.2d 1], internal citations omitted.)

- " 'Though not amounting to conversion, the defendant's interference must, to be actionable, have caused some injury to the chattel or to the plaintiff's rights in it. Under California law, trespass to chattels "lies where an intentional interference with the possession of personal property has proximately caused injury." In cases of interference with possession of personal property not amounting to conversion, "the owner has a cause of action for trespass or case, and may recover only the actual damages suffered by reason of the impairment of the property or the loss of its use." . . .' " (Jamgotchian v. Slender (2009) 170 Cal.App.4th 1384, 1400–1401 [89 Cal.Rptr.3d 122], original italics, internal citations omitted.)
- "It is well settled that a person having neither the possession nor the right to the possession of personal chattels, cannot maintain trespass or trover for an injury done to the property." (Triscony v. Orr (1875) 49 Cal. 612, 617, internal citations omitted.)
- "[A] plaintiff alleging trespass to chattels based on unauthorized access to a computer system must allege damage or disruption to that computer system." (Casillas v. Berkshire Hathaway Homestate Ins. Co. (2022) 79 Cal.App.5th 755, 764 [294 Cal.Rptr.3d 841].)
- "[W]e uphold both the economic and emotional distress damages plaintiffs recovered for trespass to personal property arising from [defendant]'s act of intentionally striking [plaintiff's dog] with a bat." (Plotnik v. Meihaus (2012) 208 Cal.App.4th 1590, 1608 [146 Cal.Rptr.3d 585].)
- Restatement Second of Torts, section 218, provides:

  "One who commits a trespass to a chattel is subject to liability to the possessor of the chattel if, but only if,

  (a) he dispossesses the other of the chattel, or

  (b) the chattel is impaired as to its condition, quality, or value, or

  (c) the possessor is deprived of the use of the chattel for a substantial time, or

  (d) bodily harm is caused to the possessor, or harm is caused to some person or thing in which the possessor has a legally protected interest."
- Restatement Second of Torts, section 222, comment (a), states: "Normally any dispossession is so clearly a serious interference with the right of control that it amounts to a conversion; and it is frequently said that any dispossession is a conversion. There may, however, be minor and unimportant dispossessions, such as taking another man's hat by mistake and returning it within two minutes upon discovery of the mistake, which do not seriously interfere with the other's right of control, and so do not amount to conversion. In such a case the remedy of the action of trespass remains, and will allow recovery of damages for the interference with the possession."

Secondary Sources

Ahart, California Practice Guide: Enforcing Judgments & Debts, Ch. 2-C, Tort Liability, ¶ 2:427.4 et seq. (The Rutter Group)

1 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 16, Landlord-Tenant Tort Liabilities, §§ 16.07, 40.43 (Matthew Bender)

48 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 550, Trespass, § 550.13 (Matthew Bender)

22 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 225, Trespass, §§ 225.260–225.262 (Matthew Bender)

2102. Presumed Measure of Damages for Conversion (Civ. Code, § 3336)

If you decide that [*name of plaintiff] has proved [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] claim against [name of defendant], you also must decide how much money will reasonably compensate [name of plaintiff] for the harm. This compensation is called "damages."

[*Name of plaintiff] must prove the amount of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] damages. However, [name of plaintiff] does not have to prove the exact amount of damages that will provide reasonable compensation for the harm. You must not speculate or guess in awarding damages.

The following are the specific items of damages claimed by [*name of plaintiff]:

1. [The fair market value of the [insert item of personal property] at the time [name of defendant] wrongfully exercised control over it;]

   [or]

   [Special damages resulting from [*name of defendant]'s conduct;] [and]

2. Reasonable compensation for the time and money spent by [name of plaintiff] in attempting to recover the [insert item of personal property]; [and]

3. [Emotional distress suffered by [name of plaintiff] as a result of [name of defendant]'s conduct.]

[In order to recover special damages, [*name of plaintiff] must prove:

1. That [describe special circumstances that require a measure of damages other than value];

2. That it was reasonably foreseeable that special injury or harm would result from the conversion; and

3. That reasonable care on [name of plaintiff]'s part would not have prevented the loss.]

["Fair market value" is the highest price that a willing buyer would have paid to a willing seller, assuming:

1. That there is no pressure on either one to buy or sell; and

2. That the buyer and seller know all the uses and purposes for which the [insert item] is reasonably capable of being used.]

New September 2003

Directions for Use

The third element of listed damages, emotional distress, is bracketed because it appears that such damages are recoverable only if the second alternative measure of damages stated in the first paragraph of Civil Code section 3336 applies. (See Gonzales v. Pers. Storage (1997) 56 Cal.App.4th 464, 477 [65 Cal.Rptr.2d 473].)

Sources and Authority

- Damages for Wrongful Conversion. Civil Code section 3336.
- Conversion of Negotiable Instruments. Commercial Code section 3420.
- Measure of Compensation for Property Taken. Code of Civil Procedure section 1263.320(a).
- "[W]e are of the opinion that section 3337 can only be held to apply to a situation where the property was voluntarily applied by the party guilty of conversion to the benefit of the injured party, and can have no application to a situation such as here where the application was compelled by a legal duty." (Goldberg v. List (1938) 11 Cal.2d 389, 393 [79 P.2d 1087].)
- "Although the first part of section 3336 appears to provide for alternative measures of recovery, the first of the two measures, namely the value of the property converted at the time and place of conversion with interest from that time, is generally considered to be the appropriate measure of damages in a conversion action. The determination of damages under the alternative provision is resorted to only where the determination on the basis of value at the time of conversion would be manifestly unjust." (Myers v. Stephens (1965) 233 Cal.App.2d 104, 116 [43 Cal.Rptr. 420], internal citations omitted.)
- "As a general rule, the value of the converted property is the appropriate measure of damages, and resort to the alternative occurs only where a determination of damages on the basis of value would be manifestly unjust. Accordingly, a person claiming damages under the alternative provision must plead and prove special circumstances that require a measure of damages other than value, and the jury must determine whether it was reasonably foreseeable that special injury or damage would result from the conversion." (Lueter v. State of California (2002) 94 Cal.App.4th 1285, 1302 [115 Cal.Rptr.2d 68], internal citations omitted.)
- "The damage measures set forth in the first paragraph of section 3336 are in the alternative. The first alternative is to compensate for the value of the property at the time of conversion with interest from the time of the taking. The second alternative is compensation in a sum equal to the amount of loss legally caused by the conversion and which could have been avoided with a proper degree of prudence. Both of these alternatives are in addition to the damage element for the time spent pursuing the converted property set forth in the second paragraph of section 3336." (Moreno v. Greenwood Auto Center (2001) 91 Cal.App.4th 201, 209 [110 Cal.Rptr.2d 177], internal citations omitted.)

- "Conversion damages are calculated based on the detriment caused to the plaintiff. Such detriment caused by wrongful conversion of personal property is presumed to be the 'value of the property at the time of the conversion, with the interest from that time, or, an amount sufficient to indemnify the party injured for the loss which is the natural, reasonable and proximate result of the wrongful act complained of and which a proper degree of prudence on his part would not have averted.' ' "Money may be the subject of conversion if the claim involves a specific, identifiable sum." ' " (Greif v. Sanin (2022) 74 Cal.App.5th 412, 449 [289 Cal.Rptr.3d 484], internal citations omitted.)
- "Civil Code section 3336 sets out the presumptive measure of damages in conversion, which is rebuttable, save and except when section 3337 applies. Under Civil Code section 3337, a defendant cannot rebut the presumption by claiming that he applied the converted property to plaintiff's benefit when he took unlawful possession of the property from the beginning. Consequently, the effect of section 3337 is to prevent mitigation when property is stolen from the plaintiff and subsequently applied to his benefit. In this situation, the defendant will not be able to claim that his conversion benefited plaintiff; he will thereby be prevented from claiming an offset derived from his original wrong. In contrast to this situation, if the particular facts of a case indicate, as in the instant case, that the possession was lawful before the conversion occurred . . . Civil Code section 3337 is inapplicable, and a converter is not precluded from claiming mitigation of damages." (Dakota Gardens Apartment Investors "B" v. Pudwill (1977) 75 Cal.App.3d 346, 351–352 [142 Cal.Rptr. 126].)
- "[W]e conclude that notwithstanding further developments in the law of negligence, damages for emotional distress growing out of a defendant's conversion of personal property are recoverable." (Gonzales, supra, 56 Cal.App.4th at p. 477, internal citations omitted.)
- "In the absence of special circumstances the appropriate measure of damages for conversion of personal property is the fair market value of that property plus interest from the date of conversion, the standard first listed in section 3336, Civil Code. However, where proof establishes an injury beyond that which would be adequately compensated by the value of the property and interest, the court may award such amounts as will indemnify for all proximate reasonable loss caused by the wrongful act. Where damages for loss of use exceeds the legal rate of interest, it is appropriate to award the former, but not both." (Lint v. Chisholm (1981) 121 Cal.App.3d 615, 624–625 [177 Cal.Rptr. 314], internal citations omitted.)
- " 'To entitle a party to such compensation the [evidence] should tend to show that money was properly paid out and time properly lost in pursuit of the property, and how much.' Such evidence should be definite and certain. Expenses 'incurred in preparation for litigation and not in pursuit of property' cannot be allowed as damages under Civil Code section 3336. Additionally, any such compensation must be fair, i.e., reasonable." (Haines v. Parra (1987) 193 Cal.App.3d 1553, 1559 [239 Cal.Rptr. 178], internal citations omitted.)

- "[A]lthough good faith and mistake are not defenses to an action for conversion, the plaintiff's damages will be reduced if the defendant returns the property or the plaintiff otherwise recovers the property." (Krusi v. Bear, Stearns & Co. (1983) 144 Cal.App.3d 664, 673 [192 Cal.Rptr. 793], internal citations omitted.)
- "Causes of action for conversion and trespass support an award for exemplary damages." (Krieger v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1981) 119 Cal.App.3d 137, 148 [173 Cal.Rptr. 751], internal citation omitted.)
- "Ordinarily 'value of the property' at the time of the conversion is determined by its market value at the time. However, '[w]here certain property has a peculiar value to a person recovering damages for deprivation thereof, or injury thereto, that may be deemed to be its value . . . against a willful wrongdoer.' " (In re Brian S. (1982) 130 Cal.App.3d 523, 530 [181 Cal.Rptr. 778], internal citations omitted.)
- "In an action for damages for conversion, it is the rule that the plaintiff, although owning but a limited or qualified interest in the property, may, as against a stranger who has no ownership therein, recover the full value of the property converted." (Camp v. Ortega (1962) 209 Cal.App.2d 275, 286 [25 Cal.Rptr. 873], internal citations omitted.)
- "A plaintiff seeking recovery under the alternative provision of the statute must therefore plead and prove the existence of 'special circumstances which require a different measure of damages to be applied.' Having done so, the trier of fact must then determine 'whether it was reasonably forseeable to a prudent person, having regard for the accompanying circumstances, that injury or damage would likely result from his wrongful act.' " (Krueger v. Bank of America (1983) 145 Cal.App.3d 204, 215 [193 Cal.Rptr. 322], internal citations omitted.)
- "Defendants contend that the anticipated loss of profits is not 'the natural, reasonable and proximate result of the wrongful act complained of,' within the meaning of section 3336. Although no California case which has applied the alternative measure of damages in a conversion case has specifically defined this language, we are satisfied that its meaning is synonymous with the term 'proximate cause' or 'legal cause.' These terms mean, in essence, 'that there be some reasonable connection between the act or omission of the defendant and the damage which the plaintiff has suffered.' In determining whether this connection exists, the question is whether it was reasonably foreseeable to a prudent person, having regard for the accompanying circumstances, that injury or damage would likely result from his wrongful act. This question being one of fact to be determined generally by the trier of fact." (Myers, supra, 233 Cal.App.2d at pp. 119–120, internal citations omitted.)
- "In exceptional circumstances, to avoid injustice, loss of profits may be the measure." (Newhart v. Pierce (1967) 254 Cal.App.2d 783, 794 [62 Cal.Rptr. 553], internal citation omitted.)

Secondary Sources

6 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 1906, 1907

4 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 50, Damages, §§ 50.01–50.03 (Matthew Bender)

13 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 150, Conversion, §§ 150.10, 150.16, 150.40–150.41 (Matthew Bender)

5 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 51, Conversion (Matthew Bender)

2103–2199. Reserved for Future Use

VF-2100. Conversion

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of plaintiff] [own/possess/have a right to possess] a [insert description of personal property]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of defendant] substantially interfere with [name of plaintiff]'s property by knowingly or intentionally [[taking possession of/preventing [name of plaintiff] from having access to] the [insert description of personal property]]/[destroying the [insert description of personal property]/refusing to return [name of plaintiff]'s [insert description of personal property] after [name of plaintiff] demanded its return]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of plaintiff] consent?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is no, then answer question 4. If you answered yes, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was [name of plaintiff] harmed?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

TOTAL $ _____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New December 2005; Revised December 2009, December 2010, June 2011, December 2016, May 2017, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2100, Conversion—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If the case involves multiple items of personal property as to which the evidence differs, users may need to modify question 2 to focus the jury on the different items.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2101–VF-2199. Reserved for Future Use

ECONOMIC INTERFERENCE

2200. Inducing Breach of Contract

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] intentionally caused [name of third party] to breach [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] contract with [name of plaintiff]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That there was a contract between [name of plaintiff] and [name of third party];
2. That [name of defendant] knew of the contract;
3. That [name of defendant] intended to cause [name of third party] to breach the contract;
4. That [name of defendant]'s conduct caused [name of third party] to breach the contract;
5. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
6. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

If the validity of a contract is an issue, see the series of contracts instructions (CACI No. 300 et seq.).

Sources and Authority

- "[C]ases have pointed out that while the tort of inducing breach of contract requires proof of a breach, the cause of action for interference with contractual relations is distinct and requires only proof of interference." (Pacific Gas & Electric Co. v. Bear Stearns & Co. (1990) 50 Cal.3d 1118, 1129 [270 Cal.Rptr. 1, 791 P.2d 587], internal citations omitted.)
- "The elements which a plaintiff must plead to state the cause of action for intentional interference with contractual relations are (1) a valid contract between plaintiff and a third party; (2) defendant's knowledge of this contract; (3) defendant's intentional acts designed to induce a breach or disruption of the contractual relationship; (4) actual breach or disruption of the contractual relationship; and (5) resulting damage." (Pacific Gas & Electric Co., supra, 50 Cal.3d at p. 1126, internal citations omitted.)
- "[A] cause of action for intentional interference with contract requires an underlying enforceable contract. Where there is no existing, enforceable contract, only a claim for interference with prospective advantage may be pleaded."

(PMC, Inc. v. Saban Entertainment, Inc. (1996) 45 Cal.App.4th 579, 601 [52 Cal.Rptr.2d 877].)

- "The act of inducing the breach must be an intentional one. If the actor had no knowledge of the existence of the contract or his actions were not intended to induce a breach, he cannot be held liable though an actual breach results from his lawful and proper acts." (Imperial Ice Co. v. Rossier (1941) 18 Cal.2d 33, 37 [112 P.2d 631], internal citations omitted.)
- " 'To recover damages for inducing a breach of contract, the plaintiff need not establish that the defendant had full knowledge of the contract's terms. Comment i to Restatement Second of Torts, section 766, . . . states: "To be subject to liability [for inducing a breach of contract], the actor must have knowledge of the contract with which he is interfering and of the fact that he is interfering with the performance of the contract." ' " (Jenni Rivera Enterprises, LLC v. Latin World Entertainment Holdings, Inc. (2019) 36 Cal.App.5th 766, 783 [249 Cal.Rptr.3d 122].)
- "It is not enough that the actor intended to perform the acts which caused the result—he or she must have intended to cause the result itself." (Kasparian v. County of Los Angeles (1995) 38 Cal.App.4th 242, 261 [45 Cal.Rptr.2d 90].)
- "The question is whether a plaintiff must plead and prove that the defendant engaged in wrongful acts with the specific intent of interfering with the plaintiff's business expectancy. We conclude that specific intent is not a required element of the tort of interference with prospective economic advantage. While a plaintiff may satisfy the intent requirement by pleading specific intent, i.e., that the defendant desired to interfere with the plaintiff's prospective economic advantage, a plaintiff may alternately plead that the defendant knew that the interference was certain or substantially certain to occur as a result of its action." (Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 29 Cal.4th 1134, 1154 [131 Cal.Rptr.2d 29, 63 P.3d 937], original italics.)
- "The actionable wrong lies in the inducement to break the contract or to sever the relationship, not in the kind of contract or relationship so disrupted, whether it is written or oral, enforceable or not enforceable." (Pacific Gas & Electric Co., supra, 50 Cal.3d at p. 1127.)
- " '[I]t may be actionable to induce a party to a contract to terminate the contract according to its terms.'. . .'[I]t is the contractual relationship, not any term of the contract, which is protected against outside interference.' " (I-CA Enterprises, Inc. v. Palram Americas, Inc. (2015) 235 Cal.App.4th 257, 289 [185 Cal.Rptr.3d 24], internal citation omitted.)
- "[T]he tort cause of action for interference with a contract does not lie against a party to the contract. [Citations.] [¶] . . . The tort duty not to interfere with the contract falls only on strangers-interlopers who have no legitimate interest in the scope or course of the contract's performance." (Applied Equipment Corp. v. Litton Saudi Arabia Ltd. (1994) 7 Cal.4th 503, 514 [28 Cal.Rptr.2d 475, 869 P.2d 454], internal citations omitted.)

- "[I]nterference with an at-will contract is actionable interference with the contractual relationship, on the theory that a contract 'at the will of the parties, respectively, does not make it one at the will of others. [Citations]' " (Pacific Gas & Electric Co., supra, 50 Cal.3d at p. 1127, internal citations and quotations omitted.)
- "Because interference with an existing contract receives greater solicitude than does interference with prospective economic advantage, it is not necessary that the defendant's conduct be wrongful apart from the interference with the contract itself." (Quelimane Co. v. Stewart Title Guaranty Co. (1998) 19 Cal.4th 26, 55 [77 Cal.Rptr.2d 709, 960 P.2d 513], internal citations omitted.)
- " '[A] person is not justified in inducing a breach of contract simply because he is in competition with one of the parties to the contract and seeks to further his own economic advantage at the expense of the other. [Citations.]' This is because, '[w]hatever interest society has in encouraging free and open competition by means not in themselves unlawful, contractual stability is generally accepted as of greater importance than competitive freedom.' A party may not, 'under the guise of competition actively and affirmatively induce the breach of a competitor's contract.' " (I-CA Enterprises, Inc., supra, 235 Cal.App.4th at p. 290, internal citations omitted.)
- "We conclude that a plaintiff seeking to state a claim for intentional interference with contract or prospective economic advantage because defendant induced another to undertake litigation, must allege that the litigation was brought without probable cause and that the litigation concluded in plaintiff's favor." (Pacific Gas & Electric Co., supra, 50 Cal.3d at p. 1137.)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 842–853

3 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 40, Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts, §§ 40.110–40.117 (Matthew Bender)

49 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.132 et seq. (Matthew Bender)

12 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 122, Interference, § 122.20 et seq. (Matthew Bender)

2201. Intentional Interference With Contractual Relations—Essential Factual Elements

---

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] intentionally interfered with the contract between [him/her/nonbinary pronoun/it] and [name of third party]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That there was a contract between [name of plaintiff] and [name of third party];
2. That [name of defendant] knew of the contract;
3. That [name of defendant]'s conduct prevented performance or made performance more expensive or difficult;
4. That [name of defendant] [intended to disrupt the performance of this contract/ [or] knew that disruption of performance was certain or substantially certain to occur];
5. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
6. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003; Revised June 2012, December 2013

Directions for Use

This tort is sometimes called intentional interference with performance of a contract. (See Little v. Amber Hotel Co. (2011) 202 Cal.App.4th 280, 291 [136 Cal.Rptr.3d 97].) If the validity of a contract is an issue, see the series of contracts instructions (CACI No. 300 et seq.).

Sources and Authority

- "[A]llowing interference with at-will contract claims without requiring independent wrongfulness risks chilling legitimate business competition. An actionable claim for interference with contractual relations does not require that the defendant have the specific intent to interfere with a contract. A plaintiff states a claim so long as it alleges that the defendant knew interference was ' "certain or substantially certain to occur as a result of [defendant's] action." ' Without an independent wrongfulness requirement, a competitor's good faith offer that causes a business to withdraw from an at-will contract could trigger liability or at least subject the competitor to costly litigation. In fact, even if a business in an at-will contract solicits offers on its own initiative, a third party that submits an offer could face liability if it knew that acceptance of the offer would cause the soliciting business to withdraw from its existing contract. Allowing disappointed competitors to state claims for interference with at-will contracts without alleging independently wrongful conduct may expose routine and legitimate business competition to litigation. [¶] We therefore hold that to state a claim for interference with an at-will contract by a third party, the plaintiff must allege that the defendant engaged in an independently wrongful act." (Ixchel Pharma, LLC v. Biogen, Inc. (2020) 9 Cal.5th 1130, 1148 [266 Cal.Rptr.3d 665, 470 P.3d 571], internal citation omitted.)

- "California recognizes a cause of action against noncontracting parties who interfere with the performance of a contract. 'It has long been held that a stranger to a contract may be liable in tort for intentionally interfering with the performance of the contract.' " (Redfearn v. Trader Joe's Co. (2018) 20 Cal.App.5th 989, 997 [230 Cal.Rptr.3d 98], original italics.)
- "[C]ases have pointed out that while the tort of inducing breach of contract requires proof of a breach, the cause of action for interference with contractual relations is distinct and requires only proof of interference." (Pacific Gas & Electric Co. v. Bear Stearns & Co. (1990) 50 Cal.3d 1118, 1129 [270 Cal.Rptr. 1, 791 P.2d 587], internal citations omitted.)
- "The elements which a plaintiff must plead to state the cause of action for intentional interference with contractual relations are (1) a valid contract between plaintiff and a third party; (2) defendant's knowledge of this contract; (3) defendant's intentional acts designed to induce a breach or disruption of the contractual relationship; (4) actual breach or disruption of the contractual relationship; and (5) resulting damage." (Pacific Gas & Electric Co. v. Bear Stearns & Co. (1990) 50 Cal.3d 1118, 1126 [270 Cal.Rptr. 1, 791 P.2d 587], internal citations omitted.)
- "[A] cause of action for intentional interference with contract requires an underlying enforceable contract. Where there is no existing, enforceable contract, only a claim for interference with prospective advantage may be pleaded." (PMC, Inc. v. Saban Entertainment, Inc. (1996) 45 Cal.App.4th 579, 601 [52 Cal.Rptr.2d 877].)
- "Because interference with an existing contract receives greater solicitude than does interference with prospective economic advantage, it is not necessary that the defendant's conduct be wrongful apart from the interference with the contract itself." (Quelimane Co. v. Stewart Title Guaranty Co. (1998) 19 Cal.4th 26, 55 [77 Cal.Rptr.2d 709, 960 P.2d 513], internal citations omitted.)
- "The question is whether a plaintiff must plead and prove that the defendant engaged in wrongful acts with the specific intent of interfering with the plaintiff's business expectancy. We conclude that specific intent is not a required element of the tort of interference with prospective economic advantage. While a plaintiff may satisfy the intent requirement by pleading specific intent, i.e., that the defendant desired to interfere with the plaintiff's prospective economic advantage, a plaintiff may alternately plead that the defendant knew that the interference was certain or substantially certain to occur as a result of its action." (Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 29 Cal.4th 1134, 1154 [131

Cal.Rptr.2d 29, 63 P.3d 937], original italics.)

- "We caution that although we find the intent requirement to be the same for the torts of intentional interference with contract and intentional interference with prospective economic advantage, these torts remain distinct." (Korea Supply Co., supra, 29 Cal.4th at p. 1157.)
- "Plaintiff need not allege an actual or inevitable breach of contract in order to state a claim for disruption of contractual relations. We have recognized that interference with the plaintiff's performance may give rise to a claim for interference with contractual relations if plaintiff's performance is made more costly or more burdensome. Other cases have pointed out that while the tort of inducing breach of contract requires proof of a breach, the cause of action for interference with contractual relations is distinct and requires only proof of interference." (Pacific Gas & Electric Co., supra, 50 Cal.3d at p. 1129, internal citations omitted.)
- "[A] contracting party cannot be held liable in tort for conspiracy to interfere with its own contract." (Asahi Kasei Pharma Corp. v. Actelion Ltd. (2013) 222 Cal.App.4th 945, 961 [166 Cal.Rptr.3d 134], original italics.)
- "[O]ne, like [defendant] here, who is not a party to the contract or an agent of a party to the contract is a 'stranger' for purpose of the tort of intentional interference with contract. A nonparty to a contract that contemplates the nonparty's performance, by that fact alone, is not immune from liability for contract interference. Liability is properly imposed if each of the elements of the tort are otherwise satisfied." (Redfearn, supra, 20 Cal.App.5th at p. 1003.)
- "[I]nterference with an at-will contract is actionable interference with the contractual relationship, on the theory that a contract 'at the will of the parties, respectively, does not make it one at the will of others.' " (Pacific Gas & Electric Co., supra, 50 Cal.3d at p. 1127, internal citations and quotations omitted.)
- "We conclude that a plaintiff seeking to state a claim for intentional interference with contract or prospective economic advantage because defendant induced another to undertake litigation, must allege that the litigation was brought without probable cause and that the litigation concluded in plaintiff's favor." (Pacific Gas & Electric Co., supra, 50 Cal.3d at p. 1137.)
- "[A]n actor with ' "a financial interest in the business of another is privileged purposely to cause him not to enter into or continue a relation with a third person in that business if the actor [¶] (a) does not employ improper means, and [¶] (b) acts to protect his interest from being prejudiced by the relation[.]" ' " (Asahi Kasei Pharma Corp, supra, 222 Cal.App.4th at p. 962.)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 854, 855, 875

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 5(I)-F, Intentional Interference With Contract Or Prospective Economic Advantage, ¶ 5:461

et seq. (The Rutter Group)

3 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 40, Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts, §§ 40.110–40.117 (Matthew Bender)

49 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.133 (Matthew Bender)

12 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 122, Interference, § 122.20 et seq. (Matthew Bender)

2202. Intentional Interference With Prospective Economic Relations—Essential Factual Elements

---

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] intentionally interfered with an economic relationship between [him/her/nonbinary pronoun/it] and [name of third party] that probably would have resulted in an economic benefit to [name of plaintiff]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] and [name of third party] were in an economic relationship that probably would have resulted in an economic benefit to [name of plaintiff];
2. That [name of defendant] knew of the relationship;
3. That [name of defendant] engaged in [specify conduct determined by the court to be wrongful];
4. That by engaging in this conduct, [name of defendant] [intended to disrupt the relationship/ [or] knew that disruption of the relationship was certain or substantially certain to occur];
5. That the relationship was disrupted;
6. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
7. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003; Revised June 2013, December 2013

Directions for Use

Regarding element 3, the interfering conduct must be wrongful by some legal measure other than the fact of the interference itself. (Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal.4th 376, 393 [45 Cal.Rptr.2d 436, 902 P.2d 740].) This conduct must fall outside the privilege of fair competition. (PMC, Inc. v. Saban Entertainment, Inc. (1996) 45 Cal.App.4th 579, 603 [52 Cal.Rptr.2d 877], disapproved on other grounds in Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 29 Cal.4th 1134, 1159 fn. 11 [131 Cal.Rptr.2d 29, 63 P.3d 937].) Whether the conduct alleged qualifies as wrongful if proven or falls within the privilege of fair competition is resolved by the court as a matter of law. If the court lets the case go to trial, the jury's role is not to determine wrongfulness, but simply to find whether or not the defendant engaged in the conduct. If the conduct is tortious, the judge should instruct on the elements of the tort.

Sources and Authority

- "The tort of intentional or negligent interference with prospective economic advantage imposes liability for improper methods of disrupting or diverting the business relationship of another which fall outside the boundaries of fair competition." (Settimo Associates v. Environ Systems, Inc. (1993) 14 Cal.App.4th 842, 845 [17 Cal.Rptr.2d 757], internal citation omitted.)

- "The tort of interference with prospective economic advantage protects the same interest in stable economic relationships as does the tort of interference with contract, though interference with prospective advantage does not require proof of a legally binding contract. The chief practical distinction between interference with contract and interference with prospective economic advantage is that a broader range of privilege to interfere is recognized when the relationship or economic advantage interfered with is only prospective." (Pacific Gas & Electric Co. v. Bear Stearns & Co. (1990) 50 Cal.3d 1118, 1126 [270 Cal.Rptr. 1, 791 P.2d 587], internal citations omitted.)
- "Intentional interference with prospective economic advantage has five elements: (1) the existence, between the plaintiff and some third party, of an economic relationship that contains the probability of future economic benefit to the plaintiff; (2) the defendant's knowledge of the relationship; (3) intentionally wrongful acts designed to disrupt the relationship; (4) actual disruption of the relationship; and (5) economic harm proximately caused by the defendant's action." (Roy Allan Slurry Seal, Inc. v. American Asphalt South, Inc. (2017) 2 Cal.5th 505, 512 [213 Cal.Rptr.3d 568, 388 P.3d 800]].)
- "The tort's requirements 'presuppose the relationship existed at the time of the defendant's allegedly tortious acts lest liability be imposed for actually and intentionally disrupting a relationship which has yet to arise.' " (Roy Allan Slurry Seal, Inc., supra, 2 Cal.5th at p. 518.)
- "The question is whether a plaintiff must plead and prove that the defendant engaged in wrongful acts with the specific intent of interfering with the plaintiff's business expectancy. We conclude that specific intent is not a required element of the tort of interference with prospective economic advantage. While a plaintiff may satisfy the intent requirement by pleading specific intent, i.e., that the defendant desired to interfere with the plaintiff's prospective economic advantage, a plaintiff may alternately plead that the defendant knew that the interference was certain or substantially certain to occur as a result of its action." (Korea Supply Co., supra, 29 Cal.4th at p. 1154, original italics.)
- "[A] plaintiff seeking to recover for an alleged interference with prospective contractual or economic relations must plead and prove as part of its case-in-chief that the defendant not only knowingly interfered with the plaintiff's expectancy, but engaged in conduct that was wrongful by some legal measure other than the fact of interference itself." (Della Penna, supra, 11 Cal.4th at p. 393.)
- "With respect to the third element, a plaintiff must show that the defendant engaged in an independently wrongful act. It is not necessary to prove that the defendant acted with the specific intent, or purpose, of disrupting the plaintiff's prospective economic advantage. Instead, 'it is sufficient for the plaintiff to plead that the defendant "[knew] that the interference is certain or substantially certain to occur as a result of his action." ' '[A]n act is independently wrongful if it is unlawful, that is, if it is proscribed by some constitutional, statutory, regulatory, common law, or other determinable legal standard.' '[A]n act must be wrongful by some legal measure, rather than merely a product of an improper, but lawful, purpose or motive.' " (San Jose Construction, Inc. v. S.B.C.C., Inc. (2007) 155 Cal.App.4th 1528, 1544–1545 [67 Cal.Rptr.3d 54], internal citations omitted.)

- "Della Penna did not specify what sort of conduct would qualify as 'wrongful' apart from the interference itself." (LiMandri v. Judkins (1997) 52 Cal.App.4th 326, 340 [60 Cal.Rptr.2d 539].)
- "Justice Mosk's concurring opinion in Della Penna advocates that proscribed conduct be limited to means that are independently tortious or a restraint of trade. The Oregon Supreme Court suggests that conduct may be wrongful if it violates 'a statute or other regulation, or a recognized rule of common law, or perhaps an established standard of a trade or profession.' . . . Our Supreme Court may later have occasion to clarify the meaning of 'wrongful conduct' or 'wrongfulness,' or it may be that a precise definition proves impossible." (Arntz Contracting Co. v. St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Co. (1996) 47 Cal.App.4th 464, 477–478 [54 Cal.Rptr.2d 888], internal citations omitted.)
- "Commonly included among improper means are actions which are independently actionable, violations of federal or state law or unethical business practices, e.g., violence, misrepresentation, unfounded litigation, defamation, trade libel or trade mark infringement." (PMC, Inc., supra, 45 Cal.App.4th at p. 603, internal citation omitted.)
- "[A] plaintiff need not allege the interference and a second act independent of the interference. Instead, a plaintiff must plead and prove that the conduct alleged to constitute the interference was independently wrongful, i.e., unlawful for reasons other than that it interfered with a prospective economic advantage. [Citations.]" (Crown Imports, LLC v. Superior Court (2014) 223 Cal.App.4th 1395, 1404 [168 Cal.Rptr.3d 228].)
- "The question has arisen as to whether, in order to be actionable as interference with prospective economic advantage, the interfering act must be independently wrongful as to the plaintiff. It need not be. There is 'no sound reason for requiring that a defendant's wrongful actions must be directed towards the plaintiff seeking to recover for this tort. The interfering party is liable to the interfered-with party [even] "when the independently tortious means the interfering party uses are independently tortious only as to a third party." ' " (Crown Imports LLC, supra, 223 Cal.App.4th at p. 1405, original italics.)
- "[T]o state a cause of action for intentional or negligent interference with prospective economic advantage, it is not necessary to also plead a separate, stand-alone tort cause of action." (Redfearn v. Trader Joe's Co. (2018) 20 Cal.App.5th 989, 1006 [230 Cal.Rptr.3d 98], internal citations omitted.)

- "[O]ur focus for determining the wrongfulness of those intentional acts should be on the defendant's objective conduct, and evidence of motive or other subjective states of mind is relevant only to illuminating the nature of that conduct." (Arntz Contracting Co., supra, 47 Cal.App.4th at p. 477.)
- "[A]n essential element of the tort of intentional interference with prospective business advantage is the existence of a business relationship with which the tortfeasor interfered. Although this need not be a contractual relationship, an existing relationship is required." (Roth v. Rhodes (1994) 25 Cal.App.4th 530, 546 [30 Cal.Rptr.2d 706], internal citations omitted.)
- "If a party has no liability in tort for refusing to perform an existing contract, no matter what the reason, he or she certainly should not have to bear a burden in tort for refusing to enter into a contract where he or she has no obligation to do so. If that same party cannot conspire with a third party to breach or interfere with his or her own contract then certainly the result should be no different where the 'conspiracy' is to disrupt a relationship which has not even risen to the dignity of an existing contract and the party to that relationship was entirely free to 'disrupt' it on his or her own without legal restraint or penalty." (Kasparian v. County of Los Angeles (1995) 38 Cal.App.4th 242, 266 [45 Cal.Rptr.2d 90], original italics.)
- "Although varying language has been used to express this threshold requirement, the cases generally agree it must be reasonably probable that the prospective economic advantage would have been realized but for defendant's interference." (Youst v. Longo (1987) 43 Cal.3d 64, 71 [233 Cal.Rptr. 294, 729 P.2d 728], internal citations omitted.)
- "Under [the competition] privilege, ' "a competitor is free to divert business to himself as long as he uses fair and reasonable means.' [Citation.]' " (I-CA Enterprises, Inc. v. Palram Americas, Inc. (2015) 235 Cal.App.4th 257, 292–293 [185 Cal.Rptr.3d 24].)
- "Since the crux of the competition privilege is that one can interfere with a competitor's prospective contractual relationship with a third party as long as the interfering conduct is not independently wrongful (i.e., wrongful apart from the fact of the interference itself), Della Penna's requirement that a plaintiff plead and prove such wrongful conduct in order to recover for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage has resulted in a shift of burden of proof. It is now the plaintiff's burden to prove, as an element of the cause of action itself, that the defendant's conduct was independently wrongful and, therefore, was not privileged rather than the defendant's burden to prove, as an affirmative defense, that it's [sic] conduct was not independently wrongful and therefore was privileged." (Bed, Bath & Beyond of La Jolla, Inc. v. La Jolla Village Square Venture Partners (1997) 52 Cal.App.4th 867, 881 [60 Cal.Rptr.2d 830].)
- "[I]n the absence of other evidence, timing alone may be sufficient to prove causation . . . . Thus, . . . the real issue is whether, in the circumstances of the case, the proximity of the alleged cause and effect tends to demonstrate some relevant connection. If it does, then the issue is one for the fact finder to decide." (Overhill Farms, Inc. v. Lopez (2010) 190 Cal.App.4th 1248, 1267 [119 Cal.Rptr.3d 127], original italics.)

- "There are three formulations of the manager's privilege: (1) absolute, (2) mixed motive, and (3) predominant motive." (Halvorsen v. Aramark Uniform Services, Inc. (1998) 65 Cal.App.4th 1383, 1391 [77 Cal.Rptr.2d 383].)
- "We conclude that a plaintiff seeking to state a claim for intentional interference with contract or prospective economic advantage because defendant induced another to undertake litigation, must allege that the litigation was brought without probable cause and that the litigation concluded in plaintiff's favor." (Pacific Gas & Electric Co., supra, 50 Cal.3d at p. 1137.)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 854–855, 875

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 5(I)-F, Intentional Interference With Contract Or Prospective Economic Advantage, ¶¶ 5:463, 5:470 (The Rutter Group)

Croskey et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch. 11-G, Intentional Interference With Contract Or Economic Advantage, ¶ 11:138.5 (The Rutter Group)

3 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 40, Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts, §§ 40.100–40.105 (Matthew Bender)

49 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.133 (Matthew Bender)

12 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 122, Interference, §§ 122.23, 122.32 (Matthew Bender)

2203. Intent

Revoked December 2013

2204. Negligent Interference With Prospective Economic Relations

---

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] negligently interfered with a relationship between [him/her/nonbinary pronoun/it] and [name of third party] that probably would have resulted in an economic benefit to [name of plaintiff]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] and [name of third party] were in an economic relationship that probably would have resulted in a future economic benefit to [name of plaintiff];
2. That [name of defendant] knew or should have known of this relationship;
3. That [name of defendant] knew or should have known that this relationship would be disrupted if [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] failed to act with reasonable care;
4. That [name of defendant] failed to act with reasonable care;
5. That [name of defendant] engaged in wrongful conduct through [insert grounds for wrongfulness, e.g., breach of contract with another, misrepresentation, fraud, violation of statute];
6. That the relationship was disrupted;
7. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
8. That [name of defendant]'s wrongful conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003; Revised November 2020

Directions for Use

Regarding the fifth element, the judge must specifically state for the jury the conduct that the judge has determined as a matter of law would satisfy the "wrongful conduct" standard. This conduct must fall outside the privilege of fair competition. (Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal.4th 376, 393 [45 Cal.Rptr.2d 436, 902 P.2d 740]; Settimo Associates v. Environ Systems, Inc. (1993) 14 Cal.App.4th 842, 845 [17 Cal.Rptr.2d 757].) The jury must then decide whether the defendant engaged in the conduct as defined by the judge. If the conduct is tortious, judge should instruct on the elements of the tort.

Sources and Authority

- "The tort of intentional or negligent interference with prospective economic advantage imposes liability for improper methods of disrupting or diverting the business relationship of another which fall outside the boundaries of fair competition." (Settimo Associates, supra, 14 Cal.App.4th at p. 845, internal citation omitted.)

- "The elements of negligent interference with prospective economic advantage are (1) the existence of an economic relationship between the plaintiff and a third party containing the probability of future economic benefit to the plaintiff; (2) the defendant's knowledge of the relationship; (3) the defendant's knowledge (actual or construed) that the relationship would be disrupted if the defendant failed to act with reasonable care; (4) the defendant's failure to act with reasonable care; (5) actual disruption of the relationship; (6) and economic harm proximately caused by the defendant's negligence." (Redfearn v. Trader Joe's Co. (2018) 20 Cal.App.5th 989, 1005 [230 Cal.Rptr.3d 98].)
- "The tort of negligent interference with prospective economic advantage is established where a plaintiff demonstrates that (1) an economic relationship existed between the plaintiff and a third party which contained a reasonably probable future economic benefit or advantage to plaintiff; (2) the defendant knew of the existence of the relationship and was aware or should have been aware that if it did not act with due care its actions would interfere with this relationship and cause plaintiff to lose in whole or in part the probable future economic benefit or advantage of the relationship; (3) the defendant was negligent; and (4) such negligence caused damage to plaintiff in that the relationship was actually interfered with or disrupted and plaintiff lost in whole or in part the economic benefits or advantage reasonably expected from the relationship." (North American Chemical Co. v. Superior Court (1997) 59 Cal.App.4th 764, 786 [69 Cal.Rptr.2d 466].)
- " 'The tort of negligent interference with economic relationship arises only when the defendant owes the plaintiff a duty of care.' " (LiMandri v. Judkins (1997) 52 Cal.App.4th 326, 348 [60 Cal.Rptr.2d 539], original italics, internal citation omitted.)
- "Where a special relationship exists between the parties, a plaintiff may recover for loss of expected economic advantage through the negligent performance of a contract although the parties were not in contractual privity." (J'Aire Corp. v. Gregory (1979) 24 Cal.3d 799, 804 [157 Cal.Rptr. 407, 598 P.2d 60].)
- The trial court should instruct the jury on the "independently wrongful" element of the tort of negligent interference with prospective economic advantage. (National Medical Transportation Network v. Deloitte & Touche (1998) 62 Cal.App.4th 412, 440 [72 Cal.Rptr.2d 720].)
- "Commonly included among improper means are actions which are independently actionable, violations of federal or state law or unethical business practices, e.g., violence, misrepresentation, unfounded litigation, defamation, trade libel or trade mark infringement." (PMC, Inc. v. Saban Entertainment, Inc. (1996) 45 Cal.App.4th 579, 603 [52 Cal.Rptr.2d 877], internal citation omitted, disapproved on other grounds in Korea Supply Co. v. Lockheed Martin Corp.

(2003) 29 Cal.4th 1134, 1159 fn. 11 [131 Cal.Rptr.2d 29, 63 P.3d 937].)

- "While the trial court and [defendant] are correct that a defendant incurs liability for interfering with another's prospective economic advantage only if the defendant's conduct was independently wrongful, we have been directed to no California authority, and have found none, for the trial court's conclusion that the wrongful conduct must be intentional or willful. The defendant's conduct must 'fall outside the boundaries of fair competition'. . . , but negligent misconduct or the violation of a statutory obligation suffice. The approved CACI No. 2204 does not indicate otherwise and, in fact, indicates that either a misrepresentation or 'violation of statute' is sufficient." (Venhaus v. Shultz (2007) 155 Cal.App.4th 1072, 1079–1080 [66 Cal.Rptr.3d 432], internal citations omitted.)
- "The fact that the defendant's conduct was independently wrongful is an element of the interference cause of action itself. In addition, the wrongful interfering act can be independently tortious only as to a third party; it need not be independently wrongful as to the plaintiff. Accordingly, . . . to state a cause of action for intentional or negligent interference with prospective economic advantage, it is not necessary to also plead a separate, stand-alone tort cause of action." (Redfearn, supra, 20 Cal.App.5th at p. 1006, internal citations omitted.)
- "[A]mong the criteria for establishing [the existence of] a duty of care is the 'blameworthiness' of the defendant's conduct. For negligent interference, a defendant's conduct is blameworthy only if it was independently wrongful apart from the interference itself." (Lange v. TIG Ins. Co. (1998) 68 Cal.App.4th 1179, 1187 [81 Cal.Rptr.2d 39], internal citations omitted.)
- "Under the privilege of free competition, a competitor is free to divert business to himself as long as he uses fair and reasonable means. Thus, the plaintiff must present facts indicating the defendant's interference is somehow wrongful—i.e., based on facts that take the defendant's actions out of the realm of legitimate business transactions." (Tri-Growth Centre City, Ltd. v. Silldorf, Burdman, Duignan & Eisenberg (1989) 216 Cal.App.3d 1139, 1153–1154 [265 Cal.Rptr. 330], internal citations omitted.)
- "Since the crux of the competition privilege is that one can interfere with a competitor's prospective contractual relationship with a third party as long as the interfering conduct is not independently wrongful (i.e., wrongful apart from the fact of the interference itself), Della Penna's requirement that a plaintiff plead and prove such wrongful conduct in order to recover for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage has resulted in a shift of burden of proof. It is now the plaintiff's burden to prove, as an element of the cause of action itself, that the defendant's conduct was independently wrongful and, therefore, was not privileged rather than the defendant's burden to prove, as an affirmative defense, that it's [sic] conduct was not independently wrongful and therefore was privileged." (Bed, Bath & Beyond of La Jolla, Inc. v. La Jolla Village Square Venture Partners (1997) 52 Cal.App.4th 867, 881 [60 Cal.Rptr.2d 830].)
- "There are three formulations of the manager's privilege: (1) absolute, (2) mixed motive, and (3) predominant motive." (Halvorsen v. Aramark Uniform Services, Inc. (1998) 65 Cal.App.4th 1383, 1391 [77 Cal.Rptr.2d 383].)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, §§ 867–869

3 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 40, Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts, § 40.104 (Matthew Bender)

10 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 103, Brokers, § 103.33 (Matthew Bender)

49 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.135 (Matthew Bender)

12 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 122, Interference, § 122.70 (Matthew Bender)

2205. Intentional Interference With Expected Inheritance—Essential Factual Elements

---

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] intentionally interfered with [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] expectation of receiving an inheritance from the estate of [name of decedent]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] expected to receive an inheritance from the estate of [name of decedent];
2. That [name of defendant] knew of the expectation;
3. That [name of defendant] engaged in [specify conduct determined by the court to be wrongful];
4. That by engaging in this conduct, [name of defendant] intended to interfere with [name of plaintiff]'s expected inheritance;
5. That there was a reasonable certainty that [name of plaintiff] would have received the inheritance if [name of defendant] had not interfered;
6. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
7. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

[*Name of plaintiff] does not have to have been named as a beneficiary in the will or trust or have been named to receive the particular property at issue. A reasonable certaintyof receipt is sufficient.

New June 2013

Directions for Use

California recognizes the tort of intentional interference with expected inheritance (IIEI). (See Beckwith v. Dahl (2012) 205 Cal.App.4th 1039 [141 Cal.Rptr.3d 142].)

The wrongful conduct alleged in element 3 must have been directed toward someone other than the plaintiff. If the defendant's tortious conduct was directed at the plaintiff rather than at the testator, the plaintiff has an independent tort claim against the defendant and asserting the IIEI tort is unnecessary. It also must be wrongful for some reason other than the fact of the interference. (Beckwith, supra, 205 Cal.App.4th at pp. 1057–1058.) Whether the conduct alleged qualifies as wrongful if proven will be resolved by the court as a matter of law. The jury's role is not to determine wrongfulness, but simply to find whether or not the defendant engaged in the conduct. If the conduct is tortious, the judge should instruct on the elements of the tort.

Sources and Authority

- "To state a claim for IIEI, a plaintiff must allege five distinct elements. First, the plaintiff must plead he had an expectancy of an inheritance. It is not necessary to allege that 'one is in fact named as a beneficiary in the will or that one has been devised the particular property at issue. [Citation.] That requirement would defeat the purpose of an expectancy claim. [¶] . . . [¶] It is only the expectation that one will receive some interest that gives rise to a cause of action. [Citations.]' Second, as in other interference torts, the complaint must allege causation. 'This means that, as in other cases involving recovery for loss of expectancies . . . there must be proof amounting to a reasonable degree of certainty that the bequest or devise would have been in effect at the time of the death of the testator . . . if there had been no such interference.' Third, the plaintiff must plead intent, i.e., that the defendant had knowledge of the plaintiff's expectancy of inheritance and took deliberate action to interfere with it. Fourth, the complaint must allege that the interference was conducted by independently tortious means, i.e., the underlying conduct must be wrong for some reason other than the fact of the interference. Finally, the plaintiff must plead he was damaged by the defendant's interference." (Beckwith, supra, 205 Cal.App.4th at p. 1057, internal citations omitted.)
- "Additionally, an IIEI defendant must direct the independently tortious conduct at someone other than the plaintiff. The cases firmly indicate a requirement that '[t]he fraud, duress, undue influence, or other independent tortious conduct required for this tort is directed at the testator. The beneficiary is not directly defrauded or unduly influenced; the testator is.' In other words, the defendant's tortious conduct must have induced or caused the testator to take some action that deprives the plaintiff of his expected inheritance." (Beckwith, supra, 205 Cal.App.4th at pp. 1057–1058, internal citations omitted.)
- "[W]e conclude that a court should recognize the tort of IIEI if it is necessary to afford an injured plaintiff a remedy. The integrity of the probate system and the interest in avoiding tort liability for inherently speculative claims are very important considerations. However, a court should not take the 'drastic consequence of an absolute rule which bars recovery in all . . . cases[]' when a new tort cause of action can be defined in such a way so as to minimize the costs and burdens associated with it. As discussed above, California case law in analogous contexts shields defendants from tort liability when the expectancy is too speculative. In addition, case law from other jurisdictions bars IIEI claims when an adequate probate remedy exists. By recognizing similar restrictions in IIEI actions, we strike the appropriate balance between respecting the integrity of the probate system, guarding against tort liability for inherently speculative claims, and protecting society's interest in providing a remedy for injured parties." (Beckwith, supra, 205 Cal.App.4th at p. 1056, internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, § 854

14 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Wills, § 37, 598, 599

Ross et al., California Practice Guide: Probate, Ch. 15-A, Will Contests, ¶ 15:115.6 et seq. (The Rutter Group)

49 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.133[2][b] (Matthew Bender)

2206–2209. Reserved for Future Use

2210. Affirmative Defense—Privilege to Protect Own Economic Interest

---

[*Name of defendant] claims that there was no intentional interference with contractual relations because [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] acted only to protect [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] legitimate economic interests. To succeed, [name of defendant] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] had a[n] [legitimate] economic interest in the contractual relations because [specify existing economic interest];
2. That [name of defendant] acted only to protect [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] own economic interest;
3. That [name of defendant] acted reasonably and in good faith to protect it; and
4. That [name of defendant] used appropriate means to protect it.

New June 2016; Revised November 2020

Directions for Use

Give this instruction as an affirmative defense to a claim for intentional interference with contractual relations. (See CACI No. 2201.) The defense presents a justification based on the defendant's right to protect its own economic interest.

In element 1, the jury should be told the specific economic interest that the defendant was acting to protect. Include "legitimate" if the jury will be asked to determine whether that economic interest was legitimate, as opposed perhaps to pretextual or fraudulent.

Sources and Authority

- "In harmony with the general guidelines of the test for justification is the narrow protection afforded to a party where (1) he has a legally protected interest, (2) in good faith threatens to protect it, and (3) the threat is to protect it by appropriate means. Prosser adds: 'Where the defendant acts to further his own advantage, other distinctions have been made. If he has a present, existing economic interest to protect, such as the ownership or condition of property, or a prior contract of his own, or a financial interest in the affairs of the person persuaded, he is privileged to prevent performance of the contract of another which threatens it; and for obvious reasons of policy he is likewise privileged to assert an honest claim, or bring or threaten a suit in good faith.' " (Richardson v. La Rancherita (1979) 98 Cal.App.3d 73, 81 [159 Cal.Rptr. 285], internal citation omitted.)
- "Justification for the interference is an affirmative defense and not an element of plaintiff's cause of action." (Richardson, supra, 98 Cal.App.3d at p. 80.)

- "Something other than sincerity and an honest conviction by a party in his position is required before justification for his conduct on the grounds of 'good faith' can be established. There must be an objective basis for the belief which requires more than reliance on counsel." (Richardson, supra, 98 Cal.App.3d at pp. 82–83.)
- "A thoroughly bad motive, that is, a purpose solely to harm the plaintiff, of course, is sufficient to exclude any apparent privilege which the interests of the parties might otherwise create, just as such a motive will defeat the immunity of any other conditional privilege. If the defendant does not act in a bona fide attempt to protect his own interest or the interest of others involved in the situation, he forfeits the immunity of the privilege. . . . Conduct is actionable, when it is indulged solely to harm another, since the legitimate interest of the defendant is practically eliminated from consideration. The defendant's interest, although of such a character as to justify an invasion of another's similar interest, is not to be taken into account when the defendant acts, not for the purpose of protecting that interest, but solely to damage the plaintiff." (Bridges v. Cal-Pacific Leasing Co. (1971) 16 Cal.App.3d 118, 132 [93 Cal.Rptr. 796], original italics.)

Secondary Sources

5 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, § 876

3 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 40, Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts, § 40.119 (Matthew Bender)

49 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.137 (Matthew Bender)

12 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 122, Interference, § 122.42 et seq. (Matthew Bender)

2211–2299. Reserved for Future Use

VF-2200. Inducing Breach of Contract

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was there a contract between [name of plaintiff] and [name of third party]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of defendant] know of the contract?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of defendant] intend to cause [name of third party] to breach the contract?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did [name of defendant]'s conduct cause [name of third party] to breach the contract?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

   [a. Past economic loss

   [lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2200, Inducing Breach of Contract.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 6 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-

3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2201. Intentional Interference With Contractual Relations

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was there a contract between [name of plaintiff] and [name of third party]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of defendant] know of the contract?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of defendant]'s conduct prevent performance or make performance more expensive or difficult?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did [name of defendant] [intend to disrupt the performance of this contract/ [or] know that disruption of performance was certain or substantially certain to occur]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

   [a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, December 2013, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2201, Intentional Interference With Contractual Relations—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 6 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2202. Intentional Interference With Prospective Economic Relations

---

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of plaintiff] and [name of third party] have an economic relationship that probably would have resulted in an economic benefit to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of defendant] know of the relationship?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of defendant] engage in [specify conduct determined by the court to be wrongful if proved]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. By engaging in this conduct, did [name of defendant] [intend to disrupt the relationship/ [or] know that disruption of the relationship was certain or substantially certain to occur]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Was the relationship disrupted?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, June 2013, December 2013, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2202, Intentional Interference With Prospective Economic Relations—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 7 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2203. Negligent Interference With Prospective Economic Relations

---

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of plaintiff] and [name of third party] have an economic relationship that probably would have resulted in an economic benefit to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of defendant] know or should [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] have known of the relationship?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of defendant] know or should [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] have known that this relationship would be disrupted if [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] failed to act with reasonable care?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did [name of defendant] fail to act with reasonable care?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Did [name of defendant] engage in wrongful conduct through [insert grounds for wrongfulness]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Was the relationship disrupted?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. Was [name of defendant]'s wrongful conduct a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 7 is yes, then answer question 8. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

8. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2204, Negligent Interference With Prospective Economic Relations.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 8 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2204–VF-2299. Reserved for Future Use

INSURANCE LITIGATION

2300. Breach of Contractual Duty to Pay a Covered Claim—Essential Factual Elements

---

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] breached its duty to pay [him/her/nonbinary pronoun/it] for a loss covered under an insurance policy. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] suffered a loss, [all or part of] which was covered under an insurance policy with [name of defendant];
2. That [name of defendant] was notified of the loss [as required by the policy]; and
3. The amount of the covered loss that [name of defendant] failed to pay.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

The instructions in this series assume the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

This instruction is intended for first party coverage claims. Use the bracketed language in element 2 if the jury is required to resolve a factual dispute over whether the manner in which the insurer received notice conformed to the policy requirements for notice. For a claim arising under an insurance binder rather than an issued policy, see CACI No. 2301, Breach of Insurance Binder—Essential Factual Elements. If the policy at issue has been lost or destroyed, read CACI No. 2305, Lost or Destroyed Insurance Policy. For instructions on general breach of contract issues, see the Contracts series (CACI No. 300 et seq.).

Sources and Authority

- "Wrongful failure to provide coverage or defend a claim is a breach of contract." (Isaacson v. California Insurance Guarantee Assn. (1988) 44 Cal.3d 775, 791 [244 Cal.Rptr. 655, 750 P.2d 297].)

Secondary Sources

Croskey et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch. 15-D, Filing Considerations, ¶¶ 15:52, 15:924 (The Rutter Group)

2 California Liability Insurance Practice: Claims & Litigation (Cont.Ed.Bar) General Principles of Contract and Bad Faith Actions, §§ 24.2, 24.23

6 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 82, Claims and Disputes Under Insurance Policies, § 82.50[2][c] (Matthew Bender)

26 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender)

12 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 120, Insurance, §§ 120.83, 120.90, 120.115 (Matthew Bender)

2301. Breach of Insurance Binder—Essential Factual Elements

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] breached its duty to pay [him/her/nonbinary pronoun/it] for a loss or liability covered under a temporary insurance contract called an insurance binder. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] or its authorized agent agreed, orally or in writing, to provide [name of plaintiff] with an insurance binder;
2. That [name of plaintiff] [paid/was obligated to pay] for the insurance binder [or that payment was waived];
3. That [name of plaintiff] suffered a loss during the time the insurance binder was in effect;
4. That [all or part of] the loss was covered under the [insurance binder] [terms of the insurance policy [name of defendant] would have issued to [name of plaintiff]];
5. That [name of defendant] was notified of the loss [as required by the insurance binder]; and
6. The amount of the covered loss or liability that [name of defendant] failed to pay.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

The instructions in this series assume the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

This instruction is intended for an alleged breach of a contract of temporary insurance coverage. The court must interpret as a matter of law whether an ordinary person in the applicant's circumstances would conclude, based on the language of the application, that coverage began immediately. Do not use this instruction unless the court has decided this issue.

Use bracketed language in element 5 if the jury is required to resolve a factual dispute over whether the manner in which the insurer received notice conformed to the policy requirements for notice. Element 4 should be modified if there is an issue regarding whether the insurance company's agent made oral statements at variance with the policy language.

Note that the statutory requirements for a "binder" under Insurance Code section 382.5 do not apply to life or disability insurance, for insurance of any kind in the amount of $1 million or more, or to an oral binder (see Ins. Code, § 382.5(a)).

Sources and Authority

- Binders. Insurance Code section 382.5.
- Cancelation of Temporary Insurance. Insurance Code section 481.1.
- "Under California law, a contract of temporary insurance may arise from completion of an application for insurance and payment of the first premium if the language of the application would lead an ordinary lay person to conclude that coverage was immediate." (Ahern v. Dillenback (1991) 1 Cal.App.4th 36, 47 [1 Cal.Rptr.2d 339].)
- "[A] binder is an independent contract, separate and distinct from the permanent insurance policy. It is intended to give temporary protection pending the investigation of the risk by the insurer and until issuance of a formal policy or rejection of the insurance application by the insurer." (Ahern, supra, 1 Cal.App.4th at p. 48.)
- "[P]racticality dictates that a temporary insurance binder issued upon an application for insurance cannot contain all of the details and terms of the proposed insurance contract. . . . [I]nsurance binders are adequate if they indicate the subject matter, the coverage period, the rate and the amount of insurance. (National Emblem Insurance Co. v. Rios (1969) 275 Cal.App.2d 70, 76 [79 Cal.Rptr. 583], internal citations omitted.)
- "Whether or not a valid binder exists is a question of fact insofar as a finding comprehends issues relating to the credibility of witnesses or the weight of the evidence, but a question of law insofar as a finding embraces a conclusion that such factual elements do not constitute a valid oral binder." (Spott Electrical Co. v. Industrial Indemnity Co. (1973) 30 Cal.App.3d 797, 805 [106 Cal.Rptr. 710], internal citations omitted.)
- " 'For the sake of convenience, contracts of insurance sometimes exist in two forms: (1) A preliminary contract intended to protect the applicant pending investigation of the risk by the company or until the policy can be properly issued. (2) The final contract or policy itself. . . . An agent possessing authority to bind the company by contracts of insurance has authority to bind it by a preliminary or temporary contract of insurance. . . .' This preliminary contract is sometimes called 'cover note' or 'binder.' . . . 'A valid temporary or preliminary contract of present insurance may be made orally, or it may be partly in parol and partly in writing.' " (Parlier Fruit Co. v. Fireman's Fund Insurance Co. (1957) 151 Cal.App.2d 6, 19–20 [311 P.2d 62], internal quotation marks and citation omitted.)

Secondary Sources

2 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Insurance, §§ 54, 55

Croskey et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch. 2-D, When Insurance Effective; Coverage of Losses Before Policy Issued, ¶¶ 2:101–2:137 (The Rutter Group)

1 California Liability Insurance Practice: Claims & Litigation (Cont.Ed.Bar)

Determining Whether Enforceable Obligation Exists, §§ 5.17–5.20

2 California Insurance Law & Practice, Ch. 9, Issuance of Insurance Policies, § 9.06[1]–[7] (Matthew Bender)

26 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender)

12 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 120, Insurance, § 120.15 (Matthew Bender)

11 California Legal Forms: Transaction Guide, Ch. 26A, Title Insurance, §§ 26A.15, 26A.220 (Matthew Bender)

2302. Breach of Contract for Temporary Life Insurance—Essential Factual Elements

---

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] breached an agreement to pay life insurance benefits. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] or its authorized agent received [name of decedent]'s application for life insurance;
2. That [name of decedent] paid the first insurance premium;
3. That [name of decedent] died [on/after/before] [insert relevant date]; and
4. The amount of the insurance benefits that [name of defendant] failed to pay.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

The instructions in this series assume the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

This instruction is intended for an alleged breach of a contract of temporary life insurance coverage. The court must interpret as a matter of law whether an ordinary person in the applicant's circumstances would conclude, based on the language of the application, that coverage began immediately. Do not use this instruction unless the court has decided this issue.

Sources and Authority

- Death of Insured Before Issuance of Policy. Insurance Code section 10115.
- "We are of the view that a contract of insurance arose upon defendant's receipt of the completed application and the first premium payment. . . . The understanding of an ordinary person is the standard [that] must be used in construing the contract, and such a person upon reading the application would believe that he would secure the benefit of immediate coverage by paying the premium in advance of delivery of the policy." (Ransom v. The Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co. (1954) 43 Cal.2d 420, 425 [274 P.2d 633].)
- "[A]n insurance company is not precluded from imposing conditions precedent to the effectiveness of insurance coverage despite the advance payment of the first premium. However, . . . any such condition must be stated in conspicuous, unambiguous and unequivocal language which an ordinary layman can understand." (Thompson v. Occidental Life Insurance Co. of California (1973) 9 Cal.3d 904, 912 [109 Cal.Rptr. 473, 513 P.2d 353].)

- Temporary life insurance coverage "is not terminated until the applicant receives from the insurer both a notice of the rejection of his application and a refund of his premium." (Smith v. Westland Life Insurance Co. (1975) 15 Cal.3d 111, 120 [123 Cal.Rptr. 649, 539 P.2d 433].)
- "Under California law, a contract of temporary insurance may arise from completion of an application for insurance and payment of the first premium if the language of the application would lead an ordinary lay person to conclude that coverage was immediate." (Ahern v. Dillenback (1991) 1 Cal.App.4th 36, 47 [1 Cal.Rptr.2d 339] [automobile insurance].)

Secondary Sources

2 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Insurance, §§ 54–56

Croskey et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch. 2-D, When Insurance Effective; Coverage of Losses Before Policy Issued, ¶¶ 2:134–2:137, 6:428–6:448 (The Rutter Group)

2 California Insurance Law & Practice, Ch. 9, Issuance of Insurance Policies, § 9.07 (Matthew Bender)

26 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender)

12 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 120, Insurance, §§ 120.19–120.20 (Matthew Bender)

2303. Affirmative Defense—Insurance Policy Exclusion

[*Name of defendant] claims that [name of plaintiff]'s [liability/loss] is not covered because it is specifically excluded under the policy. To succeed, [name of defendant] must prove that [name of plaintiff]'s [liability/loss] [arises out of/is based on/occurred because of] [state exclusion under the policy]. This exclusion applies if [set forth disputed factual issues that jury must determine].

New September 2003; Revised October 2008, June 2014, May 2021

Directions for Use

The instructions in this series assume the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

Give this instruction if the court has determined that an exclusionary clause in an insurance policy might apply to foreclose coverage, but the applicability turns on a question of fact. Identify with specificity the disputed factual issues the jury must resolve to determine whether the exclusion applies.

This instruction can be used in cases involving either a third party liability or a first party loss policy. Use CACI No. 2306, Covered and Excluded Risks—Predominant Cause of Loss, rather than this instruction, if a first party loss policy is involved and there is evidence that a loss was caused by both covered and excluded perils.

Sources and Authority

- "The burden of bringing itself within any exculpatory clause contained in the policy is on the insurer." (Clemmer v. Hartford Insurance Co. (1978) 22 Cal.3d 865, 880 [151 Cal.Rptr. 285, 587 P.2d 1098].)
- "The burden is on an insured to establish that the occurrence forming the basis of its claim is within the basic scope of insurance coverage. And, once an insured has made this showing, the burden is on the insurer to prove the claim is specifically excluded." (Aydin Corp. v. First State Insurance Co. (1998) 18 Cal.4th 1183, 1188 [77 Cal.Rptr.2d 537, 959 P.2d 1213].)
- Once the insurer proves that the specific exclusion applies, the insured "should bear the burden of establishing the exception because 'its effect is to reinstate coverage that the exclusionary language otherwise bars.' " (Aydin Corp., supra, 18 Cal.4th at p. 1188.)
- "The interpretation of an exclusionary clause is an issue of law subject to this court's independent determination." (Marquez Knolls Property Owners Assn., Inc. v. Executive Risk Indemnity, Inc. (2007) 153 Cal.App.4th 228, 233 [62 Cal.Rptr.3d 510].)
- "[T]he question of what caused the loss is generally a question of fact, and the loss is not covered if the covered risk was only a remote cause of the loss, or the excluded risk was the efficient proximate, or predominate cause." (State Farm Fire & Casualty Co. v. Von Der Lieth (1991) 54 Cal.3d 1123, 1131–1132 [2 Cal.Rptr.2d 183, 820 P.2d 285].)

Secondary Sources

2 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Insurance, §§ 85, 88

Croskey et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch. 15-I, Trial, ¶¶ 15:911–15:912 (The Rutter Group)

1 California Liability Insurance Practice: Claims & Litigation (Cont.Ed.Bar) Analyzing Coverage: Reading and Interpreting Insurance Policies, § 3.63

4 California Insurance Law and Practice, Ch. 41, Liability Insurance in General, § 41.11 (Matthew Bender)

26 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance, § 308.502 (Matthew Bender)

2304. Exception to Insurance Policy Exclusion—Burden of Proof

---

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] [liability/loss] is covered under an exception to a specific coverage exclusion under the policy. To establish this coverage, [name of plaintiff] must prove that [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] [liability/loss] [arises out of/is based on/occurred because] [state exception to policy exclusion].

New September 2003

Directions for Use

The instructions in this series assume the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

Use this instruction only if the insurer is asserting that the insured's claim is subject to an exclusion.

Sources and Authority

- "The burden is on an insured to establish that the occurrence forming the basis of its claim is within the basic scope of insurance coverage. And, once an insured has made this showing, the burden is on the insurer to prove the claim is specifically excluded." (Aydin Corp. v. First State Insurance Co. (1998) 18 Cal.4th 1183, 1188 [77 Cal.Rptr.2d 537, 959 P.2d 1213], internal citations omitted.)
- Once the insurer proves that the specific exclusion applies, the insured "should bear the burden of establishing the exception because 'its effect is to reinstate coverage that the exclusionary language otherwise bars.' " (Aydin Corp., supra, 18 Cal.4th at p. 1188.)

Secondary Sources

Croskey et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch. 15-I, Trial ¶¶ 15:913–15:915.5 (The Rutter Group)

1 California Liability Insurance Practice: Claims & Litigation (Cont.Ed.Bar) Analyzing Coverage: Reading and Interpreting Insurance Policies, § 3.63

26 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender)

12 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 120, Insurance, §§ 120.40, 120.42 (Matthew Bender)

2305. Lost or Destroyed Insurance Policy

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] was covered under an insurance policy that was lost or destroyed. To establish coverage under a lost policy, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] was insured under the lost policy during the period in question; and
2. That the terms of the policy included the following:
   a. [describe each policy provision essential to the claimed coverage].

[Name of plaintiff] is not required to prove the exact words of the lost policy, but only the substance of the policy's terms essential to [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] claim for insurance benefits.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

The instructions in this series assume the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

Read this instruction in conjunction with CACI No. 2300, Breach of Contractual Duty to Pay a Covered Claim—Essential Factual Elements. Whether the terms of a lost policy must be established by a heightened degree of proof appears to be an open issue. The Supreme Court in Dart Industries, Inc. v. Commercial Union Insurance Co. (2002) 28 Cal.4th 1059 [124 Cal.Rptr.2d 142, 52 P.3d 79], expressly declined to address the issue of the necessary degree of proof. (Id at p. 1072, fn. 4.)

This instruction is intended for use in cases where the plaintiff insured claims coverage for a loss under an insurance policy that was lost or destroyed without fraudulent intent on the part of the insured. The admission of oral testimony of the contents of a lost document requires the court to determine certain preliminary facts: (1) the proponent does not have possession or control of a copy of the policy; and (2) the policy was lost or destroyed without fraudulent intent on the part of the proponent. (Evid. Code, §§ 402(b), 1521, 1523(b).)

Sources and Authority

- Proof of Content of Writing. Evidence Code section 1521(a).
- Oral Testimony of Content of Writing. Evidence Code section 1523(b).
- "In an action on an insurance policy that has not been lost or destroyed, it is well settled that '[t]he burden is on an insured to establish that the occurrence forming the basis of its claim is within the basic scope of insurance coverage.

And, once an insured has made this showing, the burden is on the insurer to prove the claim is specifically excluded.' . . . [¶] We see no reason not to apply this rule to a policy that has been lost or destroyed without fraudulent intent on the part of the insured. Thus, the claimant has the burden of proving (1) the fact that he or she was insured under the lost policy during the period in issue, and (2) the substance of each policy provision essential to the claim for relief, i.e., essential to the particular coverage that the insured claims. Which provisions those are will vary from case to case; the decisions often refer to them simply as the material terms of the lost policy. In turn, the insurer has the burden of proving the substance of any policy provision 'essential to the . . . defense,' i.e., any provision that functions to defeat the insured's claim. Those provisions, too, will be case specific." (Dart Industries, Inc., supra, 28 Cal.4th at p. 1068, internal citations and footnotes omitted.)

- "A corollary of the rule that the contents of lost documents may be proved by secondary evidence is that the law does not require the contents of such documents be proved verbatim." (Dart Industries, Inc., supra, 28 Cal.4th at p. 1069.)
- "The rule . . . for the admission of secondary evidence of a lost paper, requires 'that a bona fide and diligent search has been unsuccessfully made for it in the place where it was most likely to be found;' and further, 'the party is expected to show that he has in good faith exhausted in a reasonable degree all the sources of information and means of discovery which the nature of the case would naturally suggest, and which were accessible to him.' " (Dart Industries, Inc., supra, 28 Cal.4th at p. 1068, internal citation omitted.)
- "No fixed rule as to the necessary proof to establish loss [of a written instrument], or what constitutes reasonable search, can be formulated. . . . The sole object of such proof is to raise a reasonable presumption merely that the instrument is lost, and this is a preliminary inquiry addressed to the discretion of the judge." (Kenniff v. Caulfield (1903) 140 Cal. 34, 41 [73 P. 803].)
- "Preliminary proof of the loss or destruction is required and it is committed to the trial court's discretion to determine whether the evidence so offered is or is not sufficient." (Guardianship of Levy (1955) 137 Cal.App.2d 237, 249 [290 P.2d 320].)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, California Evidence (5th ed. 2012) Presentation at Trial, §§ 60–62, 71–72, 75, 77

Croskey et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch. 15-I, Trial, ¶¶ 15:978–15:994 (The Rutter Group)

1 California Liability Insurance Practice: Claims & Litigation (Cont.Ed.Bar) Identifying Sources of Coverage, § 8.8

26 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender)

12 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 120, Insurance, § 120.42 (Matthew Bender)

2306. Covered and Excluded Risks—Predominant Cause of Loss

You have heard evidence that the claimed loss was caused by a combination of covered and excluded risks under the insurance policy. When a loss is caused by a combination of covered and excluded risks under the policy, the loss is covered only if the most important or predominant cause is a covered risk.

[[*Name of defendant] claims that [name of plaintiff]'s loss is not covered because the loss was caused by a risk excluded under the policy. To succeed, [name of defendant] must prove that the most important or predominant cause of the loss was [describe excluded peril or event], which is a risk excluded under the policy.]

[or]

[[*Name of plaintiff] claims that the loss was caused by a risk covered under the policy. To succeed, [name of plaintiff] must prove that the most important or predominant cause of the loss was [describe covered peril or event], which is a risk covered under the policy.]

New September 2003

Directions for Use

The instructions in this series assume the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

This instruction in intended for use in first party property insurance cases where there is evidence that a loss was caused by both covered and excluded perils. In most cases the court will determine as a question of law what perils are covered and excluded under the policy.

Depending on the type of insurance at issue, the court must select the bracketed paragraph that presents the correct burden of proof. For all-risk homeowner's policies, for example, once the insured establishes basic coverage, the insurer bears the burden of proving the loss was caused by an excluded peril. In contrast, for "named perils" policies (for example, fire insurance) the insured bears the burden of proving the loss was caused by the specified peril. (See Strubble v. United Services Automobile Assn. (1973) 35 Cal.App.3d 498, 504 [110 Cal.Rptr. 828].)

Sources and Authority

- Remote Cause of Loss. Insurance Code section 530.
- Excluded Peril: But-For Causation. Insurance Code section 532.
- "[In] determining whether a loss is within an exception in a policy, where there is a concurrence of different causes, the efficient cause—the one that sets others in motion—is the cause to which the loss is to be attributed, though the other causes may follow it, and operate more immediately in producing the disaster." (Sabella v. Wisler (1963) 59 Cal.2d 21, 31–32 [27 Cal.Rptr. 689, 377 P.2d 889], internal quotation marks and citation omitted.)

- "Sabella defined 'efficient proximate cause' alternatively as the 'one that sets others in motion,' and as 'the predominating or moving efficient cause.' We use the term 'efficient proximate cause' (meaning predominating cause) when referring to the Sabella analysis because we believe the phrase 'moving cause' can be misconstrued to deny coverage erroneously, particularly when it is understood literally to mean the 'triggering' cause." (Garvey v. State Farm Fire & Casualty Co. (1989) 48 Cal.3d 395, 403 [257 Cal.Rptr. 292, 770 P.2d 704], internal citations omitted.)
- "The efficient proximate cause referred to in Sabella has also been called the predominant cause or the most important cause of the loss. 'By focusing the causal inquiry on the most important cause of a loss, the efficient proximate cause doctrine creates a "workable rule of coverage that provides a fair result within the reasonable expectations of both the insured and the insurer." ' " (Vardanyan v. AMCO Ins. Co. (2015) 243 Cal.App.4th 779, 787 [197 Cal.Rptr.3d 195], internal citation omitted.)
- "[T]he 'cause' of loss in the context of a property insurance contract is totally different from that in a liability policy. This distinction is critical to the resolution of losses involving multiple causes. Frequently property losses occur which involve more than one peril that might be considered legally significant. . . . 'The task becomes one of identifying the most important cause of the loss and attributing the loss to that cause.' [¶] On the other hand, the right to coverage in the third party liability insurance context draws on traditional tort concepts of fault, proximate cause and duty." (Garvey, supra, 48 Cal.3d at pp. 406–407, internal quotation marks, italics, and citations omitted.)
- "[I]n an action upon an all-risks policy (unlike a specific peril policy), the insured does not have to prove that the peril proximately causing his loss was covered by the policy. This is because the policy covers all risks save for those risks specifically excluded by the policy. The insurer, though, since it is denying liability upon the policy, must prove the policy's noncoverage of the insured's loss—that is, that the insured's loss was proximately caused by a peril specifically excluded from the coverage of the policy." (Vardanyan, supra, 243 Cal.App.4th at pp. 796–797, original italics.)
- "A policy cannot extend coverage for a specified peril, then exclude coverage for a loss caused by a combination of the covered peril and an excluded peril, without regard to whether the covered peril was the predominant or efficient proximate cause of the loss. Other Coverage 9 identifies the perils that are covered when the loss involves collapse. If any other peril contributes to the loss, whether the loss is covered or excluded depends upon which peril is the predominant cause of the loss. To the extent the term 'caused only by one or more' of the listed perils can be construed to mean the contribution of any unlisted peril, in any way and to any degree, would result in the loss being excluded from coverage, the provision is an unenforceable attempt to contract around the efficient proximate cause doctrine. ¶ Accordingly, CACI No. 2306 . . . was the correct instruction to give to the jury." Vardanyan, supra, 243 Cal.App.4th at p. 796.)

- "[T]he scope of coverage under an all-risk homeowner's policy includes all risks except those specifically excluded by the policy. When a loss is caused by a combination of a covered and specifically excluded risks, the loss is covered if the covered risk was the efficient proximate cause of the loss. . . . [T]he question of what caused the loss is generally a question of fact, and the loss is not covered if the covered risk was only a remote cause of the loss, or the excluded risk was the efficient proximate, or predominate, cause." (State Farm Fire & Casualty Co. v. Von Der Lieth (1991) 54 Cal.3d 1123, 1131–1132 [2 Cal.Rptr.2d 183, 820 P.2d 285], internal citation omitted.)
- "[A]n insurer is not absolutely prohibited from drafting and enforcing policy provisions that provide or leave intact coverage for some, but not all, manifestations of a particular peril. This is, in fact, an everyday practice that normally raises no questions regarding section 530 or the efficient proximate cause doctrine." (Julian v. Hartford Underwriters Ins. Co. (2005) 35 Cal.4th 747, 759 [27 Cal.Rptr.3d 648, 110 P.3d 903].)

Secondary Sources

Croskey et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch. 6A-E, First Party Coverages—Causation Principles, ¶¶ 6:134–6:143, 6:253 (The Rutter Group)

1 California Liability Insurance Practice: Claims & Litigation (Cont.Ed.Bar) Analyzing Coverage: Reading and Interpreting Insurance Policies, § 3.42

3 California Insurance Law & Practice, Ch. 9, Homeowners and Related Policies, § 36.42 (Matthew Bender)

26 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance, § 308.113 (Matthew Bender)

12 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 120, Insurance, § 120.50 (Matthew Bender)

2307. Insurance Agency Relationship Disputed

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of agent] was [name of defendant]'s agent and that [name of defendant] is therefore [responsible for/bound by] [name of agent]'s [conduct/ representations].

If [*name of plaintiff] proves that [name of defendant] gave [name of agent] the [authority/apparent authority] to act on behalf of [name of defendant], then [name of agent] was [name of defendant]'s agent. This authority may be shown by words or may be implied by the parties' conduct. This authority cannot be shown by the words of [name of agent] alone.

[In some circumstances, an individual can be the agent of both the insured and the insurance company. [*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of agent] was [[name of defendant]/[name of plaintiff]]'s agent for the purpose of [describe limited agency; e.g., "collecting insurance payments"] and therefore [describe dispute; e.g., "the insurer received plaintiff's payment"]. [Name of defendant] claims that [name of agent] was [[name of defendant]/[name of plaintiff]]'s agent for the purpose of [describe limited agency] and therefore [describe dispute].]

New September 2003

Directions for Use

The instructions in this series assume the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

This instruction must be modified based on the evidence presented and theories of liability in the case. The distinction between an agent and a broker relationship may be crucial in determining, for example, whether an insurance salesperson's representations bind the insurer, or whether the insurance salesperson has assumed a specific duty to the insured.

If ostensible agency is an issue, the court may modify and give CACI No. 3709, Ostensible Agent, in the Vicarious Responsibility series.

Sources and Authority

- "Insurance Agent" Defined. Insurance Code section 31.
- "Insurance Broker" Defined. Insurance Code section 33.
- Actual or Ostensible Authority of Agent. Civil Code section 2315.
- "An individual cannot act as an insurance agent in California without a valid license issued by the commissioner of insurance. In addition to possessing a license, an insurance agent must be authorized by an insurance carrier to transact insurance business on the carrier's behalf. This authorization must be evidenced by a notice of agency appointment on file with the Department of Insurance. An agent is generally not limited in the number of agency appointments that he or she may have; thus, an agent may solicit business on behalf of a variety of different insurance carriers, and still technically be an agent of each of those carriers." (Loehr v. Great Republic Insurance Co. (1990) 226 Cal.App.3d 727, 732–733 [276 Cal.Rptr. 667], internal citations omitted.)

- "An agent's primary duty is to represent the insurer in transactions with insurance applicants and policyholders. Each company the agent represents must file a notice of appointment with the DOI's commissioner. Because an agent represents the insurer, an agent's representations to an insured regarding coverage are treated as representations by the insurer. Generally, some hallmarks of an insurance agent (as opposed to a broker) are licensure, notice of appointment as an agent and the power to bind the insurer. In contrast, a broker's primary duty is to represent the applicant/insured, and his or her actions are not generally binding on the insurer. 'Put quite simply, insurance brokers, with no binding authority, are not agents of insurance companies, but are rather independent contractors . . . .' Of course, these labels alone are not determinative of the relationship, and the specific facts of each transaction must be reviewed. The general laws of agency inform any such review." (Douglas v. Fidelity National Ins. Co. (2014) 229 Cal.App.4th 392, 410–411 [177 Cal.Rptr.3d 271], original italics, internal citations omitted.)
- "[S]tatutes defining 'broker' are not determinative of the actual relationship in a particular case. The actual relationship is determined by what the parties do and say, not by the name they are called." (Maloney v. Rhode Island Insurance Co. (1953) 115 Cal.App.2d 238, 245 [251 P.2d 1027], internal citations omitted.)
- "While we note many similarities in the services performed and the monetary functions of agents and brokers, there is a more fundamental legal distinction between insurance agents and brokers. Put quite simply, insurance brokers, with no binding authority, are not agents of insurance companies, but are rather independent contractors . . . ." (Marsh & McLennan of California, Inc. v. City of Los Angeles (1976) 62 Cal.App.3d 108, 118 [132 Cal.Rptr. 796].)
- "Although an insurance broker is ordinarily the agent of the insured and not of the insurer, he may become the agent of the insurer as well as for the insured." (Fraser-Yamor Agency, Inc. v. County of Del Norte (1977) 68 Cal.App.3d 201, 213 [137 Cal.Rptr. 118], internal citations omitted.)
- "When the broker accepts the policy from the insurer and the premium from the assured, he has elected to act for the insurer to deliver the policy and to collect the premium." (Maloney, supra, 115 Cal.App.2d at p. 244.)
- "Generally speaking, a person may do by agent any act which he might do himself. An agency is either actual or ostensible. 'An agency is ostensible when the principal intentionally, or by want of ordinary care, causes a third person to believe another to be his agent who is not really employed by him.' To establish ostensible authority in an agent, it must be shown the principal, intentionally or by want of ordinary care has caused or allowed a third person to believe the agent possesses such authority." (Preis v. American Indemnity Co. (1990) 220 Cal.App.3d 752, 761 [269 Cal.Rptr. 617], internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

Croskey et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch. 2A, Agents and Brokers, ¶¶ 2:12–2:24, 2:31–2:43 (The Rutter Group)

1 California Liability Insurance Practice: Claims & Litigation (Cont.Ed.Bar) Determining Whether Enforceable Obligation Exists, §§ 5.4–5.8

2 California Liability Insurance Practice: Claims & Litigation (Cont.Ed.Bar) Actions Against Agents and Brokers, §§ 29.2–29.5

2 California Insurance Law & Practice, Ch. 9, Issuance of Insurance Policies, § 9.02 (Matthew Bender)

5 California Insurance Law & Practice, Ch. 61, Operating Requirements of Agents and Brokers, § 61.01[4] (Matthew Bender)

2 California Uninsured Motorist Law, Ch. 24, Bad Faith in Uninsured Motorist Law, § 24.40 (Matthew Bender)

26 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance, § 308.114 (Matthew Bender)

12 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 120, Insurance, §§ 120.18, 120.110, 120.170, 120.383, 120.392, 120.403 (Matthew Bender)

2308. Affirmative Defense—Misrepresentation or Concealment in Insurance Application

---

[*Name of insurer] claims that no insurance contract was created because [name of insured] [concealed an important fact/made a false representation] in [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] application for insurance. To establish this defense, [name of insurer] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of insured] submitted an application for insurance with [name of insurer];
2. That in the application for insurance [name of insured], whether intentionally or unintentionally, [failed to state/represented] that [insert omission or alleged misrepresentation];
3. [That the application asked for that information;]
4. That [name of insured] knew that [specify facts that were misrepresented or omitted]; and
5. That [name of insurer] would not have issued the insurance policy if [name of insured] had stated the true facts in the application.

New September 2003; Revised April 2004, October 2004, June 2015, May 2020

Directions for Use

This instruction presents an insurer's affirmative defense to a claim for coverage. The defense is based on a misrepresentation or omission made by the insured in the application for the insurance. (See Douglas v. Fid. Nat'l Ins. Co. (2014) 229 Cal.App.4th 392, 408 [177 Cal.Rptr.3d 271].) If the policy at issue is a standard fire insurance policy, replace "intentionally or unintentionally" in element 2 with "willfully." (See Ins. Code, § 2071.) Otherwise, the insurer is not required to prove an intent to deceive; negligence or inadvertence is enough if the misrepresentation or omission is material. (Douglas, supra, 229 Cal.App.4th at p. 408.) Element 5 expresses materiality.

Element 3 applies only if plaintiff omitted information, not if the plaintiff misrepresented information.

While no intent to mislead is required, the insured must know the facts that constitute the omission or misrepresentation (see element 4). For example, if the application does not disclose that property on which insurance is sought is being used commercially, the applicant must have known that the property is being used commercially. (See Ins. Code, § 332.) It is not a defense, however, if the insured gave incorrect or incomplete responses on the application because the insured failed to appreciate the significance of some information known to him or her. (See Thompson v. Occidental Life Insurance Co. of California (1973) 9 Cal.3d 904, 916 [109 Cal.Rptr. 473, 513 P.2d 353].)

If it is alleged that omission occurred in circumstances other than a written application, this instruction should be modified accordingly.

Sources and Authority

- Rescission of Contract. Civil Code section 1689(b)(1).
- Time of Insurer's Rescission of Policy. Insurance Code section 650.
- Concealment by Failure to Communicate. Insurance Code section 330.
- Concealment Entitles Insurer to Rescind. Insurance Code section 331.
- Duty to Communicate in Good Faith. Insurance Code section 332.
- Materiality. Insurance Code section 334.
- Intentional Omission of Information Tending to Prove Falsity. Insurance Code section 338.
- False Representation: Time for Rescission. Insurance Code section 359.
- "It is well established that material misrepresentations or concealment of material facts in an application for insurance entitle an insurer to rescind an insurance policy, even if the misrepresentations are not intentionally made. Additionally, '[a] misrepresentation or concealment of a material fact in an insurance application also establishes a complete defense in an action on the policy. [Citations.] As with rescission, an insurer seeking to invalidate a policy based on a material misrepresentation or concealment as a defense need not show an intent to deceive. [Citations.]' " (Douglas, supra, 229 Cal.App.4th at p. 408, internal citations omitted.)
- "When the [automobile] insurer fails . . . to conduct . . . a reasonable investigation [of insurability] it cannot assert . . . a right of rescission" under section 650 of the Insurance Code as an affirmative defense to an action by an injured third party. (Barrera v. State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. (1969) 71 Cal.2d 659, 678 [79 Cal.Rptr. 106, 456 P.2d 674].)
- "[A]n insurer has a right to know all that the applicant for insurance knows regarding the state of his health and medical history. Material misrepresentation or concealment of such facts [is] grounds for rescission of the policy, and an actual intent to deceive need not be shown. Materiality is determined solely by the probable and reasonable effect [that] truthful answers would have had upon the insurer. The fact that the insurer has demanded answers to specific questions in an application for insurance is in itself usually sufficient to establish materiality as a matter of law." (Thompson, supra, 9 Cal.3d at pp. 915–916, internal citations omitted.)
- "[A]lthough an insurer generally 'has the right to rely on the applicant's answers without verifying their accuracy[,] . . . [¶][] . . . [t]he insurer cannot rely on answers given where the applicant-insured was misled by vague or ambiguous questions.' " (Duarte v. Pacific Specialty Ins. Co. (2017) 13 Cal.App.5th 45, 54 [220 Cal.Rptr.3d 170], original italics.)

- "[I]f the applicant for insurance had no present knowledge of the facts sought, or failed to appreciate the significance of information related to him, his incorrect or incomplete responses would not constitute grounds for rescission. Moreover, '[questions] concerning illness or disease do not relate to minor indispositions but are to be construed as referring to serious ailments which undermine the general health.' Finally, as the misrepresentation must be a material one, 'incorrect answer on an insurance application does not give rise to the defense of fraud where the true facts, if known, would not have made the contract less desirable to the insurer.' And the trier of fact is not required to believe the 'post mortem' testimony of an insurer's agents that insurance would have been refused had the true facts been disclosed." (Thompson, supra, 9 Cal.3d at p. 916, internal citations omitted.)
- "[T]he burden of proving misrepresentation [for purposes of rescission] rests upon the insurer." (Thompson, supra, 9 Cal.3d at p. 919.)
- "To prevail, the insurer must prove that the insured made a material 'false representation' in an insurance application. 'A representation is false when the facts fail to correspond with its assertions or stipulations.' The test for materiality of the misrepresentation or concealment is the same as it is for rescission, 'a misrepresentation or concealment is material if a truthful statement would have affected the insurer's underwriting decision.' " (Douglas, supra, 229 Cal.App.4th at p. 408, internal citations omitted.)
- "The materiality of a representation made in an application for a contract of insurance is determined by a subjective standard (i.e., its effect on the particular insurer to whom it was made) and rescission will be allowed even though the misrepresentation was the result of negligence or the product of innocence. On the other hand, in order to void a policy based upon the insured's violation of the standard fraud and concealment clause . . . , the false statement must have been knowingly and wilfully made with the intent (express or implied) of deceiving the insurer. The materiality of the statement will be determined by the objective standard of its effect upon a reasonable insurer." (Cummings v. Fire Insurance Exchange (1988) 202 Cal.App.3d 1407, 1415, fn.7 [249 Cal.Rptr. 568], original italics, internal citation omitted.)
- "The insurer is not required to show a causal relationship between the material misrepresentation or concealment of material fact and the nature of the claim." (Duarte, supra, 13 Cal.App.5th at p. 53.)
- "Cancellation and rescission are not synonymous. One is prospective, while the other is retroactive." (Fireman's Fund American Insurance Co. v. Escobedo (1978) 80 Cal.App.3d 610, 619 [145 Cal.Rptr. 785].)
- "[U]pon a rescission of a policy of insurance, based upon a material concealment or misrepresentation, all rights of the insured thereunder (except the right to recover any consideration paid in the purchase of the policy) are extinguished . . . ." (Imperial Casualty & Indemnity Co. v. Sogomonian (1988) 198 Cal.App.3d 169, 184 [243 Cal.Rptr. 639].)

- "The consequence of rescission is not only the termination of further liability, but also the restoration of the parties to their former positions by requiring each to return whatever consideration has been received. . . . [T]his would require the refund by [the insurer] of any premiums and the repayment by the defendants of any proceed advance which they may have received." (Imperial Casualty & Indemnity Co., supra, 198 Cal.App.3d at p. 184, internal citation omitted.)

Secondary Sources

Croskey et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch. 5-F, Rescission by Insurer, ¶¶ 5:143–5:146, 5:153–5:159.1, 5:160–5:287, 15:241–15:256 (The Rutter Group)

2 California Liability Insurance Practice: Claims & Litigation (Cont.Ed.Bar) Rescission and Reformation, §§ 21.2–21.12, 21.35–21.37

2 California Insurance Law & Practice, Ch. 8, The Insurance Contract, § 8.10[1] (Matthew Bender)

2 California Uninsured Motorist Law, Ch. 24, Bad Faith in Uninsured Motorist Law, § 24.40 (Matthew Bender)

26 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance, § 308.18 (Matthew Bender)

12 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 120, Insurance, §§ 120.250, 120.251, 120.260 (Matthew Bender)

2309. Termination of Insurance Policy for Fraudulent Claim

[*Name of insurer] claims that [name of insured] [is not entitled to recover under/is not entitled to benefits under] the insurance policy because [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] made a false claim. To establish this claim, [name of insurer] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of insured] made a claim for insurance benefits under a policy with [name of insurer];
2. That [name of insured] represented to [name of insurer] that [insert allegedly false representation];
3. That [name of insured]'s representation was not true;
4. That [name of insured] knew that the representation was not true;
5. That [name of insured] intended that [name of insurer] rely on this representation in [investigating/paying] [name of insured]'s claim for insurance benefits; and
6. That the representation that [insert allegedly false representation], if true, would affect a reasonable insurance company's [investigation of/decision to pay] a claim for insurance benefits.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

If the insured's misrepresentation or concealment in the insurance application is raised as an affirmative defense by the insurer, this instruction may be modified for use. The elements of the defense would be the same as stated above.

Sources and Authority

- Rescission of Contract. Civil Code section 1689(b)(1).
- Intentional Omission of Information Tending to Prove Falsity. Insurance Code section 338.
- False Representation: Time for Rescission. Insurance Code section 359.
- "The materiality of a representation made in an application for a contract of insurance is determined by a subjective standard (i.e., its effect on the particular insurer to whom it was made) and rescission will be allowed even though the misrepresentation was the result of negligence or the product of innocence. On the other hand, in order to void a policy based upon the insured's violation of the standard fraud and concealment clause . . ., the false statement must have been knowingly and wilfully made with the intent (express or implied) of deceiving the insurer. The materiality of the statement will be determined by the objective standard of its effect upon a reasonable insurer." (Cummings v. Fire Insurance Exchange (1988) 202 Cal.App.3d 1407, 1415, fn.7 [249 Cal.Rptr. 568], original italics, internal citation omitted.)

- "The consequence of rescission is not only the termination of further liability, but also the restoration of the parties to their former positions by requiring each to return whatever consideration has been received. . . . [T]his would require the refund by [the insurer] of any premiums and the repayment by the [insureds] of any proceed advance which they may have received." (Imperial Casualty & Indemnity Co. v. Sogomonian (1988) 198 Cal.App.3d 169, 184 [243 Cal.Rptr. 639], internal citation omitted.)

Secondary Sources

Croskey et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch. 5-F, Rescission by Insurer, ¶¶ 5:143–5:146, 5:153–5:159.1, 5:160, 5:249–5:260.5, 15:241–15:256 (The Rutter Group)

2 California Liability Insurance Practice: Claims & Litigation (Cont.Ed.Bar) Rescission and Reformation, §§ 21.2–21.4, 21.35–21.37

2 California Insurance Law & Practice, Ch. 8, The Insurance Contract, § 8.10[1] (Matthew Bender)

26 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender)

12 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 120, Insurance, §§ 120.250–120.251 (Matthew Bender)

2310–2319. Reserved for Future Use

2320. Affirmative Defense—Failure to Provide Timely Notice

[Name of defendant] claims that it does not have to pay the [judgment against/settlement by] [name of plaintiff] because it did not receive timely notice of the [lawsuit/[insert other]]. To succeed, [name of defendant] must prove both of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] did not give [name of defendant] notice [or that [name of defendant] did not receive notice by some other means] [within the time specified in the policy/within a reasonable time] of the [lawsuit/[insert other]]; and
2. That [name of defendant] was prejudiced by [name of plaintiff]'s failure to give timely notice.

To establish prejudice, [name of defendant] must show a substantial likelihood that, with timely notice, it would have [taken steps that would have substantially reduced or eliminated [name of plaintiff]'s liability] [or] [settled for a substantially smaller amount].

New September 2003

Directions for Use

The instructions in this series assume the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

This instruction is intended for use by an insurer as a defense to a breach of contract action based on a third party liability policy. The defense does not apply to "claims made" policies (see Pacific Employers Insurance Co. v. Superior Court (1990) 221 Cal.App.3d 1348, 1357–1360 [270 Cal.Rptr. 779]). This instruction also may be modified for use as a defense to a judgment creditor's action to recover on a liability policy.

Sources and Authority

- "The right of an injured party to sue an insurer on the policy after obtaining judgment against the insured is established by statute. An insurer may assert defenses based upon a breach by the insured of a condition of the policy such as a cooperation clause, but the breach cannot be a valid defense unless the insurer was substantially prejudiced thereby. Similarly, it has been held that prejudice must be shown with respect to breach of a notice clause." (Campbell v. Allstate Insurance Co. (1963) 60 Cal.2d 303, 305–306 [32 Cal.Rptr. 827, 384 P.2d 155], internal citations omitted.)
- "The burden of establishing prejudice is on the insurance company, and prejudice is not presumed by delay alone. To establish prejudice, the ' "insurer must show it lost something that would have changed the handling of the underlying claim." ' " (Lat v. Farmers New World Life Ins. Co. (2018) 29 Cal.App.5th 191, 196–197 [239 Cal.Rptr.3d 796], internal citations omitted.)

- "[P]rejudice is not shown simply by displaying end results; the probability that such result could or would have been avoided absent the claimed default or error must also be explored." (Clemmer v. Hartford Insurance Co. (1978) 22 Cal.3d 865, 883, fn. 12 [151 Cal.Rptr. 285, 587 P.2d 1098].)
- "Prejudice is a question of fact on which the insurer has the burden of proof. The insured's delay does not itself satisfy the burden of proof. The insurer establishes actual and substantial prejudice by proving more than delayed or late notice. It must show ' "a substantial likelihood that, with timely notice, and notwithstanding a denial of coverage or reservation of rights, it would have settled the claim for less or taken steps that would have reduced or eliminated the insured's liability." ' " (Pitzer College v. Indian Harbor Ins. Co. (2019) 8 Cal.5th 93, 105 [251 Cal.Rptr.3d 701, 447 P.3d 669].)
- "If the insurer asserts that the underlying claim is not a covered occurrence or is excluded from basic coverage, then earlier notice would only result in earlier denial of coverage. To establish actual prejudice, the insurer must show a substantial likelihood that, with timely notice, and notwithstanding a denial of coverage or reservation of rights, it would have settled the claim for less or taken steps that would have reduced or eliminated the insured's liability." (Safeco Ins. Co. of America v. Parks (2009) 170 Cal.App.4th 992, 1004 [88 Cal.Rptr.3d 730].)
- "Under the notice prejudice rule, an insurance company may not deny an insured's claim under an occurrence policy based on lack of timely notice or proof of claim unless it can show actual prejudice from the delay. The rule is based on the rationale that ' "[t]he primary and essential part of the contract [is] insurance coverage, not the procedure for determining liability . . ." [citations], and that "the notice requirement serves to protect insurers from prejudice, . . . not . . . to shield them from their contractual obligations" through "a technical escape-hatch".' " (Lat, supra, 29 Cal.App.5th at p. 196, internal citations omitted.)
- "[The notice-prejudice rule] does not apply to every time limit on any insurance policy. [¶] Where the policy provides that special coverage for a particular type of claim is conditioned on express compliance with a reporting requirement, the time limit is enforceable without proof of prejudice. Such reporting time limits often are found in provisions for expanded liability coverage that the insurer usually does not cover. The insurer makes an exception and extends special coverage conditioned on compliance with a reporting requirement and other conditions. The reporting requirement becomes 'the written notice necessary to trigger the expanded coverage afforded' by the special policy provision." (Venoco, Inc. v. Gulf Underwriters Ins. Co. (2009) 175 Cal.App.4th 750, 760 [96 Cal.Rptr.3d 409], internal citations omitted.)
- "With respect to notice provisions, one Court of Appeal has explained: '[A]n

"occurrence" policy provides coverage for any acts or omissions that arise during the policy period even though the claim is made after the policy has expired.' . . . [¶] . . . [¶] Occurrence policies were developed to provide coverage for damage caused by collision, fire, war, and other identifiable events. . . . Because the occurrence of these events was relatively easy to ascertain, the insurer was able to 'conduct a prompt investigation of the incident . . . .' . . . Notice provisions contained in such occurrence policies were 'included to aid the insurer in investigating, settling, and defending claims[.]' . . . If an insured breaches a notice provision, resulting in substantial prejudice to the defense, the insurer is relieved of liability." (Belz v. Clarendon America Ins. Co. (2007) 158 Cal.App.4th 615, 626 [69 Cal.Rptr.3d 864], internal citation omitted.)

- "The 'general rule' is that an insurer is not bound by a judgment unless it had notice of the pendency of the action. . . . However, if an insurer denies coverage to the insured, the insured's contractual obligation to notify the insurer ceases." (Samson v. Transamerica Insurance Co. (1981) 30 Cal.3d 220, 238 [178 Cal.Rptr. 343, 636 P.2d 32], internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

Croskey et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch.15-I, Trial ¶¶ 15:917–15:920 (The Rutter Group)

1 California Liability Insurance Practice: Claims & Litigation (Cont.Ed.Bar) Identifying Sources of Coverage, §§ 8.24–8.26

4 California Insurance Law & Practice, Ch. 41, Liability Insurance in General, § 41.65[1]–[9] (Matthew Bender)

26 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance, § 308.500 (Matthew Bender)

2321. Affirmative Defense—Insured's Breach of Duty to Cooperate in Defense

---

[*Name of defendant] claims that it does not have to pay the [judgment against/settlement by] [name of plaintiff] because [name of plaintiff] failed to cooperate in [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] defense. To succeed, [name of defendant] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] failed to cooperate in the defense of the lawsuit against [him/her/nonbinary pronoun/it];
2. That [name of defendant] used reasonable efforts to obtain [name of plaintiff]'s cooperation; and
3. That [name of defendant] was prejudiced by [name of plaintiff]'s failure to cooperate in [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] defense.

To establish prejudice, [*name of defendant] must show a substantial likelihood that, if [name of plaintiff] had cooperated, [name of defendant] would have [taken steps that would have substantially reduced or eliminated [name of plaintiff]'s liability] [or] [settled for a substantially smaller amount].

New September 2003

Directions for Use

The instructions in this series assume the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

This instruction is intended for use by an insurer as a defense to a breach of contract action based on a third party liability policy. This instruction also may be modified for use as a defense to a judgment creditor's action to recover on a liability policy.

Depending on the facts of the case, the second element of this instruction may not always be necessary.

Sources and Authority

- "The right of an injured party to sue an insurer on the policy after obtaining judgment against the insured is established by statute. An insurer may assert defenses based upon a breach by the insured of a condition of the policy such as a cooperation clause, but the breach cannot be a valid defense unless the insurer was substantially prejudiced thereby. . . . [¶] The burden of proving that a breach of a cooperation clause resulted in prejudice is on the insurer." (Campbell v. Allstate Insurance Co. (1963) 60 Cal.2d 303, 305–306 [32 Cal.Rptr. 827, 384 P.2d 155], internal citations omitted.)

- "[W]e apprehend that Campbell stands for these propositions: (1) that breach by an insured of a cooperation . . . clause may not be asserted by an insurer unless the insurer was substantially prejudiced thereby; (2) that prejudice is not presumed as a matter of law from such breach; (3) that the burden of proving prejudicial breach is on the insurer; and (4) that, although the issue of prejudice is ordinarily one of fact, it may be established as a matter of law by the facts proved." (Northwestern Title Security Co. v. Flack (1970) 6 Cal.App.3d 134, 141 [85 Cal.Rptr. 693].)
- " '[C]ooperation clauses serve an important purpose. "[A] condition of a policy requiring the cooperation and assistance of the assured in opposing a claim or an action lodged against him by an injured person is material to the risk and of the utmost importance in a practical sense. Without such cooperation and assistance the insurer is severely handicapped and may in some instances be absolutely precluded from advancing any defense." . . . "[S]uch provisions 'enable the [insurer] to possess itself of all knowledge, and all information as to other sources and means of knowledge, in regard to facts, material to [its] rights, to enable [it] to decide upon [its] obligations, and to protect [itself] against false claims.' " . . . Where an insured violates a cooperation clause, the insurer's performance is excused if its ability to provide a defense has been substantially prejudiced.' " (Belz v. Clarendon America Ins. Co. (2007) 158 Cal.App.4th 615, 626 [69 Cal.Rptr.3d 864].)
- "[A]n insurer, in order to establish it was prejudiced by the failure of the insured to cooperate in his defense, must establish at the very least that if the cooperation clause had not been breached there was a substantial likelihood the trier of fact would have found in the insured's favor." (Billington v. Interinsurance Exchange of Southern California (1969) 71 Cal.2d 728, 737 [79 Cal.Rptr. 326, 456 P.2d 982].)
- "[I]f the trial court finds . . . that the insurer failed to diligently seek its insured's presence a finding that he breached the cooperation clause would not be justified." (Billington, supra, 71 Cal.2d at p. 744.)
- "[P]rejudice is not shown simply by displaying end results; the probability that such results could or would have been avoided absent the claimed default or error must also be explored." (Clemmer v. Hartford Insurance Co. (1978) 22 Cal.3d 865, 883, fn. 12 [151 Cal.Rptr. 285, 587 P.2d 1098].)

Secondary Sources

Croskey et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch.15-I, Trial, ¶¶ 15:917–15:919 (The Rutter Group)

1 California Liability Insurance Practice: Claims & Litigation (Cont.Ed.Bar) Insured's Role in Defense, §§ 11.2–11.26

4 California Insurance Law & Practice, Ch. 41, Liability Insurance in General, § 41.64[1]–[11] (Matthew Bender)

2322. Affirmative Defense—Insured's Voluntary Payment

[*Name of defendant] claims that it does not have to pay [specify, e.g., the amount of the settlement] because [name of plaintiff] made a voluntary payment. To succeed on this defense, [name of defendant] must prove the following:

1. [Select either or both of the following:]

[That [*name of plaintiff] made a payment to [name of third party claimant] in [partial/full] settlement of [name of third party claimant]'s claim against [name of plaintiff]; [or]]

[That [*name of plaintiff] [made a payment/ [or] assumed an obligation/ [or] incurred an expense] to [name] with regard to [name of third party claimant]'s claim against [name of plaintiff]];

AND

2. That [*name of defendant] did not give its consent or approval for the [payment/ [or] obligation/ [or] expense].

New April 2007

Directions for Use

The instructions in this series assume that the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

This instruction is intended for use by an insurer as a defense to a breach of contract action based on a third party liability policy. This instruction also may be modified for use as a defense to a judgment creditor's action to recover on a liability policy. This defense is not available if the insurer refused to defend before the voluntary payment was made. (See 21st Century Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (Tapia) (2015) 240 Cal.App.4th 322, 328 [192 Cal.Rptr.3d 530].)

A voluntary-payments clause in an insurance policy typically provides that the insured may not voluntarily make a payment, assume an obligation, or incur an expense without the insurer's consent. (See, e.g., Truck Ins. Exchange v. Unigard Ins. Co. (2000) 79 Cal.App.4th 966, 976 [94 Cal.Rptr.2d 516].) In element 1, select the appropriate options depending on the acts alleged. Modify, as necessary, depending on the actual language of the policy. Use the first option if the insured has made a payment in settlement of the claim. Use the second option if the insured has made a payment, assumed an obligation, or incurred an expense for other reasons, such as to an attorney for legal services, or to a creditor of the claimant, such as a provider of medical or repair services.

Sources and Authority

- "The general validity of no-voluntary-payment provisions in liability insurance policies is well established. . . . [S]uch clauses are common 'to prevent collusion as well as to invest the insurer with the complete control and direction of the defense or compromise of suits or claims.' " (Insua v. Scottsdale Ins. Co. (2002) 104 Cal.App.4th 737, 742 [129 Cal.Rptr.2d 138], internal citations omitted.)
- "California law enforces . . . no-voluntary-payments provisions in the absence of economic necessity, insurer breach, or other extraordinary circumstances. They are designed to ensure that responsible insurers that promptly accept a defense tendered by their insureds thereby gain control over the defense and settlement of the claim. That means insureds cannot unilaterally settle a claim before the establishment of the claim against them and the insurer's refusal to defend in a lawsuit to establish liability . . . . [T]he decision to pay any remediation costs outside the civil action context raises a 'judgment call left solely to the insurer.' In short, the provision protects against coverage by fait accompli." (Low v. Golden Eagle Ins. Co. (2003) 110 Cal.App.4th 1532, 1544 [2 Cal.Rptr.3d 761], internal citations omitted.)
- " 'Typically, a breach of that provision occurs, if at all, before the insured has tendered the defense to the insurer.' . . . [A voluntary-payments] provision is [also] enforceable posttender until the insurer wrongfully denies tender. '[I]t is only when the insured has requested and been denied a defense by the insurer that the insured may ignore the policy's provisions forbidding the incurring of defense costs without the insurer's prior consent and under the compulsion of that refusal undertake his own defense at the insurer's expense.' " (Low, supra, 110 Cal.App.4th at pp. 1546–1547, original italics, internal citations omitted.)
- " '[T]he existence or absence of prejudice to [the insurer] is simply irrelevant to [its] duty to indemnify costs incurred before notice. The policy plainly provides that notice is a condition precedent to the insured's right to be indemnified; a fortiori the right to be indemnified cannot relate back to payments made or obligations incurred before notice.' . . . The prejudice requirement . . . applies only to the insurer's attempt to assert lack of notice as a policy defense against payment even of losses and costs incurred after belated notice." (Jamestown Builders, Inc. v. General Star Indemnity Co. (1999) 77 Cal.App.4th 341, 350 [91 Cal.Rptr.2d 514], original italics, internal citations omitted.)
- "[W]e hold that California's notice-prejudice rule is applicable to a consent provision in a first party policy where coverage does not depend on the existence of a third party claim or potential claim." (Pitzer College v. Indian Harbor Ins. Co. (2019) 8 Cal.5th 93, 109 [251 Cal.Rptr.3d 701, 447 P.3d 669].)
- " 'There may be exceptions to the prohibition on voluntary payments, as where the insured is unaware of the identity of the insurer, the payment is necessary for reasons beyond the insured's control, or the insured faces a situation requiring an immediate response to protect its legal interests.' In a circumstance of that nature, the insured's payment is considered involuntary." (Belz v. Clarendon America Ins. Co. (2007) 158 Cal.App.4th 615, 628 [69 Cal.Rptr.3d 864], original italics, internal citation omitted.)

- "If an insurer refuses to defend, the insured is free to enter into a non-collusive settlement and then maintain or assign an action against the insurer for breach of the duty to defend. In the subsequent action the amount of the settlement will be presumptive evidence of the amount of the insured's liability." (21st Century Ins. Co., supra, 240 Cal.App.4th at p. 328, original italics.)

Secondary Sources

2 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Insurance, §§ 459, 464

Croskey et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch. 7A-L, Conditions ¶¶ 7:439.5–7:439.10 (The Rutter Group)

California Liability Insurance Practice: Claims and Litigation (Cont.Ed.Bar), §§ 2.7, 3.27, 8.32, 11.14, 23.38

25 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution, § 300.73[6] (Matthew Bender)

26 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance, §§ 308.500, 308.502 (Matthew Bender)

2323–2329. Reserved for Future Use

2330. Implied Obligation of Good Faith and Fair Dealing Explained

In every insurance policy there is an implied obligation of good faith and fair dealing that neither the insurance company nor the insured will do anything to injure the right of the other party to receive the benefits of the agreement.

To fulfill its implied obligation of good faith and fair dealing, an insurance company must give at least as much consideration to the interests of the insured as it gives to its own interests.

To breach the implied obligation of good faith and fair dealing, an insurance company must unreasonably act or fail to act in a manner that deprives the insured of the benefits of the policy. To act unreasonably is not a mere failure to exercise reasonable care. It means that the insurer must act or fail to act without proper cause. However, it is not necessary for the insurer to intend to deprive the insured of the benefits of the policy.

New September 2003; Revised December 2007, December 2015

Directions for Use

This instruction may be used to introduce a "bad-faith" claim arising from an alleged breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing.

Sources and Authority

- "There is an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in every contract that neither party will do anything which will injure the right of the other to receive the benefits of the agreement." (Comunale v. Traders & General Ins. Co. (1958) 50 Cal.2d 654, 658 [328 P.2d 198].)
- "It is important to recognize the reason for the possibility of tort, and perhaps even punitive damages on top of regular tort damages, for an insurance company's unreasonable breach of an insurance contract. Insurance contracts are unique in that, if the insurance company breaches them, the policyholder suffers a loss (often a catastrophic loss) that cannot, by definition, be compensated by obtaining another contract. [Citations.] [¶] Thus, without the possibility of tort damages hanging over its head when it makes a claims decision, an insurance company may choose not to deal in good faith when a policyholder makes a claim. The insurance company could arbitrarily deny a claim, thus gambling with the policyholder's 'benefits of the agreement.' [Citation.] If the insurance company gambled wrong, it would be no worse off than it would have been if it had honored the claim in the first place. In effect, if the law confined the exposure of the insurance company under such circumstances to only contract damages, it would be pardoned and still retain the fruits of its offense." (Pulte

Home Corp. v. American Safety Indemnity Co. (2017) 14 Cal.App.5th 1086, 1125 [223 Cal.Rptr.3d 47].)

- "For the insurer to fulfill its obligation not to impair the right of the insured to receive the benefits of the agreement, it again must give at least as much consideration to the latter's interests as it does to its own." (Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Insurance Co. (1979) 24 Cal.3d 809, 818–819 [169 Cal.Rptr. 691, 620 P.2d 141].)
- "[T]o establish the insurer's 'bad faith' liability, the insured must show that the insurer has (1) withheld benefits due under the policy, and (2) that such withholding was 'unreasonable' or 'without proper cause.' The actionable withholding of benefits may consist of the denial of benefits due; paying less than due; and/or unreasonably delaying payments due." (Major v. Western Home Ins. Co. (2009) 169 Cal.App.4th 1197, 1209 [87 Cal.Rptr.3d 556], internal citations omitted.)
- " '[T]he covenant of good faith can be breached for objectively unreasonable conduct, regardless of the actor's motive.' . . . [A]n insured plaintiff need only show, for example, that the insurer unreasonably refused to pay benefits or failed to accept a reasonable settlement offer; there is no requirement to establish subjective bad faith." (Bosetti v. United States Life Ins. Co. in the City of New York (2009) 175 Cal.App.4th 1208, 1236 [96 Cal.Rptr.3d 744], original italics, internal citations omitted.)
- "To establish bad faith, a policy holder must demonstrate misconduct by the insurer more egregious than an incorrect denial of policy benefits." (Case v. State Farm Mutual Automobile Ins. Co., Inc. (2018) 30 Cal.App.5th 397, 402 [241 Cal.Rptr.3d 458].)
- "Bad faith may involve negligence, or negligence may be indicative of bad faith, but negligence alone is insufficient to render the insurer liable." (Brown v. Guarantee Ins. Co. (1957) 155 Cal.App.2d 679, 689 [319 P.2d 69].)
- "Thus, a breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing involves something more than a breach of the contract or mistaken judgment. There must be proof the insurer failed or refused to discharge its contractual duties not because of an honest mistake, bad judgment, or negligence, 'but rather by a conscious and deliberate act, which unfairly frustrates the agreed common purposes and disappoints the reasonable expectations of the other party thereby depriving that party of the benefits of the agreement.' " (Century Surety Co. v. Polisso (2006) 139 Cal.App.4th 922, 949 [43 Cal.Rptr.3d 468], internal citations omitted.)
- "[I]f the insurer denies benefits unreasonably (i.e., without any reasonable basis for such denial), it may be exposed to the full array of tort remedies, including possible punitive damages." (Jordan v. Allstate Ins. Co. (2007) 148 Cal.App.4th 1062, 1073 [56 Cal.Rptr.3d 312].)
- "Subterfuges and evasions violate the obligation of good faith in performance even though the actor believes his conduct to be justified. But the obligation goes further: bad faith may be overt or may consist of inaction, and fair dealing may require more than honesty. A complete catalogue of types of bad faith is impossible, but the following types are among those which have been recognized in judicial decisions: evasion of the spirit of the bargain, lack of diligence and slacking off, willful rendering of imperfect performance, abuse of a power to specify terms, and interference with or failure to cooperate in the other party's performance." (R. J. Kuhl Corp. v. Sullivan (1993) 13 Cal.App.4th 1589, 1602 [17 Cal.Rptr.2d 425].)

- "[A]n insurer is not required to pay every claim presented to it. Besides the duty to deal fairly with the insured, the insurer also has a duty to its other policyholders and to the stockholders (if it is such a company) not to dissipate its reserves through the payment of meritless claims. Such a practice inevitably would prejudice the insurance seeking public because of the necessity to increase rates, and would finally drive the insurer out of business." (Austero v. National Cas. Co. (1978) 84 Cal.App.3d 1, 30 [148 Cal.Rptr. 653], overruled on other grounds in Egan, supra, 24 Cal.3d at p. 824 fn. 7.)
- "Unique obligations are imposed upon true fiduciaries which are not found in the insurance relationship. For example, a true fiduciary must first consider and always act in the best interests of its trust and not allow self-interest to overpower its duty to act in the trust's best interests. An insurer, however, may give its own interests consideration equal to that it gives the interests of its insured; it is not required to disregard the interests of its shareholders and other policyholders when evaluating claims; and it is not required to pay noncovered claims, even though payment would be in the best interests of its insured." (Love v. Fire Ins. Exchange (1990) 221 Cal.App.3d 1136, 1148–1149 [271 Cal.Rptr. 246], internal citations omitted.)
- "[I]n California, an insurer has the same duty to act in good faith in the uninsured motorist context as it does in any other insurance context." (Maslo v. Ameriprise Auto & Home Ins. (2014) 227 Cal.App.4th 626, 636 [173 Cal.Rptr.3d 854].)
- " '[P]erformance of an act specifically authorized by the policy cannot, as a matter of law, constitute bad faith.' [¶] [I]n the insurance context, . . . ' "courts are not at liberty to imply a covenant directly at odds with a contract's express grant of discretionary power." ' The possible exception would be ' "those relatively rare instances when reading the provision literally would, contrary to the parties' clear intention, result in an unenforceable, illusory agreement." ' " (Baldwin v. AAA Northern California, Nevada & Utah Ins. Exchange (2016) 1 Cal.App.5th 545, 557–558 [204 Cal.Rptr.3d 433], internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

2 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Insurance, § 340

Croskey, et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch. 11-B, Theories For Extracontractual Liability—In General, ¶¶ 11:7–11:8.1 (The Rutter Group)

Croskey, et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch. 12A-A, Definition of Terms, ¶¶ 12:1–12:10 (The Rutter Group)

Croskey, et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch. 12A-B, Capsule History Of Insurance "Bad Faith" Cases, ¶¶ 12:13–12:23 (The Rutter Group)

Croskey, et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch. 12A-C, Theory Of Recovery—Breach Of Implied Covenant Of Good Faith And Fair Dealing ("Bad Faith"), ¶¶ 12:27–12:54 (The Rutter Group)

Croskey, et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch. 12A-D, Who May Sue For Tortious Breach Of Implied Covenant (Proper Plaintiffs), ¶¶ 12:56–12:90.17 (The Rutter Group)

Croskey, et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch. 12A-E, Persons Who May Be Sued For Tortious Breach Of Implied Covenant (Proper Defendants), ¶¶ 12:92–12:118 (The Rutter Group)

Croskey, et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch. 12A-F, Compare—Breach Of Implied Covenant By Insured, ¶¶ 12:119–12:121 (The Rutter Group)

1 California Liability Insurance Practice: Claims and Litigation (Cont.Ed.Bar) Overview of Rights and Obligations of Policy, §§ 2.9–2.15

2 California Insurance Law & Practice, Ch. 13, Claims Handling and the Duty of Good Faith, § 13.01 (Matthew Bender)

1 California Uninsured Motorist Law, Ch. 13, Rights, Duties, and Obligations of the Parties, § 13.23 (Matthew Bender)

2 California Uninsured Motorist Law, Ch. 24, Bad Faith in Uninsured Motorist Law, §§ 24.10, 24.20–24.21, 24.40 (Matthew Bender)

26 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance, § 308.24[1] (Matthew Bender)

11 California Legal Forms, Ch. 26A, Title Insurance, § 26A.17[9] (Matthew Bender)

2331. Breach of the Implied Obligation of Good Faith and Fair Dealing—Failure or Delay in Payment (First Party)—Essential Factual Elements

---

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] breached the obligation of good faith and fair dealing by [failing to pay/delaying payment of] benefits due under the insurance policy. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] suffered a loss covered under an insurance policy with [name of defendant];
2. That [name of defendant] was notified of the loss;
3. That [name of defendant], unreasonably [failed to pay/delayed payment of] policy benefits;
4. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
5. That [name of defendant]'s [failure to pay/delay in payment of] policy benefits was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

To act or fail to act "unreasonably" means that the insurer had no proper cause for its conduct. In determining whether [*name of defendant] acted unreasonably, you should consider only the information that [name of defendant] knew or reasonably should have known at the time when it [failed to pay/delayed payment of] policy benefits.

New September 2003; Revised December 2007, April 2008, December 2009, December 2015

Directions for Use

The instructions in this series assume that the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

If there is a genuine issue as to the insurer's liability under the policy for the claim asserted by the insured, there can be no bad-faith liability imposed on the insurer for advancing its side of that dispute. This is known as the "genuine dispute" doctrine. The genuine-dispute doctrine is subsumed within the test of reasonableness or proper cause (element 3). No specific instruction on the doctrine need be given. (See McCoy v. Progressive West Ins. Co. (2009) 171 Cal.App.4th 785, 792–794 [90 Cal.Rptr.3d 74].)

For instructions regarding general breach of contract issues, refer to the Contracts series (CACI No. 300 et seq.).

Sources and Authority

- If an insurer "fails to deal fairly and in good faith with its insured by refusing, without proper cause, to compensate its insured for a loss covered by the policy, such conduct may give rise to a cause of action in tort for breach of an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. . . . [¶] . . . [W]hen the insurer unreasonably and in bad faith withholds payment of the claim of its insured, it is subject to liability in tort." (Gruenberg v. Aetna Insurance Co. (1973) 9 Cal.3d 566, 574–575 [108 Cal.Rptr. 480, 510 P.2d 1032], original italics.)
- "An insurer's obligations under the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing with respect to first party coverage include a duty not to unreasonably withhold benefits due under the policy. An insurer that unreasonably delays, or fails to pay, benefits due under the policy may be held liable in tort for breach of the implied covenant. The withholding of benefits due under the policy may constitute a breach of contract even if the conduct was reasonable, but liability in tort arises only if the conduct was unreasonable, that is, without proper cause. In a first party case, as we have here, the withholding of benefits due under the policy is not unreasonable if there was a genuine dispute between the insurer and the insured as to coverage or the amount of payment due." (Rappaport-Scott v. Interinsurance Exch. of the Auto. Club (2007) 146 Cal.App.4th 831, 837 [53 Cal.Rptr.3d 245], internal citations omitted.)
- "[T]here are at least two separate requirements to establish breach of the implied covenant: (1) benefits due under the policy must have been withheld; and (2) the reason for withholding benefits must have been unreasonable or without proper cause." (Love v. Fire Insurance Exchange (1990) 221 Cal.App.3d 1136, 1151 [271 Cal.Rptr. 246], internal citations omitted.)
- "The standard of good faith and fairness examines the reasonableness of the insurer's conduct, and mere errors by an insurer in discharging its obligations to its insured ' "does not necessarily make the insurer liable in tort for violating the covenant of good faith and fair dealing; to be liable in tort, the insurer's conduct must also have been unreasonable. [Citations.]" ' " (Graciano v. Mercury General Corp. (2014) 231 Cal.App.4th 414, 425 [179 Cal.Rptr.3d 717], original italics.)
- " 'Although an insurer's bad faith is ordinarily a question of fact to be determined by a jury by considering the evidence of motive, intent and state of mind, "[t]he question becomes one of law . . . when, because there are no conflicting inferences, reasonable minds could not differ." ' " (Pulte Home Corp. v. American Safety Indemnity Co. (2017) 14 Cal.App.5th 1086, 1119 [223 Cal.Rptr.3d 47].)
- "Generally, the reasonableness of an insurer's conduct 'must be evaluated in light of the totality of the circumstances surrounding its actions.' " (Paslay v. State Farm General Ins. Co. (2016) 248 Cal.App.4th 639, 654 [203 Cal.Rptr.3d 785].)
- "[T]he adequacy of the insurer's claims handling is properly assessed in light of conduct by the insured delaying resolution of a claim." (Case v. State Farm Mutual Automobile Ins. Co., Inc. (2018) 30 Cal.App.5th 397, 413 [241 Cal.Rptr.3d 458].)

- " '[A]n insurer denying or delaying the payment of policy benefits due to the existence of a genuine dispute with its insured as to the existence of coverage liability or the amount of the insured's coverage claim is not liable in bad faith[,] even though it might be liable for breach of contract.' That is because 'whe[n] there is a genuine issue as to the insurer's liability under the policy for the claim asserted by the insured, there can be no bad faith liability imposed on the insurer for advancing its side of that dispute.' " (Case, supra, 30 Cal.App.5th at p. 402, internal citation omitted.)
- "The genuine dispute rule does not relieve an insurer from its obligation to thoroughly and fairly investigate, process and evaluate the insured's claim. A genuine dispute exists only where the insurer's position is maintained in good faith and on reasonable grounds. . . . 'The genuine issue rule in the context of bad faith claims allows a [trial] court to grant summary judgment when it is undisputed or indisputable that the basis for the insurer's denial of benefits was reasonable—for example, where even under the plaintiff's version of the facts there is a genuine issue as to the insurer's liability under California law. . . . On the other hand, an insurer is not entitled to judgment as a matter of law where, viewing the facts in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, a jury could conclude that the insurer acted unreasonably.' " (Wilson v. 21st Century Ins. Co. (2007) 42 Cal.4th 713, 724 [68 Cal.Rptr.3d 746, 171 P.3d 1082], original italics, internal citations omitted.)
- "[T]he reasonableness of the insurer's decisions and actions must be evaluated as of the time that they were made; the evaluation cannot fairly be made in the light of subsequent events that may provide evidence of the insurer's errors. [Citation.]" (Zubillaga v. Allstate Indemnity Co. (2017) 12 Cal.App.5th 1017, 1028 [219 Cal.Rptr.3d 620].)
- "[I]f the insurer denies benefits unreasonably (i.e., without any reasonable basis for such denial), it may be exposed to the full array of tort remedies, including possible punitive damages." (Jordan v. Allstate Ins. Co. (2007) 148 Cal.App.4th 1062, 1073 [56 Cal.Rptr.3d 312].)
- "While many, if not most, of the cases finding a genuine dispute over an insurer's coverage liability have involved legal rather than factual disputes, we see no reason why the genuine dispute doctrine should be limited to legal issues. That does not mean, however, that the genuine dispute doctrine may properly be applied in every case involving purely a factual dispute between an insurer and its insured. This is an issue which should be decided on a case-by-case basis." (Chateau Chamberay Homeowners Assn., supra, 90 Cal.App.4th at p. 348, original italics, footnote and internal citations omitted.)
- "[I]f the conduct of [the insurer] in defending this case was objectively reasonable, its subjective intent is irrelevant." (Bosetti v. United States Life Ins.

Co. in the City of New York (2009) 175 Cal.App.4th 1208, 1236 [96 Cal.Rptr.3d 744]; cf. Carma Developers (Cal.), Inc. v. Marathon Development California, Inc. (1992) 2 Cal.4th 342, 372 [6 Cal.Rptr.2d 467, 826 P.2d 710] ["[I]t has been suggested the covenant has both a subjective and objective aspect—subjective good faith and objective fair dealing. A party violates the covenant if it subjectively lacks belief in the validity of its act or if its conduct is objectively unreasonable."].)

- "[W]hile an insurer's subjective bad intentions are not a sufficient basis on which to establish a bad faith cause of action, an insurer's subjective mental state may nonetheless be a circumstance to be considered in the evaluation of the objective reasonableness of the insurer's actions." (Bosetti, supra, 175 Cal.App.4th at p. 1239, original italics.)
- "[A]n insured cannot maintain a claim for tortious breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing absent a covered loss. If the insurer's investigation—adequate or not—results in a correct conclusion of no coverage, no tort liability arises for breach of the implied convenant." (Benavides v. State Farm General Ins. Co. (2006) 136 Cal.App.4th 1241, 1250 [39 Cal.Rptr.3d 650], internal citations omitted; cf. Brehm v. 21st Century Ins. Co. (2008) 166 Cal.App.4th 1225, 1236 [83 Cal.Rptr.3d 410] ["[B]reach of a specific provision of the contract is not a necessary prerequisite to a claim for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. . . . [E]ven an insurer that pays the full limits of its policy may be liable for breach of the implied covenant, if improper claims handling causes detriment to the insured"].)
- " '[D]enial of a claim on a basis unfounded in the facts known to the insurer, or contradicted by those facts, may be deemed unreasonable. "A trier of fact may find that an insurer acted unreasonably if the insurer ignores evidence available to it which supports the claim. The insurer may not just focus on those facts which justify denial of the claim." ' " (Maslo v. Ameriprise Auto & Home Ins. (2014) 227 Cal.App.4th 626, 634 [173 Cal.Rptr.3d 854].)
- "We conclude . . . that the duty of good faith and fair dealing on the part of defendant insurance companies is an absolute one. . . . [T]he nonperformance by one party of its contractual duties cannot excuse a breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing by the other party while the contract between them is in effect and not rescinded." (Gruenberg, supra, 9 Cal.3d at p. 578.)
- "Thus, an insurer may be liable for bad faith in failing to attempt to effectuate a prompt and fair settlement (1) where it unreasonably demands arbitration, or (2) where it commits other wrongful conduct, such as failing to investigate a claim. An insurer's statutory duty to attempt to effectuate a prompt and fair settlement is not abrogated simply because the insured's damages do not plainly exceed the policy limits. Nor is the insurer's duty to investigate a claim excused by the arbitrator's finding that the amount of damages was lower than the insured's initial demand. Even where the amount of damages is lower than the policy limits, an insurer may act unreasonably by failing to pay damages that are certain and demanding arbitration on those damages." (Maslo, supra, 227

Cal.App.4th at pp. 638–639 [uninsured motorist coverage case].)

- "[T]he insurer's duty to process claims fairly and in good faith [is] a nondelegable duty." (Hughes v. Blue Cross of Northern California (1989) 215 Cal.App.3d 832, 848 [263 Cal.Rptr. 850].)
- "[I]n [a bad-faith action] 'damages for emotional distress are compensable as incidental damages flowing from the initial breach, not as a separate cause of action.' Such claims of emotional distress must be incidental to 'a substantial invasion of property interests.' " (Major v. Western Home Ins. Co. (2009) 169 Cal.App.4th 1197, 1214 [87 Cal.Rptr.3d 556], original italics, internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

2 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Insurance, §§ 341–343

Croskey et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation. Ch. 12C-C, Bad Faith—Requirements for First Party Bad Faith Action, ¶¶ 12:822–12:1016 (The Rutter Group)

2 California Liability Insurance Practice: Claims & Litigation (Cont.Ed.Bar) General Principles of Contract and Bad Faith Actions, §§ 24.25–24.45A

2 California Insurance Law & Practice, Ch. 13, Claims Handling and the Duty of Good Faith, §§ 13.03[2][a]–[c], 13.06 (Matthew Bender)

1 California Uninsured Motorist Law, Ch. 13, Rights, Duties, and Obligations of the Parties, § 13.23 (Matthew Bender)

2 California Uninsured Motorist Law, Ch. 24, Bad Faith in Uninsured Motorist Law, §§ 24.10, 24.20–24.21, 24.40 (Matthew Bender)

3 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 40, Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts, § 40.140 (Matthew Bender)

6 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 82, Claims and Disputes Under Insurance Policies, §§ 82.21, 82.50 (Matthew Bender)

26 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance, § 308.24 (Matthew Bender)

11 California Legal Forms, Ch. 26A, Title Insurance, § 26A.17 (Matthew Bender)

12 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 120, Insurance, § 120.208 (Matthew Bender)

2332. Bad Faith (First Party)—Failure to Properly Investigate Claim—Essential Factual Elements

---

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] acted unreasonably, that is, without proper cause, by failing to conduct a proper investigation of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] claim. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] suffered a loss covered under an insurance policy issued by [name of defendant];
2. That [name of plaintiff] properly presented a claim to [name of defendant] to be compensated for the loss;
3. That [name of defendant], failed to conduct a full, fair, prompt, and thorough investigation of all of the bases of [name of plaintiff]'s claim;
4. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
5. That [name of defendant]'s failure to properly investigate the claim was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

When investigating [name of plaintiff]'s claim, [name of defendant] had a duty to diligently search for and consider evidence that supported coverage of the claimed loss.

New September 2003; Revised December 2005, December 2007, April 2008, December 2015, June 2016

Directions for Use

This instruction sets forth a claim for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing based on the insurer's failure or refusal to conduct a proper investigation of the plaintiff's claim. The claim alleges that the insurer acted unreasonably, that is, without proper cause, by failing to properly investigate the claim. (See Rappaport-Scott v. Interinsurance Exch. of the Auto. Club (2007) 146 Cal.App.4th 831, 837 [53 Cal.Rptr.3d 245].)

The instructions in this series assume that the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

For instructions regarding general breach of contract issues, refer to the Contracts series (CACI No. 300 et seq.).

Sources and Authority

- "[A]n insurer may breach the covenant of good faith and fair dealing when it fails to properly investigate its insured's claim." (Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Insurance Co. (1979) 24 Cal.3d 809, 817 [169 Cal.Rptr. 691, 620 P.2d 141].)

- "To fulfill its implied obligation, an insurer must give at least as much consideration to the interests of the insured as it gives to its own interests. When the insurer unreasonably and in bad faith withholds payment of the claim of its insured, it is subject to liability in tort. And an insurer cannot reasonably and in good faith deny payments to its insured without fully investigating the grounds for its denial." (Frommoethelydo v. Fire Insurance Exchange (1986) 42 Cal.3d 208, 214–215 [228 Cal.Rptr. 160, 721 P.2d 41], internal citation omitted.)
- "To protect [an insured's] interests it is essential that an insurer fully inquire into possible bases that might support the insured's claim. Although we recognize that distinguishing fraudulent from legitimate claims may occasionally be difficult for insurers, . . . an insurer cannot reasonably and in good faith deny payments to its insured without thoroughly investigating the foundation for its denial." (Egan, supra, 24 Cal.3d at p. 819.)
- "When investigating a claim, an insurance company has a duty to diligently search for evidence which supports its insured's claim. If it seeks to discover only the evidence that defeats the claim it holds its own interest above that of the insured." (Mariscal v. Old Republic Life Ins. Co. (1996) 42 Cal.App.4th 1617, 1620 [50 Cal.Rptr.2d 224].)
- "An insurer is not permitted to rely selectively on facts that support its position and ignore those facts that support a claim. Doing so may constitute bad faith." (Mazik v. Geico General Ins. Co. (2019) 35 Cal.App.5th 455, 462 [247 Cal.Rptr.3d 450].)
- "While we agree with the trial court . . . that the insurer's interpretation of the language of its policy which led to its original denial of [the insured]'s claim was reasonable, it does not follow that [the insurer]'s resulting claim denial can be justified in the absence of a full, fair and thorough investigation of all of the bases of the claim that was presented." (Jordan v. Allstate Ins. Co. (2007) 148 Cal.App.4th 1062, 1066 [56 Cal.Rptr.3d 312], original italics.)
- "An unreasonable failure to investigate amounting to . . . unfair dealing may be found when an insurer fails to consider, or seek to discover, evidence relevant to the issues of liability and damages. . . . [¶] The insurer's willingness to reconsider its denial of coverage and to continue an investigation into a claim has been held to weigh in favor of its good faith." (Shade Foods, Inc. v. Innovative Products Sales & Marketing, Inc. (2000) 78 Cal.App.4th 847, 880 [93 Cal.Rptr.2d 364], internal citation omitted.)
- "[The insurer], of course, was not obliged to accept [the doctor]'s opinion without scrutiny or investigation. To the extent it had good faith doubts, the insurer would have been within its rights to investigate the basis for [plaintiff]'s claim by asking [the doctor] to reexamine or further explain his findings, having a physician review all the submitted medical records and offer an opinion, or, if necessary, having its insured examined by other physicians (as it later did). What it could not do, consistent with the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, was ignore [the doctor]'s conclusions without any attempt at adequate investigation, and reach contrary conclusions lacking any discernable medical foundation." (Wilson v. 21st Century Ins. Co. (2007) 42 Cal.4th 713, 722 [68 Cal.Rptr.3d 746, 171 P.3d 1082], original italics.)

- "[W]hether an insurer breached its duty to investigate [is] a question of fact to be determined by the particular circumstances of each case." (Paulfrey v. Blue Chip Stamps (1983) 150 Cal.App.3d 187, 196 [197 Cal.Rptr. 501].)
- "[L]iability in tort arises only if the conduct was unreasonable, that is, without proper cause." (Rappaport-Scott, supra, 146 Cal.App.4th at p. 837.)
- "[W]ithout actual presentation of a claim by the insured in compliance with claims procedures contained in the policy, there is no duty imposed on the insurer to investigate the claim." (California Shoppers, Inc. v. Royal Globe Insurance Co. (1985) 175 Cal.App.3d 1, 57 [221 Cal.Rptr. 171].)
- "It would seem reasonable that any responsibility to investigate on an insurer's part would not arise unless and until the threshold issue as to whether a claim was filed, or a good faith effort to comply with claims procedure was made, has been determined. In no event could an insured fail to keep his/her part of the bargain in the first instance, and thereafter seek recovery for breach of a duty to pay seeking punitive damages based on an insurer's failure to investigate a nonclaim." (Paulfrey, supra, 150 Cal.App.3d at pp. 199–200.)

Secondary Sources

2 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Insurance, § 348

Croskey et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Chapter 12C-D, Bad Faith—First Party Cases—Application—Matters Held "Unreasonable", ¶¶ 12:848–12:904 (The Rutter Group)

1 California Liability Insurance Practice: Claims & Litigation (Cont.Ed.Bar) Investigating the Claim, §§ 9.2, 9.14–9.22

2 California Insurance Law & Practice, Ch. 13, Claims Handling and the Duty of Good Faith, § 13.04[1]–[3] (Matthew Bender)

2 California Uninsured Motorist Law, Ch. 24, Bad Faith in Uninsured Motorist Law, § 24.11 (Matthew Bender)

26 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance, § 308.24 (Matthew Bender)

12 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 120, Insurance, §§ 120.153, 120.184 (Matthew Bender)

2333. Bad Faith (First Party)—Breach of Duty to Inform Insured of Rights—Essential Factual Elements

---

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] breached the obligation of good faith and fair dealing by failing to reasonably inform [him/her/nonbinary pronoun/it] of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] rights and obligations under an insurance policy. To succeed, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] suffered a loss covered under an insurance policy with [name of defendant];
2. That [name of defendant] [denied coverage for/refused to pay] [name of plaintiff]'s loss;
3. That under the policy [name of plaintiff] had the [right/obligation] to [describe right or obligation at issue; e.g., "to request arbitration within 180 days"];
4. That [name of defendant] did not reasonably inform [name of plaintiff] of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] [right/obligation] to [describe right or obligation];
5. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
6. That [name of defendant]'s failure to reasonably inform [name of plaintiff] was a substantial factor in causing [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] harm.

New September 2003; Revised May 2020

Directions for Use

The instructions in this series assume that the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

This instruction is intended for use in appropriate cases if the insured alleges that the insurer breached the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing by failing to reasonably inform the insured of the insured's remedial rights and obligations under an insurance policy.

For instructions regarding general breach of contract issues, refer to the Contracts series (CACI No. 300 et seq.).

Sources and Authority

- The insurer's implied duty of good faith and fair dealing includes "the duty reasonably to inform an insured of the insured's rights and obligations under the insurance policy. In particular, in situations in which an insured's lack of knowledge may potentially result in a loss of benefits or a forfeiture of rights, an insurer [is] required to bring to the insured's attention relevant information so as to enable the insured to take action to secure rights afforded by the policy." (Davis v. Blue Cross of Northern California (1979) 25 Cal.3d 418, 428 [158 Cal.Rptr. 828, 600 P.2d 1060].)

- The trial court in the instant case found that [the insurer] knew that in many instances its insureds would not be aware of the arbitration clause and that, despite this knowledge, [it] deliberately decided not to inform its insureds of the arbitration procedure. In this context, the practical effect of the insurer's practice was to transform its arbitration clause into a unilateral provision, establishing a procedure to which the insurer could require its insureds to resort when [it] deemed it advisable, but one that would not generally provide a speedy, economic or readily accessible remedy for the bulk of [its] uninformed insureds. [¶] We think the trial court was fully justified in finding that [the insurer] had breached its duty of good faith and fair dealing in adopting such a course of conduct. (Davis, supra, 25 Cal.3d at pp. 430–431.)
- "When a court is reviewing claims under an insurance policy, it must hold the insured bound by clear and conspicuous provisions in the policy even if evidence suggests that the insured did not read or understand them. Once it becomes clear to the insurer that its insured disputes its denial of coverage, however, the duty of good faith does not permit the insurer passively to assume that its insured is aware of his rights under the policy. The insurer must instead take affirmative steps to make sure that the insured is informed of his remedial rights." (Sarchett v. Blue Shield of California (1987) 43 Cal.3d 1, 14–15 [233 Cal.Rptr. 76, 729 P.2d 267], plurality opinion.)
- But see Chase v. Blue Cross of California (1996) 42 Cal.App.4th 1142, 1155 [50 Cal.Rptr.2d 178] [while insurer may not misrepresent facts or fail to clarify an insured's obvious misunderstanding of the policy coverage, it does not have an ongoing duty to keep the insured informed of his or her rights once those rights have been clearly set forth in the policy].)
- "In order to find a forfeiture by the insurer of the right to arbitration, we understand Davis and Sarchett to require conduct designed to mislead policyholders." (Chase, supra, 42 Cal.App.4th at p. 1157, original italics.)
- An insurer owes a duty to an additional insured under an automobile policy to disclose within a reasonable time the existence and amount of any underinsured motorist coverage. (Ramirez v. USAA Casualty Insurance Co. (1991) 234 Cal.App.3d 391, 397–402 [285 Cal.Rptr. 757].)
- "California courts have imposed a duty on the insurer to advise its insureds of the availability of and procedure for initiating arbitration; to notify him of a 31-day option period in which to convert his group insurance policy into individual coverage after termination; and to notify an assignee of a life insurance policy taken as security for a loan to the insured of previous assignments of the policy known to the insurer." (Westrick v. State Farm Insurance (1982) 137 Cal.App.3d 685, 692 [187 Cal.Rptr. 214], internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

Croskey et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch. 12C-D, Application—Matters Held "Unreasonable", ¶¶ 12:953–12:963 (The Rutter Group)

2 California Insurance Law & Practice, Ch. 13, Claims Handling and the Duty of Good Faith, § 13.05 (Matthew Bender)

2 California Uninsured Motorist Law, Ch. 24, Bad Faith in Uninsured Motorist Law, § 24.22 (Matthew Bender)

12 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 120, Insurance, §§ 120.383–120.384, 120.390 (Matthew Bender)

2334. Bad Faith (Third Party)—Refusal to Accept Reasonable Settlement Demand Within Liability Policy Limits—Essential Factual Elements

---

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] breached the obligation of good faith and fair dealing because [name of defendant] failed to accept a reasonable settlement demand for a claim against [name of plaintiff]. To establish [name of plaintiff]'s claim against [name of defendant], [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] was insured under a policy of liability insurance issued by [name of defendant];
2. That [name of claimant] made a claim against [name of plaintiff] that was covered by [name of defendant]'s insurance policy;
3. That [name of claimant] made a reasonable demand to settle [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] claim against [name of plaintiff] for an amount within policy limits;
4. That [name of defendant] failed to accept this settlement demand;
5. That [name of defendant]'s failure to accept the settlement demand was the result of unreasonable conduct by [name of defendant]; and
6. [That a judgment was entered against [name of plaintiff] for a sum of money greater than the policy limits.]

   [or]

   [That [name of defendant]'s failure to accept the settlement demand was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.]

"Policy limits" means the highest amount of insurance coverage available under the policy for the claim against [name of plaintiff].

A settlement demand for an amount within policy limits is reasonable if [name of defendant] knew or should have known at the time it failed to accept the demand that a potential judgment against [name of plaintiff] was likely to exceed the amount of the demand based on [name of claimant]'s injuries or losses and [name of plaintiff]'s probable liability. However, the demand may be unreasonable for reasons other than the amount demanded.

An insurance company's unreasonable conduct may be shown by its action or by its failure to act. An insurance company's conduct is unreasonable when, for example, it does not give at least as much consideration to the interests of the insured as it gives to its own interests.

New September 2003; Revised December 2007, June 2012, December 2012, June 2016, November 2021, May 2022

Directions for Use

This instruction is for use in an "excess judgment" case; that is, one in which judgment was against the insured for an amount over the policy limits, after the insurer rejected a settlement demand within policy limits. Use the first option for element 6 if the plaintiff is seeking only the amount of the excess judgment. Use the second option for element 6 if the plaintiff is seeking damages separate from or in addition to the excess judgment. (See Howard v. American National Fire Ins. Co. (2010) 187 Cal.App.4th 498, 527 [115 Cal.Rptr.3d 42].) If there has been both an excess judgment and other damages, modify element 6 as appropriate to address all damages involved in the case.

The instructions in this series assume that the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case. For example, if the plaintiff is the insured's assignee, modify the instruction as needed to reflect the underlying facts and relationship between the parties.

For instructions regarding general breach of contract issues, refer to the Contracts series (CACI No. 300 et seq.).

If it is alleged that a demand was made in excess of the policy limits and there is a claim that the defendant should have contributed the policy limits toward a settlement, then this instruction will need to be modified.

This instruction should also be modified if the insurer did not accept the policy-limits demand because of potential remaining exposure to the insured, such as a contractual indemnity claim or exposure to other claimants.

Sources and Authority

- "[T]he implied obligation of good faith and fair dealing requires the insurer to settle in an appropriate case although the express terms of the policy do not impose such a duty. [¶] The insurer, in deciding whether a claim should be compromised, must take into account the interest of the insured and give it at least as much consideration as it does to its own interest. When there is great risk of a recovery beyond the policy limits so that the most reasonable manner of disposing of the claim is a settlement which can be made within those limits, a consideration in good faith of the insured's interest requires the insurer to settle the claim." (Comunale v. Traders & General Ins. Co. (1958) 50 Cal.2d 654, 659 [328 P.2d 198], citation omitted.)
- "Liability is imposed not for a bad faith breach of the contract but for failure to meet the duty to accept reasonable settlements, a duty included within the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing." (Crisci v. Security Insurance

Co. of New Haven, Connecticut (1967) 66 Cal.2d 425, 430 [58 Cal.Rptr. 13, 426 P.2d 173].)

- "In determining whether an insurer has given consideration to the interests of the insured, the test is whether a prudent insurer without policy limits would have accepted the settlement offer." (Crisci, supra, 66 Cal.2d at p. 429.)
- "[I]n deciding whether or not to compromise the claim, the insurer must conduct itself as though it alone were liable for the entire amount of the judgment. . . . [T]he only permissible consideration in evaluating the reasonableness of the settlement offer becomes whether, in light of the victim's injuries and the probable liability of the insured, the ultimate judgment is likely to exceed the amount of the settlement offer." (Johansen v. California State Auto. Assn. Inter-Insurance Bureau (1975) 15 Cal.3d 9, 16 [123 Cal.Rptr. 288, 538 P.2d 744], internal citation omitted.)
- "[A]n insurer is required to act in good faith in dealing with its insured. Thus, in deciding whether or not to settle a claim, the insurer must take into account the interests of the insured, and when there is a great risk of recovery beyond the policy limits, a good faith consideration of the insured's interests may require the insurer to settle the claim within the policy limits. An unreasonable refusal to settle may subject the insurer to liability for the entire amount of the judgment rendered against the insured, including any portion in excess of the policy limits." (Hamilton v. Maryland Cas. Co. (2002) 27 Cal.4th 718, 724–725 [117 Cal.Rptr.2d 318, 41 P.3d 128].)
- "The size of the judgment recovered in the personal injury action when it exceeds the policy limits, although not conclusive, furnishes an inference that the value of the claim is the equivalent of the amount of the judgment and that acceptance of an offer within those limits was the most reasonable method of dealing with the claim." (Crisci, supra, 66 Cal.2d at p. 431.)
- "The covenant of good faith and fair dealing implied in every insurance policy obligates the insurer, among other things, to accept a reasonable offer to settle a lawsuit by a third party against the insured within policy limits whenever there is a substantial likelihood of a recovery in excess of those limits. The insurer must evaluate the reasonableness of an offer to settle a lawsuit against the insured by considering the probable liability of the insured and the amount of that liability, without regard to any coverage defenses. An insurer that fails to accept a reasonable settlement offer within policy limits will be held liable in tort for the entire judgment against the insured, even if that amount exceeds the policy limits. An insurer's duty to accept a reasonable settlement offer in these circumstances is implied in law to protect the insured from exposure to liability in excess of coverage as a result of the insurer's gamble—on which only the insured might lose." (Rappaport-Scott v. Interinsurance Exch. of the Auto. Club (2007) 146 Cal.App.4th 831, 836 [53 Cal.Rptr.3d 245], internal citations omitted.)
- "An insured's claim for bad faith based on an alleged wrongful refusal to settle first requires proof the third party made a reasonable offer to settle the claims against the insured for an amount within the policy limits. The offer satisfies this first element if (1) its terms are clear enough to have created an enforceable contract resolving all claims had it been accepted by the insurer, (2) all of the third party claimants have joined in the demand, (3) it provides for a complete release of all insureds, and (4) the time provided for acceptance did not deprive the insurer of an adequate opportunity to investigate and evaluate its insured's exposure." (Graciano v. Mercury General Corp. (2014) 231 Cal.App.4th 414, 425 [179 Cal.Rptr.3d 717], internal citations omitted.)

- "An insurer's duty to accept a reasonable settlement offer is not absolute. ' "[I]n deciding whether or not to settle a claim, the insurer must take into account the interests of the insured, and when there is a great risk of recovery beyond the policy limits, a good faith consideration of the insured's interests may require the insurer to settle the claim within the policy limits. An unreasonable refusal to settle may subject the insurer to liability for the entire amount of the judgment rendered against the insured, including any portion in excess of the policy limits." ' [¶] Therefore, failing to accept a reasonable settlement offer does not necessarily constitute bad faith. '[T]he crucial issue is . . . the basis for the insurer's decision to reject an offer of settlement.' " (Pinto v. Farmers Ins. Exchange (2021) 61 Cal.App.5th 676, 688 [276 Cal.Rptr.3d 13], original italics, internal citations omitted.)
- "A claim for bad faith based on the wrongful refusal to settle thus requires proof the insurer unreasonably failed to accept an offer. [¶] Simply failing to settle does not meet this standard." (Pinto, supra, 61 Cal.App.5th at p. 688, internal citation omitted.)
- "To be liable for bad faith, an insurer must not only cause the insured's damages, it must act or fail to act without proper cause, for example by placing its own interests above those of its insured." (Pinto, supra, 61 Cal.App.5th at p. 692.)
- "A bad faith claim requires 'something beyond breach of the contractual duty itself, and that something more is ' "refusing, without proper cause, to compensate its insured for a loss covered by the policy . . . ." [Citation.] Of course, the converse of "without proper cause" is that declining to perform a contractual duty under the policy with proper cause is not a breach of the implied covenant.' " (Graciano, supra, 231 Cal.App.4th at p. 433, original italics.)
- "Determination of the reasonableness of a settlement offer for purposes of a reimbursement action is based on the information available to [the insurer] at the time of the proposed settlement." (Isaacson v. California Ins. Guarantee Assn. (1988) 44 Cal.3d 775, 793 [244 Cal.Rptr. 655, 750 P.2d 297].)
- "The third party is entitled to set a reasonable time limit within which the insurer must accept the settlement proposal . . . ." (Graciano, supra, 231 Cal.App.4th at p. 434.)

- "Whether [the insurer] 'refused' the 'offer,' and whether it could reasonably have acted otherwise in light of the 11-day deadline imposed by the offer's terms, were questions for the jury." (Coe v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1977) 66 Cal.App.3d 981, 994 [136 Cal.Rptr. 331].)
- "A cause of action for bad faith refusal to settle arises only after a judgment has been rendered in excess of the policy limits. . . . Until judgment is actually entered, the mere possibility or probability of an excess judgment does not render the refusal to settle actionable." (Safeco Ins. Co. of Am. v. Superior Court (1999) 71 Cal.App.4th 782, 788 [84 Cal.Rptr.2d 43], internal citations omitted.)
- "An insurer's wrongful failure to settle may be actionable even without rendition of an excess judgment. An insured may recover for bad faith failure to settle, despite the lack of an excess judgment, where the insurer's misconduct goes beyond a simple failure to settle within policy limits or the insured suffers consequential damages apart from an excess judgment." (Howard, supra, 187 Cal.App.4th at p. 527, internal citations omitted.)
- " 'An insurer who denies coverage does so at its own risk and although its position may not have been entirely groundless, if the denial is found to be wrongful it is liable for the full amount which will compensate the insured for all the detriment caused by the insurer's breach of the express and implied obligations of the contract.' Accordingly, contrary to the defendant's suggestion, an insurer's 'good faith,' though erroneous, belief in noncoverage affords no defense to liability flowing from the insurer's refusal to accept a reasonable settlement offer." (Johansen, supra, 15 Cal.3d at pp. 15–16, original italics, footnotes and internal citation omitted.)
- "[W]here the kind of claim asserted is not covered by the insurance contract (and not simply the amount of the claim), an insurer has no obligation to pay money in settlement of a noncovered claim, because 'The insurer does not . . . insure the entire range of an insured's well-being, outside the scope of and unrelated to the insurance policy, with respect to paying third party claims.' " (Dewitt v. Monterey Ins. Co. (2012) 204 Cal.App.4th 233, 244 [138 Cal.Rptr.3d 705], original italics.)
- "A good faith belief in noncoverage is not relevant to a determination of the reasonableness of a settlement offer." (Samson v. Transamerica Insurance Co. (1981) 30 Cal.3d 220, 243 [178 Cal.Rptr. 343, 636 P.2d 32], internal citation omitted.)
- "An insurer that breaches its duty of reasonable settlement is liable for all the insured's damages proximately caused by the breach, regardless of policy limits. Where the underlying action has proceeded to trial and a judgment in excess of the policy limits has been entered against the insured, the insurer is ordinarily liable to its insured for the entire amount of that judgment, excluding any punitive damages awarded." (Hamilton, supra, 27 Cal.4th at p. 725, internal citations omitted.)
- "[I]nsurers do have a 'selfish' interest (that is, one that is peculiar to themselves) in imposing a blanket rule which effectively precludes disclosure of policy limits, and that interest can adversely affect the possibility that an excess claim against a policyholder might be settled within policy limits. Thus, a palpable conflict of interest exists in at least one context where there is no formal settlement offer. We therefore conclude that a formal settlement offer is not an absolute prerequisite to a bad faith action in the wake of an excess verdict when the claimant makes a request for policy limits and the insurer refuses to contact the policyholder about the request." (Boicourt v. Amex Assurance Co. (2000) 78 Cal.App.4th 1390, 1398–1399 [93 Cal.Rptr.3d 763].)

- "For bad faith liability to attach to an insurer's failure to pursue settlement discussions, in a case where the insured is exposed to a judgment beyond policy limits, there must be, at a minimum, some evidence either that the injured party has communicated to the insurer an interest in settlement, or some other circumstance demonstrating the insurer knew that settlement within policy limits could feasibly be negotiated. In the absence of such evidence, or evidence the insurer by its conduct has actively foreclosed the possibility of settlement, there is no 'opportunity to settle' that an insurer may be taxed with ignoring." (Reid v. Mercury Ins. Co. (2013) 220 Cal.App.4th 262, 272 [162 Cal.Rptr.3d 894].)
- "[F]ailing to accept a reasonable settlement offer does not necessarily constitute bad faith. '[T]he crucial issue is . . . the basis for the insurer's decision to reject an offer of settlement.' '[M]ere errors by an insurer in discharging its obligations to its insured " 'does not necessarily make the insurer liable in tort for violating the covenant of good faith and fair dealing; to be liable in tort, the insurer's conduct must also have been unreasonable.' " ' " (Pinto, supra, 61 Cal.App.5th at p. 688, original italics, internal citations omitted.)
- "In short, so long as insurers are not subject to a strict liability standard, there is still room for an honest, innocent mistake." (Walbrook Ins. Co. Ltd. v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. (1992) 5 Cal.App.4th 1445, 1460 [7 Cal.Rptr.2d 513, 521].)

Secondary Sources

2 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Insurance, §§ 366–368

Croskey et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch. 12B-A, Implied Covenant Liability—Introduction, ¶¶ 12:202–12:224 (The Rutter Group)

Croskey et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch. 12B-B, Bad Faith Refusal To Settle, ¶¶ 12:226–12:548 (The Rutter Group)

Croskey et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch. 12B-C, Bad Faith Liability Despite Settlement Of Third Party Claims, ¶¶ 12:575–12:581.12 (The Rutter Group)

Croskey et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch. 12B-D, Refusal To Defend Cases, ¶¶ 12:582–12:686 (The Rutter Group)

2 California Liability Insurance Practice: Claims and Litigation (Cont.Ed.Bar) Actions for Failure to Settle, §§ 26.1–26.35

2 California Insurance Law and Practice, Ch. 13, Claims Handling and the Duty of Good Faith, § 13.07[1]–[3] (Matthew Bender)

26 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance, § 308.24 (Matthew Bender)

12 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 120, Insurance, §§ 120.195, 120.199, 120.205, 120.207 (Matthew Bender)

2335. Bad Faith—Advice of Counsel

[*Name of defendant] did not breach the obligation of good faith and fair dealing if it reasonably relied on the advice of its lawyer. [Name of defendant]'s reliance was reasonable if:

1. [Name of defendant] acted in reliance on the opinion and advice of its lawyer;
2. The lawyer's advice was based on full disclosure by [name of defendant] of all relevant facts that it knew, or could have discovered with reasonable effort;
3. [Name of defendant] reasonably believed the advice of the lawyer was correct; [and]
4. In relying on its lawyer's advice, [name of defendant] gave at least as much consideration to [name of plaintiff]'s interest as it gave its own interest; [and]

[5. [*Name of defendant] was willing to reconsider and act accordingly when it determined that the lawyer's advice was incorrect.]

New September 2003

Directions for Use

The instructions in this series assume the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

The "advice of counsel defense" is not a true affirmative defense, but rather negates an essential element of the insured's cause of action for bad faith. (See State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. v. Superior Court (1991) 228 Cal.App.3d 721, 725–726 [279 Cal.Rptr. 116].)

Advice of counsel is irrelevant, however, when an insurer denies coverage and for that reason refuses a reasonable settlement offer. (See, e.g., Johansen v. California State Auto. Asso. Inter-Insurance Bureau (1975) 15 Cal.3d 9, 16 [123 Cal.Rptr. 288, 538 P.2d 744] ["an insurer's 'good faith,' though erroneous, belief in noncoverage affords no defense to liability flowing from the insurer's refusal to accept a reasonable settlement offer"].)

Sources and Authority

- "An insurer may defend itself against allegations of bad faith and malice in claims handling with evidence the insurer relied on the advice of competent counsel. The defense of advice of counsel is offered to show the insurer had 'proper cause' for its actions even if the advice it received is ultimately unsound or erroneous." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 228 Cal.App.3d at p. 725, internal citations omitted.)

- "If the insurer has exercised good faith in all of its dealings under its policy, and if the settlement which it has rejected has been fully and fairly considered and has been based upon an honest belief that the insurer could defeat the action or keep any possible judgment within the limits of the policy, and its judgments are based on a fair review of the evidence after reasonable diligence in ascertaining the facts, and upon sound legal advice, a court should not subject the insurer to further liability if it ultimately turns out that its judgment is a mistaken judgment . . . ." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 228 Cal.App.3d at p. 725, internal citation omitted.)
- "[I]t is a complete defense to a claim of extreme and outrageous conduct when the evidence shows (1) the defendant acted on the opinion and advice of counsel; (2) counsel's advice was based on full disclosure of all the facts by defendant or the advice was initiated by counsel based on counsel's familiarity with the case; and (3) the defendant's reliance on the advice of counsel was in good faith." (Melorich Builders, Inc. v. Superior Court (1984) 160 Cal.App.3d 931, 936–937 [207 Cal.Rptr. 47] [intentional infliction of emotional distress action].)
- "Good faith reliance on counsel's advice simply negates allegations of bad faith and malice as it tends to show the insurer had proper cause for its actions. Because advice of counsel is directed to an essential element of a plaintiff's cause of action, it does not constitute new matter and need not be specifically alleged." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 228 Cal.App.3d at. pp. 725–726.)
- "An insurer's receipt of and reliance on [the written opinion of its legal counsel] is a relevant circumstance to be considered on the issue of its alleged bad faith." (Mock v. Mich. Millers Mut. Ins. Co. (1992) 4 Cal.App.4th 306, 326, fn. 20 [5 Cal.Rptr.2d 594].)
- "Exemplary damages are not recoverable against a defendant who acts in good faith and under the advice of counsel." (Fox v. Aced (1957) 49 Cal.2d 381, 385 [317 P.2d 608].)
- "A good faith belief in noncoverage is not relevant to a determination of the reasonableness of a settlement offer." (Samson v. Transamerica Insurance Co. (1981) 30 Cal.3d 220, 243 [178 Cal.Rptr. 343, 636 P.2d 32], internal citation omitted.)

Secondary Sources

Croskey et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch. 12D-G, Insurer's Reliance on Advice of Counsel, ¶¶ 12:1248–12:1260 (The Rutter Group)

2 California Liability Insurance Practice: Claims & Litigation (Cont.Ed.Bar) General Principles of Contract and Bad Faith Actions, §§ 24.52–24.55

2 California Uninsured Motorist Law, Ch. 21, Defending an Uninsured Motorist

Claim, §§ 21.20, 21.31 (Matthew Bender)

6 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 82, Claims and Disputes Under Insurance Policies, § 82.55 (Matthew Bender)

2336. Bad Faith (Third Party)—Unreasonable Failure to Defend—Essential Factual Elements

---

[Name of plaintiff] claims [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] was harmed by [name of defendant]'s breach of the obligation of good faith and fair dealing because [name of defendant] failed to defend [name of plaintiff] in a lawsuit that was brought against [him/her/nonbinary pronoun/it]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] was insured under an insurance policy with [name of defendant];
2. That a lawsuit was brought against [name of plaintiff];
3. That [name of plaintiff] gave [name of defendant] timely notice that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] had been sued;
4. That [name of defendant], unreasonably, that is, without proper cause, failed to defend [name of plaintiff] against the lawsuit;
5. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
6. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New October 2004; Revised December 2007, December 2014, December 2015

Directions for Use

The instructions in this series assume that the plaintiff is an insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

The court will decide the issue of whether the claim was potentially covered by the policy. (See California Shoppers, Inc. v. Royal Globe Ins. Co. (1985) 175 Cal.App.3d 1, 52 [221 Cal.Rptr. 171].) If coverage depends on an unresolved dispute over a factual question, the very existence of that dispute establishes a possibility of coverage and thus a duty to defend. (North Counties Engineering, Inc. v. State Farm General Ins. Co. (2014) 224 Cal.App.4th 902, 922 [169 Cal.Rptr.3d 726].) Therefore, the jury does not resolve factual disputes that determine coverage.

For instructions regarding general breach of contract issues, refer to the Contracts series (CACI No. 300 et seq.).

Sources and Authority

- "A breach of the duty to defend in itself constitutes only a breach of contract, but it may also violate the covenant of good faith and fair dealing where it involves unreasonable conduct or an action taken without proper cause. On the other hand, '[i]f the insurer's refusal to defend is reasonable, no liability will result.' " (Shade Foods, Inc. v. Innovative Products Sales & Marketing, Inc. 78 Cal.App.4th 847, 881 [93 Cal.Rptr.2d 364], internal citations omitted.)

- "To prevail in an action seeking declaratory relief on the question of the duty to defend, 'the insured must prove the existence of a potential for coverage, while the insurer must establish the absence of any such potential. In other words, the insured need only show that the underlying claim may fall within policy coverage; the insurer must prove it cannot.' The duty to defend exists if the insurer 'becomes aware of, or if the third party lawsuit pleads, facts giving rise to the potential for coverage under the insuring agreement.' " (Delgado v. Interinsurance Exchange of Automobile Club of Southern California (2009) 47 Cal.4th 302, 308 [97 Cal.Rptr.3d 298, 211 P.3d 1083], original italics, internal citation omitted.)
- " '[A]n insurer has a duty to defend an insured if it becomes aware of, or if the third party lawsuit pleads, facts giving rise to the potential for coverage under the insuring agreement. . . . This duty . . . is separate from and broader than the insurer's duty to indemnify. . . .' " "[F]or an insurer, the existence of a duty to defend turns not upon the ultimate adjudication of coverage under its policy of insurance, but upon those facts known by the insurer at the inception of a third party lawsuit. . . . Hence, the duty 'may exist even where coverage is in doubt and ultimately does not develop.' . . ." . . .' " (State Farm Fire & Casualty Co. v. Superior Court (2008) 164 Cal.App.4th 317, 323 [78 Cal.Rptr.3d 828], internal citations omitted.)
- "If any facts stated or fairly inferable in the complaint, or otherwise known or discovered by the insurer, suggest a claim potentially covered by the policy, the insurer's duty to defend arises and is not extinguished until the insurer negates all facts suggesting potential coverage. On the other hand, if, as a matter of law, neither the complaint nor the known extrinsic facts indicate any basis for potential coverage, the duty to defend does not arise in the first instance." (GGIS Ins. Services, Inc. v. Superior Court (2008) 168 Cal.App.4th 1493, 1506 [86 Cal.Rptr.3d 515].)
- " 'The proper focus is on the facts alleged in the complaint, rather than the alleged theories for recovery. . . . "The ultimate question is whether the facts alleged 'fairly apprise' the insurer that the suit is upon a covered claim." ' " (Albert v. Truck Ins. Exchange (2018) 23 Cal. App. 5th 367, 378 [232 Cal.Rptr.3d 774].)
- "The duty to defend was not a question of fact for the jury; the trial court was compelled to determine as a matter of law that [indemnitee]'s claim was embraced by the indemnity agreement." (Centex Homes v. R-Help Construction Co., Inc. (2019) 32 Cal.App.5th 1230, 1236 [244 Cal.Rptr.3d 574].)
- "A duty to defend can be extinguished only prospectively and not retrospectively." (Navigators Specialty Ins. Co. v. Moorefield Construction, Inc. (2016) 6 Cal.App.5th 1258, 1284 [212 Cal.Rptr.3d 231].)
- "[F]acts known to the insurer and extrinsic to the third party complaint can generate a duty to defend, even though the face of the complaint does not reflect a potential for liability under the policy. [Citation.] This is so because current pleading rules liberally allow amendment; the third party plaintiff cannot be the arbiter of coverage." (Tidwell Enterprises, Inc. v. Financial Pacific Ins. Co., Inc. (2016) 6 Cal.App.5th 100, 106 [210 Cal.Rptr.3d 634].)

- "An insurer does not have a continuing duty to investigate the potential for coverage if it has made an informed decision on coverage at the time of tender. However, where the information available at the time of tender shows no coverage, but information available later shows otherwise, a duty to defend may then arise." (American States Ins. Co. v. Progressive Casualty Ins. Co. (2009) 180 Cal.App.4th 18, 26 [102 Cal.Rptr.3d 591], internal citations omitted.)
- "The duty does not depend on the labels given to the causes of action in the underlying claims against the insured; 'instead it rests on whether the alleged facts or known extrinsic facts reveal a possibility that the claim may be covered by the policy.' " (Travelers Property Casualty Co. of America v. Charlotte Russe Holding, Inc. (2012) 207 Cal.App.4th 969, 976 [144 Cal.Rptr.3d 12], original italics, disapproved on other grounds in Hartford Casualty Ins. Co. v. Swift Distribution, Inc. (2014) 59 Cal.4th 277, 295 [172 Cal.Rptr.3d 653, 326 P.3d 253].)
- "The obligation of the insurer to defend is of vital importance to the insured. 'In purchasing his insurance the insured would reasonably expect that he would stand a better chance of vindication if supported by the resources and expertise of his insurer than if compelled to handle and finance the presentation of his case. He would, moreover, expect to be able to avoid the time, uncertainty and capital outlay in finding and retaining an attorney of his own.' 'The insured's desire to secure the right to call on the insurer's superior resources for the defense of third party claims is, in all likelihood, typically as significant a motive for the purchase of insurance as is the wish to obtain indemnity for possible liability.' " (Amato v. Mercury Casualty Co. (Amato II) (1997) 53 Cal.App.4th 825, 831–832 [61 Cal.Rptr.2d 909], internal citations omitted.)
- "An anomalous situation would be created if, on the one hand, an insured can sue for the tort of breach of the implied covenant if the insurer accepts the defense and later refuses a reasonable settlement offer, but, on the other hand, an insured is denied tort recovery if the insurer simply refuses to defend. . . . This dichotomy could have the effect of encouraging an insurer to stonewall the insured at the outset by simply refusing to defend." (Campbell v. Superior Court (1996) 44 Cal.App.4th 1308, 1319–1320 [52 Cal.Rptr.2d 385].)
- "[T]he mere existence of a legal dispute does not create a potential for coverage: 'However, we have made clear that where the third party suit never presented any potential for policy coverage, the duty to defend does not arise in the first instance, and the insurer may properly deny a defense. Moreover, the law governing the insurer's duty to defend need not be settled at the time the insurer makes its decision.' " (Griffin Dewatering Corp. v. Northern Ins. Co. of New York (2009) 176 Cal.App.4th 172, 209 [97 Cal.Rptr.3d 568], original italics.)

- "The trial court erroneously thought that because the case law was 'unsettled' when the insurer first turned down the claim, that unsettledness created a potential for a covered claim. . . . [I]f an insurance company's denial of coverage is reasonable, as shown by substantial case law in favor of its position, there can be no bad faith even though the insurance company's position is later rejected by our state Supreme Court." (Griffin Dewatering Corp., supra, 176 Cal.App.4th at p. 179, original italics.)
- "Unresolved factual disputes impacting insurance coverage do not absolve the insurer of its duty to defend. 'If coverage depends on an unresolved dispute over a factual question, the very existence of that dispute would establish a possibility of coverage and thus a duty to defend.' " (Howard v. American National Fire Insurance Company (2010) 187 Cal.App.4th 498, 520 [115 Cal.Rptr.3d 42].)
- " 'If the insurer is obliged to take up the defense of its insured, it must do so as soon as possible, both to protect the interests of the insured, and to limit its own exposure to loss. . . . [T]he duty to defend must be assessed at the outset of the case.' It follows that a belated offer to pay the costs of defense may mitigate damages but will not cure the initial breach of duty." (Shade Foods, Inc., supra, 78 Cal.App.4th at p. 881, internal citations omitted.)
- "When a complaint states multiple claims, some of which are potentially covered by the insurance policy and some of which are not, it is a mixed action. In these cases, 'the insurer has a duty to defend as to the claims that are at least potentially covered, having been paid premiums by the insured therefor, but does not have a duty to defend as to those that are not, not having been paid therefor.' However, in a ' "mixed" action, the insurer has a duty to defend the action in its entirety.' Thereafter, the insurance company is entitled to seek reimbursement for the cost of defending the claims that are not potentially covered by the policy." (Gonzalez v. Fire Ins. Exchange (2015) 234 Cal.App.4th 1220, 1231 [184 Cal.Rptr.3d 394], internal citations omitted.)
- "No tender of defense is required if the insurer has already denied coverage of the claim. In such cases, notice of suit and tender of the defense are excused because other insurer has already expressed its unwillingness to undertake the defense." (Croskey et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch. 12D-G, Insurer's Reliance on Advice of Counsel ¶ 7:614 (The Rutter Group).)

Secondary Sources

2 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Insurance, §§ 427, 428

Croskey et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch. 12B-D, Third Party Cases—Refusal To Defend Cases, ¶¶ 12:598–12:650.5 (The Rutter Group)

2 California Liability Insurance Practice: Claims and Litigation (Cont.Ed.Bar) Actions for Failure to Defend, §§ 25.1–26.38

2 California Insurance Law and Practice, Ch. 13, Claims Handling and the Duty of Good Faith, § 13.08 (Matthew Bender)

6 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 82, Claims and Disputes Under Insurance Policies, §§ 82.10–82.16 (Matthew Bender)

26 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance, § 308.24 (Matthew Bender)

2337. Factors to Consider in Evaluating Insurer's Conduct

In determining whether [*name of defendant] acted unreasonably, that is, without proper cause, you may consider whether the defendant did any of the following:

[(a) Misrepresented to [*name of plaintiff] relevant facts or insurance policy provisions relating to any coverage at issue.]

[(b) Failed to acknowledge and act reasonably promptly after receiving communications about [*name of plaintiff]'s claim arising under the insurance policy.]

[(c) Failed to adopt and implement reasonable standards for the prompt investigation and processing of claims arising under its insurance policies.]

[(d) Failed to accept or deny coverage of claims within a reasonable time after [*name of plaintiff] completed and submitted proof-of-loss requirements.]

[(e) Did not attempt in good faith to reach a prompt, fair, and equitable settlement of [*name of plaintiff]'s claim after liability had become reasonably clear.]

[(f) Required [*name of plaintiff] to file a lawsuit to recover amounts due under the policy by offering substantially less than the amount that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] ultimately recovered in the lawsuit, even though [name of plaintiff] had made a claim for an amount reasonably close to the amount ultimately recovered.]

[(g) Attempted to settle [*name of plaintiff]'s claim for less than the amount to which a reasonable person would have believed [name of plaintiff] was entitled by referring to written or printed advertising material accompanying or made part of the application.]

[(h) Attempted to settle the claim on the basis of an application that was altered without notice to, or knowledge or consent of, [*name of plaintiff], [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] representative, agent, or broker.]

[(i) Failed, after payment of a claim, to inform [*name of plaintiff] at [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] request, of the coverage under which payment was made.]

[(j) Informed [*name of plaintiff] of its practice of appealing from arbitration awards in favor of insureds or claimants for the purpose of forcing them to accept settlements or compromises less than the amount awarded in arbitration.]

[(k) Delayed the investigation or payment of the claim by requiring [*name of plaintiff], [or [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] physician], to submit a preliminary claim report, and then also required the submission of formal proof-of-loss forms, both of which contained substantially the same information.]

[(l) Failed to settle a claim against [*name of plaintiff] promptly once [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] liability had become apparent, under one portion of the insurance policy coverage in order to influence settlements under other portions of the insurance policy coverage.]

[(m) Failed to promptly provide a reasonable explanation of its reasons for denying the claim or offering a compromise settlement, based on the provisions of the insurance policy in relation to the facts or applicable law.]

[(n) Directly advised [*name of plaintiff] not to hire an attorney.]

[(o) Misled [*name of plaintiff] as to the applicable statute of limitations, that is, the date by which an action against [name of defendant] on the claim had to be filed.]

[(p) Delayed the payment or provision of hospital, medical, or surgical benefits for services provided with respect to acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) or AIDS-related complex for more than 60 days after it had received [*name of plaintiff]'s claim for those benefits, doing so in order to investigate whether [name of plaintiff] had the condition before obtaining the insurance coverage. However, the 60-day period does not include any time during which [name of defendant] was waiting for a response for relevant medical information from a healthcare provider.]

The presence or absence of any of these factors alone is not enough to determine whether [*name of defendant]'s conduct was or was not unreasonable, that is, without proper cause. You must consider [name of defendant]'s conduct as a whole in making this determination.

New April 2008; Revised December 2015, May 2020

Directions for Use

Although there is no private cause of action under Insurance Code section 790.03(h) (see Moradi-Shalal v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Companies (1988) 46 Cal.3d 287, 304–305 [250 Cal.Rptr. 116, 758 P.2d 58]), this instruction may be given in an insurance bad-faith action to assist the jury in determining whether the insurer's conduct was unreasonable or without proper cause. (See Jordan v. Allstate Ins. Co. (2007) 148 Cal.App.4th 1062, 1078 [56 Cal.Rptr.3d 312], internal citations omitted.)

Include only the factors that are relevant to the case.

Sources and Authority

- Bad-Faith Insurance Practices. Insurance Code section 790.03.
- "[Plaintiff] was not seeking to recover on a claim based on a violation of Insurance Code section 790.03, subdivision (h). Rather, her claim was based on a claim of common law bad faith arising from [defendant]'s breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing which she is entitled to pursue. [Plaintiff]'s reliance upon the [expert's] declaration was for the purpose of providing evidence supporting her contention that [defendant] had breached the implied covenant by its actions. This is a proper use of evidence of an insurer's violations of the statute and the corresponding regulations." (Jordan, supra, 148 Cal.App.4th at p. 1078, original italics, internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

2 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Insurance §§ 360, 361, 365, 461

Croskey et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch. 14-A, Statutory and Administrative Regulation—The California Regulator, ¶ 14:109 et seq. (The Rutter Group)

1 California Liability Insurance Practice: Claims and Litigation, Ch. 24, General Principles of Contract and Bad Faith (Cont.Ed.Bar) § 24.30 et seq.

26 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance, § 308.25 (Matthew Bender)

1 Rushing et al., Matthew Bender Practice Guide: California Unfair Competition and Business Torts, Ch. 2, Unfair Competition, 2.11 (Matthew Bender)

2338–2349. Reserved for Future Use

2350. Damages for Bad Faith

If you decide that [*name of plaintiff] has proved [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] claim against [name of defendant], you also must decide how much money will reasonably compensate [name of plaintiff] for the harm. This compensation is called "damages."

The amount of damages must include an award for all harm that was caused by [*name of defendant], even if the particular harm could not have been anticipated.

[*Name of plaintiff] must prove the amount of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] damages. However, [name of plaintiff] does not have to prove the exact amount of damages that will provide reasonable compensation for the harm. You must not speculate or guess in awarding damages.

The following are the specific items of damages claimed by [*name of plaintiff]:

1. [Mental suffering/anxiety/humiliation/emotional distress;] [and]
2. [The cost of attorney fees to recover the insurance policy benefits;] [and]
3. [Insert other applicable item of damage.]

[No fixed standard exists for deciding the amount of damages for [*insert item of mental or emotional distress]. You must use your judgment to decide a reasonable amount based on the evidence and your common sense.]

[To recover for future [*insert item of mental or emotional distress], [name of plaintiff] must prove that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] is reasonably certain to suffer that harm.]

[To recover attorney fees [*name of plaintiff] must prove that because of [name of defendant]'s breach of the obligation of good faith and fair dealing it was reasonably necessary for [him/her/nonbinary pronoun/it] to hire an attorney to recover the policy benefits. [Name of plaintiff] may recover attorney fees [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] incurred to obtain policy benefits but not attorney fees [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] incurred for other purposes.]

New September 2003

Directions for Use

The instructions in this series assume the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

For instructions on damages for pain and suffering, see CACI No. 3905, Items of Noneconomic Damage, and CACI No. 3905A, Physical Pain, Mental Suffering, and Emotional Distress (Noneconomic Damage). For instructions on punitive damages, see other instructions in the Damages series.

Sources and Authority

- "When an insurer's tortious conduct reasonably compels the insured to retain an attorney to obtain the benefits due under a policy, it follows that the insurer should be liable in a tort action for that expense. The attorney's fees are an economic loss—damages—proximately caused by the tort." (Brandt v. Superior Court (1985) 37 Cal.3d 813, 817 [210 Cal.Rptr. 211, 693 P.2d 796].)
- "The fees recoverable . . . may not exceed the amount attributable to the attorney's efforts to obtain the rejected payment due on the insurance contract. Fees attributable to obtaining any portion of the plaintiff's award which exceeds the amount due under the policy are not recoverable. [¶] Since the attorney's fees are recoverable as damages, the determination of the recoverable fees must be made by the trier of fact unless the parties stipulate otherwise." (Brandt, supra, 37 Cal.3d at p. 819.)
- "If . . . the matter is to be presented to the jury, the court should instruct along the following lines: 'If you find (1) that the plaintiff is entitled to recover on his cause of action for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, and (2) that because of such breach it was reasonably necessary for the plaintiff to employ the services of an attorney to collect the benefits due under the policy, then and only then is the plaintiff entitled to an award for attorney's fees incurred to obtain the policy benefits, which award must not include attorney's fees incurred to recover any other portion of the verdict.' " (Brandt, supra, 37 Cal.3d at p. 820.)

Secondary Sources

Croskey et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch. 13-B, Extracontractual Compensatory Damages, ¶¶ 13:120–13:144 (The Rutter Group)

2 California Liability Insurance Practice: Claims & Litigation (Cont.Ed.Bar) General Principles of Contract and Bad Faith Actions, §§ 24.70–24.71

2 California Insurance Law & Practice, Ch. 13, Claims Handling and the Duty of Good Faith, § 13.03[5][c] (Matthew Bender)

2 California Uninsured Motorist Law, Ch. 25, Uninsured Motorist Bad Faith Litigation, §§ 25.40–25.44 (Matthew Bender)

26 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender)

2351. Insurer's Claim for Reimbursement of Costs of Defense of Uncovered Claims

---

[*Name of insurer] claims that it is entitled to partial reimbursement from [name of insured] for the costs that it spent in defending [name of insured] in the lawsuit brought by [name of plaintiff in underlying suit] against [name of insured]. [Name of insurer] may obtain reimbursement only for those defense costs that it proves can be allocated solely to claims that are not even potentially covered by the insurance policy.

I have determined that the following claims in [*name of plaintiff in underlying suit]'s lawsuit were not even potentially covered by the policy: [specify]. You must determine the dollar amount of [name of insurer]'s costs of defense that were attributable only to these claims. Costs for work that also helped the defense of the other claims that were potentially covered should not be included.

New December 2015

Directions for Use

This instruction is for use if the insurer has provided a defense under a reservation of rights to deny indemnity if coverage cannot be established. In such a case, the insurer can seek reimbursement of the cost of defense that can be allocated solely to claims for which there was no possible potential coverage. (Buss v. Superior Court (1997) 16 Cal.4th 35, 57–58 [65 Cal.Rptr.2d 366, 939 P.2d 766].)

If the insurer denies a defense, but the court finds that there is coverage for some but not all claims in the underlying case, it would appear that the insured can recover all costs of defense from the insurer. The insurer is not entitled to apportion the costs of defense (damages) between covered and uncovered claims if it denies a defense. (See Hogan v. Midland Nat'l Ins. Co. (1970) 3 Cal.3d 553, 563–564 [91 Cal.Rptr. 153, 476 P.2d 825].) Therefore, this instruction may not be modified for use in a denial-of-coverage case.

Sources and Authority

- "An insurer may obtain reimbursement only for defense costs that can be allocated solely to the claims that are not even potentially covered. To do that, it must carry the burden of proof as to these costs by a preponderance of the evidence. And to do that, . . . it must accomplish a task that, 'if ever feasible," may be "extremely difficult.' " (Buss, supra, 16 Cal.4th at pp. 57–58, original italics.)
- "Whether [insurer] will be able to carry its burden of proof by a preponderance of the evidence that specific costs can be allocated solely to the causes of action that were not even potentially covered is far from plain. But there is at least a triable issue of material fact that it can. It must be allowed the attempt." (Buss, supra, 16 Cal.4th at p. 61.)

- "By law applied in hindsight, courts can determine that no potential for coverage, and thus no duty to defend, ever existed. If that conclusion is reached, the insurer, having reserved its right, may recover from its insured the costs it expended to provide a defense which, under its contract of insurance, it was never obliged to furnish." (Scottsdale Ins. Co. v. MV Transportation (2005) 36 Cal.4th 643, 658 [31 Cal.Rptr.3d 147, 115 P.3d 460].)
- "The ultimate determination that the loss was caused by a noncovered occurrence does not mean that [third party]'s lawsuit (and [developer]'s cross-complaint) never presented any potential for policy coverage. If that were so, a determination an insurer has no duty to indemnify would automatically extinguish the duty to defend retrospectively and give the insurer the right to seek reimbursement from the insured. That result is inconsistent with the firmly established principle that the duty to defend is broader than the duty to indemnify." (Navigators Specialty Ins. Co. v. Moorefield Construction, Inc. (2016) 6 Cal.App.5th 1258, 1285 [212 Cal.Rptr.3d 231], original italics.)
- " 'Under the policy, the insurer does not have a duty to defend the insured as to the claims that are not even potentially covered. With regard to defense costs for these claims, the insurer has not been paid premiums by the insured. It did not bargain to bear these costs. . . . The "enrichment" of the insured by the insurer through the insurer's bearing of unbargained-for defense costs is inconsistent with the insurer's freedom under the policy and therefore must be deemed 'unjust.' " If [insurer], after providing an entire defense, can prove that a claim was 'not even potentially covered because it did not even possibly embrace any triggering harm of the specified sort within its policy period or periods caused by an included occurrence,' it should have that opportunity. This task ' "if ever feasible," may be "extremely difficult." ' " (State v. Pac. Indem. Co. (1998) 63 Cal.App.4th 1535, 1550 [75 Cal.Rptr.2d 69], internal citations omitted.)
- "The cases which have considered apportionment of attorneys' fees upon the wrongful refusal of an insurer to defend an action against its insured generally have held that the insurer is liable for the total amount of the fees despite the fact that some of the damages recovered in the action against the insured were outside the coverage of the policy." (Hogan, supra, 3 Cal.3d at p. 564.)
- "The insurer, not the insured, has the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that 'the settlement payments were allocable to claims not actually covered, and the defense costs were allocable to claims not even potentially covered.' " (Navigators Specialty Ins. Co, supra, 6 Cal.App.5th at p. 1287.)

Secondary Sources

2 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Insurance, § 381

2 California Insurance Law and Practice, Ch. 13, Claims Handling and the Duty of Good Faith, § 13.08 (Matthew Bender)

26 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance, § 308.123

(Matthew Bender)

12 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 120, Insurance, § 120.51 (Matthew Bender)

2352–2359. Reserved for Future Use

2360. Judgment Creditor's Action Against Insurer—Essential Factual Elements

---

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] must pay [all or part of] a judgment against [name of insured]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] brought a lawsuit for [personal injury/ wrongful death/property damage] against [name of insured] and a judgment was entered against [name of insured];
2. That [all or part of] [name of insured]'s liability under the judgment is covered by an insurance policy with [name of defendant]; and
3. The amount of the judgment [covered by the policy].

New September 2003

Directions for Use

The instructions in this series assume the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

This instruction is intended for a judgment creditor's action against an insurer to collect on an insurance policy pursuant to Insurance Code section 11580(b)(2). This instruction should be used only where there are factual issues on any of the above elements. This instruction may need to be augmented with instructions on specific factual findings.

Note that Insurance Code section 11580 requires that the policy be "issued or delivered to [a] person in this state." This issue should be added as an element if it is disputed in the case.

Sources and Authority

- Judgment Creditor's Action Against Insurer. Insurance Code section 11580(b)(2).
- "A direct action under section 11580 is a contractual action on the policy to satisfy a judgment up to policy limits." (Wright v. Fireman's Fund Insurance Co. (1992) 11 Cal.App.4th 998, 1015 [14 Cal.Rptr.2d 588].)
- "[I]t is not necessary for property damage to be caused by a vehicle or draught animal in order to bring a direct action against an insurer under section 11580." (People ex rel. City of Willits v. Certain Underwriters at Lloyd's of London (2002) 97 Cal.App.4th 1125, 1131–1132].)
- "Because the insurer's duties flow to its insured alone, a third party claimant may not bring a direct action against an insurance company. As a general rule, a third party may directly sue an insurer only when there has been an assignment of rights by, or a final judgment against, the insured." (Shaolian v. Safeco Insurance Co. (1999) 71 Cal.App.4th 268, 271 [83 Cal.Rptr.2d 702], internal citations omitted.)

- "Under section 11580 a third party claimant bringing a direct action against an insurer should . . . prove 1) it obtained a judgment for bodily injury, death, or property damage, 2) the judgment was against a person insured under a policy that insures against [the] loss or damage . . . , 3) the liability insurance policy was issued by the defendant insurer, 4) the policy covers the relief awarded in the judgment, 5) the policy either contains a clause that authorizes the claimant to bring an action directly against the insurer or the policy was issued or delivered in California and insures against [the] loss or damage . . . ." (Wright, supra, 11 Cal.App.4th at p. 1015.)
- "Under Insurance Code section 11580, a third party creditor bringing a direct action against an insurer to recover the proceeds of an insurance policy must plead and prove not only that it obtained a judgment for bodily injury, but that 'the judgment was against a person insured under a policy . . .' and 'the policy covers the relief awarded in the judgment . . . .' " (Miller v. American Home Assurance Co. (1996) 47 Cal.App.4th 844, 847–848 [54 Cal.Rptr.2d 765], original italics, internal citation omitted.)
- "[Insurance Code Section 11580(b)(2)] and the standard policy language permit an action against an insurer only when the underlying judgment is final and 'final,' for this purpose, means an appeal from the underlying judgment has been concluded or the time within which to appeal has passed." (McKee v. National Union Fire Insurance Co. of Pittsburgh, PA. (1993) 15 Cal.App.4th 282, 285 [19 Cal.Rptr.2d 286].)
- "[W]here the insurer may be subject to a direct action under Insurance Code section 11580 by a judgment creditor who has or will obtain a default judgment in a third party action against the insured, intervention is appropriate. . . . Where an insurer has failed to intervene in the underlying action or to move to set aside the default judgment, the insurer is bound by the default judgment." (Reliance Insurance Co. v. Superior Court (2000) 84 Cal.App.4th 383, 386–387 [100 Cal.Rptr.2d 807], internal citations omitted.)
- "The [standard] 'no action' clause gives the insurer the right to control the defense of the claim—to decide whether to settle or to adjudicate the claim on its merits. When the insurer provides a defense to its insured, the insured has no right to interfere with the insurer's control of the defense, and a stipulated judgment between the insured and the injured claimant, without the consent of the insurer, is ineffective to impose liability upon the insurer." (Safeco Ins. Co. of Am. v. Superior Court (1999) 71 Cal.App.4th 782, 787 [84 Cal.Rptr.2d 43], internal citations omitted.)
- A standard "no action" clause in an indemnity insurance policy "provides that [the insurer] may be sued directly if the amount of the insured's obligation to pay was finally determined either by judgment against the insured after actual trial or by 'written agreement of the insured, the claimant and the company.' " (Rose v. Royal Insurance Co. of America (1991) 2 Cal.App.4th 709, 716–717 [3 Cal.Rptr.2d 483].)

- "[A] trial does not have to be adversarial to be considered an 'actual trial' under the 'no action' clause, or to be considered binding against the insurer in a section 11580 proceeding. . . . [W]e conclude that the term 'actual trial' in the standard 'no action' clause has two components: (1) an independent adjudication of facts based on an evidentiary showing; and (2) a process that does not create the potential for abuse, fraud or collusion." (National Union Fire Insurance Co. v. Lynette C. (1994) 27 Cal.App.4th 1434, 1449 [33 Cal.Rptr.2d 496].)
- "A defending insurer cannot be bound by a settlement made without its participation and without any actual commitment on its insured's part to pay the judgment, even where the settlement has been found to be in good faith for purposes of [Code of Civil Procedure] section 877.6." (Hamilton v. Maryland Casualty Co. (2002) 27 Cal.4th 718, 730 [117 Cal.Rptr.2d 318, 41 P.3d 128].)
- "[W]hen . . . a liability insurer wrongfully denies coverage or refuses to provide a defense, then the insured is free to negotiate the best possible settlement consistent with his or her interests, including a stipulated judgment accompanied by a covenant not to execute. Such a settlement will raise an evidentiary presumption in favor of the insured (or the insured's assignee) with respect to the existence and amount of the insured's liability. The effect of such presumption is to shift the burden of proof to the insurer to prove that the settlement was unreasonable or the product of fraud or collusion. If the insurer is unable to meet that burden of proof then the stipulated judgment will be binding on the insurer and the policy provision proscribing a direct action against an insurer except upon a judgment against the insured after an 'actual trial' will not bar enforcement of the judgment." (Pruyn v. Agricultural Insurance Co. (1995) 36 Cal.App.4th 500, 509 [42 Cal.Rptr.2d 295].)

Secondary Sources

Croskey et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch. 15-K, Judgment Creditor's Action to Enforce Judgment Debtor's Liability Insurance, ¶¶ 15:1028–15:1077, 15:1123–15:1136 (The Rutter Group)

2 California Liability Insurance Practice: Claims & Litigation (Cont.Ed.Bar) Claimant's Direct Action for Recovery of Judgment, §§ 27.1–27.7, 27.17–27.27

4 California Insurance Law & Practice, Ch. 41, Liability Insurance in General, §§ 41.60–41.63 (Matthew Bender)

26 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender)

12 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 120, Insurance, §§ 120.186, 120.198, 120.206 (Matthew Bender)

2361. Negligent Failure to Obtain Insurance Coverage—Essential Factual Elements

---

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] was harmed by [name of defendant]'s negligent failure to obtain insurance requested by [him/her/nonbinary pronoun/it]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] requested [name of defendant] to obtain [describe requested insurance] and [name of defendant] promised to obtain that insurance for [him/her/nonbinary pronoun/it];
2. That [name of defendant] was negligent in failing to obtain the promised insurance;
3. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
4. That [name of defendant]'s negligence was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

The instructions in this series assume the plaintiff is the insured and the defendant is the insurer. The party designations may be changed if appropriate to the facts of the case.

For general tort instructions, including the definition of "substantial factor," see the Negligence series (CACI No. 400 et seq.).

Sources and Authority

- "California recognizes the general rule that an agent or broker who intentionally or negligently fails to procure insurance as requested by a client—either an insured or an applicant for insurance—will be liable to the client in tort for the resulting damages." (AMCO Ins. Co. v. All Solutions Ins. Agency, LLC (2016) 244 Cal.App.4th 883, 890 [198 Cal.Rptr.3d 687].)
- "A 'failure to deliver the agreed-upon coverage' case is actionable . . . . An insurance agent has an 'obligation to use reasonable care, diligence, and judgment in procuring insurance requested by an insured.' A broker's failure to obtain the type of insurance requested by an insured may constitute actionable negligence and the proximate cause of injury." (Desai v. Farmers Insurance Exchange (1996) 47 Cal.App.4th 1110, 1119–1120 [55 Cal.Rptr.2d 276], internal citations omitted.)
- "Absent some notice or warning, an insured should be able to rely on an agent's representations of coverage without independently verifying the accuracy of those representations by examining the relevant policy provisions." (Clement v.

Smith (1993) 16 Cal.App.4th 39, 45 [19 Cal.Rptr.2d 676].)

- "[W]hile an insurance agent who promises to procure insurance will indeed be liable for his negligent failure to do so, it does not follow that he can avoid liability for foreseeable harm caused by his silence or inaction merely because he has not expressly promised to assume responsibility." (Westrick v. State Farm Insurance (1982) 137 Cal.App.3d 685, 691 [187 Cal.Rptr. 214], internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

Croskey et al., California Practice Guide: Insurance Litigation, Ch. 2-A, Agents and Brokers, ¶¶ 2:50–2:64.2, 11:246–11:249 (The Rutter Group)

2 California Liability Insurance Practice: Claims & Litigation (Cont.Ed.Bar) Actions Against Agents and Brokers, §§ 29.7–29.8

5 California Insurance Law & Practice, Ch. 61, Operating Requirements of Agents and Brokers, § 61.04[3][a] (Matthew Bender)

12 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 120, Insurance, § 120.402 (Matthew Bender)

2362–2399. Reserved for Future Use

VF-2300. Breach of Contractual Duty to Pay a Covered Claim

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of plaintiff] suffer a loss, [all or part of] which was covered under an insurance policy with [name of defendant]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Was [name of defendant] notified of the loss [as required by the policy]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. What is the amount of the covered loss that [name of defendant] failed to pay [name of plaintiff]? $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised December 2010, May 2024

Directions for Use

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2300, Breach of Contractual Duty to Pay a Covered Claim—Essential Factual Elements.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

VF-2301. Breach of the Implied Obligation of Good Faith and Fair Dealing—Failure or Delay in Payment

---

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of plaintiff] suffer a loss covered under an insurance policy with [name of defendant]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Was [name of defendant] notified of the loss?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of defendant] [fail to pay/delay payment of] policy benefits?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was [name of defendant]'s [failure to pay/delay in payment of] policy benefits, unreasonable or without proper cause?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Was [name of defendant]'s [failure to pay/delay in payment of] policy benefits a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

   [a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2007, April 2008, December 2010, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2331, Breach of the Implied Obligation of Good Faith and Fair Dealing—Failure or Delay in Payment (First Party)—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 6 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If punitive damages are claimed, combine this form with the appropriate verdict form numbering from VF-3900 to VF-3904.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2302. Reserved for Future Use

VF-2303. Bad Faith (First Party)—Breach of Duty to Inform Insured of Rights

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of plaintiff] suffer a loss covered under an insurance policy with [name of defendant]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of defendant] [deny coverage for/refuse to pay] [name of plaintiff]'s loss?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of plaintiff] have the [right/obligation] to [describe right or obligation at issue; e.g., "to request arbitration within 180 days"] under the policy?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did [name of defendant] fail to reasonably inform [name of plaintiff] of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] [right/obligation] to [describe right or obligation]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Was [name of defendant]'s failure to reasonably inform [name of plaintiff] a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2333, Bad Faith (First Party)—Breach of Duty to Inform Insured of Rights—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 6 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2304. Bad Faith (Third Party)—Refusal to Accept Reasonable Settlement Demand Within Liability Policy Limits

---

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of plaintiff] insured under a policy of liability insurance issued by [name of defendant]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of claimant] make a claim against [name of plaintiff] that was covered by [name of defendant]'s insurance policy?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of claimant] make a reasonable settlement demand to settle [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] claim against [name of plaintiff] for an amount within policy limits?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did [name of defendant] fail to accept this settlement demand?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Was [name of defendant]'s failure to accept the settlement demand the result of unreasonable conduct by [name of defendant]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. [Was a judgment entered against [name of plaintiff] for a sum of money greater than the policy limits?]

[or]

[Was [name of defendant]'s failure to accept the settlement demand a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?]

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Amount of judgment entered against [name of plaintiff]

$_____]

[b. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[d. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[e. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New May 2022; Revised May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2334, Bad Faith (Third Party)—Refusal to Accept Reasonable Settlement Demand Within Liability Policy Limits—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

Question 6 should be tailored to the facts of the case as presented in element 6 of CACI No. 2334.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 7 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2305–VF-2399. Reserved for Future Use

WRONGFUL TERMINATION

2400. Breach of Employment Contract—Unspecified Term—"At-Will" Presumption

---

An employment relationship may be ended by either the employer or the employee, at any time, for any [lawful] reason, or for no reason at all. This is called "at-will employment."

An employment relationship is not "at will" if the employee proves that the parties, by words or conduct, agreed that [*specify the nature of the alleged agreement, e.g., the employee would be discharged only for good cause].

New September 2003; Revised June 2006, November 2018

Directions for Use

If the plaintiff has made no claim other than the contract claim, then the word "lawful" may be omitted. If the plaintiff has made a claim for wrongful termination or violation of the Fair Employment and Housing Act, then the word "lawful" should be included in order to avoid confusing the jury.

Sources and Authority

- At-Will Employment. Labor Code section 2922.
- Contract of Employment. Labor Code section 2750.
- "Labor Code section 2922 has been recognized as creating a presumption. The statute creates a presumption of at-will employment which may be overcome 'by evidence that despite the absence of a specified term, the parties agreed that the employer's power to terminate would be limited in some way, e.g., by a requirement that termination be based only on "good cause." ' " (Haycock v. Hughes Aircraft Co. (1994) 22 Cal.App.4th 1473, 1488 [28 Cal.Rptr.2d 248], internal citations omitted.)
- "Where there is no express agreement, the issue is whether other evidence of the parties' conduct has a 'tendency in reason' to demonstrate the existence of an actual mutual understanding on particular terms and conditions of employment. If such evidence logically permits conflicting inferences, a question of fact is presented. But where the undisputed facts negate the existence or the breach of the contract claimed, summary judgment is proper." (Guz v. Bechtel National, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal.4th 317, 337 [100 Cal.Rptr.2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089], internal citations omitted.)
- "Because the presumption of at-will employment is premised upon public policy considerations, it is one affecting the burden of proof. Therefore, even if no substantial evidence was presented by defendants that plaintiff's employment was at-will, the presumption of Labor Code section 2922 required the issue to be submitted to the jury." (Alexander v. Nextel Communications, Inc. (1997) 52

Cal.App.4th 1376, 1381–1382 [61 Cal.Rptr.2d 293], internal citations omitted.)

- "The presumption that an employment relationship of indefinite duration is intended to be terminable at will is therefore 'subject, like any presumption, to contrary evidence. This may take the form of an agreement, express or implied, that . . . the employment relationship will continue indefinitely, pending the occurrence of some event such as the employer's dissatisfaction with the employee's services or the existence of some "cause" for termination.' " (Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal.3d 654, 680 [254 Cal.Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373], internal citation omitted.)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, § 244

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch.4-A, Employment Presumed At Will, ¶¶ 4:2–4:4 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch.4-B, Agreements Limiting At-Will Termination, ¶ 4:65 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Contract Actions, §§ 8.4–8.14

4 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 60, Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline, §§ 60.01–60.02 (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, §§ 249.10, 249.11, 249.13, 249.21, 249.43[1], [8] (Matthew Bender)

10 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 100, Wrongful Termination and Discipline, §§ 100.20–100.23 (Matthew Bender)

2401. Breach of Employment Contract—Unspecified Term—Actual or Constructive Discharge—Essential Factual Elements

---

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] breached their employment contract [by forcing [name of plaintiff] to resign]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] and [name of defendant] entered into an employment relationship. [An employment contract or a provision in an employment contract may be [written or oral/partly written and partly oral/created by the conduct of the parties]];
2. That [name of defendant] promised, by words or conduct, to discharge [name of plaintiff] [specify the nature of the alleged agreement, e.g., only for good cause];
3. That [name of plaintiff] substantially performed [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] job duties [unless [name of plaintiff]'s performance was excused [or prevented]];
4. That [name of defendant] [constructively] discharged [name of plaintiff] [e.g., without good cause];
5. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
6. That [name of defendant]'s breach of contract was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003; Revised November 2018

Directions for Use

Element 3 on substantial performance should not be confused with the "good cause" defense: "The action is primarily for breach of contract. It was therefore incumbent upon plaintiff to prove that he was able and offered to fulfill all obligations imposed upon him by the contract. Plaintiff failed to meet this requirement; by voluntarily withdrawing from the contract he excused further performance by defendant." (Kane v. Sklar (1954) 122 Cal.App.2d 480, 482 [265 P.2d 29], internal citation omitted.) Element 3 may be deleted if substantial performance is not a disputed issue.

An employee may be "constructively" discharged if the employer intentionally created or knowingly permitted working conditions to exist that were so intolerable that a reasonable person would have had no reasonable alternative except to resign. (Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal.4th 1238, 1251 [32 Cal.Rptr.2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022].) If constructive rather than actual discharge is alleged, include "by forcing [name of plaintiff] to resign" in the introductory paragraph and "constructively" in element 4. Then also give CACI No. 2510, "Constructive Discharge" Explained.

Elements 2 and 4 may be modified for adverse employment actions other than discharge, for example demotion. The California Supreme Court has extended the implied contract theory to encompass adverse employment actions that violate the terms of an implied contract. (See Scott v. Pac. Gas & Elec. Co. (1995) 11 Cal.4th 454, 473-474 [46 Cal.Rptr.2d 427, 904 P.2d 834].) See CACI No. 2509, "Adverse Employment Action" Explained.

For an instruction on damages, give CACI No. 3903P, Damages From Employer for Wrongful Discharge (Economic Damage). See also CACI No. 304, Oral or Written Contract Terms, and CACI No. 305, Implied-in-Fact Contract.

Sources and Authority

- At-Will Employment. Labor Code section 2922.
- Contractual Conditions Precedent. Civil Code section 1439.
- "Where there is no express agreement, the issue is whether other evidence of the parties' conduct has a 'tendency in reason' to demonstrate the existence of an actual mutual understanding on particular terms and conditions of employment. If such evidence logically permits conflicting inferences, a question of fact is presented. But where the undisputed facts negate the existence or the breach of the contract claimed, summary judgment is proper." (Guz v. Bechtel National, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal.4th 317, 337 [100 Cal.Rptr.2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089], internal citations omitted.)
- The employee bears the ultimate burden of proving that he or she was wrongfully terminated. (Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc. (Pugh I) (1981) 116 Cal.App.3d 311, 330 [171 Cal.Rptr. 917].)
- "The presumption that an employment relationship of indefinite duration is intended to be terminable at will is therefore 'subject, like any presumption, to contrary evidence. This may take the form of an agreement, express or implied, that . . . the employment relationship will continue indefinitely, pending the occurrence of some event such as the employer's dissatisfaction with the employee's services or the existence of some "cause" for termination.' " (Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal.3d 654, 680 [254 Cal.Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373], internal citation omitted.)
- "In Foley, we identified several factors, apart from express terms, that may bear upon 'the existence and content of an . . . [implied-in-fact] agreement' placing limits on the employer's right to discharge an employee. These factors might include ' "the personnel policies or practices of the employer, the employee's longevity of service, actions or communications by the employer reflecting assurances of continued employment, and the practices of the industry in which the employee is engaged." ' " (Guz v. Bechtel National, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal.4th 317, 336–337 [100 Cal.Rptr.2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089], internal citations omitted.)
- "Standing alone, constructive discharge is neither a tort nor a breach of contract, but a doctrine that transforms what is ostensibly a resignation into a firing. Even after establishing constructive discharge, an employee must independently prove a breach of contract or tort in connection with employment termination in order to obtain damages for wrongful discharge." (Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal.4th 1238, 1251 [32 Cal.Rptr.2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022], original italics, internal citation omitted.)

- "Constructive discharge occurs when the employer's conduct effectively forces an employee to resign. Although the employee may say, 'I quit,' the employment relationship is actually severed involuntarily by the employer's acts, against the employee's will. As a result, a constructive discharge is legally regarded as a firing rather than a resignation." (Turner, supra, 7 Cal.4th at pp. 1244–1245, internal citation omitted.)
- "In order to amount to a constructive discharge, adverse working conditions must be unusually 'aggravated' or amount to a 'continuous pattern' before the situation will be deemed intolerable. In general, '[s]ingle, trivial, or isolated acts of [misconduct] are insufficient' to support a constructive discharge claim. Moreover, a poor performance rating or a demotion, even when accompanied by reduction in pay, does not by itself trigger a constructive discharge." (Turner, supra, 7 Cal.4th at p. 1247, internal citation and fns. omitted.)
- "Whether conditions were so intolerable as to justify a reasonable employee's decision to resign is normally a question of fact." (Valdez v. City of Los Angeles (1991) 231 Cal.App.3d 1043, 1056 [282 Cal.Rptr. 726].)
- "In some circumstances, a single intolerable incident, such as a crime of violence against an employee by an employer, or an employer's ultimatum that an employee commit a crime, may constitute a constructive discharge. Such misconduct potentially could be found 'aggravated.' " (Turner, supra, 7 Cal.4th at p. 1247, fn. 3.)
- "Each individual incident need not be sufficient standing alone to force a resignation; rather, the accumulation of discriminatory treatment over time can amount to intolerable working conditions." (Brome v. California Highway Patrol (2020) 44 Cal.App.5th 786, 801–802 [258 Cal.Rptr.3d 83].)
- "[T]he standard by which a constructive discharge is determined is an objective one—the question is 'whether a reasonable person faced with the allegedly intolerable employer actions or conditions of employment would have no reasonable alternative except to quit.' " (Turner, supra, 7 Cal.4th at p. 1248, internal citations omitted.)
- "In order to establish a constructive discharge, an employee must plead and prove, by the usual preponderance of the evidence standard, that the employer either intentionally created or knowingly permitted working conditions that were so intolerable or aggravated at the time of the employee's resignation that a reasonable employer would realize that a reasonable person in the employee's position would be compelled to resign. [¶] For purposes of this standard, the requisite knowledge or intent must exist on the part of either the employer or those persons who effectively represent the employer, i.e., its officers, directors, managing agents, or supervisory employees." (Turner, supra, 7 Cal.4th at p. 1251.)

- "The length of time the plaintiff remained on the job may be one relevant factor in determining the intolerability of employment conditions from the standpoint of a reasonable person. Neither logic nor precedent suggests it should always be dispositive." (Turner, supra, 7 Cal.4th at p. 1254, original italics.)
- " 'Good cause' or 'just cause' for termination connotes ' "a fair and honest cause or reason," ' regulated by the good faith of the employer. The term is relative. Whether good cause exists is dependent upon the particular circumstances of each case. In deciding whether good cause exists, there must be a balance between the employer's interest in operating its business efficiently and profitably and the employee's interest in continued employment. Care must be exercised so as not to interfere with the employer's legitimate exercise of managerial discretion. While the scope of such discretion is substantial, it is not unrestricted. Good cause is not properly found where the asserted reasons for discharge are 'trivial, capricious, unrelated to business needs or goals, or pretextual.' Where there is a contract to terminate only for good cause, the employer has no right to terminate for an arbitrary or unreasonable decision." (Walker v. Blue Cross of California (1992) 4 Cal.App.4th 985, 994 [6 Cal.Rptr.2d 184], internal citations omitted, abrogated on another ground in Guz, supra, 24 Cal.4th at p. 351.)
- "The general rule is that the measure of recovery by a wrongfully discharged employee is the amount of salary agreed upon for the period of service, less the amount which the employer affirmatively proves the employee has earned or with reasonable effort might have earned from other employment." (Parker v. Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp. (1970) 3 Cal.3d 176, 181 [89 Cal.Rptr. 737, 474 P.2d 689], internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch.4-A, Employment Presumed At Will, ¶¶ 4:2, 4:8, 4:15 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation Ch.4-B, Agreements Limiting At-Will Termination, ¶¶ 4:65, 4:81, 4:105 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch.4-C, "Good Cause" for Termination, ¶¶ 4:270–4:273 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Contract Actions, §§ 8.4–8.20B

4 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 60, Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline, §§ 60.05, 60.07 (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, §§ 249.10, 249.15, 249.43, 249.90, Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, § 250.66 (Matthew Bender)

5 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 50, Contracts, §§ 50.10, 50.11 (Matthew Bender)

10 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 100, Employer and Employee: Wrongful Termination and Discipline, §§ 100.21, 100.22, 100.28, 100.29, 100.31 (Matthew

Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation §§ 6:9–6:11 (Thomson Reuters)

2402. Reserved for Future Use

2403. Breach of Employment Contract—Unspecified Term—Implied-in-Fact Promise Not to Discharge Without Good Cause

---

An employer promises to [discharge/demote] an employee only for good cause if it is reasonable for an employee to conclude, from the employer's words or conduct, that the employee will be [discharged/demoted] only for good cause.

In deciding whether [*name of defendant] promised to [discharge/demote] [name of plaintiff] only for good cause, you may consider, among other factors, the following:

(a) [*Name of defendant]'s personnel policies [and/or] practices;

(b) [*Name of plaintiff]'s length of service;

(c) Any raises, commendations, positive evaluations, and promotions received by [*name of plaintiff]; [and]

(d) Whether [*name of defendant] said or did anything to assure [name of plaintiff] of continued employment; [and]

(e) [*Insert other relevant factor(s).]

Length of service, raises, and promotions by themselves are not enough to imply such a promise, although they are factors for you to consider.

New September 2003; Revised April 2009, June 2013, May 2020

Directions for Use

This instruction should be read when an employee is basing the claim of wrongful discharge on an implied covenant not to terminate except for good cause. Only those factors that apply to the facts of the particular case should be read.

In certain cases, it may be necessary to instruct the jury that if it finds there is an at-will provision in an express written agreement, there may not be an implied agreement to the contrary. (See Faigin v. Signature Group Holdings, Inc. (2012) 211 Cal.App.4th 726, 739 [150 Cal.Rptr.3d 123] [there cannot be a valid express contract and an implied contract, each embracing the same subject, but requiring different results].)

Sources and Authority

- Express and Implied Contracts. Civil Code sections 1619–1621.
- "Labor Code section 2922 establishes a statutory presumption of at-will employment. However, an employer and an employee are free to depart from the statutory presumption and specify that the employee will be terminated only for good cause, either by an express, or an implied, contractual agreement."

(Stillwell v. The Salvation Army (2008) 167 Cal.App.4th 360, 380 [84 Cal.Rptr.3d 111], internal citations omitted.)

- "[M]ost cases applying California law . . . have held that an at-will provision in an express written agreement, signed by the employee, cannot be overcome by proof of an implied contrary understanding." (Guz v. Bechtel National, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal.4th 317, 340 fn. 10 [100 Cal.Rptr.2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089], original italics.)
- "Where there is no express agreement, the issue is whether other evidence of the parties' conduct has a 'tendency in reason' to demonstrate the existence of an actual mutual understanding on particular terms and conditions of employment. If such evidence logically permits conflicting inferences, a question of fact is presented." (Guz, supra, 24 Cal.4th at p. 337, internal citations omitted.)
- "The question whether such an implied-in-fact agreement [to termination only for cause] exists is a factual question for the trier of fact unless the undisputed facts can support only one reasonable conclusion." (Faigin, supra, 211 Cal.App.4th at p. 739.)
- "In the employment context, factors apart from consideration and express terms may be used to ascertain the existence and content of an employment agreement, including 'the personnel policies or practices of the employer, the employee's longevity of service, actions or communications by the employer reflecting assurances of continued employment, and the practices of the industry in which the employee is engaged.' " (Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal.3d 654, 680 [254 Cal.Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373], internal citation omitted.)
- "[A]n employee's mere passage of time in the employer's service, even where marked with tangible indicia that the employer approves the employee's work, cannot alone form an implied-in-fact contract that the employee is no longer at will. Absent other evidence of the employer's intent, longevity, raises and promotions are their own rewards for the employee's continuing valued service; they do not, in and of themselves, additionally constitute a contractual guarantee of future employment security." (Guz v. Bechtel National, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal.4th 317, 341–342 [100 Cal.Rptr.2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089], original italics.)
- "We agree that disclaimer language in an employee handbook or policy manual does not necessarily mean an employee is employed at will. But even if a handbook disclaimer is not controlling in every case, neither can such a provision be ignored in determining whether the parties' conduct was intended, and reasonably understood, to create binding limits on an employer's statutory right to terminate the relationship at will. Like any direct expression of employer intent, communicated to employees and intended to apply to them, such language must be taken into account, along with all other pertinent evidence, in ascertaining the terms on which a worker was employed." (Guz, supra, 24 Cal.4th at p. 340, internal citations omitted.)
- "Conceptually, there is no rational reason why an employer's policy that its employees will not be demoted except for good cause, like a policy restricting termination or providing for severance pay, cannot become an implied term of an employment contract. In each of these instances, an employer promises to confer a significant benefit on the employee, and it is a question of fact whether that promise was reasonably understood by the employee to create a contractual obligation." (Scott v. Pac. Gas & Elec. Co. (1995) 11 Cal.4th 454, 464 [46 Cal.Rptr.2d 427, 904 P.2d 834].)

- "[Employer] retained the right to terminate [employee] for any lawful reason. Thus, . . . the fact that [employer] was obligated to pay compensation if it terminated [employee] for reasons other than his misconduct did not convert an otherwise at-will agreement into a for-cause agreement." (Popescu v. Apple Inc. (2016) 1 Cal.App.5th 39, 59 [204 Cal.Rptr.3d 302].)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, §§ 246, 250, 251

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 4-B, Agreements Limiting At-Will Termination, ¶¶ 4:81, 4:105, 4:112 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Contract Actions, §§ 8.6–8.16

4 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 60, Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline, § 60.05[2][a]–[e] (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, §§ 249.01, 249.13, 249.15, 249.50 (Matthew Bender)

10 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 100, Employer and Employee: Wrongful Termination and Discipline, §§ 100.21, 100.22, 100.25–100.27, 100.29, 100.34 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation §§ 6:14–6:16 (Thomson Reuters)

2404. Breach of Employment Contract—Unspecified Term—"Good Cause" Defined

Good cause exists when an employer's decision to discharge an employee is made in good faith and based on a fair and honest reason. An employer has substantial but not unlimited discretion regarding personnel decisions[, particularly with respect to an employee in a sensitive or confidential managerial position]. However, good cause does not exist if the employer's reasons for the discharge are trivial, arbitrary, inconsistent with usual practices, or unrelated to business needs or goals, or if the stated reasons conceal the employer's true reasons.

In deciding whether [*name of defendant] had good cause to discharge [name of plaintiff], you must balance [name of defendant]'s interest in operating the business efficiently and profitably against the interest of [name of plaintiff] in maintaining employment.

New September 2003; Revised November 2018

Directions for Use

This instruction may not be appropriate in the context of an implied employment contract where the parties have agreed to a particular meaning of "good cause" (e.g., a written employment agreement specifically defining "good cause" for discharge). If so, the instruction should be modified accordingly.

Include the bracketed language in the opening paragraph if the defense alleges that the plaintiff was in a sensitive or confidential managerial position.

When the reason given for the discharge is misconduct, and there is a factual dispute whether the misconduct occurred, then the court should give CACI No. 2405, Breach of Implied Employment Contract—Unspecified Term—"Good Cause" Defined—Misconduct, instead of this instruction. (See Cotran v. Rollins Hudig Hall International, Inc. (1998) 17 Cal.4th 93, 107 [69 Cal.Rptr.2d 900, 948 P.2d 412].)

Sources and Authority

- "Three factual determinations are relevant to the question of employer liability: (1) did the employer act with good faith in making the decision to terminate; (2) did the decision follow an investigation that was appropriate under the circumstances; and (3) did the employer have reasonable grounds for believing the employee had engaged in the misconduct." (Jameson v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (2017) 16 Cal.App.5th 901, 910 [225 Cal.Rptr.3d 171].)
- " 'Good cause' in the context of implied employment contracts is defined as: 'fair and honest reasons, regulated by good faith on the part of the employer, that are not trivial, arbitrary or capricious, unrelated to business needs or goals, or pretextual.' " (Serri v. Santa Clara University (2014) 226 Cal.App.4th 830, 872 [172 Cal.Rptr.3d 732], internal citations omitted.)

- "It is the employer's honest belief in the stated reasons for firing an employee and not the objective truth or falsity of the underlying facts that is at issue . . . ." (Jameson, supra, 16 Cal.App.5th at p. 911.)
- "The term is relative. Whether good cause exists is dependent upon the particular circumstances of each case. In deciding whether good cause exists, there must be a balance between the employer's interest in operating its business efficiently and profitably and the employee's interest in continued employment. Care must be exercised so as not to interfere with the employer's legitimate exercise of managerial discretion. . . . Where there is a contract to terminate only for good cause, the employer has no right to terminate for an arbitrary or unreasonable decision." (Walker v. Blue Cross of California (1992) 4 Cal.App.4th 985, 994 [6 Cal.Rptr.2d 184], internal citations omitted, abrogated on another ground in Guz v. Bechtel National, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal.4th 317, 351 [100 Cal.Rptr.2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089].)
- " 'Cotran did not delineate the earmarks of an appropriate investigation but noted that investigative fairness contemplates listening to both sides and providing employees a fair opportunity to present their position and to correct or contradict relevant statements prejudicial to their case, without the procedural formalities of a trial.' [Citation] [¶] . . . Although the elements of the Cotran standard are triable to the jury, 'if the facts are undisputed or admit of only one conclusion, then summary judgment may be entered . . . .' " (Jameson, supra, 16 Cal.App.5th at p. 910.)
- "[W]here, as here, the employee occupies a sensitive managerial or confidential position, the employer must of necessity be allowed substantial scope for the exercise of subjective judgment." (Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc. (Pugh I) (1981) 116 Cal.App.3d 311, 330 [171 Cal.Rptr. 917], disapproved on other grounds in Guz, supra, 24 Cal.4th at pp. 350–351.)
- "[G]ood cause" in [the context of wrongful termination based on an implied contract] "is quite different from the standard applicable in determining the propriety of an employee's termination under a contract for a specified term." (Pugh, supra, 116 Cal.App.3d at p. 330.)
- "We have held that appellant has demonstrated a prima facie case of wrongful termination in violation of his contract of employment. The burden of coming forward with evidence as to the reason for appellant's termination now shifts to the employer. Appellant may attack the employer's offered explanation, either on the ground that it is pretextual (and that the real reason is one prohibited by contract or public policy, or on the ground that it is insufficient to meet the employer's obligations under contract or applicable legal principles. Appellant bears, however, the ultimate burden of proving that he was terminated wrongfully." (Pugh, supra, 116 Cal.App.3d at pp. 329–330, internal citation omitted.)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, §§ 219–221, 244

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch.4-C, "Good Cause" for Termination, ¶¶ 4:270–4:273, 4:300 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Contract Actions, §§ 8.22–8.25

4 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 60, Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline, § 60.09[2] (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, §§ 249.21[14][c], 249.63 (Matthew Bender)

10 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 100, Employer and Employee: Wrongful Termination and Discipline, §§ 100.22, 100.27, 100.29, 100.34 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation, § 6:19 (Thomson Reuters)

2405. Breach of Implied Employment Contract—Unspecified Term—"Good Cause" Defined—Misconduct

---

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] did not have good cause to [discharge/demote] [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] for misconduct. [Name of defendant] had good cause to [discharge/demote] [name of plaintiff] for misconduct if [name of defendant], acting in good faith, conducted an appropriate investigation giving [him/her/nonbinary pronoun/it] reasonable grounds to believe that [name of plaintiff] engaged in misconduct.

An appropriate investigation is one that is reasonable under the circumstances and includes notice to the employee of the claimed misconduct and an opportunity for the employee to answer the charge of misconduct before the decision to [discharge/demote] is made. You may find that [*name of defendant] had good cause to [discharge/demote] [name of plaintiff] without deciding if [name of plaintiff] actually engaged in misconduct.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

This instruction should be given when there is a dispute as to whether misconduct, in fact, occurred. (Cotran v. Rollins Hudig Hall International, Inc. (1998) 17 Cal.4th 93 [69 Cal.Rptr.2d 900, 948 P.2d 412].)

Sources and Authority

- "The proper inquiry for the jury . . . is not, 'Did the employee in fact commit the act leading to dismissal?' It is 'Was the factual basis on which the employer concluded a dischargeable act had been committed reached honestly, after an appropriate investigation and for reasons that are not arbitrary or pretextual?' The jury conducts a factual inquiry in both cases, but the questions are not the same. In the first, the jury decides the ultimate truth of the employee's alleged misconduct. In the second, it focuses on the employer's response to allegations of misconduct." (Cotran, supra, 17 Cal.4th at p. 107.)
- " 'Good cause' in the context of implied employment contracts is defined as: 'fair and honest' reasons, regulated by good faith on the part of the employer, that are not trivial, arbitrary or capricious, unrelated to business needs or goals, or pretextual. A reasoned conclusion, in short, supported by substantial evidence gathered through an adequate investigation that includes notice of the claimed misconduct and a chance for the employee to respond.' 'Three factual determinations are relevant to the question of employer liability: (1) did the employer act with good faith in making the decision to terminate; (2) did the decision follow an investigation that was appropriate under the circumstances; and (3) did the employer have reasonable grounds for believing the employee had engaged in the misconduct.' 'Cotran did not delineate the earmarks of an appropriate investigation but noted that investigative fairness contemplates listening to both sides and providing employees a fair opportunity to present their position and to correct or contradict relevant statements prejudicial to their case, without the procedural formalities of a trial.' " (Serri v. Santa Clara University (2014) 226 Cal.App.4th 830, 872–873 [172 Cal.Rptr.3d 732], internal citations omitted.)

- "We have held that appellant has demonstrated a prima facie case of wrongful termination in violation of his contract of employment. The burden of coming forward with evidence as to the reason for appellant's termination now shifts to the employer. Appellant may attack the employer's offered explanation, either on the ground that it is pretextual and that the real reason is one prohibited by contract or public policy, or on the ground that it is insufficient to meet the employer's obligations under contract or applicable legal principles. Appellant bears, however, the ultimate burden of proving that he was terminated wrongfully." (Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc. (1981) 116 Cal.App.3d 311, 329–330 [171 Cal.Rptr. 917], disapproved on other grounds in Guz v. Bechtel National Inc. (2000) 24 Cal.4th 317, 350–351 [100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089], internal citation omitted.)
- "[Plaintiff] contends that it was up to a jury to decide whether the [defendant] 'honestly and objectively reasonably' believed that her conduct was egregious enough to be 'gross misconduct' and that the court therefore erred in granting summary adjudication of her fourth cause of action for breach of contract. Although the elements of the Cotran standard are triable to the jury, 'if the facts are undisputed or admit of only one conclusion, then summary judgment may be entered . . . .' " (Serri, supra, 226 Cal.App.4th at p. 873.)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, §§ 219, 220, 221

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch.4-C, "Good Cause" for Termination, ¶¶ 4:270–4:271, 4:289 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Contract Actions, §§ 8.22–8.26

4 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 60, Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline, § 60.09[5][b] (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, §§ 249.21, 249.43 (Matthew Bender)

10 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 100, Employer and Employee: Wrongful Termination and Discipline, §§ 100.25, 100.29 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation, § 6:19 (Thomson Reuters)

2406. Breach of Employment Contract—Unspecified Term—Damages

If you find that [*name of defendant] [discharged/demoted] [name of plaintiff] in breach of an employment contract, then you must decide the amount of damages, if any, that [name of plaintiff] has proved [he/she/ *nonbinary pronoun] is entitled to recover. To make that decision, you must:

1. Decide the amount that [name of plaintiff] would have earned from [name of defendant] up to today, including any benefits and pay increases; [and]
2. Add the present cash value of any future wages and benefits that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] would have earned after today for the length of time the employment with [name of defendant] was reasonably certain to continue; [and]
3. [Describe any other contract damages that were allegedly caused by defendant's conduct.]

In determining the period that [*name of plaintiff]'s employment was reasonably certain to have continued, you should consider, among other factors, the following:

(a) [*Name of plaintiff]'s age, work performance, and intent regarding continuing employment with [name of defendant];

(b) [*Name of defendant]'s prospects for continuing the operations involving [name of plaintiff]; and

(c) Any other factor that bears on how long [*name of plaintiff] would have continued to work.

New September 2003; Revised December 2011

Directions for Use

For an instruction on mitigation, see CACI No. 3963, Affirmative Defense—Employee's Duty to Mitigate Damages. This instruction should be given when plaintiff claims loss of employment from a wrongful discharge or demotion or a breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing. For instructions on present cash value, see CACI No. 3904A, Present Cash Value, and CACI No. 3904B, Use of Present-Value Tables.

Sources and Authority

- Damages for Breach of Contract. Civil Code section 3300.
- "The general rule is that the measure of recovery by a wrongfully discharged employee is the amount of salary agreed upon for the period of service, less the amount which the employer affirmatively proves the employee has earned or with reasonable effort might have earned from other employment. However, before projected earnings from other employment opportunities not sought or accepted by the discharged employee can be applied in mitigation, the employer must show that the other employment was comparable, or substantially similar, to that of which the employee has been deprived; the employee's rejection of or failure to seek other available employment of a different or inferior kind may not be resorted to in order to mitigate damages." (Parker v. Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp. (1970) 3 Cal.3d 176, 181–182 [89 Cal.Rptr. 737, 474 P.2d 689], internal citations omitted.)

- "[I]t is our view that in an action for wrongful discharge, and pursuant to the present day concept of employer-employee relations, the term 'wages' should be deemed to include not only the periodic monetary earnings of the employee but also the other benefits to which he is entitled as a part of his compensation." (Wise v. Southern Pac. Co. (1970) 1 Cal.3d 600, 607 [83 Cal.Rptr. 202, 463 P.2d 426].)
- In determining the period that plaintiff's employment was reasonably certain to have continued, the trial court took into consideration plaintiff's " 'physical condition, his age, his propensity for hard work, his expertise in managing defendants' offices, the profit history of his operation, [and] the foreseeability of the continued future demand for tax return service to small taxpayers . . . .' " (Drzewiecki v. H & R Block, Inc. (1972) 24 Cal.App.3d 695, 705 [101 Cal.Rptr. 169].)
- In cases for wrongful demotion, the measure of damages is "the difference in compensation before and after the demotion." (Scott v. Pac. Gas & Elec. Co. (1995) 11 Cal.4th 454, 468 [46 Cal.Rptr.2d 427, 904 P.2d 834].)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, §§ 284, 285, 286

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 17-B, Contract Damages, ¶¶ 17:81, 17:95, 17:105 (The Rutter Group)

4 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 60, Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline, § 60.08[3] (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, §§ 249.01, 249.17, 249.50 (Matthew Bender)

2407–2419. Reserved for Future Use

2420. Breach of Employment Contract—Specified Term—Essential Factual Elements

---

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] breached an employment contract for a specified term. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] and [name of defendant] entered into an employment contract that specified a length of time that [name of plaintiff] would remain employed;
2. That [name of plaintiff] substantially performed [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] job duties [unless [name of plaintiff]'s performance was excused [or prevented]];
3. That [name of defendant] breached the employment contract by [discharging/demoting] [name of plaintiff] before the end of the term of the contract; and
4. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed by the [discharge/demotion].

New September 2003

Directions for Use

The element of substantial performance should not be confused with the "good cause" defense: "The action is primarily for breach of contract. It was therefore incumbent upon plaintiff to prove that he was able and offered to fulfill all obligations imposed upon him by the contract. Plaintiff failed to meet this requirement; by voluntarily withdrawing from the contract he excused further performance by defendant." (Kane v. Sklar (1954) 122 Cal.App.2d 480, 482 [265 P.2d 29], internal citation omitted.) Element 2 may be deleted if substantial performance is not an issue.

See also CACI No. 304, Oral or Written Contract Terms, and CACI No. 305, Implied-in-Fact Contract.

Sources and Authority

- At-Will Employment. Labor Code section 2922.
- Termination of Employment for Specified Term. Labor Code section 2924.
- Contractual Conditions Precedent. Civil Code section 1439.
- "[L]abor Code section 2924 has traditionally been interpreted to 'inhibit[] the termination of employment for a specified term except in case of a wilful breach of duty, of habitual neglect of, or continued incapacity to perform, a duty.' " (Khajavi v. Feather River Anesthesia Medical Group (2000) 84 Cal.App.4th 32, 57 [100 Cal.Rptr.2d 627], internal citations omitted.)

- "Stated simply, the contract compensation for the unexpired period of the contract affords a prima facie measure of damages; the actual measured damage, however, is the contract amount reduced by compensation received during the unexpired term; if, however, such other compensation has not been received, the contract amount may still be reduced or eliminated by a showing that the employee, by the exercise of reasonable diligence and effort, could have procured comparable employment and thus mitigated the damages." (Erler v. Five Points Motors, Inc. (1967) 249 Cal.App.2d 560, 562 [57 Cal.Rptr. 516].)

Secondary Sources

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 4-A, Employment Presumed at Will, ¶¶ 4:2, 4:47 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Contract Actions, §§ 8.2–8.20

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, § 249.21 (Matthew Bender)

2421. Breach of Employment Contract—Specified Term—Good-Cause Defense (Lab. Code, § 2924)

[*Name of defendant] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] did not breach the employment contract because [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] [discharged/demoted] [name of plaintiff] for good cause. To establish good cause, [name of defendant] must prove:

[that [*name of plaintiff] willfully breached a job duty] [or]

[that [*name of plaintiff] continually neglected [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] job duties] [or]

[that a continued incapacity prevented [*name of plaintiff] from performing [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] job duties.]

New September 2003; Revised June 2012

Directions for Use

This instruction sets forth the statutory grounds under which an employer may terminate an employment contract for a specified term. (See Lab. Code, § 2924.) It should be given when the employee alleges wrongful discharge in breach of the contract and the employer defends by asserting plaintiff was justifiably discharged.

This instruction may not be appropriate if the parties have agreed to a particular meaning of "good cause" (e.g., a written employment agreement specifically defining "good cause" for discharge). (See Uecker & Assocs. v. Lei (In re San Jose Med. Mgmt.) (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2007) 2007 Bankr. LEXIS 4829.) If so, the instruction should be modified to set forth the contractual grounds for good cause. In the absence of grounds for termination in the contract, the employer is limited to those set forth in the statute. (See Khajavi v. Feather River Anesthesia Medical Group (2000) 84 Cal.App.4th 32, 57 [100 Cal.Rptr.2d 627].)

The third option may not be asserted if the plaintiff has a statutory right to be absent from work (for example, for family or medical leave or to accommodate a disability) throughout the entire period of incapacity.

Sources and Authority

- At-Will Employment. Labor Code section 2922.
- Termination of Employment for Specified Term. Labor Code section 2924.
- "[L]abor Code section 2924 has traditionally been interpreted to 'inhibit[] the termination of employment for a specified term except in case of a wilful breach of duty, of habitual neglect of, or continued incapacity to perform, a duty.' " (Khajavi v. Feather River Anesthesia Medical Group (2000) 84 Cal.App.4th 32, 57 [100 Cal.Rptr.2d 627], internal citations omitted.)
- "Unlike a wrongful discharge based on an implied-in-fact contract, an employee who has a contract for a specified term may not be terminated prior to the term's expiration based on an honest but mistaken belief that the employee breached the contract: Such a right would treat a contract with a specified term no better than an implied contract that has no term; such a right would dilute the enforceability of the contract's specified term because an employee who had properly performed his or her contract could still be terminated before the term's end; and such a right would run afoul of the plain language of Labor Code section 2924, which allows termination of an employment for a specified term only 'in case of any willful breach of duty . . . habitual neglect of . . . duty or continued incapacity to perform it.' Termination of employment for a specified term, before the end of the term, based solely on the mistaken belief of a breach, cannot be reconciled with either the governing statute's text or settled principles of contract law." (Khajavi, supra, 84 Cal.App.4th at pp. 38–39.)

- Good cause in the context of wrongful termination based on an implied contract " 'is quite different from the standard applicable in determining the propriety of an employee's termination under a contract for a specified term.' " (Khajavi, supra, 84 Cal.App.4th at p. 58, internal citations omitted.)
- "An employer is justified in discharging his employee, when the latter fails to perform his duty, even though injury does not result to the employer as a result of the employee's failure to do his duty." (Bank of America National Trust & Savings Ass'n v. Republic Productions, Inc. (1941) 44 Cal.App.2d 651, 654 [112 P.2d 972], internal citation omitted.)
- "To terminate an employment without the expiration of its contractual term 'there must be good cause.' The grounds for terminating such an employment are stated in Labor Code section 2924. . . . It is therefore not every deviation of the employee from the standard of performance sought by his employer that will justify a discharge. There must be some 'wilful act or wilful misconduct . . .' when the employee uses his best efforts to serve the interests of his employer." (Holtzendorff v. Housing Authority of the City of Los Angeles (1967) 250 Cal.App.2d 596, 610 [58 Cal.Rptr. 886], internal citation omitted.)
- " 'Willful' disobedience of a specific, peremptory instruction of the master, if the instruction be reasonable and consistent with the contract, is a breach of duty—a breach of the contract of service; and, like any other breach of the contract, of itself entitles the master to renounce the contract of employment." (May v. New York Motion Picture Corp. (1920) 45 Cal.App. 396, 403 [187 P. 785].)
- "An employment agreement that specifies the length of employment (e.g., two years) limits the employer's right to discharge the employee within that period. Unless the agreement provides otherwise (e.g., by reserving the right to discharge for cause), the employer may terminate employment for a specified term only for [the grounds specified in Labor Code section 2924]." (Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 4-A, Employment Presumed At Will, ¶ 4:47 (The Rutter Group)

Secondary Sources

Chin et al., Cal. Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 4-A, Employment Presumed At Will, ¶¶ 4:2, 4:47, 4:56, 4:57 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 4-B, Agreements Limiting At-Will Termination, ¶¶ 4:47, 4:56, 4:57 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Contract Actions, §§ 8.22–8.26

4 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 62, Avoiding Wrongful Termination and Discipline Claims, § 62.02 (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, §§ 249.13, 249.21, 249.60–249.63 (Matthew Bender)

2422. Breach of Employment Contract—Specified Term—Damages

If you find that [*name of defendant] [discharged/demoted] [name of plaintiff] in breach of an employment contract for a specified term, then you must decide the damages, if any, that [name of plaintiff] has proved [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] is entitled to recover. To make that decision, you must:

1. Decide the amount that [name of plaintiff] would have earned up to today, including any benefits and pay increases; [and]
2. Add the present cash value of any future wages and benefits that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] would have earned up to the end of the term of the contract; [and]
3. [Describe any other contract damages that were allegedly caused by defendant's conduct.]

[If you find that [*name of plaintiff] would have exercised [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] option to extend the term of the employment contract, then you may consider the total term of [name of plaintiff]'s employment contract to be [specify length of original contract term plus option term].]

New September 2003

Directions for Use

Use CACI No. 3963, Affirmative Defense—Employee's Duty to Mitigate Damages, if the defendant seeks an offset for wages plaintiff could have earned from similar employment.

Sources and Authority

- Damages for Breach of Contract. Civil Code section 3300.
- "Stated simply, the contract compensation for the unexpired period of the contract affords a prima facie measure of damages; the actual measured damage, however, is the contract amount reduced by compensation received during the unexpired term; if, however, such other compensation has not been received, the contract amount may still be reduced or eliminated by a showing that the employee, by the exercise of reasonable diligence and effort, could have procured comparable employment and thus mitigated the damages." (Erler v. Five Points Motors, Inc. (1967) 249 Cal.App.2d 560, 562 [57 Cal.Rptr. 516].)
- In appropriate circumstances, the court may authorize the trier of fact to "consider the probability the employee would exercise the option in determining the length of the unexpired term of employment when applying the applicable measure of damages . . . .” (Oldenkott v. American Electric, Inc. (1971) 14 Cal.App.3d 198, 204 [92 Cal.Rptr. 127].)

- “The trial court correctly found that defendants wrongfully terminated the employment contract and that the measure of damages was the difference between the amount Silva would have received under the contract and that amount which Silva actually received from his other employment.” (Silva v. McCoy (1968) 259 Cal.App.2d 256, 260 [66 Cal.Rptr. 364].)
- “The plaintiff has the burden of proving his damage. The law is settled that he has the duty of minimizing that damage. While the contract wages are prima facie [evidence of] his damage, his actual damage is the amount of money he was out of pocket by reason of the wrongful discharge.” (Erler v. Five Points Motors, Inc., supra, 249 Cal.App.2d at pp. 567–568.)
- “The burden of proof is on the party whose breach caused damage, to establish matters relied on to mitigate damage.” (Steelduct Co. v. Henger-Seltzer Co. (1945) 26 Cal.2d 634, 654 [160 P.2d 804], internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, 17-B, Contract Damages, ¶¶ 17:81, 17:95, 17:105, 17:495 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, 17-F, Mitigation of Damages (Avoidable Consequences Doctrine), ¶ 17:495 (The Rutter Group)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, § 249.21 (Matthew Bender)

2423. Breach of Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing—Employment Contract—Essential Factual Elements

In every employment [*contract/agreement] there is an implied promise of good faith and fair dealing. This implied promise means that neither the employer nor the employee will do anything to unfairly interfere with the right of the other to receive the benefits of the employment relationship. Good faith means honesty of purpose without any intention to mislead or to take unfair advantage of another. Generally speaking, it means being faithful to one's duty or obligation. However, the implied promise of good faith and fair dealing cannot create obligations that are inconsistent with the terms of the contract.

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] violated the duty implied in their employment [contract/agreement] to act fairly and in good faith. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] and [name of defendant] entered into an employment relationship;

[2. That [*name of plaintiff] substantially performed [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] job duties [unless [name of plaintiff]'s performance was excused [or prevented]];]

[3. That all conditions required for [*name of defendant]'s performance [had occurred/ [or] were excused];]

4. That [name of defendant] [specify conduct that the plaintiff claims prevented plaintiff from receiving the benefits under the contract];

5. That by doing so, [name of defendant] did not act fairly and in good faith; and

6. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed by [name of defendant]'s conduct.

New September 2003; Revised November 2019, May 2020

Directions for Use

In every contract, there is an implied promise that each party will not do anything to unfairly interfere with the right of any other party to receive the benefits of the contract. (Comunale v. Traders & General Ins. Co. (1958) 50 Cal.2d 654, 658 [328 P.2d 198].) Give this instruction if the employee asserts a claim that the employee's termination or other adverse employment action was in breach of this implied covenant. If the existence of a contract is at issue, see instructions on contract formation in the 300 series.

Include element 2 if the employee's substantial performance of the employee's required job duties is at issue. Include element 3 if there are conditions precedent that the employee must fulfill before the employer is required to perform. In element 4, insert an explanation of the employer's conduct that violated the duty to act in good faith.

Do not give this instruction if the alleged breach is only the termination of an at-will contract. (See Eisenberg v. Alameda Newspapers (1999) 74 Cal.App.4th 1359, 1391 [88 Cal.Rptr.2d 802].)

See also the Sources and Authority to CACI No. 325, Breach of Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing—Essential Factual Elements, for more authorities on the implied covenant outside of employment law.

Sources and Authority

- Contractual Conditions Precedent. Civil Code section 1439.
- "We therefore conclude that the employment relationship is not sufficiently similar to that of insurer and insured to warrant judicial extension of the proposed additional tort remedies in view of the countervailing concerns about economic policy and stability, the traditional separation of tort and contract law, and finally, the numerous protections against improper terminations already afforded employees." (Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal.3d 654, 693 [254 Cal.Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373].)
- "A breach of the contract may also constitute a breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. But insofar as the employer's acts are directly actionable as a breach of an implied-in-fact contract term, a claim that merely realleges that breach as a violation of the covenant is superfluous. This is because, as we explained at length in Foley, the remedy for breach of an employment agreement, including the covenant of good faith and fair dealing implied by law therein, is solely contractual. In the employment context, an implied covenant theory affords no separate measure of recovery, such as tort damages." (Guz v. Bechtel National, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal.4th 317, 352 [100 Cal.Rptr.2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089], internal citation omitted.)
- "We do not suggest the covenant of good faith and fair dealing has no function whatever in the interpretation and enforcement of employment contracts. As indicated above, the covenant prevents a party from acting in bad faith to frustrate the contract's actual benefits. Thus, for example, the covenant might be violated if termination of an at-will employee was a mere pretext to cheat the worker out of another contract benefit to which the employee was clearly entitled, such as compensation already earned." (Guz, supra, 24 Cal.4th at p. 353, fn. 18.)
- "The reason for an employee's dismissal and whether that reason constitutes bad faith are evidentiary questions most properly resolved by the trier of fact." (Luck v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co. (1990) 218 Cal.App.3d 1, 26 [267 Cal.Rptr. 618], internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 4-D, Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing, ¶¶ 4:330, 4:331, 4:340, 4:343, 4:346 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Contract Actions, §§ 8.27–8.28

4 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 60, Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline, §§ 60.02[2][c], 60.06 (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, § 249.14 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation §§ 6:21–6:22 (Thomson Reuters)

2424. Affirmative Defense—Breach of the Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing—Good Faith Though Mistaken Belief

---

[*Name of defendant] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] did not breach the duty to act fairly and in good faith because [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] believed that there was a legitimate and reasonable business purpose for the conduct.

To succeed, [*name of defendant] must prove both of the following:

1. That [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] conduct was based on an honest belief that [insert alleged mistake]; and
2. That, if true, [insert alleged mistake] would have been a legitimate and reasonable business purpose for the conduct.

New September 2003; Revised November 2019, May 2020

Directions for Use

In every contract, there is an implied promise that each party will not do anything to unfairly interfere with the right of any other party to receive the benefits of the contract. (Comunale v. Traders & General Ins. Co. (1958) 50 Cal.2d 654, 658 [328 P.2d 198].) Give CACI No. 2423, Breach of Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing—Employment Contract—Essential Factual Elements, if the employee asserts a claim that the employee's termination or other adverse employment action was in breach of this implied covenant. Give this instruction if the employer asserts the defense that an honest, though mistaken, belief does not constitute a breach.

Sources and Authority

- "[B]ecause the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing requires the employer to act fairly and in good faith, an employer's honest though mistaken belief that legitimate business reasons provided good cause for discharge, will negate a claim it sought in bad faith to deprive the employee of the benefits of the contract." (Wilkerson v. Wells Fargo Bank (1989) 212 Cal.App.3d 1217, 1231 [261 Cal.Rptr. 185], internal citation omitted, disapproved on other grounds in Cotran v. Rollins Hudig Hall International, Inc. (1998) 17 Cal.4th 93, 96 [69 Cal.Rptr.2d 900, 948 P.2d 412].)
- "The jury was instructed that the neglect or refusal to fulfill a contractual obligation based on an honest, mistaken belief did not constitute a breach of the implied covenant." (Luck v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co. (1990) 218 Cal.App.3d 1, 26 [267 Cal.Rptr. 618].)
- "[F]oley does not preclude inquiry into an employer's motive for discharging an employee . . . ." (Seubert v. McKesson Corp. (1990) 223 Cal.App.3d 1514, 1521 [273 Cal.Rptr. 296], overruled on other grounds, Dore v. Arnold Worldwide, Inc.

(2006) 39 Cal.4th 384, 389 [46 Cal.Rptr.3d 668, 139 P.3d 56].)

- "[T]he jury was asked to determine in its special verdict whether appellants had a legitimate reason to terminate [plaintiff]'s employment and whether appellants acted in good faith on an honest but mistaken belief that they had a legitimate business reason to terminate [plaintiff]'s employment." (Seubert, supra, 223 Cal.App.3d at p. 1521 [upholding jury instruction].)

Secondary Sources

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 4-A, Employment Presumed At Will, ¶ 4:5 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch.4-C, "Good Cause" for Termination, ¶ 4:271 (The Rutter Group)

10 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 100, Employer and Employee: Wrongful Termination and Discipline, § 100.30 (Matthew Bender)

2425–2429. Reserved for Future Use

2430. Wrongful Discharge in Violation of Public Policy—Essential Factual Elements

---

[*Name of plaintiff] claims [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was discharged from employment for reasons that violate a public policy. It is a violation of public policy [specify claim in case, e.g., to discharge someone from employment for refusing to engage in price fixing]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] was employed by [name of defendant];
2. That [name of defendant] discharged [name of plaintiff];
3. That [insert alleged violation of public policy, e.g.,* "[name of plaintiff]'s refusal to engage in price fixing*"] was a substantial motivating reason for [name of plaintiff]'s discharge;
4. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
5. That the discharge was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff] harm.

New September 2003; Revised June 2013, June 2014, December 2014, November 2018, May 2020

Directions for Use

The judge should determine whether the purported reason for firing the plaintiff would amount to a violation of public policy. (See Gantt v. Sentry Insurance (1992) 1 Cal.4th 1083, 1092 [4 Cal.Rptr.2d 874, 824 P.2d 680]; overruled on other grounds in Green v. Ralee Engineering Co. (1998) 19 Cal.4th 66, 80 fn. 6 [78 Cal.Rptr.2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046].) The jury should then be instructed that the alleged conduct would constitute a public-policy violation if proved.

Note that there are two causation elements. First, there must be causation between the public policy violation and the discharge (element 3). This instruction uses the term "substantial motivating reason" to express this causation element. "[S]ubstantial motivating reason" has been held to be the appropriate standard for cases alleging termination in violation of public policy. (Alamo v. Practice Management Information Corp. (2013) 219 Cal.App.4th 466, 479 [161 Cal.Rptr.3d 758]; see Harris v. City of Santa Monica (2013) 56 Cal.4th 203, 232 [152 Cal.Rptr.3d 392, 294 P.3d 49]; CACI No. 2507, "Substantial Motivating Reason" Explained.) Element 5 then expresses a second causation requirement; that the plaintiff was harmed as a result of the wrongful discharge.

If plaintiff alleges the plaintiff was forced or coerced to resign, then CACI No. 2431, Constructive Discharge in Violation of Public Policy—Plaintiff Required to Violate Public Policy, or CACI No. 2432, Constructive Discharge in Violation of Public Policy—Plaintiff Required to Endure Intolerable Conditions That Violate Public Policy, should be given instead. See also CACI No. 2510, "Constructive Discharge" Explained.

This instruction may be modified for adverse employment actions other than discharge, for example demotion, if done in violation of public policy. (See Garcia v. Rockwell Internat. Corp. (1986) 187 Cal.App.3d 1556, 1561 [232 Cal.Rptr. 490], disapproved on other grounds in Gantt, supra, 1 Cal.4th at p. 1093 [public policy forbids retaliatory action taken by employer against employee who discloses information regarding employer's violation of law to government agency].) See also CACI No. 2509, "Adverse Employment Action" Explained.

For an instruction on damages, give CACI No. 3903P, Damages From Employer for Wrongful Discharge (Economic Damage).

Sources and Authority

- " '[W]hile an at-will employee may be terminated for no reason, or for an arbitrary or irrational reason, there can be no right to terminate for an unlawful reason or a purpose that contravenes fundamental public policy. Any other conclusion would sanction lawlessness, which courts by their very nature are bound to oppose.' " (Casella v. SouthWest Dealer Services, Inc. (2007) 157 Cal.App.4th 1127, 1138–1139 [69 Cal.Rptr.3d 445], internal citations omitted.)
- "[W]hen an employer's discharge of an employee violates fundamental principles of public policy, the discharged employee may maintain a tort action and recover damages traditionally available in such actions." (Tameny v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1980) 27 Cal.3d 167, 170 [164 Cal.Rptr. 839, 610 P.2d 1330].)
- "The elements of a claim for wrongful discharge in violation of public policy are (1) an employer-employee relationship, (2) the employer terminated the plaintiff's employment, (3) the termination was substantially motivated by a violation of public policy, and (4) the discharge caused the plaintiff harm." (Garcia-Brower v. Premier Automotive Imports of CA, LLC (2020) 55 Cal.App.5th 961, 973 [269 Cal.Rptr.3d 856], internal citation omitted.)
- "[T]his court established a set of requirements that a policy must satisfy to support a tortious discharge claim. First, the policy must be supported by either constitutional or statutory provisions. Second, the policy must be 'public' in the sense that it 'inures to the benefit of the public' rather than serving merely the interests of the individual. Third, the policy must have been articulated at the time of the discharge. Fourth, the policy must be 'fundamental' and 'substantial.' " (Stevenson v. Superior Court (1997) 16 Cal.4th 880, 889–890 [66 Cal.Rptr.2d 888, 941 P.2d 1157], footnote omitted.)
- "Policies are not 'public' (and thus do not give rise to a common law tort claim) when they are derived from statutes that 'simply regulate conduct between private individuals, or impose requirements whose fulfillment does not implicate fundamental public policy concerns.' " (Diego v. Pilgrim United Church of Christ (2014) 231 Cal.App.4th 913, 926 [180 Cal.Rptr.3d 359].)

- "[T]he cases in which violations of public policy are found generally fall into four categories: (1) refusing to violate a statute; (2) performing a statutory obligation (3) exercising a statutory right or privilege; and (4) reporting an alleged violation of a statute of public importance." (Gantt, supra, 1 Cal.4th at pp. 1090–1091, internal citations and footnote omitted, overruled on other grounds in Green, supra, 19 Cal.4th at p. 80, fn. 6; accord Stevenson, supra, 16 Cal.4th at p. 889.)
- "[T]ermination of an employee most clearly violates public policy when it contravenes the provision of a statute forbidding termination for a specified reason . . . ." (Diego, supra, 231 Cal.App.4th at p. 926)
- "[Discharge because of employee's] [r]efusal to violate a governmental regulation may also be the basis for a tort cause of action where the administrative regulation enunciates a fundamental public policy and is authorized by statute." (Scott v. Phoenix Schools, Inc. (2009) 175 Cal.App.4th 702, 708–709 [96 Cal.Rptr.3d 159].)
- "In the context of a tort claim for wrongful discharge, tethering public policy to specific constitutional or statutory provisions serves not only to avoid judicial interference with the legislative domain, but also to ensure that employers have adequate notice of the conduct that will subject them to tort liability to the employees they discharge . . . ." (Stevenson, supra, 16 Cal.4th at p. 889.)
- "[A]n employee need not prove an actual violation of law; it suffices if the employer fired him for reporting his 'reasonably based suspicions' of illegal activity." (Green, supra, 19 Cal.4th at p. 87, internal citation omitted.)
- "[A]n employer's authority over its employee does not include the right to demand that the employee commit a criminal act to further its interests, and an employer may not coerce compliance with such unlawful directions by discharging an employee who refuses to follow such an order. . . ." (Tameny, supra, 27 Cal.3d at p. 178.)
- "[T]here is a 'fundamental public interest in a workplace free from illegal practices . . . .' '[T]he public interest is in a lawful, not criminal, business operation. Attainment of this objective requires that an employee be free to call his or her employer's attention to illegal practices, so that the employer may prevent crimes from being committed by misuse of its products by its employees.' " (Yau v. Allen (2014) 229 Cal.App.4th 144, 157 [176 Cal.Rptr.3d 824].)
- "Whether an employer has conducted an adequate investigation before dismissing an employee for an unlawful purpose is generally a question of fact for the jury." (Garcia-Brower, supra, 55 Cal.App.5th at p. 974.)
- "An action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy 'can only be asserted against an employer. An individual who is not an employer cannot commit the tort of wrongful discharge in violation of public policy; rather, he or she can only be the agent by which an employer commits that tort.' " (Kim v.

Konad USA Distribution, Inc. (2014) 226 Cal.App.4th 1336, 1351 [172 Cal.Rptr.3d 686], original italics.)

- "Sex discrimination in employment may support a claim of tortious discharge in violation of public policy." (Kelley v. The Conco Cos. (2011) 196 Cal.App.4th 191, 214 [126 Cal.Rptr.3d 651].)
- "In sum, a wrongful termination against public policy common law tort based on sexual harassment can be brought against an employer of any size." (Kim, supra, 226 Cal.App.4th at p. 1351.)
- "To establish a claim for wrongful termination in violation of public policy, an employee must prove causation. (See CACI No. 2430 [using phrase 'substantial motivating reason' to express causation].) Claims of whistleblower harassment and retaliatory termination may not succeed where a plaintiff 'cannot demonstrate the required nexus between his reporting of alleged statutory violations and his allegedly adverse treatment by [the employer].' " (Ferrick v. Santa Clara University (2014) 231 Cal.App.4th 1337, 1357 [181 Cal.Rptr.3d 68].)
- "It would be nonsensical to provide a different standard of causation in FEHA cases and common law tort cases based on public policies encompassed by FEHA." (Mendoza v. Western Medical Center Santa Ana (2014) 222 Cal.App.4th 1334, 1341 [166 Cal.Rptr.3d 720].)
- "If claims for wrongful termination in violation of public policy must track FEHA, it necessarily follows that jury instructions pertinent to causation and motivation must be the same for both. Accordingly, we conclude the trial court did not err in giving the instructions set forth in the CACI model jury instructions." (Davis v. Farmers Ins. Exchange (2016) 245 Cal.App.4th 1302, 1323 [200 Cal.Rptr.3d 315].)
- "Under California law, if an employer did not violate FEHA, the employee's claim for wrongful termination in violation of public policy necessarily fails." (Featherstone v. Southern California Permanente Medical Group (2017) 10 Cal.App.5th 1150, 1169 [217 Cal.Rptr.3d 258].)
- "FEHA's policy prohibiting disability discrimination in employment is sufficiently substantial and fundamental to support a claim for wrongful termination in violation of public policy." (Rope v. Auto-Chlor System of Washington, Inc. (2013) 220 Cal.App.4th 635, 660 [163 Cal.Rptr.3d 392].)
- "Although the fourth cause of action references FEHA as one source of the public policy at issue, this is not a statutory FEHA cause of action. FEHA does not displace or supplant common law tort claims for wrongful discharge." (Kim, supra, 226 Cal.App.4th at p. 1349.)
- "[T]o the extent the trial court concluded Labor Code section 132a is the exclusive remedy for work-related injury discrimination, it erred. The California Supreme Court held '[Labor Code] section 132a does not provide an exclusive remedy and does not preclude an employee from pursuing FEHA and common law wrongful discharge remedies.' " (Prue v. Brady Co./San Diego, Inc. (2015) 242 Cal.App.4th 1367, 1381 [196 Cal.Rptr.3d 68].)

- "California's minimum wage law represents a fundamental policy for purposes of a claim for wrongful termination or constructive discharge in violation of public policy." (Vasquez v. Franklin Management Real Estate Fund, Inc. (2013) 222 Cal.App.4th 819, 831–832 [166 Cal.Rptr.3d 242].)
- " 'Labor Code section 1102.5, subdivision (b), which prohibits employer retaliation against an employee who reports a reasonably suspected violation of the law to a government or law enforcement agency, reflects the broad public policy interest in encouraging workplace "whistleblowers," who may without fear of retaliation report concerns regarding an employer's illegal conduct. This public policy is the modern day equivalent of the long-established duty of the citizenry to bring to public attention the doings of a lawbreaker. [Citation.] . . .' " (Ferrick, supra, 231 Cal.App.4th at p. 1355.)
- "That [defendant]'s decision not to renew her contract for an additional season might have been influenced by her complaints about an unsafe working condition . . . does not change our conclusion in light of the principle that a decision not to renew a contract set to expire is not actionable in tort." (Touchstone Television Productions v. Superior Court (2012) 208 Cal.App.4th 676, 682 [145 Cal.Rptr.3d 766], original italics.)
- " ' "[P]ublic policy' as a concept is notoriously resistant to precise definition, and . . . courts should venture into this area, if at all, with great care . . . ." [Citation.] Therefore, when the constitutional provision or statute articulating a public policy also includes certain substantive limitations in scope or remedy, these limitations also circumscribe the common law wrongful discharge cause of action. Stated another way, the common law cause of action cannot be broader than the constitutional provision or statute on which it depends, and therefore it 'presents no impediment to employers that operate within the bounds of law." [Citation.]' " (Dutra v. Mercy Medical Center Mt. Shasta (2012) 209 Cal.App.4th 750, 756 [146 Cal.Rptr.3d 922], original italics.)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, § 255 et seq.

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 5-(I)B, Wrongful Discharge In Violation Of Public Policy (Tameny Claims), ¶¶ 5:47, 5:50, 5:70, 5:105, 5:115, 5:150, 5:151, 5:170, 5:195, 5:220, 5:235 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Public Policy Violations, § 5.45

4 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 60, Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline, § 60.04 (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, §§ 249.12, 249.50–249.52 (Matthew Bender)

10 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 100, Employer and Employee: Wrongful

Termination and Discipline, §§ 100.41–100.61B (Matthew Bender)
California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation §§ 6:23–6:25 (Thomson Reuters)

2431. Constructive Discharge in Violation of Public Policy—Plaintiff Required to Violate Public Policy

---

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was forced to resign rather than commit a violation of public policy. It is a violation of public policy [specify claim in case, e.g., for an employer to require that an employee engage in price fixing]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] was employed by [name of defendant];
2. That [name of defendant] required [name of plaintiff] to [specify alleged conduct in violation of public policy, e.g., "engage in price fixing"];
3. That this requirement was so intolerable that a reasonable person in [name of plaintiff]'s position would have had no reasonable alternative except to resign;
4. That [name of plaintiff] resigned because of this requirement;
5. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
6. That the requirement was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003; Revised June 2014, December 2014, May 2020

Directions for Use

This instruction should be given if a plaintiff claims that the plaintiff's constructive termination was wrongful because the defendant required the plaintiff to commit an act in violation of public policy. If the plaintiff alleges the plaintiff was subjected to intolerable working conditions that violate public policy, see CACI No. 2432, Constructive Discharge in Violation of Public Policy—Plaintiff Required to Endure Intolerable Conditions for Improper Purpose That Violates Public Policy.

This instruction must be supplemented with CACI No. 3903P, Damages From Employer for Wrongful Discharge (Economic Damage). See also CACI No. 2510, "Constructive Discharge" Explained.

The judge should determine whether the purported reason for plaintiff's resignation would amount to a violation of public policy. (See Gantt v. Sentry Insurance (1992) 1 Cal.4th 1083, 1092 [4 Cal.Rptr.2d 874, 824 P.2d 680], overruled on other grounds in Green v. Ralee Engineering Co. (1998) 19 Cal.4th 66, 80 fn. 6 [78 Cal.Rptr.2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046].) The jury should then be instructed that the alleged conduct would constitute a public-policy violation if proved.

Sources and Authority

- "[W]hen an employer's discharge of an employee violates fundamental principles of public policy, the discharged employee may maintain a tort action and recover damages traditionally available in such actions." (Tameny v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1980) 27 Cal.3d 167, 170 [164 Cal.Rptr. 839, 610 P.2d 1330].)
- "[A]n employer's authority over its employees does not include the right to demand that the employee commit a criminal act to further its interests, and an employer may not coerce compliance with such unlawful directions by discharging an employee who refuses to follow such an order. An employer engaging in such conduct violates a basic duty imposed by law upon all employers, and thus an employee who has suffered damages as a result of such discharge may maintain a tort action for wrongful discharge against the employer." (Tameny, supra, 27 Cal.3d at p. 178.)
- "[T]his court established a set of requirements that a policy must satisfy to support a tortious discharge claim. First, the policy must be supported by either constitutional or statutory provisions. Second, the policy must be 'public' in the sense that it 'inures to the benefit of the public' rather than serving merely the interests of the individual. Third, the policy must have been articulated at the time of the discharge. Fourth, the policy must be 'fundamental' and 'substantial.' " (Stevenson v. Superior Court (1997) 16 Cal.4th 880, 889–890 [66 Cal.Rptr.2d 888, 941 P.2d 1157], footnote omitted.)
- "[T]he cases in which violations of public policy are found generally fall into four categories: (1) refusing to violate a statute; (2) performing a statutory obligation (3) exercising a statutory right or privilege; and (4) reporting an alleged violation of a statute of public importance." (Gantt v. Sentry Insurance (1992) 1 Cal.4th 1083, 1090–1091 [4 Cal.Rptr.2d 874, 824 P.2d 680], internal citations and fn. omitted, overruled on other grounds in Green v. Ralee Engineering Co. (1998) 19 Cal.4th 66, 80, fn. 6 [78 Cal.Rptr.2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046]; accord Stevenson, supra, 16 Cal.4th at p. 889.)
- "In addition to statutes and constitutional provisions, valid administrative regulations may also serve as a source of fundamental public policy that impacts on an employer's right to discharge employees when such regulations implement fundamental public policy found in their enabling statutes." (D'sa v. Playhut, Inc. (2000) 85 Cal.App.4th 927, 933 [102 Cal.Rptr.2d 495], internal citation omitted.)
- "Constructive discharge occurs when the employer's conduct effectively forces an employee to resign. Although the employee may say, 'I quit,' the employment relationship is actually severed involuntarily by the employer's acts, against the employee's will. As a result, a constructive discharge is legally regarded as a firing rather than a resignation." (Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal.4th 1238, 1244–1245 [32 Cal.Rptr.2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022], internal citation omitted.)
- "Although situations may exist where the employee's decision to resign is unreasonable as a matter of law, '[w]hether conditions were so intolerable as to justify a reasonable employee's decision to resign is normally a question of fact. [Citation.]' " (Vasquez v. Franklin Management Real Estate Fund, Inc. (2013) 222 Cal.App.4th 819, 827 [166 Cal.Rptr.3d 242].)

- "In order to establish a constructive discharge, an employee must plead and prove . . . that the employer either intentionally created or knowingly permitted working conditions that were so intolerable or aggravated at the time of the employee's resignation that a reasonable employer would realize that a reasonable person in the employee's position would be compelled to resign." (Turner, supra, 7 Cal.4th at p. 1251.)
- "The conditions giving rise to the resignation must be sufficiently extraordinary and egregious to overcome the normal motivation of a competent, diligent, and reasonable employee to remain on the job to earn a livelihood and to serve his or her employer. The proper focus is on whether the resignation was coerced, not whether it was simply one rational option for the employee." (Turner, supra, 7 Cal.4th at p. 1246.)
- "In some circumstances, a single intolerable incident, such as a crime of violence against an employee by an employer, or an employer's ultimatum that an employee commit a crime, may constitute a constructive discharge. Such misconduct potentially could be found 'aggravated.' " (Turner, supra, 7 Cal.4th at p. 1247, fn. 3.)
- "The mere existence of illegal conduct in a workplace does not, without more, render employment conditions intolerable to a reasonable employee." (Turner, supra, 7 Cal.4th at p. 1254.)
- "[T]he standard by which a constructive discharge is determined is an objective one—the question is 'whether a reasonable person faced with the allegedly intolerable employer actions or conditions of employment would have no reasonable alternative except to quit.' " (Turner, supra, 7 Cal.4th at p. 1248, internal citations omitted.)
- "[U]nder Turner, the proper focus is on the working conditions themselves, not on the plaintiff's subjective reaction to those conditions." (Simers v. Los Angeles Times Communications, LLC (2018) 18 Cal.App.5th 1248, 1272 [227 Cal.Rptr.3d 695], original italics.)
- "The length of time the plaintiff remained on the job may be one relevant factor in determining the intolerability of employment conditions from the standpoint of a reasonable person." (Turner, supra, 7 Cal.4th at p. 1254.)
- "[T]here was, as the trial court found, substantial evidence that plaintiff's age and disability were 'substantial motivating reason[s]' for the adverse employment action or actions to which plaintiff was subjected. But the discriminatory motive for plaintiff's working conditions has no bearing on whether the evidence was sufficient to establish constructive discharge." (Simers, supra, 18 Cal.App.5th at p. 1271.)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, § 235

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 4-G, Constructive Discharge, ¶¶ 4:405–4:406, 4:409–4:410, 4:421–4:422 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 5-A, Wrongful Discharge In Violation Of Public Policy (Tameny Claims), ¶¶ 5:45–5:47, 5:50, 5:70, 5:105, 5:115, 5:150, 5:151, 5:170, 5:195, 5:220 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Public Policy Violations, §§ 5.45–5.46

4 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 60, Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline, § 60.04 (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, §§ 249.12, 249.15 (Matthew Bender)

10 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 100, Employer and Employee: Wrongful Termination and Discipline, §§ 100.31, 100.35–100.38 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation §§ 6:23–6:25 (Thomson Reuters)

2432. Constructive Discharge in Violation of Public Policy—Plaintiff Required to Endure Intolerable Conditions That Violate Public Policy

---

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] forced [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] to resign for reasons that violate public policy. It is a violation of public policy [specify claim in case, e.g., for an employer to require an employee to work more than forty hours a week for less than minimum wage]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] was employed by [name of defendant];
2. That [name of plaintiff] was subjected to working conditions that violated public policy, in that [describe conditions imposed on the employee that constitute the violation, e.g., "[name of plaintiff] was required to work more than forty hours a week for less than minimum wage"];
3. That [name of defendant] intentionally created or knowingly permitted these working conditions;
4. That these working conditions were so intolerable that a reasonable person in [name of plaintiff]'s position would have had no reasonable alternative except to resign;
5. That [name of plaintiff] resigned because of these working conditions;
6. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
7. That the working conditions were a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

To be intolerable, the adverse working conditions must be unusually aggravated or involve a continuous pattern of mistreatment. Trivial acts are insufficient.

New September 2003; Revised December 2014, June 2015, May 2020

Directions for Use

This instruction should be given if the plaintiff claims that the plaintiff's constructive termination was wrongful because defendant subjected plaintiff to intolerable working conditions in violation of public policy. The instruction must be supplemented with CACI No. 3903P, Damages From Employer for Wrongful Discharge (Economic Damage). See also CACI No. 2510, "Constructive Discharge" Explained.

The judge should determine whether the purported reason for plaintiff's resignation would amount to a violation of public policy. (See Gantt v. Sentry Insurance (1992) 1 Cal.4th 1083, 1092 [4 Cal.Rptr.2d 874, 824 P.2d 680], overruled on other grounds in Green v. Ralee Engineering Co. (1998) 19 Cal.4th 66, 80 fn. 6 [78 Cal.Rptr.2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046].) The jury should then be instructed that the alleged conduct would constitute a public-policy violation if proved.

Whether conditions are so intolerable as to justify the employee's decision to quit rather than endure them is to be judged by an objective reasonable-employee standard. (Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal.4th 1238, 1247 [32 Cal.Rptr.2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022].) This standard is captured in element 4. The paragraph at the end of the instruction gives the jury additional guidance as to what makes conditions intolerable. (See id. at p. 1247.) Note that in some circumstances, a single intolerable incident, such as a crime of violence against an employee by an employer, or an employer's ultimatum that an employee commit a crime, may constitute a constructive discharge. (Id. at p. 1247, fn. 3.)

Sources and Authority

- "[W]hen an employer's discharge of an employee violates fundamental principles of public policy, the discharged employee may maintain a tort action and recover damages traditionally available in such actions." (Tameny v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1980) 27 Cal.3d 167, 170 [164 Cal.Rptr. 839, 610 P.2d 1330].)
- "[T]his court established a set of requirements that a policy must satisfy to support a tortious discharge claim. First, the policy must be supported by either constitutional or statutory provisions. Second, the policy must be 'public' in the sense that it 'inures to the benefit of the public' rather than serving merely the interests of the individual. Third, the policy must have been articulated at the time of the discharge. Fourth, the policy must be 'fundamental' and 'substantial.' " (Stevenson v. Superior Court (1997) 16 Cal.4th 880, 889–890 [66 Cal.Rptr.2d 888, 941 P.2d 1157], footnote omitted.)
- "In addition to statutes and constitutional provisions, valid administrative regulations may also serve as a source of fundamental public policy that impacts on an employer's right to discharge employees when such regulations implement fundamental public policy found in their enabling statutes." (D'sa v. Playhut, Inc. (2000) 85 Cal.App.4th 927, 933 [102 Cal.Rptr.2d 495], internal citation omitted.)
- "Plaintiffs assert, in essence, that they were terminated for refusing to engage in conduct that violated fundamental public policy, to wit, nonconsensual sexual acts. They also assert, in effect, that they were discharged in retaliation for attempting to exercise a fundamental right—the right to be free from sexual assault and harassment. Under either theory, plaintiffs, in short, should have been granted leave to amend to plead a cause of action for wrongful discharge in violation of public policy." (Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal.3d 65, 91 [276 Cal.Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373].)
- "Constructive discharge occurs when the employer's conduct effectively forces an employee to resign. Although the employee may say, 'I quit,' the employment relationship is actually severed involuntarily by the employer's acts, against the employee's will. As a result, a constructive discharge is legally regarded as a firing rather than a resignation." (Turner, supra, 7 Cal.4th at pp. 1244–1245, internal citation omitted.)

- "Although situations may exist where the employee's decision to resign is unreasonable as a matter of law, '[w]hether conditions were so intolerable as to justify a reasonable employee's decision to resign is normally a question of fact. [Citation.]' " (Vasquez v. Franklin Management Real Estate Fund, Inc. (2013) 222 Cal.App.4th 819, 827 [166 Cal.Rptr.3d 242].)
- "In order to establish a constructive discharge, an employee must plead and prove . . . that the employer either intentionally created or knowingly permitted working conditions that were so intolerable or aggravated at the time of the employee's resignation that a reasonable employer would realize that a reasonable person in the employee's position would be compelled to resign." (Turner, supra, 7 Cal.4th at p. 1251.)
- "The conditions giving rise to the resignation must be sufficiently extraordinary and egregious to overcome the normal motivation of a competent, diligent, and reasonable employee to remain on the job to earn a livelihood and to serve his or her employer. The proper focus is on whether the resignation was coerced, not whether it was simply one rational option for the employee." (Turner, supra, 7 Cal.4th at p. 1246.)
- "In order to amount to a constructive discharge, adverse working conditions must be unusually 'aggravated' or amount to a 'continuous pattern' before the situation will be deemed intolerable. In general, '[s]ingle, trivial, or isolated acts of [misconduct] are insufficient' to support a constructive discharge claim. Moreover, a poor performance rating or a demotion, even when accompanied by reduction in pay, does not by itself trigger a constructive discharge" (Turner, supra, 7 Cal.4th at p. 1247, footnote and internal citation omitted.)
- "The mere existence of illegal conduct in a workplace does not, without more, render employment conditions intolerable to a reasonable employee." (Turner, supra, 7 Cal.4th at p. 1254.)
- "[T]he standard by which a constructive discharge is determined is an objective one—the question is 'whether a reasonable person faced with the allegedly intolerable employer actions or conditions of employment would have no reasonable alternative except to quit.' " (Turner, supra, 7 Cal.4th at p. 1248, internal citations omitted.)
- "[U]nder Turner, the proper focus is on the working conditions themselves, not on the plaintiff's subjective reaction to those conditions." (Simers v. Los Angeles Times Communications, LLC (2018) 18 Cal.App.5th 1248, 1272 [227 Cal.Rptr.3d 695], original italics.)
- "The length of time the plaintiff remained on the job may be one relevant factor in determining the intolerability of employment conditions from the standpoint of a reasonable person." (Turner, supra, 7 Cal.4th at p. 1254.)

- "[T]here was, as the trial court found, substantial evidence that plaintiff's age and disability were 'substantial motivating reason[s]' for the adverse employment action or actions to which plaintiff was subjected. But the discriminatory motive for plaintiff's working conditions has no bearing on whether the evidence was sufficient to establish constructive discharge." (Simers, supra, 18 Cal.App.5th at p. 1271.)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, § 235

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 4-G, Constructive Discharge, ¶¶ 4:405–4:406, 4:409–4:411, 4:421–4:422 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 5-(I)B, Wrongful Discharge In Violation Of Public Policy (Tameny Claims), ¶¶ 5:4, 5:45–5:47, 5:50, 5:70, 5:105, 5:115, 5:150, 5:151, 5:170, 5:195, 5:220 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Public Policy Violations, §§ 5.45–5.46

4 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 60, Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline, § 60.04 (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, §§ 249.15, 249.50 (Matthew Bender)

10 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 100, Employer and Employee: Wrongful Termination and Discipline, §§ 100.31, 100.32, 100.36–100.38 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation §§ 6:23–6:25 (Thomson Reuters)

2433–2440 Reserved for Future Use

2441. Discrimination Against Member of Military—Essential Factual Elements (Mil. & Vet. Code, § 394)

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] wrongfully discriminated against [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] because of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] [current/past] service in the [United States/California] military. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] was an employee of [name of defendant];
2. That [name of plaintiff] [was serving/had served] in the [specify military branch, e.g., California National Guard];
3. That [name of defendant] discharged [name of plaintiff];
4. That [name of plaintiff]'s [[current/past] service in the armed forces/need to report for required military [duty/training]] was a substantial motivating reason for [name of defendant]'s decision to discharge [name of plaintiff];
5. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
6. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New December 2012; Revised June 2013, June 2014

Directions for Use

Military and Veterans Code section 394 prohibits employment discrimination against members of the military on two grounds. First, discrimination is prohibited based simply on the plaintiff's military membership or service. In other words, an employer, public or private, may not refuse to hire or discharge someone based on the fact that the person serves or has served in the armed forces. (Mil. & Vet. Code, § 394(a), (b).) Second, a military-member employee is protected from discharge or other adverse actions because of a requirement to participate in military duty or training. (Mil. & Vet. Code, § 394(d).) For element 4, choose the appropriate option.

The statute prohibits a refusal to hire based on military status, and also reaches a broad range of adverse employment actions short of actual discharge. (See Mil. & Vet. Code, § 394(a), (b), (d) [prohibiting prejudice, injury, harm].) Elements 1, 3, 4, and 6 may be modified to refer to seeking employment and refusal to hire. Elements 3, 4, and 6 may be modified to allege constructive discharge or adverse acts other than discharge. See CACI No. 2509, "Adverse Employment Action" Explained, and CACI No. 2510, "Constructive Discharge" Explained, for instructions under the Fair Employment and Housing Act that may be adapted for use with this instruction.

Element 4 uses the term "substantial motivating reason" to express both intent and causation between the the employee's military service and the discharge. "Substantial motivating reason" has been held to be the appropriate standard under the Fair Employment and Housing Act to address the possibility of both discriminatory and nondiscriminatory motives. (See Harris v. City of Santa Monica (2013) 56 Cal.4th 203, 232 [152 Cal.Rptr.3d 392, 294 P.3d 49]; CACI No. 2507, "Substantial Motivating Reason" Explained.) Whether the FEHA standard applies to cases alleging military service discrimination under section 394 has not been addressed by the courts. However, military and veteran status is now a protected category under the FEHA. (See Gov. Code, § 12940(a).

Sources and Authority

- Discrimination Against Members of the Military. Military and Veterans Code section 394.
- Military and Veteran Status Protected Under Fair Employment and Housing Act. Government Code section 12940(a).
- "[I]ndividual employees may not be held personally liable under section 394 for alleged discriminatory acts that arise out of the performance of regular and necessary personnel management duties." (Haligowski v. Superior Court (2011) 200 Cal.App.4th 983, 998 [134 Cal. Rptr. 3d 214].)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, §§ 369, 472

4 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 60, Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline, § 60.03 (Matthew Bender)

2442–2499. Reserved for Future Use

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of plaintiff] and [name of defendant] enter into an employment relationship?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of defendant] promise, by words or conduct, not to [discharge/demote] [name of plaintiff] except for good cause?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of plaintiff] substantially perform [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] job duties?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, skip question 4 and answer question 5. If you answered no, answer question 4.

4. Was [name of plaintiff]'s performance excused or prevented?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Did [name of defendant] [discharge/demote] [name of plaintiff] without good cause?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Was [name of plaintiff] harmed by the [discharge/demotion]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss: $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised December 2010, May 2024

Directions for Use

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case. This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2401, Breach of Employment Contract—Unspecified Term—Essential Factual Elements.

Questions 3 and 4 should be deleted if substantial performance is not at issue.

The breakdown of damages is optional; depending on the circumstances, users may wish to break down the damages even further.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

VF-2401. Breach of Employment Contract—Unspecified Term—Constructive Discharge

---

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of plaintiff] and [name of defendant] enter into an employment relationship?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of defendant] promise, by words or conduct, not to [discharge/demote] [name of plaintiff] except for good cause?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of plaintiff] substantially perform [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] job duties?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, skip question 4 and answer question 5. If you answered no, answer question 4.

4. Was [name of plaintiff]'s performance excused or prevented?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Did [name of defendant] intentionally create or knowingly permit working conditions to exist that were so intolerable that a reasonable person in [name of plaintiff]'s position would have had no reasonable alternative except to resign?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Did [name of plaintiff] resign because of the intolerable conditions?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. Was [name of plaintiff] harmed by the loss of employment?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 7 is yes, then answer question 8. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

8. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss: $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised December 2010, May 2024

Directions for Use

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of each case.

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2401, Breach of Employment Contract—Unspecified Term—Actual or Constructive Discharge—Essential Factual Elements.

Questions 3 and 4 should be deleted if substantial performance is not at issue.

The breakdown of damages is optional; depending on the circumstances, users may wish to break down the damages even further.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

VF-2402. Breach of Employment Contract—Specified Term

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of plaintiff] and [name of defendant] enter into an employment contract that specified a length of time for which [name of plaintiff] would remain employed?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of plaintiff] substantially perform [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] job duties?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, skip question 3 and answer question 4. If you answered no, answer question 3.

3. Was [name of plaintiff]'s performance excused or prevented?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did [name of defendant] breach the employment contract by [discharging/demoting] [name of plaintiff] before the end of the term of the contract?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Was [name of plaintiff] harmed by the [discharge/demotion]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

   [a. Past economic loss: $_____]

   [b. Future economic loss: $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised December 2010, May 2024

Directions for Use

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of each case.

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2420, Breach of Employment Contract—Specified Term—Essential Factual Elements.

Questions 2 and 3 should be deleted if substantial performance is not at issue.

The breakdown of damages is optional; depending on the circumstances, users may wish to break down the damages even further.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

VF-2403. Breach of Employment Contract—Specified Term—Good-Cause Defense

---

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of plaintiff] and [name of defendant] enter into an employment contract that specified a length of time for which [name of plaintiff] would remain employed?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of plaintiff] substantially perform [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] job duties?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, skip question 3 and answer question 4. If you answered no, answer question 3.

3. Was [name of plaintiff]'s performance excused or prevented?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did [name of defendant] [discharge/demote] [name of plaintiff] before the end of the term of the contract?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Did [name of defendant] have good cause to [discharge/demote] [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is no, then answer question 6. If you answered yes, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Was [name of plaintiff] harmed by the [discharge/demotion]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss: $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised December 2010, May 2024

Directions for Use

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of each case.

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2420, Breach of Employment Contract—Specified Term—Essential Factual Elements, and CACI No. 2421, Breach of Employment Contract—Specified Term—Good-Cause Defense.

Questions 2 and 3 should be deleted if substantial performance is not at issue.

The breakdown of damages is optional; depending on the circumstances, users may wish to break down the damages even further.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

VF-2404. Employment—Breach of the Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing

---

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of plaintiff] and [name of defendant] enter into an employment relationship?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of plaintiff] substantially perform [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] job duties?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, skip question 3 and answer question 4. If you answered no, answer question 3.

3. Was [name of plaintiff]'s performance excused or prevented?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did [name of defendant] [specify conduct that plaintiff claims prevented plaintiff from receiving the benefits under the contract]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Did [name of defendant] fail to act fairly and in good faith?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Was [name of plaintiff] harmed by [name of defendant]'s failure to act fairly and in good faith?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss: $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised December 2010, December 2016, May 2020, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2423, Breach of the Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing—Employment Contract—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

Questions 2 and 3 should be deleted if substantial performance is not at issue.

The breakdown of damages in question 7 is optional; depending on the circumstances, users may wish to break down the damages even further.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2405. Breach of the Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing—Affirmative Defense—Good Faith Mistaken Belief

---

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of plaintiff] and [name of defendant] enter into an employment agreement?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of plaintiff] substantially perform [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] job duties?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, skip question 3 and answer question 4. If you answered no, answer question 3.

3. Was [name of plaintiff]'s performance excused or prevented?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did [name of defendant] [specify conduct that plaintiff claims prevented plaintiff from receiving the benefits under the contract]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct based on an honest belief that [insert alleged mistake]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, skip question 6 and answer question 7.

6. If true, would [insert alleged mistake] have been a legitimate and reasonable business purpose for the conduct?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 6 is no, then answer question 7. If you answered yes, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. Did [name of defendant] fail to act fairly and in good faith?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 7 is yes, then answer question 8. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

8. Was [name of plaintiff] harmed by [name of defendant]'s failure to act in good faith?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 8 is yes, then answer question 9. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

9. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss: $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised December 2010, December 2016, May 2020, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2423, Breach of the Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing—Employment Contract—Essential Factual Elements, and CACI No. 2424, Affirmative Defense—Breach of the Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing—Good Faith Though Mistaken Belief.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

Questions 2 and 3 should be deleted if substantial performance is not at issue.

The breakdown of damages in question 9 is optional; depending on the circumstances, users may wish to break down the damages even further.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2406. Wrongful Discharge in Violation of Public Policy

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of plaintiff] employed by [name of defendant]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Was [name of plaintiff] discharged?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Was [name of plaintiff]'s [insert alleged activity protected by public policy, e.g., "refusal to engage in price fixing"] a substantial motivating reason for [name of defendant]'s decision to discharge [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did the discharge cause [name of plaintiff] harm?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

   [a. Past economic loss

   [lost earnings $_____]

   [lost profits $_____]

   [medical expenses $_____]

   [other past economic loss $_____]

   Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

   [b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, June 2013, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2430, Wrongful Discharge in Violation of Public Policy—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 5 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2407. Constructive Discharge in Violation of Public Policy—Plaintiff Required to Violate Public Policy

---

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of plaintiff] employed by [name of defendant]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of defendant] require [name of plaintiff] to [specify alleged conduct in violation of public policy, e.g., "engage in price fixing"] as a condition of employment?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Was this requirement so intolerable that a reasonable person in [name of plaintiff]'s position would have had no reasonable alternative except to resign?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did [name of plaintiff] resign because of this requirement?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Was the requirement a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

   [a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2431, Constructive Discharge in Violation of Public Policy—Plaintiff Required to Violate Public Policy.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 6 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2408. Constructive Discharge in Violation of Public Policy—Plaintiff Required to Endure Intolerable Conditions for Improper Purpose That Violates Public Policy

---

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of plaintiff] employed by [name of defendant]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Was [name of plaintiff] subjected to working conditions that violated public policy, in that [describe conditions imposed on the employee that constitute the violation, e.g., "plaintiff was treated intolerably in retaliation for filing a workers' compensation claim"]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of defendant] intentionally create or knowingly permit these working conditions?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Were these working conditions so intolerable that a reasonable person in [name of plaintiff]'s position would have had no reasonable alternative except to resign?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Did [name of plaintiff] resign because of these working conditions?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Were the working conditions a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2432, Constructive Discharge in Violation of Public Policy—Plaintiff Required to Endure Intolerable Conditions for Improper Purpose That Violates Public Policy.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2432, Constructive Discharge in Violation of Public Policy—Plaintiff Required to Endure Intolerable Conditions for Improper Purpose That Violates Public Policy.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 7 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2409–VF-2499. Reserved for Future Use

FAIR EMPLOYMENT AND HOUSING ACT

2500. Disparate Treatment—Essential Factual Elements (Gov. Code, § 12940(a))

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] wrongfully discriminated against [him/her/nonbinary pronoun]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] was [an employer/[other covered entity]];
2. That [name of plaintiff] [was an employee of [name of defendant]/ applied to [name of defendant] for a job/[describe other covered relationship to defendant]];
3. [That [name of defendant] [discharged/refused to hire/[other adverse employment action]] [name of plaintiff];]

   [or]

   [That [*name of defendant] subjected [name of plaintiff] to an adverse employment action;]

   [or]

   [That [*name of plaintiff] was constructively discharged;]
4. That [name of plaintiff]'s [protected status—for example, race, gender, or age] was a substantial motivating reason for [name of defendant]'s [decision to [discharge/refuse to hire/[other adverse employment action]] [name of plaintiff]/conduct];
5. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
6. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

---

*New September 2003; Revised April 2009, June 2011, June 2012, June 2013, May 2020, May 2024

Directions for Use

This instruction is intended for use when a plaintiff alleges disparate treatment discrimination under the FEHA against an employer or other covered entity. Disparate treatment occurs when an employer treats an individual less favorably than others because of the individual's protected status. In contrast, disparate impact (the other general theory of discrimination) occurs when an employer has an employment practice that appears neutral but has an adverse impact on members of a protected group. For disparate impact claims, see CACI No. 2502, Disparate Impact—Essential Factual Elements.

If the defendant's status as employer is in dispute, the court may need to instruct the jury on the statutory definition of "employer" under the FEHA, which can include business entities acting as agents of employers. (Gov. Code, § 12926(d); Raines v. U.S. Healthworks Medical Group (2023) 15 Cal.5th 268, 291 [312 Cal.Rptr.3d 301, 534 P.3d 40].) Other covered entities under the FEHA include labor organizations, employment agencies, and apprenticeship training programs. (See Gov. Code, § 12940(b)–(h), (j), (k).)

Read the first option for element 3 if there is no dispute as to whether the employer's acts constituted an adverse employment action. Read the second option and also give CACI No. 2509, "Adverse Employment Action" Explained, if whether there was an adverse employment action is a question of fact for the jury. If constructive discharge is alleged, give the third option for element 3 and also give CACI No. 2510, "Constructive Discharge" Explained. Select "conduct" in element 4 if either the second or third option is included for element 3.

Note that there are two causation elements. There must be a causal link between the discriminatory animus and the adverse action (see element 4), and there must be a causal link between the adverse action and the damage (see element 6). (See Mamou v. Trendwest Resorts, Inc. (2008) 165 Cal.App.4th 686, 713 [81 Cal.Rptr.3d 406].)

Element 4 requires that discrimination based on a protected classification be a substantial motivating reason for the adverse action. (See Harris v. City of Santa Monica (2013) 56 Cal.4th 203, 232 [152 Cal.Rptr.3d 392, 294 P.3d 49]; see also CACI No. 2507, "Substantial Motivating Reason" Explained.) Modify element 4 if plaintiff was not actually a member of the protected class, but alleges discrimination because the plaintiff was perceived to be a member, or associated with someone who was or was perceived to be a member, of the protected class. (See Gov. Code, § 12926(o).)

For damages instructions, see applicable instructions on tort damages.

Sources and Authority

- Discrimination Prohibited Under Fair Employment and Housing Act. Government Code section 12940(a).
- Perception and Association. Government Code section 12926(o).
- "Race." Government Code section 12926(w).
- "Protective Hairstyles." Government Code section 12926(x).
- "Reproductive Health Decisionmaking." Government Code section 12926(y).
- "The California Fair Employment and Housing Act, which defines 'employer' to 'include[] 'any person acting as an agent of an employer,' permits a business entity acting as an agent of an employer to be held directly liable as an employer for employment discrimination in violation of the FEHA in appropriate circumstances when the business-entity agent has at least five employees and carries out FEHA-regulated activities on behalf of an employer. We do not decide the significance, if any, of employer control over the act(s) of the agent that gave rise to the FEHA violation, and we also do not decide whether our conclusion extends to business-entity agents that have fewer than five employees. We base our conclusion on our interpretation of the FEHA's definition of employer; we express no view of the scope of a business entity agent's possible liability under the FEHA's aider and abettor provision." (Raines, supra, 15 Cal.5th at p. 291, internal citations omitted.)

- "[C]onceptually the theory of '[disparate] treatment' . . . is the most easily understood type of discrimination. The employer simply treats some people less favorably than others because of their race, color, religion, sex or national origin." (Mixon v. Fair Employment and Housing Com. (1987) 192 Cal.App.3d 1306, 1317 [237 Cal.Rptr. 884], quoting Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 335–336, fn. 15 [97 S.Ct. 1843, 52 L.Ed.2d 396].)
- "California has adopted the three-stage burden-shifting test for discrimination claims set forth in McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792 [93 S.Ct. 1817, 36 L.Ed. 2d 668]. 'This so-called McDonnell Douglas test reflects the principle that direct evidence of intentional discrimination is rare, and that such claims must usually be proved circumstantially. Thus, by successive steps of increasingly narrow focus, the test allows discrimination to be inferred from facts that create a reasonable likelihood of bias and are not satisfactorily explained.' " (Sandell v. Taylor-Listug, Inc. (2010) 188 Cal.App.4th 297, 307 [115 Cal.Rptr.3d 453], internal citations omitted.)
- "The McDonnell Douglas framework was designed as 'an analytical tool for use by the trial judge in applying the law, not a concept to be understood and applied by the jury in the factfinding process.' " (Abed v. Western Dental Services, Inc. (2018) 23 Cal.App.5th 726, 737 [233 Cal.Rptr.3d 242].)
- "At trial, the McDonnell Douglas test places on the plaintiff the initial burden to establish a prima facie case of discrimination. This step is designed to eliminate at the outset the most patently meritless claims, as where the plaintiff is not a member of the protected class or was clearly unqualified, or where the job he sought was withdrawn and never filled. While the plaintiff's prima facie burden is 'not onerous', he must at least show ' "actions taken by the employer from which one can infer, if such actions remain unexplained, that it is more likely than not that such actions were 'based on a [prohibited] discriminatory criterion . . . .' . . . ." . . .' " (Guz v. Bechtel National, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal.4th 317, 354–355 [100 Cal.Rptr.2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089], internal citations omitted.)
- "If, at trial, the plaintiff establishes a prima facie case, a presumption of discrimination arises. This presumption, though 'rebuttable,' is 'legally mandatory.' Thus, in a trial, '[i]f the trier of fact believes the plaintiff's evidence, and if the employer is silent in the face of the presumption, the court must enter judgment for the plaintiff because no issue of fact remains in the case.' [¶] Accordingly, at this trial stage, the burden shifts to the employer to rebut the presumption by producing admissible evidence, sufficient to 'raise[] a genuine issue of fact' and to 'justify a judgment for the [employer],' that its action was taken for a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason. [¶] If the employer sustains this burden, the presumption of discrimination disappears. The plaintiff must then have the opportunity to attack the employer's proffered reasons as pretexts for discrimination, or to offer any other evidence of discriminatory motive. In an appropriate case, evidence of dishonest reasons, considered together with the elements of the prima facie case, may permit a finding of prohibited bias. The ultimate burden of persuasion on the issue of actual discrimination remains with the plaintiff." (Guz, supra, 24 Cal.4th at pp. 355–356, internal citations omitted.)

- "The trial court decides the first two stages of the McDonnell Douglas test as questions of law. If the plaintiff and defendant satisfy their respective burdens, the presumption of discrimination disappears and the question whether the defendant unlawfully discriminated against the plaintiff is submitted to the jury to decide whether it believes the defendant's or the plaintiff's explanation." (Swanson v. Morongo Unified School Dist. (2014) 232 Cal.App.4th 954, 965 [181 Cal.Rptr.3d 553].)
- "We conclude that where a plaintiff establishes a prima facie case of discrimination based on a failure to interview her for open positions, the employer must do more than produce evidence that the hiring authorities did not know why she was not interviewed. Nor is it enough for the employer, in a writ petition or on appeal, to cobble together after-the-fact possible nondiscriminatory reasons. While the stage-two burden of production is not onerous, the employer must clearly state the actual nondiscriminatory reason for the challenged conduct." (Dept. of Corrections & Rehabilitation v. State Personnel Bd. (2022) 74 Cal.App.5th 908, 930 [290 Cal.Rptr.3d 70], original italics.)
- "To succeed on a disparate treatment claim at trial, the plaintiff has the initial burden of establishing a prima facie case of discrimination, to wit, a set of circumstances that, if unexplained, permit an inference that it is more likely than not the employer intentionally treated the employee less favorably than others on prohibited grounds. Based on the inherent difficulties of showing intentional discrimination, courts have generally adopted a multifactor test to determine if a plaintiff was subject to disparate treatment. The plaintiff must generally show that: he or she was a member of a protected class; was qualified for the position he sought; suffered an adverse employment action, and there were circumstances suggesting that the employer acted with a discriminatory motive. [¶] On a defense motion for summary judgment against a disparate treatment claim, the defendant must show either that one of these elements cannot be established or that there were one or more legitimate, nondiscriminatory reasons underlying the adverse employment action." (Jones v. Department of Corrections (2007) 152 Cal.App.4th 1367, 1379 [62 Cal.Rptr.3d 200], internal citations omitted.)
- "Although '[t]he specific elements of a prima facie case may vary depending on the particular facts,' the plaintiff in a failure-to-hire case '[g]enerally . . . must provide evidence that (1) he [or she] was a member of a protected class, (2) he [or she] was qualified for the position he [or she] sought . . . , (3) he [or she] suffered an adverse employment action, such as . . . denial of an available job, and (4) some other circumstance suggests discriminatory motive,' such as that the position remained open and the employer continued to solicit applications for it." (Abed, supra, 23 Cal.App.5th at p. 736.)

- "Although we recognize that in most cases, a plaintiff who did not apply for a position will be unable to prove a claim of discriminatory failure to hire, a job application is not an element of the claim." (Abed, supra, 23 Cal.App.5th at p. 740, original italics.)
- "Employers who lie about the existence of open positions are not immune from liability under the FEHA simply because they are effective in keeping protected persons from applying." (Abed, supra, 23 Cal.App.5th at p. 741.)
- "[Defendant] still could shift the burden to [plaintiff] by presenting admissible evidence showing a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for terminating her. 'It is the employer's honest belief in the stated reasons for firing an employee and not the objective truth or falsity of the underlying facts that is at issue in a discrimination case.' . . . '[I]f nondiscriminatory, [the employer's] true reasons need not necessarily have been wise or correct. . . . While the objective soundness of an employer's proffered reasons supports their credibility . . . , the ultimate issue is simply whether the employer acted with a motive to discriminate illegally. Thus, "legitimate" reasons . . . in this context are reasons that are facially unrelated to prohibited bias, and which, if true, would thus preclude a finding of discrimination. . . .' " (Wills v. Superior Court (2011) 195 Cal.App.4th 143, 170–171 [125 Cal.Rptr.3d 1], original italics, internal citations omitted.)
- "[W]e hold that a residency program's claim that it terminated a resident for academic reasons is not entitled to deference. . . . [T]he jury should be instructed to evaluate, without deference, whether the program terminated the resident for a genuine academic reason or because of an impermissible reason such as retaliation or the resident's gender." (Khoiny v. Dignity Health (2022) 76 Cal.App.5th 390, 404 [291 Cal.Rptr.3d 496].)
- "The burden therefore shifted to [plaintiff] to present evidence showing the [defendant] engaged in intentional discrimination. To meet her burden, [plaintiff] had to present evidence showing (1) the [defendant]'s stated reason for not renewing her contract was untrue or pretextual; (2) the [defendant] acted with a discriminatory animus in not renewing her contract; or (3) a combination of the two." (Swanson, supra, 232 Cal.App.4th at p. 966.)
- "Evidence that an employer's proffered reasons were pretextual does not necessarily establish that the employer intentionally discriminated: ' " '[I]t is not enough . . . to disbelieve the employer; the factfinder must believe the plaintiff's explanation of intentional discrimination.' " ' However, evidence of pretext is important: ' "[A] plaintiff's prima facie case, combined with sufficient evidence to find that the employer's asserted justification is false, may permit the trier of fact to conclude that the employer unlawfully discriminated." ' " (Diego v. City of Los Angeles (2017) 15 Cal.App.5th 338, 350–351 [223 Cal.Rptr.3d 173], internal citations omitted.)
- "While a complainant need not prove that [discriminatory] animus was the sole motivation behind a challenged action, he must prove by a preponderance of the evidence that there was a 'causal connection' between the employee's protected status and the adverse employment decision." (Mixon, supra, 192 Cal.App.3d at p. 1319.)

- "Requiring the plaintiff to show that discrimination was a substantial motivating factor, rather than simply a motivating factor, more effectively ensures that liability will not be imposed based on evidence of mere thoughts or passing statements unrelated to the disputed employment decision. At the same time, . . . proof that discrimination was a substantial factor in an employment decision triggers the deterrent purpose of the FEHA and thus exposes the employer to liability, even if other factors would have led the employer to make the same decision at the time." (Harris, supra, 56 Cal.4th at p. 232, original italics.)
- "We do not suggest that discrimination must be alone sufficient to bring about an employment decision in order to constitute a substantial motivating factor. But it is important to recognize that discrimination can be serious, consequential, and even by itself determinative of an employment decision without also being a "but for" cause." (Harris, supra, 56 Cal.4th at p. 229.)
- "In cases involving a comparison of the plaintiff's qualifications and those of the successful candidate, we must assume that a reasonable juror who might disagree with the employer's decision, but would find the question close, would not usually infer discrimination on the basis of a comparison of qualifications alone. In a close case, a reasonable juror would usually assume that the employer is more capable of assessing the significance of small differences in the qualifications of the candidates, or that the employer simply made a judgment call. [Citation.] But this does not mean that a reasonable juror would in every case defer to the employer's assessment. If that were so, no job discrimination case could ever go to trial. If a factfinder can conclude that a reasonable employer would have found the plaintiff to be significantly better qualified for the job, but this employer did not, the factfinder can legitimately infer that the employer consciously selected a less-qualified candidate—something that employers do not usually do, unless some other strong consideration, such as discrimination, enters into the picture." (Reeves v. MV Transportation, Inc. (2010) 186 Cal.App.4th 666, 674–675 [111 Cal.Rptr.3d 896], original italics.)
- "While not all cases hold that 'the disparity in candidates' qualifications "must be so apparent as to jump off the page and slap us in the face to support a finding of pretext" ' the precedents do consistently require that the disparity be substantial to support an inference of discrimination." (Reeves, supra, 186 Cal.App.4th at p. 675, internal citation omitted.)
- "In no way did the Court of Appeal in Reeves overturn the long-standing rule that comparator evidence is relevant and admissible where the plaintiff and the comparator are similarly situated in all relevant respects and the comparator is treated more favorably. Rather, it held that in a job hiring case, and in the context of a summary judgment motion, a plaintiff's weak comparator evidence

'alone' is insufficient to show pretext." (Gupta v. Trustees of California State University (2019) 40 Cal.App.5th 510, 521 [253 Cal.Rptr.3d 277].)

- "[Defendant] contends that a trial court must assess the relative strength and nature of the evidence presented on summary judgment in determining if the plaintiff has 'created only a weak issue of fact.' However, [defendant] overlooks that a review of all of the evidence is essential to that assessment. The stray remarks doctrine, as advocated by [defendant], goes further. It allows a court to weigh and assess the remarks in isolation, and to disregard the potentially damaging nature of discriminatory remarks simply because they are made by 'nondecisionmakers, or [made] by decisionmakers unrelated to the decisional process.' [Defendant] also argues that ambiguous remarks are stray, irrelevant, prejudicial, and inadmissible. However, 'the task of disambiguating ambiguous utterances is for trial, not for summary judgment.' Determining the weight of discriminatory or ambiguous remarks is a role reserved for the jury. The stray remarks doctrine allows the trial court to remove this role from the jury." (Reid v. Google, Inc. (2010) 50 Cal.4th 512, 540–541 [113 Cal.Rptr.3d 327, 235 P.3d 988], internal citations omitted; see Gov. Code, § 12923(c) [Legislature affirms the decision in Reid v. Google, Inc. in its rejection of the "stray remarks doctrine"].)
- "[D]iscriminatory remarks can be relevant in determining whether intentional discrimination occurred: 'Although stray remarks may not have strong probative value when viewed in isolation, they may corroborate direct evidence of discrimination or gain significance in conjunction with other circumstantial evidence. Certainly, who made the comments, when they were made in relation to the adverse employment decision, and in what context they were made are all factors that should be considered . . . .' " (Husman v. Toyota Motor Credit Corp. (2017) 12 Cal.App.5th 1168, 1190–1191 [220 Cal.Rptr.3d 42].)
- "Discrimination on the basis of an employee's foreign accent is a sufficient basis for finding national origin discrimination." (Galvan v. Dameron Hospital Assn. (2019) 37 Cal.App.5th 549, 562 [250 Cal.Rptr.3d 16].)
- "Because of the similarity between state and federal employment discrimination laws, California courts look to pertinent federal precedent when applying our own statutes." (Guz, supra, 24 Cal.4th at p. 354.)
- "We have held 'that, in a civil action under the FEHA, all relief generally available in noncontractual actions . . . may be obtained.' This includes injunctive relief." (Aguilar v. Avis Rent A Car System, Inc. (1999) 21 Cal.4th 121, 132 [87 Cal.Rptr.2d 132, 980 P.2d 846], internal citations omitted.)
- "The FEHA does not itself authorize punitive damages. It is, however, settled that California's punitive damages statute, Civil Code section 3294, applies to actions brought under the FEHA . . . ." (Weeks v. Baker & McKenzie (1998) 63 Cal.App.4th 1128, 1147–1148 [74 Cal.Rptr.2d 510], internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

8 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Constitutional Law, §§ 1025,

1029

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 7-A, Title VII And The California Fair Employment And Housing Act, ¶¶ 7:194, 7:200–7:201, 7:356, 7:391–7:392 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Discrimination Claims, §§ 2.44–2.82

3 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 43, Civil Actions Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 43.01 (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.23[2] (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation, §§ 2:2, 2:20 (Thomson Reuters)

2501. Affirmative Defense—Bona fide Occupational Qualification

---

[*Name of defendant] claims that [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] decision [to discharge/[other adverse employment action]] [name of plaintiff] was lawful because [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] was entitled to consider [protected status—for example, race, gender, or age] as a job requirement. To succeed, [name of defendant] must prove all of the following:

1. That the job requirement was reasonably necessary for the operation of [name of defendant]'s business;
2. That [name of defendant] had a reasonable basis for believing that substantially all [members of protected group] are unable to safely and efficiently perform that job;
3. That it was impossible or highly impractical to consider whether each [applicant/employee] was able to safely and efficiently perform the job; and
4. That it was impossible or highly impractical for [name of defendant] to rearrange job responsibilities to avoid using [protected status] as a job requirement.

---

*New September 2003; Revised May 2024

Directions for Use

An employer may assert the bona fide occupational qualification (BFOQ) defense where the employer has a practice that on its face excludes an entire group of individuals because of their protected status. Modifications will be necessary if the BFOQ defense is raised in a case involving allegations of failure to accommodate an employee who is pregnant, recovering from childbirth, or having related medical conditions. (Gov. Code, § 12945(a).)

Sources and Authority

- Bona fide Occupational Qualification. Government Code section 12940(a)(1).
- Bona fide Occupational Qualification for Pregnancy, Childbirth and Related Conditions. Government Code section 12945(a).
- Bona fide Occupational Qualification. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 2, § 11010(a).
- Bona fide Occupational Qualification Under Federal Law. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(e)(1).
- The BFOQ defense is a narrow exception to the general prohibition on discrimination. (Bohemian Club v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1986) 187 Cal.App.3d 1, 19 [231 Cal.Rptr. 769]; International Union, United Automobile, Aerospace and Agricultural Implement Workers of America, UAW v.

Johnson Controls, Inc. (1991) 499 U.S. 187, 201 [111 S.Ct. 1196, 113 L.Ed.2d 158].)

- " '[I]n order to rely on the bona fide occupational qualification exception an employer has the burden of proving that he had reasonable cause to believe, that is, a factual basis for believing, that all or substantially all women would be unable to perform safely and efficiently the duties of the job involved.' " (Bohemian Club, supra, 187 Cal.App.3d at p. 19, quoting Weeks v. Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Co. (5th Cir. 1969) 408 F.2d 228, 235.)
- "First, the employer must demonstrate that the occupational qualification is 'reasonably necessary to the normal operation of [the] particular business.' Secondly, the employer must show that the categorical exclusion based on [the] protected class characteristic is justified, i.e., that 'all or substantially all' of the persons with the subject class characteristic fail to satisfy the occupational qualification." (Johnson Controls, Inc. v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1990) 218 Cal.App.3d 517, 540 [267 Cal.Rptr. 158], quoting Weeks, supra, 408 F.2d at p. 235.)
- "Even if an employer can demonstrate that certain jobs require members of one sex, the employer must also 'bear the burden of proving that because of the nature of the operation of the business they could not rearrange job responsibilities . . .' in order to reduce the BFOQ necessity." (Johnson Controls, Inc., supra, 218 Cal.App.3d at p. 541; see Hardin v. Stynchcomb (11th Cir. 1982) 691 F.2d 1364, 1370–1371.)
- "Alternatively, the employer could establish that age was a legitimate proxy for the safety-related job qualifications by proving that it is 'impossible or highly impractical' to deal with the older employees on an individualized basis." (Western Airlines, Inc. v. Criswell (1985) 472 U.S. 400, 414–415 [105 S.Ct. 2743, 86 L.Ed.2d 321], internal citation and footnote omitted.)
- "The Fair Employment and Housing Commission has interpreted the BFOQ defense in a manner incorporating all of the federal requirements necessary for its establishment. . . . [¶] The standards of the Commission are . . . in harmony with federal law regarding the availability of a BFOQ defense." (Bohemian Club, supra, 187 Cal.App.3d at p. 19.)
- "By modifying 'qualification' with 'occupational,' Congress narrowed the term to qualifications that affect an employee's ability to do the job." (International Union, United Automobile, Aerospace and Agricultural Implement Workers of America, UAW, supra, 499 U.S. at p. 201.)

Secondary Sources

8 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Constitutional Law, §§ 1025, 1034

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch.9-C, California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA), ¶¶ 9:2380, 9:2382, 9:2400, 9:2430 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Sexual Harassment, §§ 2.91–2.94

2 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Civil Actions Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, §§ 41.94[3], 41.108 (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.54[4] (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation § 2:84 (Thomson Reuters)

2502. Disparate Impact—Essential Factual Elements (Gov. Code, § 12940(a))

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] had [an employment practice/a selection policy] that wrongfully discriminated against [him/her/nonbinary pronoun]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] was [an employer/[other covered entity]];
2. That [name of plaintiff] [was an employee of [name of defendant]/applied to [name of defendant] for a job/[other covered relationship to defendant]];
3. That [name of defendant] had [an employment practice of [describe practice]/a selection policy of [describe policy]] that had a disproportionate adverse effect on [describe protected group—for example, persons over the age of 40];
4. That [name of plaintiff] is [protected status];
5. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
6. That [name of defendant]'s [employment practice/selection policy] was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

---

*New September 2003; Revised June 2011, May 2024

Directions for Use

This instruction is intended for disparate impact employment discrimination claims. Disparate impact occurs when an employer has an employment practice that appears neutral but has an adverse impact on members of a protected group and cannot be justified by business necessity. (Jumaane v. City of Los Angeles (2015) 241 Cal.App.4th 1390, 1405 [194 Cal.Rptr.3d 689].)

If the defendant's status as employer is in dispute, the court may need to instruct the jury on the statutory definition of "employer" under the FEHA, which can include business entities acting as agents of employers. (Gov. Code, § 12926(d); Raines v. U.S. Healthworks Medical Group (2023) 15 Cal.5th 268, 291 [312 Cal.Rptr.3d 301, 534 P.3d 40].) Other covered entities under the FEHA include labor organizations, employment agencies, and apprenticeship training programs. (See Gov. Code, § 12940(b)–(h), (j), (k).)

The court should consider instructing the jury on the meaning of "adverse impact," tailored to the facts of the case and the applicable law.

Sources and Authority

- Discrimination Prohibited Under Fair Employment and Housing Act. Government Code section 12940(a).
- Disparate Impact May Prove Age Discrimination. Government Code section 12941.1.
- Justification for Disparate Impact. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 2, §§ 11010(b), 11017(a), (e).
- "The California Fair Employment and Housing Act, which defines 'employer' to 'include[]' 'any person acting as an agent of an employer,' permits a business entity acting as an agent of an employer to be held directly liable as an employer for employment discrimination in violation of the FEHA in appropriate circumstances when the business-entity agent has at least five employees and carries out FEHA-regulated activities on behalf of an employer. We do not decide the significance, if any, of employer control over the act(s) of the agent that gave rise to the FEHA violation, and we also do not decide whether our conclusion extends to business-entity agents that have fewer than five employees. We base our conclusion on our interpretation of the FEHA's definition of employer; we express no view of the scope of a business entity agent's possible liability under the FEHA's aider and abettor provision." (Raines, supra, 15 Cal.5th at p. 291, internal citations omitted.)
- "Prohibited discrimination may . . . be found on a theory of disparate impact, i.e., that regardless of motive, a facially neutral employer practice or policy, bearing no manifest relationship to job requirements, in fact had a disproportionate adverse effect on members of the protected class." (Guz v. Bechtel National, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal.4th 317, 354, fn. 20 [100 Cal.Rptr.2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089], internal citations omitted.)
- "A 'disparate impact' plaintiff . . . may prevail without proving intentional discrimination . . . [However,] a disparate impact plaintiff 'must not merely prove circumstances raising an inference of discriminatory impact; he must prove the discriminatory impact at issue.' " (Ibarbia v. Regents of the University of California (1987) 191 Cal.App.3d 1318, 1329–1330 [237 Cal.Rptr. 92], quoting Lowe v. City of Monrovia (9th Cir. 1985) 775 F.2d 998, 1004.)
- " 'To establish a prima facie case of discrimination, a plaintiff must show that the facially neutral employment practice had a significantly discriminatory impact. If that showing is made, the employer must then demonstrate that "any given requirement [has] a manifest relationship to the employment in question," in order to avoid a finding of discrimination . . . Even in such a case, however, the plaintiff may prevail, if he shows that the employer was using the practice as a mere pretext for discrimination.' " (City and County of San Francisco v. Fair Employment and Housing Com. (1987) 191 Cal.App.3d 976, 985 [236 Cal.Rptr. 716], quoting Connecticut v. Teal (1982) 457 U.S. 440, 446–447 [102 S.Ct. 2525, 73 L.Ed.2d 130], internal citation omitted.)
- "It is well settled that valid statistical evidence is required to prove disparate impact discrimination, that is, that a facially neutral policy has caused a protected group to suffer adverse effects. ' "Once the employment practice at issue has been identified, causation must be proved; that is, the plaintiff must offer statistical evidence of a kind and degree sufficient to show that the practice in question has caused the exclusion of applicants for jobs or promotions because of their membership in a protected group. . . . [S]tatistical disparities must be sufficiently substantial that they raise such an inference of causation." ' " (Jumaane, supra, 241 Cal.App.4th at p. 1405.)

- Under federal title VII, a plaintiff may establish an unlawful employment practice based on disparate impact in one of two ways: (1) the plaintiff demonstrates that a defendant uses a particular employment practice that causes a disparate impact on the basis of a protected status, and the defendant "fails to demonstrate that the challenged practice is job related for the position in question and consistent with business necessity"; or (2) the plaintiff demonstrates that there is an alternative employment practice with less adverse impact, and the defendant "refuses to adopt such alternative employment practice." (42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(k)(1)(A).)

Secondary Sources

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 4-A, Employment Presumed At Will, ¶ 4:25 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 7-A, Title VII And The California Fair Employment And Housing Act, ¶¶ 7:530, 7:531, 7:535 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Discrimination Claims, § 2.65

2 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 41.21 (Matthew Bender)

3 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 43, Civil Actions Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 43.01[2][c] (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.23[4] (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation, § 2:23 (Thomson Reuters)

2503. Affirmative Defense—Business Necessity/Job Relatedness

[Name of defendant] claims that the [employment practice/selection policy] is lawful because it is necessary to [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] business. To succeed, [name of defendant] must prove both of the following:

1. That the purpose of the [employment practice/selection policy] is to operate the business safely and efficiently; and
2. That the [employment practice/selection policy] substantially accomplishes this business purpose.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

The defense of business necessity is available for disparate impact claims but may not be used as a defense against a claim of intentional discrimination.

CACI No. 2504, Disparate Impact—Rebuttal to Business Necessity/Job Relatedness Defense, must be given if defendant asserts the defense of business necessity to a disparate impact employment discrimination claim.

Sources and Authority

- Justification of Disparate Impact. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 2, §§ 11010(b), 11017(a), (e).
- "In order to meet its burden the [employer] must demonstrate a business necessity for use of the [discriminatory employment practice] . . . . 'The test is whether there exists an overriding legitimate business purpose such that the practice is necessary to the safe and efficient operation of the business. Thus, the business purpose must be sufficiently compelling to override any [discriminatory] impact; the challenged practice must effectively carry out the business purpose it is alleged to serve; and there must be available no acceptable alternative policies or practices which would better accomplish the business purpose advanced, or accomplish it equally well with a lesser differential racial impact.' " (City and County of San Francisco v. Fair Employment and Housing Com. (1987) 191 Cal.App.3d 976, 989–990 [236 Cal.Rptr. 716], quoting Robinson v. Lorillard Corp. (4th Cir. 1971) 444 F.2d 791, 798.)
- The federal Civil Rights Act of 1991 states that one of its purposes is "to codify the concepts of 'business necessity' and 'job related' enunciated by the Supreme Court in Griggs v. Duke Power Co., 401 U.S. 424], and in other Supreme Court decisions prior to Wards Cove Packing Co. v. Atonio, 490 U.S. 642 (1989) [109 S.Ct. 2115, 104 L.Ed.2d 733]." (Civil Rights Act of 1991, Pub.L. No. 102-166, § 3(2) (Nov. 21, 1991) 105 Stat. 1071, 1071.)
- Federal title VII provides that while business necessity is a defense to a claim of disparate impact discrimination, "[a] demonstration that an employment practice is required by business necessity may not be used as a defense against a claim of intentional discrimination." (42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(k)(2).)

- "The touchstone is business necessity. If an employment practice which operates to exclude [a protected group] cannot be shown to be related to job performance, the practice is prohibited . . . Congress has placed on the employer the burden of showing that any given requirement must have a manifest relationship to the employment in question." (Griggs, supra, 401 U.S. at pp. 431–432.)
- "[T]he employer may defend its policy or practice by proving that it is 'job related for the position in question and consistent with business necessity.' Though the key terms have been used since Griggs, their meaning remains unclear." (1 Lindemann and Grossman, Employment Discrimination Law (3d ed. 1996) Adverse Impact, p. 106, footnotes omitted.)
- "[T]here is no requirement that the challenged practice be 'essential' or 'indispensable' to the employer's business for it to pass muster: this degree of scrutiny would be almost impossible for most employers to meet . . . ." (Wards Cove Packing Co., Inc., supra, 490 U.S. at p. 659.) [Note: This portion of Wards Cove may have been superseded by the Civil Rights Act of 1991.]

Secondary Sources

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 5(I)-E, Defamation, ¶¶ 7:571, 7:581, 7:915 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 5(I)-L, Invasion of Privacy, ¶ 7:915 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Discrimination Claims, § 2.90

2 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, §§ 41.21[4], 41.95[1] (Matthew Bender)

3 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 43, Civil Actions Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 43.01[2][c] (Matthew Bender)

1 Lindemann and Grossman, Employment Discrimination Law (3d ed.) Adverse Impact, pp. 106–110; id. (2000 supp.) at pp. 62–64

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, §§ 115.23[4][d], 115.54[5], 115.102–115.103 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation § 2:25 (Thomson Reuters)

2504. Disparate Impact—Rebuttal to Business Necessity/Job Relatedness Defense

---

If [name of defendant] proves that the [employment practice/ selection policy] is necessary to [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] business, then the [employment practice/selection policy] is lawful unless [name of plaintiff] proves both of the following:

1. That there was an alternative [employment practice/ selection policy] that would have accomplished the business purpose equally well; and
2. That the alternative [employment practice/selection policy] would have had less adverse impact on [describe members of protected group—for example, "persons over the age of 40"].

New September 2003

Directions for Use

Federal title VII requires a plaintiff to demonstrate that the employer refused to adopt the alternative employment practice (see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(K)(1)(A)(ii)). There are no published court opinions determining if a similar requirement exists under California law.

This instruction must be given if defendant asserts the defense of business necessity to a disparate impact employment discrimination claim. (See CACI No. 2503, Affirmative Defense—Business Necessity/Job Relatedness.)

Sources and Authority

- Justification for Disparate Impact. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 2, § 11010(b).
- Disparate Impact Under Federal Law. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(k)(1)(A).
- " 'The test [of the business necessity defense] is whether there exists an overriding legitimate business purpose such that the practice is necessary to the safe and efficient operation of the business. Thus, the business purpose must be sufficiently compelling to override any [discriminatory] impact; the challenged practice must effectively carry out the business purpose it is alleged to serve; and there must be available no acceptable alternative policies or practices which would better accomplish the business purpose advanced, or accomplish it equally well with a lesser differential [discriminatory] impact.' " (City and County of San Francisco v. Fair Employment and Housing Com. (1987) 191 Cal.App.3d 976, 989–990 [236 Cal.Rptr. 716].)
- "[T]he standards established by the FEHC for evaluating a facially neutral selection criterion which has a discriminatory impact on a protected group are identical to federal standards under Title VII." (City and County of San Francisco, supra, 191 Cal.App.3d at p. 986.)

- "If an employer does then meet the burden of proving that its tests are 'job related,' it remains open to the complaining party to show that other tests or selection devices, without a similarly undesirable [discriminatory] effect, would also serve the employer's legitimate interest in 'efficient and trustworthy workmanship.' " (Albemarle Paper Co. v. Moody (1975) 422 U.S. 405, 425 [95 S.Ct. 2362, 45 L.Ed.2d 280], internal citation omitted.)

Secondary Sources

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch.5(I)-E, Defamation, ¶¶ 7:581, 7:590, 7:591, 7:915 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 5(I)-L, Invasion of Privacy, ¶ 7:915 (The Rutter Group)

2 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 41.21[2] (Matthew Bender)

3 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 43, Civil Actions Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 43.01[2][d] (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.23[2][c] (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation § 2:26 (Thomson Reuters)

2505. Retaliation—Essential Factual Elements (Gov. Code, § 12940(h))

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] retaliated against [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] for [describe activity protected by the FEHA]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] [describe protected activity];
2. [That [name of defendant] [discharged/demoted/[specify other adverse employment action]] [name of plaintiff];]

   [or]

   [That [*name of defendant] subjected [name of plaintiff] to an adverse employment action;]

   [or]

   [That [*name of plaintiff] was constructively discharged;]
3. That [name of plaintiff]'s [describe protected activity] was a substantial motivating reason for [name of defendant]'s [decision to [discharge/demote/[specify other adverse employment action]]

   [*name of plaintiff]/conduct];
4. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
5. That [name of defendant]'s decision to [discharge/demote/[specify other adverse employment action]] [name of plaintiff] was a substantial factor in causing [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] harm.

[[*Name of plaintiff] does not have to prove [discrimination/harassment] in order to be protected from retaliation. If [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] [reasonably believed that [name of defendant]'s conduct was unlawful/requested a [disability/religious] accommodation], [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] may prevail on a retaliation claim even if [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] does not present, or prevail on, a separate claim for [discrimination/harassment/[other]].]

New September 2003; Revised August 2007, April 2008, October 2008, April 2009, June 2010, June 2012, December 2012, June 2013, June 2014, June 2016, December 2016

Directions for Use

In elements 1 and 3, describe the protected activity in question. Government Code section 12940(h) provides that it is unlawful to retaliate against a person "because the person has opposed any practices forbidden under [Government Code sections 12900 through 12966] or because the person has filed a complaint, testified, or assisted in any proceeding under [the FEHA]." It is also unlawful to retaliate or otherwise discriminate against a person for requesting an accommodation for religious practice or disability, regardless of whether the request was granted. (Gov. Code, § 12940(l)(4) [religious practice], (m)(2) [disability].)

Read the first option for element 2 if there is no dispute as to whether the employer's acts constituted an adverse employment action. Read the second option and also give CACI No. 2509, "Adverse Employment Action" Explained, if whether there was an adverse employment action is a question of fact for the jury. For example, the case may involve a pattern of employer harassment consisting of acts that might not individually be sufficient to constitute retaliation, but taken as a whole establish prohibited conduct. (See Yanowitz v. L'Oreal USA, Inc. (2005) 36 Cal.4th 1028, 1052–1056 [32 Cal.Rptr.3d 436, 116 P.3d 1123].) Give both the first and second options if the employee presents evidence supporting liability under both a sufficient-single-act theory or a pattern-of-harassment theory. (See, e.g., Wysinger v. Automobile Club of Southern California (2007) 157 Cal.App.4th 413, 423–424 [69 Cal.Rptr.3d 1].) Also select "conduct" in element 3 if the second option or both the first and second options are included for element 2.

Retaliation in violation of the FEHA may be established by constructive discharge; that is, that the employer intentionally created or knowingly permitted working conditions to exist that were so intolerable that a reasonable person in the employee's position would have had no reasonable alternative other than to resign. (See Steele v. Youthful Offender Parole Bd. (2008) 162 Cal.App.4th 1241, 1253 [76 Cal.Rptr.3d 632].) If constructive discharge is alleged, give the third option for element 2 and also give CACI No. 2510, "Constructive Discharge" Explained. Also select "conduct" in element 3 if the third option is included for element 2.

Element 3 requires that the protected activity be a substantial motivating reason for the retaliatory acts. (See Harris v. City of Santa Monica (2013) 56 Cal.4th 203, 232 [152 Cal.Rptr.3d 392, 294 P.3d 49]; Alamo v. Practice Management Information Corp. (2013) 219 Cal.App.4th 466, 479 [161 Cal.Rptr.3d 758]; see also CACI No. 2507, "Substantial Motivating Reason" Explained.)

Note that there are two causation elements. There must be a causal link between the retaliatory animus and the adverse action (see element 3), and there must be a causal link between the adverse action and damages (see element 5). (See Mamou v. Trendwest Resorts, Inc. (2008) 165 Cal.App.4th 686, 713 [81 Cal.Rptr.3d 406].)

This instruction has been criticized in dictum because it is alleged that there is no element requiring retaliatory intent. (See Joaquin v. City of Los Angeles (2012) 202 Cal.App.4th 1207, 1229–1231 [136 Cal.Rptr.3d 472].) The court urged the Judicial Council to redraft the instruction and the corresponding special verdict form so as to clearly state that retaliatory intent is a necessary element of a retaliation claim under FEHA.

The jury in the case was instructed per element 3 "that Richard Joaquin's reporting that he had been sexually harassed was a motivating reason for the City of Los Angeles' decision to terminate Richard Joaquin's employment or deny Richard Joaquin promotion to the rank of sergeant." The committee believes that the instruction as given is correct for the intent element in a retaliation case. (Cf. Wallace v. County of Stanislaus (2016) 245 Cal.App.4th 109, 127–132 [199 Cal.Rptr.3d 462] [for disability discrimination, "substantial motivating reason" is only language required to express intent].) However, in cases such as Joaquin that involve allegations of a prohibited motivating reason (based on a report of sexual harassment) and a permitted motivating reason (based on a good faith belief that the report was falsified), the instruction may need to be modified to make it clear that plaintiff must prove that defendant acted based on the prohibited motivating reason and not the permitted motivating reason.

Sources and Authority

- Retaliation Prohibited Under Fair Employment and Housing Act. Government Code section 12940(h).
- Retaliation for Requesting Reasonable Accommodation for Religious Practice and Disability Prohibited. Government Code section 12940(l)(4), (m)(2).
- "Person" Defined Under Fair Employment and Housing Act. Government Code section 12925(d).
- Prohibited Retaliation. Title 2 California Code of Regulations section 11021.
- "[I]n order to establish a prima facie case of retaliation under the FEHA, a plaintiff must show (1) he or she engaged in a 'protected activity,' (2) the employer subjected the employee to an adverse employment action, and (3) a causal link existed between the protected activity and the employer's action. Once an employee establishes a prima facie case, the employer is required to offer a legitimate, nonretaliatory reason for the adverse employment action. If the employer produces a legitimate reason for the adverse employment action, the presumption of retaliation ' " 'drops out of the picture,' " ' and the burden shifts back to the employee to prove intentional retaliation." (Yanowitz, supra, 36 Cal.4th at p. 1042, internal citations omitted.)
- "Actions for retaliation are 'inherently fact-driven'; it is the jury, not the court, that is charged with determining the facts." (McCoy v. Pacific Maritime Assn. (2013) 216 Cal.App.4th 283, 299 [156 Cal.Rptr.3d 851].)
- "It is well established that a plaintiff in a retaliation case need only prove that a retaliatory animus was at least a substantial or motivating factor in the adverse employment decision." (George v. California Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (2009) 179 Cal.App.4th 1475, 1492 [102 Cal.Rptr.3d 431].)
- "Retaliation claims are inherently fact-specific, and the impact of an employer's action in a particular case must be evaluated in context. Accordingly, although an adverse employment action must materially affect the terms, conditions, or privileges of employment to be actionable, the determination of whether a particular action or course of conduct rises to the level of actionable conduct should take into account the unique circumstances of the affected employee as well as the workplace context of the claim." (Yanowitz, supra, 36 Cal.4th at p. 1052.)

- "Contrary to [defendant]'s assertion that it is improper to consider collectively the alleged retaliatory acts, there is no requirement that an employer's retaliatory acts constitute one swift blow, rather than a series of subtle, yet damaging, injuries. Enforcing a requirement that each act separately constitute an adverse employment action would subvert the purpose and intent of the statute." (Yanowitz, supra, 36 Cal.4th at pp. 1055–1056, internal citations omitted.)
- "[U]nder certain circumstances, a retaliation claim may be brought by an employee who has complained of or opposed conduct, even when a court or jury subsequently determines the conduct actually was not prohibited by the FEHA. Indeed, this precept is well settled. An employee is protected against retaliation if the employee reasonably and in good faith believed that what he or she was opposing constituted unlawful employer conduct such as sexual harassment or sexual discrimination." (Miller v. Department of Corr. (2005) 36 Cal.4th 446, 473–474 [30 Cal.Rptr.3d 797, 115 P.3d 77], internal citations omitted.)
- "Clearly, section 12940, subdivision (h) encompasses a broad range of protected activity. An employee need not use specific legal terms or buzzwords in opposing discrimination. Nor is it necessary for an employee to file a formal charge. The protected activity element may be established by evidence that the plaintiff threatened to file a discrimination charge, by a showing that the plaintiff mistakenly, but reasonably and sincerely believed he was opposing discrimination, or by evidence an employer believed the plaintiff was a potential witness in another employee's FEHA action." (Rope v. Auto-Chlor System of Washington, Inc. (2013) 220 Cal.App.4th 635, 652 [163 Cal.Rptr.3d 392], internal citations and footnote omitted.)
- " 'Standing alone, an employee's unarticulated belief that an employer is engaging in discrimination will not suffice to establish protected conduct for the purposes of establishing a prima facie case of retaliation, where there is no evidence the employer knew that the employee's opposition was based upon a reasonable belief that the employer was engaging in discrimination.' '[C]omplaints about personal grievances or vague or conclusory remarks that fail to put an employer on notice as to what conduct it should investigate will not suffice to establish protected conduct.' [¶] But employees need not explicitly and directly inform their employer that they believe the employer's conduct was discriminatory or otherwise forbidden by FEHA." (Castro-Ramirez v. Dependable Highway Express, Inc. (2016) 2 Cal.App.5th 1028, 1046 [207 Cal.Rptr.3d 120], internal citation omitted.)
- "The relevant question . . . is not whether a formal accusation of discrimination is made but whether the employee's communications to the employer sufficiently convey the employee's reasonable concerns that the employer has acted or is acting in an unlawful discriminatory manner." (Husman v. Toyota Motor Credit Corp. (2017) 12 Cal.App.5th 1168, 1193 [220 Cal.Rptr.3d 42].)
- "Notifying one's employer of one's medical status, even if such medical status constitutes a 'disability' under FEHA, does not fall within the protected activity identified in subdivision (h) of section 12940—i.e., it does not constitute engaging in opposition to any practices forbidden under FEHA or the filing of a complaint, testifying, or assisting in any proceeding under FEHA." (Moore v. Regents of University of California (2016) 248 Cal.App.4th 216, 247 [206 Cal.Rptr.3d 841].)

- "[Plaintiff]'s advocacy for the disabled community and opposition to elimination of programs that might benefit that community do not fall within the definition of protected activity. [Plaintiff] has not shown the [defendant]'s actions amounted to discrimination against disabled citizens, but even if they could be so construed, discrimination by an employer against members of the general public is not a prohibited employment practice under the FEHA." (Dinslage v. City and County of San Francisco (2016) 5 Cal.App.5th 368, 383 [209 Cal.Rptr.3d 809], original italics.)
- "Moreover, [defendant]'s actions had a substantial and material impact on the conditions of employment. The refusal to promote [plaintiff] is an adverse employment action under FEHA. There was also a pattern of conduct, the totality of which constitutes an adverse employment action. This includes undeserved negative job reviews, reductions in his staff, ignoring his health concerns and acts which caused him substantial psychological harm." (Wysinger, supra, 157 Cal.App.4th at p. 424, internal citations omitted.)
- "A long period between an employer's adverse employment action and the employee's earlier protected activity may lead to the inference that the two events are not causally connected. But if between these events the employer engages in a pattern of conduct consistent with a retaliatory intent, there may be a causal connection." (Wysinger, supra, 157 Cal.App.4th at p. 421, internal citation omitted.)
- "Both direct and circumstantial evidence can be used to show an employer's intent to retaliate. 'Direct evidence of retaliation may consist of remarks made by decisionmakers displaying a retaliatory motive.' Circumstantial evidence typically relates to such factors as the plaintiff's job performance, the timing of events, and how the plaintiff was treated in comparison to other workers." (Colarossi v. Coty US Inc. (2002) 97 Cal.App.4th 1142, 1153 [119 Cal.Rptr.2d 131], internal citations omitted.)
- "The retaliatory motive is 'proved by showing that plaintiff engaged in protected activities, that his employer was aware of the protected activities, and that the adverse action followed within a relatively short time thereafter.' 'The causal link may be established by an inference derived from circumstantial evidence, "such as the employer's knowledge that the [employee] engaged in protected activities and the proximity in time between the protected action and allegedly retaliatory employment decision." ' " (Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal.App.3d 590, 615 [262 Cal.Rptr. 842], internal citations omitted.)
- "[A]n employer generally can be held liable for the retaliatory actions of its supervisors." (Wysinger, supra, 157 Cal.App.4th at p. 420.)

- "Plaintiff, although a partner, is a person whom section 12940, subdivision (h) protects from retaliation for opposing the partnership-employer's harassment against those employees." (Fitzsimons v. California Emergency Physicians Medical Group (2012) 205 Cal.App.4th 1423, 1429 [141 Cal.Rptr.3d 265].)
- "[A]n employer may be found to have engaged in an adverse employment action, and thus liable for retaliation under section 12940(h), 'by permitting . . . fellow employees to punish [him] for invoking [his] rights.' We therefore hold that an employer may be held liable for coworker retaliatory conduct if the employer knew or should have known of coworker retaliatory conduct and either participated and encouraged the conduct, or failed to take reasonable actions to end the retaliatory conduct." (Kelley v. The Conco Cos. (2011) 196 Cal.App.4th 191, 213 [126 Cal.Rptr.3d 651], internal citation omitted.)
- "[T]he employer is liable for retaliation under section 12940, subdivision (h), but nonemployer individuals are not personally liable for their role in that retaliation." (Jones v. The Lodge at Torrey Pines Partnership (2008) 42 Cal.4th 1158, 1173 [72 Cal.Rptr.3d 624, 177 P.3d 232].)
- " 'The legislative purpose underlying FEHA's prohibition against retaliation is to prevent employers from deterring employees from asserting good faith discrimination complaints . . . .' Employer retaliation against employees who are believed to be prospective complainants or witnesses for complainants undermines this legislative purpose just as effectively as retaliation after the filing of a complaint. To limit FEHA in such a way would be to condone 'an absurd result' that is contrary to legislative intent. We agree with the trial court that FEHA protects employees against preemptive retaliation by the employer." (Steele, supra, 162 Cal.App.4th at p. 1255, internal citations omitted.)
- " 'The plaintiff's burden is to prove, by competent evidence, that the employer's proffered justification is mere pretext; i.e., that the presumptively valid reason for the employer's action was in fact a coverup. . . . In responding to the employer's showing of a legitimate reason for the complained-of action, the plaintiff cannot " 'simply show the employer's decision was wrong, mistaken, or unwise. Rather, the employee ' "must demonstrate such weaknesses, implausibilities, inconsistencies, incoherencies, or contradictions in the employer's proffered legitimate reasons for its action that a reasonable factfinder could rationally find them "unworthy of credence," . . . and hence infer "that the employer did not act for the [asserted] non-discriminatory reasons." ' " ' " (Jumaane v. City of Los Angeles (2015) 241 Cal.App.4th 1390, 1409 [194 Cal.Rptr.3d 689].)
- "The showing of pretext, while it may indicate retaliatory intent or animus, is not the sole means of rebutting the employer's evidence of nonretaliatory intent. ' "While 'pretext' is certainly a relevant issue in a case of this kind, making it a central or necessary issue is not sound. The central issue is and should remain whether the evidence as a whole supports a reasoned inference that the challenged action was the product of discriminatory or retaliatory animus. The employer's mere articulation of a legitimate reason for the action cannot answer this question; it can only dispel the presumption of improper motive that would otherwise entitle the employee to a judgment in his favor." ' " (Light v. Department of Parks & Recreation (2017) 14 Cal.App.5th 75, 94 [221 Cal.Rptr.3d 668], original italics.)

- "Government Code section 12940, subdivision (h), does not shield an employee against termination or lesser discipline for either lying or withholding information during an employer's internal investigation of a discrimination claim. In other words, public policy does not protect deceptive activity during an internal investigation. Such conduct is a legitimate reason to terminate an at-will employee." (McGrory v. Applied Signal Technology, Inc. (2013) 212 Cal.App.4th 1510, 1528 [152 Cal.Rptr.3d 154], footnotes omitted.)
- "Although appellant does not argue she was constructively discharged, such a claim is not necessary to find unlawful retaliation." (McCoy, supra, 216 Cal.App.4th at p. 301.)
- "The phrase 'because of' [in Gov. Code, § 12940(a)] is ambiguous as to the type or level of intent (i.e., motivation) and the connection between that motivation and the decision to treat the disabled person differently. This ambiguity is closely related to [defendant]'s argument that it is liable only if motivated by discriminatory animus. [¶] The statutory ambiguity in the phrase 'because of" was resolved by our Supreme Court about six months after the first jury trial [in Harris, supra, 56 Cal.4th at p. 203]." (Wallace, supra, 245 Cal.App.4th at p. 127.)
- " '[W]hile discrimination may be carried out by means of speech, such as a written notice of termination, and an illicit animus may be evidenced by speech, neither circumstance transforms a discrimination suit to one arising from speech. What gives rise to liability is not that the defendant spoke, but that the defendant denied the plaintiff a benefit, or subjected the plaintiff to a burden, on account of a discriminatory or retaliatory consideration.' " (Laker v. Board of Trustees of California State University (2019) 32 Cal.App.5th 745, 772 [244 Cal.Rptr.3d 238].)

Secondary Sources

8 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Constitutional Law, §§ 1028, 1052–1054

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 7-A, Title VII And The California Fair Employment And Housing Act, ¶¶ 7:121–7:205 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Discrimination Claims, §§ 2.83–2.88

2 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 41.131 (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment

Discrimination, §§ 115.37, 115.94 (Matthew Bender)
California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation, §§ 2:74–2:75 (Thomson Reuters)

2506. Limitation on Remedies—After-Acquired Evidence

[*Name of defendant] claims that after [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] [discharged/refused to hire] [name of plaintiff], [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] discovered that [name of plaintiff] [describe misconduct, e.g., had provided a false Social Security number]. [Name of defendant] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] would have [discharged/refused to hire] [name of plaintiff] anyway if [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] had known that [name of plaintiff] [describe misconduct]. You must decide whether [name of defendant] has proved all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] [describe misconduct];
2. That [name of plaintiff]'s misconduct was sufficiently severe that [name of defendant] would have [discharged/refused to hire] [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] because of that misconduct alone had [name of defendant] known of it; and
3. That [name of defendant] would have [discharged/refused to hire] [name of plaintiff] for [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] misconduct as a matter of settled company policy.

[If you find that [*name of defendant] has proved that [name of plaintiff] [describe misconduct] and that had [name of defendant] known of the misconduct earlier, [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] would have [discharged/refused to hire] [name of plaintiff] as required by the elements above, then [name of plaintiff] may recover damages only for any time before the date on which [name of defendant] discovered the misconduct. [[Name of defendant] must prove the date of discovery if it is contested.]]

New September 2003; Revised June 2016, December 2016, May 2019

Directions for Use

The doctrine of after-acquired evidence refers to an employer's discovery, after an allegedly wrongful termination of employment or refusal to hire, of information that would have justified a lawful termination or refusal to hire. (Salas v. Sierra Chemical Co. (2014) 59 Cal.4th 407, 428 [173 Cal.Rptr.3d 689, 327 P.3d 797].)

There is some uncertainty as to whether or not it is an equitable doctrine. (Compare Thompson v. Tracor Flight Systems, Inc. (2001) 86 Cal.App.4th 1156, 1173 [104 Cal.Rptr.2d 95] [doctrine is the basis for an equitable defense related to the traditional defense of "unclean hands," italics added] with Salas, supra, 59 Cal.4th at p. 428 [omitting "equitable"].) If it is an equitable doctrine, then the fact-finding in the elements of the instruction would be only advisory to the court, or the elements could be found by the court itself as the trier of fact. (See Thompson, supra, 86 Cal.App.4th at p. 1173; see also Hoopes v. Dolan (2008) 168 Cal.App.4th 146, 156 [85 Cal.Rptr.3d 337] [jury's factual findings are purely advisory because, on equitable causes of action, the judge is the proper fact finder].)

After-acquired evidence is not a complete defense to liability, but may foreclose otherwise available remedies. (Salas, supra, 59 Cal.4th at pp. 430–431.) Give the optional last paragraph if the court decides to allow the jury to award damages or to make a finding on damages. Add the last sentence of the paragraph if the date on which the defendant discovered the after-acquired evidence is contested.

After-acquired evidence cases must be distinguished from mixed motive cases in which the employer at the time of the employment action has two or more motives, at least one of which is unlawful. (See Salas supra, 59 Cal.4th at p. 430; CACI No. 2512, Limitation on Remedies—Same Decision.)

Sources and Authority

- "In general, the after-acquired-evidence doctrine shields an employer from liability or limits available relief where, after a termination, the employer learns for the first time about employee wrongdoing that would have led to the discharge in any event. Employee wrongdoing in after-acquired-evidence cases generally falls into one of two categories: (1) misrepresentations on a resume or job application; or (2) posthire, on-the-job misconduct." (Camp v. Jeffer, Mangels, Butler & Marmaro (1995) 35 Cal.App.4th 620, 632 [41 Cal.Rptr.2d 329].)
- "The after-acquired-evidence doctrine serves as a complete or partial defense to an employee's claim of wrongful discharge . . . To invoke this doctrine, '. . . the employer must establish "that the wrongdoing was of such severity that the employee in fact would have been terminated on those grounds alone if the employer had known of it" . . . [T]he employer . . . must show that such a firing would have taken place as a matter of "settled" company policy.' " (Murillo v. Rite Stuff Foods, Inc. (1998) 65 Cal.App.4th 833, 842, 845–846 [77 Cal.Rptr.2d 12], internal citations omitted.)
- "Where an employer seeks to rely upon after-acquired evidence of wrongdoing, it must first establish that the wrongdoing was of such severity that the employee in fact would have been terminated on those grounds alone if the employer had known of it at the time of the discharge." (McKennon v. Nashville Banner Publishing Co. (1995) 513 U.S. 352, 362–363 [115 S.Ct. 879, 130 L.Ed.2d 852].)
- "Courts must tread carefully in applying the after-acquired-evidence doctrine to discrimination claims . . . . Where, as here, the discriminatory conduct was pervasive during the term of employment, therefore, it would not be sound public policy to bar recovery for injuries suffered while employed. In applying the after-acquired-evidence doctrine, the equities between employer and employee can be balanced by barring all portions of the employment discrimination claim tied to the employee's discharge." (Murillo, supra, 65 Cal.App.4th at pp. 849–850.)
- "As the Supreme Court recognized in McKennon, the use of after-acquired evidence must 'take due account of the lawful prerogatives of the employer in the usual course of its business and the corresponding equities that it has arising from the employee's wrongdoing.' We appreciate that the facts in McKennon . . . presented a situation where balancing the equities should permit a finding of employer liability—to reinforce the importance of antidiscrimination laws—while limiting an employee's damages—to take account of an employer's business prerogatives. However, the equities compel a different result where an employee who is disqualified from employment by government-imposed requirements nevertheless obtains a job by misrepresenting the pertinent qualifications. In such a situation, the employee should have no recourse for an alleged wrongful termination of employment." (Camp, supra, 35 Cal.App.4th at pp. 637–638, internal citation omitted.)

- "We decline to adopt a blanket rule that material falsification of an employment application is a complete defense to a claim that the employer, while still unaware of the falsification, terminated the employment in violation of the employee's legal rights." (Cooper v. Rykoff-Sexton, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal.App.4th 614, 617 [29 Cal.Rptr.2d 642].)
- "The doctrine [of after-acquired evidence] is the basis for an equitable defense related to the traditional defense of 'unclean hands' . . . [¶] In the present case, there were conflicts in the evidence concerning respondent's actions, her motivations, and the possible consequences of her actions within appellant's disciplinary system. The trial court submitted those factual questions to the jury for resolution and then used the resulting special verdict as the basis for concluding appellant was not entitled to equitable reduction of the damages award." (Thompson, supra, 86 Cal.App.4th at p. 1173.)
- "By definition, after-acquired evidence is not known to the employer at the time of the allegedly unlawful termination or refusal to hire. In after-acquired evidence cases, the employer's alleged wrongful act in violation of the FEHA's strong public policy precedes the employer's discovery of information that would have justified the employer's decision. To allow such after-acquired evidence to be a complete defense would eviscerate the public policies embodied in the FEHA by allowing an employer to engage in invidious employment discrimination with total impunity." (Salas, supra, 59 Cal.4th at p. 430.)
- "In after-acquired evidence cases, therefore, both the employee's rights and the employer's prerogatives deserve recognition. The relative equities will vary from case to case, depending on the nature and consequences of any wrongdoing on either side, a circumstance that counsels against rigidity in fashioning appropriate remedies in those actions where an employer relies on after-acquired evidence to defeat an employee's FEHA claims." (Salas, supra, 59 Cal.4th at p. 430.)
- "Generally, the employee's remedies should not afford compensation for loss of employment during the period after the employer's discovery of the evidence relating to the employee's wrongdoing. When the employer shows that information acquired after the employee's claim has been made would have led to a lawful discharge or other employment action, remedies such as reinstatement, promotion, and pay for periods after the employer learned of such information would be 'inequitable and pointless,' as they grant remedial relief for a period during which the plaintiff employee was no longer in the defendant's employment and had no right to such employment." (Salas, supra, 59 Cal.4th at pp. 430–431.)

- The remedial relief generally should compensate the employee for loss of employment from the date of wrongful discharge or refusal to hire to the date on which the employer acquired information of the employee's wrongdoing or ineligibility for employment. Fashioning remedies based on the relative equities of the parties prevents the employer from violating California's FEHA with impunity while also preventing an employee or job applicant from obtaining lost wages compensation for a period during which the employee or applicant would not in any event have been employed by the employer. In an appropriate case, it would also prevent an employee from recovering any lost wages when the employee's wrongdoing is particularly egregious." (Salas, supra, 59 Cal.4th at p. 431, footnote omitted.)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, § 223

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation Ch. 7-A, Title VII and the California Fair Employment and Housing Act, ¶¶ 7:930–7:932 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation Ch. 16-H, Other Defenses—After-Acquired Evidence of Employee Misconduct, ¶¶ 16:615–16:616, 16:625, 16:635–16:637, 16:647 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Discrimination Claims, § 2.107

2 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 41.92 (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.54[2] (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation § 2:88 (Thomson Reuters)

2507. "Substantial Motivating Reason" Explained

A "substantial motivating reason" is a reason that actually contributed to the [specify adverse employment action]. It must be more than a remote or trivial reason. It does not have to be the only reason motivating the [adverse employment action].

New December 2007; Revised June 2013

Directions for Use

Read this instruction with CACI No. 2500, Disparate Treatment—Essential Factual Elements, CACI No. 2505, Retaliation—Essential Factual Elements, CACI No. 2540, Disability Discrimination—Disparate Treatment—Essential Factual Elements, CACI No. 2560, Religious Creed Discrimination—Failure to Accommodate—Essential Factual Elements, or CACI No. 2570, Age Discrimination—Disparate Treatment—Essential Factual Elements.

Sources and Authority

- Discrimination Prohibited Under Fair Employment and Housing Act. Government Code section 12940(a).
- Causation Under Federal Law. Title 42 United States Code section 2000e-2(m).
- "Substantial Motivating Factor" Explained. Title 2 California Code of Regulations section 11009(c).
- "Because of the similarity between state and federal employment discrimination laws, California courts look to pertinent federal precedent when applying our own statutes." (Guz v. Bechtel National, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal.4th 317, 354 [100 Cal.Rptr.2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089].)
- "While a complainant need not prove that [discriminatory] animus was the sole motivation behind a challenged action, he must prove by a preponderance of the evidence that there was a 'causal connection' between the employee's protected status and the adverse employment decision." (Mixon v. Fair Employment and Housing Com. (1987) 192 Cal.App.3d 1306, 1319 [237 Cal.Rptr. 884].)
- "The employee need not show 'he would have in any event been rejected or discharged solely on the basis of his race, without regard to the alleged deficiencies. . . .' In other words, 'while a complainant need not prove that racial animus was the sole motivation behind the challenged action, he must prove by a preponderance of the evidence that there was a "causal connection" between the employee's protected status and the adverse employment decision.' " (Clark v. Claremont University Center (1992) 6 Cal.App.4th 639, 665 [8 Cal.Rptr.2d 151], citing McDonald v. Santa Fe Trail Transp. Co. (1976) 427 U.S. 273, 282, fn. 10 [96 S.Ct. 2574, 49 L.Ed.2d 493, 502] and Mixon, supra, 192 Cal.App.3d at p. 1319.)

- "Requiring the plaintiff to show that discrimination was a substantial motivating factor, rather than simply a motivating factor, more effectively ensures that liability will not be imposed based on evidence of mere thoughts or passing statements unrelated to the disputed employment decision. At the same time, . . . proof that discrimination was a substantial factor in an employment decision triggers the deterrent purpose of the FEHA and thus exposes the employer to liability, even if other factors would have led the employer to make the same decision at the time." (Harris v. City of Santa Monica (2013) 56 Cal.4th 203, 232 [152 Cal.Rptr.3d 392, 294 P.3d 49], original italics.)
- "We do not suggest that discrimination must be alone sufficient to bring about an employment decision in order to constitute a substantial motivating factor. But it is important to recognize that discrimination can be serious, consequential, and even by itself determinative of an employment decision without also being a "but for" cause." (Harris, supra, 56 Cal.4th at p. 229.)
- "Although [plaintiff] contends that a jury in an employment discrimination case would not draw any meaningful distinction between 'a motivating reason' and 'a substantial motivating reason' in deciding whether there was unlawful discrimination, the Supreme Court reached a contrary conclusion in Harris [supra]. The court specifically concluded that '[r]equiring the plaintiff to show that discrimination was a substantial motivating factor, rather than simply a motivating factor, more effectively ensures that liability will not be imposed based on evidence of mere thoughts or passing statements unrelated to the disputed employment decision.' " (Alamo v. Practice Management Information Corp. (2013) 219 Cal.App.4th 466, 479 [161 Cal.Rptr.3d 758].)

Secondary Sources

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 7-A, Title VII And The California Fair Employment And Housing Act, ¶¶ 7:485–7:508 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Discrimination Claims, §§ 2.61–2.65, 2.87

2 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 41.11[1] (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.23[2] (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation, §§ 2:20–2:21, 2:75 (Thomson Reuters)

2508. Failure to File Timely Administrative Complaint—Plaintiff Alleges Continuing Violation (Gov. Code, § 12960(e))

[Name of defendant] contends that [name of plaintiff]'s lawsuit may not proceed because [name of plaintiff] did not timely file a complaint with the California Civil Rights Department (CRD). A complaint is timely if it was filed within three years of the date on which [name of defendant]'s alleged unlawful practice occurred.

[Name of plaintiff] filed a complaint with the CRD on [date]. [Name of plaintiff] may recover for acts of alleged [specify the unlawful practice, e.g., harassment] that occurred before [insert date three years before the CRD complaint was filed], only if [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] proves all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant]'s [e.g., harassment] that occurred before [insert date three years before the CRD complaint was filed] was similar or related to the conduct that occurred on or after that date;
2. That the conduct was reasonably frequent; and
3. That the conduct had not yet become permanent before that date.

"Permanent" in this context means that the conduct has stopped, [name of plaintiff] has resigned, or [name of defendant]'s statements and actions would make it clear to a reasonable employee that any further efforts to resolve the issue internally would be futile.

New June 2010; Revised December 2011, June 2015, May 2019, May 2020, May 2023

Directions for Use

Give this instruction if the plaintiff relies on the continuing violation doctrine in order to avoid the bar of the limitation period of three years within which to file an administrative complaint. (See Gov. Code, § 12960(e).) Although the continuing violation doctrine is labeled an equitable exception, it may involve triable issues of fact. (See Dominguez v. Washington Mutual Bank (2008) 168 Cal.App.4th 714, 723–724 [85 Cal.Rptr.3d 705].)

If the case involves multiple claims of FEHA violations, replace "lawsuit" in the opening sentence with reference to the particular claim or claims to which the continuing violation rule may apply.

In the second paragraph, insert the date on which the administrative complaint was filed and the dates on which both sides allege that the complaint requirement was triggered. The verdict form should ask the jury to specify the date that it finds that the requirement accrued. If there are multiple claims with different continuing violation dates, repeat this paragraph for each claim.

The plaintiff has the burden to plead and prove timely exhaustion of administrative remedies, such as filing a sufficient complaint with the CRD. (Kim v. Konad USA Distribution, Inc. (2014) 226 Cal.App.4th 1336, 1345 [172 Cal.Rptr.3d 686].) (Use "Department of Fair Employment and Housing" or "DFEH" as appropriate if the case was filed before the agency's name change.) This burden of proof extends to any excuse or justification for the failure to timely file, such as the continuing violation exception. (Jumaane v. City of Los Angeles (2015) 241 Cal.App.4th 1390, 1402 [194 Cal.Rptr.3d 689].)

Sources and Authority

- Administrative Complaint for FEHA Violation. Government Code section 12960.
- "At a jury trial, the facts are presented and the jury must decide whether there was a continuing course of unlawful conduct based on the law as stated in CACI No. 2508." (Jumaane, supra, 241 Cal.App.4th at p. 1401.)
- "Under the FEHA, the employee must exhaust the administrative remedy provided by the statute by filing a complaint with the Department of Fair Employment and Housing (Department) and must obtain from the Department a notice of right to sue in order to be entitled to file a civil action in court based on violations of the FEHA. The timely filing of an administrative complaint is a prerequisite to the bringing of a civil action for damages under the FEHA. As for the applicable limitation period, the FEHA provides that no complaint for any violation of its provisions may be filed with the Department 'after the expiration of one year from the date upon which the alleged unlawful practice or refusal to cooperate occurred,' with an exception for delayed discovery not relevant here." (Morgan v. Regents of University of California (2000) 88 Cal.App.4th 52, 63 [105 Cal.Rptr.2d 652], original italics, internal citations omitted.)
- "[I]t is 'plaintiff's burden to plead and prove timely exhaustion of administrative remedies, such as filing a sufficient complaint with [CRD, formerly known as DFEH] and obtaining a right-to-sue letter.' " (Kim, supra, 226 Cal.App.4th at p. 1345.)
- "[W]hen defendant has asserted the statute of limitation defense, plaintiff has the burden of proof to show his or her claims are timely under the continuing violation doctrine." (Jumaane, supra, 241 Cal.App.4th at p. 1402.)
- "Under the continuing violation doctrine, a plaintiff may recover for unlawful acts occurring outside the limitations period if they continued into that period. The continuing violation doctrine requires proof that (1) the defendant's actions inside and outside the limitations period are sufficiently similar in kind; (2) those actions occurred with sufficient frequency; and (3) those actions have not acquired a degree of permanence." (Wassmann v. South Orange County Community College Dist. (2018) 24 Cal.App.5th 825, 850–851 [234 Cal.Rptr.3d 712], internal citations omitted.)

- " '[P]ermanence' in the context of an ongoing process of accommodation of disability, or ongoing disability harassment, should properly be understood to mean the following: that an employer's statements and actions make clear to a reasonable employee that any further efforts at informal conciliation to obtain reasonable accommodation or end harassment will be futile. [¶] Thus, when an employer engages in a continuing course of unlawful conduct under the FEHA by refusing reasonable accommodation of a disabled employee or engaging in disability harassment, and this course of conduct does not constitute a constructive discharge, the statute of limitations begins to run, not necessarily when the employee first believes that his or her rights may have been violated, but rather, either when the course of conduct is brought to an end, as by the employer's cessation of such conduct or by the employee's resignation, or when the employee is on notice that further efforts to end the unlawful conduct will be in vain. Accordingly, an employer who is confronted with an employee seeking accommodation of disability or relief from disability harassment may assert control over its legal relationship with the employee either by accommodating the employee's requests, or by making clear to the employee in a definitive manner that it will not be granting any such requests, thereby commencing the running of the statute of limitations." (Richards v. CH2M Hill, Inc. (2001) 26 Cal.4th 798, 823–824 [111 Cal.Rptr.2d 87, 29 P.3d 175], internal citations omitted.)
- "[T]he Richards court interpreted section 12960 to mean that when a continuing pattern of wrongful conduct occurs partly in the statutory period and partly outside the statutory period, the limitations period begins to accrue once an employee is on notice of the violation of his or her rights and on notice that 'litigation, not informal conciliation, is the only alternative for the vindication of his or her rights.' " (Acuna v. San Diego Gas & Electric Co. (2013) 217 Cal.App.4th 1402, 1412 [159 Cal.Rptr.3d 749].)
- "A continuing violation may be established by demonstrating 'a company wide policy or practice' or 'a series of related acts against a single individual.' 'The continuing violation theory generally has been applied in the context of a continuing policy and practice of discrimination on a company-wide basis; a plaintiff who shows that a policy and practice operated at least in part within the limitation period satisfies the filing requirements. "[A] systematic policy of discrimination is actionable even if some or all of the events evidencing its inception occurred prior to the limitations period. The reason is that the continuing system of discrimination operates against the employee and violates his or her rights up to a point in time that falls within the applicable limitations period. Such continuing violations are most likely to occur in the matter of placements or promotions." ' The plaintiff must demonstrate that at least one act occurred within the filing period and that 'the harassment is "more than the occurrence of isolated or sporadic acts of intentional discrimination." . . . The relevant distinction is between the occurrence of isolated, intermittent acts of discrimination and a persistent, on-going pattern.' " (Morgan, supra, 88

Cal.App.4th at p. 64, internal citations omitted.)

- "[A] continuing violation claim will likely fail if the plaintiff knew, or through the exercise of reasonable diligence would have known, [the plaintiff] was being discriminated against at the time the earlier events occurred." (Morgan, supra, 88 Cal.App.4th at p. 65.)
- "The Supreme Court has extended the continuing violation doctrine to retaliation claims. And the doctrine also applies to racial harassment claims. Indeed, as we observed in Morgan v. Regents of University of California, supra, 88 Cal.App.4th 52, 65: 'Cases alleging a hostile work environment due to racial or sexual harassment are often found to come within the continuing violations framework.' " (Nazir v. United Airlines, Inc. (2009) 178 Cal.App.4th 243, 270 [100 Cal.Rptr.3d 296], internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

8 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Constitutional Law, § 1068

3 Witkin, California Procedure (6th ed. 2021) Actions, § 238

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 7-A, Title VII And The California Fair Employment And Housing Act, ¶¶ 7:561.1, 7:975 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 16-A, Failure To Exhaust Administrative Remedies, ¶ 16:85 (The Rutter Group)

3 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 43, Civil Actions Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 43.01[4] (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.51[1] (Matthew Bender)

10 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 100, Employer and Employee: Wrongful Termination and Discipline, § 100.59 (Matthew Bender)

2509. "Adverse Employment Action" Explained

[Name of plaintiff] must prove that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was subjected to an adverse employment action.

Adverse employment actions are not limited to ultimate actions such as termination or demotion. There is an adverse employment action if [name of defendant] has taken an action or engaged in a course or pattern of conduct that, taken as a whole, materially and adversely affected the terms, conditions, or privileges of [name of plaintiff]'s employment. An adverse employment action includes conduct that is reasonably likely to impair a reasonable employee's job performance or prospects for advancement or promotion. However, minor or trivial actions or conduct that is not reasonably likely to do more than anger or upset an employee cannot constitute an adverse employment action.

New June 2012

Directions for Use

Give this instruction with CACI No. 2500, Disparate Treatment—Essential Factual Elements, CACI No. 2505, Retaliation, CACI No. 2540, Disability Discrimination—Disparate Treatment—Essential Factual Elements, CACI No. 2560, Religious Creed Discrimination—Failure to Accommodate—Essential Factual Elements, or CACI No. 2570, Age Discrimination—Disparate Treatment—Essential Factual Elements, if there is an issue as to whether the employee was the victim of an adverse employment action.

For example, the case may involve a pattern of employer harassment consisting of acts that might not individually be sufficient to constitute discrimination or retaliation, but taken as a whole establish prohibited conduct. (See Yanowitz v. L'Oreal USA, Inc. (2005) 36 Cal.4th 1028, 1052–1056 [32 Cal.Rptr.3d 436, 116 P.3d 1123].) Or the case may involve acts that, considered alone, would not appear to be adverse, but could be adverse under the particular circumstances of the case. (See Patten v. Grant Joint Union High School Dist. (2005) 134 Cal.App.4th 1378, 1389–1390 [37 Cal.Rptr.3d 113] [lateral transfer can be adverse employment action even if wages, benefits, and duties remain the same].)

Sources and Authority

- "Appropriately viewed, [section 12940(a)] protects an employee against unlawful discrimination with respect not only to so-called ultimate employment actions such as termination or demotion, but also the entire spectrum of employment actions that are reasonably likely to adversely and materially affect an employee's job performance or opportunity for advancement in his or her career. Although a mere offensive utterance or even a pattern of social slights by either the employer or coemployees cannot properly be viewed as materially affecting the terms, conditions, or privileges of employment for purposes of section 12940(a) (or give rise to a claim under section 12940(h)), the phrase 'terms, conditions, or privileges' of employment must be interpreted liberally and with a reasonable appreciation of the realities of the workplace in order to afford employees the appropriate and generous protection against employment discrimination that the FEHA was intended to provide." (Yanowitz, supra, 36 Cal.4th at pp. 1053–1054, footnotes omitted.)

- "[T]he determination of what type of adverse treatment properly should be considered discrimination in the terms, conditions, or privileges of employment is not, by its nature, susceptible to a mathematically precise test, and the significance of particular types of adverse actions must be evaluated by taking into account the legitimate interests of both the employer and the employee. Minor or relatively trivial adverse actions or conduct by employers or fellow employees that, from an objective perspective, are reasonably likely to do no more than anger or upset an employee cannot properly be viewed as materially affecting the terms, conditions, or privileges of employment and are not actionable, but adverse treatment that is reasonably likely to impair a reasonable employee's job performance or prospects for advancement or promotion falls within the reach of the antidiscrimination provisions of sections 12940(a) and 12940(h)." (Yanowitz, supra, 36 Cal.4th at pp. 1054–1055.)
- "An ' "adverse employment action," ' . . . , requires a 'substantial adverse change in the terms and conditions of the plaintiff's employment'. " (Holmes v. Petrovich Development Co., LLC (2011) 191 Cal.App.4th 1047, 1063 [119 Cal.Rptr.3d 878, internal citations omitted.)
- "Contrary to [defendant]'s assertion that it is improper to consider collectively the alleged retaliatory acts, there is no requirement that an employer's retaliatory acts constitute one swift blow, rather than a series of subtle, yet damaging, injuries. Enforcing a requirement that each act separately constitute an adverse employment action would subvert the purpose and intent of the statute." (Yanowitz, supra, 36 Cal.4th at pp. 1055–1056, internal citations omitted.)
- "Moreover, [defendant]'s actions had a substantial and material impact on the conditions of employment. The refusal to promote [plaintiff] is an adverse employment action under FEHA. There was also a pattern of conduct, the totality of which constitutes an adverse employment action. This includes undeserved negative job reviews, reductions in his staff, ignoring his health concerns and acts which caused him substantial psychological harm." (Wysinger v. Automobile Club of Southern California (2007) 157 Cal.App.4th 413, 424 [69 Cal.Rptr.3d 1], internal citations omitted.)
- "The employment action must be both detrimental and substantial . . . [¶]. We must analyze [plaintiff's] complaints of adverse employment actions to determine if they result in a material change in the terms of her employment, impair her employment in some cognizable manner, or show some other employment injury . . . . [W]e do not find that [plaintiff's] complaint alleges the necessary material changes in the terms of her employment to cause employment injury. Most of the actions upon which she relies were one time events . . . . The other allegations . . . are not accompanied by facts which evidence both a substantial and detrimental effect on her employment." (Thomas v. Department of Corrections (2000) 77 Cal.App.4th 507, 511–512 [91 Cal.Rptr.2d 770], internal citations omitted.)

- "The 'materiality' test of adverse employment action . . . looks to 'the entire spectrum of employment actions that are reasonably likely to adversely and materially affect an employee's job performance or opportunity for advancement in his or her career,' and the test 'must be interpreted liberally . . . with a reasonable appreciation of the realities of the workplace . . . .' " (Patten, supra, 134 Cal.App.4th at p. 1389.)
- "Retaliation claims are inherently fact-specific, and the impact of an employer's action in a particular case must be evaluated in context. Accordingly, although an adverse employment action must materially affect the terms, conditions, or privileges of employment to be actionable, the determination of whether a particular action or course of conduct rises to the level of actionable conduct should take into account the unique circumstances of the affected employee as well as the workplace context of the claim." (Whitehall v. County of San Bernardino (2017) 17 Cal.App.5th 352, 366–367 [225 Cal.Rptr.3d 321].)
- "[A] mere oral or written criticism of an employee . . . does not meet the definition of an adverse employment action under [the] FEHA." (Light v. Department of Parks & Recreation (2017) 14 Cal.App.5th 75, 92 [221 Cal.Rptr.3d 668].)
- "Mere ostracism in the workplace is insufficient to establish an adverse employment decision. However, ' "[W]orkplace harassment, if sufficiently severe or pervasive, may in and of itself constitute an adverse employment action sufficient to satisfy the second prong of the prima facie case for . . . retaliation cases." [Citation].' " (Kelley v. The Conco Companies (2011) 196 Cal.App.4th 191, 212 [126 Cal.Rptr.3d 651], internal citations omitted.)
- "Not every change in the conditions of employment, however, constitutes an adverse employment action. ' "A change that is merely contrary to the employee's interests or not to the employee's liking is insufficient." . . .' '[W]orkplaces are rarely idyllic retreats, and the mere fact that an employee is displeased by an employer's act or omission does not elevate that act or omission to the level of a materially adverse employment action.' " (Malais v. Los Angeles City Fire Dept. (2007) 150 Cal.App.4th 350, 357 [58 Cal.Rptr.3d 444].)
- "[R]efusing to allow a former employee to rescind a voluntary discharge—that is, a resignation free of employer coercion or misconduct—is not an adverse employment action." (Featherstone v. Southern California Permanente Medical Group (2017) 10 Cal.App.5th 1150, 1161 [217 Cal.Rptr.3d 258].)
- "[T]he reduction of [plaintiff]'s hours alone could constitute a material and adverse employment action by the [defendant]." (Light, supra, 14 Cal.App.5th at p. 93.)

- "[A] job reassignment may be an adverse employment action when it entails materially adverse consequences." (Simers v. Los Angeles Times Communications, LLC (2018) 18 Cal.App.5th 1248, 1279 [227 Cal.Rptr.3d 695].)
- "[T]he denial of previously promised training and the failure to promote may constitute adverse employment actions." (Light, supra, 14 Cal.App.5th at p. 93.)
- "The trial court correctly found that the act of placing plaintiff on administrative leave [involuntarily] was an adverse employment action." (Whitehall, supra, 17 Cal.App.5th at p. 367.)
- "[Plaintiff] has presented no authority, and we are aware of none, holding that a single threat of an adverse employment action, never carried out, could itself constitute an adverse employment action under the standard articulated in Yanowitz and its progeny." (Meeks v. AutoZone, Inc. (2018) 24 Cal.App.5th 855, 879 [235 Cal.Rptr.3d 161].)

Secondary Sources

8 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Constitutional Law, §§ 1052–1055

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 7-A, Title VII And The California Fair Employment And Housing Act, ¶¶ 7:203, 7:731, 7:785 (The Rutter Group)

3 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 43, Civil Actions Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 43.01 (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.36 (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, § 249.12 (Matthew Bender)

10 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 100, Employer and Employee: Wrongful Termination and Discipline, § 100.42 (Matthew Bender)

2510. "Constructive Discharge" Explained

[*Name of plaintiff] must prove that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was constructively discharged. To establish constructive discharge, [name of plaintiff] must prove the following:

1. That [name of defendant] [through [name of defendant]'s officers, directors, managing agents, or supervisory employees] intentionally created or knowingly permitted working conditions to exist that were so intolerable that a reasonable person in [name of plaintiff]'s position would have had no reasonable alternative except to resign; and
2. That [name of plaintiff] resigned because of these working conditions.

In order to be sufficiently intolerable, adverse working conditions must be unusually aggravated or amount to a continuous pattern. In general, single, trivial, or isolated acts of misconduct are insufficient to support a constructive discharge claim. But in some circumstances, a single intolerable incident may constitute a constructive discharge.

New June 2012; Revised May 2019, May 2020

Directions for Use

Give this instruction with CACI No. 2401, Breach of Employment Contract—Unspecified Term—Actual or Constructive Discharge—Essential Factual Elements, CACI No. 2500, Disparate Treatment—Essential Factual Elements, CACI No. 2505, Retaliation, CACI No. 2540, Disability Discrimination—Disparate Treatment—Essential Factual Elements, CACI No. 2560, Religious Creed Discrimination—Failure to Accommodate—Essential Factual Elements, or CACI No. 2570, Age Discrimination—Disparate Treatment—Essential Factual Elements, if the employee alleges that because of the employer's actions, the employee had no reasonable alternative other than to leave the employment. Constructive discharge can constitute the adverse employment action required to establish a FEHA violation for discrimination or retaliation. (See Steele v. Youthful Offender Parole Bd. (2008) 162 Cal.App.4th 1241, 1253 [76 Cal.Rptr.3d 632].)

Sources and Authority

- "[C]onstructive discharge occurs only when an employer terminates employment by forcing the employee to resign. A constructive discharge is equivalent to a dismissal, although it is accomplished indirectly. Constructive discharge occurs only when the employer coerces the employee's resignation, either by creating working conditions that are intolerable under an objective standard, or by failing to remedy objectively intolerable working conditions that actually are known to the employer. We have said 'a constructive discharge is legally regarded as a firing rather than a resignation.' " (Mullins v. Rockwell Internat. Corp. (1997) 15 Cal.4th 731, 737 [63 Cal.Rptr.2d 636, 936 P.2d 1246], internal citations omitted.)

- "Actual discharge carries significant legal consequences for employers, including possible liability for wrongful discharge. In an attempt to avoid liability, an employer may refrain from actually firing an employee, preferring instead to engage in conduct causing him or her to quit. The doctrine of constructive discharge addresses such employer-attempted 'end runs' around wrongful discharge and other claims requiring employer-initiated terminations of employment." (Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal.4th 1238, 1244 [32 Cal.Rptr.2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022].)
- "Standing alone, constructive discharge is neither a tort nor a breach of contract, but a doctrine that transforms what is ostensibly a resignation into a firing." (Turner, supra, 7 Cal.4th at p. 1251.)
- "In order to amount to constructive discharge, adverse working conditions must be unusually 'aggravated' or amount to a 'continuous pattern' before the situation will be deemed intolerable. In general, '[s]ingle, trivial, or isolated acts of [misconduct] are insufficient' to support a constructive discharge claim. Moreover, a poor performance rating or a demotion, even when accompanied by reduction in pay, does not by itself trigger a constructive discharge." (Turner, supra, 7 Cal.4th at p. 1247, internal citation and footnotes omitted.)
- "In some circumstances, a single intolerable incident, such as a crime of violence against an employee by an employer, or an employer's ultimatum that an employee commit a crime, may constitute a constructive discharge. Such misconduct potentially could be found 'aggravated.' " (Turner, supra, 7 Cal.4th at p. 1247, fn. 3.)
- "Although situations may exist where the employee's decision to resign is unreasonable as a matter of law, '[w]hether conditions were so intolerable as to justify a reasonable employee's decision to resign is normally a question of fact. [Citation.]' " (Vasquez v. Franklin Management Real Estate Fund, Inc. (2013) 222 Cal.App.4th 819, 827 [166 Cal.Rptr.3d 242].)
- "[T]he standard by which a constructive discharge is determined is an objective one—the question is 'whether a reasonable person faced with the allegedly intolerable employer actions or conditions of employment would have no reasonable alternative except to quit.' " (Turner, supra, 7 Cal.4th at p. 1248, internal citations omitted.)
- "[U]nder Turner, the proper focus is on the working conditions themselves, not on the plaintiff's subjective reaction to those conditions." (Simers v. Los Angeles Times Communications, LLC (2018) 18 Cal.App.5th 1248, 1272 [227 Cal.Rptr.3d 695], original italics.)
- "The length of time the plaintiff remained on the job may be one relevant factor in determining the intolerability of employment conditions from the standpoint of a reasonable person." (Turner, supra, 7 Cal.4th at p. 1254, original italics.)

- "[T]here was, as the trial court found, substantial evidence that plaintiff's age and disability were 'substantial motivating reason[s]' for the adverse employment action or actions to which plaintiff was subjected. But the discriminatory motive for plaintiff's working conditions has no bearing on whether the evidence was sufficient to establish constructive discharge." (Simers, supra, 18 Cal.App.5th at p. 1271.)
- "In order to establish a constructive discharge, an employee must plead and prove, by the usual preponderance of the evidence standard, that the employer either intentionally created or knowingly permitted working conditions that were so intolerable or aggravated at the time of the employee's resignation that a reasonable employer would realize that a reasonable person in the employee's position would be compelled to resign. [¶] For purposes of this standard, the requisite knowledge or intent must exist on the part of either the employer or those persons who effectively represent the employer, i.e., its officers, directors, managing agents, or supervisory employees." (Turner, supra, 7 Cal.4th at p. 1251.)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, § 238

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 4-G, Constructive Discharge, ¶ 4:405 et seq. (The Rutter Group)

3 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 43, Civil Actions Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 43.01 (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.34 (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, § 249.15 (Matthew Bender)

10 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 100, Employer and Employee: Wrongful Termination and Discipline, § 100.31 et seq. (Matthew Bender)

2511. Adverse Action Made by Decision Maker Without Animus (Cat's Paw)

In this case, the decision to [discharge/[*other adverse employment action]] [name of plaintiff] was made by [name of decision maker]. Even if [name of decision maker] did not hold any [discriminatory/retaliatory] intent [or was unaware of [name of plaintiff]'s conduct on which the claim of retaliation is based], [name of defendant] may still be liable for [discrimination/retaliation] if [name of decision maker] followed a recommendation from or relied on facts provided by another person who had [discriminatory/retaliatory] intent.

To succeed, [*name of plaintiff] must prove both of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff]'s [specify protected activity or attribute] was a substantial motivating reason for [name of other person]'s [specify acts on which decision maker relied]; and
2. That [name of other person]'s [specify acts on which decision maker relied] was a substantial motivating reason for [name of decision maker]'s decision to [discharge/[other adverse employment action]] [name of plaintiff].

New December 2012; Revised June 2013, May 2020, November 2020

Directions for Use

Give this instruction if the "cat's paw" rule is a factor in the case. Under the cat's paw rule, the person who actually took the adverse employment action against the employee was not acting out of any improper animus. The decision maker, however, acted on information provided by another person who was acting out of discriminatory or retaliatory animus with the objective of causing the adverse employment action. The decision maker is referred to as the "cat's paw" of the person with the animus. (See Reeves v. Safeway Stores, Inc. (2004) 121 Cal.App.4th 95, 100 [16 Cal.Rptr.3d 717]; McGrory v. Applied Signal Technology, Inc. (2013) 212 Cal.App.4th 1510, 1536 [152 Cal.Rptr.3d 154] [accepting the legal premise that an employer may be held liable on the basis of a non-supervisor's discriminatory motivation].) The cases have not yet defined the scope of the cat's paw rule when the decision maker relies on the acts of a nonsupervisory coworker or other person involved in the employment decision.

The purpose of this instruction is to make it clear to the jury that they are not to evaluate the motives or knowledge of the decision maker, but rather to decide whether the acts of another person with animus actually caused the adverse action. Give the optional language in the second sentence of the first paragraph in a retaliation case in which the decision maker was not aware of the plaintiff's conduct that allegedly led to the retaliation (defense of ignorance). (See Reeves, supra, 121 Cal.App.4th at pp. 106–108.)

Element 1 requires that the protected activity or attribute be a substantial motivating reason for the retaliatory acts. Element 2 requires that the other person's improper motive be a substantial motivating reason for the decision maker's action. (See Harris v. City of Santa Monica (2013) 56 Cal.4th 203, 232 [152 Cal.Rptr.3d 392, 294 P.3d 49]; see also CACI No. 2507, "Substantial Motivating Reason" Explained.)

In both elements 1 and 2, all of the other person's specific acts need not be listed in all cases. Depending on the facts, doing so may be too cumbersome and impractical. If the specific acts are listed, the list should include all acts on which plaintiff claims the decision maker relied, not just the acts admitted to have been relied on by the decision maker.

Sources and Authority

- "This case presents the question whether an employer may be liable for retaliatory discharge when the supervisor who initiates disciplinary proceedings acts with retaliatory animus, but the cause for discipline is separately investigated and the ultimate decision to discharge the plaintiff is made by a manager with no knowledge that the worker has engaged in protected activities. We hold that so long as the supervisor's retaliatory motive was an actuating . . . cause of the dismissal, the employer may be liable for retaliatory discharge. Here the evidence raised triable issues as to the existence and effect of retaliatory motive on the part of the supervisor, and as to whether the manager and the intermediate investigator acted as tools or 'cat's paws' for the supervisor, that is, instrumentalities by which his retaliatory animus was carried into effect to plaintiff's injury." (Reeves, supra, 121 Cal.App.4th at p. 100.)
- "We do not suggest that discrimination must be alone sufficient to bring about an employment decision in order to constitute a substantial motivating factor. But it is important to recognize that discrimination can be serious, consequential, and even by itself determinative of an employment decision without also being a 'but for' cause." (Harris, supra, 56 Cal.4th at p. 229.)
- "Requiring the plaintiff to show that discrimination was a substantial motivating factor, rather than simply a motivating factor, more effectively ensures that liability will not be imposed based on evidence of mere thoughts or passing statements unrelated to the disputed employment decision. At the same time, . . . proof that discrimination was a substantial factor in an employment decision triggers the deterrent purpose of the FEHA and thus exposes the employer to liability, even if other factors would have led the employer to make the same decision at the time." (Harris, supra, 56 Cal.4th at p. 232, original italics.)
- "This concept—which for convenience we will call the 'defense of ignorance'—poses few analytical challenges so long as the 'employer' is conceived as a single entity receiving and responding to stimuli as a unitary, indivisible organism. But this is often an inaccurate picture in a world where a majority of workers are employed by large economic enterprises with layered and compartmentalized management structures. In such enterprises, decisions significantly affecting personnel are rarely if ever the responsibility of a single actor. As a result, unexamined assertions about the knowledge, ignorance, or motives of 'the employer' may be fraught with ambiguities, untested assumptions, and begged questions." (Reeves, supra, 121 Cal.App.4th at p. 108.)

- "[S]howing that a significant participant in an employment decision exhibited discriminatory animus is enough to raise an inference that the employment decision itself was discriminatory, even absent evidence that others in the process harbored such animus." (DeJung v. Superior Court (2008) 169 Cal.App.4th 533, 551 [87 Cal.Rptr.3d 99]).
- "[W]e accept Employee's implicit legal premise that Employer could be liable for [the outside investigator's] discriminatory motivation if the male executives who actually terminated Employee were merely the cat's paws of a biased female investigator." (McGrory v. Applied Signal Technology, Inc. (2013) 212 Cal.App.4th 1510, 1536 [152 Cal.Rptr.3d 154].)
- "Certainly a defendant does not conclusively negate the element of causation by showing only that some responsible actors, but not all, were ignorant of the occasion for retaliation." (Reeves, supra, 121 Cal.App.4th at p. 108.)
- "Here a rational fact finder could conclude that an incident of minor and excusable disregard for a supervisor's stated preferences was amplified into a 'solid case' of 'workplace violence,' and that this metamorphosis was brought about in necessary part by a supervisor's desire to rid himself of a worker who created trouble by complaining of matters the supervisor preferred to ignore. Since those complaints were protected activities under FEHA, a finder of fact must be permitted to decide whether these inferences should in fact be drawn." (Reeves, supra, 121 Cal.App.4th at p. 121.)
- "Our emphasis on the conduct of supervisors is not inadvertent. An employer can generally be held liable for the discriminatory or retaliatory actions of supervisors. The outcome is less clear where the only actor possessing the requisite animus is a nonsupervisory coworker." (Reeves, supra, 121 Cal.App.4th at p. 109 fn. 9, original italics, internal citation omitted.)

Secondary Sources

8 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Constitutional Law, §§ 1025, 1026, 1052, 1053

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 7-A, Title VII And The California Fair Employment And Housing Act, ¶ 7:806.5 (The Rutter Group)

2 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 41.131 (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.37[3][a] (Matthew Bender)

2512. Limitation on Remedies—Same Decision

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was [discharged/[other adverse employment action]] because of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] [protected status or action, e.g., race, gender, or age], which is an unlawful [discriminatory/retaliatory] reason. [Name of defendant] claims that [name of plaintiff] [was discharged/[other adverse employment action]] because of [specify reason, e.g., plaintiff's poor job performance], which is a lawful reason.

If you find that [discrimination/retaliation] was a substantial motivating reason for [*name of plaintiff]'s [discharge/[other adverse employment action]], you must then consider [name of defendant]'s stated reason for the [discharge/[other adverse employment action]].

If you find that [*e.g., plaintiff's poor job performance] was also a substantial motivating reason, then you must determine whether the defendant has proven that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] would have [discharged/[other adverse employment action]] [name of plaintiff] anyway at that time based on [e.g., plaintiff's poor job performance] even if [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] had not also been substantially motivated by [discrimination/retaliation].

In determining whether [*e.g., plaintiff's poor job performance] was a substantial motivating reason, determine what actually motivated [name of defendant], not what [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] might have been justified in doing.

If you find that [*name of defendant] [discharged/[other adverse employment action]] [name of plaintiff] for a [discriminatory/retaliatory] reason, you will be asked to determine the amount of damages that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] is entitled to recover. If, however, you find that [name of defendant] would have [discharged/[other adverse employment action]] [name of plaintiff] anyway at that time for [specify defendant's nondiscriminatory/nonretaliatory reason], then [name of plaintiff] will not be entitled to reinstatement, back pay, or damages.

New December 2013; Revised June 2015, June 2016

Directions for Use

Give this instruction along with CACI No. 2507, "Substantial Motivating Reason" Explained, if the employee has presented sufficient evidence for the jury to find that the employer took adverse action against him or her for a prohibited reason, but the employer has presented sufficient evidence for the jury to find that it had a legitimate reason for the action. In such a "mixed-motive" case, the employer is relieved from an award of damages, but may still be liable for attorney fees and costs and injunctive relief. (See Harris v. City of Santa Monica (2013) 56 Cal.4th 203, 211 [152 Cal.Rptr.3d 392, 294 P.3d 49].)

Mixed-motive must be distinguished from pretext though both require evaluation of the same evidence, i.e., the employer's purported legitimate reason for the adverse action. In a pretext case, the only actual motive is the discriminatory one and the purported legitimate reasons are fabricated in order to disguise the true motive. (See City and County of San Francisco v. Fair Employment and Housing Com. (1987) 191 Cal.App.3d 976, 985 [236 Cal.Rptr. 716].) The employee has the burden of proving pretext. (Harris, supra, 56 Cal.4th at pp. 214–215.) If the employee proves discrimination or retaliation and also pretext, the employer is liable for all potential remedies including damages. But if the employee proves discrimination or retaliation but fails to prove pretext, then a mixed-motive case is presented. To avoid an award of damages, the employer then has the burden of proving that it would have made the same decision anyway solely for the legitimate reason, even though it may have also discriminated or retaliated.

Sources and Authority

- "[U]nder the FEHA, when a jury finds that unlawful discrimination was a substantial factor motivating a termination of employment, and when the employer proves it would have made the same decision absent such discrimination, a court may not award damages, backpay, or an order of reinstatement. But the employer does not escape liability. In light of the FEHA's express purpose of not only redressing but also preventing and deterring unlawful discrimination in the workplace, the plaintiff in this circumstance could still be awarded, where appropriate, declaratory relief or injunctive relief to stop discriminatory practices. In addition, the plaintiff may be eligible for reasonable attorney's fees and costs." (Harris, supra, 56 Cal.4th at p. 211.)
- "Because employment discrimination litigation does not resemble the kind of cases in which we have applied the clear and convincing standard, we hold that preponderance of the evidence is the standard of proof applicable to an employer's same-decision showing" (Harris, supra, 53 Cal.4th at p. 239.)
- "[W]hen we refer to a same-decision showing, we mean proof that the employer, in the absence of any discrimination, would have made the same decision at the time it made its actual decision." (Harris, supra, 56 Cal.4th at p. 224, original italics.)
- "In light of today's decision, a jury in a mixed-motive case alleging unlawful termination should be instructed that it must find the employer's action was substantially motivated by discrimination before the burden shifts to the employer to make a same-decision showing, and that a same-decision showing precludes an award of reinstatement, backpay, or damages." (Harris, supra, 56 Cal.4th at p. 241.)
- "We do not suggest that discrimination must be alone sufficient to bring about an employment decision in order to constitute a substantial motivating factor. But it is important to recognize that discrimination can be serious, consequential, and even by itself determinative of an employment decision without also being a 'but for' cause." (Harris, supra, 56 Cal.4th at p. 229.)

- "[A] plaintiff has the initial burden to make a prima facie case of discrimination by showing that it is more likely than not that the employer has taken an adverse employment action based on a prohibited criterion. A prima facie case establishes a presumption of discrimination. The employer may rebut the presumption by producing evidence that its action was taken for a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason. If the employer discharges this burden, the presumption of discrimination disappears. The plaintiff must then show that the employer's proffered nondiscriminatory reason was actually a pretext for discrimination, and the plaintiff may offer any other evidence of discriminatory motive. The ultimate burden of persuasion on the issue of discrimination remains with the plaintiff." (Harris, supra, 56 Cal.4th at pp. 214–215.)
- "In some cases there is no single reason for an employer's adverse action, and a discriminatory motive may have influenced otherwise legitimate reasons for the employment decision. In Harris v. City of Santa Monica (Harris) the California Supreme Court recognized the traditional McDonnell Douglas burden-shifting test was intended for use in cases presenting a single motive for the adverse action, that is, in 'cases that do not involve mixed motives.' As the Court explained, this 'framework . . . presupposes that the employer has a single reason for taking an adverse action against the employee and that the reason is either discriminatory or legitimate. By hinging liability on whether the employer's proffered reason for taking the action is genuine or pretextual, the McDonnell Douglas inquiry aims to ferret out the "true" reason for the employer's action. In a mixed-motives case, however, there is no single "true" reason for the employer's action.' " (Husman v. Toyota Motor Credit Corp. (2017) 12 Cal.App.5th 1168, 1182 [220 Cal.Rptr.3d 42], internal citations omitted.)
- "Following the California Supreme Court's decision in Harris, . . . the Judicial Council added CACI No. 2512, to be given when the employer presents evidence of a legitimate reason for the adverse employment action, informing the jurors that even if they find that discrimination was a substantial motivating reason for the adverse action, if the employer establishes that the adverse action nonetheless would have been taken for legitimate reasons, 'then [the plaintiff] will not be entitled to reinstatement, back pay, or damages.' " (Davis v. Farmers Ins. Exchange (2016) 245 Cal.App.4th 1302, 1320–1321 [200 Cal.Rptr.3d 315].)
- " '[Plaintiff] further argues that for equitable reasons, an employer that wishes to make a same-decision showing must concede that it had mixed motives for taking the adverse employment action instead of denying a discriminatory motive altogether. But there is no inconsistency when an employer argues that its motive for discharging an employee was legitimate, while also arguing, contingently, that if the trier of fact finds a mixture of lawful and unlawful motives, then its lawful motive alone would have led to the discharge.' " (Thornbrough v. Western Placer Unified School Dist. (2013) 223 Cal.App.4th 169, 199 [167 Cal.Rptr.3d 24] [quoting Harris, supra, 56 Cal.App.4th at p. 240].)

- "As a preliminary matter, we reject [defendant]'s claim that the jury could have found no liability on the part of [defendant] had it been properly instructed on the mixed-motive defense at trial. As discussed, the Supreme Court in Harris held that the mixed-motive defense is available under the FEHA, but only as a limitation on remedies and not as a complete defense to liability. Consequently, when the plaintiff proves by a preponderance of the evidence that discrimination was a substantial motivating factor in the adverse employment decision, the employer is liable under the FEHA. When the employer proves by a preponderance of the evidence that it would have made the same decision even in the absence of such discrimination, the employer is still liable under the FEHA, but the plaintiff's remedies are then limited to declaratory or injunctive relief, and where appropriate, attorney's fees and costs. As presently drafted, BAJI No. 12.26 does not accurately set forth the parameters of the defense as articulated by the Supreme Court, but rather states that, in a mixed-motive case, 'the employer is not liable if it can establish by a preponderance of the evidence that its legitimate reason, standing alone, would have induced it to make the same decision.' By providing that the mixed-motive defense, if proven, is a complete defense to liability, [defendant]'s requested instruction directly conflicts with the holding in Harris. (Alamo v. Practice Management Information Corp. (2013) 219 Cal.App.4th 466, 481 [161 Cal.Rptr.3d 758], internal citations omitted.)
- "Pretext may . . . be inferred from the timing of the company's termination decision, by the identity of the person making the decision, and by the terminated employee's job performance before termination." (Nazir v. United Airlines, Inc. (2009) 178 Cal.App.4th 243, 272 [100 Cal.Rptr.3d 296].)

Secondary Sources

8 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Constitutional Law, §§ 1037, 1067

7 Witkin, California Procedure (6th ed. 2021), Judgment § 101

3 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 41.11 (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.23 (Matthew Bender)

2513. Business Judgment for "At-Will" Employment

In California, employment is presumed to be "at will." This means that an employer may [discharge/[*other adverse action]] an employee for no reason, or for a good, bad, mistaken, unwise, or even unfair reason, as long as its action is not for a [discriminatory/retaliatory] reason.

New December 2013; Revised May 2024

Directions for Use

Give this instruction to advise the jury that the employer's adverse action is not illegal just because it is ill-advised. It has been held to be error not to give this instruction. (See Veronese v. Lucasfilm Ltd. (2012) 212 Cal.App.4th 1, 20–24 [151 Cal.Rptr.3d 41].)

Sources and Authority

- At-Will Employment. Labor Code section 2922.
- "[A] plaintiff in a discrimination case must show discrimination, not just that the employer's decision was wrong, mistaken, or unwise. . . . ' "The employer may fire an employee for a good reason, a bad reason, a reason based on erroneous facts, or for no reason at all, as long as its action is not for a discriminatory reason. . . . 'While an employer's judgment or course of action may seem poor or erroneous to outsiders, the relevant question is . . . whether the given reason was a pretext for illegal discrimination. The employer's stated legitimate reason . . . does not have to be a reason that the judge or jurors would act on or approve.' " ' " (Veronese, supra, 212 Cal.App.4th at p. 21, internal citation omitted.)
- "[I]f nondiscriminatory, [defendant]'s true reasons need not necessarily have been wise or correct. While the objective soundness of an employer's proffered reasons supports their credibility . . . , the ultimate issue is simply whether the employer acted with a motive to discriminate illegally. Thus, 'legitimate' reasons in this context are reasons that are facially unrelated to prohibited bias, and which, if true, would thus preclude a finding of discrimination." (Guz v. Bechtel National, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal.4th 317, 358 [100 Cal.Rptr.2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089], original italics, internal citations omitted.)
- "[U]nder the law [defendant] was entitled to exercise her business judgment, without second guessing. But [the court] refused to tell the jury that. That was error." (Veronese, supra, 212 Cal.App.4th at p. 24.)
- "An employment decision based on political concerns, even if otherwise unfair, is not actionable under section 12940 so long as the employee's race or other protected status is not a substantial factor in the decision." (Diego v. City of Los Angeles (2017) 15 Cal.App.5th 338, 355 [223 Cal.Rptr.3d 173].)

- "What constitutes satisfactory performance is of course a question ordinarily vested in the employer's sole discretion. An employer is free to set standards that might appear unreasonable to outside observers, and to discipline employees who fail to meet those standards, so long as the standards are applied evenhandedly. But that does not mean that an employer conclusively establishes the governing standard of competence in an employment discrimination action merely by asserting that the plaintiff's performance was less than satisfactory. Evidence of the employer's policies and practices, including its treatment of other employees, may support a contention, and an eventual finding, that the plaintiff's job performance did in fact satisfy the employer's own norms." (Cheal v. El Camino Hospital (2014) 223 Cal.App.4th 736, 742–743 [167 Cal.Rptr.3d 485].)
- "The central issue is and should remain whether the evidence as a whole supports a reasoned inference that the challenged action was the product of discriminatory or retaliatory animus. The employer's mere articulation of a legitimate reason for the action cannot answer this question; it can only dispel the presumption of improper motive that would otherwise entitle the employee to a judgment in his favor." (Cheal, supra, 223 Cal.App.4th at p. 755.)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, § 244 et seq.

8 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Constitutional Law, §§ 1017–1021

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 4-A, Employment Presumed At Will, ¶ 4:25 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 7-A, Title VII And The California Fair Employment And Housing Act, ¶¶ 7:194, 7:200–7:201, 7:356, 7:391–7:392, 7:530, 7:531, 7:535 (The Rutter Group)

4 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 60, Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline, § 60.01 et seq. (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 249, Employment Law: Termination and Discipline, § 249.11 (Matthew Bender)

10 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 100, Employer and Employee: Wrongful Termination and Discipline, § 100.23 (Matthew Bender)

2514–2519. Reserved for Future Use

2520. Quid pro quo Sexual Harassment—Essential Factual Elements

---

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] subjected [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] to sexual harassment. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] [was an employee of [name of defendant]/ applied to [name of defendant] for a job/was a person providing services pursuant to a contract with [name of defendant]];
2. That [name of alleged harasser] made unwanted sexual advances to [name of plaintiff] or engaged in other unwanted verbal or physical conduct of a sexual nature;
3. That terms of employment, job benefits, or favorable working conditions were made contingent, by words or conduct, on [name of plaintiff]'s acceptance of [name of alleged harasser]'s sexual advances or conduct;
4. That at the time of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] conduct, [name of alleged harasser] was a supervisor or agent for [name of defendant];
5. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
6. That [name of alleged harasser]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003; Revised December 2015

Directions for Use

Employers may be liable for the conduct of certain agents. (See Gov. Code, §§ 12925(d), 12926(d), 12940(j)(1); Reno v. Baird (1998) 18 Cal.4th 640, 648 [76 Cal.Rptr.2d 499, 957 P.2d 1333] [California Supreme Court declined to express opinion whether "agent" language in the FEHA merely incorporates respondeat superior principles or has some other meaning]).

Sources and Authority

- Harassment Prohibited Under Fair Employment and Housing Act. Government Code section 12940(j)(1).
- "Employer" Defined: Harassment. Government Code section 12940(j)(4)(A).
- "Person Providing Services Under Contract: Harassment. Government Code section 12940(j)(5).
- Sexual Harassment. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 2, § 11034(f)(1).
- "Courts have generally recognized two distinct categories of sexual harassment claims: quid pro quo and hostile work environment. Quid pro quo harassment occurs when submission to sexual conduct is made a condition of concrete employment benefits." (Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal.App.3d 590, 607 [262 Cal.Rptr. 842], internal citation omitted.)

- "A cause of action for quid pro quo harassment involves the behavior most commonly regarded as sexual harassment, including, e.g., sexual propositions, unwarranted graphic discussion of sexual acts, and commentary on the employee's body and the sexual uses to which it could be put. To state a cause of action on this theory, it is sufficient to allege that a term of employment was expressly or impliedly conditioned upon acceptance of a supervisor's unwelcome sexual advances." (Mogilefsky v. Superior Court (1993) 20 Cal.App.4th 1409, 1414 [26 Cal.Rptr.2d 116], internal citations omitted.)
- "Cases based on threats which are carried out are referred to often as quid pro quo cases, as distinct from bothersome attentions or sexual remarks that are sufficiently severe or pervasive to create a hostile work environment. The terms quid pro quo and hostile work environment are helpful, perhaps, in making a rough demarcation between cases in which threats are carried out and those where they are not or are absent altogether, but beyond this are of limited utility . . . [¶] We do not suggest the terms quid pro quo and hostile work environment are irrelevant to Title VII litigation. To the extent they illustrate the distinction between cases involving a threat which is carried out and offensive conduct in general, the terms are relevant when there is a threshold question whether a plaintiff can prove discrimination in violation of Title VII. When a plaintiff proves that a tangible employment action resulted from a refusal to submit to a supervisor's sexual demands, he or she establishes that the employment decision itself constitutes a change in the terms and conditions of employment that is actionable under Title VII. For any sexual harassment preceding the employment decision to be actionable, however, the conduct must be severe or pervasive." (Burlington Industries, Inc. v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 751, 753–754 [118 S.Ct. 2257, 141 L.Ed.2d 633].)

Secondary Sources

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 7-A, Title VII And The California Fair Employment And Housing Act, ¶¶ 7:150, 7:166, 7:168–7:169, 7:194 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 10-A, Sources Of Law Prohibiting Harassment, ¶¶ 10:18–10:19, 10:22, 10:31 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 10-B, Sexual Harassment, ¶¶ 10:40, 10:50 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Sexual Harassment, §§ 3.31–3.35

2 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 41.81[1][a], [6] (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment

Discrimination, § 115.36[5][b] (Matthew Bender)
California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation § 2:55 (Thomson Reuters)

2521A. Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Plaintiff—Essential Factual Elements—Employer or Entity Defendant (Gov. Code, §§ 12923, 12940(j))

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was subjected to harassment based on [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] [describe protected status, e.g., race, gender, or age] at [name of defendant] and that this harassment created a work environment that was hostile, intimidating, offensive, oppressive, or abusive.

To establish this claim, [*name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] was [an employee of/an applicant for a position with/a person providing services under a contract with/an unpaid intern with/a volunteer with] [name of defendant];
2. That [name of plaintiff] was subjected to harassing conduct because [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was [protected status, e.g., a woman];
3. That the harassing conduct was severe or pervasive;
4. That a reasonable [e.g., woman] in [name of plaintiff]'s circumstances would have considered the work environment to be hostile, intimidating, offensive, oppressive, or abusive;
5. That [name of plaintiff] considered the work environment to be hostile, intimidating, offensive, oppressive, or abusive;
6. [Select applicable basis of defendant's liability:]

   [That a supervisor engaged in the conduct;]

   [*or]

   [That [*name of defendant] [or [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] supervisors or agents] knew or should have known of the conduct and failed to take immediate and appropriate corrective action;]
7. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
8. That the conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

Derived from former CACI No. 2521 December 2007; Revised June 2013, December 2015, May 2018, July 2019, May 2020, November 2021, November 2023, May 2024

Directions for Use

This instruction is for use in a hostile work environment case when the defendant is an employer or other entity covered by the FEHA. If the defendant is a labor organization, employment agency, apprenticeship training program or any training program leading to employment (rather than an employer), the instruction should be modified as appropriate. (See Gov. Code, § 12940(j)(1).) Further modification may be necessary if the defendant is a business-entity agent of an employer. (Raines v. U.S. Healthworks Medical Group (2023) 15 Cal.5th 268, 291 [312 Cal.Rptr.3d 301, 534 P.3d 40].) The relevant provision protects an employee, an applicant, an unpaid intern or volunteer, or a person providing services under a contract. (See ibid.) If the alleged harassment did not occur in the workplace, the instruction should be modified as appropriate. (See Doe v. Capital Cities (1996) 50 Cal.App.4th 1038, 1051 [58 Cal.Rptr.2d 122] ["[A]s long as the harassment occurs in a work-related context, the employer is liable"].)

For an individual defendant, such as the alleged harasser or plaintiff's coworker, see CACI No. 2522A, Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Plaintiff—Essential Factual Elements—Individual Defendant. For a case in which the plaintiff is not the target of the harassment, see CACI No. 2521B, Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Others—Essential Factual Elements—Employer or Entity Defendant. For an instruction for use if the hostile environment is due to sexual favoritism, see CACI No. 2521C, Work Environment Harassment—Sexual Favoritism—Essential Factual Elements—Employer or Entity Defendant. Also read CACI No. 2523, "Harassing Conduct" Explained, and CACI No. 2524, "Severe or Pervasive" Explained.

Modify element 2 if plaintiff was not actually a member of the protected class, but alleges harassment because the plaintiff was perceived to be a member, or associated with someone who was or was perceived to be a member, of the protected class. (See Gov. Code, § 12926(o).)

In element 6, select the applicable basis of employer liability: (a) strict liability for a supervisor's harassing conduct, or (b) the employer's ratification of the conduct. For a definition of "supervisor," see CACI No. 2525, Harassment—"Supervisor" Defined. If there are both employer and individual supervisor defendants (see CACI No. 2522A, Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Plaintiff—Essential Factual Elements—Individual Defendant) and both are found liable, they are both jointly and severally liable for any damages. Comparative fault and Proposition 51 do not apply to the employer's strict liability for supervisor harassment. (State Dept. of Health Servs. v. Superior Court (2003) 31 Cal.4th 1026, 1041–1042 [6 Cal.Rptr.3d 441, 79 P.3d 556]; see Bihun v. AT&T Information Systems, Inc. (1993) 13 Cal.App.4th 976, 1000 [16 Cal.Rptr.2d 787], disapproved on other grounds in Lakin v. Watkins Associated Industries (1993) 6 Cal.4th 644, 664 [25 Cal.Rptr.2d 109, 863 P.2d 179]; see also Rashtian v. BRAC-BH, Inc. (1992) 9 Cal.App.4th 1847, 1851 [12 Cal.Rptr.2d 411] [Proposition 51 cannot be applied to those who are without fault and only have vicarious liability by virtue of some statutory fiat].) Employers may be liable for the conduct of certain agents. (See Gov. Code, §§ 12925(d), 12926(d), and 12940(j)(1) and Reno v. Baird (1998) 18 Cal.4th 640, 658 [76 Cal.Rptr.2d 499, 957 P.2d 1333] [California Supreme Court declined to express opinion whether "agent" language in the FEHA merely incorporates respondeat superior principles or has some other meaning].)

Sources and Authority

- Legislative Intent With Regard to Application of the Laws About Harassment. Government Code section 12923.
- Harassment Prohibited Under Fair Employment and Housing Act. Government Code section 12940(j)(1).
- "Employer" Defined for Harassment. Government Code section 12940(j)(4)(A).
- Harassment Because of Sex. Government Code section 12940(j)(4)(C).
- Person Providing Services Under Contract. Government Code section 12940(j)(5).
- Aiding and Abetting Fair Employment and Housing Act Violations. Government Code section 12940(i).
- Perception and Association. Government Code section 12926(o).
- "The California Fair Employment and Housing Act, which defines 'employer' to 'include[]' 'any person acting as an agent of an employer,' permits a business entity acting as an agent of an employer to be held directly liable as an employer for employment discrimination in violation of the FEHA in appropriate circumstances when the business-entity agent has at least five employees and carries out FEHA-regulated activities on behalf of an employer. We do not decide the significance, if any, of employer control over the act(s) of the agent that gave rise to the FEHA violation, and we also do not decide whether our conclusion extends to business-entity agents that have fewer than five employees. We base our conclusion on our interpretation of the FEHA's definition of employer; we express no view of the scope of a business entity agent's possible liability under the FEHA's aider and abettor provision." (Raines, supra, 15 Cal. 5th at p. 291, internal citations omitted.)
- "To establish a prima facie case of a hostile work environment, [the plaintiff] must show that (1) [plaintiff] is a member of a protected class; (2) [plaintiff] was subjected to unwelcome harassment; (3) the harassment was based on [plaintiff's] protected status; (4) the harassment unreasonably interfered with [plaintiff's] work performance by creating an intimidating, hostile, or offensive work environment; and (5) defendants are liable for the harassment." (Ortiz v. Dameron Hospital Assn. (2019) 37 Cal.App.5th 568, 581 [250 Cal.Rptr.3d 1].)
- "[T]he adjudicator's inquiry should center, dominantly, on whether the discriminatory conduct has unreasonably interfered with the plaintiff's work performance. To show such interference, 'the plaintiff need not prove that his or her tangible productivity has declined as a result of the harassment.' It suffices to prove that a reasonable person subjected to the discriminatory conduct would find, as the plaintiff did, that the harassment so altered working conditions as to 'make it more difficult to do the job.' " (Harris v. Forklift Sys. (1993) 510 U.S.

17, 25 [114 S.Ct. 367, 126 L.Ed.2d 295], conc. opn. of Ginsburg, J.; see Gov. Code, § 12923(a) endorsing this language as reflective of California law.)

- "[A]n employer is strictly liable for all acts of sexual harassment by a supervisor." (State Dept. of Health Servs., supra, 31 Cal.4th at p. 1042.)
- "The applicable language of the FEHA does not suggest that an employer's liability for sexual harassment by a supervisor is constrained by principles of agency law. Had the Legislature so intended, it would have used language in the FEHA imposing the negligence standard of liability on acts of harassment by an employee 'other than an agent,' 'not acting as the employer's agent,' or 'not acting within the scope of an agency for the employer.' By providing instead in section 12940, subdivision (j)(1), that the negligence standard applies to acts of harassment 'by an employee other than an agent or supervisor' (italics added), the Legislature has indicated that all acts of harassment by a supervisor are to be exempted from the negligence standard, whether or not the supervisor was then acting as the employer's agent, and that agency principles come into play only when the harasser is not a supervisor. (State Dept. of Health Services, supra, 31 Cal.4th at p. 1041, original italics.)
- "When the harasser is a nonsupervisory employee, employer liability turns on a showing of negligence (that is, the employer knew or should have known of the harassment and failed to take appropriate corrective action)." (Rehmani v. Superior Court (2012) 204 Cal.App.4th 945, 952 [139 Cal.Rptr.3d 464].)
- "If an employee other than an agent or supervisor commits the harassment, and the employer takes immediate and appropriate corrective action when it becomes or reasonably should become aware of the conduct—for example, when the victim or someone else informs the employer—there simply is no 'unlawful employment practice' that the FEHA governs." (Carrisales v. Dept. of Corrections (1999) 21 Cal.4th 1132, 1136 [90 Cal.Rptr.2d 804, 988 P.2d 1083], called into doubt on other grounds by statute.)
- "Under FEHA, an employer is strictly liable for harassment by a supervisor. However, an employer is only strictly liable under FEHA for harassment by a supervisor 'if the supervisor is acting in the capacity of supervisor when the harassment occurs.' 'The employer is not strictly liable for a supervisor's acts of harassment resulting from a completely private relationship unconnected with the employment and not occurring at the workplace or during normal working hours.' " (Atalla v. Rite Aid Corp. (2023) 89 Cal.App.5th 294, 309 [306 Cal.Rptr.3d 1], internal citations omitted, original italics.)
- "Here, [defendant] was jointly liable with its employees on a respondeat superior or vicarious liability theory on every cause of action in which it was named as a defendant." (Bihun, supra, 13 Cal.App.4th at p. 1000.)
- "The McDonnell Douglas burden-shifting framework does not apply to [plaintiff]'s harassment claim either. Since 'there is no possible justification for harassment in the workplace,' an employer cannot offer a legitimate nondiscriminatory reason for it." (Cornell v. Berkeley Tennis Club (2017) 18

Cal.App.5th 908, 927 [227 Cal.Rptr.3d 286].)

- "[A]lthough no California cases have directly addressed racial harassment in the workplace, the California courts have applied the federal threshold standard to claims of sexual harassment and held that FEHA is violated when the harassment was 'sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter the conditions of the victim's employment.' " (Etter v. Veriflo Corp. (1998) 67 Cal.App.4th 457, 464–465 [79 Cal.Rptr.2d 33], internal citations and footnote omitted.)
- "When the workplace is permeated with discriminatory intimidation, ridicule and insult that is 'sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter the conditions of the victim's employment and create an abusive working environment,' the law is violated." (Kelly-Zurian v. Wohl Shoe Co., Inc. (1994) 22 Cal.App.4th 397, 409 [27 Cal.Rptr.2d 457], internal citation omitted.)
- "[N]ot every utterance of a racial slur in the workplace violates the FEHA or Title VII. As the United States Supreme Court has recognized in the context of sexual harassment: '[N]ot all workplace conduct that may be described as "harassment" affects a "term, condition, or privilege" of employment within the meaning of Title VII. For sexual harassment to be actionable, it must be sufficiently severe or pervasive "to alter the conditions of [the victim's] employment and create an abusive working environment." ' . . . 'Conduct that is not severe or pervasive enough to create an objectively hostile or abusive work environment—an environment that a reasonable person would find hostile or abusive—is beyond Title VII's purview. Likewise, if the victim does not subjectively perceive the environment to be abusive, the conduct has not actually altered the conditions of the victim's employment, and there is no Title VII violation.' . . . California courts have adopted the same standard in evaluating claims under the FEHA." (Aguilar v. Avis Rent A Car System, Inc. (1999) 21 Cal.4th 121, 129–130 [87 Cal.Rptr.2d 132, 980 P.2d 846], internal citations omitted.)
- "To be actionable, 'a sexually objectionable environment must be both objectively and subjectively offensive, one that a reasonable person would find hostile or abusive, and one that the victim in fact did perceive to be so.' That means a plaintiff who subjectively perceives the workplace as hostile or abusive will not prevail under the FEHA, if a reasonable person in the plaintiff's position, considering all the circumstances, would not share the same perception. Likewise, a plaintiff who does not perceive the workplace as hostile or abusive will not prevail, even if it objectively is so." (Lyle v. Warner Brothers Television Productions (2006) 38 Cal.4th 264, 284 [42 Cal.Rptr.3d 2, 132 P.3d 211], internal citations omitted.)
- "The stray remarks doctrine . . . allows a court to weigh and assess the remarks in isolation, and to disregard the potentially damaging nature of discriminatory remarks simply because they are made by 'nondecisionmakers, or [made] by decisionmakers unrelated to the decisional process.' [Defendant] also argues that ambiguous remarks are stray, irrelevant, prejudicial, and inadmissible. However, 'the task of disambiguating ambiguous utterances is for trial, not for summary judgment.' Determining the weight of discriminatory or ambiguous remarks is a role reserved for the jury." (Reid v. Google, Inc. (2010) 50 Cal.4th 512, 540–541 [113 Cal.Rptr.3d 327, 235 P.3d 988], internal citations omitted.)

- "[I]n reviewing the trial court's grant of [defendant]'s summary judgment motion, the Court of Appeal properly considered evidence of alleged discriminatory comments made by decision makers and coworkers along with all other evidence in the record." (Reid, supra, 50 Cal.4th at p. 545.)
- "[M]any employment cases present issues of intent, and motive, and hostile working environment, issues not determinable on paper. Such cases, we caution, are rarely appropriate for disposition on summary judgment, however liberalized it be." (Nazir v. United Airlines, Inc. (2009) 178 Cal.App.4th 243, 286 [100 Cal.Rptr.3d 296].)
- "In contending that the 'subjectively offensive' element was not proven, a defendant 'will assert that a plaintiff consented to the conduct through active participation in it, or was not injured because the plaintiff did not subjectively find it abusive.' [¶] [Evidence Code] Section 1106 limits the evidence the defendant may use to support this assertion. It provides that '[i]n any civil action alleging conduct which constitutes sexual harassment, sexual assault, or sexual battery, opinion evidence, reputation evidence, and evidence of specific instances of the plaintiff's sexual conduct, or any of that evidence, is not admissible by the defendant in order to prove consent by the plaintiff or the absence of injury to the plaintiff . . . .' This general rule is, however, subject to the exception that it 'does not apply to evidence of the plaintiff's sexual conduct with the alleged perpetrator.' The term 'sexual conduct' within the meaning of section 1106 has been broadly construed to include 'all active or passive behavior (whether statements or actions), that either directly or through reasonable inference establishes a plaintiff's willingness to engage in sexual activity,' including 'racy banter, sexual horseplay, and statements concerning prior, proposed, or planned sexual exploits.' " (Meeks v. AutoZone, Inc. (2018) 24 Cal.App.5th 855, 874 [235 Cal.Rptr.3d 161], internal citations omitted.)
- "[A]llegations of a racially hostile work-place must be assessed from the perspective of a reasonable person belonging to the racial or ethnic group of the plaintiff." (McGinest v. GTE Serv. Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 1103, 1115.)
- "Under . . . FEHA, sexual harassment can occur between members of the same gender as long as the plaintiff can establish the harassment amounted to discrimination because of sex." (Lewis v. City of Benicia (2014) 224 Cal.App.4th 1519, 1525 [169 Cal.Rptr.3d 794], original italics.)
- "[T]here is no requirement that the motive behind the sexual harassment must be sexual in nature. '[H]arassing conduct need not be motivated by sexual desire to support an inference of discrimination on the basis of sex.' Sexual harassment occurs when, as is alleged in this case, sex is used as a weapon to create a hostile work environment." (Singleton v. United States Gypsum Co. (2006) 140 Cal.App.4th 1547, 1564 [45 Cal.Rptr.3d 597], original italics, internal citation omitted.)

- "The plaintiff must show that the harassing conduct took place because of the plaintiff's sex, but need not show that the conduct was motivated by sexual desire. For example, a female plaintiff can prevail by showing that the harassment was because of the defendant's bias against women; she need not show that it was because of the defendant's sexual interest in women. In every case, however, the plaintiff must show a discriminatory intent or motivation based on gender." (Pantoja v. Anton (2011) 198 Cal.App.4th 87, 114 [129 Cal.Rptr.3d 384], internal citations omitted.)
- "[A] heterosexual male is subjected to harassment because of sex under the FEHA when attacks on his heterosexual identity are used as a tool of harassment in the workplace, irrespective of whether the attacks are motivated by sexual desire or interest." (Taylor v. Nabors Drilling USA, LP (2014) 222 Cal.App.4th 1228, 1239–1240 [166 Cal.Rptr.3d 676].)
- "A recent legislative amendment modifies section 12940, subdivision (j)(4)(C) (a provision of FEHA specifying types of conduct that constitute harassment because of sex) to read: 'For purposes of this subdivision, "harassment" because of sex includes sexual harassment, gender harassment, and harassment based on pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions. Sexually harassing conduct need not be motivated by sexual desire.' " (Lewis, supra, 224 Cal.App.4th at p. 1527, fn. 8, original italics.)
- "California courts have held so-called 'me too' evidence, that is, evidence of gender bias against employees other than the plaintiff, may be admissible evidence in discrimination and harassment cases." (Meeks, supra, 24 Cal.App.5th at p. 871.)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, §§ 353, 370

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 10-A, Sources Of Law Prohibiting Harassment, ¶¶ 10:18–10:19, 10:22, 10:31 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 10-B, Sexual Harassment, ¶¶ 10:40, 10:110–10:260 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Discrimination Claims, §§ 2.68, 2.75, Sexual and Other Harassment, §§ 3.1, 3.14, 3.17, 3.21, 3.36, 3.45

2 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, §§ 41.80[1][a], 41.81[1][b] (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.36 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation § 2:56 (Thomson Reuters)

2521B. Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Others—Essential Factual Elements—Employer or Entity Defendant (Gov. Code, §§ 12923, 12940(j))

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that coworkers at [name of defendant] were subjected to harassment based on [describe protected status, e.g., race, gender, or age] and that this harassment created a work environment for [name of plaintiff] that was hostile, intimidating, offensive, oppressive, or abusive.

To establish this claim, [*name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] was [an employee of/an applicant for a position with/a person providing services under a contract with/an unpaid intern with/a volunteer with] [name of defendant];
2. That [name of plaintiff], although not personally subjected to harassing conduct, personally witnessed harassing conduct that took place in [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] immediate work environment;
3. That the harassing conduct was severe or pervasive;
4. That a reasonable [describe member of protected group, e.g., woman] in [name of plaintiff]'s circumstances would have considered the work environment to be hostile, intimidating, offensive, oppressive, or abusive;
5. That [name of plaintiff] considered the work environment to be hostile, intimidating, offensive, oppressive, or abusive toward [e.g., women];
6. [Select applicable basis of defendant's liability:]

   [That a supervisor engaged in the conduct;]

   [*or]

   [That [*name of defendant] [or [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] supervisors or agents] knew or should have known of the conduct and failed to take immediate and appropriate corrective action;]
7. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
8. That the conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

---

*Derived from former CACI No. 2521 December 2007; Revised June 2013, December 2015, May 2018, July 2019, November 2021, May 2024

Directions for Use

This instruction is for use in a hostile work environment case if the plaintiff was not the target of the harassing conduct and the defendant is an employer or other entity covered by the FEHA. If the defendant is a labor organization, employment agency, apprenticeship training program or any training program leading to employment (rather than an employer), the instruction should be modified as appropriate. (See Gov. Code, § 12940(j)(1).) Further modification may be necessary if the defendant is a business-entity agent of an employer. (Raines v. U.S. Healthworks Medical Group (2023) 15 Cal.5th 268, 291 [312 Cal.Rptr.3d 301, 534 P.3d 40].) The relevant provision protects an employee, an applicant, an unpaid intern or volunteer, or a person providing services under a contract. (See ibid.) If the alleged harassment did not occur in the workplace, the instruction should be modified as appropriate. (See Doe v. Capital Cities (1996) 50 Cal.App.4th 1038, 1051 [58 Cal.Rptr.2d 122] ["[A]s long as the harassment occurs in a work-related context, the employer is liable"].)

For an individual defendant, such as the alleged harasser or plaintiff's coworker, see CACI No. 2522B, Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Others—Essential Factual Elements—Individual Defendant. For a case in which the plaintiff is the target of the harassment, see CACI No. 2521A, Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Plaintiff—Essential Factual Elements—Employer or Entity Defendant. For an instruction for use if the hostile environment is due to sexual favoritism, see CACI No. 2521C, Work Environment Harassment—Sexual Favoritism—Essential Factual Elements—Employer or Entity Defendant. Also read CACI No. 2523, "Harassing Conduct" Explained, and CACI No. 2524, "Severe or Pervasive" Explained.

In element 6, select the applicable basis of employer liability: (a) strict liability for a supervisor's harassing conduct, or (b) the employer's ratification of the conduct. For a definition of "supervisor," see CACI No. 2525, Harassment—"Supervisor" Defined. If there are both employer and individual supervisor defendants (see CACI No. 2522B, Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Others—Essential Factual Elements—Individual Defendant) and both are found liable, they are both jointly and severally liable for any damages. Comparative fault and Proposition 51 do not apply to the employer's strict liability for supervisor harassment. (State Dep't. of Health Servs. v. Superior Court (2003) 31 Cal.4th 1026, 1041–1042 [6 Cal.Rptr.3d 441, 79 P.3d 556]; see Bihun v. AT&T Information Systems, Inc. (1993) 13 Cal.App.4th 976, 1000 [16 Cal.Rptr.2d 787], disapproved on other grounds in Lakin v. Watkins Associated Industries (1993) 6 Cal.4th 644, 664 [25 Cal.Rptr.2d 109, 863 P.2d 179]; see also Rashtian v. BRAC-BH, Inc. (1992) 9 Cal.App.4th 1847, 1851 [12 Cal.Rptr.2d 411] [Proposition 51 cannot be applied to those who are without fault and only have vicarious liability by virtue of some statutory fiat].)

See also the Sources and Authority to CACI No. 2521A, Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Plaintiff—Essential Factual Elements—Employer or Entity Defendant.

Sources and Authority

- Legislative Intent With Regard to Application of the Laws About Harassment. Government Code section 12923.
- Harassment Prohibited Under Fair Employment and Housing Act. Government Code section 12940(j)(1).
- "Employer" Defined for Harassment. Government Code section 12940(j)(4)(A).
- Person Providing Services Under Contract. Government Code section 12940(j)(5).
- Harassment Because of Sex. Government Code section 12940(j)(4)(C).
- Aiding and Abetting Fair Employment and Housing Act Violations. Government Code section 12940(i).
- Perception and Association. Government Code section 12926(o).
- "The California Fair Employment and Housing Act, which defines 'employer' to 'include[]' 'any person acting as an agent of an employer,' permits a business entity acting as an agent of an employer to be held directly liable as an employer for employment discrimination in violation of the FEHA in appropriate circumstances when the business-entity agent has at least five employees and carries out FEHA-regulated activities on behalf of an employer. We do not decide the significance, if any, of employer control over the act(s) of the agent that gave rise to the FEHA violation, and we also do not decide whether our conclusion extends to business-entity agents that have fewer than five employees. We base our conclusion on our interpretation of the FEHA's definition of employer; we express no view of the scope of a business entity agent's possible liability under the FEHA's aider and abettor provision." (Raines, supra, 15 Cal.5th at p. 291, internal citations omitted.)
- "The elements [of a prima facie claim of hostile-environment sexual harassment] are: (1) plaintiff belongs to a protected group; (2) plaintiff was subject to unwelcome sexual harassment; (3) the harassment complained of was based on sex; (4) the harassment complained of was sufficiently pervasive so as to alter the conditions of employment and create an abusive working environment; and (5) respondeat superior." (Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal.App.3d 590, 608 [262 Cal.Rptr. 842], footnote omitted.)
- "[T]he adjudicator's inquiry should center, dominantly, on whether the discriminatory conduct has unreasonably interfered with the plaintiff's work performance. To show such interference, 'the plaintiff need not prove that his or her tangible productivity has declined as a result of the harassment.' It suffices to prove that a reasonable person subjected to the discriminatory conduct would find, as the plaintiff did, that the harassment so altered working conditions as to 'make it more difficult to do the job.' " (Harris v. Forklift Sys. (1993) 510 U.S. 17, 25 [114 S.Ct. 367, 126 L.Ed.2d 295], conc. opn. of Ginsburg, J.; see Gov. Code, § 12923(a) endorsing this language as reflective of California law.)
- "The plaintiff's work environment is affected not only by conduct directed at herself but also by the treatment of others. A woman's perception that her work environment is hostile to women will obviously be reinforced if she witnesses the harassment of other female workers." (Beyda v. City of Los Angeles (1998) 65 Cal.App.4th 511, 519 [76 Cal.Rptr.2d 547], internal citations omitted.)

- "Harassment against others in the workplace is only relevant to the plaintiff's case if she has personal knowledge of it. Unless plaintiff witnesses the conduct against others, or is otherwise aware of it, that conduct cannot alter the conditions of her employment and create an abusive working environment. Stated another way, a reasonable person in plaintiff's position would not find the environment hostile or abusive unless that person had knowledge of the objectionable conduct toward others." (Beyda, supra, 65 Cal.App.4th at p. 520.)
- "To state that an employee must be the direct victim of the sexually harassing conduct is somewhat misleading as an employee who is subjected to a hostile work environment is a victim of sexual harassment even though no offensive remarks or touchings are directed to or perpetrated upon that employee. Generally, however, sexual conduct that involves or is aimed at persons other than the plaintiff is considered less offensive and severe than conduct that is directed at the plaintiff. A hostile work environment sexual harassment claim by a plaintiff who was not personally subjected to offensive remarks and touchings requires 'an even higher showing' than a claim by one who had been sexually harassed without suffering tangible job detriment: such a plaintiff must 'establish that the sexually harassing conduct permeated [her] direct work environment.' [¶] To meet this burden, the plaintiff generally must show that the harassment directed at others was in her immediate work environment, and that she personally witnessed it. The reason for this is obvious: if the plaintiff does not witness the incidents involving others, 'those incidents cannot affect . . . her perception of the hostility of the work environment.' " (Lyle v. Warner Brothers Television Productions (2006) 38 Cal.4th 264, 284–285 [42 Cal.Rptr.3d 2, 132 P.3d 211], internal citations omitted.)
- "[U]nder the FEHA, an employer is strictly liable for all acts of sexual harassment by a supervisor. (State Dep't. of Health Servs., supra, 31 Cal.4th at p. 1041, original italics.)
- "The applicable language of the FEHA does not suggest that an employer's liability for sexual harassment by a supervisor is constrained by principles of agency law. Had the Legislature so intended, it would have used language in the FEHA imposing the negligence standard of liability on acts of harassment by an employee 'other than an agent,' 'not acting as the employer's agent,' or 'not acting within the scope of an agency for the employer.' By providing instead in section 12940, subdivision (j)(1), that the negligence standard applies to acts of harassment 'by an employee other than an agent or supervisor' (italics added), the Legislature has indicated that all acts of harassment by a supervisor are to be exempted from the negligence standard, whether or not the supervisor was then acting as the employer's agent, and that agency principles come into play only when the harasser is not a supervisor. (State Dept. of Health Servs., supra, 31 Cal.4th at p. 1041, original italics.)

- "[I]n order for the employer to avoid strict liability for the supervisor's actions under the FEHA, the harassment must result from a completely private relationship unconnected with the employment. Otherwise, the employer is strictly liable for the supervisor's actions regardless of whether the supervisor was acting as the employer's agent." (Myers v. Trendwest Resorts, Inc. (2007) 148 Cal.App.4th 1403, 1421 [56 Cal.Rptr.3d 501].)
- "In order to be actionable, it must be shown that respondents knew, or should have known, of the alleged harassment and failed to take appropriate action." (McCoy v. Pacific Maritime Assn. (2013) 216 Cal.App.4th 283, 294 [156 Cal.Rptr.3d 851].)
- "If an employee other than an agent or supervisor commits the harassment, and the employer takes immediate and appropriate corrective action when it becomes or reasonably should become aware of the conduct—for example, when the victim or someone else informs the employer—there simply is no 'unlawful employment practice' that the FEHA governs." (Carrisales v. Dept. of Corrections (1999) 21 Cal.4th 1132, 1136 [90 Cal.Rptr.2d 804, 988 P.2d 1083], called into doubt on other grounds by statute.)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, §§ 353, 370

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 10-B, Sexual Harassment, ¶¶ 10:40, 10:110–10:260 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Discrimination Claims, §§ 2.68, 2.75, Sexual and Other Harassment, §§ 3.1, 3.14, 3.17, 3.21, 3.36, 3.45

2 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, §§ 41.80[1][a], 41.81[1][b] (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.36 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation § 2:56 (Thomson Reuters)

2521C. Work Environment Harassment—Sexual Favoritism—Essential Factual Elements—Employer or Entity Defendant (Gov. Code, §§ 12923, 12940(j))

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was subjected to harassment based on sexual favoritism at [name of defendant] and that this harassment created a work environment that was hostile, intimidating, offensive, oppressive, or abusive. "Sexual favoritism" means that another employee has received preferential treatment with regard to promotion, work hours, assignments, or other significant employment benefits or opportunities because of a sexual relationship with an individual representative of the employer who was in a position to grant those preferences.

To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] was [an employee of/an applicant for a position with/a person providing services under a contract with/an unpaid intern with/a volunteer with] [name of defendant];
2. That there was sexual favoritism in the work environment;
3. That the sexual favoritism was severe or pervasive;
4. That a reasonable [describe member of protected group, e.g., woman] in [name of plaintiff]'s circumstances would have considered the conduct to be hostile, intimidating, offensive, oppressive, or abusive because of the sexual favoritism;
5. That [name of plaintiff] considered the conduct to be hostile, intimidating, offensive, oppressive, or abusive because of the sexual favoritism;
6. [Select applicable basis of defendant's liability:]

   [That a supervisor [engaged in the conduct/created the sexual favoritism];]

   [*or]

   [That [name of defendant] [or [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] supervisors or agents] knew or should have known of the sexual favoritism and failed to take immediate and appropriate corrective action;]
7. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
8. That the conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

*Derived from former CACI No. 2521 December 2007; Revised December 2015, May 2018, July 2019, May 2020, November 2021, May 2024

Directions for Use

This instruction is for use in a hostile work environment case involving sexual favoritism when the defendant is an employer or other entity covered by the FEHA. If the defendant is a labor organization, employment agency, apprenticeship training program or any training program leading to employment (rather than an employer), the instruction should be modified as appropriate. (See Gov. Code, § 12940(j)(1).) Further modification may be necessary if the defendant is a business-entity agent of an employer. (Raines v. U.S. Healthworks Medical Group (2023) 15 Cal.5th 268, 291 [312 Cal.Rptr.3d 301, 534 P.3d 40].) The relevant provision protects an employee, an applicant, an unpaid intern or volunteer, or a person providing services under a contract. (See ibid.) If the facts of the case support it, the instruction should be modified as appropriate for the applicant's circumstances.

For an individual defendant, such as the alleged harasser or plaintiff's coworker, see CACI No. 2522C, Work Environment Harassment—Sexual Favoritism—Essential Factual Elements—Individual Defendant. For a case in which the plaintiff is the target of harassment based on a protected status such as gender, race, or sexual orientation, see CACI No. 2521A, Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Plaintiff—Essential Factual Elements—Employer or Entity Defendant. For an instruction for use if the plaintiff is not the target of the harassment, see CACI No. 2521B, Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Others—Essential Factual Elements—Employer or Entity Defendant. Also read CACI No. 2523, "Harassing Conduct" Explained, and CACI No. 2524, "Severe or Pervasive" Explained.

In element 6, select the applicable basis of employer liability: (a) strict liability for a supervisor's harassing conduct, or (b) the employer's ratification of the conduct. For a definition of "supervisor," see CACI No. 2525, Harassment—"Supervisor" Defined. If there are both employer and individual supervisor defendants (see CACI No. 2522C, Work Environment Harassment—Sexual Favoritism—Essential Factual Elements—Individual Defendant) and both are found liable, they are both jointly and severally liable for any damages. Comparative fault and Proposition 51 do not apply to the employer's strict liability for supervisor harassment. (State Dep't of Health Servs. v. Superior Court (2003) 31 Cal.4th 1026, 1041–1042 [6 Cal.Rptr.3d 441, 79 P.3d 556]; see Bihun v. AT&T Information Systems, Inc. (1993) 13 Cal.App.4th 976, 1000 [16 Cal.Rptr.2d 787], disapproved on other grounds in Lakin v. Watkins Associated Industries (1993) 6 Cal.4th 644, 664 [25 Cal.Rptr.2d 109, 863 P.2d 179]; see also Rashtian v. BRAC-BH, Inc. (1992) 9 Cal.App.4th 1847, 1851 [12 Cal.Rptr.2d 411] [Proposition 51 cannot be applied to those who are without fault and only have vicarious liability by virtue of some statutory fiat].)

See also the Sources and Authority to CACI No. 2521A, Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Plaintiff—Essential Factual Elements—Employer or Entity Defendant.

Sources and Authority

- Declaration of Legislative Intent With Regard to Application of the Laws About Harassment. Government Code section 12923.
- Harassment Prohibited Under Fair Employment and Housing Act. Government Code section 12940(j)(1).
- "Employer" Defined for Harassment. Government Code section 12940(j)(4)(A).
- Person Providing Services Under Contract. Government Code section 12940(j)(5).
- Harassment Because of Sex. Government Code section 12940(j)(4)(C).
- Aiding and Abetting Fair Employment and Housing Act Violations. Government Code section 12940(i).
- Perception and Association. Government Code section 12926(o).
- "The California Fair Employment and Housing Act, which defines 'employer' to 'include[] 'any person acting as an agent of an employer,' permits a business entity acting as an agent of an employer to be held directly liable as an employer for employment discrimination in violation of the FEHA in appropriate circumstances when the business-entity agent has at least five employees and carries out FEHA-regulated activities on behalf of an employer. We do not decide the significance, if any, of employer control over the act(s) of the agent that gave rise to the FEHA violation, and we also do not decide whether our conclusion extends to business-entity agents that have fewer than five employees. We base our conclusion on our interpretation of the FEHA's definition of employer; we express no view of the scope of a business entity agent's possible liability under the FEHA's aider and abettor provision." (Raines, supra, 15 Cal.5th at p. 291, internal citations omitted.)
- "The elements [of a prima facie claim of hostile-environment sexual harassment] are: (1) plaintiff belongs to a protected group; (2) plaintiff was subject to unwelcome sexual harassment; (3) the harassment complained of was based on sex; (4) the harassment complained of was sufficiently pervasive so as to alter the conditions of employment and create an abusive working environment; and (5) respondeat superior." (Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal.App.3d 590, 608 [262 Cal.Rptr. 842], footnote omitted.)
- "[T]he adjudicator's inquiry should center, dominantly, on whether the discriminatory conduct has unreasonably interfered with the plaintiff's work performance. To show such interference, 'the plaintiff need not prove that his or her tangible productivity has declined as a result of the harassment.' It suffices to prove that a reasonable person subjected to the discriminatory conduct would find, as the plaintiff did, that the harassment so altered working conditions as to 'make it more difficult to do the job.' " (Harris v. Forklift Sys. (1993) 510 U.S. 17, 25 [114 S.Ct. 367, 126 L.Ed.2d 295], conc. opn. of Ginsburg, J; see Gov. Code, § 12923(a) endorsing this language as reflective of California law.)
- "Following the guidance of the EEOC, and also employing standards adopted in our prior cases, we believe that an employee may establish an actionable claim of sexual harassment under the FEHA by demonstrating that widespread sexual favoritism was severe or pervasive enough to alter his or her working conditions and create a hostile work environment." (Miller v. Dept. of Corrections (2005) 36 Cal.4th 446, 466 [30 Cal.Rptr.3d 797, 115 P.3d 77], internal citations omitted.)

- "[S]exual favoritism by a manager may be actionable when it leads employees to believe that 'they [can] obtain favorable treatment from [the manager] if they became romantically involved with him', the affair is conducted in a manner 'so indiscreet as to create a hostile work environment,' or the manager has engaged in 'other pervasive conduct . . . which created a hostile work environment.' " (Miller, supra, 36 Cal.4th at p. 465, internal citations omitted.)
- "[A] romantic relationship between a supervisor and an employee does not, without more, give rise to a sexual discrimination or sexual harassment claim either under the FEHA or the public policy of the state." (Proksel v. Gattis (1996) 41 Cal.App.4th 1626, 1631 [49 Cal.Rptr.2d 322].)
- "The FEHA imposes two standards of employer liability for sexual harassment, depending on whether the person engaging in the harassment is the victim's supervisor or a nonsupervisory coemployee. The employer is liable for harassment by a nonsupervisory employee only if the employer (a) knew or should have known of the harassing conduct and (b) failed to take immediate and appropriate corrective action. This is a negligence standard. Because the FEHA imposes this negligence standard only for harassment 'by an employee other than an agent or supervisor', by implication the FEHA makes the employer strictly liable for harassment by a supervisor." (State Dept. of Health Servs., supra, 31 Cal.4th at pp. 1040–1041, original italics.)
- "The applicable language of the FEHA does not suggest that an employer's liability for sexual harassment by a supervisor is constrained by principles of agency law. Had the Legislature so intended, it would have used language in the FEHA imposing the negligence standard of liability on acts of harassment by an employee 'other than an agent,' 'not acting as the employer's agent,' or 'not acting within the scope of an agency for the employer.' By providing instead in section 12940, subdivision (j)(1), that the negligence standard applies to acts of harassment 'by an employee other than an agent or supervisor' (italics added), the Legislature has indicated that all acts of harassment by a supervisor are to be exempted from the negligence standard, whether or not the supervisor was then acting as the employer's agent, and that agency principles come into play only when the harasser is not a supervisor. (State Dept. of Health Servs., supra, 31 Cal.4th at p. 1041, original italics.)
- "[I]n order for the employer to avoid strict liability for the supervisor's actions under the FEHA, the harassment must result from a completely private relationship unconnected with the employment. Otherwise, the employer is strictly liable for the supervisor's actions regardless of whether the supervisor was acting as the employer's agent." (Myers v. Trendwest Resorts, Inc. (2007)

148 Cal.App.4th 1403, 1421 [56 Cal.Rptr.3d 501].)

- "In order to be actionable, it must be shown that respondents knew, or should have known, of the alleged harassment and failed to take appropriate action." (McCoy v. Pacific Maritime Assn. (2013) 216 Cal.App.4th 283, 294 [156 Cal.Rptr.3d 851].)
- "If an employee other than an agent or supervisor commits the harassment, and the employer takes immediate and appropriate corrective action when it becomes or reasonably should become aware of the conduct—for example, when the victim or someone else informs the employer—there simply is no 'unlawful employment practice' that the FEHA governs." (*Carrisales v. Dept. of Correction*s (1999) 21 Cal.4th 1132, 1136 [90 Cal.Rptr.2d 804, 988 P.2d 1083], called into doubt on other grounds by statute.)

Secondary Sources

4 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, §§ 353, 370

Chin et al., Cal. Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 10-B, Sexual Harassment, ¶¶ 10:40, 10:110–10:260 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Discrimination Claims, §§ 2.68, 2.75, Sexual and Other Harassment, §§ 3.1, 3.14, 3.17, 3.21, 3.36, 3.45

2 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, §§ 41.80[1][a], 41.81[1][b] (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.36 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation § 2:56 (Thomson Reuters)

2522A. Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Plaintiff—Essential Factual Elements—Individual Defendant (Gov. Code, §§ 12923, 12940(j))

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of individual defendant] subjected [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] to harassment based on [describe protected status, e.g., race, gender, or age] at [name of covered entity] and that this harassment created a work environment that was hostile, intimidating, offensive, oppressive, or abusive.

To establish this claim, [*name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] was [an employee of/an applicant for a position with/a person providing services under a contract with/an unpaid intern with/a volunteer with] [name of covered entity];

[2. That [*name of individual defendant] was an employee of [name of covered entity];]

3. That [name of plaintiff] was subjected to harassing conduct because [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was [protected status, e.g., a woman];

4. That the harassing conduct was severe or pervasive;

5. That a reasonable [e.g., woman] in [name of plaintiff]'s circumstances would have considered the work environment to be hostile, intimidating, offensive, oppressive, or abusive;

6. That [name of plaintiff] considered the work environment to be hostile, intimidating, offensive, oppressive, or abusive;

7. That [name of individual defendant] [participated in/assisted/ [or] encouraged] the harassing conduct;

8. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and

9. That the conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

Derived from former CACI No. 2522 December 2007; Revised June 2013, December 2015, May 2018, July 2019, May 2020, November 2021, May 2022

Directions for Use

This instruction is for use in a hostile work environment case if the plaintiff was the target of the harassing conduct and the defendant is also an employee of the covered entity. (Gov. Code, § 12940(j)(3).) Include optional element 2 if there is a dispute about the defendant's status as an employee and include optional question 2 on the verdict form. See CACI No. VF-2507A, Work Environment Harassment—Conduct

Directed at Plaintiff—Individual Defendant.

The relevant provision protects an employee, an applicant, an unpaid intern or volunteer, or a person providing services under a contract. (See Gov. Code, § 12940(j)(1).) If the alleged harassment did not occur in the workplace, the instruction should be modified as appropriate. (See Doe v. Capital Cities (1996) 50 Cal.App.4th 1038, 1051 [58 Cal.Rptr.2d 122] ["[A]s long as the harassment occurs in a work-related context, the employer is liable"].)

For an employer defendant, see CACI No. 2521A, Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Plaintiff—Essential Factual Elements—Employer or Entity Defendant. For a case in which the plaintiff is not the target of the harassment, see CACI No. 2522B, Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Others—Essential Factual Elements—Individual Defendant. For an instruction for use if the hostile environment is due to sexual favoritism, see CACI No. 2522C, Work Environment Harassment—Sexual Favoritism—Essential Factual Elements—Individual Defendant. Also read CACI No. 2523, "Harassing Conduct" Explained, and CACI No. 2524, "Severe or Pervasive" Explained.

Modify element 3 if the plaintiff was not actually a member of the protected class, but alleges harassment because the plaintiff was perceived to be a member, or associated with someone who was or was perceived to be a member, of the protected class. (See Gov. Code, § 12926(o).)

If there are both employer and individual supervisor defendants (see CACI No. 2521A, Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Plaintiff—Essential Factual Elements—Employer or Entity Defendant) and both are found liable, they are both jointly and severally liable for any damages. Comparative fault and Proposition 51 do not apply to the employer's strict liability for supervisor harassment. (State Dept. of Health Servs. v. Superior Court (2003) 31 Cal.4th 1026, 1041–1042 [6 Cal.Rptr.3d 441, 79 P.3d 556]; see Bihun v. AT&T Information Systems, Inc. (1993) 13 Cal.App.4th 976, 1000 [16 Cal.Rptr.2d 787], disapproved on other grounds in Lakin v. Watkins Associated Industries (1993) 6 Cal.4th 644, 664 [25 Cal.Rptr.2d 109, 863 P.2d 179]; see also Rashtian v. BRAC-BH, Inc. (1992) 9 Cal.App.4th 1847, 1851 [12 Cal.Rptr.2d 411] [Proposition 51 cannot be applied to those who are without fault and only have vicarious liability by virtue of some statutory fiat].)

See also the Sources and Authority to CACI No. 2521A, Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Plaintiff—Essential Factual Elements—Employer or Entity Defendant.

Sources and Authority

- Legislative Intent With Regard to Application of the Laws About Harassment. Government Code section 12923.
- Harassment Prohibited Under Fair Employment and Housing Act. Government Code section 12940(j)(1).

- Employee Personal Liability for Harassment. Government Code section 12940(j)(3).
- "Employer" Defined for Harassment. Government Code section 12940(j)(4)(A).
- Harassment Because of Sex. Government Code section 12940(j)(4)(C).
- Person Providing Services Under Contract. Government Code section 12940(j)(5).
- Aiding and Abetting Fair Employment and Housing Act Violations. Government Code section 12940(i).
- Perception and Association. Government Code section 12926(o).
- "To establish a prima facie case of a hostile work environment, [the plaintiff] must show that (1) [plaintiff] is a member of a protected class; (2) [plaintiff] was subjected to unwelcome harassment; (3) the harassment was based on [plaintiff's] protected status; (4) the harassment unreasonably interfered with [plaintiff's] work performance by creating an intimidating, hostile, or offensive work environment; and (5) defendants are liable for the harassment." (Ortiz v. Dameron Hospital Assn. (2019) 37 Cal.App.5th 568, 581 [250 Cal.Rptr.3d 1].)
- "[T]he adjudicator's inquiry should center, dominantly, on whether the discriminatory conduct has unreasonably interfered with the plaintiff's work performance. To show such interference, 'the plaintiff need not prove that his or her tangible productivity has declined as a result of the harassment.' It suffices to prove that a reasonable person subjected to the discriminatory conduct would find, as the plaintiff did, that the harassment so altered working conditions as to 'make it more difficult to do the job.' " (Harris v. Forklift Sys. (1993) 510 U.S. 17, 25 [114 S.Ct. 367, 126 L.Ed.2d 295], conc. opn. of Ginsburg, J.; see Gov. Code, § 12923(a) endorsing this language as reflective of California law.)
- "Under FEHA, an employee who harasses another employee may be held personally liable." (Lewis v. City of Benicia (2014) 224 Cal.App.4th 1519, 1524 [169 Cal.Rptr.3d 794].)
- "A supervisor who, without more, fails to take action to prevent sexual harassment of an employee is not personally liable as an aider and abettor of the harasser, an aider and abettor of the employer or an agent of the employer." (Fiol v. Doellstedt (1996) 50 Cal.App.4th 1318, 1331 [58 Cal.Rptr.2d 308].)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, §§ 363, 370

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 10-B, Sexual Harassment, ¶¶ 10:40, 10:110–10:260 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Discrimination Claims, §§ 2.68, 2.75, Sexual and Other Harassment, §§ 3.1, 3.14, 3.17, 3.36–3.45

2 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, §§ 41.80[1][a], 41.81[1][b] (Matthew Bender)

3 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 43, Civil Actions Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 43.01[10][g][i] (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.36 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation §§ 2:56–2:56.50 (Thomson Reuters)

2522B. Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Others—Essential Factual Elements—Individual Defendant (Gov. Code, §§ 12923, 12940(j))

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that coworkers at [name of covered entity] were subjected to harassment based on [describe protected status, e.g., race, gender, or age] and that this harassment created a work environment for [name of plaintiff] that was hostile, intimidating, offensive, oppressive, or abusive.

To establish this claim, [*name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] was [an employee of/an applicant for a position with/a person providing services under a contract with/an unpaid intern with/a volunteer with] [name of covered entity];

[2. That [*name of individual defendant] was an employee of [name of covered entity];]

3. That [name of plaintiff], although not personally subjected to harassing conduct, personally witnessed harassing conduct that took place in [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] immediate work environment;

4. That the harassing conduct was severe or pervasive;

5. That a reasonable [describe member of protected group, e.g., woman] in [name of plaintiff]'s circumstances would have considered the work environment to be hostile, intimidating, offensive, oppressive, or abusive;

6. That [name of plaintiff] considered the work environment to be hostile, intimidating, offensive, oppressive, or abusive toward [e.g., women];

7. That [name of individual defendant] [participated in/assisted/ [or] encouraged] the harassing conduct;

8. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and

9. That the conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

Derived from former CACI No. 2522 December 2007; Revised June 2013, December 2015, May 2018, July 2019, November 2021, May 2022

Directions for Use

This instruction is for use in a hostile work environment case if the plaintiff was not the target of the harassing conduct and the defendant is also an employee of the covered entity. (Gov. Code, § 12940(j)(3).) Include optional element 2 if there is a dispute about the defendant's status as an employee and include optional question 2 on the verdict form. See CACI No. VF-2507B, Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Others—Individual Defendant.

The relevant provision protects an employee, an applicant, an unpaid intern or volunteer, or a person providing services under a contract. (See Gov. Code, § 12940(j)(1).) If the alleged harassment did not occur in the workplace, the instruction should be modified as appropriate. (See Doe v. Capital Cities (1996) 50 Cal.App.4th 1038, 1051 [58 Cal.Rptr.2d 122] ["[A]s long as the harassment occurs in a work-related context, the employer is liable"].)

For an employer defendant, see CACI No. 2521B, Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Others—Essential Factual Elements—Employer or Entity Defendant. For a case in which the plaintiff is the target of the harassment, see CACI No. 2522A, Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Plaintiff—Essential Factual Elements—Individual Defendant. For an instruction for use if the hostile environment is due to sexual favoritism, see CACI No. 2522C, Work Environment Harassment—Sexual Favoritism—Essential Factual Elements—Individual Defendant. Also read CACI No. 2523, "Harassing Conduct" Explained, and CACI No. 2524, "Severe or Pervasive" Explained.

If there are both employer and individual supervisor defendants (see CACI No. 2521B, Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Others—Essential Factual Elements—Employer or Entity Defendant) and both are found liable, they are both jointly and severally liable for any damages. Comparative fault and Proposition 51 do not apply to the employer's strict liability for supervisor harassment. (State Dep't of Health Servs. v. Superior Court (2003) 31 Cal.4th 1026, 1041–1042 [6 Cal.Rptr.3d 441, 79 P.3d 556]; see Bihun v. AT&T Information Systems, Inc. (1993) 13 Cal.App.4th 976, 1000 [16 Cal.Rptr.2d 787], disapproved on other grounds in Lakin v. Watkins Associated Industries (1993) 6 Cal.4th 644, 664 [25 Cal.Rptr.2d 109, 863 P.2d 179]; see also Rashtian v. BRAC-BH, Inc. (1992) 9 Cal.App.4th 1847, 1851 [12 Cal.Rptr.2d 411] [Proposition 51 cannot be applied to those who are without fault and only have vicarious liability by virtue of some statutory fiat].)

See also the Sources and Authority to CACI No. 2521A, Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Plaintiff—Essential Factual Elements—Employer or Entity Defendant.

Sources and Authority

- Legislative Intent With Regard to Application of the Laws About Harassment. Government Code section 12923.
- Harassment Prohibited Under Fair Employment and Housing Act. Government Code section 12940(j)(1).
- Employee Personal Liability for Harassment. Government Code section 12940(j)(3).

- "Employer" Defined for Harassment. Government Code section 12940(j)(4)(A).
- Harassment Because of Sex. Government Code section 12940(j)(4)(C).
- Person Providing Services Under Contract. Government Code section 12940(j)(5).
- Aiding and Abetting Fair Employment and Housing Act Violations. Government Code section 12940(i).
- Perception and Association. Government Code section 12926(o).
- "The elements [of a prima facie claim of hostile-environment sexual harassment] are: (1) plaintiff belongs to a protected group; (2) plaintiff was subject to unwelcome sexual harassment; (3) the harassment complained of was based on sex; (4) the harassment complained of was sufficiently pervasive so as to alter the conditions of employment and create an abusive working environment; and (5) respondeat superior." (Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal.App.3d 590, 608 [262 Cal.Rptr. 842], footnote omitted.)
- "[T]he adjudicator's inquiry should center, dominantly, on whether the discriminatory conduct has unreasonably interfered with the plaintiff's work performance. To show such interference, 'the plaintiff need not prove that his or her tangible productivity has declined as a result of the harassment.' It suffices to prove that a reasonable person subjected to the discriminatory conduct would find, as the plaintiff did, that the harassment so altered working conditions as to 'make it more difficult to do the job.' " (Harris v. Forklift Sys. (1993) 510 U.S. 17, 25 [114 S.Ct. 367, 126 L.Ed.2d 295], conc. opn. of Ginsburg, J; see Gov. Code, § 12923(a) endorsing this language as reflective of California law.)
- "The plaintiff's work environment is affected not only by conduct directed at herself but also by the treatment of others. A woman's perception that her work environment is hostile to women will obviously be reinforced if she witnesses the harassment of other female workers." (Beyda v. City of Los Angeles (1998) 65 Cal.App.4th 511, 519 [76 Cal.Rptr.2d 547], internal citations omitted.)
- "Harassment against others in the workplace is only relevant to the plaintiff's case if she has personal knowledge of it. Unless plaintiff witnesses the conduct against others, or is otherwise aware of it, that conduct cannot alter the conditions of her employment and create an abusive working environment. Stated another way, a reasonable person in plaintiff's position would not find the environment hostile or abusive unless that person had knowledge of the objectionable conduct toward others." (Beyda, supra, 65 Cal.App.4th at p. 520.)
- "To state that an employee must be the direct victim of the sexually harassing conduct is somewhat misleading as an employee who is subjected to a hostile work environment is a victim of sexual harassment even though no offensive remarks or touchings are directed to or perpetrated upon that employee. Generally, however, sexual conduct that involves or is aimed at persons other than the plaintiff is considered less offensive and severe than conduct that is directed at the plaintiff. A hostile work environment sexual harassment claim by a plaintiff who was not personally subjected to offensive remarks and touchings requires 'an even higher showing' than a claim by one who had been sexually harassed without suffering tangible job detriment: such a plaintiff must 'establish that the sexually harassing conduct permeated [her] direct work environment.' [¶] To meet this burden, the plaintiff generally must show that the harassment directed at others was in her immediate work environment, and that she personally witnessed it. The reason for this is obvious: if the plaintiff does not witness the incidents involving others, 'those incidents cannot affect . . . her perception of the hostility of the work environment.' " (Lyle v. Warner Brothers Television Productions (2006) 38 Cal.4th 264, 284–285 [42 Cal.Rptr.3d 2, 132 P.3d 211], internal citations omitted.)

- "[W]e conclude a nonharassing supervisor, who fails to take action to prevent sexual harassment, is not personally liable for sexual harassment under the Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA)." (Fiol v. Doellstedt (1996) 50 Cal.App.4th 1318, 1322 [58 Cal.Rptr.2d 308].)
- "A supervisor who, without more, fails to take action to prevent sexual harassment of an employee is not personally liable as an aider and abettor of the harasser, an aider and abettor of the employer or an agent of the employer." (Fiol, supra, 50 Cal.App.4th at p. 1331.)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, §§ 363, 370

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 10-B, Sexual Harassment, ¶¶ 10:40, 10:110–10:260 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Discrimination Claims, §§ 2.68, 2.75, Sexual and Other Harassment, §§ 3.1, 3.14, 3.17, 3.36–3.45

2 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, §§ 41.80[1][a], 41.81[1][b] (Matthew Bender)

3 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 43, Civil Actions Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 43.01[10][g][i] (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.36 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation §§ 2:56, 2:56.50 (Thomson Reuters)

2522C. Work Environment Harassment—Sexual Favoritism—Essential Factual Elements—Individual Defendant (Gov. Code, §§ 12923, 12940(j))

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was subjected to harassment based on sexual favoritism at [name of covered entity] and that this harassment created a work environment that was hostile, intimidating, offensive, oppressive, or abusive. "Sexual favoritism" means that another employee has received preferential treatment with regard to promotion, work hours, assignments, or other significant employment benefits or opportunities because of a sexual relationship with an individual representative of the employer who was in a position to grant these preferences.

To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] was [an employee of/an applicant for a position with/a person providing services under a contract with/an unpaid intern with/a volunteer with] [name of employer];

[2. That [name of individual defendant] was an employee of [name of covered entity];]

3. That there was sexual favoritism in the work environment;
4. That the sexual favoritism was severe or pervasive;
5. That a reasonable [describe member of protected group, e.g., woman] in [name of plaintiff]'s circumstances would have considered the work environment to be hostile, intimidating, offensive, oppressive, or abusive because of the sexual favoritism;
6. That [name of plaintiff] considered the work environment to be hostile, intimidating, offensive, oppressive, or abusive because of the sexual favoritism;
7. That [name of individual defendant] [participated in/assisted/ [or] encouraged] the sexual favoritism;
8. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
9. That the conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

Derived from former CACI No. 2522 December 2007; Revised December 2015, May 2018, July 2019, May 2020, November 2021, May 2022

Directions for Use

This instruction is for use in a hostile work environment case involving sexual favoritism when the defendant is also an employee of the covered entity. (Gov. Code, § 12940(j)(3).) Include optional element 2 if there is a dispute about the defendant's status as an employee and include optional question 2 on the verdict form. See CACI No. VF-2507C, Work Environment Harassment—Sexual Favoritism—Individual Defendant.

The relevant provision protects an employee, an applicant, an unpaid intern or volunteer, or a person providing services under a contract. (Gov. Code, § 12940(j)(1).) If the facts of the case support it, the instruction should be modified as appropriate to the applicant's circumstances.

For an employer defendant, see CACI No. 2521C, Work Environment Harassment—Sexual Favoritism—Essential Factual Elements—Employer or Entity Defendant. For a case in which the plaintiff is the target of harassment based on a protected status such as gender, race, or sexual orientation, see CACI No. 2522A, Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Plaintiff—Essential Factual Elements—Individual Defendant. For an instruction for use if the plaintiff is not the target of the harassment, see CACI No. 2522B, Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Others—Essential Factual Elements—Individual Defendant. Also read CACI No. 2523, "Harassing Conduct" Explained, and CACI No. 2524, "Severe or Pervasive" Explained.

If there are both employer and individual supervisor defendants (see CACI No. 2521C, Work Environment Harassment—Sexual Favoritism—Essential Factual Elements—Employer or Entity Defendant) and both are found liable, they are both jointly and severally liable for any damages. Comparative fault and Proposition 51 do not apply to the employer's strict liability for supervisor harassment. (State Dep't of Health Servs. v. Superior Court (2003) 31 Cal.4th 1026, 1041–1042 [6 Cal.Rptr.3d 441, 79 P.3d 556]; see Bihun v. AT&T Information Systems, Inc. (1993) 13 Cal.App.4th 976, 1000 [16 Cal.Rptr.2d 787], disapproved on other grounds in Lakin v. Watkins Associated Industries (1993) 6 Cal.4th 644, 664 [25 Cal.Rptr.2d 109, 863 P.2d 179]; see also Rashtian v. BRAC-BH, Inc. (1992) 9 Cal.App.4th 1847, 1851 [12 Cal.Rptr.2d 411] [Proposition 51 cannot be applied to those who are without fault and only have vicarious liability by virtue of some statutory fiat].)

See also the Sources and Authority to CACI No. 2521A, Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Plaintiff—Essential Factual Elements—Employer or Entity Defendant.

Sources and Authority

- Declaration of Legislative Intent With Regard to Application of the Laws About Harassment. Government Code section 12923.
- Harassment Prohibited Under Fair Employment and Housing Act. Government Code section 12940(j)(1).
- Employee Personal Liability for Harassment. Government Code section 12940(j)(3).
- "Employer" Defined for Harassment. Government Code section 12940(j)(4)(A).

- Harassment Because of Sex. Government Code section 12940(j)(4)(C).
- Person Providing Services Under Contract. Government Code section 12940(j)(5).
- Aiding and Abetting Fair Employment and Housing Act Violations. Government Code section 12940(i).
- Perception and Association. Government Code section 12926(o).
- "The elements [of a prima facie claim of hostile-environment sexual harassment] are: (1) plaintiff belongs to a protected group; (2) plaintiff was subject to unwelcome sexual harassment; (3) the harassment complained of was based on sex; (4) the harassment complained of was sufficiently pervasive so as to alter the conditions of employment and create an abusive working environment; and (5) respondeat superior." (Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal.App.3d 590, 608 [262 Cal.Rptr. 842], footnote omitted.)
- "[T]he adjudicator's inquiry should center, dominantly, on whether the discriminatory conduct has unreasonably interfered with the plaintiff's work performance. To show such interference, 'the plaintiff need not prove that his or her tangible productivity has declined as a result of the harassment.' It suffices to prove that a reasonable person subjected to the discriminatory conduct would find, as the plaintiff did, that the harassment so altered working conditions as to 'make it more difficult to do the job.' " (Harris v. Forklift Sys. (1993) 510 U.S. 17, 25 [114 S.Ct. 367, 126 L.Ed.2d 295], conc. opn. of Ginsburg, J.; see Gov. Code, § 12923(a) endorsing this language as reflective of California law.)
- "Following the guidance of the EEOC, and also employing standards adopted in our prior cases, we believe that an employee may establish an actionable claim of sexual harassment under the FEHA by demonstrating that widespread sexual favoritism was severe or pervasive enough to alter his or her working conditions and create a hostile work environment." (Miller v. Dept. of Corrections (2005) 36 Cal.4th 446, 466 [30 Cal.Rptr.3d 797, 115 P.3d 77], internal citations omitted.)
- "[S]exual favoritism by a manager may be actionable when it leads employees to believe that 'they [can] obtain favorable treatment from [the manager] if they became romantically involved with him', the affair is conducted in a manner 'so indiscreet as to create a hostile work environment,' or the manager has engaged in 'other pervasive conduct . . . which created a hostile work environment.' " (Miller, supra, 36 Cal.4th at p. 465, internal citations omitted.)
- "[A] romantic relationship between a supervisor and an employee does not, without more, give rise to a sexual discrimination or sexual harassment claim either under the FEHA or the public policy of the state." (Proksel v. Gattis (1996) 41 Cal.App.4th 1626, 1631 [49 Cal.Rptr.2d 322].)
- "[W]e conclude a nonharassing supervisor, who fails to take action to prevent sexual harassment, is not personally liable for sexual harassment under the Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA)." (Fiol v. Doellstedt (1996) 50

Cal.App.4th 1318, 1322 [58 Cal.Rptr.2d 308].)

- "A supervisor who, without more, fails to take action to prevent sexual harassment of an employee is not personally liable as an aider and abettor of the harasser, an aider and abettor of the employer or an agent of the employer." (Fiol, supra, 50 Cal.App.4th at p. 1331.)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, §§ 363, 370

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 10-B, Sexual Harassment, ¶¶ 10:40, 10:110–10:260 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Discrimination Claims, §§ 2.68, 2.75, Sexual and Other Harassment, §§ 3.1, 3.14, 3.17, 3.36–3.45

2 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, §§ 41.80[1][a], 41.81[1][b] (Matthew Bender)

3 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 43, Civil Actions Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 43.01[10][g][i] (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.36[5] (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation §§ 2:56, 2:56.50 (Thomson Reuters)

2523. "Harassing Conduct" Explained

Harassing conduct may include, but is not limited to, [any of the following:]

[a. Verbal harassment, such as obscene language, demeaning comments, slurs, [or] threats [or] [describe other form of verbal harassment];] [or]

[b. Physical harassment, such as unwanted touching, assault, or physical interference with normal work or movement;] [or]

[c. Visual harassment, such as offensive posters, objects, cartoons, or drawings;] [or]

[d. Unwanted sexual advances;] [or]

[e. [Describe other form of harassment if appropriate, e.g., derogatory, unwanted, or offensive photographs, text messages, Internet postings].]

New September 2003; Revised December 2007, December 2015

Directions for Use

Read this instruction with CACI No. 2521A, Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Plaintiff—Essential Factual Elements—Employer or Entity Defendant; CACI No. 2521B, Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Others—Essential Factual Elements—Employer or Entity Defendant; CACI No. 2522A, Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Plaintiff—Essential Factual Elements—Individual Defendant; or CACI No. 2522B, Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Others—Essential Factual Elements—Individual Defendant. Read also CACI No. 2524, "Severe or Pervasive" Explained, if appropriate.

Sources and Authority

- Harassment Prohibited Under Fair Employment and Housing Act. Government Code section 12940(j)(1).
- "Harassment" Defined. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 2, § 11019(b)(2).
- "Harassment is distinguishable from discrimination under the FEHA. '[D]iscrimination refers to bias in the exercise of official actions on behalf of the employer, and harassment refers to bias that is expressed or communicated through interpersonal relations in the workplace.' " (Serri v. Santa Clara University (2014) 226 Cal.App.4th 830, 869 [172 Cal.Rptr.3d 732].)
- "[H]arassment consists of a type of conduct not necessary for performance of a supervisory job. Instead, harassment consists of conduct outside the scope of necessary job performance, conduct presumably engaged in for personal gratification, because of meanness or bigotry, or for other personal motives. Harassment is not conduct of a type necessary for management of the employer's business or performance of the supervisory employee's job." (Reno v. Baird (1998) 18 Cal.4th 640, 645–646 [76 Cal.Rptr.2d 499, 957 P.2d 1333], internal citations omitted.)

- "No supervisory employee needs to use slurs or derogatory drawings, to physically interfere with freedom of movement, to engage in unwanted sexual advances, etc., in order to carry out the legitimate objectives of personnel management. Every supervisory employee can insulate himself or herself from claims of harassment by refraining from such conduct." (Serri, supra, 226 Cal.App.4th at p. 869.)
- "We conclude, therefore, that the Legislature intended that commonly necessary personnel management actions such as hiring and firing, job or project assignments, office or work station assignments, promotion or demotion, performance evaluations, the provision of support, the assignment or nonassignment of supervisory functions, deciding who will and who will not attend meetings, deciding who will be laid off, and the like, do not come within the meaning of harassment. These are actions of a type necessary to carry out the duties of business and personnel management. These actions may retrospectively be found discriminatory if based on improper motives, but in that event the remedies provided by the FEHA are those for discrimination, not harassment. Harassment, by contrast, consists of actions outside the scope of job duties which are not of a type necessary to business and personnel management. This significant distinction underlies the differential treatment of harassment and discrimination in the FEHA." (Reno, supra, 18 Cal.4th at pp. 646–647, internal citation omitted.)
- "[W]e can discern no reason why an employee who is the victim of discrimination based on some official action of the employer cannot also be the victim of harassment by a supervisor for abusive messages that create a hostile working environment, and under the FEHA the employee would have two separate claims of injury." (Roby v. McKesson Corp. (2009) 47 Cal.4th 686, 707 [101 Cal.Rptr.3d 773, 219 P.3d 749].)
- "Here, [plaintiff]'s discrimination claim sought compensation for official employment actions that were motivated by improper bias. These discriminatory actions included not only the termination itself but also official employment actions that preceded the termination, such as the progressive disciplinary warnings and the decision to assign [plaintiff] to answer the office telephones during office parties. [Plaintiff]'s harassment claim, by contrast, sought compensation for hostile social interactions in the workplace that affected the workplace environment because of the offensive message they conveyed to [plaintiff]. These harassing actions included [supervisor]'s demeaning comments to [plaintiff] about her body odor and arm sores, [supervisor]'s refusal to respond to [plaintiff]'s greetings, [supervisor]'s demeaning facial expressions and gestures toward [plaintiff], and [supervisor]'s disparate treatment of [plaintiff] in handing out small gifts. None of these events can fairly be characterized as an official employment action. None involved [supervisor]'s exercising the authority that [employer] had delegated to her so as to cause [employer], in its corporate capacity, to take some action with respect to [plaintiff]. Rather, these were events that were unrelated to [supervisor]'s managerial role, engaged in for her own purposes." (Roby, supra, 47 Cal.4th at pp. 708–709, original italics, footnote omitted.)

- "[S]ome official employment actions done in furtherance of a supervisor's managerial role can also have a secondary effect of communicating a hostile message. This occurs when the actions establish a widespread pattern of bias. Here, some actions that [supervisor] took with respect to [plaintiff] are best characterized as official employment actions rather than hostile social interactions in the workplace, but they may have contributed to the hostile message that [supervisor] was expressing to [plaintiff] in other, more explicit ways. These would include [supervisor]'s shunning of [plaintiff] during staff meetings, [supervisor]'s belittling of [plaintiff]'s job, and [supervisor]'s reprimands of [plaintiff] in front of [plaintiff]'s coworkers. Moreover, acts of discrimination can provide evidentiary support for a harassment claim by establishing discriminatory animus on the part of the manager responsible for the discrimination, thereby permitting the inference that rude comments or behavior by that same manager were similarly motivated by discriminatory animus." (Roby, supra, 47 Cal.4th at p. 709.)
- "[A]busive conduct that is not facially sex specific can be grounds for a hostile environment sexual harassment claim if it is inflicted because of gender, i.e., if men and women are treated differently and the conduct is motivated by gender bias." (Pantoja v. Anton (2011) 198 Cal.App.4th 87, 130 [129 Cal.Rptr.3d 384], original italics.)

Secondary Sources

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 10-B, Sexual Harassment, ¶¶ 10:125–10:155 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Sexual and Other Harassment, §§ 3.13, 3.36

2 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 41.80[1][a][i] (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.36 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation §§ 2:56, 2:56.50 (Thomson Reuters)

2524. "Severe or Pervasive" Explained

"Severe or pervasive" means conduct that alters the conditions of employment and creates a work environment that is hostile, intimidating, offensive, oppressive, or abusive.

In determining whether the conduct was severe or pervasive, you should consider all the circumstances, including any or all of the following:

(a) The nature of the conduct;

(b) How often, and over what period of time, the conduct occurred;

(c) The circumstances under which the conduct occurred;

(d) Whether the conduct was physically threatening or humiliating.

[*Name of plaintiff] does not have to prove that [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] productivity has declined. It is sufficient to prove that a reasonable person who was subjected to the harassing conduct would find that the conduct so altered working conditions as to make it more difficult to do the job.

[A single incident can be sufficiently severe or pervasive to constitute harassment.]

New September 2003; Revised December 2007, July 2019

Directions for Use

Read this instruction with any of the Work Environment Harassment instructions (CACI Nos. 2521A, 2521B, 2521C, 2522A, 2522B, and 2522C). Read also CACI No. 2523, "Harassing Conduct" Explained. Give the last optional sentence if a single incident forms the basis of the claim. (See Gov. Code, § 12923(b) [single incident of harassing conduct can be sufficient to create a triable issue regarding the existence of a hostile work environment].)

In determining what constitutes "sufficiently pervasive" harassment, the courts have held that acts of harassment cannot be occasional, isolated, sporadic, or trivial. (See Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal.App.3d 590, 610 [262 Cal.Rptr. 842].) Whether this limitation remains in light of Government Code section 12923 is not clear.

Sources and Authority

- "We have agreed with the United States Supreme Court that, to prevail, an employee claiming harassment based upon a hostile work environment must demonstrate that the conduct complained of was severe enough or sufficiently pervasive to alter the conditions of employment and create a work environment that qualifies as hostile or abusive to employees because of their sex. The working environment must be evaluated in light of the totality of the circumstances: '[W]hether an environment is "hostile" or "abusive" can be determined only by looking at all the circumstances. These may include the frequency of the discriminatory conduct; its severity; whether it is physically threatening or humiliating, or a mere offensive utterance; and whether it unreasonably interferes with an employee's work performance.' " (Miller v. Dept. of Corrections (2005) 36 Cal.4th 446, 462 [30 Cal.Rptr.3d 797, 115 P.3d 77], internal citations omitted.)

- "[T]he adjudicator's inquiry should center, dominantly, on whether the discriminatory conduct has unreasonably interfered with the plaintiff's work performance. To show such interference, 'the plaintiff need not prove that his or her tangible productivity has declined as a result of the harassment.' It suffices to prove that a reasonable person subjected to the discriminatory conduct would find, as the plaintiff did, that the harassment so altered working conditions as to 'make it more difficult to do the job.' " (Harris v. Forklift Sys. (1993) 510 U.S. 17, 25 [114 S.Ct. 367, 126 L.Ed.2d 295], conc. opn. of Ginsburg, J.; see Gov. Code, § 12923(a) endorsing this language as reflective of California law.)
- "For sexual harassment to be actionable, it must be sufficiently severe or pervasive 'to alter the conditions of [the victim's] employment and create an abusive working environment.' . . . [¶] 'Conduct that is not severe or pervasive enough to create an objectively hostile or abusive work environment—an environment that a reasonable person would find hostile or abusive—is beyond Title VII's purview. Likewise, if the victim does not subjectively perceive the environment to be abusive, the conduct has not actually altered the conditions of the victim's employment, and there is no Title VII violation.' . . . California courts have adopted the same standard in evaluating claims under the FEHA." (Aguilar v. Avis Rent A Car System, Inc. (1999) 21 Cal.4th 121, 129–130 [87 Cal.Rptr.2d 132, 980 P.2d 846], internal citations omitted.)
- "Whether the sexual conduct complained of is sufficiently pervasive to create a hostile or offensive work environment must be determined from the totality of the circumstances. The plaintiff must prove that the defendant's conduct would have interfered with a reasonable employee's work performance . . . and that she was actually offended . . . . The factors that can be considered in evaluating the totality of the circumstances are: (1) the nature of the unwelcome sexual acts or works (generally, physical touching is more offensive than unwelcome verbal abuse); (2) the frequency of the offensive encounters; (3) the total number of days over which all of the offensive conduct occurs; and (4) the context in which the sexually harassing conduct occurred." (Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal.App.3d 590, 609–610 [262 Cal.Rptr. 842], internal citation omitted.)
- "The United States Supreme Court . . . has clarified that conduct need not seriously affect an employee's psychological well-being to be actionable as abusive work environment harassment. So long as the environment reasonably would be perceived, and is perceived, as hostile or abusive, there is no need for it also to be psychologically injurious." (Kelly-Zurian v. Wohl Shoe Co., Inc. (1994) 22 Cal.App.4th 397, 412 [27 Cal.Rptr.2d 457], internal citations omitted.)

- "As the Supreme Court recently reiterated, in order to be actionable, '. . . a sexually objectionable environment must be both objectively and subjectively offensive, one that a reasonable person would find hostile or abusive, and one that the victim in fact did perceive to be so.' The work environment must be viewed from the perspective of a reasonable person in the plaintiff's position, considering 'all the circumstances.' This determination requires judges and juries to exercise '[c]ommon sense, and an appropriate sensitivity to social context' in order to evaluate whether a reasonable person in the plaintiff's position would find the conduct severely hostile or abusive." (Beyda v. City of Los Angeles (1998) 65 Cal.App.4th 511, 518–519 [76 Cal.Rptr.2d 547], internal citations omitted.)
- "The requirement that the conduct be sufficiently severe or pervasive to create a working environment a reasonable person would find hostile or abusive is a crucial limitation that prevents sexual harassment law from being expanded into a 'general civility code.' " (Jones v. Department of Corrections & Rehabilitation (2007) 152 Cal.App.4th 1367, 1377 [62 Cal.Rptr.3d 200], internal citations omitted.)
- "[T]he jury only needed to find the harassing conduct to be either severe or pervasive . . . ." (Caldera v. Department of Corrections & Rehabilitation (2018) 25 Cal.App.5th 31, 40 [235 Cal.Rptr.3d 262].)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, §§ 363, 370

Chin, et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 10-B, Sexual Harassment, ¶¶ 10:160–10:249 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Discrimination Claims, §§ 2.68, 2.75, Sexual and Other Harassment, §§ 3.1, 3.17, 3.36–3.41

2 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, §§ 41.80[1][a], 41.81[1][b] (Matthew Bender)

3 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 43, Civil Actions Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 43.01[10][g][i] (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.36 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation, § 2:56 (Thomson Reuters)

2525. Harassment—"Supervisor" Defined (Gov. Code, § 12926(t))

[*Name of alleged harasser] was a supervisor of [name of defendant] if [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] had any of the following:

a. The authority to hire, transfer, promote, assign, reward, discipline, [or] discharge [or] [*insert other employment action] other employees [or effectively to recommend any of these actions];

b. The responsibility to act on other employees' grievances [or effectively to recommend action on grievances]; or

c. The responsibility to direct other employees' daily work activities.

[*Name of alleged harasser]'s exercise of this authority or responsibility must not be merely routine or clerical, but must require the use of independent judgment.

New September 2003; Revised June 2006, December 2015, December 2022

Directions for Use

The FEHA's definition of "supervisor" refers to the "authority" for factor (a) and the "responsibility" for factors (b) and (c). The difference, if any, between "authority" and "responsibility" as used in the statute is not clear. The FEHA's definition of "supervisor" also expressly refers to authority and responsibility over "other employees." (Gov. Code, § 12926(t).) The statute further requires that "the exercise of that authority is not of a merely routine or clerical nature, but requires the use of independent judgment." (See Gov. Code, § 12926(t), italics added.) However, at least one court has found the independent-judgment requirement to be applicable to the responsibility for factor (c). (See Chapman v. Enos (2004) 116 Cal.App.4th 920, 930–931 [10 Cal.Rptr.3d 852], italics added.) Therefore, the last sentence of the instruction refers to "authority or responsibility."

Sources and Authority

- Harassment Prohibited Under Fair Employment and Housing Act. Government Code section 12940(j)(1).
- "Supervisor" Defined. Government Code section 12926(t).
- "The FEHA imposes two standards of employer liability for sexual harassment, depending on whether the person engaging in the harassment is the victim's supervisor or a nonsupervisory coemployee. The employer is liable for harassment by a nonsupervisory employee only if the employer (a) knew or should have known of the harassing conduct and (b) failed to take immediate and appropriate corrective action. This is a negligence standard. Because the FEHA imposes this negligence standard only for harassment 'by an employee other than an agent or supervisor' by implication the FEHA makes the employer strictly liable for harassment by a supervisor." (State Dept. of Health Services v. Superior Court (2003) 31 Cal.4th 1026, 1040–1041 [6 Cal.Rptr. 3d 441, 79 P.3d 556], internal citations omitted.)

- "Unlike discrimination in hiring, the ultimate responsibility for which rests with the employer, sexual or other harassment perpetrated by a supervisor with the power to hire, fire and control the victimized employee's working conditions is a particularly personal form of the type of discrimination which the Legislature sought to proscribe when it enacted the FEHA." (Matthews v. Superior Court (1995) 34 Cal.App.4th 598, 605–606 [40 Cal.Rptr.2d 350].)
- "This section has been interpreted to mean that the employer is strictly liable for the harassing actions of its supervisors and agents, but that the employer is only liable for harassment by a coworker if the employer knew or should have known of the conduct and failed to take immediate corrective action. Thus, characterizing the employment status of the harasser is very significant." (Doe v. Capital Cities (1996) 50 Cal.App.4th 1038, 1046 [58 Cal.Rptr.2d 122], internal citations omitted.)
- "The case and statutory authority set forth three clear rules. First, . . . a supervisor who personally engages in sexually harassing conduct is personally liable under the FEHA. Second, . . . if the supervisor participates in the sexual harassment or substantially assists or encourages continued harassment, the supervisor is personally liable under the FEHA as an aider and abettor of the harasser. Third, under the FEHA, the employer is vicariously and strictly liable for sexual harassment by a supervisor." (Fiol v. Doellstedt (1996) 50 Cal.App.4th 1318, 1327 [58 Cal.Rptr.2d 308].)
- "[W]hile an employer's liability under the [FEHA] for an act of sexual harassment committed by a supervisor or agent is broader than the liability created by the common law principle of respondeat superior, respondeat superior principles are nonetheless relevant in determining liability when, as here, the sexual harassment occurred away from the workplace and not during work hours." (Doe, supra, 50 Cal.App.4th at pp. 1048–1049.)
- "The FEHA does not define 'agent.' Therefore, it is appropriate to consider general principles of agency law. An agent is one who represents a principal in dealings with third persons. An agent is a person authorized by the principal to conduct one or more transactions with one or more third persons and to exercise a degree of discretion in effecting the purpose of the principal. A supervising employee is an agent of the employer." (Fiol, supra, 50 Cal.App.4th at p. 1328, internal citations omitted.)
- "A supervisor who, without more, fails to take action to prevent sexual harassment of an employee is not personally liable as an aider and abettor of the harasser, an aider and abettor of the employer or an agent of the employer." (Fiol, supra, 50 Cal.App.4th at p. 1331.)
- "[W]hile full accountability and responsibility are certainly indicia of supervisory power, they are not required elements of . . . the FEHA definition of supervisor. Indeed, many supervisors with responsibility to direct others using their independent judgment, and whose supervision of employees is not merely routine or clerical, would not meet these additional criteria though they would otherwise be within the ambit of the FEHA supervisor definition." (Chapman, supra, 116 Cal.App.4th at p. 930, footnote omitted.)

- "Defendants take the position that the court's modified instruction is, nonetheless, accurate because the phrase 'responsibility to direct' is the functional equivalent of being 'fully accountable and responsible for the performance and work product of the employees. . . .' In this, they rely on the dictionary definition of 'responsible' as 'marked by accountability.' But as it relates to the issue before us, this definition is unhelpful for two reasons. First, one can be accountable for one's own actions without being accountable for those of others. Second, the argument appears to ignore the plain language of the statute which itself defines the circumstances under which the exercise of the responsibility to direct will be considered supervisory, i.e., 'if . . . [it] is not of a merely routine or clerical nature, but requires the use of independent judgment.' " (Chapman, supra, 116 Cal.App.4th at pp. 930–931.)

Secondary Sources

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 10-A, Sources Of Law Prohibiting Harassment, ¶ 10:17 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 10-D, Employer Liability For Workplace Harassment, ¶¶ 10:308, 10:310, 10:315–10:317, 10:321, 10:322 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 10-E, Harasser's Individual Liability, ¶ 10:499 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Sexual and Other Harassment, § 4.21

2 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 41.80 (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, §§ 115.20, 115.36, 115.54 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation § 2:56.50 (Thomson Reuters)

2526. Affirmative Defense—Avoidable Consequences Doctrine (Sexual Harassment by a Supervisor)

If [*name of plaintiff] proves that [name of supervisor] sexually harassed [him/her/nonbinary pronoun], [name of employer defendant] is responsible for [name of plaintiff]'s harm caused by the harassment. However, [name of employer defendant] claims that [name of plaintiff] could have avoided some or all of the harm with reasonable effort. To succeed, [name of employer defendant] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of employer defendant] took reasonable steps to prevent and correct workplace sexual harassment;
2. That [name of plaintiff] unreasonably failed to use the preventive and corrective measures for sexual harassment that [name of employer defendant] provided; and
3. That the reasonable use of [name of employer defendant]'s procedures would have prevented some or all of [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

You should consider the reasonableness of [*name of plaintiff]'s actions in light of the circumstances facing [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] at the time, including [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] ability to report the conduct without facing undue risk, expense, or humiliation.

If you decide that [*name of employer defendant] has proved this claim, you should not include in your award of damages the amount of damages that [name of plaintiff] could have reasonably avoided.

New April 2004; Revised December 2011, December 2015, May 2020

Directions for Use

Give this instruction if the employer asserts the affirmative defense of "avoidable consequences." The essence of the defense is that the employee could have avoided part or most of the harm had the employee taken advantage of procedures that the employer had in place to address sexual harassment in the workplace. The avoidable-consequences doctrine is a defense only to damages, not to liability. (State Dept. of Health Services v. Superior Court (2003) 31 Cal.4th 1026, 1045 [6 Cal.Rptr.3d 441, 79 P.3d 556].) For other instructions that may also be given on failure to mitigate damages generally, see CACI No. 3963, Affirmative Defense—Employee's Duty to Mitigate Damages, and CACI No. 3930, Mitigation of Damages (Personal Injury).

Whether this defense may apply to claims other than for supervisor sexual harassment has not been clearly addressed by the courts. It has been allowed against a claim for age discrimination in a constructive discharge case. (See Rosenfeld v.

Abraham Joshua Heschel Day School, Inc. (2014) 226 Cal.App.4th 886, 900–901 [172 Cal.Rptr.3d 465].)

Sources and Authority

- "[W]e conclude that under the FEHA, an employer is strictly liable for all acts of sexual harassment by a supervisor. But strict liability is not absolute liability in the sense that it precludes all defenses. Even under a strict liability standard, a plaintiff's own conduct may limit the amount of damages recoverable or bar recovery entirely." (State Dept. of Health Services, supra, 31 Cal.4th at p. 1042, internal citations omitted.)
- "We emphasize that the defense affects damages, not liability. An employer that has exercised reasonable care nonetheless remains strictly liable for harm a sexually harassed employee could not have avoided through reasonable care. The avoidable consequences doctrine is part of the law of damages; thus, it affects only the remedy available. If the employer establishes that the employee, by taking reasonable steps to utilize employer-provided complaint procedures, could have caused the harassing conduct to cease, the employer will nonetheless remain liable for any compensable harm the employee suffered before the time at which the harassment would have ceased, and the employer avoids liability only for the harm the employee incurred thereafter." (State Dept. of Health Services, supra, 31 Cal.4th at p. 1045, internal citation omitted.)
- "Under the avoidable consequences doctrine as recognized in California, a person injured by another's wrongful conduct will not be compensated for damages that the injured person could have avoided by reasonable effort or expenditure. The reasonableness of the injured party's efforts must be judged in light of the situation existing at the time and not with the benefit of hindsight. 'The standard by which the reasonableness of the injured party's efforts is to be measured is not as high as the standard required in other areas of law.' The defendant bears the burden of pleading and proving a defense based on the avoidable consequences doctrine." (State Dept. of Health Services, supra, 31 Cal.4th at p. 1043, internal citations omitted.)
- "Although courts explaining the avoidable consequences doctrine have sometimes written that a party has a 'duty' to mitigate damages, commentators have criticized the use of the term 'duty' in this context, arguing that it is more accurate to state simply that a plaintiff may not recover damages that the plaintiff could easily have avoided." (State Dept. of Health Services, supra, 31 Cal.4th at p. 1043, internal citations omitted.)
- "We hold . . . that in a FEHA action against an employer for hostile environment sexual harassment by a supervisor, an employer may plead and prove a defense based on the avoidable consequences doctrine. In this particular context, the defense has three elements: (1) the employer took reasonable steps to prevent and correct workplace sexual harassment; (2) the employee unreasonably failed to use the preventive and corrective measures that the employer provided; and (3) reasonable use of the employer's procedures would have prevented at least some of the harm that the employee suffered." (State Dept. of Health Services, supra, 31 Cal.4th at p. 1044.)

- "This defense will allow the employer to escape liability for those damages, and only those damages, that the employee more likely than not could have prevented with reasonable effort and without undue risk, expense, or humiliation, by taking advantage of the employer's internal complaint procedures appropriately designed to prevent and eliminate sexual harassment." (State Dept. of Health Services, supra, 31 Cal.4th at p. 1044, internal citations omitted.)
- "If the employer establishes that the employee, by taking reasonable steps to utilize employer-provided complaint procedures, could have caused the harassing conduct to cease, the employer will nonetheless remain liable for any compensable harm the employee suffered before the time at which the harassment would have ceased, and the employer avoids liability only for the harm the employee incurred thereafter." (State Dept. of Health Services, supra, 31 Cal.4th at p. 1045, internal citations omitted.)
- "We stress also that the holding we adopt does not demand or expect that employees victimized by a supervisor's sexual harassment must always report such conduct immediately to the employer through internal grievance mechanisms. The employer may lack an adequate antiharassment policy or adequate procedures to enforce it, the employer may not have communicated the policy or procedures to the victimized employee, or the employee may reasonably fear reprisal by the harassing supervisor or other employees. Moreover, in some cases an employee's natural feelings of embarrassment, humiliation, and shame may provide a sufficient excuse for delay in reporting acts of sexual harassment by a supervisor." (State Dept. of Health Services, supra, 31 Cal.4th at p. 1045.)

Secondary Sources

6 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Torts, § 1798

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 10-D, Employer Liability For Workplace Harassment, ¶¶ 10:360, 10:361, 10:365–10:367, 10:371, 10:375 (The Rutter Group)

2 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, §§ 41.81[7][c], 41.92A (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, §§ 115.36[2][a], 115.54[3] (Matthew Bender)

2527. Failure to Prevent Harassment, Discrimination, or Retaliation—Essential Factual Elements—Employer or Entity Defendant (Gov. Code, § 12940(k))

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] failed to take all reasonable steps to prevent [harassment/discrimination/retaliation] [based on [describe protected status—e.g., race, gender, or age]]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] [was an employee of [name of defendant]/ applied to [name of defendant] for a job/was a person providing services under a contract with [name of defendant]];
2. That [name of plaintiff] was subjected to [harassment/discrimination/retaliation] in the course of employment;
3. That [name of defendant] failed to take all reasonable steps to prevent the [harassment/discrimination/retaliation];
4. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
5. That [name of defendant]'s failure to take all reasonable steps to prevent [harassment/discrimination/retaliation] was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New June 2006; Revised April 2007, June 2013, December 2015

Directions for Use

Give this instruction after the appropriate instructions in this series on the underlying claim for discrimination, retaliation, or harassment if the employee also claims that the employer failed to prevent the conduct. (See Gov. Code, § 12940(k).) Read the bracketed language in the opening paragraph beginning with "based on" if the claim is for failure to prevent harassment or discrimination.

For guidance for a further instruction on what constitutes "reasonable steps," see section 11019(b)(4) of Title 2 of the California Code of Regulations.

Sources and Authority

- Prevention of Discrimination and Harassment. Government Code section 12940(k).
- "The employer's duty to prevent harassment and discrimination is affirmative and mandatory." (Northrop Grumman Corp. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2002) 103 Cal.App.4th 1021, 1035 [127 Cal.Rptr.2d 285].)
- "Once an employer is informed of the sexual harassment, the employer must take adequate remedial measures. The measures need to include immediate corrective action that is reasonably calculated to (1) end the current harassment and (2) to deter future harassment. [Citation.] The employer's obligation to take prompt corrective action requires (1) that temporary steps be taken to deal with the situation while the employer determines whether the complaint is justified and (2) that permanent remedial steps be implemented by the employer to prevent future harassment . . . ." (M.F. v. Pacific Pearl Hotel Management LLC (2017) 16 Cal.App.5th 693, 701 [224 Cal.Rptr.3d 542].)

- "This section creates a tort that is made actionable by statute. ' " '[T]he word "tort" means a civil wrong, other than a breach of contract, for which the law will provide a remedy in the form of an action for damages.' 'It is well settled the Legislature possesses a broad authority . . . to establish . . . tort causes of action.' Examples of statutory torts are plentiful in California law." ' Section 12960 et seq. provides procedures for the prevention and elimination of unlawful employment practices. In particular, section 12965, subdivision (a) authorizes the Department of Fair Employment and Housing (DFEH) to bring an accusation of an unlawful employment practice if conciliation efforts are unsuccessful, and section 12965, subdivision (b) creates a private right of action for damages for a complainant whose complaint is not pursued by the DFEH." (Trujillo v. North County Transit Dist. (1998) 63 Cal.App.4th 280, 286 [73 Cal.Rptr.2d 596], internal citations omitted.)
- "With these rules in mind, we examine the section 12940 claim and finding with regard to whether the usual elements of a tort, enforceable by private plaintiffs, have been established: Defendants' legal duty of care toward plaintiffs, breach of duty (a negligent act or omission), legal causation, and damages to the plaintiff." (Trujillo, supra, 63 Cal.App.4th at pp. 286–287, internal citation omitted.)
- "[W]hether an employer sufficiently complied with its mandate to 'take immediate and appropriate corrective action' is a question of fact." (M.F., supra, 16 Cal.App.5th at p. 703, internal citation omitted.)
- "[C]ourts have required a finding of actual discrimination or harassment under FEHA before a plaintiff may prevail under section 12940, subdivision (k)." (Dickson v. Burke Williams, Inc. (2015) 234 Cal.App.4th 1307, 1314 [184 Cal.Rptr.3d 774].)
- "Also, there is a significant question of how there could be legal causation of any damages (either compensatory or punitive) from such a statutory violation, where the only jury finding was the failure to prevent actionable harassment or discrimination, which, however, did not occur." (Trujillo, supra, 63 Cal.App.4th at p. 289.)
- "[T]he 'Directions for Use' to CACI No. 2527 (2015), . . . states that the failure to prevent instruction should be given 'after the appropriate instructions in this series on the underlying claim for . . . harassment if the employee also claims that the employer failed to prevent the conduct.' An instruction on the elements of an underlying sexual harassment claim would be unnecessary if the failure to take reasonable steps necessary to prevent a claim for harassment could be based on harassing conduct that was not actionable harassment." (Dickson, supra, 234 Cal.App.4th at p. 1317.)

- "In accordance with . . . the fundamental public policy of eliminating discrimination in the workplace under the FEHA, we conclude that retaliation is a form of discrimination actionable under [Gov. Code] section 12940, subdivision (k)." (Taylor v. City of Los Angeles Dept. of Water & Power (2006) 144 Cal.App.4th 1216, 1240 [51 Cal.Rptr.3d 206], disapproved on other grounds in Jones v. The Lodge at Torrey Pines Partnership (2008) 42 Cal.4th 1158 [72 Cal.Rptr.3d 624, 177 P.3d 232].)
- "[Defendant] suggests that a separate element in CACI No. 2527 requiring [plaintiff] to prove that the failure to prevent discrimination or retaliation was 'a substantial factor in causing her harm' is equivalent to the disputed element in the other CACI instructions requiring [plaintiff] to prove that her pregnancy-related leave was 'a motivating reason' for her discharge. However, the 'substantial factor in causing harm' element in CACI No. 2527 does not concern the causal relationship between the adverse employment action and the plaintiff's protected status or activity. Rather, it concerns the causal relationship between the discriminatory or retaliatory conduct, if proven, and the plaintiff's injury." (Alamo v. Practice Management Information Corp. (2013) 219 Cal.App.4th 466, 480 [161 Cal.Rptr.3d 758].)

Secondary Sources

8 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Constitutional Law, §§ 1025, 1026

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 7-A, Title VII And The California Fair Employment and Housing Act, ¶¶ 7:670–7:672 (The Rutter Group)

2 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, §§ 41.02[6], 41.80[1], 41.81[7] (Matthew Bender)

3 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 43, Civil Actions Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 43.01[10][g] (Matthew Bender)

2528. Failure to Prevent Harassment by Nonemployee (Gov. Code, § 12940(j))

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] failed to take reasonable steps to prevent harassment based on [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] [describe protected status, e.g., race, gender, or age] by a nonemployee. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] [was an employee of [name of defendant]/ applied to [name of defendant] for a job/was an unpaid [intern/ volunteer] for [name of defendant]/was a person providing services under a contract with [name of defendant]];
2. That while in the course of employment, [name of plaintiff] was subjected to harassment based on [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] [e.g., race] by [name], who was not an employee of [name of defendant];
3. That [name of defendant] knew or should have known that the nonemployee's conduct placed employees at risk of harassment;
4. That [name of defendant] failed to take immediate and appropriate [preventive/corrective] action;
5. That the ability to take [preventive/corrective] action was within the control of [name of defendant];
6. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
7. That [name of defendant]'s failure to take immediate and appropriate steps to [prevent/put an end to] the harassment was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New November 2018; Revised January 2019

Directions for Use

Give this instruction on a claim against the employer for failure to prevent harassment by a nonemployee. The FEHA protects not only employees, but also applicants, unpaid interns or volunteers, and persons providing services under a contract (element 1). (Gov. Code, § 12940(j)(1).) Modify references to employment in elements 2 and 3 as necessary if the plaintiff's status is other than an employee. Note that unlike claims for failure to prevent acts of a co-employee (see Gov. Code, § 12940(k)), only harassment is covered. (Gov. Code, § 12940(j)(1).) If there is such a thing as discrimination or retaliation by a nonemployee, there is no employer duty to prevent it under the FEHA.

The employer's duty is to "take immediate and appropriate corrective action." (Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1).) In contrast, for the employer's failure to prevent acts of an employee, the duty is to "take all reasonable steps necessary to prevent discrimination and harassment from occurring." (Gov. Code, § 12940(k).)

Whether the employer must prevent or later correct the harassing situation would seem to depend on the facts of the case. If the issue is to stop harassment from recurring after becoming aware of it, the employer's duty would be to "correct" the problem. If the issue is to address a developing problem before the harassment occurs, the duty would be to "prevent" it. Choose the appropriate words in elements 4, 5, and 7 depending on the facts.

Sources and Authority

- Prevention of Harassment by a Nonemployee. Government Code section 12940(j)(1).
- Prevention of Discrimination and Harassment. Government Code section 12940(k).
- "The FEHA provides: 'An employer may . . . be responsible for the acts of nonemployees, with respect to sexual harassment of employees . . . , where the employer, or its agents or supervisors, knows or should have known of the conduct and fails to take immediate and appropriate corrective action. In reviewing cases involving the acts of nonemployees, the extent of the employer's control and any other legal responsibility that the employer may have with respect to the conduct of those nonemployees shall be considered.' . . . ' A plaintiff cannot state a claim for failure to prevent harassment unless the plaintiff first states a claim for harassment." (M.F. v. Pacific Pearl Hotel Management LLC (2017) 16 Cal.App.5th 693, 700-701 [224 Cal.Rptr.3d 542].)
- "Once an employer is informed of the sexual harassment, the employer must take adequate remedial measures. The measures need to include immediate corrective action that is reasonably calculated to (1) end the current harassment and (2) to deter future harassment. [Citation.] The employer's obligation to take prompt corrective action requires (1) that temporary steps be taken to deal with the situation while the employer determines whether the complaint is justified and (2) that permanent remedial steps be implemented by the employer to prevent future harassment . . . ." (M.F., supra, 16 Cal.App.5th at p. 701.)
- "[T]he language of section 12940, subdivision (j)(1), does not limit its application to a particular fact pattern. Rather, the language of the statute provides for liability whenever an employer (1) knows or should know of sexual harassment by a nonemployee and (2) fails to take immediate and appropriate remedial action (3) within its control. (M.F., supra, 16 Cal.App.5th at p. 702.)
- "[W]hether an employer sufficiently complied with its mandate to 'take immediate and appropriate corrective action' is a question of fact." (M.F., supra, 16 Cal.App.5th at p. 703, internal citation omitted.)
- "The more egregious the abuse and the more serious the threat of which the employer has notice, the more the employer will be required under a standard of reasonable care to take steps for the protection of likely future victims." (M.F., supra, 16 Cal.App.5th at p. 701.)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, §§ 363, 370

8 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Constitutional Law, §§ 1019, 1028, 1035

2529–2539. Reserved for Future Use

2540. Disability Discrimination—Disparate Treatment—Essential Factual Elements

---

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] wrongfully discriminated against [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] based on [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] [history of [a]] [select term to describe basis of limitations, e.g., physical condition]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] was [an employer/[other covered entity]];
2. That [name of plaintiff] [was an employee of [name of defendant]/ applied to [name of defendant] for a job/[describe other covered relationship to defendant]];
3. That [name of defendant] knew that [name of plaintiff] had [a history of having] [a] [e.g., physical condition] [that limited [insert major life activity]];
4. That [name of plaintiff] was able to perform the essential job duties of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] [current position/the position for which [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] applied], either with or without reasonable accommodation for [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] [e.g., condition];
5. [That [name of defendant] [discharged/refused to hire/[other adverse employment action]] [name of plaintiff];]

   [or]

   [That [*name of defendant] subjected [name of plaintiff] to an adverse employment action;]

   [or]

   [That [*name of plaintiff] was constructively discharged;]
6. That [name of plaintiff]'s [history of [a]] [e.g., physical condition] was a substantial motivating reason for [name of defendant]'s [decision to [discharge/refuse to hire/[other adverse employment action]] [name of plaintiff]/conduct];
7. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
8. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

[*Name of plaintiff] does not need to prove that [name of defendant] held any ill will or animosity toward [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] personally because [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was [perceived to be] disabled. [On the other hand, if you find that [name of defendant] did hold ill will or animosity toward [*name of plaintiff] because [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was [perceived to be] disabled, you may consider this fact, along with all the other evidence, in determining whether [name of plaintiff]'s [history of [a]] [e.g., physical condition] was a substantial motivating reason for [name of defendant]'s [decision to [discharge/refuse to hire/[other adverse employment action]] [name of plaintiff]/conduct].]

---

*New September 2003; Revised June 2006, December 2007, April 2009, December 2009, June 2010, June 2012, June 2013, December 2014, December 2016, May 2019, May 2020, May 2024

Directions for Use

Select a term to use throughout to describe the source of the plaintiff's limitations. It may be a statutory term such as "physical disability," "mental disability," or "medical condition." (See Gov. Code, § 12940(a).) Or it may be a general term such as "condition," "disease," or "disorder." Or it may be a specific health condition such as "diabetes."

In the introductory paragraph and in elements 3 and 6, select the bracketed language on "history" of disability if the claim of discrimination is based on a history of disability rather than a current actual disability.

For element 1, the court may need to instruct the jury on the statutory definition of "employer" under the FEHA, which can include business entities acting as agents of employers. (Gov. Code, § 12926(d); Raines v. U.S. Healthworks Medical Group (2023) 15 Cal.5th 268, 291 [312 Cal.Rptr.3d 301, 534 P.3d 40].) Other covered entities under the FEHA include labor organizations, employment agencies, and apprenticeship training programs. (See Gov. Code, § 12940(b)–(h), (j), (k).)

This instruction is for use by both an employee and a job applicant. Select the appropriate options in elements 2, 5, and 6 depending on the plaintiff's status.

Modify elements 3 and 6 if the plaintiff was not actually disabled or had a history of disability, but alleges discrimination because the plaintiff was perceived to be disabled. (See Gov. Code, § 12926(o); see also Gov. Code, § 12926(j)(4), (m)(4) [mental and physical disability include being regarded or treated as disabled by the employer].) This can be done with language in element 3 that the employer "treated [name of plaintiff] as if [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] . . ." and with language in element 6 "That [name of employer]'s belief that . . . ."

If the plaintiff alleges discrimination on the basis of the plaintiff's association with someone who was or was perceived to be disabled, give CACI No. 2547, Disability-Based Associational Discrimination—Essential Factual Elements. (See Rope v. Auto-Chlor System of Washington, Inc. (2013) 220 Cal.App.4th 635, 655–660 [163 Cal.Rptr.3d 392] [claim for "disability based associational discrimination" adequately pled].)

If medical-condition discrimination as defined by statute (see Gov. Code, § 12926(i))

is alleged, omit "that limited [insert major life activity]" in element 3. (Compare Gov. Code, § 12926(i) with Gov. Code, § 12926(j), (m) [no requirement that medical condition limit major life activity].)

Regarding element 4, it is now settled that the ability to perform the essential duties of the job, with or without reasonable accommodation, is an element of the plaintiff's burden of proof. (See Green v. State of California (2007) 42 Cal.4th 254, 257–258 [64 Cal.Rptr.3d 390, 165 P.3d 118].)

Read the first option for element 5 if there is no dispute as to whether the employer's acts constituted an adverse employment action. Read the second option and also give CACI No. 2509, "Adverse Employment Action" Explained, if whether there was an adverse employment action is a question of fact for the jury. If constructive discharge is alleged, give the third option for element 5 and also give CACI No. 2510, "Constructive Discharge" Explained. Select "conduct" in element 6 if either the second or third option is included for element 5.

Element 6 requires that the disability be a substantial motivating reason for the adverse action. (See Harris v. City of Santa Monica (2013) 56 Cal.4th 203, 232 [152 Cal.Rptr.3d 392, 294 P.3d 49]; see also CACI No. 2507, "Substantial Motivating Reason" Explained.)

Give the optional sentence in the last paragraph if there is evidence that the defendant harbored personal animus against the plaintiff because of the plaintiff's disability.

If the existence of a qualifying disability is disputed, consider giving special instructions defining "medical condition," "mental disability," and "physical disability." (See Gov. Code, § 12926(i), (j), (m) [defining "medical condition," "mental disability," and "physical disability"]; see also Cal. Code Regs., tit. 2, § 11065.)

Sources and Authority

- Disability Discrimination Prohibited Under Fair Employment and Housing Act. Government Code section 12940(a).
- Inability to Perform Essential Job Duties. Government Code section 12940(a)(1).
- "Medical Condition" Defined. Government Code section 12926(i).
- "Mental Disability" Defined. Government Code section 12926(j).
- "Physical Disability" Defined. Government Code section 12926(m).
- Perception of Disability and Association With Person Who Has or Is Perceived to Have Disability Protected. Government Code section 12926(o).
- "Substantial" Limitation Not Required. Government Code section 12926.1(c).
- "The California Fair Employment and Housing Act, which defines 'employer' to 'include[]' 'any person acting as an agent of an employer,' permits a business entity acting as an agent of an employer to be held directly liable as an employer for employment discrimination in violation of the FEHA in appropriate circumstances when the business-entity agent has at least five employees and carries out FEHA-regulated activities on behalf of an employer. We do not decide the significance, if any, of employer control over the act(s) of the agent that gave rise to the FEHA violation, and we also do not decide whether our conclusion extends to business-entity agents that have fewer than five employees. We base our conclusion on our interpretation of the FEHA's definition of employer; we express no view of the scope of a business entity agent's possible liability under the FEHA's aider and abettor provision." (Raines, supra, 15 Cal.5th at p. 291, internal citations omitted.)

- "[T]he plaintiff initially has the burden to establish a prima facie case of discrimination. The plaintiff can meet this burden by presenting evidence that demonstrates, even circumstantially or by inference, that he or she (1) suffered from a disability, or was regarded as suffering from a disability; (2) could perform the essential duties of the job with or without reasonable accommodations, and (3) was subjected to an adverse employment action because of the disability or perceived disability. To establish a prima facie case, a plaintiff must show ' " ' "actions taken by the employer from which one can infer, if such actions remain unexplained, that it is more likely than not that such actions were based on a [prohibited] discriminatory criterion . . . ." ' " . . .' The prima facie burden is light; the evidence necessary to sustain the burden is minimal. As noted above, while the elements of a plaintiff's prima facie case can vary considerably, generally an employee need only offer sufficient circumstantial evidence to give rise to a reasonable inference of discrimination." (Sandell v. Taylor-Listug, Inc. (2010) 188 Cal.App.4th 297, 310 [115 Cal.Rptr.3d 453], original italics, internal citations omitted.)
- "The distinction between cases involving direct evidence of the employer's motive for the adverse employment action and cases where there is only circumstantial evidence of the employer's discriminatory motive is critical to the outcome of this appeal. There is a vast body of case law that addresses proving discriminatory intent in cases where there was no direct evidence that the adverse employment action taken by the employer was motivated by race, religion, national origin, age or sex. In such cases, proof of discriminatory motive is governed by the three-stage burden-shifting test established by the United States Supreme Court in McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792 [93 S.Ct. 1817, 36 L.Ed.2d 668]." (Wallace v. County of Stanislaus (2016) 245 Cal.App.4th 109, 123 [199 Cal.Rptr.3d 462], original italics, footnote and internal citations omitted.)
- "The three-stage framework and the many principles adopted to guide its application do not apply in discrimination cases where, like here, the plaintiff presents direct evidence of the employer's motivation for the adverse employment action. In many types of discrimination cases, courts state that direct evidence of intentional discrimination is rare, but disability discrimination cases often involve direct evidence of the role of the employee's actual or perceived disability in the employer's decision to implement an adverse employment action. Instead of litigating the employer's reasons for the action, the parties' disputes in disability cases focus on whether the employee was able to perform essential job functions, whether there were reasonable accommodations that would have allowed the employee to perform those functions, and whether a reasonable accommodation would have imposed an undue hardship on the employer. To summarize, courts and practitioners should not automatically apply principles related to the McDonnell Douglas test to disability discrimination cases. Rather, they should examine the critical threshold issue and determine whether there is direct evidence that the motive for the employer's conduct was related to the employee's physical or mental condition." (Wallace, supra, 245 Cal.App.4th at p. 123, original italics, footnote and internal citations omitted; cf. Moore v. Regents of University of California (2016) 248 Cal.App.4th 216, 234 fn. 3 [206 Cal.Rptr.3d 841] [case did not present so-called "typical" disability discrimination case, as described in Wallace, in that the parties disputed the employer's reasons for terminating plaintiff's employment].)

- "If the employee meets this [prima facie] burden, it is then incumbent on the employer to show that it had a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for its employment decision. When this showing is made, the burden shifts back to the employee to produce substantial evidence that employer's given reason was either 'untrue or pretextual,' or that the employer acted with discriminatory animus, in order to raise an inference of discrimination." (Furtado v. State Personnel Bd. (2013) 212 Cal.App.4th 729, 744 [151 Cal.Rptr.3d 292], internal citations omitted.)
- "Although the same statutory language that prohibits disability discrimination also prohibits discrimination based on race, age, sex, and other factors, we conclude that disability discrimination claims are fundamentally different from the discrimination claims based on the other factors listed in section 12940, subdivision (a). These differences arise because (1) additional statutory provisions apply to disability discrimination claims, (2) the Legislature made separate findings and declarations about protections given to disabled persons, and (3) discrimination cases involving race, religion, national origin, age and sex, often involve pretexts for the adverse employment action—an issue about motivation that appears less frequently in disability discrimination cases." (Wallace, supra, 245 Cal.App.4th at p. 122.)
- "[Defendant] argues that, because [it] hired plaintiffs as recruit officers, they must show they were able to perform the essential functions of a police recruit in order to be qualified individuals entitled to protection under FEHA. [Defendant] argues that plaintiffs cannot satisfy their burden of proof under FEHA because they failed to show that they could perform those essential functions. [¶] Plaintiffs do not directly respond to [defendant]'s argument. Instead, they contend that the relevant question is whether they could perform the essential functions of the positions to which they sought reassignment. Plaintiffs' argument improperly conflates the legal standards for their claim under section 12940, subdivision (a), for discrimination, and their claim under section 12940, subdivision (m), for failure to make reasonable accommodation, including reassignment. In connection with a discrimination claim under section 12940, subdivision (a), the court considers whether a plaintiff could perform the essential functions of the job held—or for job applicants, the job desired—with or without reasonable accommodation." (Atkins v. City of Los Angeles (2017) 8 Cal.App.5th 696, 716–717 [214 Cal.Rptr.3d 113].)

- "Summary adjudication of the section 12940(a) claim . . . turns on . . . whether [plaintiff] could perform the essential functions of the relevant job with or without accommodation. [Plaintiff] does not dispute that she was unable to perform the essential functions of her former position as a clothes fitter with or without accommodation. Under federal law, however, when an employee seeks accommodation by being reassigned to a vacant position in the company, the employee satisfies the 'qualified individual with a disability' requirement by showing he or she can perform the essential functions of the vacant position with or without accommodation. The position must exist and be vacant, and the employer need not promote the disabled employee. We apply the same rule here. To prevail on summary adjudication of the section 12940(a) claim, [defendant] must show there is no triable issue of fact about [plaintiff]'s ability, with or without accommodation, to perform the essential functions of an available vacant position that would not be a promotion." (Nadaf-Rahrov v. The Neiman Marcus Group, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal.App.4th 952, 965 [83 Cal.Rptr.3d 190], original italics, internal citations omitted.)
- "To establish a prima facie case of mental disability discrimination under FEHA, a plaintiff must show the following elements: (1) She suffers from a mental disability; (2) she is otherwise qualified to do the job with or without reasonable accommodation; and (3) she was subjected to an adverse employment action because of the disability." (Higgins-Williams v. Sutter Medical Foundation (2015) 237 Cal.App.4th 78, 84 [187 Cal.Rptr.3d 745].)
- "At most, [plaintiff] alleges only that he anticipated becoming disabled for some time after the organ donation. This is insufficient. [Plaintiff] cannot pursue a cause of action for discrimination under FEHA on the basis of his 'actual' physical disability in the absence of factual allegations that he was in fact, physically disabled." (Rope, supra, 220 Cal.App.4th at p. 659.)
- "[Defendant] asserts the statute's 'regarded as' protection is limited to persons who are denied or who lose jobs based on an employer's reliance on the 'myths, fears or stereotypes' frequently associated with disabilities. . . . However, the statutory language does not expressly restrict FEHA's protections to the narrow class to whom [defendant] would limit its coverage. To impose such a restriction would exclude from protection a large group of individuals, like [plaintiff], with more mundane long-term medical conditions, the significance of which is exacerbated by an employer's failure to reasonably accommodate. Both the policy and language of the statute offer protection to a person who is not actually disabled, but is wrongly perceived to be. The statute's plain language leads to the conclusion that the 'regarded as' definition casts a broader net and protects any individual 'regarded' or 'treated' by an employer 'as having, or having had, any physical condition that makes achievement of a major life activity difficult' or may do so in the future. We agree most individuals who sue exclusively under this definitional prong likely are and will continue to be victims of an employer's 'mistaken' perception, based on an unfounded fear or stereotypical assumption. Nevertheless, FEHA's protection is nowhere expressly premised on such a factual showing, and we decline the invitation to import such a requirement." (Gelfo v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2006) 140 Cal.App.4th 34, 53 [43 Cal.Rptr.3d 874], original italics, internal citations omitted.)

- "[T]he purpose of the 'regarded-as' prong is to protect individuals rejected from a job because of the 'myths, fears and stereotypes' associated with disabilities. In other words, to find a perceived disability, the perception must stem from a false idea about the existence of or the limiting effect of a disability." (Diffey v. Riverside County Sheriff's Dept. (2000) 84 Cal.App.4th 1031, 1037 [101 Cal.Rptr.2d 353], internal citation omitted.)
- "We say on this record that [defendant] took action against [plaintiff] based on concerns or fear about his possible future disability. The relevant FEHA definition of an individual regarded as disabled applies only to those who suffer certain specified physical disabilities or those who have a condition with 'no present disabling effect' but which 'may become a physical disability . . . .' According to the pleadings, [defendant] fired [plaintiff] to avoid accommodating him because of his association with his physically disabled sister. That is not a basis for liability under the 'regarded as' disabled standard." (Rope, supra, 220 Cal.App.4th at p. 659, internal citations omitted.)
- " '[A]n employer "knows an employee has a disability when the employee tells the employer about his condition, or when the employer otherwise becomes aware of the condition, such as through a third party or by observation. The employer need only know the underlying facts, not the legal significance of those facts." ' " (Soria v. Univision Radio Los Angeles, Inc. (2016) 5 Cal.App.5th 570, 592 [210 Cal.Rptr.3d 59].)
- " 'An adverse employment decision cannot be made "because of" a disability, when the disability is not known to the employer. Thus, in order to prove [a discrimination] claim, a plaintiff must prove the employer had knowledge of the employee's disability when the adverse employment decision was made. . . . While knowledge of the disability can be inferred from the circumstances, knowledge will only be imputed to the employer when the fact of disability is the only reasonable interpretation of the known facts. "Vague or conclusory statements revealing an unspecified incapacity are not sufficient to put an employer on notice of its obligations . . . ." . . .' " (Scotch v. Art Institute of California (2009) 173 Cal.App.4th 986, 1008 [93 Cal.Rptr.3d 338].)
- "[W]e interpret FEHA as authorizing an employer to distinguish between disability-caused misconduct and the disability itself in the narrow context of threats or violence against coworkers. If employers are not permitted to make this distinction, they are caught on the horns of a dilemma. They may not discriminate against an employee based on a disability but, at the same time, must provide all employees with a safe work environment free from threats and violence." (Wills v. Superior Court (2011) 195 Cal.App.4th 143, 166 [125 Cal.Rptr.3d 1], internal citations omitted.)

- "Requiring the plaintiff to show that discrimination was a substantial motivating factor, rather than simply a motivating factor, more effectively ensures that liability will not be imposed based on evidence of mere thoughts or passing statements unrelated to the disputed employment decision. At the same time, . . . proof that discrimination was a substantial factor in an employment decision triggers the deterrent purpose of the FEHA and thus exposes the employer to liability, even if other factors would have led the employer to make the same decision at the time." (Harris, supra, 56 Cal.4th at p. 232, original italics.)
- "We do not suggest that discrimination must be alone sufficient to bring about an employment decision in order to constitute a substantial motivating factor. But it is important to recognize that discrimination can be serious, consequential, and even by itself determinative of an employment decision without also being a 'but for' cause." (Harris, supra, 56 Cal.4th at p. 229.)
- "We note that the court in Harris discussed the employer's motivation and the link between the employer's consideration of the plaintiff's physical condition and the adverse employment action without using the terms 'animus,' 'animosity,' or 'ill will.' The absence of a discussion of these terms necessarily implies an employer can violate section 12940, subdivision (a) by taking an adverse employment action against an employee "because of" the employee's physical disability even if the employer harbored no animosity or ill will against the employee or the class of persons with that disability." (Wallace, supra, 245 Cal.App.4th at p. 128.)
- "Based on Harris, we conclude that an employer has treated an employee differently 'because of' a disability when the disability is a substantial motivating reason for the employer's decision to subject the [employee] to an adverse employment action. This conclusion resolves how the jury should have been instructed on [defendant]'s motivation or intent in connection with the disability discrimination claim." (Wallace, supra, 245 Cal.App.4th at p. 128.)
- "We conclude that where, as here, an employee is found to be able to safely perform the essential duties of the job, a plaintiff alleging disability discrimination can establish the requisite employer intent to discriminate by proving (1) the employer knew that plaintiff had a physical condition that limited a major life activity, or perceived him to have such a condition, and (2) the plaintiff's actual or perceived physical condition was a substantial motivating reason for the defendant's decision to subject the plaintiff to an adverse employment action. . . . [T]his conclusion is based on (1) the interpretation of section 12940's term 'because of' adopted in Harris; (2) our discussion of the meaning of the statutory phrase 'to discriminate against'; and (3) the guidance provided by the current versions of CACI Nos. 2540 and 2507. [¶] Therefore, the jury instruction that [plaintiff] was required to prove that [defendant] 'regarded or treated [him] as having a disability in order to discriminate' was erroneous." (Wallace, supra, 245 Cal.App.4th at p. 129.)

- "The word 'animus' is ambiguous because it can be interpreted narrowly to mean 'ill will' or 'animosity' or can be interpreted broadly to mean 'intention.' In this case, it appears [defendant] uses 'animus' to mean something more than the intent described by the substantial-motivating-reason test adopted in Harris." (Wallace, supra, 245 Cal.App.4th at p. 130, fn. 14, internal citation omitted.)
- " '[W]eight may qualify as a protected "handicap" or "disability" within the meaning of the FEHA if medical evidence demonstrates that it results from a physiological condition affecting one or more of the basic bodily systems and limits a major life activity.' . . . '[A]n individual who asserts a violation of the FEHA on the basis of his or her weight must adduce evidence of a physiological, systemic basis for the condition.' " (Cornell v. Berkeley Tennis Club (2017) 18 Cal.App.5th 908, 928 [227 Cal.Rptr.3d 286].)
- "Being unable to work during pregnancy is a disability for the purposes of section 12940." (Sanchez v. Swissport, Inc. (2013) 213 Cal.App.4th 1331, 1340 [153 Cal.Rptr.3d 367].)

Secondary Sources

8 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Constitutional Law, §§ 1045–1051

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 9-C, California Fair Employment And Housing Act (FEHA), ¶¶ 9:2160–9:2241 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Discrimination Claims, §§ 2.78–2.80

2 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, §§ 41.11, 41.32[2][c] (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, §§ 115.22[8], 115.23[2] (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation § 2:46 (Thomson Reuters)

2541. Disability Discrimination—Reasonable Accommodation—Essential Factual Elements (Gov. Code, § 12940(m))

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] failed to reasonably accommodate [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] [select term to describe basis of limitations, e.g., physical condition]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] was [an employer/[other covered entity]];
2. That [name of plaintiff] [was an employee of [name of defendant]/ applied to [name of defendant] for a job/[describe other covered relationship to defendant]];
3. That [[name of plaintiff] had/[name of defendant] treated [name of plaintiff] as if [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] had] [a] [e.g., physical condition] [that limited [insert major life activity]];
4. That [name of defendant] knew of [name of plaintiff]'s [e.g., physical condition] [that limited [insert major life activity]];]
5. That [name of plaintiff] was able to perform the essential duties of [[his/her/nonbinary pronoun] current position or a vacant alternative position to which [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] could have been reassigned/the position for which [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] applied] with reasonable accommodation for [his/her/ nonbinary pronoun] [e.g., physical condition];
6. That [name of defendant] failed to provide reasonable accommodation for [name of plaintiff]'s [e.g., physical condition];
7. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
8. That [name of defendant]'s failure to provide reasonable accommodation was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

[In determining whether [*name of plaintiff]'s [e.g., physical condition] limits [insert major life activity], you must consider the [e.g., physical condition] [in its unmedicated state/without assistive devices/[describe mitigating measures]].]

*New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2007, April 2009, December 2009, June 2010, December 2011, June 2012, June 2013, May 2019, May 2023, May 2024

Directions for Use

Select a term to use throughout to describe the source of the plaintiff's limitations. It may be a statutory term such as "physical disability," "mental disability," or "medical condition." (See Gov. Code, § 12940(a).) Or it may be a general term such as "condition," "disease," or "disorder." Or it may be a specific health condition such as "diabetes."

For element 1, the court may need to instruct the jury on the statutory definition of "employer" under the FEHA, which can include business entities acting as agents of employers. (Gov. Code, § 12926(d); Raines v. U.S. Healthworks Medical Group (2023) 15 Cal.5th 268, 291 [312 Cal.Rptr.3d 301, 534 P.3d 40].) Other covered entities under the FEHA include labor organizations, employment agencies, and apprenticeship training programs. (See Gov. Code, § 12940(b)–(h), (j), (k).)

This instruction is for use by both an employee and a job applicant. Select the appropriate options in elements 2 and 5 depending on the plaintiff's status.

If medical-condition discrimination as defined by statute (see Gov. Code, § 12926(i)) is alleged, omit "that limited [insert major life activity]" in elements 3 and 4 and do not include the last paragraph. (Compare Gov. Code, § 12926(i) with Gov. Code, § 12926(j), (m) [no requirement that medical condition limit major life activity].)

In a case of perceived disability, include "[name of defendant] treated [name of plaintiff] as if [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] had" in element 3, and delete optional element 4. (See Gov. Code, § 12926(j)(4), (m)(4) [mental and physical disability include being regarded or treated as disabled by the employer].) In a case of actual disability, include "[name of plaintiff*] had" in element 3, and give element 4.

If the existence of a qualifying disability is disputed, consider giving special instructions defining "medical condition," "mental disability," and "physical disability." (See Gov. Code, § 12926(i), (j), (m) [defining "medical condition," "mental disability," and "physical disability"]; see also Cal. Code Regs., tit. 2, § 11065.)

The California Supreme Court has held that under Government Code section 12940(a), the plaintiff is required to prove that he or she has the ability to perform the essential duties of the job with or without reasonable accommodation. (See Green v. State of California (2007) 42 Cal.4th 254, 260 [64 Cal.Rptr.3d 390, 165 P.3d 118].) While the court left open the question of whether the same rule should apply to cases under Government Code section 12940(m) (see id. at p. 265), appellate courts have subsequently placed the burden on the employee to prove that he or she would be able to perform the job duties with reasonable accommodation (see element 5). (See Cuiellette v. City of Los Angeles (2011) 194 Cal.App.4th 757, 766 [123 Cal.Rptr.3d 562]; Nadaf-Rahrov v. The Neiman Marcus Group, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal.App.4th 952, 973–979 [83 Cal.Rptr.3d 190].)

There may still be an unresolved issue if the employee claims that the employer failed to provide the employee with other suitable job positions that the employee might be able to perform with reasonable accommodation. The rule has been that the employer has an affirmative duty to make known to the employee other suitable job opportunities and to determine whether the employee is interested in, and qualified for, those positions, if the employer can do so without undue hardship or if the employer offers similar assistance or benefit to any other employees or has a policy of offering such assistance or benefit to any other employees. (Prilliman v. United Air Lines, Inc. (1997) 53 Cal.App.4th 935, 950–951 [62 Cal.Rptr.2d 142]; see also Furtado v. State Personnel Bd. (2013) 212 Cal.App.4th 729, 745 [151 Cal.Rptr.3d 292]; Claudio v. Regents of the University of California (2005) 134 Cal.App.4th 224, 243 [35 Cal.Rptr.3d 837]; Hanson v. Lucky Stores (1999) 74 Cal.App.4th 215, 226 [87 Cal.Rptr.2d 487].) In contrast, other courts have said that it is the employee's burden to prove that a reasonable accommodation could have been made, i.e., that the employee was qualified for a position in light of the potential accommodation. (See Nadaf-Rahrov, supra, 166 Cal.App.4th at p. 978; see also Cuiellette, supra, 194 Cal.App.4th at p. 767 [plaintiff proves he or she is a qualified individual by establishing that he or she can perform the essential functions of the position to which reassignment is sought].) The question of whether the employee has to present evidence of other suitable job descriptions and prove that a vacancy existed for a position that the employee could do with reasonable accommodation may not be fully resolved.

No element has been included that requires the plaintiff to specifically request reasonable accommodation. Unlike Government Code section 12940(n) on the interactive process (see CACI No. 2546, Disability Discrimination—Reasonable Accommodation—Failure to Engage in Interactive Process), section 12940(m) does not specifically require that the employee request reasonable accommodation; it requires only that the employer know of the disability. (See Prilliman, supra, 53 Cal.App.4th at pp. 950–951.)

Sources and Authority

- Reasonable Accommodation Required. Government Code section 12940(m).
- "Reasonable Accommodation" Explained. Government Code section 12926(p).
- "Medical Condition" Defined. Government Code section 12926(i).
- "Mental Disability" Defined. Government Code section 12926(j).
- "Physical Disability" Defined. Government Code section 12926(m).
- "Substantial" Limitation Not Required. Government Code section 12926.1(c).
- "Under FEHA, an employer is required 'to make reasonable accommodation for the known physical or mental disability of an applicant or employee.' Relatedly, the employer is required 'to engage in a timely, good faith, interactive process with the employee or applicant to determine effective reasonable accommodations, if any, in response to a request for reasonable accommodation by an employee or applicant with a known physical or mental disability . . . .' " (Lin v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (2023) 88 Cal.App.5th 712, 728 [304 Cal.Rptr.3d 820], internal citations omitted.)
- "There are three elements to a failure to accommodate action: '(1) the plaintiff has a disability covered by the FEHA; (2) the plaintiff is a qualified individual (i.e., he or she can perform the essential functions of the position); and (3) the employer failed to reasonably accommodate the plaintiff's disability. [Citation.]' " (Hernandez v. Rancho Santiago Cmty. College Dist. (2018) 22 Cal.App.5th 1187, 1193–1194 [232 Cal.Rptr.3d 349].)

- "Under the FEHA, 'reasonable accommodation' means 'a modification or adjustment to the workplace that enables the employee to perform the essential functions of the job held or desired.' " (Cuiellette, supra, 194 Cal.App.4th at p. 766.)
- "Reasonable accommodations include '[j]ob restructuring, part-time or modified work schedules, reassignment to a vacant position, . . . and other similar accommodations for individuals with disabilities.' " (Swanson v. Morongo Unified School Dist. (2014) 232 Cal.App.4th 954, 968 [181 Cal.Rptr.3d 553], original italics.)
- "The examples of reasonable accommodations in the relevant statutes and regulations include reallocating nonessential functions or modifying how or when an employee performs an essential function, but not eliminating essential functions altogether. FEHA does not obligate the employer to accommodate the employee by excusing him or her from the performance of essential functions." (Nealy v. City of Santa Monica (2015) 234 Cal.App.4th 359, 375 [184 Cal.Rptr.3d 9].)
- "A term of leave from work can be a reasonable accommodation under FEHA, and, therefore, a request for leave can be considered to be a request for accommodation under FEHA." (Moore v. Regents of University of California (2016) 248 Cal.App.4th 216, 243 [206 Cal.Rptr.3d 841], internal citation omitted.)
- "Failure to accommodate claims are not subject to the McDonnell Douglas burden-shifting framework." (Cornell v. Berkeley Tennis Club (2017) 18 Cal.App.5th 908, 926 [227 Cal.Rptr.3d 286].)
- "The question now arises whether it is the employees' burden to prove that a reasonable accommodation could have been made, i.e., that they were qualified for a position in light of the potential accommodation, or the employers' burden to prove that no reasonable accommodation was available, i.e., that the employees were not qualified for any position because no reasonable accommodation was available. [¶¶] Applying Green's burden of proof analysis to section 12940(m), we conclude that the burden of proving ability to perform the essential functions of a job with accommodation should be placed on the plaintiff under this statute as well. First, . . . an employee's ability to perform the essential functions of a job is a prerequisite to liability under section 12940(m). Second, the Legislature modeled section 12940(m) on the federal reasonable accommodation requirement (adopting almost verbatim the federal statutory definition of 'reasonable accommodation' by way of example). Had the Legislature intended the employer to bear the burden of proving ability to perform the essential functions of the job, contrary to the federal allocation of the burden of proof, . . . it could have expressly provided for that result, but it did not. Finally, general evidentiary principles support allocating the burden of proof on this issue to the plaintiff." (Nadaf-Rahrov, supra, 166 Cal.App.4th at pp. 977–978, internal citations omitted.)

- " 'If the employee cannot be accommodated in his or her existing position and the requested accommodation is reassignment, an employer must make affirmative efforts to determine whether a position is available. [Citation.] A reassignment, however, is not required if "there is no vacant position for which the employee is qualified." [Citations.] "The responsibility to reassign a disabled employee who cannot otherwise be accommodated does 'not require creating a new job, moving another employee, promoting the disabled employee or violating another employee's rights . . . .' " [Citations.] "What is required is the 'duty to reassign a disabled employee if an already funded, vacant position at the same level exists.' [Citations.]" [Citations.]' " (Furtado, supra, 212 Cal.App.4th at p. 745.)
- "[A]n employee's probationary status does not, in and of itself, deprive an employee of the protections of FEHA, including a reasonable reassignment. The statute does not distinguish between the types of reasonable accommodations an employer may have to provide to employees on probation or in training and those an employer may have to provide to other employees. We decline to read into FEHA a limitation on an employee's eligibility for reassignment based on an employee's training or probationary status. Instead, the trier of fact should consider whether an employee is on probation or in training in determining whether a particular reassignment is comparable in pay and status to the employee's original position." (Atkins v. City of Los Angeles (2017) 8 Cal.App.5th 696, 724 [214 Cal.Rptr.3d 113], internal citations omitted.)
- "[A] disabled employee seeking reassignment to a vacant position 'is entitled to preferential consideration.' " (Swanson, supra, 232 Cal.App.4th at p. 970.)
- " 'Generally, " '[t]he employee bears the burden of giving the employer notice of the disability.' " ' An employer, in other words, has no affirmative duty to investigate whether an employee's illness might qualify as a disability. ' " '[T]he employee can't expect the employer to read his mind and know he secretly wanted a particular accommodation and sue the employer for not providing it. Nor is an employer ordinarily liable for failing to accommodate a disability of which it had no knowledge.' " ' " (Featherstone v. Southern California Permanente Medical Group (2017) 10 Cal.App.5th 1150, 1167 [217 Cal.Rptr.3d 258], internal citations omitted.)
- " '[A]n employer "knows an employee has a disability when the employee tells the employer about his condition, or when the employer otherwise becomes aware of the condition, such as through a third party or by observation." ' . . . [¶] 'While knowledge of the disability can be inferred from the circumstances, knowledge will only be imputed to the employer when the fact of disability is the only reasonable interpretation of the known facts. "Vague or conclusory statements revealing an unspecified incapacity are not sufficient to put an employer on notice of its obligations under the [FEHA].' " (Featherstone, supra, 10 Cal.App.5th at p. 1167, internal citations omitted.)

- "In other words, so long as the employer is aware of the employee's condition, there is no requirement that the employer be aware that the condition is considered a disability under the FEHA. By the same token, it is insufficient to tell the employer merely that one is disabled or requires an accommodation." (Cornell, supra, 18 Cal.App.5th at p. 938, internal citation omitted.)
- " ' " 'This notice then triggers the employer's burden to take "positive steps" to accommodate the employee's limitations. . . . [¶] . . . The employee, of course, retains a duty to cooperate with the employer's efforts by explaining [his or her] disability and qualifications. [Citation.] Reasonable accommodation thus envisions an exchange between employer and employee where each seeks and shares information to achieve the best match between the [employee's] capabilities and available positions.' " ' " (Soria v. Univision Radio Los Angeles, Inc. (2016) 5 Cal.App.5th 570, 598 [210 Cal.Rptr.3d 59].)
- "Employers must make reasonable accommodations to the disability of an individual unless the employer can demonstrate that doing so would impose an 'undue hardship.' " (Prilliman, supra, 53 Cal.App.4th at p. 947.)
- " 'Ordinarily the reasonableness of an accommodation is an issue for the jury.' " (Prilliman, supra, 53 Cal.App.4th at p. 954, internal citation omitted.)
- "[T]he duty of an employer to provide reasonable accommodation for an employee with a disability is broader under the FEHA than under the ADA." (Bagatti, supra, 97 Cal.App.4th at p. 362.)
- "[A]n employer is relieved of the duty to reassign a disabled employee whose limitations cannot be reasonably accommodated in his or her current job only if reassignment would impose an 'undue hardship' on its operations . . . ." (Atkins, supra, 8 Cal.App.5th at p. 721.)
- "The question whether plaintiffs could perform the essential functions of a position to which they sought reassignment is relevant to a claim for failure to accommodate under section 12940, subdivision (m) . . . ." (Atkins, supra, 8 Cal.App.5th at p. 717.)
- "On these issues, which are novel to California and on which the federal courts are divided, we conclude that employers must reasonably accommodate individuals falling within any of FEHA's statutorily defined 'disabilities,' including those 'regarded as' disabled, and must engage in an informal, interactive process to determine any effective accommodations." (Gelfo v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2006) 140 Cal.App.4th 34, 55 [43 Cal.Rptr.3d 874].)
- "While a claim of failure to accommodate is independent of a cause of action for failure to engage in an interactive dialogue, each necessarily implicates the other." (Moore, supra, 248 Cal.App.4th at p. 242.)
- "[A] pretextual termination of a perceived-as-disabled employee's employment in lieu of providing reasonable accommodation or engaging in the interactive process does not provide an employer a reprieve from claims for failure to accommodate and failure to engage in the interactive process." (Moore, supra, 248 Cal.App.4th at p. 244.)

- "Appellant also stated a viable claim under section 12940, subdivision (m), which mandates that an employer provide reasonable accommodations for the known physical disability of an employee. She alleged that she was unable to work during her pregnancy, that she was denied reasonable accommodations for her pregnancy-related disability and terminated, and that the requested accommodations would not have imposed an undue hardship on [defendant]. A finite leave of greater than four months may be a reasonable accommodation for a known disability under the FEHA." (Sanchez v. Swissport, Inc. (2013) 213 Cal.App.4th 1331, 1341 [153 Cal.Rptr.3d 367].)
- "To the extent [plaintiff] claims the [defendant] had a duty to await a vacant position to arise, he is incorrect. A finite leave of absence may be a reasonable accommodation to allow an employee time to recover, but FEHA does not require the employer to provide an indefinite leave of absence to await possible future vacancies." (Nealy, supra, 234 Cal.App.4th at pp. 377–378.)
- "While 'a finite leave can be a reasonable accommodation under FEHA, provided it is likely that at the end of the leave, the employee would be able to perform . . . her duties,' a finite leave is not a reasonable accommodation when the leave leads directly to termination of employment because the employee's performance could not be evaluated while she was on the leave." (Hernandez, supra, 22 Cal.App.5th at p. 1194.)

Secondary Sources

10 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Constitutional Law, §§ 977, 1048

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 9-C, California Fair Employment And Housing Act (FEHA), ¶¶ 9:2250–9:2285, 9:2345–9:2347 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Discrimination Claims, § 2.79

2 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 41.51[3] (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, §§ 115.20, 115.35 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation § 2:50 (Thomson Reuters)

2542. Disability Discrimination—"Reasonable Accommodation" Explained

A reasonable accommodation is a reasonable change to the workplace that [*choose one or more of the following]

[gives a qualified applicant with a disability an equal opportunity in the job application process;]

[allows an employee with a disability to perform the essential duties of the job;] [or]

[allows an employee with a disability to enjoy the same benefits and privileges of employment that are available to employees without disabilities.]

Reasonable accommodations may include the following:

a. Making the workplace readily accessible to and usable by employees with disabilities;

b. Changing job responsibilities or work schedules;

c. Reassigning the employee to a vacant position;

d. Modifying or providing equipment or devices;

e. Modifying tests or training materials;

f. Providing qualified interpreters or readers; or

g. Providing other similar accommodations for an individual with a disability.

If more than one accommodation is reasonable, an employer makes a reasonable accommodation if it selects one of those accommodations in good faith.

New September 2003; Revised April 2009, June 2012

Directions for Use

Give this instruction to explain "reasonable accommodation" as used in CACI No. 2541, Disability Discrimination—Reasonable Accommodation—Essential Factual Elements. For discussion regarding the burden of proof on reasonable accommodation, see the Directions for Use to CACI No. 2541.

Sources and Authority

- Employer Obligation to Make Reasonable Accommodation. Government Code section 12940(m).
- "Reasonable Accommodation" Defined. Government Code section 12926(p).

- "Reasonable Accommodation" Defined. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 2, § 11068(a).
- "Substantial" Limitation Not Required. Government Code section 12926.1(c).
- "[T]he duty of an employer to provide reasonable accommodation for an employee with a disability is broader under the FEHA than under the ADA." (Bagatti v. Department of Rehabilitation (2002) 97 Cal.App.4th 344, 362 [118 Cal.Rptr.2d 443].)
- "[A]n employer who knows of the disability of an employee has an affirmative duty to make known to the employee other suitable job opportunities with the employer and to determine whether the employee is interested in, and qualified for, those positions, if the employer can do so without undue hardship or if the employer offers similar assistance or benefit to other disabled or nondisabled employees or has a policy of offering such assistance or benefit to any other employees." (Prilliman v. United Air Lines, Inc. (1997) 53 Cal.App.4th 935, 950–951 [62 Cal.Rptr.2d 142].)
- "The question now arises whether it is the employees' burden to prove that a reasonable accommodation could have been made, i.e., that they were qualified for a position in light of the potential accommodation, or the employers' burden to prove that no reasonable accommodation was available, i.e., that the employees were not qualified for any position because no reasonable accommodation was available. [¶¶] Applying Green's burden of proof analysis to section 12940(m), we conclude that the burden of proving ability to perform the essential functions of a job with accommodation should be placed on the plaintiff under this statute as well." (Nadaf-Rahrov v. The Neiman Marcus Group, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal.App.4th 952, 977–978 [83 Cal.Rptr.3d 190], internal citations omitted.)
- "Under the FEHA . . . an employer is relieved of the duty to reassign a disabled employee whose limitations cannot be reasonably accommodated in his or her current job only if reassignment would impose an 'undue hardship' on its operations or if there is no vacant position for which the employee is qualified." (Spitzer v. Good Guys, Inc. (2000) 80 Cal.App.4th 1376, 1389 [96 Cal.Rptr.2d 236].)

Secondary Sources

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 7-A, Title VII And The California Fair Employment And Housing Act, ¶ 7:213 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 9-C, California Fair Employment And Housing Act (FEHA), ¶¶ 9:2091, 9:2093–9:2095, 9:2197, 9:2252, 9:2265, 9:2366 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Discrimination Claims, § 2.79

2 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 41.51[3][a], [b] (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment

Discrimination, § 115.35 (Matthew Bender)
California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation § 2:50 (Thomson Reuters)

2543. Disability Discrimination—"Essential Job Duties" Explained (Gov. Code, §§ 12926(f), 12940(a)(1))

In deciding whether a job duty is essential, you may consider, among other factors, the following:

a. Whether the reason the job exists is to perform that duty;

b. Whether there is a limited number of employees available who can perform that duty;

c. Whether the job duty is highly specialized so that the person currently holding the position was hired for the person's expertise or ability to perform the particular duty.

Evidence of whether a particular duty is essential includes, but is not limited to, the following:

a. [*Name of defendant]'s judgment as to which functions are essential;

b. Written job descriptions prepared before advertising or interviewing applicants for the job;

c. The amount of time spent on the job performing the duty;

d. The consequences of not requiring the person currently holding the position to perform the duty;

e. The terms of a collective bargaining agreement;

f. The work experiences of past persons holding the job;

g. The current work experience of persons holding similar jobs;

h. Reference to the importance of the job in prior performance reviews.

"Essential job duties" do not include the marginal duties of the position. "Marginal duties" are those that, if not performed would not eliminate the need for the job, or those that could be readily performed by another employee, or those that could be performed in another way.

New September 2003; Revoked June 2013; Restored and Revised December 2013; Revised May 2020

Directions for Use

Give this instruction with CACI No. 2540, Disability Discrimination—Disparate Treatment—Essential Factual Elements, or CACI No. 2541, Disability Discrimination—Reasonable Accommodation—Essential Factual Elements, or both, if it is necessary to explain what is an "essential job duty." (See Gov. Code, §§ 12926(f), 12940(a)(1); see also Furtado v. State Personnel Bd. (2013) 212 Cal.App.4th 729, 743–744 [151 Cal.Rptr.3d 292].) While the employee has the burden to prove that the employee can perform essential job duties, with or without reasonable accommodation, it is unresolved which party has the burden of proving that a job duty is essential. (See Lui v. City and County of San Francisco (2012) 211 Cal.App.4th 962, 972–973 [150 Cal.Rptr.3d 385].)

Sources and Authority

- Ability to Perform Essential Duties. Government Code section 12940(a)(1).
- "Essential Functions" Defined. Government Code section 12926(f).
- Evidence of Essential Functions. 2 California Code of Regulations section 11065(e)(2).
- Marginal Functions. 2 California Code of Regulations section 11065(e)(3).
- " ' "Essential functions" means the fundamental job duties of the employment position the individual with a disability holds or desires. "Essential functions" does not include the marginal functions of the position.' ' "Marginal functions" of an employment position are those that, if not performed, would not eliminate the need for the job or that could be readily performed by another employee or that could be performed in an alternative way.' 'A job function may be considered essential for any of several reasons, including, but not limited to, any one or more of the following: [¶] (A) . . . [T]he reason the position exists is to perform that function. [¶] (B) . . . [T]he limited number of employees available among whom the performance of that job function can be distributed. [¶] [And] (C) . . . the incumbent in the position is hired for his or her expertise or ability to perform the particular [highly specialized] function.' " (Nealy v. City of Santa Monica (2015) 234 Cal.App.4th 359, 373 [184 Cal.Rptr.3d 9], internal citations omitted.)
- "Evidence of 'essential functions' may include the employer's judgment, written job descriptions, the amount of time spent on the job performing the function, the consequences of not requiring employees to perform the function, the terms of a collective bargaining agreement, the work experiences of past incumbents in the job, and the current work experience of incumbents in similar jobs." (Atkins v. City of Los Angeles (2017) 8 Cal.App.5th 696, 717–718 [214 Cal.Rptr.3d 113].)
- "The trial court's essential functions finding is also supported by the evidence presented by defendant corresponding to the seven categories of evidence listed in [Government Code] section 12926(f)(2). 'Usually no one listed factor will be dispositive . . . .' " (Lui, supra, 211 Cal.App.4th at p. 977.)
- "The question whether plaintiffs could perform the essential functions of a position to which they sought reassignment is relevant to a claim for failure to accommodate under section 12940, subdivision (m), and to a claim for failure to engage in the interactive process under section 12940, subdivision (n)." (Atkins, supra, 8 Cal.App.5th at p. 717.)

- "The identification of essential job functions is a 'highly fact-specific inquiry.' " (Lui, supra, 211 Cal.App.4th at p. 971.)
- "It is clear that plaintiff bore the burden of proving 'that he or she is a qualified individual under the FEHA (i.e., that he or she can perform the essential functions of the job with or without reasonable accommodation).' It is less clear whether that burden included the burden of proving what the essential functions of the position are, rather than just plaintiff's ability to perform the essential functions. Under the ADA, a number of federal decisions have held that '[a]lthough the plaintiff bears the ultimate burden of persuading the fact finder that he can perform the job's essential functions, . . . "an employer who disputes the plaintiff's claim that he can perform the essential functions must put forth evidence establishing those functions." [Citation.]' . . . Arguably, plaintiff's burden of proving he is a qualified individual includes the burden of proving which duties are essential functions of the positions he seeks. Ultimately, we need not and do not decide in the present case which party bore the burden of proof on the issue at trial . . . ." (Lui, supra, 211 Cal.App.4th at pp. 972–973, internal citations omitted.)
- "[R]equiring employers to eliminate an essential function of a job to accommodate a disabled employee 'would be at odds with the definition of the employee's prima facie case' under FEHA. The employee's burden includes 'showing he or she can perform the essential functions of the job with accommodation, not that an essential function can be eliminated altogether to suit his or her restrictions.' " (Atkins, supra, 8 Cal.App.5th at p. 720.)

Secondary Sources

8 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Constitutional Law, §§ 1045–1049

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 9-C, California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA), ¶¶ 9:2247, 9:2247.1, 9:2247.2, 9:2402–9:2402.1 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Discrimination Claims, § 2.79

2 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 41.97[1] (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, §§ 115.22, 115.54, 115.104 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation § 2:86 (Thomson Reuters)

2544. Disability Discrimination—Affirmative Defense—Health or Safety Risk

[*Name of defendant] claims that [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] conduct was not discriminatory because, even with reasonable accommodations, [name of plaintiff] was unable to perform at least one essential job duty without endangering [[his/her/nonbinary pronoun] health or safety/ [or] [the health or safety of others]. To succeed on this defense, [name of defendant] must prove all of the following:

1. That [describe job duty] was an essential job duty;
2. That there was no reasonable accommodation that would have allowed [name of plaintiff] to perform this job duty without endangering [[his/her/nonbinary pronoun] health or safety/ [or] [the health or safety of others]; and
3. That [name of plaintiff]'s performance of this job duty would present an immediate and substantial degree of risk to [[him/her/ nonbinary pronoun]/ [or] others].

[However, it is not a defense to assert that [*name of plaintiff] has a disability with a future risk, as long as the disability does not presently interfere with [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] ability to perform the job in a manner that will not endanger [him/her/nonbinary pronoun]/ [or] others].]

In determining whether [*name of defendant] has proved this defense, factors that you may consider include the following:

a. The duration of the risk;
b. The nature and severity of the potential harm;
c. The likelihood that the potential harm would have occurred;
d. How imminent the potential harm was; [and]
e. Relevant information regarding [name of plaintiff]'s past work history[;/and]

[f. [*Specify other relevant factors].]

Your consideration of these factors should be based on a reasonable medical judgment that relies on the most current medical knowledge or on the best available objective evidence.

New September 2003; Revised May 2019, November 2019

Directions for Use

This instruction is based on the Fair Employment and Housing Council regulation addressing the defense of health or safety risk. (See Cal. Code Regs., tit. 2, § 11067.) Give CACI No. 2543, Disability Discrimination—"Essential Job Duties" Explained, to instruct on when a job duty is essential.

If more than one essential job duty is alleged to involve a health or safety risk, pluralize the elements accordingly.

Give the optional paragraph following the elements if there is concern about a future risk. (See Cal. Code Regs., tit. 2, § 11067(d).)

The list of factors to be considered is not exclusive. (See Cal. Code Regs., tit. 2, § 11067(e).) Additional factors may be added according to the facts and circumstances of the case.

Sources and Authority

- Risk to Health or Safety. Government Code section 12940(a)(1).
- Risk to Health or Safety. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 2, § 11067(b)–(e).
- "FEHA's 'danger to self' defense has a narrow scope; an employer must offer more than mere conclusions or speculation in order to prevail on the defense . . . . As one court said, '[t]he defense requires that the employee face an "imminent and substantial degree of risk" in performing the essential functions of the job.' An employer may not terminate an employee for harm that is merely potential . . . . In addition, in cases in which the employer is able to establish the 'danger to self' defense, it must also show that there are 'no "available reasonable means of accommodation which could, without undue hardship to [the employer], have allowed [the plaintiff] to perform the essential job functions . . . without danger to himself." ' " (Wittkopf v. County of Los Angeles (2001) 90 Cal.App.4th 1205, 1218–1219 [109 Cal.Rptr.2d 543], internal citations omitted.)
- "An employer may refuse to hire persons whose physical handicap prevents them from performing their duties in a manner which does not endanger their health. Unlike the BFOQ defense, this exception must be tailored to the individual characteristics of each applicant . . . in relation to specific, legitimate job requirements . . . . [Defendant's] evidence, at best, shows a possibility [plaintiff] might endanger his health sometime in the future. In the light of the strong policy for providing equal employment opportunity, such conjecture will not justify a refusal to employ a handicapped person." (Sterling Transit Co. v. Fair Employment Practice Com. (1981) 121 Cal.App.3d 791, 798–799 [175 Cal.Rptr. 548], internal citations and footnote omitted.)
- "FEHA does not expressly address whether the act protects an employee whose disability causes him or her to make threats against coworkers. FEHA, however, does authorize an employer to terminate or refuse to hire an employee who poses an actual threat of harm to others due to a disability . . . ." (Wills v. Superior Court (2011) 195 Cal.App.4th 143, 169 [125 Cal.Rptr.3d 1] [idle threats against coworkers do not disqualify employee from job, but rather may provide legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for discharging employee].)

- "The employer has the burden of proving the defense of the threat to the health and safety of other workers by a preponderance of the evidence." (Raytheon Co. v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1989) 212 Cal.App.3d 1242, 1252 [261 Cal.Rptr. 197].)

Secondary Sources

8 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Constitutional Law, §§ 1045–1048

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 9-C, California Fair Employment And Housing Act (FEHA), ¶¶ 9:2297, 2297.1, 9:2402, 9:2402.1 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Discrimination Claims, § 2.111

2 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 41.97[1] (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, §§ 115.54, 115.104 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation § 2:86 (Thomson Reuters)

2545. Disability Discrimination—Affirmative Defense—Undue Hardship

---

[*Name of defendant] claims that accommodating [name of plaintiff]'s disability would create an undue hardship to the operation of [his/her/ *nonbinary pronounits] business. To succeed on this defense, [name of defendant] must prove that [an] accommodation[s] would create an undue hardship because it would be significantly difficult or expensive, in light of the following factors:

a. The nature and cost of the accommodation[s];

b. [*Name of defendant]'s ability to pay for the accommodation[s];

c. The type of operations conducted at the facility;

d. The impact on the operations of the facility;

e. The number of [*name of defendant]'s employees and the relationship of the employees' duties to one another;

f. The number, type, and location of [*name of defendant]'s facilities; and

g. The administrative and financial relationship of the facilities to one another.

New September 2003; Revised November 2019, May 2020

Directions for Use

The issue of whether undue hardship is a true affirmative defense or whether the defendant only has the burden of coming forward with the evidence of hardship as a way of negating the element of plaintiff's case concerning the reasonableness of an accommodation appears to be unclear. (See Atkins v. City of Los Angeles (2017) 8 Cal.App.5th 696, 733 [214 Cal.Rptr.3d 113].)

For an instruction in the religious creed context, see CACI No. 2561, Religious Creed Discrimination—Reasonable Accommodation—Affirmative Defense—Undue Hardship.

Sources and Authority

- Employer Duty to Provide Reasonable Accommodation. Government Code section 12940(m).
- "Undue Hardship" Defined. Government Code section 12926(u).
- " 'Undue hardship' means 'an action requiring significant difficulty or expense, when considered in light of the following factors: [¶] (1) The nature and cost of the accommodation needed. [¶] (2) The overall financial resources of the facilities involved in the provision of the reasonable accommodations, the number of persons employed at the facility, and the effect on expenses and resources or the impact otherwise of these accommodations upon the operation of the facility. [¶] (3) The overall financial resources of the covered entity, the overall size of the business of a covered entity with respect to the number of employees, and the number, type, and location of its facilities. [¶] (4) The type of operations, including the composition, structure, and functions of the workforce of the entity. [¶] (5) The geographic separateness or administrative or fiscal relationship of the facility or facilities.' (§ 12926, subd. (u).) ' "Whether a particular accommodation will impose an undue hardship for a particular employer is determined on a case by case basis" ' and 'is a multi-faceted, fact-intensive inquiry.' " (Atkins, supra, 8 Cal.App.5th at p. 733.)

- "[U]nder California law and the instructions provided to the jury, an employer must do more than simply assert that it had economic reasons to reject a plaintiff's proposed reassignment to demonstrate undue hardship. An employer must show why and how asserted economic reasons would affect its ability to provide a particular accommodation." (Atkins, supra, 8 Cal.App.5th at p. 734, original italics, internal citation omitted.)

Secondary Sources

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 9-C, California Fair Employment And Housing Act (FEHA), ¶¶ 9:2250, 9:2345, 9:2366, 9:2367 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Discrimination Claims, § 2.80

2 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 41.51[4][b] (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, §§ 115.35, 115.54, 115.100 (Matthew Bender)

2546. Disability Discrimination—Reasonable Accommodation—Failure to Engage in Interactive Process (Gov. Code, § 12940(n))

[*Name of plaintiff] contends that [name of defendant] failed to engage in a good-faith interactive process with [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] to determine whether it would be possible to implement effective reasonable accommodations so that [name of plaintiff] [insert job requirements requiring accommodation]. In order to establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove the following:

1. That [name of defendant] was [an employer/[other covered entity]];
2. That [name of plaintiff] [was an employee of [name of defendant]/ applied to [name of defendant] for a job/[describe other covered relationship to defendant]];
3. That [name of plaintiff] had [a] [select term to describe basis of limitations, e.g., physical condition] that was known to [name of defendant];
4. That [name of plaintiff] requested that [name of defendant] make reasonable accommodation for [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] [e.g., physical condition] so that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] would be able to perform the essential job requirements;
5. That [name of plaintiff] was willing to participate in an interactive process to determine whether reasonable accommodation could be made so that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] would be able to perform the essential job requirements;
6. That [name of defendant] failed to participate in a timely good-faith interactive process with [name of plaintiff] to determine whether reasonable accommodation could be made;
7. [That [name of defendant] could have made a reasonable accommodation when the interactive process should have taken place;]
8. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
9. That [name of defendant]'s failure to engage in a good-faith interactive process was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New December 2007; Revised April 2009, December 2009, May 2022

Directions for Use

In elements 3 and 4, select a term to describe the source of the plaintiff's limitations. It may be a statutory term such as "physical disability," "mental disability," or "medical condition." (See Gov. Code, § 12940(a).) Or it may be a general term such as "condition," "disease," or "disorder." Or it may be a specific health condition such as "diabetes."

Modify elements 3 and 4, as necessary, if the employer perceives the employee to have a disability. (See Gelfo v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2006) 140 Cal.App.4th 34, 61, fn. 21 [43 Cal.Rptr.3d 874].)

In element 4, specify the position at issue and the reason why some reasonable accommodation was needed. In element 5, you may add the specific accommodation requested, though the focus of this cause of action is on the failure to discuss, not the failure to provide.

For an instruction on a cause of action for failure to make reasonable accommodation, see CACI No. 2541, Disability Discrimination—Reasonable Accommodation—Essential Factual Elements. For an instruction defining "reasonable accommodation," see CACI No. 2542, Disability Discrimination—"Reasonable Accommodation" Explained.

Bracketed element 7 reflects that there is a split of authority as to whether the employee must also prove that a reasonable accommodation was available. (Compare Shirvanyan v. Los Angeles Community College Dist. (2020) 59 Cal.App.5th 82, 87 [273 Cal.Rptr.3d 312] ["the availability of a reasonable accommodation is an essential element of an interactive process claim"] and Nadaf-Rahrov v. The Neiman Marcus Group, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal.App.4th 952, 980–985 [83 Cal.Rptr.3d 190] [employee who brings a section 12940(n) claim bears the burden of proving a reasonable accommodation was available before the employer can be held liable under the statute] with Wysinger v. Automobile Club of Southern California (2007) 157 Cal.App.4th 413, 424–425 [69 Cal.Rptr.3d 1] [jury's finding that no reasonable accommodation was possible is not inconsistent with its finding of liability for refusing to engage in interactive process] and Claudio v. Regents of the University of California (2005) 134 Cal.App.4th 224, 243 [35 Cal.Rptr.3d 837] [if the employer's failure to participate in good faith causes a breakdown in the interactive process, liability follows]; see Scotch v. Art Institute of California (2009) 173 Cal.App.4th 986, 1018–1019 [93 Cal.Rptr.3d 338] [attempting to reconcile conflict].) See also verdict form CACI No. VF-2513, Disability Discrimination—Reasonable Accommodation—Failure to Engage in Interactive Process.

Sources and Authority

- Good-Faith Interactive Process. Government Code section 12940(n).
- Federal Interpretive Guidance Incorporated. Government Code section 12926.1(e).
- Interactive Process. The Interpretive Guidance on title I of the Americans With Disabilities Act, title 29 Code of Federal Regulations Part 1630 Appendix.

- An employee may file a civil action based on the employer's failure to engage in the interactive process. (Claudio, supra, 134 Cal.App.4th at p. 243.)
- "Two principles underlie a cause of action for failure to provide a reasonable accommodation. First, the employee must request an accommodation. Second, the parties must engage in an interactive process regarding the requested accommodation and, if the process fails, responsibility for the failure rests with the party who failed to participate in good faith." (Gelfo, supra, 140 Cal.App.4th at p. 54, internal citations omitted.)
- "While a claim of failure to accommodate is independent of a cause of action for failure to engage in an interactive dialogue, each necessarily implicates the other." (Moore v. Regents of University of California (2016) 248 Cal.App.4th 216, 242 [206 Cal.Rptr.3d 841].)
- "FEHA requires an informal process with the employee to attempt to identify reasonable accommodations, not necessarily ritualized discussions." (Nealy v. City of Santa Monica (2015) 234 Cal.App.4th 359, 379 [184 Cal.Rptr.3d 9].)
- "The point of the interactive process is to find reasonable accommodation for a disabled employee, or an employee regarded as disabled by the employer, in order to avoid the employee's termination. Therefore, a pretextual termination of a perceived-as-disabled employee's employment in lieu of providing reasonable accommodation or engaging in the interactive process does not provide an employer a reprieve from claims for failure to accommodate and failure to engage in the interactive process." (Moore, supra, 248 Cal.App.4th at pp. 243–244, original italics.)
- "FEHA's reference to a 'known' disability is read to mean a disability of which the employer has become aware, whether because it is obvious, the employee has brought it to the employer's attention, it is based on the employer's own perception—mistaken or not—of the existence of a disabling condition or, perhaps as here, the employer has come upon information indicating the presence of a disability." (Gelfo, supra, 140 Cal.App.4th at p. 61, fn. 21.)
- "Typically, the employee must initiate the process 'unless the disability and resulting limitations are obvious.' " (Featherstone v. Southern California Permanente Medical Group (2017) 10 Cal.App.5th 1150, 1169 [217 Cal.Rptr.3d 258].)
- "Contrary to [employer's] contention (which the trial court accepted), it is not necessarily sufficient for an employer merely to grant the employee each accommodation she requests. ' "[T]he employer's obligation to engage in the interactive process extends beyond the first attempt at accommodation and continues when the employee asks for a different accommodation or where the employer is aware that the initial accommodation is failing and further accommodation is needed." ' Put differently, while an employer need not read an employee's mind or provide accommodations of which it is unaware, when an employer is aware of a further reasonable accommodation that is needed, the employer has a duty to consider that accommodation even if the employee does not explicitly request it." (Lin v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (2023) 88 Cal.App.5th 712, 728 [304 Cal.Rptr.3d 820], internal citation omitted, original italics.)

- "Once initiated, the employer has a continuous obligation to engage in the interactive process in good faith. 'Both employer and employee have the obligation "to keep communications open" and neither has "a right to obstruct the process." [Citation.] "Each party must participate in good faith, undertake reasonable efforts to communicate its concerns, and make available to the other information which is available, or more accessible, to one party. Liability hinges on the objective circumstances surrounding the parties' breakdown in communication, and responsibility for the breakdown lies with the party who fails to participate in good faith." [Citation.]' " (Swanson v. Morongo Unified School Dist. (2014) 232 Cal.App.4th 954, 971–972 [181 Cal.Rptr.3d 553].)
- "[Employer] asserts that, if it had a duty to engage in the interactive process, the duty was discharged. 'If anything,' it argues, 'it was [employee] who failed to engage in a good faith interactive process.' [Employee] counters [employer] made up its mind before July 2002 that it would not accommodate [employee]'s limitations, and nothing could cause it reconsider that decision. Because the evidence is conflicting and the issue of the parties' efforts and good faith is factual, the claim is properly left for the jury's consideration." (Gelfo, supra, 140 Cal.App.4th at p. 62, fn. 23.)
- "None of the legal authorities that [defendant] cites persuades us that the Legislature intended that after a reasonable accommodation is granted, the interactive process continues to apply in a failure to accommodate context. . . . To graft an interactive process intended to apply to the determination of a reasonable accommodation onto a situation in which an employer failed to provide a reasonable, agreed-upon accommodation is contrary to the apparent intent of the FEHA and would not support the public policies behind that provision." (A.M. v. Albertsons, LLC (2009) 178 Cal.App.4th 455, 464 [100 Cal.Rptr.3d 449].)
- "[T]he verdicts on the reasonable accommodations issue and the interactive process claim are not inconsistent. They involve separate causes of action and proof of different facts. Under FEHA, an employer must engage in a good faith interactive process with the disabled employee to explore the alternatives to accommodate the disability. 'An employee may file a civil action based on the employer's failure to engage in the interactive process.' Failure to engage in this process is a separate FEHA violation independent from an employer's failure to provide a reasonable disability accommodation, which is also a FEHA violation. An employer may claim there were no available reasonable accommodations. But if it did not engage in a good faith interactive process, 'it cannot be known whether an alternative job would have been found.' The interactive process determines which accommodations are required. Indeed, the interactive process could reveal solutions that neither party envisioned." (Wysinger, supra, 157 Cal.App.4th at pp. 424–425, internal citations omitted.)

- "We disagree . . . with Wysinger's construction of section 12940(n). We conclude that the availability of a reasonable accommodation (i.e., a modification or adjustment to the workplace that enables an employee to perform the essential functions of the position held or desired) is necessary to a section 12940(n) claim. [¶] Applying the burden of proof analysis in Green, supra, 42 Cal.4th 254, we conclude the burden of proving the availability of a reasonable accommodation rests on the employee." (Nadaf-Rahrov, supra, 166 Cal.App.4th at pp. 984–985.)
- "We synthesize Wysinger, Nadaf-Rahrov, and Claudio with our analysis of the law as follows: To prevail on a claim under section 12940, subdivision (n) for failure to engage in the interactive process, an employee must identify a reasonable accommodation that would have been available at the time the interactive process should have occurred. An employee cannot necessarily be expected to identify and request all possible accommodations during the interactive process itself because ' " '[e]mployees do not have at their disposal the extensive information concerning possible alternative positions or possible accommodations which employers have. . . .' " ' However, as the Nadaf-Rahrov court explained, once the parties have engaged in the litigation process, to prevail, the employee must be able to identify an available accommodation the interactive process should have produced: 'Section 12940, subdivision, which requires proof of failure to engage in the interactive process, is the appropriate cause of action where the employee is unable to identify a specific, available reasonable accommodation while in the workplace and the employer fails to engage in a good faith interactive process to help identify one, but the employee is able to identify a specific, available reasonable accommodation through the litigation process.' " (Scotch, supra, 173 Cal.App.4th at pp. 1018–1019.)
- "Well-reasoned precedent supports [defendant's] argument that, in order to succeed on a cause of action for failure to engage in an interactive process, 'an employee must identify a reasonable accommodation that would have been available at the time the interactive process should have occurred.' " (Shirvanyan, supra, 59 Cal.App.5th at p. 96.)

Secondary Sources

8 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Constitutional Law, § 1048

Chin, et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 9-C, Disability Discrimination—California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA), ¶¶ 9:2280–9:2285, 9:2345–9:2347 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Discrimination Claims, § 2.79

2 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 41.51[3][b] (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.35[1][a] (Matthew Bender)

1 California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation, § 2:50 (Thomson Reuters)

2547. Disability-Based Associational Discrimination—Essential Factual Elements

---

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] wrongfully discriminated against [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] based on [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] association with a person with a disability. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] was [an employer/[other covered entity]];
2. That [name of plaintiff] [was an employee of [name of defendant]/ applied to [name of defendant] for a job/[describe other covered relationship to defendant]];
3. That [name of plaintiff] was [specify basis of association or relationship, e.g., the brother of [name of associate]], who had [a] [e.g., physical condition];
4. [That [name of associate]'s [e.g., physical condition] was costly to [name of defendant] because [specify reason, e.g., [name of associate] was covered under [plaintiff]'s employer-provided health care plan];]

   [or]

   [That [*name of defendant] feared [name of plaintiff]'s association with [name of associate] because [specify, e.g., [name of associate] has a disability with a genetic component and [name of plaintiff] may develop the disability as well];]

   [or]

   [That [*name of plaintiff] was somewhat inattentive at work because [name of associate]'s [e.g., physical condition] requires [name of plaintiff]'s attention, but not so inattentive that to perform to [name of defendant]'s satisfaction [name of plaintiff] would need an accommodation;]

   [or]

   [[*Specify other basis for associational discrimination];]
5. That [name of plaintiff] was able to perform the essential job duties;
6. [That [name of defendant] [discharged/refused to hire/[other adverse employment action]] [name of plaintiff];]

   [*or]

   [That [*name of defendant] subjected [name of plaintiff] to an adverse employment action;]

[*or]

[That [*name of plaintiff] was constructively discharged;]

7. That [name of plaintiff]'s association with [name of associate] was a substantial motivating reason for [name of defendant]'s [decision to [discharge/refuse to hire/[other adverse employment action]] [name of plaintiff]/conduct];
8. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
9. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

---

*New December 2014; Revised May 2017, May 2020, November 2023, May 2024

Directions for Use

Give this instruction if plaintiff claims that the plaintiff was subjected to an adverse employment action because of the plaintiff's association with a person with a disability or perceived to have a disability. Discrimination based on an employee's association with a person who is (or is perceived to be) disabled is an unlawful employment practice under the FEHA. (See Gov. Code, § 12926(o).)

For element 1, the court may need to instruct the jury on the statutory definition of "employer" under the FEHA, which can include business entities acting as agents of employers. (Gov. Code, § 12926(d); Raines v. U.S. Healthworks Medical Group (2023) 15 Cal.5th 268, 291 [312 Cal.Rptr.3d 301, 534 P.3d 40].) Other covered entities under the FEHA include labor organizations, employment agencies, and apprenticeship training programs. (See Gov. Code, § 12940(b)–(h), (j), (k).)

Select a term to use throughout to describe the source of the person's disability. It may be a statutory term such as "physical disability," "mental disability," or "medical condition." (See Gov. Code, § 12940(a).) Or it may be a general term such as "condition," "disease," or "disorder." Or it may be a specific health condition such as "diabetes."

Three versions of disability-based associational discrimination have been recognized, called "expense," "disability by association," and "distraction." (See Rope v. Auto-Chlor System of Washington, Inc. (2013) 220 Cal.App.4th 635, 655–660 [163 Cal.Rptr.3d 392] [claim for "disability-based associational discrimination" adequately pled].) Element 4 sets forth options for the three versions, which are illustrative rather than exhaustive; therefore, an "other" option is provided. (See Castro-Ramirez v. Dependable Highway Express, Inc. (2016) 2 Cal.App.5th 1028, 1042 [207 Cal.Rptr.3d 120].)

An element of a disability discrimination case is that the plaintiff must be otherwise qualified to do the job, with or without reasonable accommodation. (Green v. State of California (2007) 42 Cal.4th 254, 262 [64 Cal.Rptr.3d 390, 165 P.3d 118] (see element 5).) However, the FEHA does not expressly require reasonable accommodation for association with a person with a disability. (Gov. Code, § 12940(m) [employer must reasonably accommodate applicant or employee].) Nevertheless, one court has suggested that such a requirement may exist, without expressly deciding the issue. (See Castro-Ramirez, supra, 2 Cal.App.5th at pp. 1038–1039.) A reference to reasonable accommodation may be added to element 5 if the court decides to impose this requirement.

Read the first option for element 6 if there is no dispute as to whether the employer's acts constituted an adverse employment action. Read the second option and also give CACI No. 2509, "Adverse Employment Action" Explained, if the existence of an adverse employment action is a question of fact for the jury. If constructive discharge is alleged, give the third option for element 6 and also give CACI No. 2510, "Constructive Discharge" Explained. Select "conduct" in element 7 if either the second or third option is included for element 4.

Element 7 requires that the disability be a substantial motivating reason for the adverse action. (See Harris v. City of Santa Monica (2013) 56 Cal.4th 203, 232 [152 Cal.Rptr.3d 392, 294 P.3d 49]; Castro-Ramirez, supra, 2 Cal.App.5th at p. 1037; see also CACI No. 2507, "Substantial Motivating Reason" Explained.)

If the question of whether the associate has a disability is disputed, consider giving special instructions defining "medical condition," "mental disability," and "physical disability." (See Gov. Code, § 12926(i), (j), (m) [defining "medical condition," "mental disability," and "physical disability"]; see also Cal. Code Regs., tit. 2, § 11065.)

Sources and Authority

- Disability Discrimination Prohibited Under Fair Employment and Housing Act. Government Code section 12940(a).
- "Medical Condition" Defined. Government Code section 12926(i).
- "Mental Disability" Defined. Government Code section 12926(j).
- "Physical Disability" Defined. Government Code section 12926(m).
- Association With Person Who Has or Is Perceived to Have a Disability Protected. Government Code section 12926(o).
- " 'Three types of situation are, we believe, within the intended scope of the rarely litigated . . . association section. We'll call them "expense," "disability by association," and "distraction." They can be illustrated as follows: an employee is fired (or suffers some other adverse personnel action) because (1) ("expense") his spouse has a disability that is costly to the employer because the spouse is covered by the company's health plan; (2a) ("disability by association") the employee's homosexual companion is infected with HIV and the employer fears that the employee may also have become infected, through sexual contact with the companion; (2b) (another example of disability by association) one of the employee's blood relatives has a disabling ailment that has a genetic component and the employee is likely to develop the disability as well (maybe the relative is an identical twin); (3) ("distraction") the employee is somewhat inattentive at work because his spouse or child has a disability that requires his attention, yet not so inattentive that to perform to his employer's satisfaction he would need an accommodation, perhaps by being allowed to work shorter hours.' " (Rope, supra, 220 Cal.App.4th at p. 657.)

- "We agree with Rope [supra] that Larimer [Larimer v. International Business Machines Corp. (7th Cir. 2004) 370 F.3d 698] provides an illustrative, rather than an exhaustive, list of the kinds of circumstances in which we might find associational disability discrimination. The common thread among the Larimer categories is simply that they are instances in which the 'employer has a motive to discriminate against a nondisabled employee who is merely associated with a disabled person.' As we discuss above, this is an element of a plaintiff's prima facie case—that the plaintiff's association with a disabled person was a substantial motivating factor for the employer's adverse employment action. Rope held the alleged facts in that case could give rise to an inference of such discriminatory motive. Our facts do not fit neatly within one of the Larimer categories either, but a jury could reasonably infer the requisite discriminatory motive." (Castro-Ramirez, supra, 2 Cal.App.5th at p. 1042, internal citation omitted.)
- " '[A]n employer who discriminates against an employee because of the latter's association with a disabled person is liable even if the motivation is purely monetary. But if the disability plays no role in the employer's decision . . . then there is no disability discrimination.' " (Rope, supra, 220 Cal.App.4th at p. 658, original italics.)
- "A prima facie case of disability discrimination under FEHA requires a showing that (1) the plaintiff suffered from a disability, (2) the plaintiff was otherwise qualified to do his or her job, with or without reasonable accommodation, and (3) the plaintiff was subjected to adverse employment action because of the disability. Adapting this [disability discrimination] framework to the associational discrimination context, the 'disability' from which the plaintiff suffers is his or her association with a disabled person. . . . [T]he disability must be a substantial factor motivating the employer's adverse employment action." (Castro-Ramirez, supra, 2 Cal.App.5th at p. 1037.)
- "Requiring the plaintiff to show that discrimination was a substantial motivating factor, rather than simply a motivating factor, more effectively ensures that liability will not be imposed based on evidence of mere thoughts or passing statements unrelated to the disputed employment decision. At the same time, . . . proof that discrimination was a substantial factor in an employment decision triggers the deterrent purpose of the FEHA and thus exposes the employer to liability, even if other factors would have led the employer to make the same decision at the time." (Harris, supra, 56 Cal.4th at p. 232, original italics.)
- "We do not suggest that discrimination must be alone sufficient to bring about an employment decision in order to constitute a substantial motivating factor. But it is important to recognize that discrimination can be serious, consequential, and even by itself determinative of an employment decision without also being a 'but for' cause." (Harris, supra, 56 Cal.4th at p. 229.)

- "[W]hen section 12940, subdivision (m) requires employers to reasonably accommodate 'the known physical . . . disability of an applicant or employee,' read in conjunction with other relevant provisions, subdivision (m) may reasonably be interpreted to require accommodation based on the employee's association with a physically disabled person." (Castro-Ramirez, supra, 2 Cal.App.5th at pp. 1038–1039.)

Secondary Sources

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 9-C, California Fair Employment And Housing Act (FEHA), ¶¶ 9:2213–9:2215 (The Rutter Group)

2 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 41.32[2], [4] (Matthew Bender)

2548. Disability Discrimination—Refusal to Make Reasonable Accommodation in Housing (Gov. Code, § 12927(c)(1))

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] refused to reasonably accommodate [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] [select term to describe basis of limitations, e.g., physical disability] as necessary to afford [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] an equal opportunity to use and enjoy a dwelling. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] was the [specify defendant's source of authority to provide housing, e.g., owner] of [a/an] [specify nature of housing at issue, e.g., apartment building];
2. That [name of plaintiff] [sought to rent/was living in/[specify other efforts to obtain housing]] the [e.g., apartment];
3. That [name of plaintiff] had [a history of having] [a] [e.g., physical disability] [that limited [insert major life activity]];
4. That [name of defendant] knew of, or should have known of, [name of plaintiff]'s disability;
5. That in order to afford [name of plaintiff] an equal opportunity to use and enjoy the [e.g., apartment], it was necessary to [specify accommodation required];
6. That it was reasonable to [specify accommodation];
7. That [name of defendant] refused to make this accommodation.

New May 2017; Revised May 2020

Directions for Use

This instruction is for use in a case alleging discrimination in housing based on a failure to reasonably accommodate a disability. Under the Fair Employment and Housing Act, "discrimination" includes the "refusal to make reasonable accommodations in rules, policies, practices, or services when these accommodations may be necessary to afford a disabled person equal opportunity to use and enjoy a dwelling." (Gov. Code, § 12927(c)(1).)

In the introductory paragraph, select a term to describe the source of the plaintiff's limitations. It may be a statutory term such as "physical disability," "mental disability," or "medical condition." (See Gov. Code, § 12940(a).) Or it may be a general term such as "condition," "disease," or "disorder." Or it may be a specific health condition such as "diabetes." Use the term in element 3.

In element 2, if the plaintiff encountered a barrier before actually submitting an application, such as discovering a policy that would make it impossible to live in the unit, specify what the plaintiff did to obtain the housing.

In element 3, select the bracketed language on "history" of disability if the claim of discrimination is based on a history of disability rather than a current actual disability.

Modify element 3 if the plaintiff was not actually disabled or had a history of disability, but alleges denial of accommodation because the plaintiff was perceived to be disabled or associated with someone who has, or is perceived to have, a disability. (See Gov. Code, § 12926(o); see also Gov. Code, § 12926(j)(4), (m)(4) [mental and physical disability include being regarded or treated as disabled by the employer].)

In element 5, explain the accommodation in rules, policies, practices that is alleged to be needed.

Sources and Authority

- "Discrimination" Defined Regarding Housing Disability Accommodations. Government Code section 12927(c)(1).
- "Disability" Defined for Housing Discrimination. Government Code section 12955.3.
- "Housing" Defined. Government Code section 12927(d).
- " 'FEHA in the housing area is thus intended to conform to the general requirements of federal law in the area and may provide greater protection against discrimination.' In other words, the FHA provides a minimum level of protection that FEHA may exceed. Courts often look to cases construing the FHA, the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, and the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 when interpreting FEHA." (Auburn Woods I Homeowners Assn. v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (2004) 121 Cal.App.4th 1578, 1591 [18 Cal.Rptr.3d 669], internal citations omitted.)
- "[T]he basic principles applicable in employment cases should also apply in the housing context." (Brown v. Smith (1997) 55 Cal.App.4th 767, 782 [64 Cal.Rptr.2d 301].)
- "In order to establish discrimination based on a refusal to provide reasonable accommodations, a party must establish that he or she (1) suffers from a disability as defined in FEHA, (2) the discriminating party knew of, or should have known of, the disability, (3) accommodation is necessary to afford an equal opportunity to use and enjoy the dwelling, and (4) the discriminating party refused to make this accommodation." (Auburn Woods I Homeowners Assn., supra, 121 Cal.App.4th at p.1592.)
- "FEHA prohibits, as unlawful discrimination, a 'refusal to make reasonable accommodations in rules, policies, practices, or services when these accommodations may be necessary to afford a disabled person equal opportunity to use and enjoy a dwelling.' 'In order to establish discrimination based on a refusal to provide reasonable accommodations, a party must establish that he or she (1) suffers from a disability as defined in FEHA, (2) the discriminating party knew of, or should have known of, the disability, (3) accommodation is necessary to afford an equal opportunity to use and enjoy the dwelling, and (4) the discriminating party refused to make this accommodation.' " (Roman v. BRE Properties, Inc. (2015) 237 Cal.App.4th 1040, 1051 [188 Cal.Rptr.3d 537], internal citation omitted.)

- "We note that, currently, section 12955.3 explicitly states that 'disability' includes 'any physical or mental disability as defined in Section 12926.' That statute in turn defines 'mental disability' to include "any mental or psychological disorder or condition . . . that limits a major life activity', that is, 'makes the achievement of the major life activity difficult.' 'Major life activities' is to be broadly construed, and includes 'physical, mental, and social activities and working.' " (Auburn Woods I Homeowners Assn., supra, 121 Cal.App.4th at p. 1592, internal citations omitted.)
- " 'If a landlord is skeptical of a tenant's alleged disability or the landlord's ability to provide an accommodation, it is incumbent upon the landlord to request documentation or open a dialogue.' This obligation to 'open a dialogue' with a party requesting a reasonable accommodation is part of an interactive process in which each party seeks and shares information." (Auburn Woods I Homeowners Assn., supra, 121 Cal.App.4th at p. 1598, internal citation omitted.)
- "This evidence established the requisite causal link between the [defendant]'s no-pets policy and the interference with the [plaintiffs]' use and enjoyment of their condominium." (Auburn Woods I Homeowners Assn., supra, 121 Cal.App.4th at p. 1593.)
- "When the reasons for a delay in offering a reasonable accommodation are subject to dispute, the matter is left for the trier of fact to resolve. The administrative law judge properly characterized this lengthy delay as a refusal to provide reasonable accommodation." (Auburn Woods I Homeowners Assn., supra, 121 Cal.App.4th at p. 1599, internal citation omitted.)
- "We reiterate that the FEHC did not rule that companion pets are always a reasonable accommodation for individuals with mental disabilities. Each inquiry is fact specific and requires a case-by-case determination." (Auburn Woods I Homeowners Assn., supra, 121 Cal.App.4th at p. 1593.)

Secondary Sources

Joint Statement of the Department of Housing and Urban Development and the Department of Justice, Reasonable Accommodations Under the Fair Housing Act (May 17, 2004), www.justice.gov/sites/default/files/crt/legacy/2010/12/14/joint_statement_ra.pdf

8 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Constitutional Law, §§ 1073–1076

7 California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 214, Government Regulation and Enforcement, § 214.41 (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 117, Civil Rights: Housing Discrimination, § 117.14 (Matthew Bender)

2549. Disability Discrimination—Refusal to Permit Reasonable Modification to Housing Unit (Gov. Code, § 12927(c)(1))

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] refused to permit reasonable modifications of [name of plaintiff]'s [specify type of housing, e.g., apartment] necessary to afford [name of plaintiff] full enjoyment of the premises. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] was the [specify defendant's source of authority to provide housing, e.g., owner] of [a/an] [e.g., apartment building];
2. That [name of plaintiff] [sought to rent/was living in/[specify other efforts to obtain housing]] the [e.g., apartment];
3. That [name of plaintiff] had [a history of having] [a] [select term to describe basis of limitations, e.g., physical disability] [that limited [insert major life activity]];
4. That [name of defendant] knew of, or should have known of, [name of plaintiff]'s disability;
5. That in order to afford [name of plaintiff] an equal opportunity to use and enjoy the [e.g., apartment], it was necessary to [specify modification(s) required];
6. That it was reasonable to expect [name of defendant] to [specify modification(s) required];
7. That [name of plaintiff] agreed to pay for [this/these] modification[s]; [and]
8. [That [name of plaintiff] agreed that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] would restore the interior of the unit to the condition that existed before the modifications, other than for reasonable wear and tear; and]
9. That [name of defendant] refused to permit [this/these] modification[s].

*New May 2017; Revised May 2020, November 2023

Directions for Use

This instruction is for use in a case alleging discrimination in housing based on a failure to permit reasonable modifications to a living unit to accommodate a disability. Under the Fair Employment and Housing Act, "discrimination" includes the refusal to permit, at the expense of the person with a disability, reasonable modifications of existing premises occupied or to be occupied by the person with a disability, if the modifications may be necessary to afford the person full enjoyment of the premises. (Gov. Code, § 12927(c)(1).)

In element 2, if the plaintiff encountered a barrier before actually submitting an application, such as discovering a policy that would make it impossible to live in the unit, specify what the plaintiff did to obtain the housing.

In element 3, select a term to describe the source of the plaintiff's limitations. It may be a statutory term such as "physical disability," "mental disability," or "medical condition." (See Gov. Code, § 12940(a).) Or it may be a general term such as "condition," "disease," or "disorder." Or it may be a specific health condition such as "diabetes."

In element 3, select the bracketed language on "history" of disability if the claim of discrimination is based on a history of disability rather than a current actual disability.

Modify element 3 if the plaintiff did not have a disability or a history of a disability, but alleges denial of accommodation because the plaintiff was perceived to have a disability or associated with someone who has, or is perceived to have, a disability. (See Gov. Code, § 12926(o); see also Gov. Code, § 12926(j)(4), (m)(4) [mental and physical disability include being regarded or treated as disabled by the employer].)

In element 5, specify the modifications that are alleged to be needed.

Element 7 may not apply if section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (applicable to federal subsidized housing) or Title II of the Americans With Disabilities Act requires the landlord to incur the cost of reasonable modifications.

In the case of a rental, the landlord may, if it is reasonable to do so, condition permission for a modification on the renter's agreeing to restore the interior of the premises to the condition that existed before the modification (other than for reasonable wear and tear). (Gov. Code, § 12927(c)(1).) Include element 8 if the premises to be physically altered is a rental unit, and the plaintiff agreed to restoration. If the parties dispute whether restoration is reasonable, presumably the defendant would have to prove reasonableness. (See Evid. Code, § 500 [party has the burden of proof as to each fact the existence or nonexistence of which is essential to the claim for relief or defense that s/he is asserting].)

Sources and Authority

- Discrimination Defined Regarding Housing Disability Accommodations. Government Code section 12927(c)(1).
- "Disability" Defined for Housing Discrimination. Government Code section 12955.3.
- "Housing" Defined. Government Code section 12927(d).
- " 'FEHA in the housing area is thus intended to conform to the general requirements of federal law in the area and may provide greater protection against discrimination.' In other words, the FHA provides a minimum level of protection that FEHA may exceed. Courts often look to cases construing the FHA, the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, and the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 when interpreting FEHA." (Auburn Woods I Homeowners Assn. v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (2004) 121 Cal.App.4th 1578, 1591 [18 Cal.Rptr.3d 669], internal citations omitted.)

- "[T]he basic principles applicable in employment cases should also apply in the housing context." (Brown v. Smith (1997) 55 Cal.App.4th 767, 782 [64 Cal.Rptr.2d 301].)
- "We note that, currently, section 12955.3 explicitly states that 'disability' includes 'any physical or mental disability as defined in Section 12926.' That statute in turn defines 'mental disability' to include "any mental or psychological disorder or condition . . . that limits a major life activity', that is, 'makes the achievement of the major life activity difficult.' 'Major life activities' is to be broadly construed, and includes 'physical, mental, and social activities and working.' " (Auburn Woods I Homeowners Assn., supra, 121 Cal.App.4th at p. 1592, internal citations omitted.)
- " 'If a landlord is skeptical of a tenant's alleged disability or the landlord's ability to provide an accommodation, it is incumbent upon the landlord to request documentation or open a dialogue.' This obligation to 'open a dialogue' with a party requesting a reasonable accommodation is part of an interactive process in which each party seeks and shares information." (Auburn Woods I Homeowners Assn., supra, 121 Cal.App.4th at p. 1598, internal citation omitted.)

Secondary Sources

Joint Statement of the Department of Housing and Urban Development and the Department of Justice, Reasonable Modifications Under the Fair Housing Act (March 5, 2008), www.hud.gov/sites/documents/reasonable_modifications_mar08.pdf

8 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Constitutional Law, § 1063

7 California Real Estate Law and Practice, Ch. 214, Government Regulation and Enforcement, §§ 214.41, 214.43 (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 117, Civil Rights: Housing Discrimination, § 117.14 (Matthew Bender)

2550–2559. Reserved for Future Use

2560. Religious Creed Discrimination—Failure to Accommodate—Essential Factual Elements (Gov. Code, § 12940(l))

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] wrongfully discriminated against [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] by failing to reasonably accommodate [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] religious [belief/observance]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] was [an employer/[other covered entity]];
2. That [name of plaintiff] [was an employee of [name of defendant]/applied to [name of defendant] for a job/[other covered relationship to defendant]];
3. That [name of plaintiff] has a sincerely held religious belief that [describe religious belief, observance, or practice];
4. That [name of plaintiff]'s religious [belief/observance] conflicted with a job requirement;
5. That [name of defendant] knew of the conflict between [name of plaintiff]'s religious [belief/observance] and the job requirement;
6. [That [name of defendant] did not explore available reasonable alternatives of accommodating [name of plaintiff], including excusing [name of plaintiff] from duties that conflict with [name of plaintiff]'s religious [belief/observance] or permitting those duties to be performed at another time or by another person, or otherwise reasonably accommodate [name of plaintiff]'s religious [belief/observance];]

   [or]

   [That [name of defendant] [terminated/refused to hire] [name of plaintiff] in order to avoid having to accommodate [name of plaintiff]'s religious [belief/observance];]
7. That [name of plaintiff]'s failure to comply with the conflicting job requirement was a substantial motivating reason for

   [[*name of defendant]'s decision to [discharge/refuse to hire/[specify other adverse employment action]] [name of plaintiff];]

   [or]

   [[*name of defendant]'s subjecting [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] to an adverse employment action;]

   [or]

[[his/her/nonbinary pronoun] constructive discharge;]

8. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
9. That [name of defendant]'s failure to reasonably accommodate [name of plaintiff]'s religious [belief/observance] was a substantial factor in causing [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] harm.

A reasonable accommodation is one that eliminates the conflict between the religious practice and the job requirement.

If more than one accommodation is reasonable, an employer satisfies its obligation to make a reasonable accommodation if it selects one of those accommodations in good faith.

New September 2003; Revised June 2012, December 2012, June 2013, November 2019, May 2020

Directions for Use

If element 1 is given, the court may need to instruct the jury on the statutory definition of "employer" under the FEHA. Other covered entities under the FEHA include labor organizations, employment agencies, and apprenticeship training programs. (See Gov. Code, § 12940(a)–(d).)

Regulations provide that refusing to hire an applicant or terminating an employee in order to avoid the need to accommodate a religious practice constitutes religious creed discrimination. (Cal. Code Regs., tit. 2, § 11062.) Give the second option for element 6 if the plaintiff claims that the employer terminated or refused to hire the plaintiff to avoid a need for accommodation.

Element 7 requires that the plaintiff's failure to comply with the conflicting job requirement be a substantial motivating reason for the employer's adverse action. (See Harris v. City of Santa Monica (2013) 56 Cal.4th 203, 232 [152 Cal.Rptr.3d 392, 294 P.3d 49]; see also CACI No. 2507, "Substantial Motivating Reason" Explained.) Read the first option if there is no dispute as to whether the employer's acts constituted an adverse employment action. Read the second option and also give CACI No. 2509, "Adverse Employment Action" Explained, if whether there was an adverse employment action is a question of fact for the jury. If constructive discharge is alleged, give the third option for element 7 and also give CACI No. 2510, "Constructive Discharge" Explained.

Federal courts construing Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 have held that the threat of an adverse employment action is a violation if the employee acquiesces to the threat and foregoes religious observance. (See, e.g., EEOC v. Townley Engineering & Mfg. Co. (9th Cir.1988) 859 F.2d 610, 614 fn. 5.) While no case has been found that construes the FEHA similarly, element 7 may be modified if the court agrees that this rule applies. In the first option, replace "decision to" with "threat to." Or in the second option, "subjecting [name of plaintiff] to" may be replaced with "threatening [name of plaintiff] with."

Sources and Authority

- Religious Accommodation Required Under Fair Employment and Housing Act. Government Code section 12940(l).
- Scope of Religious Protection. Government Code section 12926(p).
- Scope of Religious Protection. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 2, § 11060(b).
- Reasonable Accommodation and Undue Hardship. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 2, § 11062.
- "In evaluating an argument the employer failed to accommodate an employee's religious beliefs, the employee must establish a prima facie case that he or she had a bona fide religious belief, of which the employer was aware, that conflicts with an employment requirement . . . . Once the employee establishes a prima facie case, then the employer must establish it initiated good faith efforts to accommodate or no accommodation was possible without producing undue hardship." (Soldinger v. Northwest Airlines, Inc. (1996) 51 Cal.App.4th 345, 370 [58 Cal.Rptr.2d 747], internal citation omitted.)
- "Any reasonable accommodation is sufficient to meet an employer's obligations. However, the employer need not adopt the most reasonable accommodation nor must the employer accept the remedy preferred by the employee. The reasonableness of the employer's efforts to accommodate is determined on a case by case basis . . . . '[O]nce it is determined that the employer has offered a reasonable accommodation, the employer need not show that each of the employee's proposed accommodations would result in undue hardship.' '[W]here the employer has already reasonably accommodated the employee's religious needs, the . . . inquiry [ends].' " (Soldinger, supra, 51 Cal.App.4th at p. 370, internal citations omitted.)
- "Requiring the plaintiff to show that discrimination was a substantial motivating factor, rather than simply a motivating factor, more effectively ensures that liability will not be imposed based on evidence of mere thoughts or passing statements unrelated to the disputed employment decision. At the same time, . . . proof that discrimination was a substantial factor in an employment decision triggers the deterrent purpose of the FEHA and thus exposes the employer to liability, even if other factors would have led the employer to make the same decision at the time." (Harris, supra, 56 Cal.4th at p. 232, original italics.)
- "We do not suggest that discrimination must be alone sufficient to bring about an employment decision in order to constitute a substantial motivating factor. But it is important to recognize that discrimination can be serious, consequential, and even by itself determinative of an employment decision without also being a 'but for' cause." (Harris, supra, 56 Cal.4th at p. 229.)

Secondary Sources

8 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Constitutional Law, §§ 967, 1028, 1052, 1054

Chin et al., Cal. Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 7-A, Title VII And The California Fair Employment And Housing Act, ¶¶ 7:151, 7:215, 7:305, 7:610–7:611, 7:631–7:634, 7:641 (The Rutter Group)

2 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 41.52[3] (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, §§ 115.22, 115.35[d], 115.91 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation §§ 2:71–2:73 (Thomson Reuters)

1 Lindemann and Grossman, Employment Discrimination Law (3d ed. 1996) Religion, pp. 219–224, 226–227; id. (2000 supp.) at pp. 100–101

2561. Religious Creed Discrimination—Reasonable Accommodation—Affirmative Defense—Undue Hardship (Gov. Code, §§ 12940(l)(1), 12926(u))

[*Name of defendant] claims that accommodating [name of plaintiff]'s [religious belief/religious observance] would create an undue hardship to the operation of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] business.

To succeed on this defense, [*name of defendant] must prove that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] considered reasonable alternative options for accommodating the [religious belief/religious observance], including (1) excusing [name of plaintiff] from duties that conflict with [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] [religious belief/religious observance][,] [or] (2) permitting those duties to be performed at another time or by another person[, or (3) [specify other reasonable accommodation]].

If you decide that [*name of defendant] considered but did not adopt [a] reasonable accommodation[s], you must then decide if the accommodation[s] would have created an undue hardship because it would be significantly difficult or expensive, in light of the following factors:

a. The nature and cost of the accommodation[s];

b. [Name of defendant]'s ability to pay for the accommodation[s];

c. The type of operations conducted at the facility;

d. The impact on the operations of the facility;

e. The number of [name of defendant]'s employees and the relationship of the employees' duties to one another;

f. The number, type, and location of [name of defendant]'s facilities; and

g. The administrative and financial relationship of the facilities to one another.

New September 2003; Revoked December 2012; Restored and Revised June 2013; Revised November 2019, May 2020, May 2021

Directions for Use

For religious beliefs and observances, the statute requires the employer (or other covered entity) to demonstrate that the employer explored certain means of accommodating the plaintiff, including two specific possibilities: (1) excusing the plaintiff from duties that conflict with the plaintiff's religious belief or observance or (2) permitting those duties to be performed at another time or by another person.

(Gov. Code, § 12940(l)(1).) If there is evidence of another reasonable alternative accommodation, include it as a third means of accommodating the plaintiff.

Sources and Authority

- Religious Accommodation Required Under Fair Employment and Housing Act. Government Code section 12940(l)(1).
- "Undue Hardship" Defined. Government Code section 12926(u).
- "If the employee proves a prima facie case and the employer fails to initiate an accommodation for the religious practices, the burden is then on the employer to prove it will incur an undue hardship if it accommodates that belief. '[T]he extent of undue hardship on the employer's business is at issue only where the employer claims that it is unable to offer any reasonable accommodation without such hardship.' . . ." (Soldinger v. Northwest Airlines, Inc. (1996) 51 Cal.App.4th 345, 371 [58 Cal.Rptr.2d 747], internal citations omitted.)
- "It would be anomalous to conclude that by 'reasonable accommodation' Congress meant that an employer must deny the shift and job preference of some employees, as well as deprive them of their contractual rights, in order to accommodate or prefer the religious needs of others, and we conclude that Title VII does not require an employer to go that far. [¶] . . . [¶] Alternatively, the Court of Appeals suggested that [the employer] could have replaced [plaintiff] on his Saturday shift with other employees through the payment of premium wages . . . . To require [the employer] to bear more than a de minimus cost . . . is an undue hardship. Like abandonment of the seniority system, to require [the employer] to bear additional costs when no such costs are incurred to give other employees the days off that they want would involve unequal treatment of employees on the basis of their religion." (TWA v. Hardison (1977) 432 U.S. 63, 81, 84 [97 S.Ct. 2264, 53 L.Ed.2d 113], footnote omitted.)
- "We hold that showing 'more than a de minimis cost,' as that phrase is used in common parlance, does not suffice to establish 'undue hardship' under Title VII. [TWA v.] Hardison cannot be reduced to that one phrase. In describing an employer's 'undue hardship' defense, Hardison referred repeatedly to 'substantial' burdens, and that formulation better explains the decision. We therefore . . . understand Hardison to mean that 'undue hardship' is shown when a burden is substantial in the overall context of an employer's business. This fact-specific inquiry comports with both Hardison and the meaning of 'undue hardship' in ordinary speech." (Groff v. DeJoy (2023) 600 U.S. 447 [143 S.Ct. 2279, 2294, 216 L.Ed.2d 1041], original italics, internal citation omitted.)

Secondary Sources

8 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Constitutional Law, §§ 1025, 1026

Chin et al., Cal. Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 7-A, Title VII And The California Fair Employment and Housing Act, ¶¶ 7:151, 7:215, 7:305, 7:610, 7:631, 7:640–7:641 (The Rutter Group)

2 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 41.52[4] (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, §§ 115.35[2][a], –[c], 115.54[4], 115.91 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation §§ 2:71–2:73 (Thomson Reuters)

1 Lindemann and Grossman, Employment Discrimination Law (3d ed.) Religion, pp. 227–234 (2000 supp.) at pp. 100–105

2562–2569. Reserved for Future Use

2570. Age Discrimination—Disparate Treatment—Essential Factual Elements

---

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] wrongfully discriminated against [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] because of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] age. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] was [an employer/[other covered entity]];
2. That [name of plaintiff] [was an employee of [name of defendant]/ applied to [name of defendant] for a job/[describe other covered relationship to defendant]];
3. [That [name of defendant] [discharged/refused to hire/[other adverse employment action]] [name of plaintiff];]

   [or]

   [That [*name of defendant] subjected [name of plaintiff] to an adverse employment action;]

   [or]

   [That [*name of plaintiff] was constructively discharged;]
4. That [name of plaintiff] was age 40 or older at the time of the [discharge/[other adverse employment action]];
5. That [name of plaintiff]'s age was a substantial motivating reason for [name of defendant]'s [decision to [discharge/refuse to hire/ [other adverse employment action]] [name of plaintiff]/conduct];
6. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
7. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New June 2011; Revised June 2012, June 2013, May 2020

Directions for Use

Read the first option for element 3 if there is no dispute as to whether the employer's acts constituted an adverse employment action. Read the second option and also give CACI No. 2509, "Adverse Employment Action" Explained, if whether there was an adverse employment action is a question of fact for the jury. If constructive discharge is alleged, give the third option for element 3 and also give CACI No. 2510, "Constructive Discharge" Explained. Select "conduct" in element 5 if the either the second or third option is included for element 3.

Note that there are two causation elements. There must be a causal link between the discriminatory animus based on age and the adverse action (see element 5), and there must be a causal link between the adverse action and the damage (see element 7). (See Mamou v. Trendwest Resorts, Inc. (2008) 165 Cal.App.4th 686, 713 [81 Cal.Rptr.3d 406].)

Element 5 requires that age discrimination be a substantial motivating reason for the adverse action. (See Harris v. City of Santa Monica (2013) 56 Cal.4th 203, 232 [152 Cal.Rptr.3d 392, 294 P.3d 49]; see also CACI No. 2507, "Substantial Motivating Reason" Explained.)

Under the McDonnell Douglas (McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792 [93 S.Ct. 1817, 36 L.Ed.2d 668]) process for allocating burdens of proof and producing evidence, which is used in California for disparate-treatment cases under FEHA, the employee must first present a prima facie case of discrimination. The burden then shifts to the employer to produce evidence of a nondiscriminatory reason for the adverse action. At that point, the burden shifts back to the employee to show that the employer's stated reason was in fact a pretext for a discriminatory act.

Whether or not the employee has met the employee's prima facie burden, and whether or not the employer has rebutted the employee's prima facie showing, are questions of law for the trial court, not questions of fact for the jury. (See Caldwell v. Paramount Unified School Dist. (1995) 41 Cal.App.4th 189, 201 [48 Cal.Rptr.2d 448].) In other words, by the time that the case is submitted to the jury, the plaintiff has already established a prima facie case, and the employer has already proffered a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for the adverse employment decision. The McDonnell Douglas shifting burden drops from the case. The jury is left to decide which evidence it finds more convincing, that of the employer's discriminatory intent or that of the employer's age-neutral reasons for the employment decision. (See Muzquiz v. City of Emeryville (2000) 79 Cal.App.4th 1106, 1118, fn. 5 [94 Cal.Rptr.2d 579]).

Under FEHA, age-discrimination cases require the employee to show that the employee's job performance was satisfactory at the time of the adverse employment action as a part of the employee's prima facie case (see Sandell v. Taylor-Listug, Inc. (2010) 188 Cal.App.4th 297, 321 [115 Cal.Rptr.3d 453]), even though it is the employer's burden to produce evidence of a nondiscriminatory reason for the action. Poor job performance is the most common nondiscriminatory reason that an employer advances for the action. Even though satisfactory job performance may be an element of the employee's prima facie case, it is not an element that the employee must prove to the trier of fact. Under element 5 and CACI No. 2507, the burden remains with the employee to ultimately prove that age discrimination was a substantial motivating reason for the action. (See Muzquiz, supra, 79 Cal.App.4th at p. 1119.)

See also the Sources and Authority to CACI No. 2500, Disparate Treatment—Essential Factual Elements.

Sources and Authority

- Age Discrimination Prohibited Under Fair Employment and Housing Act. Government Code section 12940(a).
- "Age" Defined. Government Code section 12926(b).
- Disparate Treatment; Layoffs Based on Salary. Government Code section 12941.
- "In order to make out a prima facie case of age discrimination under FEHA, a plaintiff must present evidence that the plaintiff (1) is over the age of 40; (2) suffered an adverse employment action; (3) was performing satisfactorily at the time of the adverse action; and (4) suffered the adverse action under circumstances that give rise to an inference of unlawful discrimination, i.e., evidence that the plaintiff was replaced by someone significantly younger than the plaintiff." (Sandell, supra, 188 Cal.App.4th at p. 321.)
- "In other words, '[b]y the time that the case is submitted to the jury, . . . the plaintiff has already established his or her prima facie case, and the employer has already proffered a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for the adverse employment decision, leaving only the issue of the employer's discriminatory intent for resolution by the trier of fact. Otherwise, the case would have been disposed of as a matter of law for the trial court. That is to say, if the plaintiff cannot make out a prima facie case, the employer wins as a matter of law. If the employer cannot articulate a nondiscriminatory reason for the adverse employment decision, the plaintiff wins as a matter of law. In those instances, no fact-finding is required, and the case will never reach a jury. [¶] In short, if and when the case is submitted to the jury, the construct of the shifting burden "drops from the case," and the jury is left to decide which evidence it finds more convincing, that of the employer's discriminatory intent, or that of the employer's race or age-neutral reasons for the employment decision.' " (Muzquiz, supra, 79 Cal.App.4th at p. 1118, fn. 5.)
- "Because the only issue properly before the trier of fact was whether the [defendant]'s adverse employment decision was motivated by discrimination on the basis of age, the shifting burdens of proof regarding appellant's prima facie case and the issue of legitimate nondiscriminatory grounds were actually irrelevant." (Muzquiz, supra, 79 Cal.App.4th at p. 1119.)
- "An employee alleging age discrimination must ultimately prove that the adverse employment action taken was based on his or her age. Since direct evidence of such motivation is seldom available, the courts use a system of shifting burdens as an aid to the presentation and resolution of age discrimination cases. That system necessarily establishes the basic framework for reviewing motions for summary judgment in such cases." (Hersant v. Department of Social Services (1997) 57 Cal.App.4th 997, 1002 [67 Cal.Rptr.2d 483], internal citations omitted.)
- "Requiring the plaintiff to show that discrimination was a substantial motivating factor, rather than simply a motivating factor, more effectively ensures that liability will not be imposed based on evidence of mere thoughts or passing statements unrelated to the disputed employment decision. At the same time, . . . proof that discrimination was a substantial factor in an employment decision triggers the deterrent purpose of the FEHA and thus exposes the employer to liability, even if other factors would have led the employer to make the same decision at the time." (Harris, supra, 56 Cal.4th at p. 232, original italics.)

- "We do not suggest that discrimination must be alone sufficient to bring about an employment decision in order to constitute a substantial motivating factor. But it is important to recognize that discrimination can be serious, consequential, and even by itself determinative of an employment decision without also being a "but for" cause." (Harris, supra, 56 Cal.4th at p. 229.)
- "While we agree that a plaintiff must demonstrate some basic level of competence at his or her job in order to meet the requirements of a prima facie showing, the burden-shifting framework established in McDonnell Douglas compels the conclusion that any measurement of such competency should, to the extent possible, be based on objective, rather than subjective, criteria. A plaintiff's burden in making a prima facie case of discrimination is not intended to be 'onerous.' Rather, the prima facie burden exists in order to weed out patently unmeritorious claims." (Sandell, supra, 188 Cal.App.4th at p. 322, internal citations omitted.)
- "A discharge is not 'on the ground of age' within the meaning of this prohibition unless age is a 'motivating factor' in the decision. Thus, ' "an employer would be entitled to judgment as a matter of law if the record conclusively revealed some other, nondiscriminatory reason for the employer's decision." ' '[A]n employee claiming discrimination must offer substantial evidence that the employer's stated nondiscriminatory reason for the adverse action was untrue or pretextual, or evidence the employer acted with a discriminatory animus, or a combination of the two, such that a reasonable trier of fact could conclude the employer engaged in intentional discrimination.' " (West v. Bechtel Corp. (2002) 96 Cal.App.4th 966, 978 [117 Cal.Rptr.2d 647].)
- "[D]ownsizing alone is not necessarily a sufficient explanation, under the FEHA, for the consequent dismissal of an age-protected worker. An employer's freedom to consolidate or reduce its work force, and to eliminate positions in the process, does not mean it may 'use the occasion as a convenient opportunity to get rid of its [older] workers.' " (Guz v. Bechtel National, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal.4th 317, 358 [100 Cal.Rptr.2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089].)

Secondary Sources

8 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Constitutional Law, §§ 1041–1044

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 8-B, California Fair Employment and Housing Act, ¶¶ 8:740, 8:800 et seq. (The Rutter Group)

2 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 41, Substantive Requirements Under

Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 41.31 (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.22 (Matthew Bender)

10 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 100, Employer and Employee: Wrongful Termination and Discipline, § 100.43 (Matthew Bender)

2571–2579. Reserved for Future Use

2580. Pregnancy Discrimination—Failure to Accommodate—Essential Factual Elements (Gov. Code, § 12945(a)(3)(A))

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] failed to reasonably accommodate a condition related to [pregnancy/[,/or] childbirth/[,/or] [a related medical condition]]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] was an employer;
2. That [name of plaintiff] was an employee of [name of defendant];
3. That [name of plaintiff] had a condition related to [pregnancy/[,/ or] childbirth [,/or] [a related medical condition]];
4. That [name of plaintiff] requested accommodation of this condition with the advice of a health care provider;
5. That [name of plaintiff]'s employer refused to provide a reasonable accommodation;
6. That [name of plaintiff], with the reasonable accommodation, could have performed the essential functions of the job;
7. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
8. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New November 2023

Directions for Use

Although this instruction is titled Pregnancy Discrimination—Failure to Accommodate—Essential Factual Elements, the requirement to provide a requested reasonable accommodation because of pregnancy under this provision of FEHA includes pregnancy, childbirth, or any related medical condition. (Gov. Code, § 12945(a)(3)(A).)

For an instruction defining "reasonable accommodation" in this context, see CACI No. 2581, Pregnancy Discrimination—"Reasonable Accommodation" Explained.

Sources and Authority

- Pregnancy Accommodation Required Under Fair Employment and Housing Act. Government Code section 12945(a).
- "Condition related to pregnancy, childbirth, or a related medical condition" Defined. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 2, § 11035.
- "Drawing from the statutory language and applicable regulatory law, as well as pertinent FEHA case law, we conclude a cause of action under section 12945(a)(3)(A) requires proof that: (1) the plaintiff had a condition related to pregnancy, childbirth, or a related medical condition; (2) the plaintiff requested accommodation of this condition, with the advice of her health care provider; (3) the plaintiff's employer refused to provide a reasonable accommodation; and (4) with the reasonable accommodation, the plaintiff could have performed the essential functions of the job." (Lopez v. La Casa de Las Madres (2023) 89 Cal.App.5th 365, 370–371 [305 Cal.Rptr.3d 824].)

- "We agree that section 12945 affords important protections to employees affected by pregnancy, over and above the protections of section 12940. These additional protections include a right to up to four months of pregnancy-disability leave, and a right to temporary transfer to a less strenuous job if such a 'transfer can be reasonably accommodated'. Section 12945(a)(3)(A) also protects a right to reasonable accommodation for a condition associated with pregnancy or childbirth, even when this condition does not rise to the level of a formally recognized disability. Section 12945(a)(3)(A) is, in this regard, broader than section 12940(m), which addresses an employer's obligation to accommodate 'disability.' But none of these provisions entitles an employee to a job she cannot perform." (Lopez, supra, 89 Cal.App.5th at pp. 381–382, internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

8 Witkin Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Constitutional Law, § 1034

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.22 (Matthew Bender)

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 8, Leaves of Absence, §§ 8.10–8.12 (Matthew Bender)

3 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 43, California Fair Employment and Housing Act, § 43.01 (Matthew Bender)

2581. Pregnancy Discrimination—"Reasonable Accommodation" Explained

---

A "reasonable accommodation" is a reasonable change to the work environment or the way a job is usually done that allows an employee with a condition related to [pregnancy/[,/or] childbirth/[,/or] [related conditions]] to perform the essential duties of the job.

Reasonable accommodations may include the following:

a. Changing work schedules;

b. Providing furniture like a stool or chair or modifying equipment or devices;

c. Permitting longer or more frequent breaks;

d. Changing workplace practices or policies;

e. Reassigning the employee temporarily to an open position that is less strenuous or less hazardous;

f. Changing job responsibilities; [or]

g. Providing a reasonable amount of break time and a private space for lactation[./; or]

[h. [*Specify other reasonable accommodation particular to the case].]

New November 2023

Directions for Use

Give this instruction to explain "reasonable accommodation" as used in CACI No. 2580, Pregnancy Discrimination—Failure to Accommodate—Essential Factual Elements.

Sources and Authority

- Employer Obligation to Make Reasonable Accommodation. Government Code section 12945(a).
- "Reasonable Accommodation" Defined. Government Code section 12926(p).
- "Reasonable Accommodation" Defined. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 2, §§ 11035(s), 11040.

Secondary Sources

8 Witkin Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Constitutional Law, § 1034

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.22 (Matthew Bender)

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 8, Leaves of Absence, §§ 8.10–8.12

(Matthew Bender)

3 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 43, California Fair Employment and Housing Act, § 43.01 (Matthew Bender)

2582–2599. Reserved for Future Use

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of defendant] an [employer/[other covered entity]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Was [name of plaintiff] [an employee of [name of defendant]/an applicant to [name of defendant] for a job/[other covered relationship to defendant]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of defendant] [discharge/refuse to hire/[other adverse employment action]] [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was [name of plaintiff]'s [protected status] a substantial motivating reason for [name of defendant]'s [discharge/refusal to hire/[other adverse employment action]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Was [name of defendant]'s [discharge/refusal to hire/[other adverse employment action]] a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, June 2013, December 2016

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2500, Disparate Treatment—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

Relationships other than employer/employee can be substituted in question 2, as in element 2 in CACI No. 2500.

Modify question 4 if plaintiff was not actually a member of the protected class, but alleges discrimination because he or she was perceived to be a member, or associated with someone who was or was perceived to be a member, of the protected class. (See Gov. Code, § 12926(o).)

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 6 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2501. Disparate Treatment—Affirmative Defense—Bona fide Occupational Qualification (Gov. Code, § 12940(a))

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of defendant] an [employer/[other covered entity]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Was [name of plaintiff] [an employee of [name of defendant]/an applicant to [name of defendant] for a job/[other covered relationship to defendant]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of defendant] [discharge/refuse to hire/[other adverse employment action]] [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was [name of plaintiff]'s [protected status] a substantial motivating reason for [name of defendant]'s [discharge/refusal to hire/[other adverse employment action]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Was the job requirement regarding [protected status] reasonably necessary for the operation of [name of defendant]'s business?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, skip questions 6, 7, and 8, and answer question 9.

6. Did [name of defendant] have a reasonable basis for believing that substantially all [members of protected group] are unable to safely and efficiently perform that job?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, skip questions 7 and 8, and answer question 9.

7. Was it impossible or highly impractical for [*name of defendant] to consider whether each [applicant/employee] was able to safely and efficiently perform the job?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 7 is yes, then answer question 8. If you answered no, skip question 8 and answer question 9.

8. Was it impossible or highly impractical for [*name of defendant] to rearrange job responsibilities to avoid using [protected status] as a job requirement?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 8 is no, then answer question 9. If you answered yes, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

9. Was [*name of defendant]'s [discharge/refusal to hire/[other adverse employment action]] a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 9 is yes, then answer question 10. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

10. What are [*name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, June 2013, December 2016, May 2020, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2500, Disparate Treatment—Essential Factual Elements, and CACI No. 2501, Affirmative Defense—Bona fide Occupational Qualification.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

Relationships other than employer/employee can be substituted in question 2, as in element 2 in CACI No. 2500.

Modify question 4 if the plaintiff was not actually a member of the protected class, but alleges discrimination because the plaintiff was perceived to be a member, or associated with someone who was or was perceived to be a member, of the protected class. (See Gov. Code, § 12926(o).)

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 10 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2502. Disparate Impact (Gov. Code, § 12940(a))

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of defendant] an [employer/[other covered entity]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Was [name of plaintiff] [an employee of [name of defendant]/an applicant to [name of defendant] for a job/[other covered relationship to defendant]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of defendant] have [an employment practice of [describe practice]/a selection policy of [describe policy]] that had a disproportionate adverse effect on [describe protected group—for example, persons over the age of 40]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Is [name of plaintiff] [protected status]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Was [name of defendant]'s [employment practice/selection policy] a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

   [a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2502, Disparate Impact—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

Relationships other than employer/employee can be substituted in question 2, as in element 2 in CACI No. 2502.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 6 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2503. Disparate Impact (Gov. Code, § 12940(a))—Affirmative Defense—Business Necessity/Job Relatedness—Rebuttal to Business Necessity/Job Relatedness Defense

---

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of defendant] an [employer/[other covered entity]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Was [name of plaintiff] [an employee of [name of defendant]/an applicant to [name of defendant] for a job/[other covered relationship to defendant]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of defendant] have [an employment practice of [describe practice]/a selection policy of [describe policy]] that had a disproportionate adverse effect on [describe protected group—for example, persons over the age of 40]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Is [name of plaintiff] [protected status]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Was the purpose of the [employment practice/selection policy] to operate the business safely and efficiently?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, skip questions 6, 7, and 8, and answer question 9.

6. Did the [employment practice/selection policy] substantially accomplish this business purpose?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, skip questions 7 and 8, and answer question 9.

7. Was there an alternative [employment practice/selection policy] that would have accomplished the business purpose equally well?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 7 is yes, then answer question 8. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

8. Would this alternative [employment practice/selection policy] have had less adverse impact on [*describe members of protected group—for example, persons over the age of 40]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 8 is yes, then answer question 9. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

9. Was [*name of defendant]'s [employment practice/selection policy] a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 9 is yes, then answer question 10. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

10. What are [*name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2502, Disparate Impact—Essential Factual Elements, CACI No. 2503, Affirmative Defense—Business Necessity/Job Relatedness, and CACI No. 2504, Disparate Impact—Rebuttal to Business Necessity/Job Relatedness Defense.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

Relationships other than employer/employee can be substituted in question 2, as in element 2 in CACI No. 2502.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 10 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2504. Retaliation (Gov. Code, § 12940(h))

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of plaintiff] [describe protected activity]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. [Did [name of defendant] [discharge/demote/[specify other adverse employment action]] [name of plaintiff]?]

   [or]

   [Did [*name of defendant] engage in conduct that, taken as a whole, materially and adversely affected the terms and conditions of [name of plaintiff]'s employment?]

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Was [name of plaintiff]'s [describe protected activity] a substantial motivating reason for [name of defendant]'s [decision to [discharge/demote/[specify other adverse employment action]] [name of plaintiff]/conduct]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

   [a. Past economic loss

   [lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, August 2007, December 2010, June 2013, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2505, Retaliation—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

Read the second option for question 2 in cases involving a pattern of employer harassment consisting of acts that might not individually be sufficient to constitute retaliation, but taken as a whole establish prohibited conduct. Give both options if the employee presents evidence supporting liability under both a sufficient-single-act theory or a pattern-of-harassment theory. Also select "conduct" in question 3 if the second option or both options are included for question 2.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 5 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of plaintiff] an employee of [name of defendant]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of alleged harasser] make unwanted sexual advances to [name of plaintiff] or engage in other unwanted verbal or physical conduct of a sexual nature?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Were terms of employment, job benefits, or favorable working conditions made contingent on [name of plaintiff]'s acceptance of [name of alleged harasser]'s sexual advances or conduct?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. At the time of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] conduct, was [name of alleged harasser] a supervisor or agent for [name of defendant]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Was [name of alleged harasser]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

   [a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, December 2015, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2520, Quid pro quo Sexual Harassment—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

Relationships other than employer/employee can be substituted in question number 1, as in element 1 in CACI No. 2520.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 6 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2506A. Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Plaintiff—Employer or Entity Defendant (Gov. Code, §§ 12923, 12940(j))

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of plaintiff] [an employee of/an applicant for a position with/a person providing services under a contract with/an unpaid intern with/a volunteer with] [name of defendant]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Was [name of plaintiff] subjected to harassing conduct because [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was [protected status, e.g., a woman]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Was the harassment severe or pervasive?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Would a reasonable [e.g., woman] in [name of plaintiff]'s circumstances have considered the work environment to be hostile, intimidating, offensive, oppressive, or abusive?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Did [name of plaintiff] consider the work environment to be hostile, intimidating, offensive, oppressive, or abusive?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Did [name of defendant] [or [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] supervisors or agents] know or should [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it/they] have known of the harassing conduct?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. Did [name of defendant] [or [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] supervisors or agents] fail to take immediate and appropriate corrective action?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 7 is yes, then answer question 8. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

8. Was the harassing conduct a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 8 is yes, then answer question 9. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

9. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

Derived from former CACI No. VF-2506 December 2007; Revised December 2010, June 2013, December 2016, May 2020, May 2021, November 2021, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2521A, Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Plaintiff—Essential Factual Elements—Employer or Entity Defendant.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

Relationships other than employer/employee can be substituted in question 1, as in element 1 of CACI No. 2521A. Depending on the facts of the case, other factual scenarios for employer liability can be substituted in questions 6 and 7, as in element 6 of the instruction.

Modify question 2 if the plaintiff was not actually a member of the protected class, but alleges harassment because the plaintiff was perceived to be a member, or associated with someone who was or was perceived to be a member, of the protected class. (See Gov. Code, § 12926(o).)

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 9 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest.

This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2506B. Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Others—Employer or Entity Defendant (Gov. Code, §§ 12923, 12940(j))

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of plaintiff] [an employee of/an applicant for a position with/a person providing services under a contract with/an unpaid intern with/a volunteer with] [name of defendant]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of plaintiff] personally witness harassing conduct that took place in [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] immediate work environment?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Was the harassment severe or pervasive?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Would a reasonable [describe member of protected group, e.g., woman] in [name of plaintiff]'s circumstances have considered the work environment to be hostile, intimidating, offensive, oppressive, or abusive?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Did [name of plaintiff] consider the work environment to be hostile, intimidating, offensive, oppressive, or abusive toward [e.g., women]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Did [name of defendant] [or [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] supervisors or agents] know or should [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it/they] have known of the harassing conduct?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. Did [name of defendant] [or [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] supervisors or agents] fail to take immediate and appropriate corrective action?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 7 is yes, then answer question 8. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

8. Was the harassing conduct a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 8 is yes, then answer question 9. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

9. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

   [a. Past economic loss

   [lost earnings $_____]

   [lost profits $_____]

   [medical expenses $_____]

   [other past economic loss $_____]

   Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

   [b. Future economic loss

   [lost earnings $_____]

   [lost profits $_____]

   [medical expenses $_____]

   [other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

Derived from former CACI No. VF-2506 December 2007; Revised December 2010, June 2013, December 2016, May 2020, May 2021, November 2021, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2521B, Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Others—Essential Factual Elements—Employer or Entity Defendant.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

Relationships other than employer/employee can be substituted in question 1, as in element 1 of CACI No. 2521B. Depending on the facts of the case, other factual scenarios for employer liability can be substituted in questions 6 and 7, as in element 6 of the instruction.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 9 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2506C. Work Environment Harassment—Sexual Favoritism—Employer or Entity Defendant (Gov. Code, §§ 12923, 12940(j))

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of plaintiff] [an employee of/an applicant for a position with/a person providing services under a contract with/an unpaid intern with/a volunteer with] [name of defendant]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Was there sexual favoritism in the work environment?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Was the sexual favoritism severe or pervasive?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Would a reasonable [describe member of protected group, e.g., woman] in [name of plaintiff]'s circumstances have considered the work environment to be hostile, intimidating, offensive, oppressive, or abusive?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Did [name of plaintiff] consider the work environment to be hostile, intimidating, offensive, oppressive, or abusive because of the sexual favoritism?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Did [name of defendant] [or [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] supervisors or agents] know or should [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it/they] have known of the sexual favoritism?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. Did [name of defendant] [or [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] supervisors or agents] fail to take immediate and appropriate corrective action?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 7 is yes, then answer question 8. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

8. Was the sexual favoritism a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 8 is yes, then answer question 9. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

9. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

Derived from former CACI No. VF-2506 December 2007; Revised December 2010, December 2016, May 2020, May 2021, November 2021, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2521C, Work Environment Harassment—Sexual Favoritism—Essential Factual Elements—Employer or Entity Defendant.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

Relationships other than employer/employee can be substituted in question 1, as in element 1 of CACI No. 2521C. Depending on the facts of the case, other factual scenarios for employer liability can be substituted in questions 6 and 7, as in element 6 of the instruction.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 9 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2507A. Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Plaintiff—Individual Defendant (Gov. Code, §§ 12923, 12940(j))

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of plaintiff] [an employee of/an applicant for a position with/a person providing services under a contract with/an unpaid intern with/a volunteer with] [name of covered entity]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

[2. Was [*name of individual defendant] an employee of [name of covered entity]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.]

3. Was [name of plaintiff] subjected to harassing conduct because [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was [protected status, e.g., a woman]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was the harassment severe or pervasive?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Would a reasonable [e.g., woman] in [name of plaintiff]'s circumstances have considered the work environment to be hostile, intimidating, offensive, oppressive, or abusive?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Did [name of plaintiff] consider the work environment to be hostile, intimidating, offensive, oppressive, or abusive?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. Did [*name of individual defendant] [participate in/assist/ [or] encourage] the harassing conduct?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 7 is yes, then answer question 8. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

8. Was the harassing conduct a substantial factor in causing harm to [*name of plaintiff]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 8 is yes, then answer question 9. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

9. What are [*name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

Derived from former CACI No. VF-2507 December 2007; Revised December 2010, June 2013, December 2016, May 2020, May 2021, November 2021, May 2022, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2522A, Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Plaintiff—Essential Factual Elements—Individual Defendant.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

Include optional question 2 only if optional element 2 is included in CACI No. 2522A.

Modify question 3 if the plaintiff was not actually a member of the protected class, but alleges harassment because the plaintiff was perceived to be a member, or associated with someone who was or was perceived to be a member, of the protected class. (See Gov. Code, § 12926(o).)

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 9 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2507B. Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Others—Individual Defendant (Gov. Code, §§ 12923, 12940(j))

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of plaintiff] [an employee of/an applicant for a position with/a person providing services under a contract with/an unpaid intern with/a volunteer with] [name of covered entity]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

[2. Was [name of individual defendant] an employee of [name of covered entity]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.]

3. Did [name of plaintiff] personally witness harassing conduct that took place in [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] immediate work environment?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was the harassment severe or pervasive?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Would a reasonable [describe member of protected group, e.g.,* woman] in [name of plaintiff]'s circumstances have considered the work environment to be hostile, intimidating, offensive, oppressive, or abusive?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Did [name of plaintiff] consider the work environment to be hostile, intimidating, offensive, oppressive, or abusive toward [e.g., women]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. Did [name of individual defendant] [participate in/assist/ [or] encourage] the harassing conduct?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 7 is yes, then answer question 8. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

8. Was the harassing conduct a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 8 is yes, then answer question 9. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

9. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

Derived from former CACI No. VF-2507 December 2007; Revised December 2010, June 2013, December 2016, May 2020, May 2021, November 2021, May 2022, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2522B, Work Environment Harassment—Conduct Directed at Others—Essential Factual Elements—Individual Defendant.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

Include optional question 2 only if optional element 2 is included in CACI No. 2522B.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 9 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2507C. Work Environment Harassment—Sexual Favoritism—Individual Defendant (Gov. Code, §§ 12923, 12940(j))

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of plaintiff] [an employee of/an applicant for a position with/a person providing services under a contract with/an unpaid intern with/a volunteer with] [name of covered entity]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

[2. Was [name of individual defendant] an employee of [name of covered entity]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.]

3. Was there sexual favoritism in the work environment?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was the sexual favoritism severe or pervasive?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Would a reasonable [describe member of protected group, e.g., woman] in [name of plaintiff]'s circumstances have considered the work environment to be hostile, intimidating, offensive, oppressive, or abusive?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Did [name of plaintiff] consider the work environment to be hostile, intimidating, offensive, oppressive, or abusive because of the sexual favoritism?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. Did [*name of individual defendant] [participate in/assist/ [or] encourage] the sexual favoritism?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 7 is yes, then answer question 8. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

8. Was the sexual favoritism a substantial factor in causing harm to [*name of plaintiff]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 8 is yes, then answer question 9. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

9. What are [*name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

Derived from former CACI No. VF-2507 December 2007; Revised December 2010, December 2014, December 2016, May 2020, May 2021, November 2021, May 2022, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2522C, Work Environment Harassment—Sexual Favoritism—Essential Factual Elements—Individual Defendant.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

Include optional question 2 only if optional element 2 is included in CACI No. 2522C.

Depending on the facts of the case, other factual scenarios for employer liability can be substituted in question 7, as in element 7 of the instruction.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 9 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of defendant] [an employer/[other covered entity]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Was [name of plaintiff] [an employee of [name of defendant]/an applicant to [name of defendant] for a job/[other covered relationship to defendant]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of defendant] [know that [name of plaintiff* had/treat [name of plaintiff] as if [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] had] [a history of having] [a] [select term to describe basis of limitations, e.g., physical condition] [that limited [insert major life activity]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was [name of plaintiff] able to perform the position's essential job duties without an accommodation?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then skip question 5 and answer question 6. If you answered no, then answer question 5.

5. Was [name of plaintiff] able to perform the position's essential job duties with reasonable accommodation for [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] [e.g., condition]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Did [name of defendant] [discharge/refuse to hire/[other adverse* employment action]] [name of plaintiff]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. Was [*name of plaintiff]'s [perceived] [history of [a]] [e.g., physical condition] a substantial motivating reason for [name of defendant]'s decision to [discharge/refuse to hire/[other adverse employment action]] [name of plaintiff]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 7 is yes, then answer question 8. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

8. Was [*name of defendant]'s [decision/conduct] a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 8 is yes, then answer question 9. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

9. What are [*name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2007, December 2009, June 2010, December 2010, June 2013, December 2016, May 2020, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2540, Disability Discrimination—Disparate Treatment—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

Select a term to use throughout to describe the source of the plaintiff's limitations. It may be a statutory term such as "physical disability," "mental disability," or "medical condition." (See Gov. Code, § 12940(a).) Or it may be a general term such as "condition," "disease," or "disorder." Or it may be a specific health condition such as "diabetes."

Relationships other than employer/employee can be substituted in question 1, as in element 1 of CACI No. 2540. Depending on the facts of the case, other factual scenarios can be substituted in questions 3 and 7, as in elements 3 and 6 of the instruction.

For question 3, select the claimed basis of discrimination: an actual disability, a history of a disability, a perceived disability, or a perceived history of a disability. For an actual disability, select "know that [name of plaintiff] had." For a perceived disability, select "treat [name of plaintiff] as if [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] had."

If medical-condition discrimination as defined by statute (see Gov. Code, § 12926(i)) is alleged, omit "that limited [insert major life activity]" in question 3. (Compare Gov. Code, § 12926(i) with Gov. Code, § 12926(j), (l) [no requirement that medical condition limit major life activity].)

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 9 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2509. Disability Discrimination—Reasonable Accommodation (Gov. Code, § 12940(m))

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of defendant] [an employer/[other covered entity]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Was [name of plaintiff] [an employee of [name of defendant]/an applicant to [name of defendant] for a job/[other covered relationship to defendant]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of plaintiff] have [a] [select term to describe basis of limitations, e.g., physical condition] [that limited [insert major life activity]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did [name of defendant] know of [name of plaintiff]'s [e.g., physical condition* [that limited [insert major life activity]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Was [name of plaintiff] able to perform the essential job duties with reasonable accommodation for [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] [e.g., physical condition]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Did [name of defendant] fail to provide reasonable accommodation for [name of plaintiff]'s [e.g., physical condition]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. Was [name of defendant]'s failure to provide reasonable accommodation a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 7 is yes, then answer question 8. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

8. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, April 2009, December 2009, December 2010, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2541, Disability Discrimination—Reasonable Accommodation—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

Select a term to use throughout to describe the source of the plaintiff's limitations. It may be a statutory term such as "physical disability," "mental disability," or "medical condition." (See Gov. Code, § 12940(a).) Or it may be a general term such as "condition," "disease," or "disorder." Or it may be a specific health condition such as "diabetes."

Relationships other than employer/employee can be substituted in question 1, as in element 1 of CACI No. 2541.

If medical-condition discrimination as defined by statute (see Gov. Code, § 12926(i)) is alleged, omit "that limited [insert major life activity]" in questions 3 and 4. (Compare Gov. Code, § 12926(i) with Gov. Code, § 12926(j), (l) [no requirement that medical condition limit major life activity].)

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 8 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2510. Disability Discrimination—Reasonable Accommodation—Affirmative Defense—Undue Hardship (Gov. Code, § 12940(m))

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of defendant] [an employer/[other covered entity]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Was [name of plaintiff] [an employee of [name of defendant]/an applicant to [name of defendant] for a job/[other covered relationship to defendant]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of plaintiff] have [a] [select term to describe basis of limitations, e.g., physical condition] [that limited [insert major life activity]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did [name of defendant] know of [name of plaintiff]'s [e.g., physical condition] [that limited [insert major life activity]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Was [name of plaintiff] able to perform the essential job duties with reasonable accommodation for [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] [e.g., physical condition]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Did [name of defendant] fail to provide reasonable accommodation for [name of plaintiff]'s [e.g., physical condition]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. Would [name of plaintiff]'s proposed accommodations have created an undue hardship to the operation of [name of defendant]'s business?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 7 is no, then answer question 8. If you answered yes, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

8. Was [name of defendant]'s failure to provide a reasonable accommodation a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 8 is yes, then answer question 9. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

9. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, April 2009, December 2009, December 2010, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2541, Disability Discrimination—Reasonable Accommodation—Essential Factual Elements, and CACI No. 2545, Disability Discrimination—Affirmative Defense—Undue Hardship. If a different affirmative defense is at issue, this form should be tailored accordingly.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

Select a term to use throughout to describe the source of the plaintiff's limitations. It may be a statutory term such as "physical disability," "mental disability," or "medical condition." (See Gov. Code, § 12940(a).) Or it may be a general term such as "condition," "disease," or "disorder." Or it may be a specific health condition such as "diabetes."

Relationships other than employer/employee can be substituted in question 1, as in element 1 of CACI No. 2541.

If medical-condition discrimination as defined by statute (see Gov. Code, § 12926(i)) is alleged, omit "that limited [insert major life activity]" in questions 3 and 4. (Compare Gov. Code, § 12926(i) with Gov. Code, § 12926(j), (l) [no requirement that medical condition limit major life activity].)

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 9 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2511. Religious Creed Discrimination—Failure to Accommodate (Gov. Code, § 12940(l))

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of defendant] [an employer/[other covered entity]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Was [name of plaintiff] [an employee of [name of defendant]/an applicant to [name of defendant] for a job/[other covered relationship to defendant]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Does [name of plaintiff] have a sincerely held religious belief that [describe religious belief, observance, or practice]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did [name of plaintiff]'s religious [belief/observance] conflict with a job requirement?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Did [name of defendant] know of the conflict between [name of plaintiff]'s religious [belief/observance] and the job requirement?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Did [name of defendant] reasonably accommodate [name of plaintiff]'s religious [belief/observance]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is no, then answer question 7. If you answered yes, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. Was [*name of plaintiff]'s failure to comply with the conflicting job requirement a substantial motivating reason for [name of defendant]'s [discharge of/refusal to hire/[other adverse employment action]] [name of plaintiff]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 7 is yes, then answer question 8. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

8. Was [*name of defendant]'s failure to reasonably accommodate [name of plaintiff]'s religious [belief/observance] a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 8 is yes, then answer question 9. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

9. What are [*name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, June 2013, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2560, Religious Creed Discrimination—Failure to Accommodate—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 9 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2512. Religious Creed Discrimination—Failure to Accommodate—Affirmative Defense—Undue Hardship (Gov. Code, §§ 12926(u), 12940(l))

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of defendant] [an employer/[other covered entity]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Was [name of plaintiff] [an employee of [name of defendant]/an applicant to [name of defendant] for a job/[other covered relationship to defendant]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Does [name of plaintiff] have a sincerely held religious belief that [describe religious belief, observance, or practice]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did [name of plaintiff]'s religious [belief/observance] conflict with a job requirement?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Did [name of defendant] know of the conflict between [name of plaintiff]'s religious [belief/observance] and the job requirement?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Did [name of defendant] reasonably accommodate [name of* plaintiff]'s religious [belief/observance]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is no, then answer question 7. If you answered yes, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. Did [name of defendant] explore available ways to accommodate [name of plaintiff]'s religious [belief/observance]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 7 is yes, then answer question 8. If you answered no, skip question 8 and answer question 9.

8. Could [name of defendant] have accommodated [name of plaintiff]'s religious [belief/observance] without causing undue hardship to [name of defendant]'s business?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 8 is yes, then answer question 9. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

9. Was [name of plaintiff]'s failure to comply with the conflicting job requirement a substantial motivating reason for [name of defendant]'s [discharge of/refusal to hire/[other adverse employment action]] [name of plaintiff]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 9 is yes, then answer question 10. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

10. Was [name of defendant]'s failure to reasonably accommodate [name of plaintiff]'s religious [belief/observance] a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 10 is yes, then answer question 11. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

11. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, December 2012, June 2013, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2560, Religious Creed Discrimination—Failure to Accommodate—Essential Factual Elements (see Gov. Code, §§ 12926(u), 12940(l)) and CACI No. 2561, Religious Creed Discrimination—Reasonable Accommodation—Affirmative Defense—Undue Hardship.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 11 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2513. Disability Discrimination—Reasonable Accommodation—Failure to Engage in Interactive Process (Gov. Code, § 12940(n))

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of defendant] [an employer/[other covered entity]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Was [name of plaintiff] [an employee of [name of defendant]/an applicant to [name of defendant] for a job/[other covered relationship to defendant]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of plaintiff] have [a] [select term to describe basis of limitations, e.g., physical condition] [that limited [insert major life activity]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did [name of plaintiff] request that [name of defendant] make reasonable accommodation for [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] [e.g., physical condition] so that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] would be able to perform the essential job requirements?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Was [name of plaintiff] willing to participate in an interactive process to determine whether reasonable accommodation could be made so that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] would be able to perform the essential job requirements?

   _____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Did [name of defendant] fail to participate in a timely, good-faith interactive process with [name of plaintiff] to determine whether reasonable accommodation could be made?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

[7. Could [name of defendant] have made a reasonable accommodation when the interactive process should have taken place?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 7 is yes, then answer question 8. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.]

8. Was [name of defendant]'s failure to participate in a good-faith interactive process a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 8 is yes, then answer question 9. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

9. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____]

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New April 2009; Revised December 2009, December 2010, December 2016, May 2022, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2546, Disability Discrimination—Reasonable Accommodation—Failure to Engage in Interactive Process.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

Select a term to use throughout to describe the source of the plaintiff's limitations. It may be a statutory term such as "physical disability," "mental disability," or "medical condition." (See Gov. Code, § 12940(a).) Or it may be a general term such as "condition," "disease," or "disorder." Or it may be a specific health condition such as "diabetes."

If medical-condition discrimination as defined by statute (see Gov. Code, § 12926(i)) is alleged, omit "that limited [insert major life activity]" in question 3. (Compare Gov. Code, § 12926(i) with Gov. Code, § 12926(j), (m) [no requirement that medical condition limit major life activity].)

Bracketed question 7 reflects that there is a split of authority as to whether the employee must also prove that a reasonable accommodation was available. (Compare Shirvanyan v. Los Angeles Community College Dist. (2020) 59 Cal.App.5th 82, 87 [273 Cal.Rptr.3d 312] ["the availability of a reasonable accommodation is an essential element of an interactive process claim"] and Nadaf-Rahrov v. The Neiman Marcus Group, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal.App.4th 952, 980–985 [83 Cal.Rptr.3d 190] [employee who brings section 12940(n) claim bears burden of proving a reasonable accommodation was available before employer can be held liable under the statute] with Wysinger v. Automobile Club of Southern California (2007) 157 Cal.App.4th 413, 424–425 [69 Cal.Rptr.3d 1] [jury's finding that no reasonable accommodation was possible is not inconsistent with its finding of liability for refusing to engage in interactive process] and Claudio v. Regents of the University of California (2005) 134 Cal.App.4th 224, 243 [35 Cal.Rptr.3d 837]; see Scotch v. Art Institute of California (2009) 173 Cal.App.4th 986, 1018–1019 [93 Cal.Rptr.3d 338] [attempting to reconcile conflict].)

Do not include the transitional language following question 8 and question 9 if the only damages claimed are also claimed under Government Code section 12940(m) on reasonable accommodation. Use CACI No. VF-2509, Disability Discrimination—Reasonable Accommodation, or CACI No. VF-2510, Disability Discrimination—Reasonable Accommodation—Affirmative Defense—Undue Hardship, to claim these damages.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 9 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2514. Failure to Prevent Harassment, Discrimination, or Retaliation

---

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of defendant] fail to take all reasonable steps to prevent the [harassment/discrimination/retaliation]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Was [name of defendant]'s failure to prevent the [harassment/discrimination/retaliation] a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

   [a. Past economic loss

   [lost earnings $_____]

   [lost profits $_____]

   [medical expenses $_____]

   [other past economic loss $_____]

   Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

   [b. Future economic loss

   [lost earnings $_____]

   [lost profits $_____]

   [medical expenses $_____]

   [other future economic loss $_____]

   Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

   [c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

   [d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New June 2010; Revised December 2010, June 2013, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2527, Failure to Prevent Harassment, Discrimination, or Retaliation—Essential Factual Elements—Employer or Entity Defendant. These questions should be added to the verdict form that addresses the underlying claim of discrimination, retaliation, or harassment if the plaintiff also asserts a separate claim against the employer for failure to prevent the underlying conduct. The jury should not reach these questions unless it finds that the underlying claim is proved.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 3 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2515. Limitation on Remedies—Same Decision

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of defendant] an [employer/[other covered entity]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Was [name of plaintiff] [an employee of [name of defendant]/an applicant to [name of defendant] for a job/[other covered relationship to defendant]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of defendant] [discharge/refuse to hire/[other adverse employment action]] [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was [name of plaintiff]'s [protected status or activity] a substantial motivating reason for [name of defendant]'s [discharge of/refusal to hire/[other adverse employment action]] [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Was [specify employer's stated legitimate reason, e.g., plaintiff's poor job performance] also a substantial motivating reason for [name of defendant]'s [discharge/refusal to hire/[other adverse employment action]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, skip question 6 and answer question 7.

6. Would [name of defendant] have [discharged/refused to hire/[other* adverse employment action]] [name of plaintiff] anyway at that time based on [e.g., plaintiff's poor job performance] had [name of defendant] not also been substantially motivated by [discrimination/retaliation]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is no, then answer question 7. If you answered yes, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. Was [name of defendant]'s [discharge/refusal to hire/[other adverse employment action]] a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 7 is yes, then answer question 8. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

8. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New December 2013; Revised December 2015, December 2016, May 2020, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2512, Limitation of Damages—Same Decision. It incorporates questions from VF-2500, Disparate Treatment, and VF-2504, Retaliation, to guide the jury through the evaluation of the employer's purported legitimate reason for the adverse employment action.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

Question 5 asks the jury to determine whether the employer's stated legitimate reason actually was a motivating reason for the adverse action. In this way, the jury evaluates the employer's reason once. If it finds that it was an actual motivating reason, it then proceeds to question 6 to consider whether the employer has proved "same decision," that is, that it would have taken the adverse employment action anyway for the legitimate reason, even though it may have also had a discriminatory or retaliatory motivation. If the jury answers "no" to question 5 it then proceeds to consider substantial-factor causation of harm and damages in questions 7 and 8.

Relationships other than employer/employee can be substituted in question 2, as in element 2 in CACI No. 2500.

Modify question 4 if the plaintiff was not actually a member of the protected class, but alleges discrimination because the plaintiff was perceived to be a member, or associated with someone who was or was perceived to be a member, of the protected class. (See Gov. Code, § 12926(o).)

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 8 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest.

This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2516–VF-2599. Reserved for Future Use

Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions

CACI*

* Pronounced "Casey"

As approved at the Judicial Council's Rules Committee October 2024 Meeting and Judicial Council November 2024 Meeting

2

Judicial Council of California

Series 2600–5000

Judicial Council of California
Advisory Committee on Civil Jury Instructions

Hon. Adrienne M. Grover, Chair

LexisNexis Matthew Bender
Official Publisher

QUESTIONS ABOUT THIS PUBLICATION?

For questions about the Editorial Content appearing in these volumes or reprint permission, please call or email:

Paul A. Ernest, J.D. at ..... (971) 270-8766
Email: ..... paul.ernest@lexisnexis.com

For assistance with replacement pages, shipments, billing or other customer service matters, please call:

Customer Services Department at . . . . . (800) 833-9844
Outside the United States and Canada, please call . . . . . (518) 487-3385
Fax Number . . . . . (800) 828-8341
LexisNexis® Support Center . . . . . https://supportcenter.lexisnexis.com/app/home/

For information on other Matthew Bender publications, please call

Your account manager or . . . . . (800) 223-1940
Outside the United States and Canada, please call . . . . . (518) 487-3385

ISSN: 1549-7100
ISBN: 978-1-6633-9023-3 (print)

CITE THIS PUBLICATION: Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (2025 edition)
Cite these instructions: "CACI No. _____."
Cite these verdict forms: "CACI No. VF-_____."

Editorial Office
230 Park Ave., 7th Floor, New York, NY 10169 (800) 543-6862
www.lexisnexis.com

(12/2024–Pub.1283)

Table of Contents
Volume 1

Volume 2

Volume 1 Table of Contents

Volume 2 Table of Contents

SERIES 3200 SONG-BEVERLY CONSUMER WARRANTY ACT

CALIFORNIA FAMILY RIGHTS ACT

2600. Violation of CFRA Rights—Essential Factual Elements

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] [refused to grant [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] [family care/medical] leave] [refused to return [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] to the same or a comparable job when [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] [family care/medical] leave ended] [other violation of CFRA rights]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] was eligible for [family care/medical] leave;

2. That [name of plaintiff] [requested/took] leave [insert one of the following:]

   [for the birth of [*name of plaintiff]'s child or bonding with the child;]

   [for the placement of a child with [*name of plaintiff] for adoption or foster care;]

   [to care for [*name of plaintiff]'s [child/parent/spouse/domestic partner/grandparent/grandchild/sibling] who had a serious health condition;]

   [to care for an individual designated by [*name of plaintiff] [who is a blood relative/whose association to [name of plaintiff] is equivalent to a family relationship] who had a serious health condition;]

   [for [*name of plaintiff]'s own serious health condition that made [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] unable to perform the functions of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] job with [name of defendant];]

   [for [*specify qualifying military exigency related to covered active duty or call to covered active duty of a spouse, domestic partner, child, or parent, e.g., [name of plaintiff]'s spouse's upcoming military deployment on short notice];]

3. That [name of plaintiff] provided reasonable notice to [name of defendant] of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] need for [family care/medical] leave, including its expected timing and length. [If [name of defendant] notified [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] employees that 30 days' advance notice was required before the leave was to begin, then [name of plaintiff] must show that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] gave that notice or, if 30 days' notice was not reasonably possible under the circumstances, that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] gave notice as soon as possible];

4. That [name of defendant] [refused to grant [name of plaintiff]'s request for [family care/medical] leave/refused to return [name of plaintiff] to the same or a comparable job when [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] [family care/medical] leave ended/other violation of CFRA rights];
5. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
6. That [name of defendant]'s [decision/conduct] was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003; Revised October 2008, May 2021, May 2023

Directions for Use

This instruction is intended for use when an employee claims violation of the CFRA (Gov. Code, § 12945.1 et seq.). In addition to a qualifying employer's refusal to grant CFRA leave, CFRA violations include failure to provide benefits as required by CFRA and loss of seniority.

In the fourth bracketed option of element 2, if the plaintiff's relationship or association with the designated individual is contested, select either a blood relative or an associated person, or both, as applicable. (Gov. Code, § 12945.2(b)(2).) Omit both options if the plaintiff's relationship or association with the designated individual is not contested.

The second-to-last bracketed option in element 2 does not include leave taken for disability on account of pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions. (Gov. Code, § 12945.2(b)(5)(C).) If there is a dispute concerning the existence of a "serious health condition," the court must instruct the jury as to the meaning of this term. (See Gov. Code, § 12945.2(b)(13).) If there is no dispute concerning the relevant individual's condition qualifying as a "serious health condition," it is appropriate for the judge to instruct the jury that the condition qualifies as a "serious health condition."

The last bracketed option in element 2 requires a qualifying exigency for military family leave related to the covered active duty or call to covered active duty of the employee's spouse, domestic partner, child, or parent in the Armed Forces of the United States. That phrase is defined in the Unemployment Insurance Code. (See Unemp. Ins. Code, § 3302.2.)

Give the bracketed sentence under element 3 only if the facts involve an expected birth, placement for adoption, or planned medical treatment, and there is evidence that the employer required 30 days' advance notice of leave. (See Cal. Code Regs., tit. 2, § 11091(a)(2).)

Sources and Authority

- California Family Rights Act. Government Code section 12945.2.
- "Designated Person" Defined. Government Code section 12945.2(b)(2).

- "Employer" Defined. Government Code section 12945.2(b)(4).
- "Parent" Defined. Government Code section 12945.2(b)(11) (Assem. Bill 1033; Stats. 2021, ch. 327) [adding parent-in-law to the definition of parent].
- "Serious Health Condition" Defined. Government Code section 12945.2(b)(13).
- "An employee who takes CFRA leave is guaranteed that taking such leave will not result in a loss of job security or other adverse employment actions. Upon an employee's timely return from CFRA leave, an employer must generally restore the employee to the same or a comparable position. An employer is not required to reinstate an employee who cannot perform her job duties after the expiration of a protected medical leave." (Rogers v. County of Los Angeles (2011) 198 Cal.App.4th 480, 487 [130 Cal.Rptr.3d 350], footnote and internal citations omitted, superseded on other grounds by statute.)
- "A CFRA interference claim ' "consists of the following elements: (1) the employee's entitlement to CFRA leave rights; and (2) the employer's interference with or denial of those rights." ' " (Soria v. Univision Radio Los Angeles, Inc. (2016) 5 Cal.App.5th 570, 601 [210 Cal.Rptr.3d 59].)
- "[C]ourts have distinguished between two theories of recovery under the CFRA and the FMLA. 'Interference' claims prevent employers from wrongly interfering with employees' approved leaves of absence, and 'retaliation' or 'discrimination' claims prevent employers from terminating or otherwise taking action against employees because they exercise those rights." (Richey v. AutoNation, Inc. (2015) 60 Cal.4th 909, 920 [182 Cal. Rptr. 3d 644, 341 P.3d 438].)
- "An interference claim under CFRA does not invoke the burden shifting analysis of the McDonnell Douglas test. Rather, such a claim requires only that the employer deny the employee's entitlement to CFRA-qualifying leave. A CFRA interference claim 'consists of the following elements: (1) the employee's entitlement to CFRA leave rights; and (2) the employer's interference with or denial of those rights.' " (Moore v. Regents of University of California (2016) 248 Cal.App.4th 216, 250 [206 Cal.Rptr.3d 841], internal citations omitted.)
- "The right to reinstatement is unwaivable but not unlimited." (Richey, supra, 60 Cal.4th at p. 919.)
- "It is not enough that [plaintiff's] mother had a serious health condition. [Plaintiff's] participation to provide care for her mother had to be 'warranted' during a 'period of treatment or supervision . . . .' " (Pang v. Beverly Hospital, Inc. (2000) 79 Cal.App.4th 986, 995 [94 Cal.Rptr.2d 643], internal citation and footnote omitted.)
- "[T]he relevant inquiry is whether a serious health condition made [plaintiff] unable to do her job at defendant's hospital, not her ability to do her essential job functions 'generally' . . . ." (Lonicki v. Sutter Health Central (2008) 43 Cal.4th 201, 214 [74 Cal.Rptr.3d 570, 180 P.3d 321].)

Secondary Sources

8 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Constitutional Law, §§ 1060,

1061

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 12-A, Overview Of Key Statutes, ¶ 12:32 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 12-B, Family And Medical Leave Act (FMLA)/California Family Rights Act (CFRA), ¶¶ 12:146, 12:390, 12:421, 12:857, 12:1201, 12:1300 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Other Employee Rights Statutes, §§ 4.18–4.20

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 8, Leaves of Absence, §§ 8.25[2], 8.30[1], [2], 8.31[2], 8.32 (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.32[6][a], [b] (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation § 5:40 (Thomson Reuters)

2601. Eligibility

To show that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was eligible for [family care/medical] leave, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] was an employee of [name of defendant];

[2. That [name of defendant] directly employed five or more employees for a wage or salary;]

3. That at the time [name of plaintiff] [requested/began] leave, [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] had more than 12 months of service with [name of defendant] and had worked at least 1,250 hours for [name of defendant] during the previous 12 months; and

4. That at the time [name of plaintiff] [requested/began] leave [name of plaintiff] had taken no more than 12 weeks of family care or medical leave in the 12-month period [define period].

New September 2003; Revised June 2011, May 2021

Directions for Use

The CFRA applies to employers who directly employ five or more employees (and to the state and any political or civil subdivision of the state and cities of any size). (Gov. Code, § 12945.2(b)(4).) Include element 2 only if there is a factual dispute about the number of people the defendant directly employed for a wage or salary.

Sources and Authority

- Right to Family Care and Medical Leave. Government Code section 12945.2(a).

Secondary Sources

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 12-A, Overview of Key Leave Laws, ¶ 12:32 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 12-B, Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA)/California Family Rights Act (CFRA), ¶¶ 12:87, 12:125, 12:390, 12:421, 12:1201, 12:1300 (The Rutter Group)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.32[6][c] (Matthew Bender)

2602. Reasonable Notice by Employee of Need for CFRA Leave

For notice of the need for leave to be reasonable, [name of plaintiff] must make [name of defendant] aware that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] needs [family care/medical] leave, when the leave will begin, and how long it is expected to last. The notice can be verbal or in writing and does not need to mention the law. An employer cannot require disclosure of any medical diagnosis, but should ask for information necessary to decide whether the employee is entitled to leave.

New September 2003; Revised May 2021

Sources and Authority

- Reasonable Notice Required. Government Code section 12945.2(g).
- Additional Requirements. Government Code section 12945.2(h)–(j).
- CFRA Notice Requirements. California Code of Regulations, title 2, section 11091.
- "In enacting CFRA 'the Legislature expressly delegated to [California's Fair Employment and Housing] Commission the task of "adopt[ing] a regulation specifying the elements of a reasonable request" for CFRA leave.' The regulation adopted by the commission provides, in part, to request CFRA leave an employee 'shall provide at least verbal notice sufficient to make the employer aware that the employee needs CFRA leave, and the anticipated timing and duration of the leave. The employee need not expressly assert rights under CFRA or FMLA, or even mention CFRA or FMLA, to meet the notice requirement; however, the employee must state the reason the leave is needed, such as, for example, the expected birth of a child or for medical treatment. . . . The employer should inquire further of the employee if necessary to determine whether the employee is requesting CFRA leave and to obtain necessary information concerning the leave (i.e., commencement date, expected duration, and other permissible information).' The regulation further provides, 'Under all circumstances, it is the employer's responsibility to designate leave, paid or unpaid, as CFRA or CFRA/FMLA qualifying, based on information provided by the employee . . . , and to give notice of the designation to the employee.' " (Soria v. Univision Radio Los Angeles, Inc. (2016) 5 Cal.App.5th 570, 602–603 [210 Cal.Rptr.3d 59], quoting Cal. Code Regs., tit. 2, § 11091(a)(1), internal citations omitted.)
- "The employee must 'provide at least verbal notice sufficient to make the employer aware that the employee needs CFRA-qualifying leave, and the anticipated timing and duration of the leave. The employer in turn is charged with responding to the leave request "as soon as practicable and in any event no later than ten calendar days after receiving the request.' " (Olofsson v. Mission Linen Supply (2012) 211 Cal.App.4th 1236, 1241 [150 Cal.Rptr.3d 446], internal citations omitted.)

- "[Cal. Code Regs., tit. 2, § 11091(a)(1)] appears to presume the existence of circumstances in which an employee is able to provide an employer with notice of the need for leave. Indeed, the regulation permits employers to 'require that employees provide at least 30 days' advance notice before CFRA leave is to begin if the need for the leave is foreseeable based on an expected birth, placement for adoption or foster care, or planned medical treatment for a serious health condition of the employee or a family member.' However, the regulations provide that this 30-day general rule is inapplicable when the need for medical leave is not foreseeable: 'If 30 days' notice is not practicable, such as because of a lack of knowledge of approximately when leave will be required to begin, a change in circumstances, or a medical emergency, notice must be given as soon as practicable.' Further, '[a]n employer shall not deny a CFRA leave, the need for which is an emergency or is otherwise unforeseeable, on the basis that the employee did not provide advance notice of the need for the leave, so long as the employee provided notice to the employer as soon as practicable.' " (Bareno v. San Diego Community College Dist. (2017) 7 Cal.App.5th 546, 563 [212 Cal.Rptr.3d 682], original italics; see Cal. Code Regs. tit. 2, § 11091(a)(2)–(4).)
- "When viewed as a whole, it is clear that CFRA and its implementing regulations envision a scheme in which employees are provided reasonable time within which to request leave for a qualifying purpose, and to provide the supporting certification to demonstrate that the requested leave was, in fact, for a qualifying purpose, particularly when the need for leave is not foreseeable or when circumstances have changed subsequent to an initial request for leave." (Bareno, supra, 7 Cal.App.5th at p. 565.)
- "[A]n employer bears a burden, under CFRA, to inquire further if an employee presents the employer with a CFRA-qualifying reason for requesting leave." (Moore v. Regents of University of California (2016) 248 Cal.App.4th 216, 249 [206 Cal.Rptr.3d 841].)
- "Whether notice is sufficient under CFRA is a question of fact." (Soria, supra, 5 Cal.App.5th at p. 603.)
- "That plaintiff called in sick was, by itself, insufficient to put [defendant] on notice that he needed CFRA leave for a serious health condition." (Avila v. Continental Airlines, Inc. (2008) 165 Cal.App.4th 1237, 1255 [82 Cal.Rptr.3d 440].)
- "The regulations thus expressly contemplate that an employee may be out on CFRA-protected leave prior to providing medical certification regarding that leave." (Bareno, supra, 7 Cal.App.5th at p. 568, original italics; see Cal. Code Regs., tit. 2, § 11091(b)(3).)
- "CFRA establishes that a certification issued by an employee's health provider is sufficient if it includes '[t]he date on which the serious health condition commenced'; '[t]he probable duration of the condition'; and '[a] statement that, due to the serious health condition, the employee is unable to perform the function of his or her position.' " (Bareno, supra, 7 Cal.App.5th at pp. 569–570.)

- "[A]n employee need not share his or her medical condition with the employer, and a certification need not include such information to be considered sufficient: 'For medical leave for the employee's own serious health condition, this certification need not, but may, at the employee's option, identify the serious health condition involved.' " (Bareno, supra, 7 Cal.App.5th at p. 570, fn. 18, original italics.)
- "Under the CFRA regulations, the employer has a duty to respond to the leave request within 10 days, but clearly and for good reason the law does not specify that the response must be tantamount to approval or denial." (Olofsson, supra, 211 Cal.App.4th at p. 1249.)

Secondary Sources

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 12-B, Family And Medical Leave Act (FMLA)/California Family Rights Act (CFRA), ¶¶ 12:852–12:853, 12:855–12:857 (The Rutter Group)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.32[6][e] (Matthew Bender)

2603. "Comparable Job" Explained

"Comparable job" means a job that is the same or close to the employee's former job in responsibilities, duties, pay, benefits, working conditions, and schedule. It must be at the same location or a similar geographic location.

New September 2003; Revised May 2021

Directions for Use

Give this instruction only if comparable job is an issue under the plaintiff's CFRA claim.

Sources and Authority

- Employment in a Comparable Position. Government Code section 12945.2(b)(6).
- Employment in a Comparable Position. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 2, § 11087(i).
- "[W]hile we will accord great weight and respect to the [Fair Employment and Housing Commission]'s regulations that apply to the necessity for leave, along with any applicable federal FMLA regulations that the Commission incorporated by reference, we still retain ultimate responsibility for construing [CFRA]." (Pang v. Beverly Hospital, Inc. (2000) 79 Cal.App.4th 986, 994–995 [94 Cal.Rptr.2d 643].)

Secondary Sources

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 12-B, Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA)/California Family Rights Act (CFRA),¶¶ 12:1138–12:1139, 12:1150, 12:1154–12:1156 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 8, Leaves of Absence, §§ 8.30, 8.31 (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.32[6][k] (Matthew Bender)

2604–2609. Reserved for Future Use

2610. Affirmative Defense—No Certification From Health Care Provider

---

[*Name of defendant] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] denied [name of plaintiff]'s request for leave because [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] did not provide a health care provider's certification of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] need for leave. To succeed, [name of defendant] must prove both of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] told [name of plaintiff] in writing that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] required written certification from [name of plaintiff]'s health care provider to [grant/extend] leave; and
2. That [name of plaintiff] did not provide [name of defendant] with the required certification from a health care provider [within the time set by [name of defendant] or as soon as reasonably possible].

New September 2003

Directions for Use

The time set by the defendant described in element 2 must be at least 15 days.

Sources and Authority

- Certification of Health Care Provider. Government Code section 12945.2(j).
- Certification of Health Care Provider: Child Care. Government Code section 12945.2(i).
- Certification of Health Care Provider: Return to Work. Government Code section 12945.2(j)(4).
- "Health Care Provider" Defined. Government Code section 12945.2(b)(10).
- Notice and Certification. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 2, § 11088(b).

Secondary Sources

8 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Constitutional Law, § 1058

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 12-B, Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA)/California Family Rights Act (CFRA), ¶¶ 12:311, 12:880, 12:883–12:884, 12:905, 12:915 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 8, Leaves of Absence, § 8.26 (Matthew Bender)

2611. Affirmative Defense—Fitness for Duty Statement

[Name of defendant] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] refused to return [name of plaintiff] to work because [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] did not provide a written statement from [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] health-care provider that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was fit to return to work. To succeed, [name of defendant] must prove both of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] has a uniformly applied practice or policy that requires employees on leave because of their own serious health condition to provide a written statement from their health-care provider that they are able to return to work; and
2. That [name of plaintiff] did not provide [name of defendant] with a written statement from [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] health-care provider of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] fitness to return to work.

New September 2003

Sources and Authority

- Certification on Health Care Provider: Child Care. Government Code section 12945.2(i).
- Certification of Health Care Provider: Return to Work. Government Code section 12945.2(j)(4).
- "Health Care Provider" Defined. Government Code section 12945.2(b)(10).
- Notice and Certification. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 2, § 11088(b).

Secondary Sources

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 12-B, Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA)/California Family Rights Act (CFRA), ¶¶ 12:311, 12:880, 12:884, 12:915 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 8, Leaves of Absence, § 8.28 (Matthew Bender)

2612. Affirmative Defense—Employment Would Have Ceased

[Name of defendant] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] was not required to allow [name of plaintiff] to return to work when [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] [family care/medical] leave was over because [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] employment would have ended for other reasons. To succeed, [name of defendant] must prove both of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] would have [discharged/laid off] [name of plaintiff] if [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] had continued to work during the leave period; and
2. That [name of plaintiff]'s [family care/medical] leave was not a reason for [discharging [him/her/nonbinary pronoun]/laying [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] off].

An employee on [family care/medical] leave has no greater right to the employee's job or to other employment benefits than if that employee had continued working during the leave.

New September 2003; Revised May 2020

Sources and Authority

- Limitations of Right to Reinstatement. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 2, § 11089(c)(1).
- "Section 11089, subdivision (c)(1) states in part: 'An employee has no greater right to reinstatement or to other benefits . . . of employment than if the employee had been continuously employed during the CFRA leave period.' This defense is qualified, however, by the requirement that '[a]n employer has the burden of proving, by a preponderance of the evidence, that an employee would not otherwise have been employed at the time reinstatement is requested in order to deny reinstatement.' " (Richey v. AutoNation, Inc. (2015) 60 Cal.4th 909, 919 [182 Cal. Rptr. 3d 644, 341 P.3d 438].)

Secondary Sources

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 12-B, Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA)/California Family Rights Act (CFRA), ¶¶ 12:1189, 12:1191 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 8, Leaves of Absence, § 8.30[4] (Matthew Bender)

2613–2619. Reserved for Future Use

2620. CFRA Rights Retaliation—Essential Factual Elements (Gov. Code, § 12945.2(k))

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] retaliated against [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] for [[requesting/taking] [family care/medical] leave/[other protected activity]]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] was eligible for [family care/medical] leave;
2. That [name of plaintiff] [[requested/took] [family care/medical] leave/[other protected activity]];
3. That [name of defendant] [discharged/[other adverse employment action]] [name of plaintiff];
4. That [name of plaintiff]'s [[request for/taking of] [family care/medical] leave/[other protected activity]] was a substantial motivating reason for [discharging/[other adverse employment action]] [him/her/nonbinary pronoun];
5. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
6. That [name of defendant]'s retaliatory conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003; Revised December 2012, June 2013, May 2018, May 2021

Directions for Use

Use this instruction in cases of alleged retaliation for an employee's exercise of rights granted by the California Family Rights Act (CFRA). (See Gov. Code, § 12945.2(k).) The instruction assumes that the defendant is plaintiff's present or former employer, and therefore it must be modified if the defendant is a prospective employer or other person.

The "other protected activity" option of the opening paragraph and elements 2 and 4 could be providing information or testimony in an inquiry or a proceeding related to CFRA rights. (Gov. Code, § 12945.2(k).

The CFRA reaches a broad range of adverse employment actions short of actual discharge. (See Gov. Code, § 12945.2(k).) Element 3 may be modified to allege constructive discharge or adverse acts other than actual discharge. See CACI No. 2509, "Adverse Employment Action" Explained, and CACI No. 2510, "Constructive Discharge" Explained, for instructions under the Fair Employment and Housing Act that may be adapted for use with this instruction.

Element 4 uses the term "substantial motivating reason" to express both intent and causation between the employee's exercise of a CFRA right and the adverse employment action. "Substantial motivating reason" has been held to be the appropriate standard under the discrimination prohibitions of the Fair Employment and Housing Act to address the possibility of both discriminatory and nondiscriminatory motives. (See Harris v. City of Santa Monica (2013) 56 Cal.4th 203, 232 [152 Cal.Rptr.3d 392, 294 P.3d 49]; CACI No. 2507, "Substantial Motivating Reason" Explained.) Whether this standard applies to CFRA retaliation cases has not been addressed by the courts.

Sources and Authority

- Retaliation Prohibited Under California Family Rights Act. Government Code section 12945.2(k), (q).
- Retaliation Prohibited Under Fair Employment and Housing Act. Government Code section 12940(h).
- "The elements of a cause of action for retaliation in violation of CFRA are " '(1) the defendant was an employer covered by CFRA; (2) the plaintiff was an employee eligible to take CFRA [leave]; (3) the plaintiff exercised her right to take leave for a qualifying CFRA purpose; and (4) the plaintiff suffered an adverse employment action, such as termination, fine, or suspension, because of her exercise of her right to CFRA [leave]." ' " (Soria v. Univision Radio Los Angeles, Inc. (2016) 5 Cal.App.5th 570, 604 [210 Cal.Rptr.3d 59].)
- "Similar to causes of action under FEHA, the McDonnell Douglas burden shifting analysis applies to retaliation claims under CFRA." (Moore v. Regents of University of California (2016) 248 Cal.App.4th 216, 248 [206 Cal.Rptr.3d 841].)
- " 'When an adverse employment action "follows hard on the heels of protected activity, the timing often is strongly suggestive of retaliation." ' " (Bareno v. San Diego Community College Dist. (2017) 7 Cal.App.5th 546, 571 [212 Cal.Rptr.3d 682].)

Secondary Sources

8 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Constitutional Law, §§ 1058–1060

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 12-B, Family And Medical Leave Act (FMLA)/California Family Rights Act (CFRA), ¶¶ 12:1300, 12:1301 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Other Employee Rights Statutes, §§ 4.18–4.20

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 8, Leaves of Absence, § 8.32 (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.37[3][c] (Matthew Bender)

2621–2699. Reserved for Future Use

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of plaintiff] eligible for family care or medical leave?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of plaintiff] [request/take] leave for the birth of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] child or bonding with the child?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of plaintiff] provide reasonable notice to [name of defendant] of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] need for [family care/medical] leave?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did [name of defendant] [refuse to grant [name of plaintiff]'s request for [family care/medical] leave] [refuse to return [name of plaintiff] to the same or a comparable job when [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] [family care/medical] leave ended] [other violation of CFRA rights]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Was [name of defendant]'s [decision/conduct] a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2600, Violation of CFRA Rights—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

Other factual situations can be substituted in question 2 as in element 2 of CACI No. 2600.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 6 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2601. Violation of CFRA Rights—Affirmative Defense—Employment Would Have Ceased

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of plaintiff] eligible for family care or medical leave?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of plaintiff] [request/take] leave for the birth of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] child or bonding with the child?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of plaintiff] provide reasonable notice to [name of defendant] of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] need for [family care/medical] leave?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did [name of defendant] refuse to return [name of plaintiff] to the same or to a comparable job when [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] [family care/medical] leave ended?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Would [name of defendant] have [discharged/laid off] [name of plaintiff] if [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] had continued to work during the leave period?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is no, then answer question 6. If you answered yes, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Was [name of defendant]'s [decision/conduct] a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2600, Violation of CFRA Rights—Essential Factual Elements, and CACI No. 2612, Affirmative Defense—Employment Would Have Ceased. If a different affirmative defense is at issue, this form should be tailored accordingly.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

Other factual situations can be substituted in question 2 as in element 2 of CACI No. 2600.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 7 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of plaintiff] eligible for family care or medical leave?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of plaintiff] [[request/take] [family care/medical] leave/[other protected activity]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of defendant] [discharge/[other adverse employment action]] [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was [name of plaintiff]'s [[request for/taking] [family care/medical] leave/[other protected activity]] a substantial motivating reason for [name of defendant]'s decision to [discharge/[other adverse employment action]]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Was [name of defendant]'s retaliatory conduct a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

   [a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, June 2013, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2620, CFRA Rights Retaliation—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 6 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2603–VF-2699. Reserved for Future Use

LABOR CODE ACTIONS

2700. Nonpayment of Wages—Essential Factual Elements (Lab. Code, §§ 201, 202, 218)

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] owes [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] unpaid wages. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] performed work for [name of defendant];
2. That [name of defendant] owes [name of plaintiff] wages under the terms of the employment; and
3. The amount of unpaid wages.

"Wages" includes all amounts for labor performed by an employee, whether the amount is calculated by time, task, piece, commission, or some other method.

New September 2003; Revised December 2005, December 2013, June 2015

Directions for Use

This instruction is for use in a civil action for payment of wages. Depending on the allegations in the case, the definition of "wages" may be modified to include additional compensation, such as earned vacation, nondiscretionary bonuses, or severance pay.

Wage and hour claims are governed by two sources of authority: the provisions of the Labor Code and a series of wage orders, adopted by the Industrial Welfare Commission. All of the wage orders define hours worked as "the time during which an employee is subject to the control of an employer, and includes all the time the employee is suffered or permitted to work, whether or not required to do so." (Hernandez v. Pacific Bell Telephone Co. (2018) 29 Cal.App.5th 131, 137 [239 Cal.Rptr.3d 852]; see, e.g., Wage Order 4-2001, subd. 2(K).) The two parts of the definition are independent factors, each of which defines whether certain time spent is compensable as "hours worked." Thus, an employee who is subject to an employer's control does not have to be working during that time to be compensated. (Morillion v. Royal Packing Co. (2000) 22 Cal.4th 575, 582–584 [94 Cal.Rptr.2d 3, 995 P.2d 139].) Courts have identified various factors bearing on an employer's control during on-call time. However, what qualifies as hours worked is a question of law. (Mendiola v. CPS Security Solutions, Inc. (2015) 60 Cal.4th 833, 838–840 [182 Cal.Rptr.3d 124, 340 P.3d 355].) Therefore, the jury should not be instructed on the factors to consider in determining whether the employer has exercised sufficient control over the employee during the contested period to require compensation.

However, the jury should be instructed to find any disputed facts regarding the factors. For example, one factor is whether a fixed time limit for the employee to respond to a call was unduly restrictive. Whether there was a fixed time limit would be a disputed fact for the jury. Whether it was unduly restrictive would be a matter of law for the court.

The court may modify this instruction or write an appropriate instruction if the defendant employer claims a permissible setoff from the plaintiff employee's unpaid wages. Under California Wage Orders, an employer may deduct from an employee's wages for cash shortage, breakage, or loss of equipment if the employer proves that this was caused by a dishonest or willful act or by the gross negligence of the employee. (See, e.g., Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, § 11010, subd. 8.)

Sources and Authority

- Right of Action for Wage Claim. Labor Code section 218.
- Wages Due on Discharge. Labor Code section 201.
- Wages Due on Quitting. Labor Code section 202.
- "Wages" Defined, Labor Code section 200.
- Wages Partially in Dispute. Labor Code section 206(a).
- Deductions From Pay. Labor Code section 221, California Code of Regulations, Title 8, section 11010, subdivision 8.
- Nonapplicability to Government Employers. Labor Code section 220.
- Employer Not Entitled to Release. Labor Code section 206.5.
- Private Agreements Prohibited. Labor Code section 219(a).
- "As an employee, appellant was entitled to the benefit of wage laws requiring an employer to promptly pay all wages due, and prohibiting the employer from deducting unauthorized expenses from the employee's wages, deducting for debts due the employer, or recouping advances absent the parties' express agreement." (Davis v. Farmers Ins. Exchange (2016) 245 Cal.App.4th 1302, 1330 [200 Cal.Rptr.3d 315].)
- "The Labor Code's protections are 'designed to ensure that employees receive their full wages at specified intervals while employed, as well as when they are fired or quit,' and are applicable not only to hourly employees, but to highly compensated executives and salespeople." (Davis, supra, 245 Cal.App.4th at p. 1331, internal citation omitted.)
- "[W]ages include not just salaries earned hourly, but also bonuses, profit-sharing plans, and commissions." (Davis, supra, 245 Cal.App.4th at p. 1332, fn. 20.)
- "The Industrial Welfare Commission (IWC) was created in 1913 with express authority to adopt regulations—called wage orders—governing wages, hours, and working conditions in the state of California. These wage orders, being the product of quasi-legislative rulemaking under a broad delegation of legislative power, are entitled to great deference, and they have the dignity and force of statutory law." (Stoetzl v. Department of Human Resources (2019) 7 Cal.5th 718, 724–725 [248 Cal.Rptr.3d 891, 443 P.3d 924], internal citations omitted.)

- "The two phrases of the definition—'time during which an employee is subject to the control of an employer' and 'time the employee is suffered or permitted to work, whether or not required to do so'—establish independent factors that each define 'hours worked.' 'Thus, an employee who is subject to an employer's control does not have to be working during that time to be compensated under [the applicable wage order].' The time an employee is ' "suffered or permitted to work, whether or not required to do so," ' includes time the employee is working but not under the employer's control, such as unauthorized overtime, provided the employer has knowledge of it." (Hernandez, supra, 29 Cal.App.5th at p. 137, internal citations omitted.)
- "[A]n employee's on-call or standby time may require compensation." (Mendiola, supra, 60 Cal.4th at p. 840.)
- " '[T]he standard of "suffered or permitted to work" is met when an employee is engaged in certain tasks or exertion that a manager would recognize as work. Mere transportation of tools, which does not add time or exertion to a commute, does not meet this standard.' We agree with this construction of the 'suffer or permit to work' test." (Hernandez, supra, 29 Cal.App.5th at p. 142, internal citation omitted.)
- "[Labor Code] section 221 has long been held to prohibit deductions from an employee's wages for cash shortages, breakage, loss of equipment, and other business losses that may result from the employee's simple negligence." (Hudgins v. Neiman Marcus Group, Inc. (1995) 34 Cal.App.4th 1109, 1118 [41 Cal.Rptr.2d 46].)
- "[A]n employer is not entitled to a setoff of debts owing it by an employee against any wages due that employee." (Barnhill v. Robert Saunders & Co. (1981) 125 Cal.App.3d 1, 6 [177 Cal.Rptr. 803].)
- "In light of the wage order's remedial purpose requiring a liberal construction, its directive to compensate employees for all time worked, the evident priority it accorded that mandate notwithstanding customary employment arrangements, and its concern with small amounts of time, we conclude that the de minimis doctrine has no application under the circumstances presented here. An employer that requires its employees to work minutes off the clock on a regular basis or as a regular feature of the job may not evade the obligation to compensate the employee for that time by invoking the de minimis doctrine." (Troester v. Starbucks Corp. 5 Cal.5th 829, 847 [235 Cal.Rptr.3d 820, 421 P.3d 1114].)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, §§ 437–439

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch.1-A, Background, ¶ 1:22 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 11-B, Coverage And Exemptions—In General, ¶ 11:121 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch.11-D, Payment Of Wages, ¶¶ 11:456, 11:470, 11:470.1, 11:512–11:514 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch.11-J, Enforcing California Laws Regulating Employee Compensation, ¶ 11:1459 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 5, Administrative and Judicial Remedies Under Wage and Hour Laws, § 5.40 (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, §§ 250.13[1][a], 250.40[3][a], 250.65 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation §§ 4:67, 4:75 (Thomson Reuters)

2701. Nonpayment of Minimum Wage—Essential Factual Elements (Lab. Code, § 1194)

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] owes [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] the difference between the wages paid by [name of defendant] and the wages [name of plaintiff] should have been paid according to the minimum wage rate required by state law. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] performed work for [name of defendant];
2. That [name of plaintiff] was paid less than the minimum wage by [name of defendant] for some or all hours worked; and
3. The amount of wages owed.

The minimum wage for labor performed from [*beginning date] to [ending date] was [minimum wage rate] per hour.

An employee is entitled to be paid the legal minimum wage rate even if the employee agrees to work for a lower wage.

New September 2003; Revised June 2005, June 2014, June 2015, May 2020

Directions for Use

The court must determine the prevailing minimum wage rate from applicable state or federal law. (See, e.g., Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, § 11000.) The jury must be instructed accordingly.

Both liquidated damages (See Lab. Code, § 1194.2) and civil penalties (See Lab. Code, § 1197.1) may be awarded on a claim for nonpayment of minimum wage.

Wage and hour claims are governed by two sources of authority: the provisions of the Labor Code and a series of 18 wage orders, adopted by the Industrial Welfare Commission. (See Mendiola v. CPS Security Solutions, Inc. (2015) 60 Cal.4th 833, 838 [182 Cal.Rptr.3d 124, 340 P.3d 355].) The California Labor Code and the IWC's wage orders provide that certain employees are exempt from minimum wage requirements (for example, outside salespersons; see Lab. Code, § 1171), and that under certain circumstances employers may claim credits for meals and lodging against minimum wage pay (see Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, § 11000, subd. 3, § 11010, subd. 10, and § 11150, subd. 10(B)). The assertion of an exemption from wage and hour laws is an affirmative defense. (See generally Ramirez v. Yosemite Water Co. (1999) 20 Cal.4th 785, 794 [85 Cal.Rptr.2d 844, 978 P.2d 2].) The advisory committee has chosen not to write model instructions for the numerous fact-specific affirmative defenses to minimum wage claims. (Cf. CACI No. 2720, Affirmative Defense—Nonpayment of Overtime—Executive Exemption, and CACI No. 2721, Affirmative Defense—Nonpayment of Overtime—Administrative Exemption.)

Sources and Authority

- Employee Right to Recover Minimum Wage or Overtime Compensation. Labor Code section 1194(a).
- Recovery of Liquidated Damages. Labor Code section 1194.2.
- Civil Penalties, Restitution and Liquidated Damages. Labor Code section 1197.1(a).
- "Wages" Defined. Labor Code section 200.
- Payment of Uncontested Wages Required. Labor Code section 206(a).
- Action by Department to Recover Unpaid Minimum Wage or Overtime Compensation. Labor Code section 1193.6(a).
- Duties of Industrial Welfare Commission. Labor Code section 1173.
- "Labor Code section 1194 accords an employee a statutory right to recover unpaid wages from an employer who fails to pay the minimum wage." (Flowers v. Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority (2015) 243 Cal.App.4th 66, 74 [196 Cal.Rptr.3d 352].)
- "Labor Code section 1194 does not define the employment relationship nor does it specify who may be liable for unpaid wages. Specific employers and employees become subject to the minimum wage requirements only through and under the terms of wage orders promulgated by the IWC, the agency formerly authorized to regulate working conditions in California." (Flowers, supra, 243 Cal.App.4th at p. 74.)
- "The provision of board, lodging or other facilities may sometimes be considered in determining whether an employer has met minimum wage requirements for nonexempt employees." (Kao v. Holiday (2017) 12 Cal.App.5th 947, 958 [219 Cal.Rptr.3d 580], original italics.)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, §§ 417–421, 437–439

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 11-B, Coverage And Exemptions—In General, ¶ 11:121 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 11-D, Payment of Wages, ¶¶ 11:456, 11:513, 11:545 11:547 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 11-F, Payment of Overtime Compensation, ¶ 11:730 et seq. (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 11-J, Enforcing California Laws Regulating Employee Compensation, ¶¶ 11:1342, 11:1478.5 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 2, Minimum Wages, §§ 2.02[1], 2.03[1], 2.04[1], 2.05[1]; Ch. 5, Administrative and Judicial Remedies Under Wage and Hour Laws, § 5.72 (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, §§ 250.13[1][a], 250.14[d] (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation §§ 4:67, 4:76 (Thomson Reuters)

2702. Nonpayment of Overtime Compensation—Essential Factual Elements (Lab. Code, § 1194)

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] owes [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] overtime pay as required by state law. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] performed work for [name of defendant];
2. That [name of plaintiff] worked overtime hours;
3. That [name of defendant] knew or should have known that [name of plaintiff] had worked overtime hours;
4. That [name of plaintiff] was [not paid/paid less than the overtime rate] for some or all of the overtime hours worked; and
5. The amount of overtime pay owed.

Overtime hours are the hours worked longer than [*insert applicable definition(s) of overtime hours].

Overtime pay is [*insert applicable formula].

An employee is entitled to be paid the legal overtime pay rate even if the employee agrees to work for a lower rate.

New September 2003; Revised June 2005, June 2014, June 2015, May 2020, November 2021

Directions for Use

The court must determine the overtime compensation rate under applicable state or federal law. (See, e.g., Lab. Code, §§ 1173, 1182; Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, § 11000, subd. 2, § 11010, subd. 4(A), and § 11150, subd. 4(A).) If an employee earns a flat sum bonus during a pay period, under state law the overtime pay rate is calculated using the actual number of nonovertime hours worked by the employee during the pay period. (Alvarado v. Dart Container Corp. of California (2018) 4 Cal.5th 542, 573 [229 Cal.Rptr.3d 347, 411 P.3d 528].) The jury must be instructed on the applicable overtime pay formula. It is possible that the overtime rate will be different over different periods of time.

Wage and hour claims are governed by two sources of authority: the provisions of the Labor Code, and a series of 18 wage orders adopted by the Industrial Welfare Commission. (See Mendiola v. CPS Security Solutions, Inc. (2014) 60 Cal.4th 833, 838 [182 Cal.Rptr.3d 124, 340 P.3d 355].) Both the Labor Code and the IWC wage orders provide for certain exemptions from overtime laws. (See, e.g., Lab. Code, § 1171 [outside salespersons are exempt from overtime requirements]). The assertion of an employee's exemption is an affirmative defense, which presents a mixed question of law and fact. (Ramirez v. Yosemite Water Co. (1999) 20 Cal.4th 785, 794 [85 Cal.Rptr.2d 844, 978 P.2d 2].) For instructions on exemptions, see CACI No. 2720, Affirmative Defense—Nonpayment of Overtime—Executive Exemption, and CACI No. 2721, Affirmative Defense—Nonpayment of Overtime—Administrative Exemption.

Sources and Authority

- Employee Right to Recover Minimum Wage or Overtime Compensation. Labor Code section 1194(a).
- Recovery of Liquidated Damages. Labor Code section 1194.2.
- "Wages" Defined. Labor Code section 200.
- Payment of Uncontested Wages Required. Labor Code section 206(a).
- What Hours Worked Are Overtime. Labor Code section 510.
- Rate of Compensation. Labor Code section 515(d).
- Action by Department to Recover Unpaid Minimum Wage or Overtime Compensation. Labor Code section 1193.6(a).
- "[T]he assertion of an exemption from the overtime laws is considered to be an affirmative defense, and therefore the employer bears the burden of proving the employee's exemption." (Ramirez, supra, 20 Cal.4th at pp. 794–795.)
- "[W]here an employer has no knowledge that an employee is engaging in overtime work and that employee fails to notify the employer or deliberately prevents the employer from acquiring knowledge of the overtime work, the employer's failure to pay for the overtime hours is not a violation . . . ." (Jong v. Kaiser Foundation Health Plan, Inc. (2014) 226 Cal.App.4th 391, 395 [171 Cal.Rptr.3d 874] [applying rule under federal Fair Labor Standards Act to claims under California Labor Code].)
- "[A]n employer's actual or constructive knowledge of the hours its employees work is an issue of fact . . . ." (Jong, supra, 226 Cal.App.4th at p. 399.)
- "The question whether [plaintiff] was an outside salesperson within the meaning of applicable statutes and regulations is . . . a mixed question of law and fact." (Ramirez, supra, 20 Cal.4th at p. 794.)
- "The FLSA [federal Fair Labor Standards Act] requires overtime pay only if an employee works more than 40 hours per week, regardless of the number of hours worked during any one day. California law, codified at Labor Code section 510, is more stringent and requires overtime compensation for '[a]ny work in excess of eight hours in one workday and any work in excess of 40 hours in any one workweek.' " (Flowers v. Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority (2015) 243 Cal.App.4th 66, 83 [196 Cal.Rptr.3d 352], internal citation omitted.)
- "We conclude that the flat sum bonus at issue here should be factored into an employee's regular rate of pay by dividing the amount of the bonus by the total number of nonovertime hours actually worked during the relevant pay period and using 1.5, not 0.5, as the multiplier for determining the employee's overtime pay rate." (Alvarado, supra, 4 Cal.5th at p. 573.)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, §§ 417, 420, 421, 437, 438, 439

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 11-D, Payment Of Wages, ¶¶ 11:456, 11:470.1 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 11-F, Payment Of Overtime Compensation, ¶¶ 11:730, 11:955 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 11-J, Enforcing California Laws Regulating Employee Compensation, ¶¶ 11:1342, 11:1478.5 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 3, Overtime Compensation and Regulation of Hours Worked, §§ 3.03[1], 3.04[1], 3.07[1], 3.08[1], 3.09[1]; Ch. 5, Administrative and Judicial Remedies Under Wage and Hour Laws, § 5.72 (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, § 250.40 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation, §§ 4:67, 4:76 (Thomson Reuters)

2703. Nonpayment of Overtime Compensation—Proof of Overtime Hours Worked

---

State law requires California employers to keep payroll records showing the hours worked by and wages paid to employees.

If [*name of defendant] did not keep accurate records of the hours worked by [name of plaintiff], then [name of plaintiff] may prove the number of overtime hours worked by making a reasonable estimate of those hours.

In determining the amount of overtime hours worked, you may consider [*name of plaintiff]'s estimate of the number of overtime hours worked and any evidence presented by [name of defendant] that [name of plaintiff]'s estimate is unreasonable.

New September 2003; Revised June 2005, December 2005, November 2019

Directions for Use

This instruction is intended for use when a nonexempt employee plaintiff is unable to provide evidence of the precise number of hours worked because of the employer's failure to keep accurate payroll records. (See Hernandez v. Mendoza (1988) 199 Cal.App.3d 721, 727–728 [245 Cal.Rptr. 36].)

Sources and Authority

- Right of Action for Unpaid Overtime. Labor Code section 1194(a).
- Employer Duty to Keep Payroll Records. Labor Code section 1174(d).
- "[W]here the employer has failed to keep records required by statute, the consequences for such failure should fall on the employer, not the employee. In such a situation, imprecise evidence by the employee can provide a sufficient basis for damages." (Furry v. East Bay Publishing, LLC (2018) 30 Cal.App.5th 1072, 1079 [242 Cal.Rptr.3d 144].)
- "[W]here the employer has failed to keep records required by statute, the consequences for such failure should fall on the employer, not the employee. In such a situation, imprecise evidence by the employee can provide a sufficient basis for damages." (Furry v. East Bay Publishing, LLC (2018) 30 Cal.App.5th 1072, 1079 [242 Cal.Rptr.3d 144].)
- "Although the employee has the burden of proving that he performed work for which he was not compensated, public policy prohibits making that burden an impossible hurdle for the employee. . . . 'In such situation . . . an employee has carried out his burden if he proves that he has in fact performed work for which he was improperly compensated and if he produces sufficient evidence to show the amount and extent of that work as a matter of just and reasonable inference. The burden then shifts to the employer to come forward with evidence of the precise amount of work performed or with evidence to negative the reasonableness of the inference to be drawn from the employee's evidence. If the employer fails to produce such evidence, the court may then award damages to the employee, even though the result be only approximate.' " (Hernandez, supra, 199 Cal.App.3d at p. 727, internal citation omitted.)

- "Once an employee shows that he performed work for which he was not paid, the fact of damage is certain; the only uncertainty is the amount of damage. [Citation.] In such a case, it would be a perversion of justice to deny all relief to the injured person, thereby relieving the wrongdoer from making any restitution for his wrongful act." (Furry, supra, 30 Cal.App.5th at p. 1080, original italics.)
- "That [plaintiff] had to draw his time estimates from memory was no basis to completely deny him relief." (Furry, supra, 30 Cal.App.5th at p. 1081.)
- "It is the trier of fact's duty to draw whatever reasonable inferences it can from the employee's evidence where the employer cannot provide accurate information." (Hernandez, supra, 199 Cal.App.3d at p. 728, internal citation omitted.)
- "Absent an explicit, mutual wage agreement, a fixed salary does not serve to compensate an employee for the number of hours worked under statutory overtime requirements. . . . [¶] Since there was no evidence of a wage agreement between the parties that appellant's . . . per week compensation represented the payment of minimum wage or included remuneration for hours worked in excess of 40 hours per week, . . . appellant incurred damages of uncompensated overtime." (Hernandez, supra, 199 Cal.App.3d at pp. 725–726, internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 11-D, Payment of Wages, ¶ 11:456 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 11-F, Payment of Overtime Compensation, ¶ 11:955 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 11-J, Enforcing California Laws Regulating Employee Compensation, ¶ 11:1478.5 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 5, Administrative and Judicial Remedies Under Wage and Hour Laws, § 5.72[1] (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, § 250.40 (Matthew Bender)

2704. Waiting-Time Penalty for Nonpayment of Wages (Lab. Code, §§ 203, 218)

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] is entitled to recover a penalty based on [name of defendant]'s failure to pay [his/her/ *nonbinary pronoun] [wages/insert other claim] when due after [name of plaintiff]'s employment ended. [Name of defendant] was required to pay [name of plaintiff] all wages owed [on the date that/within 72 hours of the date that] [name of plaintiff]'s employment ended.

You must decide whether [*name of plaintiff] has proved [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] is entitled to recover a penalty. I will decide the amount of the penalty, if any, to be imposed. To recover this penalty, [name of plaintiff] must prove both of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff]'s employment with [name of defendant] ended; and
2. That [name of defendant] willfully failed to pay [name of plaintiff] all wages when due.

The term "willfully" means only that the employer intentionally failed or refused to pay the wages. It does not imply a need for any additional bad motive.

[*Name of plaintiff] must also prove the following:

1. [Name of plaintiff]'s daily wage rate at the time [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] employment with [name of defendant] ended; and
2. [The date on which [name of defendant] finally paid [name of plaintiff] all wages due/That [name of defendant] never paid [name of plaintiff] all wages].

[The term "wages" includes all amounts for labor performed by an employee, whether the amount is calculated by time, task, piece, commission, or some other method.]

New September 2003; Revised June 2005, May 2019, May 2020, November 2021

Directions for Use

The first part of this instruction sets forth the elements required to obtain a waiting time penalty under Labor Code section 203. The second part is intended to instruct the jury on the facts required to assist the court in calculating the amount of waiting time penalties. Some or all of these facts may be stipulated, in which case they may be omitted from the instruction. Select between the factual scenarios in element 2 of the second part: the employer eventually paid all wages due or the employer never paid the wages due.

The court must determine when final wages are due based on the circumstances of the case and applicable law. (See Lab. Code, §§ 201, 202.) Final wages are generally due on the day an employee is discharged by the employer (Lab. Code, § 201(a)), but are not due for 72 hours if an employee quits without notice. (Lab. Code, § 202(a).)

If there is a factual dispute, for example, whether plaintiff gave advance notice of the intention to quit, or whether payment of final wages by mail was authorized by plaintiff, the court may be required to give further instruction to the jury.

The definition of "wages" may be deleted if it is included in other instructions.

Sources and Authority

- Wages of Discharged Employee Due Immediately. Labor Code section 201.
- Wages of Employee on Quitting. Labor Code section 202.
- Willful Failure to Pay Wages of Discharged Employee. Labor Code section 203.
- Right of Action for Unpaid Wages. Labor Code section 218.
- "Wages" Defined. Labor Code section 200.
- Payment for Accrued Vacation of Terminated Employee. Labor Code section 227.3.
- Wages Partially in Dispute. Labor Code section 206(a).
- Exemption for Certain Governmental Employers. Labor Code section 220(b).
- "Labor Code section 203 empowers a court to award 'an employee who is discharged or who quits' a penalty equal to up to 30 days' worth of the employee's wages '[i]f an employer willfully fails to pay' the employee his full wages immediately (if discharged) or within 72 hours (if he or she quits). It is called a waiting time penalty because it is awarded for effectively making the employee wait for his or her final paycheck. A waiting time penalty may be awarded when the final paycheck is for less than the applicable wage—whether it be the minimum wage, a prevailing wage, or a living wage." (Diaz v. Grill Concepts Services, Inc. (2018) 23 Cal.App.5th 859, 867 [233 Cal.Rptr.3d 524], original italics, internal citations omitted.)
- " '[T]he public policy in favor of full and prompt payment of an employee's earned wages is fundamental and well established . . .' and the failure to timely pay wages injures not only the employee, but the public at large as well. We have also recognized that sections 201, 202, and 203 play an important role in vindicating this public policy. To that end, the Legislature adopted the penalty provision as a disincentive for employers to pay final wages late. It goes without saying that a longer statute of limitations for section 203 penalties provides additional incentive to encourage employers to pay final wages in a prompt manner, thus furthering the public policy." (Pineda v. Bank of America, N.A. (2010) 50 Cal.4th 1389, 1400 [117 Cal.Rptr.3d 377, 241 P.3d 870], internal citations omitted.)
- " 'The plain purpose of [Labor Code] sections 201 and 203 is to compel the immediate payment of earned wages upon a discharge.' The prompt payment of an employee's earned wages is a fundamental public policy of this state." (Kao v. Holiday (2017) 12 Cal.App.5th 947, 962 [219 Cal.Rptr.3d 580], internal citation omitted.)

- "The statutory policy favoring prompt payment of wages applies to employees who retire, as well as those who quit for other reasons." (McLean v. State (2016) 1 Cal.5th 615, 626–627 [206 Cal.Rptr.3d 545, 377 P.3d 796].)
- "[M]issed-break premium pay constitutes wages for purposes of Labor Code section 203, and so waiting time penalties are available under that statute if the premium pay is not timely paid." (Naranjo v. Spectrum Security Services, Inc. (2022) 13 Cal.5th 93, 117 [293 Cal.Rptr.3d 599, 509 P.3d 956].)
- "[A]n employer may not delay payment for several days until the next regular pay period. Unpaid wages are due immediately upon discharge. This requirement is strictly applied and may not be 'undercut' by company payroll practices or 'any industry habit or custom to the contrary.' " (Kao, supra, 12 Cal.App.5th at p. 962, original italics, internal citation omitted.)
- " ' "[T]o be at fault within the meaning of [section 203], the employer's refusal to pay need not be based on a deliberate evil purpose to defraud workmen of wages which the employer knows to be due. As used in section 203, 'willful' merely means that the employer intentionally failed or refused to perform an act which was required to be done." . . .' " (Gonzalez v. Downtown LA Motors, LP (2013) 215 Cal.App.4th 36, 54 [155 Cal.Rptr.3d 18].)
- "In civil cases the word 'willful' as ordinarily used in courts of law, does not necessarily imply anything blameable, or any malice or wrong toward the other party, or perverseness or moral delinquency, but merely that the thing done or omitted to be done, was done or omitted intentionally. It amounts to nothing more than this: That the person knows what he is doing, intends to do what he is doing, and is a free agent." (Nishiki v. Danko Meredith, P.C. (2018) 25 Cal.App.5th 883, 891 [236 Cal.Rptr.3d 626].)
- "[A]n employer's reasonable, good faith belief that wages are not owed may negate a finding of willfulness." (Choate v. Celite Corp. (2013) 215 Cal.App.4th 1460, 1468 [155 Cal.Rptr.3d 915].)
- "A 'good faith dispute' that any wages are due occurs when an employer presents a defense, based in law or fact which, if successful, would preclude any recover[y] on the part of the employee. The fact that a defense is ultimately unsuccessful will not preclude a finding that a good faith dispute did exist." (Kao, supra, 12 Cal.App.5th at p. 963.)
- "A 'good faith dispute' excludes defenses that 'are unsupported by any evidence, are unreasonable, or are presented in bad faith.' Any of the three precludes a defense from being a good faith dispute. Thus, [defendant]'s good faith does not cure the objective unreasonableness of its challenge or the lack of evidence to support it." (Diaz, supra, 23 Cal.App.5th at pp. 873–874, original italics, internal citations omitted.)

- "A proper reading of section 203 mandates a penalty equivalent to the employee's daily wages for each day he or she remained unpaid up to a total of 30 days. . . . [¶] [T]he critical computation required by section 203 is the calculation of a daily wage rate, which can then be multiplied by the number of days of nonpayment, up to 30 days." (Mamika v. Barca (1998) 68 Cal.App.4th 487, 493 [80 Cal.Rptr.2d 175].)
- " 'A tender of the wages due at the time of the discharge, if properly made and in the proper amount, terminates the further accumulation of penalty, but it does not preclude the employee from recovering the penalty already accrued.' " (Oppenheimer v. Sunkist Growers, Inc. (1957) 153 Cal.App.2d Supp. 897, 899 [315 P.2d 116], citation omitted.)
- "[Plaintiff] fails to distinguish between a request for statutory penalties provided by the Labor Code for employer wage-and-hour violations, which were recoverable directly by employees well before the Act became part of the Labor Code, and a demand for 'civil penalties,' previously enforceable only by the state's labor law enforcement agencies. An example of the former is section 203, which obligates an employer that willfully fails to pay wages due an employee who is discharged or quits to pay the employee, in addition to the unpaid wages, a penalty equal to the employee's daily wages for each day, not exceeding 30 days, that the wages are unpaid." (Caliber Bodyworks, Inc. v. Superior Court (2005) 134 Cal.App.4th 365, 377–378 [36 Cal.Rptr.3d 31].)
- "In light of the unambiguous statutory language, as well as the practical difficulties that would arise under defendant's interpretation, we conclude there is but one reasonable construction: section 203(b) contains a single, three-year limitations period governing all actions for section 203 penalties irrespective of whether an employee's claim for penalties is accompanied by a claim for unpaid final wages." (Pineda, supra, 50 Cal.4th at p. 1398.)

Secondary Sources

4 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, §§ 437–439

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 1-A, Introduction—Background, ¶ 1:22 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 11-B, Compensation—Coverage and Exemptions—In General, ¶ 11:121 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 11-D, Compensation—Payment of Wages, ¶¶ 11:456, 11:470.1, 11:510, 11:513–11:515 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 11-J, Compensation—Enforcing California Laws Regulating Employee Compensation, ¶¶ 11:1458–11:1459, 11:1461–11:1461.1 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 17-B, Remedies—Contract Damages, ¶ 17:148 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 5, Administrative and Judicial Remedies Under Wage and Hour Laws, § 5.40 (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, §§ 250.16[2][d], 250.30 et seq. (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation, §§ 4:67, 4:74 (Thomson Reuters)

2705. Independent Contractor—Affirmative Defense—Worker Was Not Hiring Entity's Employee (Lab. Code, § 2775)

[*Name of defendant] claims that [name of plaintiff] was not [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] employee, but rather an independent contractor. To establish that [name of plaintiff] was an independent contractor, [name of defendant] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] is under the terms of the contract and in fact free from the control and direction of [name of defendant] in connection with the performance of the work that [name of plaintiff] was hired to do;
2. That [name of plaintiff] performs work for [name of defendant] that is outside the usual course of [name of defendant]'s business; and
3. That [name of plaintiff] is customarily engaged in an independently established trade, occupation, or business of the same nature as that involved in the work performed for [name of defendant].

New November 2018; Revised May 2020, May 2021, November 2021

Directions for Use

This instruction may be used if a hiring entity claims that the worker is an independent contractor and not an employee, and is primarily intended for use in cases involving claims under the Labor Code, the Unemployment Insurance Code, or a wage order. Any person providing services or labor for remuneration is presumptively an employee. (Lab. Code, § 2775; see Dynamex Operations West, Inc. v. Superior Court (2018) 4 Cal.5th 903, 913–914, & fn. 3 [232 Cal.Rptr.3d 1, 416 P.3d 1].) The hiring entity has the burden to prove independent contractor status. (Lab. Code, § 2775(b)(1); Dynamex, supra, 4 Cal.5th at p. 916.) This instruction may not be appropriate if the hiring entity claims independent contractor status based on Proposition 22 (Bus. & Prof. Code, § 7451) or one of the many exceptions listed in Labor Code sections 2776–2784. For an instruction on employment status under the Borello test, see CACI No. 3704, Existence of "Employee" Status Disputed.

The jury decides whether a worker is an employee or an independent contractor only when there are disputed issues of fact material to the determination. (Espejo v. The Copley Press, Inc. (2017) 13 Cal.App.5th 329, 342 [221 Cal.Rptr.3d 1].) On undisputed facts, the court decides whether the relationship is employment as a matter of law. (Dynamex, supra, 4 Cal.5th at p. 963.)

Sources and Authority

- Worker Status: Employees. Labor Code section 2775.

- "The ABC test presumptively considers all workers to be employees, and permits workers to be classified as independent contractors only if the hiring business demonstrates that the worker in question satisfies each of three conditions: (a) that the worker is free from the control and direction of the hirer in connection with the performance of the work, both under the contract for the performance of the work and in fact; and (b) that the worker performs work that is outside the usual course of the hiring entity's business; and (c) that the worker is customarily engaged in an independently established trade, occupation, or business of the same nature as that involved in the work performed." (Dynamex, supra, 4 Cal.5th at pp. 955–956.)
- "A business that hires any individual to provide services to it can always be said to knowingly 'suffer or permit' such an individual to work for the business. A literal application of the suffer or permit to work standard, therefore, would bring within its reach even those individuals hired by a business—including unquestionably independent plumbers, electricians, architects, sole practitioner attorneys, and the like—who provide only occasional services unrelated to a company's primary line of business and who have traditionally been viewed as working in their own independent business." (Dynamex, supra, 4 Cal.5th at pp. 948–949.)
- "A multifactor standard—like the economic reality standard or the Borello standard—that calls for consideration of all potentially relevant factual distinctions in different employment arrangements on a case-by-case, totality-of-the-circumstances basis has its advantages. A number of state courts, administrative agencies and academic commentators have observed, however, that such a wide-ranging and flexible test for evaluating whether a worker should be considered an employee or an independent contractor has significant disadvantages, particularly when applied in the wage and hour context." (Dynamex, supra, 4 Cal.5th at p. 954.)
- "Thus, on the one hand, when a retail store hires an outside plumber to repair a leak in a bathroom on its premises or hires an outside electrician to install a new electrical line, the services of the plumber or electrician are not part of the store's usual course of business and the store would not reasonably be seen as having suffered or permitted the plumber or electrician to provide services to it as an employee. On the other hand, when a clothing manufacturing company hires work-at-home seamstresses to make dresses from cloth and patterns supplied by the company that will thereafter be sold by the company, or when a bakery hires cake decorators to work on a regular basis on its custom-designed cakes, the workers are part of the hiring entity's usual business operation and the hiring business can reasonably be viewed as having suffered or permitted the workers to provide services as employees. In the latter settings, the workers' role within the hiring entity's usual business operations is more like that of an employee than that of an independent contractor." (Dynamex, supra, 4 Cal.5th at pp. 959–960, internal citations omitted.)
- "A company that labels as independent contractors a class of workers who are not engaged in an independently established business in order to enable the company to obtain the economic advantages that flow from avoiding the financial obligations that a wage order imposes on employers unquestionably violates the fundamental purposes of the wage order. The fact that a company has not prohibited or prevented a worker from engaging in such a business is not sufficient to establish that the worker has independently made the decision to go into business for himself or herself." (Dynamex, supra, 4 Cal.5th at p. 962.)

- "The trial court's determination of employee or independent contractor status is one of fact if it depends upon the resolution of disputed evidence or inferences and, as such, must be affirmed on appeal if supported by substantial evidence. The question is one of law only if the evidence is undisputed. 'The label placed by the parties on their relationship is not dispositive, and subterfuges are not countenanced.' " (Espejo, supra, 13 Cal.App.5th at pp. 342–343.)
- "It bears emphasis that in order to establish that a worker is an independent contractor under the ABC standard, the hiring entity is required to establish the existence of each of the three parts of the ABC standard. Furthermore, inasmuch as a hiring entity's failure to satisfy any one of the three parts itself establishes that the worker should be treated as an employee for purposes of the wage order, a court is free to consider the separate parts of the ABC standard in whatever order it chooses. Because in many cases it may be easier and clearer for a court to determine whether or not part B or part C of the ABC standard has been satisfied than for the court to resolve questions regarding the nature or degree of a worker's freedom from the hiring entity's control for purposes of part A of the standard, the significant advantages of the ABC standard—in terms of increased clarity and consistency—will often be best served by first considering one or both of the latter two parts of the standard in resolving the employee or independent contractor question." (Dynamex, supra, 4 Cal.5th at p. 963, italics added.)
- "An entity that controls the business enterprise may be an employer even if it did not 'directly hire, fire or supervise' the employees. Multiple entities may be employers where they 'control different aspects of the employment relationship.' 'This occurs, for example, when one entity (such as a temporary employment agency) hires and pays a worker, and another entity supervises the work.' 'Supervision of the work, in the specific sense of exercising control over how services are performed, is properly viewed as one of the "working conditions" . . . .' " (Castaneda v. Ensign Group, Inc. (2014) 229 Cal.App.4th 1015, 1019 [177 Cal.Rptr.3d 581].)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, § 29A

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 11-B, Coverage and Exemptions—In General, ¶ 11:115 et seq. (The Rutter Group)

Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour

Disputes, § 250.13 (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 1, Overview of Wage and Hour Laws, § 1.04 (Matthew Bender)

2706–2709. Reserved for Future Use

2710. Solicitation of Employee by Misrepresentation—Essential Factual Elements (Lab. Code, § 970)

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] made [a] false representation[s] about work to persuade [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] to change [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] residence. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] made [a] representation[s] to [name of plaintiff] about [insert one or more of the following:]

   [the kind, character, or existence of work;]

   [the length of time work would last;]

   [the compensation for work;]

   [the sanitary or housing conditions relating to work;]

   [the existence or nonexistence of any pending strike, lockout, or other labor dispute affecting work;]

2. That [name of defendant]'s representation(s) [was/were] not true;
3. That [name of defendant] knew when the representation[s] [was/were] made that [it/they] [was/were] not true;
4. That [name of defendant] intended that [name of plaintiff] rely on the representation[s];
5. That [name of plaintiff] reasonably relied on [name of defendant]'s representation[s] and changed [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] residence for the purpose of working for [name of defendant];
6. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
7. That [name of plaintiff]'s reliance on [name of defendant]'s representation(s) was a substantial factor in causing [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] harm.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

If the statutory action under Labor Code section 970 is applicable, do not give the common-law fraud instruction. For other jury instructions regarding opinions as statements of fact, misrepresentations to third parties, reliance, and reasonable reliance, see CACI Nos. 1904 through 1908 in the Fraud or Deceit series.

Sources and Authority

- False Representations in Labor Recruitment. Labor Code section 970.

- Violation is Misdemeanor. Labor Code section 971.
- Civil Liability for Violation. Labor Code section 972.
- "[S]ection 970, although applied . . . to other employment situations, was enacted to protect migrant workers from the abuses heaped upon them by unscrupulous employers and potential employers, especially involving false promises made to induce them to move in the first instance." (Tyco Industries, Inc. v. Superior Court (1985) 164 Cal.App.3d 148, 155 [211 Cal.Rptr. 540], internal citation and italics omitted.)
- "To establish . . . a claim [for violation of section 970], [plaintiff] had to prove that defendants made a knowingly false representation regarding the length of her employment . . . with the intent to persuade her to move there from another place to take the position." (Finch v. Brenda Raceway Corp. (1994) 22 Cal.App.4th 547, 553 [27 Cal.Rptr.2d 531].)
- "[Section 970] requires the employee to demonstrate that his or her employer made 'knowingly false representations' concerning the nature, duration or conditions of employment. . . . [¶] Moreover, under the statute an employee must establish that the employer induced him or her to relocate or change residences." (Eisenberg v. Alameda Newspapers (1999) 74 Cal.App.4th 1359, 1392 [88 Cal.Rptr.2d 802].)
- "The words 'to change from one place to another' import temporary as well as permanent relocation of residence, as contrasted with a mere change in the site of employment. The quantitative fact that the change of residence was to be only for two weeks rather than for a longer period would not appear to affect the qualitative misrepresentations, nor does it render the statute inapplicable." (Collins v. Rocha (1972) 7 Cal.3d 232, 239–240 [102 Cal.Rptr. 1, 497 P.2d 225].)
- "The construction of a statute and whether it is applicable to a factual situation present solely questions of law. Although the trial court erred in determining that the Labor Code sections 970 and 972 were not applicable and hence the issue of double damages was not submitted to the jury, the record reflects that the jury specifically found that [defendant] made false representations to induce [plaintiff] to accept the position in California. Given the express findings by the jury, it is unnecessary to remand this case for a retrial on the limited issue of damages. . . . We therefore modify the judgment to reflect double damages in accordance with Labor Code section 972." (Seubert v. McKesson Corp. (1990) 223 Cal.App.3d 1514, 1522–1523 [273 Cal.Rptr. 296], internal citation omitted, overruled on other grounds, Dore v. Arnold Worldwide, Inc. (2006) 39 Cal.4th 384, 389 [46 Cal.Rptr.3d 668, 139 P.3d 56].)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, § 499

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 4-D, Implied

Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing, ¶¶ 4:351, 5:532, 5:540, 5:892.10, 16:493(The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 5(I)-E, Defamation, ¶¶ 5:532, 5:540 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 5(I)-K, False Imprisonment, ¶¶ 5:891–5:8932.10 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 16-E, Statute of Limitations, ¶ 16:493 (The Rutter Group)

1 Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cont.Ed.Bar 2d ed.) Other Employee Rights Statutes, § 4.51

4 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 63, Causes of Action Related to Wrongful Termination, § 63.06[1] (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, §§ 249.30, 249.80 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation § 6:27 (Thomson Reuters)

2711. Preventing Subsequent Employment by Misrepresentation—Essential Factual Elements (Lab. Code, § 1050)

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] made [a] false representation[s] to prevent [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] from obtaining employment. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That after [name of plaintiff]'s employment with [name of defendant] ended, [name of defendant] made [a] representation(s) to [name of prospective employer] about [name of plaintiff];
2. That [name of defendant]'s representation[s] [was/were] not true;
3. That [name of defendant] knew the representation[s] [was/were] not true when [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] made [it/them];
4. That [name of defendant] made the representation[s] with the intent of preventing [name of plaintiff] from obtaining employment;
5. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
6. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

For jury instructions regarding opinions as statements of fact and the definition of an important fact, see CACI Nos. 1904 and 1905 in the Fraud or Deceit series. For an instruction on the qualified privilege pursuant to Civil Code section 47(c), see CACI No. 1723 in the Defamation series.

It is unclear whether elements 3 and 4 are necessary elements to this cause of action.

Sources and Authority

- Preventing Later Employment by Misrepresentation. Labor Code section 1050.
- Permitting Violation is Misdemeanor. Labor Code section 1052.
- Civil Liability for Violation. Labor Code section 1054.
- Truthful Statement for Termination of Employment. Labor Code section 1053.
- Privileged Publications. Civil Code section 47(c).
- "Section 1054 provides for a damage remedy for the party aggrieved by a violation of the section 1050 prohibition against an employer blacklisting a former employee. It is patent that the aggrieved party must be the blacklisted employee, not a union, since the latter can neither be fired nor quit." (Service Employees Internat. Union, Local 193, AFL-CIO v. Hollywood Park, Inc. (1983) 149 Cal.App.3d 745, 765 [197 Cal.Rptr. 316].)

- "Labor Code section 1050 applies only to misrepresentations made to prospective employers other than the defendant. [¶] . . . [T]he Legislature intended that Labor Code section 1050 would apply only to misstatements to other potential employers, not to misstatements made internally by employees of the party to be charged." (Kelly v. General Telephone Co. (1982) 136 Cal.App.3d 278, 288–289 [186 Cal.Rptr. 184].)
- A communication without malice solicited by a prospective employer from a former employer would be privileged in accordance with Civil Code section 47(c). (See O'Shea v. General Telephone Co. (1987) 193 Cal.App.3d 1040, 1047 [238 Cal.Rptr. 715].)
- "We . . . recognize that '[t]he primary purpose of punitive damages is to punish the defendant and make an example of him.' Since this purpose is the same as the treble damages authorized by Labor Code section 1054, we do not sanction a double recovery for the plaintiff. In the new trial on damages, the jury should be instructed on the subject of punitive damages based on malice or oppression. Any verdict finding compensatory damages must be trebled by the court. Plaintiff may then elect to have judgment entered in an amount which reflects either the statutory trebling, or the compensatory and punitive damages." (Marshall v. Brown (1983) 141 Cal.App.3d 408, 419 [190 Cal.Rptr. 392].)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, §§ 302, 373, 374, 377, 379, 387, 416, 455, 459

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch.4-D, Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing, ¶ 4:351 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 5(I)-E, Defamation, ¶¶ 5:532, 5:540 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 5(I)-K, False Imprisonment, ¶¶ 5:891–5:893 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 16-E, Statute of Limitations, ¶ 16:493 (The Rutter Group)

4 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 63, Causes of Action Related to Wrongful Termination, § 63.06[2] (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, §§ 249.22[3][a], 249.31, 249.81 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation § 6:29 (Thomson Reuters)

2712–2719. Reserved for Future Use

2720. Affirmative Defense—Nonpayment of Overtime—Executive Exemption

[*Name of defendant] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] is not required to pay [name of plaintiff] for overtime because [name of plaintiff] is an executive employee. [Name of plaintiff] is exempt from overtime pay requirements as an executive if [name of defendant] proves all of the following:

1. [Name of plaintiff]'s duties and responsibilities involve management of [name of defendant]'s [business/enterprise] or of a customarily recognized department or subdivision of the [business/enterprise];
2. [Name of plaintiff] customarily and regularly directs the work of two or more employees;
3. [Name of plaintiff] has the authority to hire or fire employees, or [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] suggestions as to hiring or firing and as to advancement and promotion or other changes in status are given particular weight;
4. [Name of plaintiff] customarily and regularly exercises discretion and independent judgment;
5. [Name of plaintiff] performs executive duties more than half of the time; and
6. [Name of plaintiff]'s monthly salary is at least [insert amount that is twice the state minimum wage for full time employment].

In determining whether [*name of plaintiff] performs executive duties more than half of the time, the most important consideration is how [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] actually spends [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] time. But also consider whether [name of plaintiff]'s practice differs from [name of defendant]'s realistic expectations of how [name of plaintiff] should spend [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] time and the realistic requirements of the job.

[Each of [*name of plaintiff]'s activities is either an exempt or a nonexempt activity depending on the primary purpose for which [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] undertook it at that time. Time spent on an activity is either exempt or nonexempt, not both.]

New December 2012; Revised June 2014

Directions for Use

This instruction is an affirmative defense to an employee's claim for statutory overtime earnings. (See CACI No. 2702, Nonpayment of Overtime Compensation—Essential Factual Elements.) The employer claims that the employee is an exempt executive. (See Lab. Code, § 515(a).) The employer must prove all of the elements. (United Parcel Service Wage & Hour Cases (2010) 190 Cal.App.4th 1001, 1014 [118 Cal.Rptr.3d 834].) For an instruction for the affirmative defense of administrative exemption, see CACI No. 2721, Affirmative Defense—Nonpayment of Overtime—Administrative Exemption.

This instruction is based on Industrial Welfare Commission Wage Order 9, which is applicable to the transportation industry. (See 8 Cal. Code Regs., § 11090.) Different wage orders are applicable to different industries. (See Lab. Code, § 515.) The requirements of the executive exemptions under the various wage orders are essentially the same. (Cf., e.g., 8 Cal. Code Regs., § 11040, Wage Order 4, applicable to persons employed in professional, technical, clerical, mechanical, and similar occupations.).

The exemption requires that the employee be primarily engaged in duties that "meet the test of the exemption." (See 8 Cal. Code Regs., § 11090 sec. 1(A)(1)(e), sec. 2(J) ("primarily" means more than one-half the employee's work time).) This requirement is expressed in element 5. However, the contours of executive duties are quite detailed in the wage orders, which incorporate federal regulations under the Fair Labor Standards Act and also provide some specific examples. (See also Ramirez v. Yosemite Water Co. (1999) 20 Cal.4th 785, 802 [85 Cal.Rptr.2d 844, 978 P.2d 2].) In many cases, it will be advisable to instruct further with details from the applicable wage order and regulations as to what constitutes "executive duties" in element 5.

Include the optional last paragraph if a particular work activity arguably involves more than one purpose and could be characterized as exempt or nonexempt, depending on its primary purpose.

This instruction may be expanded to provide examples of the specific exempt and nonexempt activities relevant to the work at issue. (See, e.g., Heyen v. Safeway, Inc. (2013) 216 Cal.App.4th 795, 808–809 [157 Cal.Rptr.3d 280].)

Sources and Authority

- Exemptions to Overtime Requirements. Labor Code section 515(a).
- "[T]he assertion of an exemption from the overtime laws is considered to be an affirmative defense, and therefore the employer bears the burden of proving the employee's exemption." (Ramirez, supra, 20 Cal.4th at pp. 794–795.)
- "In order to discharge its burden to show [plaintiff] was exempt as an executive employee pursuant to Wage Order 9, [defendant] was required to demonstrate the following: (1) his duties and responsibilities involve management of the enterprise or a 'customarily recognized department or subdivision thereof'; (2) he customarily and regularly directs the work of two or more employees; (3) he has the authority to hire or terminate employees, or his suggestions as to hiring, firing, promotion or other changes in status are given 'particular weight'; (4) he customarily and regularly exercises discretion and independent judgment; (5) he is primarily engaged in duties that meet the test of the exemption; and (6) his monthly salary is equivalent to no less than two times the state minimum wage for full-time employment." (United Parcel Service Wage & Hour Cases, supra, 190 Cal.App.4th at p. 1014 [citing 8 Cal. Code Regs., § 11090, subd. 1(A)(1)].)

- "Determining whether or not all of the elements of the exemption have been established is a fact-intensive inquiry." (United Parcel Service Wage & Hour Cases, supra, 190 Cal.App.4th at p. 1014.)
- "Review of the determination that [plaintiff] was not an exempt employee is a mixed question of law and fact. Whether an employee satisfies the elements of the exemption is a question of fact reviewed for substantial evidence. The appropriate manner of evaluating the employee's duties is a question of law that we review independently." (Heyen, supra, 216 Cal.App.4th at p. 817, internal citations omitted.)
- "The appropriateness of any employee's classification as exempt must be based on a review of the actual job duties performed by that employee. Wage Order 9 expressly provides that '[t]he work actually performed by the employee during the course of the workweek must, first and foremost, be examined and the amount of time the employee spends on such work, together with the employer's realistic expectations and the realistic requirements of the job, shall be considered . . . .' No bright-line rule can be established classifying everyone with a particular job title as per se exempt or nonexempt—the regulations identify job duties, not job titles. 'A job title alone is insufficient to establish the exempt status of an employee. The exempt or nonexempt status of any particular employee must be determined on the basis of whether the employee's salary and duties meet the requirements of the regulations . . . .' " (United Parcel Service Wage & Hour Cases, supra, 190 Cal.App.4th at p. 1014–1015, original italics, internal citation omitted.)
- "This is not a day-by-day analysis. The issue is whether the employees ' "spend more than 51% of their time on managerial tasks in any given workweek." ' " (Batze v. Safeway, Inc. (2017) 10 Cal.App.5th 440, 473, fn. 36 [216 Cal.Rptr.3d 390])
- "Put simply, 'the regulations do not recognize "hybrid" activities—i.e., activities that have both "exempt" and "nonexempt" aspects. Rather, the regulations require that each discrete task be separately classified as either "exempt' or "nonexempt." [Citations.]' [¶] We did not state, however, that the same task must always be labeled exempt or nonexempt: '[I]dentical tasks may be "exempt" or 'nonexempt" based on the purpose they serve within the organization or department.' " (Batze, supra, 10 Cal.App.5th at p. 474.)
- "[T]he federal regulations incorporated into Wage Order 7 do not support the 'multi-tasking' standard proposed by [defendant]. Instead, they suggest, as the trial court correctly instructed the jury, that the trier of fact must categorize tasks as either 'exempt' or 'nonexempt' based on the purpose for which [plaintiff]

undertook them." (Heyen, supra, 216 Cal.App.4th at p. 826.)

- "Wage Order 4 refers to compensation in the form of a 'salary.' It does not define the term. The regulation does not use a more generic term, such as 'compensation' or 'pay.' Either of these terms would encompass hourly wages, a fixed annual salary, and anything in between. 'Salary' is a more specific form of compensation. A salary is generally understood to be a fixed rate of pay as distinguished from an hourly wage. Thus, use of the word 'salary' implies that an exempt employee's pay must be something other than an hourly wage. California's Labor Commission noted in an opinion letter dated March 1, 2002, that the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement (DLSE) construes the IWC wage orders to incorporate the federal salary-basis test for purposes of determining whether an employee is exempt or nonexempt." (Negri v. Koning & Associates (2013) 216 Cal.App.4th 392, 397–398 [156 Cal.Rptr.3d 697, footnote omitted.)
- "[T]he costs incurred by an employer to provide an employee with board, lodging or other facilities may not count towards the minimum salary amount required for exemption . . . ." (Kao v. Holiday (2017) 12 Cal.App.5th 947, 958 [219 Cal.Rptr.3d 580].)
- "The rule is that state law requirements for exemption from overtime pay must be at least as protective of the employee as the corresponding federal standards. Since federal law requires that, in order to meet the salary basis test for exemption the employee would have to be paid a predetermined amount that is not subject to reduction based upon the number of hours worked, state law requirements must be at least as protective." (Negri, supra, 216 Cal.App.4th at p. 398, internal citation omitted.)
- "Under California law, to determine whether an employee was properly classified as 'exempt,' the trier of fact must look not only to the 'work actually performed by the employee during the . . . workweek,' but also to the 'employer's realistic expectations and the realistic requirements of the job.' " (Heyen, supra, 216 Cal.App.4th at p. 828.)
- "Having recognized California's distinctive quantitative approach to determining which employees are outside salespersons, we must then address an issue implicitly raised by the parties that caused some confusion in the trial court and the Court of Appeal: Is the number of hours worked in sales-related activities to be determined by the number of hours that the employer, according to its job description or its estimate, claims the employee should be working in sales, or should it be determined by the actual average hours the employee spent on sales activity? The logic inherent in the IWC's quantitative definition of outside salesperson dictates that neither alternative would be wholly satisfactory. On the one hand, if hours worked on sales were determined through an employer's job description, then the employer could make an employee exempt from overtime laws solely by fashioning an idealized job description that had little basis in reality. On the other hand, an employee who is supposed to be engaged in sales activities during most of his working hours and falls below the 50 percent mark due to his own substandard performance should not thereby be able to evade a valid exemption. A trial court, in determining whether the employee is an outside salesperson, must steer clear of these two pitfalls by inquiring into the realistic requirements of the job. In so doing, the court should consider, first and foremost, how the employee actually spends his or her time. But the trial court should also consider whether the employee's practice diverges from the employer's realistic expectations, whether there was any concrete expression of employer displeasure over an employee's substandard performance, and whether these expressions were themselves realistic given the actual overall requirements of the job." (Ramirez, supra, 20 Cal.4th at pp. 801–802, original italics.)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, § 392 et seq.

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 11-B, Coverage And Exemptions—In General, ¶ 11:345 et seq. (The Rutter Group)

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 2, Minimum Wages, §§ 2.04, 2.06 (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, § 250.71 (Matthew Bender)

Simmons, Wage and Hour Manual for California Employers, Ch. 2, Coverage of Wage and Hour Laws (Castle Publications Limited)

Simmons, Wage and Hour Manual for California Employers, Ch. 10, Exemptions (Castle Publications Limited)

2721. Affirmative Defense—Nonpayment of Overtime—Administrative Exemption

---

[*Name of defendant] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] is not required to pay [name of plaintiff] for overtime because [name of plaintiff] is an administrative employee. [Name of plaintiff] is exempt from overtime pay requirements as an administrator if [name of defendant] proves all of the following:

1. [Name of plaintiff]'s duties and responsibilities involve the performance of office or nonmanual work directly related to management policies or general business operations of [name of defendant] or [name of defendant]'s customers;

2. [Name of plaintiff] customarily and regularly exercises discretion and independent judgment;

3. [[Name of plaintiff] performs, under general supervision only, specialized or technical work that requires special training, experience, or knowledge;]

   [*or]

   [[*Name of plaintiff] regularly and directly assists a proprietor or bona fide executive or administrator;]

   [*or]

   [[*Name of plaintiff] performs special assignments and tasks under general supervision only;]

4. [Name of plaintiff] performs administrative duties more than half of the time; and

5. [Name of plaintiff]'s monthly salary is at least [insert amount that is twice the state minimum wage for full time employment].

In determining whether [*name of plaintiff] performs administrative duties more than half of the time, the most important consideration is how [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] actually spends [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] time. But also consider whether [name of plaintiff]'s practice differs from [name of defendant]'s realistic expectations of how [name of plaintiff] should spend [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] time and the realistic requirements of the job.

[Each of [*name of plaintiff]'s activities is either an exempt or a nonexempt activity depending on the primary purpose for which [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] undertook it at that time. Time spent on an activity is either exempt or nonexempt, not both.]

New December 2012; Revised June 2014

Directions for Use

This instruction is an affirmative defense to an employee's claim for statutory overtime earnings. (See CACI No. 2702, Nonpayment of Overtime Compensation—Essential Factual Elements.) The employer claims that the employee is an exempt administrator. (See Lab. Code, § 515(a).) The employer must prove all of the elements. (Eicher v. Advanced Business Integrators, Inc. (2007) 151 Cal.App.4th 1363 1372 [61 Cal.Rptr.3d 114].) For an instruction for the affirmative defense of executive exemption, see CACI No. 2720, Affirmative Defense—Nonpayment of Overtime—Executive Exemption.

This instruction is based on Industrial Welfare Commission Wage Order 9, which is applicable to the transportation industry. (See 8 Cal. Code Regs., § 11090.) Different wage orders are applicable to different industries. (See Lab. Code, § 515.) The requirements of the administrative exemptions under the various wage orders are essentially the same. (Cf., e.g., 8 Cal. Code Regs., § 11040, Wage Order 4, applicable to persons employed in professional, technical, clerical, mechanical, and similar occupations.).

The exemption requires that the employee be "primarily engaged in duties that meet the test of the exemption." (See 8 Cal. Code Regs., § 11090 sec. 1(A)(2)(f), sec. 2(J) ("primarily" means more than one-half the employee's work time).) This requirement is expressed in element 4. However, the contours of administrative duties are quite detailed in the wage orders, which incorporate federal regulations under the Fair Labor Standards Act and also provide some specific examples. (See also Ramirez v. Yosemite Water Co. (1999) 20 Cal.4th 785, 802 [85 Cal.Rptr.2d 844, 978 P.2d 2].) In many cases, it will be advisable to instruct further with details from the applicable wage order and regulations as to what constitutes "administrative duties" (element 4) and the meaning of "directly related" (element 1).

Include the optional last paragraph if a particular work activity arguably involves more than one purpose and could be characterized as exempt or nonexempt, depending on its primary purpose.

This instruction may be expanded to provide examples of the specific exempt and nonexempt activities relevant to the work at issue. (See, e.g., Heyen v. Safeway, Inc. (2013) 216 Cal.App.4th 795, 808–809 [157 Cal.Rptr.3d 280].)

Sources and Authority

- Exemptions to Overtime Requirements. Labor Code section 515(a).
- "[T]he assertion of an exemption from the overtime laws is considered to be an affirmative defense, and therefore the employer bears the burden of proving the employee's exemption." (Ramirez, supra, 20 Cal.4th at pp. 794–795.)
- "In order to establish that [plaintiff] was exempt as an administrative employee, [defendant] was required to show all of the following: (1) his duties and responsibilities involve the performance of office or nonmanual work directly related to management policies or general business operations of [defendant]; (2) he customarily and regularly exercises discretion and independent judgment; (3) he performs work requiring special training, experience, or knowledge under general supervision only (the two alternative prongs of the general supervision element are not pertinent to our discussion); (4) he is primarily engaged in duties that meet the test of exemption; and (5) his monthly salary is equivalent to no less than two times the state minimum wage for full-time employment." (United Parcel Service Wage & Hour Cases, supra, 190 Cal.App.4th at p. 1028 [relying on 8 Cal. Code Regs., § 11090, subd. 1(A)(2)].)

- "Read together, the applicable Labor Code statutes, wage orders, and incorporated federal regulations now provide an explicit and extensive framework for analyzing the administrative exemption." (Harris v. Superior Court (2011) 53 Cal.4th 170, 182 [135 Cal.Rptr.3d 247, 266 P.3d 953].)
- "Determining whether or not all of the elements of the exemption have been established is a fact-intensive inquiry." (United Parcel Service Wage & Hour Cases (2010) 190 Cal.App.4th 1001, 1014 [118 Cal.Rptr.3d 834].)
- "Review of the determination that [plaintiff] was not an exempt employee is a mixed question of law and fact. Whether an employee satisfies the elements of the exemption is a question of fact reviewed for substantial evidence. The appropriate manner of evaluating the employee's duties is a question of law that we review independently." (Heyen, supra, 216 Cal.App.4th at p. 817, internal citations omitted.)
- "The appropriateness of any employee's classification as exempt must be based on a review of the actual job duties performed by that employee. Wage Order 9 expressly provides that '[t]he work actually performed by the employee during the course of the workweek must, first and foremost, be examined and the amount of time the employee spends on such work, together with the employer's realistic expectations and the realistic requirements of the job, shall be considered . . . .' No bright-line rule can be established classifying everyone with a particular job title as per se exempt or nonexempt—the regulations identify job duties, not job titles. 'A job title alone is insufficient to establish the exempt status of an employee. The exempt or nonexempt status of any particular employee must be determined on the basis of whether the employee's salary and duties meet the requirements of the regulations . . . .' " (United Parcel Service Wage & Hour Cases, supra, 190 Cal.App.4th at p. 1014–1015, original italics, internal citation omitted.)
- "This is not a day-by-day analysis. The issue is whether the employees ' "spend more than 51% of their time on managerial tasks in any given workweek." ' " (Batze v. Safeway, Inc. (2017) 10 Cal.App.5th 440, 473, fn. 36 [216 Cal.Rptr.3d 390].)
- "Put simply, 'the regulations do not recognize "hybrid" activities—i.e., activities that have both "exempt" and "nonexempt" aspects. Rather, the regulations require that each discrete task be separately classified as either "exempt' or "nonexempt." [Citations.]' [¶] We did not state, however, that the same task must always be labeled exempt or nonexempt: ' [I]dentical tasks may be "exempt" or 'nonexempt" based on the purpose they serve within the organization or department.' " (Batze, supra, 10 Cal.App.5th at p. 474.)

- "In basic terms, the administrative/production worker dichotomy distinguishes between administrative employees who are primarily engaged in ' "administering the business affairs of the enterprise" ' and production-level employees whose ' "primary duty is producing the commodity or commodities, whether goods or services, that the enterprise exists to produce and market." [Citation.]' ¶¶ [T]he dichotomy is a judicially created creature of the common law, which has been effectively superseded in this context by the more specific and detailed statutory and regulatory enactments." (Harris, supra, 53 Cal.4th at pp. 183, 188.)
- "We do not hold that the administrative/production worker dichotomy . . . can never be used as an analytical tool. We merely hold that the Court of Appeal improperly applied the administrative/production worker dichotomy as a dispositive test. [¶] . . . [I]n resolving whether work qualifies as administrative, courts must consider the particular facts before them and apply the language of the statutes and wage orders at issue. Only if those sources fail to provide adequate guidance . . . is it appropriate to reach out to other sources." (Harris, supra, 53 Cal.4th at p. 190.)
- "[T]he federal regulations incorporated into Wage Order 7 do not support the 'multi-tasking' standard proposed by [defendant]. Instead, they suggest, as the trial court correctly instructed the jury, that the trier of fact must categorize tasks as either 'exempt' or 'nonexempt' based on the purpose for which [plaintiff] undertook them." (Heyen, supra, 216 Cal.App.4th at p. 826.)
- "Wage Order 4 refers to compensation in the form of a 'salary.' It does not define the term. The regulation does not use a more generic term, such as 'compensation' or 'pay.' Either of these terms would encompass hourly wages, a fixed annual salary, and anything in between. 'Salary' is a more specific form of compensation. A salary is generally understood to be a fixed rate of pay as distinguished from an hourly wage. Thus, use of the word 'salary' implies that an exempt employee's pay must be something other than an hourly wage. California's Labor Commission noted in an opinion letter dated March 1, 2002, that the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement (DLSE) construes the IWC wage orders to incorporate the federal salary-basis test for purposes of determining whether an employee is exempt or nonexempt." (Negri v. Koning & Associates (2013) 216 Cal.App.4th 392, 397–398 [156 Cal.Rptr.3d 697, footnote omitted.)
- "[T]he costs incurred by an employer to provide an employee with board, lodging or other facilities may not count towards the minimum salary amount required for exemption . . . ." (Kao v. Holiday (2017) 12 Cal.App.5th 947, 958 [219 Cal.Rptr.3d 580].)

- "The rule is that state law requirements for exemption from overtime pay must be at least as protective of the employee as the corresponding federal standards. Since federal law requires that, in order to meet the salary basis test for exemption the employee would have to be paid a predetermined amount that is not subject to reduction based upon the number of hours worked, state law requirements must be at least as protective." (Negri, supra, 216 Cal.App.4th at p. 398.)
- "Under California law, to determine whether an employee was properly classified as 'exempt,' the trier of fact must look not only to the 'work actually performed by the employee during the . . . workweek,' but also to the 'employer's realistic expectations and the realistic requirements of the job.' " (Heyen, supra, 216 Cal.App.4th at p. 828.)
- "Having recognized California's distinctive quantitative approach to determining which employees are outside salespersons, we must then address an issue implicitly raised by the parties that caused some confusion in the trial court and the Court of Appeal: Is the number of hours worked in sales-related activities to be determined by the number of hours that the employer, according to its job description or its estimate, claims the employee should be working in sales, or should it be determined by the actual average hours the employee spent on sales activity? The logic inherent in the IWC's quantitative definition of outside salesperson dictates that neither alternative would be wholly satisfactory. On the one hand, if hours worked on sales were determined through an employer's job description, then the employer could make an employee exempt from overtime laws solely by fashioning an idealized job description that had little basis in reality. On the other hand, an employee who is supposed to be engaged in sales activities during most of his working hours and falls below the 50 percent mark due to his own substandard performance should not thereby be able to evade a valid exemption. A trial court, in determining whether the employee is an outside salesperson, must steer clear of these two pitfalls by inquiring into the realistic requirements of the job. In so doing, the court should consider, first and foremost, how the employee actually spends his or her time. But the trial court should also consider whether the employee's practice diverges from the employer's realistic expectations, whether there was any concrete expression of employer displeasure over an employee's substandard performance, and whether these expressions were themselves realistic given the actual overall requirements of the job." (Ramirez, supra, 20 Cal.4th at pp. 801–802, original italics.)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, § 392 et seq.

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 11-B, Coverage And Exemptions—In General, ¶ 11:345 et seq. (The Rutter Group)

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 2, Minimum Wages, § 2.04 (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, § 250.71 (Matthew Bender)

Simmons, Wage and Hour Manual for California Employers, Ch. 2, Coverage of Wage and Hour Laws (Castle Publications Limited)

Simmons, Wage and Hour Manual for California Employers, Ch. 10, Exemptions (Castle Publications Limited)

2722–2731. Reserved for Future Use

2732. Retaliatory Unfair Immigration-Related Practice—Essential Factual Elements (Lab. Code, § 1019)

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] [specify unfair immigration-related practice, e.g., threatened to report [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] to immigration authorities] in retaliation for [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] [specify right, e.g., making a claim for minimum wage]. In order to establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff]

   [in good faith filed a complaint or informed someone about [*name of defendant]'s alleged [specify violation of Labor Code or local ordinance, e.g., failure to pay the minimum wage to its employees];]

   [or]

   [sought information regarding whether or not [*name of defendant] was in compliance with [specify requirement under Labor Code or local ordinance, e.g., minimum wage requirements];]

   [or]

   [informed someone of that person's potential rights and remedies for [*name of defendant]'s alleged [specify violation of Labor Code or local ordinance, e.g., failure to pay the minimum wage to its employees] and assisted [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] in asserting those rights;]

2. That [name of defendant]

   [requested more or different documents than those that are required by federal immigration law, or refused to honor documents that on their face reasonably appeared to be genuine;]

   [or]

   [used the federal E-Verify system to check the employment authorization status of [*name of plaintiff] at a time or in a manner not required or authorized by federal immigration law;]

   [or]

   [filed or threatened to file a false [police report/report or complaint with a state or local agency];]

   [or]

   [contacted or threatened to contact immigration authorities;]

3. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was for the purpose of, or with the intent of, retaliating against [name of plaintiff] for exercising [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] legally protected rights;

4. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
5. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

[If you find that [name of defendant] acted as described in element 2 fewer than 90 days after [name of plaintiff] acted as described in element 1, you may but are not required to conclude, without further evidence, that [name of defendant] acted with a retaliatory purpose and intent.]

New December 2014; Revised May 2020

Directions for Use

One who is the victim of an "unfair immigration-related practice" as defined, or that person's representative, may bring a civil action for equitable relief and any damages or penalties. (Lab. Code, § 1019(a).) While most commonly this claim would be brought by an employee against an employer, the statute prohibits unfair immigration-related practices by "an employer or any other person" against "an employee or other person." (Lab. Code, § 1019(d)(1).) Therefore, the statute does not require an employment relationship between the parties.

Engaging in an unfair immigration-related practice against a person within 90 days of the person's exercise of protected rights raises a rebuttable presumption that the defendant did so in retaliation for the plaintiff's exercise of those rights. (Lab. Code, § 1019(c).) The statute does not specify whether the presumption is one affecting only the burden of producing evidence (see Evid. Code, §§ 603, 604) or one affecting the burden of proof. (See Evid. Code, § 605.) If the statute implements a public policy against the use of immigration-related coercion to deter workers from exercising their rights under the Labor Code, its presumption would affect the burden of proof. (See Evid. Code, § 605.) The last optional paragraph of the instruction may then be given if applicable on its facts. If, however, the presumption affects only the burden of producing evidence, it ceases to exist when the defendant produces evidence rebutting the presumption, such as a reason for the action other than retaliation. (Evid. Code, § 604.) In that case, the last paragraph would not be given.

Sources and Authority

- Retaliatory Use of Immigration-Related Practices. Labor Code section 1019.
- Unlawful Employment of Aliens. 8 United States Code section 1324a.

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, § 359

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 7-E, California Labor Code, ¶ 7:1510 et seq. (The Rutter Group)

4 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 60, Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline, § 60.03 (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms or Pleading and Practice, Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination, § 115.37[3][b] (Matthew Bender)

10 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 100, Employer and Employee: Wrongful Termination and Discipline, § 100.42 (Matthew Bender)

2733–2739. Reserved for Future Use

2740. Violation of Equal Pay Act—Essential Factual Elements (Lab. Code, § 1197.5)

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was paid at a wage rate that is less than the rate paid to employees of [the opposite sex/another race/another ethnicity]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] was paid less than the rate paid to [a] person[s] of [the opposite sex/another race/another ethnicity] working for [name of defendant];
2. That [name of plaintiff] was performing substantially similar work as the other person[s], considering the overall combination of skill, effort, and responsibility required; and
3. That [name of plaintiff] was working under similar working conditions as the other person[s].

New May 2018; Revised January 2019, November 2019, May 2020

Directions for Use

The California Equal Pay Act prohibits paying employees at lower wage rates than rates paid to employees of the opposite sex or a different race or ethnicity for substantially similar work. (Lab. Code, § 1197.5(a), (b).) An employee receiving less than the wage to which the employee is entitled may bring a civil action to recover the balance of the wages, including interest, and an equal amount as liquidated damages. Costs and attorney fees may also be awarded. (Lab. Code, § 1197.5(h).) There is no requirement that an employee show discriminatory intent as an element of the claim. (Green v. Par Pools, Inc. (2003) 111 Cal.App.4th 620, 622–625, 629 [3 Cal.Rptr.3d 844].)

This instruction presents singular and plural options for the comparator, the employee or employees whose pay and work are being compared to the plaintiff's to establish a violation of the Equal Pay Act. The statute refers to employees of the opposite sex or different race or ethnicity. There is language in cases, however, that suggests that a single comparator (e.g., one woman to one man) is sufficient. (See Hall v. County of Los Angeles (2007) 148 Cal.App.4th 318, 324 [55 Cal.Rptr.3d 732] [plaintiff had to show that she is paid lower wages than a male comparator, italics added]; Green, supra, 111 Cal.App.4th at p. 628 [plaintiff in a section 1197.5 action must first show that the employer paid a male employee more than a female employee for equal work, italics added].) No California case has expressly so held, however.

There are a number of defenses that the employer may assert to defend what appears to be an improper pay differential. (Lab. Code, § 1197.5(a), (b).) See CACI

No. 2741, Affirmative Defense—Different Pay Justified, and CACI No. 2742, Bona Fide Factor Other Than Sex, Race, or Ethnicity, for instructions on the employer's affirmative defenses. (See Lab. Code, § 1197.5(a)(1), (b)(1).)

Sources and Authority

- Right to Equal Pay Based on Gender, Race, or Ethnicity. Labor Code section 1197.5(a), (b).
- Private Right of Action to Enforce Equal Pay Claim. Labor Code section 1197.5(h).
- "This section was intended to codify the principle that an employee is entitled to equal pay for equal work without regard to gender." (Jones v. Tracy School Dist. (1980) 27 Cal.3d 99, 104 [165 Cal.Rptr. 100, 611 P.2d 441].)
- "To prove a prima facie case of wage discrimination, 'a plaintiff must establish that, based on gender, the employer pays different wages to employees doing substantially similar work under substantially similar conditions. [Footnote omitted.]' 'If that prima facie showing is made, the burden shifts to the employer to prove the disparity is permitted by one of the EPA's [four] statutory exceptions—[such as,] that the disparity is based on a factor other than sex.' But a plaintiff must show 'not only that she [was] paid lower wages than a male comparator for equal work, but that she has selected the proper comparator.' 'The [EPA] does not prohibit variations in wages; it prohibits discriminatory variations in wages. . . . [Accordingly,] "a comparison to a specifically chosen employee should be scrutinized closely to determine its usefulness." ' " (Allen v. Staples, Inc. (2022) 84 Cal.App.5th 188, 194 [299 Cal.Rptr.3d 779], original italics, internal citations omitted.)
- "[T]he plaintiff in a section 1197.5 action must first show that the employer paid a male employee more than a female employee ' "for equal work on jobs the performance of which requires equal skill, effort, and responsibility, and which are performed under similar working conditions." ' " (Green, supra, 111 Cal.App.4th at p. 628.)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, §§ 355 et seq., 430, 431

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 11-G, Compensation—Wage Discrimination, ¶ 11:1075 et seq. (The Rutter Group)

3 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 43, Civil Actions Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 43.02 (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, § 250.14 (Matthew Bender)

2741. Affirmative Defense—Different Pay Justified

[Name of defendant] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] was justified in paying [name of plaintiff] a wage rate that was less than the rate paid to employees of [the opposite sex/another race/another ethnicity]. To establish this defense, [name of defendant] must prove all of the following:

1. That the wage differential was based on one or more of the following factors:

   [a. A seniority system;]

   [b. A merit system;]

   [c. A system that measures earnings by quantity or quality of production;]

   [d. (*Specify alleged bona fide factor(s) other than sex, race, or ethnicity, such as education, training, or experience.).]

2. That each factor was applied reasonably; and

3. That the factor[s] that [name of defendant] relied on account[s] for the entire wage differential.

Prior salary does not justify any disparity in current compensation.

New May 2018; Revised January 2019

Directions for Use

The California Equal Pay Act presents four factors that an employer may offer to justify a pay differential that results in an apparent pay disparity based on gender, race, or ethnicity. Factors a, b, and c in element 1 are specific.

If factor d is selected, the jury must also be instructed with CACI No. 2742, Bona Fide Factor Other Than Sex, Race, or Ethnicity, which establishes what bona fide factors other than sex, race, or ethnicity may justify a pay differential. (See Lab. Code, § 1197.5(a)(1), (b)(1).) Choose the factor or factors that the employer asserts as justification.

Sources and Authority

- Factors Justifying Pay Differential. Labor Code section 1197.5(a)(1), (b)(1).

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, §§ 355 et seq., 430, 431

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 11-G, Compensation—Wage Discrimination, ¶ 11:1075 et seq. (The Rutter Group)

3 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 43, Civil Actions Under Equal

Employment Opportunity Laws, § 43.02 (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, § 250.14 (Matthew Bender)

2742. Bona Fide Factor Other Than Sex, Race, or Ethnicity

[*Name of defendant] claims that [specify bona fide factor other than sex, race, or ethnicity] is a legitimate factor other than [sex/race/ethnicity] that justifies paying [name of plaintiff] at a wage rate that is less than the rate paid to employees of [the opposite sex/another race/another ethnicity].

[*Specify factor] is a factor that justifies the pay differential only if [name of defendant] proves all of the following:

1. That the factor is not based on or derived from a [sex/race/ethnicity]-based differential in compensation;
2. That the factor is job related with respect to [name of plaintiff]'s position; and
3. That the factor is consistent with a business necessity.

A "business necessity" means an overriding legitimate business purpose such that the factor effectively fulfills the business purpose it is supposed to serve.

This defense does not apply, however, if [*name of plaintiff] proves that an alternative business practice exists that would serve the same business purpose without producing the pay differential.

New May 2018

Directions for Use

This instruction must be given along with CACI No. 2741, Affirmative Defense—Different Pay Justified, if factor d of element 1 of CACI No. 2741 is chosen: a bona fide factor other than sex, race, or ethnicity, such as education, training, or experience. This factor applies only if the employer demonstrates that the factor is not based on or derived from a sex, race, or ethnicity-based differential in compensation, is job-related with respect to the position in question, and is consistent with a business necessity. "Business necessity" means an overriding legitimate business purpose such that the factor effectively fulfills the business purpose it is supposed to serve. This defense does not apply if the employee demonstrates that an alternative business practice exists that would serve the same business purpose without producing the wage differential. (See Lab. Code, § 1197.5(a)(1)(D), (b)(1)(D).)

Sources and Authority

- Bona Fide Factor Other Than Sex, Race, or Ethnicity. Labor Code section 1197.5(a)(1)(D), (b)(1)(D).

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, §§ 355 et seq., 430, 431

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 11-G, Compensation—Wage Discrimination, ¶ 11:1077.10 et seq. (The Rutter Group)

3 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 43, Civil Actions Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 43.02 (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, § 250.14 (Matthew Bender)

2743. Equal Pay Act—Retaliation—Essential Factual Elements (Lab. Code, § 1197.5(k))

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] retaliated against [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] for [pursuing/assisting another in the enforcement of] [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] right to equal pay regardless of [sex/race/ethnicity]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] [specify acts taken by plaintiff to invoke, enforce, or assist in the enforcement of the right to equal pay];
2. That [name of defendant] [discharged/[other adverse employment action]] [name of plaintiff];
3. That [name of plaintiff]'s [pursuit of/assisting in the enforcement of another's right to] equal pay was a substantial motivating reason for [name of defendant]'s [discharging/[other adverse employment action]] [name of plaintiff];
4. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
5. That [name of defendant]'s retaliatory conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New May 2018; Revised May 2020, May 2024

Directions for Use

Use this instruction in cases of alleged retaliation against an employee under the Equal Pay Act. The Act prohibits adverse employment actions against an employee who has invoked the protections of or taken steps to enforce it. (Lab. Code, § 1197.5(k)(1) [protecting the right of employees to invoke the protections of the Act, assist in enforcement of the Act, disclose their wages, discuss the wages of others, inquire about another employee's wages, or encourage other employees to exercise their rights under the Act].) Modify the instruction as necessary to describe the employee's protected activity in the first sentence. An employee who has been retaliated against may bring a civil action for reinstatement, reimbursement for lost wages and work benefits, interest, and equitable relief. (Lab. Code, § 1197.5(k)(2).)

Note that there are two causation elements. First, there must be a causal connection between the employee's protected activity and the adverse employment action (element 3). Second, the employee must have suffered harm because of the employer's retaliatory acts (element 5).

Element 3 uses the term "substantial motivating reason" to express both intent and causation between the employee's protected activity and the adverse employment action. "Substantial motivating reason" has been held to be the appropriate standard under the discrimination prohibitions of the Fair Employment and Housing Act to address the possibility of both discriminatory and nondiscriminatory motives. (See Harris v. City of Santa Monica (2013) 56 Cal.4th 203, 232 [152 Cal.Rptr.3d 392, 294 P.3d 49]; CACI No. 2507, "Substantial Motivating Reason" Explained.) Whether this standard applies to the Equal Pay Act retaliation cases has not been addressed by the courts.

If an employer takes adverse action within 90 days of an employee's exercise of rights protected by the Equal Pay Act, there is a rebuttable presumption in favor of the employee's claim. (Lab. Code, § 1197.5(k)(1).) Consider modifying this instruction and/or giving additional instructions regarding the rebuttable presumption.

Sources and Authority

- Retaliation Prohibited Under Equal Pay Act. Labor Code section 1197.5(k).
- Rebuttable Presumption in Favor of Employee's Claim. Labor Code section 1197.5(k)(1).

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, § 430

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 11-G, Compensation—Wage Discrimination, ¶ 11:1077.20 (The Rutter Group)

3 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 43, Civil Actions Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws, § 43.02 (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, § 250.14[b] (Matthew Bender)

2744–2749. Reserved for Future Use

2750. Failure to Reimburse Employee for Necessary Expenditures or Losses—Essential Factual Elements (Lab. Code, § 2802(a))

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] failed to reimburse [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] for necessary [expenditures/ [and] losses]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] incurred [expenditures/ [and] losses] as a direct consequence of [discharging [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] job duties/obeying the directions of [name of defendant]];
2. That the [expenditures/ [and] losses] were necessary and reasonable;
3. That [name of defendant] failed to reimburse [name of plaintiff] for the full amount of the [expenditures/ [and] losses]; and
4. The amount of the [expenditures/ [and] losses] that [name of defendant] failed to compensate.

["Necessary [expenditures/ [and] losses]" may include [expenditures/ [and] losses] [*name of plaintiff] would have incurred even if [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] did not also incur them as a direct consequence of discharging [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] job duties or obeying the directions of [name of defendant].]

New November 2021

Directions for Use

This instruction assumes the plaintiff is an employee and the defendant is the employer. The instruction will need to be modified if there is a dispute about the defendant's status as an employer or the plaintiff's status as an employee of the defendant. Labor Code section 2802 covers necessary expenditures and losses. If only one of those is at issue, select the appropriate option.

If there is an argument that the directions of the employer were unlawful, modify the instruction as necessary. (See Lab. Code, § 2802(a).)

Necessary expenditures and losses may include some personal expenses, for example, the cost of a personal cellphone that is used to make work-related calls. (See Cochran v. Schwan's Home Service, Inc. (2014) 228 Cal.App.4th 1137, 1144 [176 Cal.Rptr.3d 407].) Omit the final paragraph if personal expenses are not at issue.

Sources and Authority

- Obligations of Employer to Indemnify. Labor Code section 2802(a).
- "We conclude that an employer may satisfy its statutory reimbursement obligation by paying employees enhanced compensation in the form of increases in base salary or increases in commission rates, or both, provided there is a means or method to apportion the enhanced compensation to determine what amount is being paid for labor performed and what amount is reimbursement for business expenses." (Gattuso v. Harte-Hanks Shoppers, Inc. (2007) 42 Cal.4th 554, 559 [67 Cal.Rptr.3d 468, 169 P.3d 889].)

- "Does an employer always have to reimburse an employee for the reasonable expense of the mandatory use of a personal cell phone, or is the reimbursement obligation limited to the situation in which the employee incurred an extra expense that he or she would not have otherwise incurred absent the job? The answer is that reimbursement is always required. Otherwise, the employer would receive a windfall because it would be passing its operating expenses on to the employee. Thus, to be in compliance with section 2802, the employer must pay some reasonable percentage of the employee's cell phone bill." (Cochran, supra, 228 Cal.App.4th at p. 1144.)
- "In calculating the reimbursement amount due under section 2802, the employer may consider not only the actual expenses that the employee incurred, but also whether each of those expenses was 'necessary,' which in turn depends on the reasonableness of the employee's choices. For example, an employee's choice of automobile will significantly affect the costs incurred. An employee who chooses an expensive model and replaces it frequently will incur substantially greater depreciation costs than an employee who chooses a lower priced model and replaces it less frequently. Similarly, some vehicles use substantially more fuel or require more frequent or more costly maintenance and repairs than others. The choice of vehicle will also affect insurance costs. Other employee choices, such as the brand and grade of gasoline or tires and the shop performing maintenance and repairs, will also affect the actual costs. Thus, calculation of automobile expense reimbursement using the actual expenses method requires not only detailed recordkeeping by the employee and complex allocation calculations, but also the exercise of judgment (by the employer, the employee, and officials charged with enforcement of § 2802) to determine whether the expenses incurred were reasonable and therefore necessary." (Gattuso, supra, 42 Cal.4th at p. 568.)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, §§ 440, 442

2 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 30, Employer's Tort Liability to Third Parties for Conduct of Employees, § 30.09 (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, § 250.21 (Matthew Bender)

2751. Reserved for Future Use

2752. Tip Pool Conversion—Essential Factual Elements (Lab. Code, § 351)

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] [took money/allowed [specify ineligible individual(s) or class(es) of individuals] to take money] from a tip pool that [name of plaintiff] was entitled to receive. [The court has determined that [specify ineligible individual(s) or class(es) of individuals] [was/were] not eligible to receive money from a tip pool.]

To establish this claim, [*name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] was [a/an] [employer/[other covered entity]];
2. That [name of plaintiff] was an employee of [name of defendant];
3. That [name of defendant] maintained a tip pool in which money left by patrons in an amount over and above the actual amount due for [specify services rendered or goods, food, drink, or articles sold] was pooled to be distributed among employees including [name of plaintiff]; and
4. [That [name of defendant] took money from the tip pool that [name of plaintiff] was entitled to receive.]

   [*or]

   [That [*name of defendant] allowed [specify ineligible individual(s) or class(es) of individuals] to take money from the tip pool that [name of plaintiff] was entitled to receive.]

[*Name of plaintiff] does not have to prove the exact amount of money that was taken.

[*Name of defendant] is required to keep accurate records of all tips or gratuities received by [him/her/nonbinary pronoun/it] for [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] employees.

New November 2021

Directions for Use

This instruction sets forth the elements required for an employee to establish wrongful conversion of tip pool money.

Element 1 may be omitted if there is no dispute regarding the defendant's status as an employer.

Element 4 presents alternative factual scenarios: the defendant's direct conversion of tip pool money and the defendant's misallocation of tip pool money to any individual who should not be included in the tip pool, for example, the employer, the owner, managers, and supervisors. For the second option, the court must determine as a matter of law whether an individual was properly included in the tip pool. (See Lab. Code, § 350(a), (d) [defining employer and agent to include "every person other than the employer having the authority to hire or discharge any employee or supervise, direct, or control the acts of employees"], § 351 [prohibiting employers and agents from receiving any gratuity paid to an employee by a patron]. Include the optional sentence in the introductory paragraph if the court has determined that the defendant allowed ineligible individuals to partake in the tip pool.

Sources and Authority

- "Employer" Defined. Labor Code section 350(a).
- "Employee" Defined. Labor Code section 350(b).
- "Gratuity" Defined. Labor Code section 350(e).
- Employee Gratuities. Labor Code section 351.
- Employer's Duty to Keep Records. Labor Code section 353.
- "The purpose of section 351, as spelled out in the language of the statute, is to prevent an employer from collecting, taking or receiving gratuity income or any part thereof, as his own as part of his daily gross receipts, from deducting from an employee's wages any amount on account of such gratuity, and from requiring an employee to credit the amount of the gratuity or any part thereof against or as a part of his wages. And the legislative intent reflected in the history of the statute, was to ensure that employees, not employers, receive the full benefit of gratuities that patrons intend for the sole benefit of those employees who serve them." (Leighton v. Old Heidelberg, Ltd. (1990) 219 Cal.App.3d 1062, 1068 [268 Cal.Rptr. 647].)
- "[W]hen a customer leaves a tip in a collective tip box, the customer necessarily understands the tip is not intended for a particular person and the tip will be divided among the behind-the-counter service employees. It is undisputed that these employees consist of baristas and shift supervisors. It would be inconsistent with the purpose of the statute to require an employer to disregard the customer's intent and to instead compel the employer to redirect the tips to only some of the service personnel." (Chau v. Starbucks Corp. (2009) 174 Cal.App.4th 688, 699 [94 Cal.Rptr.3d 593], original italics.)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, § 456

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 4, Payment of Wages, § 4.10 (Matthew Bender)

2753. Failure to Pay All Vested Vacation Time—Essential Factual Elements (Lab. Code, § 227.3)

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] owes [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] compensation for unpaid vacation time that [name of plaintiff] earned but did not use before being terminated.

To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] was [a/an] [employer/[specify other covered entity]];
2. That [name of plaintiff] was an employee of [name of defendant];
3. That [name of defendant] did not pay [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] for all earned and unused vacation time at [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] final rate of pay in accordance with the [contract of employment/employer policy]; and
4. The amount owed to [name of plaintiff] for earned and unused vacation time.

New November 2021

Directions for Use

Element 1 may be omitted if there is no dispute regarding the defendant's status as an employer.

An employee's proportionate right to a paid vacation vests as the labor is rendered. (Suastez v. Plastic Dress-Up Co. (1982) 31 Cal.3d 774, 784 [183 Cal.Rptr. 846, 647 P.2d 122].) If there is a dispute as to the amount of vested vacation time, the jury should be instructed to determine a pro rata share of vested vacation time. "[A]n employment contract or employer policy shall not provide for forfeiture of vested vacation upon termination." (Lab. Code, § 227.3.)

Sources and Authority

- Payment of Vested Vacation Wages Upon Termination. Labor Code section 227.3.
- "Employer" Defined. Labor Code section 350(a).
- "Employee" Defined. Labor Code section 350(b).
- "The right to a paid vacation, when offered in an employer's policy or contract of employment, constitutes deferred wages for services rendered. Case law from this state and others, as well as principles of equity and justice, compel the conclusion that a proportionate right to a paid vacation 'vests' as the labor is rendered. Once vested, the right is protected from forfeiture by section 227.3. On termination of employment, therefore, the statute requires that an employee be paid in wages for a pro rata share of his vacation pay." (Suastez, supra, 31 Cal.3d at p. 784.)

- "Under Labor Code section 227.3, an employee has the right to be paid for unused vacation only after the 'employee is terminated without having taken off his vested vacation time.' Thus, termination of employment is the event that converts the employer's obligation to allow an employee to take vacation from work into the monetary obligation to pay that employee for unused vested vacation time. Consequently, [the plaintiff's] cause of action to enforce his statutory right to be paid for vested vacation did not accrue until the date his employment was terminated." (Church v. Jamison (2006) 143 Cal.App.4th 1568, 1576–1577 [50 Cal.Rptr.3d 166], footnote omitted.)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, §§ 461–463

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 4, Payment of Wages, § 4.10; Ch. 5, Administrative and Judicial Remedies Under Wage and Hour Laws, § 5.40 (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, § 250.16 (Matthew Bender)

2754. Reporting Time Pay—Essential Factual Elements

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] scheduled or otherwise required [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] to [report to work/report to work for a second shift] but when [name of plaintiff] reported to work, [name of defendant] [failed to put [name of plaintiff] to work/furnished a shortened [workday/shift]]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] was [a/an] [employer/[specify other covered entity]];
2. That [name of plaintiff] was an employee of [name of defendant];
3. That [name of defendant] required [name of plaintiff] to report to work for one or more [workdays/second shifts];
4. That [name of plaintiff] reported for work; and
5. That [name of defendant] [failed to put [name of plaintiff] to work/ furnished less than [half of the usual day's work/two hours of work on a second shift]].

If you find that [*name of plaintiff] has proved all of the above elements, you must determine the amount of wages [name of defendant] must pay to [name of plaintiff]. For each workday when an employee reports to work, as required, but is either not put to work or furnished with less than half the usual day's hours, the employer must pay wages for half the usual or scheduled day's hours at the employee's regular rate of pay (and in no event for less than two hours or more than four hours).

[*Name of plaintiff]'s regular rate of pay in this case is [specify amount].

[For each occasion when an employee is required to report for a second shift in the same workday but is furnished less than two hours of work, the employer must pay wages for two hours at the employee's regular rate of pay.]

"Workday" means any consecutive 24-hour period beginning at the same time each calendar day.

New November 2021; Revised May 2022

Directions for Use

This instruction is intended to instruct the jury on factual determinations required for the judge to then calculate damages for the defendant's failure to pay reporting time under section 5 of the Industrial Welfare Commission's wage orders. (Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, § 11010, subd. 5, § 11020, subd. 5, § 11030, subd. 5, § 11040, subd. 5, § 11050, subd. 5, § 11060, subd. 5, § 11070, subd. 5, § 11080, subd. 5, § 11090, subd. 5, § 11100, subd. 5, § 11110, subd. 5, § 11120, subd. 5, § 11130, subd. 5, § 11140, subd. 5, § 11150, subd. 5, and § 11160, subd. 5.)

Select the appropriate bracketed language in the introductory paragraph and elements 3 and 5, and indicate whether the plaintiff was not provided work at all or was provided a shortened shift, or both, in the introductory paragraph and element 5. If the case involves both first and second shifts, the instruction will need to be modified.

Element 1 may be omitted if there is no dispute regarding the defendant's status as an employer.

Modify the instruction as appropriate if the plaintiff claims that the defendant required telephonic reporting to work before the start of a potential shift. (See Ward v. Tilly's, Inc. (2019) 31 Cal.App.5th 1167, 1171 [243 Cal.Rptr.3d 461].)

Include the bracketed next to last paragraph only if the plaintiff claims that the defendant required the plaintiff to report for work a second time in a single workday.

Sources and Authority

- "Employee" and "Employer" Defined. Title 8 California Code of Regulations sections 11010–11160.
- "Person" Defined. Lab. Code section 18.
- Reporting Time Pay. Title 8 California Code of Regulations sections 11010–11160 (subd. 5 of each section).
- "We conclude that the on-call scheduling alleged in this case triggers Wage Order 7's reporting time pay requirements. As we explain, on-call shifts burden employees, who cannot take other jobs, go to school, or make social plans during on-call shifts—but who nonetheless receive no compensation from [the defendant] unless they ultimately are called in to work. This is precisely the kind of abuse that reporting time pay was designed to discourage." (Ward, supra, 31 Cal.App.5th at p. 1171.)
- "[W]e conclude, contrary to the trial court, that an employee need not necessarily physically appear at the workplace to 'report for work.' Instead, 'report[ing] for work' within the meaning of the wage order is best understood as presenting oneself as ordered. 'Report for work,' in other words, does not have a single meaning, but instead is defined by the party who directs the manner in which the employee is to present himself or herself for work—that is, by the employer. [¶] As thus interpreted, the reporting time pay requirement operates as follows. If an employer directs employees to present themselves for work by physically appearing at the workplace at the shift's start, then the reporting time requirement is triggered by the employee's appearance at the jobsite. But if the employer directs employees to present themselves for work by logging on to a computer remotely, or by appearing at a client's jobsite, or by setting out on a trucking route, then the employee 'reports for work' by doing those things. And if, as plaintiff alleges in this case, the employer directs employees to present themselves for work by telephoning the store two hours prior to the start of a shift, then the reporting time requirement is triggered by the telephonic contact." (Ward, supra, 31 Cal.App.5th at p. 1185, original italics.)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, § 432

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 1, Overview of Wage and Hour Laws, § 1.05; Ch. 3, Determining Compensable Hours and Proper Payment Amounts, § 3.13 (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, § 250.71 (Matthew Bender)

2755–2759. Reserved for Future Use

2760. Rest Break Violations—Introduction (Lab. Code, § 226.7)

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] owes [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] pay because [name of defendant] did not authorize and permit one or more paid rest breaks.

An employee is entitled to a paid 10-minute rest break during every four-hour work period[. /, or major fraction of four hours.] [However, an employee is not entitled to a rest break if the total daily work time is less than three and one-half hours.] This means that over the course of a workday [*name of plaintiff] was due [specify which rest breaks are at issue, e.g., a paid 10-minute rest break after working longer than three and one-half hours and a second paid 10-minute rest break after working more than six hours but no more than ten hours]. [Rest breaks must occur, if practical under the circumstances, in the middle of each four-hour work period. [Specify any additional timing requirement(s) of the rest breaks at issue if delay is at issue.]]

An employer must relieve the employee of all work duties and relinquish control over how the employee spends time during each 10-minute rest break. This includes not requiring employees to remain on call or on-site during rest breaks. An employer, however, does not have an obligation to keep records of employee rest breaks or to ensure that an employee takes each rest break.

"Workday" means any consecutive 24-hour period beginning at the same time each calendar day.

[Rest breaks, which are paid, and meal breaks, which are unpaid, have different requirements. You should consider claims for rest break violations separately from claims for meal break violations. A rest break cannot be combined with a meal break or with another 10-minute rest break. For example, providing an unpaid meal break does not satisfy the employer's obligation to authorize and permit a paid 10-minute rest break.]

New December 2022

Directions for Use

Give this instruction with CACI No. 2761, Rest Break Violations-Essential Factual Elements.

This instruction is intended for use by nonexempt employees subject to section 12(C) of Industrial Welfare Commission wage orders 1-2001 through 11-2001, 13-2001 through 15-2001, and 17-2001. Other wage orders contain exceptions to the common rule. Different rest period rules apply to certain employees of emergency ambulance providers; do not give this instruction in a case involving those employees. (See Lab. Code, §§ 880–890, added by initiative, Gen. Elec. (Nov. 6, 2018), commonly known as Prop. 11.) Different on-call rest period rules apply to security officers employed in the security services industry. (See Lab. Code, § 226.7(f).) This instruction should be modified in a case involving security officers.

Specify in the second paragraph which breaks the plaintiff claims to have missed if there is uniformity in that allegation. Rest break claims can also involve noncompliant timing. If so, specify the noncompliant timing issue in the second paragraph. Rest breaks are based on "the total hours worked daily at the rate of ten (10) minutes net rest time per four (4) hours or major fraction thereof." (See, e.g., Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, § 11010, subd. 12(A).) The wage orders' language means that "[e]mployees are entitled to 10 minutes' rest for shifts from three and one-half to six hours in length, 20 minutes for shifts of more than six hours up to 10 hours, 30 minutes for shifts of more than 10 hours up to 14 hours, and so on." (Brinker Restaurant Corp. v. Superior Court (2012) 53 Cal.4th 1004, 1029 [139 Cal.Rptr.3d 315, 273 P.3d 513].) Include the bracketed phrase "or major fraction of four hours" in the second paragraph only if it will assist the jury in understanding the scheduling of rest breaks. "Though not defined in the wage order, a 'major fraction' long has been understood—legally, mathematically, and linguistically—to mean a fraction greater than one-half." (Brinker Restaurant Corp., supra, 53 Cal.4th at p. 1028.)

The definition of "workday" may be omitted if it is included in another instruction.

Give the optional final paragraph only if both rest breaks and meal breaks are at issue in the case.

Sources and Authority

- Right of Action for Missed Meal and Rest and Recovery Periods. Labor Code section 226.7.
- "Workday" Defined. Labor Code section 500.
- Rest Periods. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, § 11010 et seq., subd. 12.
- "An employer is required to authorize and permit the amount of rest break time called for under the wage order for its industry. If it does not—if, for example, it adopts a uniform policy authorizing and permitting only one rest break for employees working a seven-hour shift when two are required—it has violated the wage order and is liable. No issue of waiver ever arises for a rest break that was required by law but never authorized; if a break is not authorized, an employee has no opportunity to decline to take it." (Brinker Restaurant Corp., supra, 53 Cal. 4th at p. 1033.)
- "What we conclude is that state law prohibits on-duty and on-call rest periods. During required rest periods, employers must relieve their employees of all duties and relinquish any control over how employees spend their break time." (Augustus v. ABM Security Services, Inc. (2016) 2 Cal.5th 257, 260 [211 Cal.Rptr.3d 634, 385 P.3d 823], abrogated in part by Lab. Code, § 226.7(f)(5).)

- "[O]ne cannot square the practice of compelling employees to remain at the ready, tethered by time and policy to particular locations or communications devices, with the requirement to relieve employees of all work duties and employer control during 10-minute rest periods." (Augustus, supra, 2 Cal.5th at p. 269, abrogated in part by Lab. Code, § 226.7(f)(5).)
- "Because rest periods are 10 minutes in length (Wage Order 4, subd. 12(A)), they impose practical limitations on an employee's movement. That is, during a rest period an employee generally can travel at most five minutes from a work post before returning to make it back on time. Thus, one would expect that employees will ordinarily have to remain on site or nearby. This constraint, which is of course common to all rest periods, is not sufficient to establish employer control." (Augustus, supra, 2 Cal.5th at p. 270.)
- "Although section 12(A) of Wage Order 1-2001 does not describe the considerations relevant to such a justification, we conclude that a departure from the preferred schedule is permissible only when the departure (1) will not unduly affect employee welfare and (2) is tailored to alleviate a material burden that would be imposed on the employer by implementing the preferred schedule." (Rodriguez v. E.M.E., Inc. (2016) 246 Cal.App.4th 1027, 1040 [201 Cal.Rptr.3d 337].)
- "[W]e hold that the Court of Appeal erred in construing section 226.7 as a penalty and applying a one-year statute of limitations. The statute's plain language, the administrative and legislative history, and the compensatory purpose of the remedy compel the conclusion that the 'additional hour of pay' is a premium wage intended to compensate employees, not a penalty." (Murphy v. Kenneth Cole Productions, Inc. (2007) 40 Cal.4th 1094, 1114 [56 Cal.Rptr.3d 880, 155 P.3d 284], internal citation omitted.)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, § 390

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 2, Applicability of Rules Governing Hours Worked, §§ 2.08, 2.09 (Matthew Bender)

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 3, Determining Compensable Hours and Proper Payment Amounts, § 3.01 (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, § 250.14 (Matthew Bender)

2761. Rest Break Violations—Essential Factual Elements (Lab. Code, § 226.7)

To establish a rest break violation, [name of plaintiff] must prove both of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] worked for [name of defendant] on one or more workdays for at least three and one-half hours; and
2. That [name of defendant] did not authorize and permit [name of plaintiff] to take one or more 10-minute rest breaks to which [name of plaintiff] was entitled.

New December 2022

Directions for Use

Element 1 states the minimum shift length for a rest break. Depending on the length of the shift, multiple rest breaks could be at issue. Element 1 can be modified to cover longer shifts and multiple rest breaks.

The jury must also decide how much pay is owed for any rest break violations. (See CACI No. 2762, Rest Break Violations—Pay Owed.)

Sources and Authority

- Right of Action for Missed Meal and Rest and Recovery Periods. Labor Code section 226.7.
- Rest Periods. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, § 11010 et seq., subd. 12.
- "An employer is required to authorize and permit the amount of rest break time called for under the wage order for its industry. If it does not—if, for example, it adopts a uniform policy authorizing and permitting only one rest break for employees working a seven-hour shift when two are required—it has violated the wage order and is liable. No issue of waiver ever arises for a rest break that was required by law but never authorized; if a break is not authorized, an employee has no opportunity to decline to take it." (Brinker Restaurant Corp., supra, 53 Cal.4th at p. 1033.)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, § 390

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 2, Applicability of Rules Governing Hours Worked, §§ 2.08, 2.09 (Matthew Bender)

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 3, Determining Compensable Hours and Proper Payment Amounts, § 3.01 (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, § 250.14 (Matthew Bender)

2762. Rest Break Violations—Pay Owed

For each workday on which [name of plaintiff] has proved one or more rest break violations, [name of defendant] must pay one additional hour of pay at [name of plaintiff]'s regular rate of pay. You must determine the amount of pay owed for the rest break violations that [name of plaintiff] has proved.

[The "regular rate of pay" for [name of plaintiff] from [insert beginning date] to [insert ending date] was [insert applicable formula]. [Repeat as necessary for date ranges with different regular rates of pay.] Multiply the regular rate of pay by the number of workdays for which [name of plaintiff] has proved one or more rest break violations.]

New December 2022

Directions for Use

Give this instruction with CACI No. 2760, Rest Break Violations-Introduction, and CACI No. 2761, Rest Break Violations-Essential Factual Elements.

Regular rate of pay includes the employee's base hourly rate of pay and all other forms of nondiscretionary compensation earned during the same pay period, including, for example, nondiscretionary bonuses, commissions, and shift differentials. (See Ferra v. Loews Hollywood Hotel, LLC (2021) 11 Cal.5th 858, 878 [280 Cal.Rptr.3d 783, 489 P.3d 1166] [holding that "the term 'regular rate of compensation' in [Labor Code] section 226.7(c) has the same meaning as 'regular rate of pay' in [Labor Code] section 510(a) and encompasses not only hourly wages but all nondiscretionary payments for work performed by the employee"].) The regular rate of pay may be different over different periods of time. The court must determine the method for calculating plaintiff's regular rate of pay. If different regular rates of pay are at issue, define the plaintiff's regular rate of pay for all relevant date ranges.

An employer must pay a premium wage of one hour of pay at the employee's regular rate of compensation for any rest breaks not provided. (Lab. Code, § 226.7(c).) This instruction may need to be modified if there is evidence of an employer's paying premium wages for any rest break violations.

The definition of "regular rate of pay" may be omitted if it is included in another instruction.

Sources and Authority

- Right of Action for Missed Meal and Rest and Recovery Periods. Labor Code section 226.7.
- Rest Periods. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, § 11010 et seq., subd. 12.
- "[W]e hold that the term 'regular rate of compensation' in section 226.7(c) has the same meaning as 'regular rate of pay' in section 510(a) and encompasses not only hourly wages but all nondiscretionary payments for work performed by the employee. This interpretation of section 226.7(c) comports with the remedial purpose of the Labor Code and wage orders and with our general guidance that the 'state's labor laws are to be liberally construed in favor of worker protection.' " (Ferra, supra, 11 Cal.5th at p. 878.)

- "[W]e hold that the Court of Appeal erred in construing section 226.7 as a penalty and applying a one-year statute of limitations. The statute's plain language, the administrative and legislative history, and the compensatory purpose of the remedy compel the conclusion that the 'additional hour of pay' is a premium wage intended to compensate employees, not a penalty." (Murphy v. Kenneth Cole Productions, Inc. (2007) 40 Cal.4th 1094, 1114 [56 Cal.Rptr.3d 880, 155 P.3d 284], internal citation omitted.)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, § 390

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 2, Applicability of Rules Governing Hours Worked, §§ 2.08, 2.09 (Matthew Bender)

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 3, Determining Compensable Hours and Proper Payment Amounts, § 3.01 (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, § 250.14 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation, §§ 4.1, 4.74, 4.76 (Thomson Reuters)

2763–2764. Reserved for Future Use

2765. Meal Break Violations—Introduction (Lab. Code, §§ 226.7, 512)

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] owes [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] pay because [name of defendant] did not provide one or more meal breaks.

Employers are required to provide meal breaks at specified times during a workday. [Specify any scheduling requirement(s) of the meal breaks at issue if delay or interruption is at issue.] In this case, [name of plaintiff] was entitled to a 30-minute unpaid meal break for each period of work lasting longer than five hours. This means that over the course of a workday, [name of plaintiff] was due [specify which meal breaks are at issue, e.g., a first meal break that starts after no more than five hours of work and a second meal break to start after no more than ten hours of work.]

A meal break complies with the law if the employer does all of the following:

1. Provides a reasonable opportunity to take uninterrupted 30-minute meal breaks on time;
2. Does not impede the employee from taking 30-minute meal breaks;
3. Does not discourage the employee from taking 30-minute meal breaks;
4. Relieves the employee of all duties during 30-minute meal breaks; and
5. Relinquishes control over the employee's activities during 30-minute meal breaks, including not requiring the employee to stay on the premises.

An employer, however, is not required to police meal breaks, ensure that an employee takes a meal break, or ensure that an employee does no work during a meal break.

"Workday" means any consecutive 24-hour period beginning at the same time each calendar day.

[Meal breaks, which are unpaid, and rest breaks, which are paid, have different requirements. You should consider claims for meal break violations separately from claims for rest break violations. For example, providing an unpaid meal break does not satisfy the employer's obligation to provide an employee with a paid 10-minute rest break.]

New December 2022

Directions for Use

This instruction assumes a nonexempt employee who is entitled to one or more meal breaks. It should be read before the other meal break instructions. (See CACI No. 2766A, Meal Break Violations—Essential Factual Elements, and CACI No. 2766B, Meal Break Violations—Rebuttable Presumption—Employer Records.) It may need to be modified in certain limited circumstances, for example, if waiver of meal breaks is at issue. (See CACI No. 2770, Affirmative Defense—Meal Breaks—Waiver by Mutual Consent, and CACI No. 2771, Affirmative Defense—Meal Breaks—Written Consent to On-Duty Meal Breaks.)

Specify the meal breaks at issue and any scheduling requirements in the second paragraph.

Wage and hour claims are governed by two sources of authority: the provisions of the Labor Code and a series of 18 wage orders, adopted by the Industrial Welfare Commission. (See Mendiola v. CPS Security Solutions, Inc. (2015) 60 Cal.4th 833, 838 [182 Cal.Rptr.3d 124, 340 P.3d 355].) Different meal period rules apply to certain employees of emergency ambulance providers; do not give this instruction in a case involving those employees. (See Lab. Code, §§ 880–890, added by initiative, Gen. Elec. (Nov. 6, 2018), commonly known as Prop. 11.) Other exceptions to the meal period rules exist, which may require modifying this instruction. For example, persons employed in the motion picture and broadcasting industries are entitled to a meal break after six hours of work. (See Lab. Code, § 512(d); Wage Order 12-2001.) Other exceptions to the meal period rules include most instances where the Industrial Welfare Commission authorized adoption of a working condition order permitting a meal period to commence after six hours of work, certain commercial drivers, certain workers in the wholesale baking industry, and workers covered by collective bargaining agreements that meet specified requirements. (Lab. Code, § 512(b)–(e).)

The Labor Code and the wage orders exempt certain employees from receiving premium pay for meal period violations (for example, executives). The assertion of an exemption from wage and hour laws is an affirmative defense, which presents a mixed question of law and fact. (See Ramirez v. Yosemite Water Co. (1999) 20 Cal.4th 785, 794 [85 Cal.Rptr.2d 844, 978 P.2d 2].)

The definition of "workday" may be omitted if it is included in another instruction.

Give the optional final paragraph only if both meal breaks and rest breaks are at issue in the case.

Sources and Authority

- Right of Action for Meal and Rest and Recovery Period Violations. Labor Code section 226.7.
- Meal Periods. Labor Code section 512.
- Meal Periods. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, § 11010 et seq., subd. 11.

- Employer Duty to Keep Time Records. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, §§ 11010–11030, 11060–11110, 11150, ¶ 11(C), 11040–11050 & 11130–11140, ¶ 11(A), § 11120, ¶ 11(B), § 11160, ¶ 10(D).
- "Workday" Defined. Labor Code section 500.
- "An employer's duty with respect to meal breaks under both section 512, subdivision (a) and Wage Order No. 5 is an obligation to provide a meal period to its employees. The employer satisfies this obligation if it relieves its employees of all duty, relinquishes control over their activities and permits them a reasonable opportunity to take an uninterrupted 30-minute break, and does not impede or discourage them from doing so. What will suffice may vary from industry to industry, and we cannot in the context of this class certification proceeding delineate the full range of approaches that in each instance might be sufficient to satisfy the law." (Brinker Restaurant Corp. v. Superior Court (2012) 53 Cal.4th 1004, 1040 [139 Cal.Rptr.3d 315, 273 P.3d 513].)
- "[U]nder the relevant statute and wage order, an employee becomes entitled to premium pay for missed or noncompliant meal and rest breaks precisely because she was required to work when she should have been relieved of duty: required to work too long into a shift without a meal break; required in whole or part to work through a break; or, as was the case here, required to remain on duty without an appropriate agreement in place authorizing on-duty meal breaks." (Naranjo v. Spectrum Security Services, Inc. (2022) 13 Cal.5th 93, 106–107 [293 Cal.Rptr.3d 599, 509 P.3d 956].)
- "Accordingly, we conclude that Wage Order No. 5 imposes no meal timing requirements beyond those in section 512. Under the wage order, as under the statute, an employer's obligation is to provide a first meal period after no more than five hours of work and a second meal period after no more than 10 hours of work." (Brinker Restaurant Corp., supra, 53 Cal.4th at p. 1049.)
- "An employee who remains on duty during lunch is providing the employer services; so too the employee who works without relief past the point when permission to stop to eat or rest was legally required. Section 226.7 reflects a determination that work in such circumstances is worth more—or should cost the employer more—than other work, and so requires payment of a premium." (Naranjo, supra, 13 Cal.5th at p. 107.)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, §§ 390–391

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 2, Applicability of Rules Governing Hours Worked, §§ 2.08, 2.09 (Matthew Bender)

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 3, Determining Compensable Hours and Proper Payment Amounts, § 3.01 (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, § 250.14 (Matthew Bender)

2766A. Meal Break Violations—Essential Factual Elements (Lab. Code, §§ 226.7, 512)

To establish a meal break violation, [name of plaintiff] must prove both of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] worked for [name of defendant] for one or more workdays for a period lasting longer than five hours; and
2. That [name of defendant] did not provide [name of plaintiff] with the opportunity to take [a/an] [timely] uninterrupted meal break of at least 30 minutes [for each five-hour period worked].

New December 2022

Directions for Use

If the case involves allegedly untimely meal breaks or more than one meal break, select either or both of the bracketed options in element 2.

Do not give this instruction for any meal break claims involving the rebuttable presumption of a violation based on an employer's records. (See CACI No. 2766B, Meal Break Violations—Rebuttable Presumption—Employer Records.)

The jury must also decide how much pay is owed for any meal break violations. (See CACI No. 2767, Meal Break Violations—Pay Owed.)

Sources and Authority

- Right of Action for Meal and Rest and Recovery Period Violations. Labor Code section 226.7.
- Meal Periods. Labor Code section 512.
- Meal Periods. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, § 11010 et seq., subd. 11.

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, §§ 390–391

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 2, Applicability of Rules Governing Hours Worked, §§ 2.08, 2.09 (Matthew Bender)

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 3, Determining Compensable Hours and Proper Payment Amounts, § 3.01 (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, § 250.14 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation, §§ 4.1, 4.4 (Thomson Reuters)

2766B. Meal Break Violations—Rebuttable Presumption—Employer Records

An employer must keep accurate records of the start and end times of each meal break. [*Specify noncompliance in records that gives rise to rebuttable presumption of meal break violation, e.g., missing time records, records showing missed meal breaks, meal breaks of less than 30 minutes, or meal breaks taken too late in a workday may prove a meal break violation.]

If you decide that [*name of plaintiff] has proved that [[name of defendant] did not keep accurate records of compliant meal breaks/[name of defendant]'s records show [missed/ [,/or] shortened/ [,/or] delayed] meal breaks], then your decision on [name of plaintiff]'s meal break claim must be for [name of plaintiff] unless [name of defendant] proves all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] provided [name of plaintiff] a reasonable opportunity to take uninterrupted 30-minute meal breaks on time;
2. That [name of defendant] did not impede [name of plaintiff] from taking 30-minute meal breaks;
3. That [name of defendant] did not discourage [name of plaintiff] from taking 30-minute meal breaks;
4. That [name of defendant] relieved [name of plaintiff] of all duties during 30-minute meal breaks; and
5. That [name of defendant] relinquished control over [name of plaintiff]'s activities during 30-minute meal breaks.

If you decide that [*name of defendant] has proved all of the above for each meal break, then there have been no meal break violations and your decision must be for [name of defendant].

However, if you decide that [*name of defendant] has not proved all of the above for each meal break, then you must still decide how many workdays [name of defendant] did not prove all of the above and you must determine the amount of pay owed.

[*Name of defendant] must pay one additional hour of pay at [name of plaintiff]'s regular rate of pay for each workday on which [name of defendant] did not prove all of the above.

[The "regular rate of pay" for [*name of plaintiff] from [insert beginning date] to [insert ending date] was [insert applicable formula]. [Repeat as necessary for date ranges with different regular rates of pay.] Multiply the regular rate of pay by the number of workdays for which [name of defendant] did not prove all of the above.]]

New December 2022

Directions for Use

Employer records showing noncompliant meal breaks raise a rebuttable presumption of a meal break violation. (See Donohue v. AMN Services, LLC (2021) 11 Cal.5th 58, 61 [275 Cal.Rptr.3d 422, 481 P.3d 661] ["time records showing noncompliant meal periods raise a rebuttable presumption of meal period violations"].) Note that employers need not record meal breaks during which all operations cease. (See, e.g., Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, § 11010, subd. 7(A)(1).)

Regular rate of pay includes the employee's base hourly rate of pay and all other forms of non-discretionary compensation earned during the same pay period, including, for example, nondiscretionary bonuses, commissions, and shift differentials. (See Ferra v. Loews Hollywood Hotel, LLC (2021) 11 Cal.5th 858, 878 [280 Cal.Rptr.3d 783, 489 P.3d 1166] [holding that "the term 'regular rate of compensation' in [Labor Code] section 226.7(c) has the same meaning as 'regular rate of pay' in [Labor Code] section 510(a) and encompasses not only hourly wages but all nondiscretionary payments for work performed by the employee"].) The regular rate of pay may be different over different periods of time. The court must determine the method for calculating plaintiff's regular rate of pay. If different regular rates of pay are at issue, define the plaintiff's regular rate of pay for all relevant date ranges.

An employer must pay a premium wage of one hour of pay at the employee's regular rate of compensation for any meal breaks not provided. (Lab. Code, § 226.7(c).) This instruction may need to be modified if there is evidence of an employer's paying premium wages for any meal breaks.

The definition of "regular rate of pay" may be omitted if it is included in another instruction.

Sources and Authority

- Right of Action for Missed Meal and Rest and Recovery Periods. Labor Code section 226.7.
- Meal Periods. Labor Code section 512.
- Meal Periods. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, § 11010 et seq., subd. 11.
- Employer Duty to Keep Time Records. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, §§ 11010–11030, 11060–11110, 11150, ¶ 11(C), 11040–11050 & 11130–11140, ¶ 11(A), § 11120, ¶ 11(B), § 11160, ¶ 10(D).
- "[W]e hold that time records showing noncompliant meal periods raise a rebuttable presumption of meal period violations, including at the summary judgment stage." (Donohue v. AMN Services, LLC (2021) 11 Cal.5th 58, 61 [275 Cal.Rptr.3d 422, 481 P.3d 661].)

- "The practice of rounding time punches for meal periods is inconsistent with the purpose of the Labor Code provisions and the IWC wage order. The text of Labor Code section 512 and Wage Order No. 4 sets precise time requirements for meal periods. Each meal period must be 'not less than 30 minutes,' and no employee shall work 'more than five hours per day' or 'more than 10 hours per day' without being provided with a meal period. These provisions speak directly to the calculation of time for meal period purposes. [¶] The precision of the time requirements set out in Labor Code section 512 and Wage Order No. 4—'not less than 30 minutes' and 'five hours per day' or '10 hours per day'—is at odds with the imprecise calculations that rounding involves. The regulatory scheme that encompasses the meal period provisions is concerned with small amounts of time. For example, we have 'requir[ed] strict adherence to' the Labor Code's requirement that employees receive two daily 10-minute rest periods and 'scrupulously guarded against encroachments on' these periods. The same vigilance is warranted here. Given the relatively short length of a 30-minute meal period, the potential incursion that might result from rounding is significant." (Donohue, supra, 11 Cal.5th at p. 68, internal citations omitted.)
- "Because time records are required to be accurate, it makes sense to apply a rebuttable presumption of liability when records show noncompliant meal periods. If the records are accurate, then the records reflect an employer's true liability; applying the presumption would not adversely affect an employer that has complied with meal period requirements and has maintained accurate records. If the records are incomplete or inaccurate—for example, the records do not clearly indicate whether the employee chose to work during meal periods despite bona fide relief from duty—then the employer can offer evidence to rebut the presumption. It is appropriate to place the burden on the employer to plead and prove, as an affirmative defense, that it genuinely relieved employees from duty during meal periods. 'To place the burden elsewhere would offer an employer an incentive to avoid its recording duty and a potential windfall from the failure to record meal periods.' " (Donohue, supra, 11 Cal.5th at p. 76, internal citations omitted.)
- "[Defendant] misunderstands how the rebuttable presumption operates at the summary judgment stage. Applying the presumption does not mean that time records showing missed, short, or delayed meal periods result in 'automatic liability' for employers. If time records show missed, short, or delayed meal periods with no indication of proper compensation, then a rebuttable presumption arises. Employers can rebut the presumption by presenting evidence that employees were compensated for noncompliant meal periods or that they had in fact been provided compliant meal periods during which they chose to work. 'Representative testimony, surveys, and statistical analysis,' along with other types of evidence, 'are available as tools to render manageable determinations of the extent of liability.' Altogether, this evidence presented at summary judgment may reveal that there are no triable issues of material fact. The rebuttable presumption does not require employers to police meal periods. Instead, it requires employers to give employees a mechanism for recording their meal periods and to ensure that employees use the mechanism properly." (Donohue, supra, 11 Cal.5th at 77, internal citation omitted.)

- "[W]e hold that the term 'regular rate of compensation' in section 226.7(c) has the same meaning as 'regular rate of pay' in section 510(a) and encompasses not only hourly wages but all nondiscretionary payments for work performed by the employee. This interpretation of section 226.7(c) comports with the remedial purpose of the Labor Code and wage orders and with our general guidance that the 'state's labor laws are to be liberally construed in favor of worker protection.' " (Ferra, supra, 11 Cal.5th at p. 878.)
- "[W]e construe the Legislature's use of the disjunctive as permitting an additional hour of pay for each work day that either type of break period is violated. We agree with the district court in Marlo [v. United Parcel Service, Inc.] that allowing an employee to recover one additional hour of pay for each type of violation per work day is not contrary to the 'one additional hour' and 'per work day' wording in subdivision (b). [¶] We further agree with Marlo that construing section 226.7, subdivision (b), as permitting one premium payment for each type of break violation is in accordance with and furthers the public policy behind the meal and rest break mandates." (United Parcel Service Wage & Hour Cases (2011) 196 Cal.App.4th 57, 69 [125 Cal.Rptr.3d 384].)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, §§ 390–391

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 2, Applicability of Rules Governing Hours Worked, §§ 2.08, 2.09 (Matthew Bender)

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 3, Determining Compensable Hours and Proper Payment Amounts, § 3.01 (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, § 250.14 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation, §§ 4.4, 4.21 (Thomson Reuters)

2767. Meal Break Violations—Pay Owed

For each workday on which [name of plaintiff] has proved one or more meal break violations, [name of defendant] must pay one additional hour of pay at [name of plaintiff]'s regular rate of pay. You must determine the amount of pay owed for the meal break violations that [name of plaintiff] has proved.

[The "regular rate of pay" for [name of plaintiff] from [insert beginning date] to [insert ending date] was [insert applicable formula]. [Repeat as necessary for date ranges with different regular rates of pay.] Multiply the regular rate of pay by the number of workdays for which [name of plaintiff] has proved one or more meal break violations.]

New December 2022

Directions for Use

Give this instruction with CACI No. 2765, Meal Break Violations-Introduction, and CACI No. 2766A, Meal Break Violations-Essential Factual Elements. Do not give this instruction for any meal break claims involving the rebuttable presumption of a violation based on an employer's records. (See CACI No. 2766B, Meal Breaks Not Provided-Rebuttable Presumption-Employer Records.)

Regular rate of pay includes the employee's base hourly rate of pay and all other forms of nondiscretionary compensation earned during the same pay period, including, for example, nondiscretionary bonuses, commissions, and shift differentials. (See Ferra v. Loews Hollywood Hotel, LLC (2021) 11 Cal.5th 858, 878 [280 Cal.Rptr.3d 783, 489 P.3d 1166] [holding that "the term 'regular rate of compensation' in [Labor Code] section 226.7(c) has the same meaning as 'regular rate of pay' in [Labor Code] section 510(a) and encompasses not only hourly wages but all nondiscretionary payments for work performed by the employee"].) The regular rate of pay may be different over different periods of time. The court must determine the method for calculating plaintiff's regular rate of pay. If different regular rates of pay are at issue, define the plaintiff's regular rate of pay for all relevant date ranges.

An employer must pay a premium wage of one hour of pay at the employee's regular rate of compensation for any meal breaks not provided. (Lab. Code, § 226.7(c).) This instruction may need to be modified if there is evidence of an employer's paying premium wages for any meal breaks.

The definition of "regular rate of pay" may be omitted if it is included in another instruction.

Sources and Authority

- Right of Action For Missed Meal Period. Labor Code section 226.7.

- Meal Periods. Labor Code section 512.
- "[W]e hold that the term 'regular rate of compensation' in section 226.7(c) has the same meaning as 'regular rate of pay' in section 510(a) and encompasses not only hourly wages but all nondiscretionary payments for work performed by the employee. This interpretation of section 226.7(c) comports with the remedial purpose of the Labor Code and wage orders and with our general guidance that the 'state's labor laws are to be liberally construed in favor of worker protection.' " (Ferra, supra, 11 Cal.5th at p. 878.)
- "Section 226.7 missed-break premium pay does differ from these examples in that it aims to remedy a legal violation. The law permits an employer to allow an employee to work overtime hours, or to work a split shift, provided the employee is paid extra for it, but the law generally does not permit an employer to deprive an employee of a meal or rest break. But why should this difference matter? That missed-break premium pay serves as a remedy for a legal violation does not change the fact that the premium pay also compensates for labor performed under conditions of hardship. One need not exclude the other." (Naranjo v. Spectrum Security Services, Inc. (2022) 13 Cal.5th 93, 108 [293 Cal.Rptr.3d 599, 509 P.3d 956].)
- "[T]he Legislature requires employers to pay missed-break premium pay on an ongoing, running basis, just like other forms of wages." (Naranjo, supra, 13 Cal.5th at p. 110, internal citations omitted.)
- "The employee who remains on duty without a timely break has 'earned' premium pay within any ordinary sense of the word." (Naranjo, supra, 13 Cal.5th at p. 115.)
- "[W]e construe the Legislature's use of the disjunctive as permitting an additional hour of pay for each work day that either type of break period is violated. We agree with the district court in Marlo [v. United Parcel Service, Inc.] that allowing an employee to recover one additional hour of pay for each type of violation per work day is not contrary to the 'one additional hour' and 'per work day' wording in subdivision (b). [¶] We further agree with Marlo that construing section 226.7, subdivision (b), as permitting one premium payment for each type of break violation is in accordance with and furthers the public policy behind the meal and rest break mandates." (United Parcel Service Wage & Hour Cases (2011) 196 Cal.App.4th 57, 69 [125 Cal.Rptr.3d 384].)
- "[U]nder the law as enacted, 'an employee is entitled to the additional hour of pay immediately upon being forced to miss a rest or meal period.' " (Naranjo, supra, 13 Cal.5th at p. 115, original italics.)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, §§ 390–391

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 2, Applicability of Rules Governing Hours Worked, §§ 2.08, 2.09 (Matthew Bender)

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 3, Determining Compensable Hours and Proper Payment Amounts, § 3.01 (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, § 250.14 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation, §§ 4.1, 4.4, 4.21, 4.74, 4.76 (Thomson Reuters)

2768–2769. Reserved for Future Use

2770. Affirmative Defense—Meal Breaks—Waiver by Mutual Consent

---

[Name of defendant] claims that there was no meal break violation because [name of plaintiff] gave up [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] right to a meal break on one or more workdays. This is called "waiver." To succeed on this defense, [name of defendant] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] worked no more than six total hours in a workday; and
2. That [name of plaintiff] and [name of defendant] freely, knowingly, and mutually consented to waiving the meal break of that workday.

[or]

[Name of defendant] claims that there was no meal break violation because [name of plaintiff] gave up [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] right to a second meal break on one or more workdays. This is called "waiver." To succeed on this defense, [name of defendant] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] worked no more than twelve total hours in a workday;
2. That [name of plaintiff] did not waive [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] first meal break of that workday; and
3. That [name of plaintiff] and [name of defendant] freely, knowingly, and mutually consented to waiving the second meal break.

New December 2022

Directions for Use

This instruction sets forth the affirmative defense of waiver of a meal break by mutual consent. Employees in most industries can waive their first or second meal break but not both. (Lab. Code, § 512(a).) Give only the paragraph of the instruction that applies to the meal break waived under the applicable wage order. (See, e.g., Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, § 11010, subd. ¶ 11(A) & (B).)

For an instruction on waiver of off-duty meal breaks, see CACI No. 2771, Affirmative Defense—Meal Breaks—Written Consent to On-Duty Meal Breaks.

Sources and Authority

- Meal Periods. Labor Code section 512.
- Meal Periods. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, §§ 11010–11030, 11060–11110, 11130–11150, ¶ 11, § 11160, ¶ 10, § 11170, ¶ 9.

- "Workday" Defined. Labor Code section 500.
- "An employer's assertion that it did relieve the employee of duty, but the employee waived the opportunity to have a work-free break, is not an element that a plaintiff must disprove as part of the plaintiff's case-in-chief. Rather, as the Court of Appeal properly recognized, the assertion is an affirmative defense, and thus the burden is on the employer, as the party asserting waiver, to plead and prove it." (Brinker Restaurant Corp. v. Superior Court (2012) 53 Cal.4th 1004, 1052–1053 [139 Cal.Rptr.3d 315, 273 P.3d 513], internal citations omitted (conc. opn. of Werdegar, J.), approved in Donohue v. AMN Services, LLC (2021) 11 Cal.5th 58, 74–75 [275 Cal.Rptr.3d 422, 481 P.3d 661].)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, §§ 390, 391

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 2, Applicability of Rules Governing Hours Worked, §§ 2.08, 2.09 (Matthew Bender)

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 9, Wage and Hour Class Claims, § 9.02 (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, §§ 250.14, 250.34 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation, § 4:4 (Thomson Reuters)

2771. Affirmative Defense—Meal Breaks—Written Consent to On-Duty Meal Breaks

---

[Name of defendant] claims that there was no meal break violation because [name of plaintiff] agreed in writing to be on duty during meal breaks. To succeed on this defense, [name of defendant] must prove the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] worked more than [five/six] hours in a workday;
2. That the nature of [name of plaintiff]'s work prevents [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] from being relieved of all duty during meal breaks;
3. That [name of plaintiff] and [name of defendant] freely, knowingly, and mutually consented in writing to on-duty meal breaks during which [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] would not be relieved of all duties; [and]

[4. That [name of plaintiff] has not revoked in writing [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] written consent; and]

5. That [name of defendant] paid [name of plaintiff] at [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] regular rate of pay during the on-duty meal breaks.

New December 2022

Directions for Use

This instruction sets forth an employer's affirmative defense of a written waiver of off-duty meal breaks. Give this instruction only if the defendant claims that the plaintiff freely entered into a written agreement for on-duty meal breaks. (See, e.g., Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, § 11040, subd. 11(A).)

Persons employed in the motion picture industry are entitled to a meal break after six hours of work (Wage Order 12-2001), rather than the five-hour rule applicable in other industries. Select the appropriate option in element 1 depending on the industry's applicable wage order.

Omit optional element 4 if the plaintiff's revocation of written consent is not at issue.

For an instruction on waiver of meal breaks by mutual consent, see CACI No. 2770, Affirmative Defense—Meal Breaks—Waiver by Mutual Consent.

Sources and Authority

- Meal Periods. Labor Code section 512.

- Meal Periods. Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, §§ 11010–11030, 11060-–11110, 11150, ¶ 11(C), 11040–11050 & 11130–11140, ¶ 11(A), § 11120, ¶ 11(B), § 11160, ¶ 10(D).
- "Unless the employee is relieved of all duty during a 30 minute meal period, the meal period shall be considered an 'on duty' meal period and counted as time worked. An 'on duty' meal period shall be permitted only when the nature of the work prevents an employee from being relieved of all duty and when by written agreement between the parties an on-the-job paid meal period is agreed to. The written agreement shall state that the employee may, in writing, revoke the agreement at any time." (Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, § 11010, subd. 11(C).)
- "[The on-duty meal period] exception is exceedingly narrow, applying only when (1) 'the nature of the work prevents an employee from being relieved of all duty' and (2) the employer and employee have agreed, in writing, to the on-duty meal period. Even then, the employee retains the right to 'revoke the agreement at any time.' These narrow terms undercut the argument that the provision creates, by implication, a broad rest period exception permitting employers to unilaterally require that employees take on-duty rest breaks without receiving additional compensation." (Augustus v. ABM Security Services, Inc. (2016) 2 Cal.5th 257, 266–267 [211 Cal.Rptr.3d 634, 385 P.3d 823], original italics, internal citation omitted.)
- "An on-duty meal period is one in which an employee is not 'relieved of all duty' for the entire 30-minute period." (Brinker Restaurant Corp. v. Superior Court (2012) 53 Cal.4th 1004, 1035 [139 Cal.Rptr.3d 315, 273 P.3d 513].)
- "[A]bsent a waiver, the statute's plain terms required [the defendant] to provide 'a meal period'—whether off-duty or on-duty—of at least 30 minutes any time an employee worked at least five hours." (L'Chaim House, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (2019) 38 Cal.App.5th 141, 149 [250 Cal.Rptr.3d 413].)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, §§ 390, 391

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 2, Applicability of Rules Governing Hours Worked, §§ 2.08, 2.09 (Matthew Bender)

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 3, Determining Compensable Hours and Proper Payment Amounts, § 3.01 (Matthew Bender)

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 9, Wage and Hour Class Claims, § 9.02 (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 250, Employment Law: Wage and Hour Disputes, §§ 250.14, 250.34 (Matthew Bender)

2772–2774. Reserved for Future Use

2775. Nonpayment of Wages Under Rounding System—Essential Factual Elements

---

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] owes [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] wages for unpaid work time because [name of defendant]'s policy or practice of adjusting employees' recorded time to the nearest [specify preset increment of time] failed to compensate [name of plaintiff] for all time worked. This practice is often referred to as "rounding."

To establish this claim, [*name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. [That [name of defendant]'s rounding policy is not fair and neutral on its face];

   [*or]

   [That, over time, [*name of defendant]'s method of rounding resulted in failure to pay its [employees/specify subset of employees to which plaintiff belonged] for all time actually worked];

2. That [name of defendant]'s method of rounding resulted in lost compensation for [name of plaintiff]; and

3. The amount of wages owed to [name of plaintiff].

New December 2022

Directions for Use

This instruction is intended for use in cases involving the rounding of time clock entries at the start or end of shifts. Do not use this instruction for cases involving the rounding of time entries in the meal break context, which is unlawful. (See Donohue v. AMN Services, LLC (2021) 11 Cal.5th 58, 68 [275 Cal.Rptr.3d 422, 481 P.3d 661] ["The practice of rounding time punches for meal periods is inconsistent with the purpose of the Labor Code provisions and the IWC wage order"].)

If the court has determined that the defendant's rounding method was fair and neutral on its face, use only the second option for element 1. (See AHMC Healthcare, Inc. v. Superior Court (2018) 24 Cal.App.5th 1014, 1028 [234 Cal.Rptr.3d 804]; See's Candy Shops, Inc. v. Superior Court (2012) 210 Cal.App.4th 889, 907 [148 Cal.Rptr.3d 690].) The jury will need to resolve any factual disputes concerning (1) whether the rounding method consistently resulted in failure to pay all employees or a subset of employees to which plaintiff belonged for all hours worked and (2) whether the plaintiff has lost wages over time as a result of the defendant's rounding method.

Sources and Authority

- Use of Time Clocks. 29 C.F.R. § 785.48(b).
- "Nothing in our analysis precludes a trial court from looking at multiple datapoints to determine whether the rounding system at issue is neutral as applied. Such analysis could uncover bias in the system that unfairly singles out certain employees. For example, as the trial court discussed, a system that in practice overcompensates lower paid employees at the expense of higher paid employees could unfairly benefit the employer." (AHMC Healthcare, Inc., supra, 24 Cal.App.5th at p. 1028.)
- "Although California employers have long engaged in employee time-rounding, there is no California statute specifically authorizing or prohibiting this practice." (See's Candy Shops, supra, 210 Cal.App.4th at p. 901.)
- "Relying on the DOL rounding standard, we have concluded that the rule in California is that an employer is entitled to use the nearest-tenth rounding policy if the rounding policy is fair and neutral on its face and 'it is used in such a manner that it will not result, over a period of time, in failure to compensate the employees properly for all the time they have actually worked.' " (See's Candy Shops, supra, 210 Cal.App.4th at p. 907, internal citations omitted.)
- "Whether a rounding policy will 'result in undercompensation over time is a factual' issue. Summary adjudication on a rounding claim may be appropriate where the employer can show the rounding policy does not systematically underpay the employee, even if the employee loses some compensation over time." (David v. Queen of Valley Medical Center (2020) 51 Cal.App.5th 653, 664 [264 Cal.Rptr.3d 279], internal citation omitted, original italics.)
- "[T]he regulation does not require that every employee gain or break even over every pay period or set of pay periods analyzed; fluctuations from pay period to pay period are to be expected under a neutral system. We further agree with the court in See's I and See's II that a system is fair and neutral and does not systematically undercompensate employees where it results in a net surplus of compensated hours and a net economic benefit to employees viewed as a whole." (AHMC Healthcare, Inc., supra, 24 Cal.App.5th at pp. 1027–1028.)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, § 434

1 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 3, Determining Compensable Hours and Proper Payment Amounts, § 3.02 (Matthew Bender)

California Civil Practice: Employment Litigation, §§ 4.1, 4.21 (Thomson Reuters)

2776–2799. Reserved for Future Use

VF-2700. Nonpayment of Wages (Lab. Code, §§ 201, 202, 218)

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of plaintiff] perform work for [name of defendant]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Does [name of defendant] owe [name of plaintiff] wages under the terms of the employment?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. What is the amount of unpaid wages? $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised December 2005, December 2010, December 2016, November 2023, May 2024*

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2700, Nonpayment of Wages—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

This verdict form may be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required for the court to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest due for nonpayment of wages. (Lab. Code, § 218.6.)

VF-2701. Nonpayment of Minimum Wage (Lab. Code, § 1194)

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of plaintiff] perform work for [name of defendant]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Was [name of plaintiff] paid less than the minimum wage by [name of defendant] for some or all hours worked?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. How many hours was [name of plaintiff] paid less than the minimum wage?

   _____ hours

4. What is the amount of wages owed? $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised June 2005, December 2010, December 2016, November 2023, May 2024*

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2701, Nonpayment of Minimum Wage—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case. If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

This verdict form may be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required for the court to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest due for nonpayment of wages. (Lab. Code, § 218.6.)

VF-2702. Nonpayment of Overtime Compensation (Lab. Code, § 1194)

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of plaintiff] perform work for [name of defendant]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of plaintiff] work overtime hours?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of defendant] know, or should [name of defendant] have known, that [name of plaintiff] had worked overtime hours?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was [name of plaintiff] paid at a rate lower than the legal overtime compensation rate for any overtime hours that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] worked for [name of defendant]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. What is the amount of wages owed? $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised December 2010, June 2015, December 2016, November 2023, May 2024*

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2702, Nonpayment of Overtime Compensation—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

This verdict form may be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required for the court to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest due for nonpayment of wages. (Lab. Code, § 218.6.)

VF-2703. Waiting-Time Penalty for Nonpayment of Wages (Lab. Code, §§ 203, 218)

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of plaintiff] perform work for [name of defendant]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of defendant] discharge [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of defendant] willfully fail to [pay/tender payment of] the full amount of wages earned by [name of plaintiff] on [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] last day of employment?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. For how many calendar days following [name of plaintiff]'s last day of employment did [name of defendant] willfully fail to [pay/tender payment of] the full amount of [name of plaintiff]'s wages? _____ days.

   Answer question 5.

5. What was [name of plaintiff]'s daily wage rate at the time [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] employment ended? $_____ per day.

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised June 2005, December 2010, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2704, Damages—Waiting-Time Penalty for Nonpayment of Wages. Depending on the facts of the case, other factual scenarios can be substituted in questions 2, 3, and 4, as in elements 2, 3, and 4 in the instruction.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2704. Solicitation of Employee by Misrepresentation (Lab. Code, § 970)

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of defendant] make [a] representation(s) to [name of plaintiff] about the kind, character, or existence of work?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. [Was/Were] [name of defendant]'s representation(s) untrue?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of defendant] know the representation(s) [was/were] untrue when made?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did [name of defendant] intend that [name of plaintiff] rely on the representation(s)?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Did [name of plaintiff] reasonably rely on [name of defendant]'s representation(s) and move or change [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] residence for the purpose of working for [name of defendant]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Was [name of plaintiff]'s reliance on [name of defendant]'s representation(s) a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2710, Solicitation of Employee by Misrepresentation—Essential Factual Elements. Depending on the facts of the case, other factual scenarios can be substituted in question 1, as in element 1 in the instruction.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 7 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2705. Preventing Subsequent Employment by Misrepresentation (Lab. Code, § 1050)

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. After [name of plaintiff]'s employment with [name of defendant] ended, did [name of defendant] make [a] representation(s) to [name of prospective employer] about [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. [Was/Were] [name of defendant]'s representation(s) untrue?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of defendant] know the representation(s) [was/were] untrue when [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] made [it/them]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did [name of defendant] make the representation(s) with the intent of preventing [name of plaintiff] from obtaining employment?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

   [a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2700, Preventing Subsequent Employment by Misrepresentation—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 6 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2706. Rest Break Violations (Lab. Code, § 226.7)

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of plaintiff] work for [name of defendant] on one or more workdays for at least three and one-half hours?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of plaintiff] prove at least one rest break violation?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. On how many workdays did one or more rest break violations occur?

   _____ workdays

   Answer question 4.

4. What is the amount of pay owed? $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

[After this verdict form has/After all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

*New December 2022; Revised November 2023

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2760, Rest Break Violations—Introduction, CACI No. 2761, Rest Break Violations—Essential Factual Elements, and CACI No. 2762, Rest Break Violations—Pay Owed.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-

3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

The court may determine if prejudgment interest is awardable and, if so, whether it is discretionary or mandatory. (Civ. Code, §§ 3287, 3288.) If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2707. Meal Break Violations (Lab. Code, §§ 226.7, 512)

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of plaintiff] work for [name of defendant] for one or more workdays for a period lasting longer than five hours?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of plaintiff] prove at least one meal break violation?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. On how many workdays did one or more meal break violations occur?

   _____ workdays

   Answer question 4.

4. What is the amount of pay owed? $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

[After this verdict form has/After all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New December 2022; Revised November 2023, May 2024*

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2765, Meal Break Violations—Introduction, CACI No. 2766A, Meal Break Violations—Essential Factual Elements, and CACI No. 2767, Meal Break Violations—Pay Owed.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-

3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

The court may determine if prejudgment interest is awardable and, if so, whether it is discretionary or mandatory. (Civ. Code, §§ 3287, 3288.) If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2708. Meal Break Violations—Employer Records Showing Noncompliance (Lab. Code, §§ 226.7, 512)

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of plaintiff] work for [name of defendant] for one or more workdays for a period lasting longer than five hours?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Do [name of defendant]'s records show any missed meal breaks, meal breaks of less than 30 minutes, or meal breaks taken too late in a workday?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.]

3. How many meal breaks do the records show as missed, less than 30 minutes, or taken too late in a workday?

   _____ meal breaks

   Answer question 4.

4. For each meal break included in your answer to question 3, did [name of defendant] prove [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] provided a meal break that complies with the law?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form. If you answered no, then answer question 5.

5. Considering by workday the meal breaks determined in question 3, for how many workdays did [name of defendant] fail to prove that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] provided meal breaks that comply with the law?

   _____ workdays

   Answer question 6.

6. For the workdays determined in question 5, what is the amount of pay owed?

$ _____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

[After this verdict form has/After all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New May 2023; Revised November 2023, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2765, Meal Break Violations—Introduction, and CACI No. 2766B, Meal Break Violations—Rebuttable Presumption—Employer Records. Use this verdict form if the plaintiff's meal break claims involve the rebuttable presumption of a violation based on an employer's records showing missed meal breaks, meal breaks of less than 30 minutes, or meal breaks taken too late in a workday. See also verdict form CACI No. VF-2707, Meal Break Violations.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

The court may determine if prejudgment interest is awardable and, if so, whether it is discretionary or mandatory. (Civ. Code, §§ 3287, 3288.) If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2709. Meal Break Violations—Inaccurate or Missing Employer Records (Lab. Code, §§ 226.7, 512)

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of plaintiff] work for [name of defendant] for one or more workdays for a period lasting longer than five hours?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of defendant] keep [accurate] records of the start and end times for meal breaks?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is no, then answer question 3. If you answered yes, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.]

3. For how many meal breaks were [accurate] records of the start and end times for meal breaks not kept?

   _____ meal breaks

   Answer question 4.

4. For each meal break included in your answer to question 3, did [name of defendant] prove [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] provided a meal break that complies with the law?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form. If you answered no, then answer question 5.

5. Considering by workday the meal breaks determined in question 3, for how many workdays did [name of defendant] fail to prove that [he/she/nonbi nary pronoun/it] provided meal breaks that comply with the law?

   _____ workdays

   Answer question 6.

6. For the workdays determined in question 5, what is the amount of pay owed?

   $ _____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

[After this verdict form has/After all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New May 2023; Revised November 2023, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2765, Meal Break Violations—Introduction, and CACI No. 2766B, Meal Break Violations—Rebuttable Presumption—Employer Records. Use this verdict form if the plaintiff's meal break claims involve the rebuttable presumption of a violation based on an employer's inaccurate or missing records. If only missing records are at issue, omit "accurate" from questions 2 and 3. See also verdict form CACI No. VF-2707, Meal Break Violations.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

The court may determine if prejudgment interest is awardable and, if so, whether it is discretionary or mandatory. (Civ. Code, §§ 3287, 3288.) If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2710–VF-2799. Reserved for Future Use

WORKERS' COMPENSATION

2800. Employer's Affirmative Defense—Injury Covered by Workers' Compensation

---

[*Name of defendant] claims that [name of plaintiff] was [name of defendant]'s employee and therefore can only recover under California's Workers' Compensation Act. To succeed on this defense, [name of defendant] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] was [name of defendant]'s employee;
2. That [name of defendant] [had workers' compensation insurance [covering [name of plaintiff] at the time of injury]/was self-insured for workers' compensation claims [at the time of [name of plaintiff]'s injury]];
3. That [name of plaintiff]'s injury occurred while [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was working, or performing a task for or related to the work [name of defendant] hired [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] to do; and
4. That this [task/work] contributed to causing the injury.

Any person performing services for another, other than as an independent contractor, is presumed to be an employee.

New September 2003; Revised October 2004, May 2018

Directions for Use

This instruction is intended for use if the plaintiff is suing a defendant claiming to be the plaintiff's employer. This instruction is not intended for use if the plaintiff is suing under an exception to the workers' compensation exclusivity rule.

Element 3 expresses the requirement that the employee be acting in the course of employment at the time of injury. Element 4 expresses what is referred to as "industrial causation"; that the work was a contributing cause of the injury. The two requirements are different, and both must be proved. (See Lee v. West Kern Water Dist. (2016) 5 Cal.App.5th 606, 625 [210 Cal.Rptr.3d 362].) For an instruction asserting that element 3 does not apply, see CACI No. 2805, Employee Not Within Course of Employment—Employer Conduct Unrelated to Employment.

For other instructions regarding employment status, such as special employment and independent contractors, see instructions in the Vicarious Responsibility series (CACI Nos. 3700–3726). These instructions may need to be modified to fit this context.

Labor Code section 3351 defines "employee" for purposes of workers' compensation. Labor Code section 3352 sets forth exceptions. This instruction should not be given if the plaintiff/employee has been determined to fall within a statutory exception.

If appropriate to the facts of the case, see instructions on the going-and-coming rule in the Vicarious Responsibility series. These instructions may need to be modified to fit this context.

Sources and Authority

- Exclusive Remedy. Labor Code section 3602(a).
- Conditions of Compensation. Labor Code section 3600(a).
- If Conditions of Compensation Not Met. Labor Code section 3602(c).
- "Employee" Defined. Labor Code section 3351.
- Presumption of Employment Status. Labor Code section 3357.
- Failure to Secure Payment of Compensation. Labor Code section 3706.
- "[T]he basis for the exclusivity rule in workers' compensation law is the 'presumed "compensation bargain," pursuant to which the employer assumes liability for industrial personal injury or death without regard to fault in exchange for limitations on the amount of that liability. The employee is afforded relatively swift and certain payment of benefits to cure or relieve the effects of industrial injury without having to prove fault but, in exchange, gives up the wider range of damages potentially available in tort.' " (Fermino v. Fedco, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal.4th 701, 708 [30 Cal.Rptr.2d 18, 872 P.2d 559], internal citation omitted.)
- "Because an employer faced with a civil complaint seeking to enforce a common law remedy which does not state facts indicating coverage by the act bears the burden of pleading and proving 'that the (act) is a bar to the employee's ordinary remedy,' we believe that the burden includes a showing by the employer-defendant, through appropriate pleading and proof, that he had 'secured the payment of compensation' in accordance with the provisions of the act." (Doney v. Tambouratgis (1979) 23 Cal.3d 91, 98, fn. 8 [151 Cal.Rptr. 347, 587 P.2d 1160], internal citations omitted.)
- "A defendant need not plead and prove that it has purchased workers' compensation insurance where the plaintiff alleges facts that otherwise bring the case within the exclusive province of workers' compensation law, and no facts presented in the pleadings or at trial negate the workers' compensation law's application or the employer's insurance coverage." (Gibbs v. American Airlines, Inc. (1999) 74 Cal.App.4th 1, 14 [87 Cal.Rptr.2d 554], internal citations omitted.)
- "[T]he fact that an employee has received workers' compensation benefits from some source does not bar the employee's civil action against an uninsured employer. Instead, '[t]he price that must be paid by each employer for immunity from tort liability is the purchase of a workers' compensation policy [and where the employer chooses] not to pay that price . . . it should not be immune from liability.' " (Huffman v. City of Poway (2000) 84 Cal.App.4th 975, 987 [101 Cal.Rptr.2d 325], internal citations omitted.)

- "Under the Workers' Compensation Act, employees are automatically entitled to recover benefits for injuries 'arising out of and in the course of the employment.' 'When the conditions of compensation exist, recovery under the workers' compensation scheme "is the exclusive remedy against an employer for injury or death of an employee." ' " (Piscitelli v. Friedenberg (2001) 87 Cal.App.4th 953, 986 [105 Cal.Rptr.2d 88], internal citations omitted.)
- "Unlike many other states, in California workers' compensation provides the exclusive remedy for at least some intentional torts committed by an employer. Fermino described a 'tripartite system for classifying injuries arising in the course of employment. First, there are injuries caused by employer negligence or without employer fault that are compensated at the normal rate under the workers' compensation system. Second, there are injuries caused by ordinary employer conduct that intentionally, knowingly or recklessly harms an employee, for which the employee may be entitled to extra compensation under section 4553. Third, there are certain types of intentional employer conduct which bring the employer beyond the boundaries of the compensation bargain, for which a civil action may be brought.' " (Gunnell v. Metrocolor Laboratories, Inc. (2001) 92 Cal.App.4th 710, 723 [112 Cal.Rptr.2d 195], internal citations omitted.)
- "It has long been established in this jurisdiction that, generally speaking, a defendant in a civil action who claims to be one of that class of persons protected from an action at law by the provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act bears the burden of pleading and proving, as an affirmative defense to the action, the existence of the conditions of compensation set forth in the statute which are necessary to its application." (Doney, supra, 23 Cal.3d at p. 96, internal citations and footnote omitted.)
- "California courts have held worker's compensation proceedings to be the exclusive remedy for certain third party claims deemed collateral to or derivative of the employee's injury. Courts have held that the exclusive jurisdiction provisions bar civil actions against employers by nondependent parents of an employee for the employee's wrongful death, by an employee's spouse for loss of the employee's services or consortium, and for emotional distress suffered by a spouse in witnessing the employee's injuries." (Snyder v. Michael's Stores, Inc. (1997) 16 Cal.4th 991, 997 [68 Cal.Rptr.2d 476, 945 P.2d 781], internal citations omitted.)
- " 'An employer-employee relationship must exist in order to bring the . . . Act into effect. (§ 3600)' However, the coverage of the Act extends beyond those who have entered into 'traditional contract[s] of hire.' '[S]ection 3351 provides broadly that for the purpose of the . . . Act, " 'Employee' means every person in the service of an employer under any appointment or contract of hire or apprenticeship, express or implied, oral or written . . . .' " Given this 'section's explicit use of the disjunctive,' a contract of hire is not 'a prerequisite' to the existence of an employment relationship. Moreover, under section 3357, '[a]ny person rendering service for another, other than as an independent contractor, or unless expressly excluded . . . , is presumed to be an employee.' " (Arriaga v. County of Alameda (1995) 9 Cal.4th 1055, 1060–1061 [40 Cal.Rptr.2d 116, 892 P.2d 150], internal citations omitted.)

- "Given these broad statutory contours, we believe that an 'employment' relationship sufficient to bring the act into play cannot be determined simply from technical contractual or common law conceptions of employment but must instead be resolved by reference to the history and fundamental purposes underlying the Workmen's Compensation Act." (Laeng v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1972) 6 Cal.3d 771, 777 [100 Cal.Rptr. 377, 494 P.2d 1], internal citations omitted.)
- "[C]ourts generally are more exacting in requiring proof of an employment relationship when such a relationship is asserted as a defense by the employer to a common law action." (Spradlin v. Cox (1988) 201 Cal.App.3d 799, 808 [247 Cal.Rptr. 347], internal citation omitted.)
- "The question of whether a person is an employee may be one of fact, of mixed law and fact, or of law only. Where the facts are undisputed, the question is one of law, and the Court of Appeal may independently review those facts to determine the correct answer." (Barragan v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1987) 195 Cal.App.3d 637, 642 [240 Cal.Rptr. 811], internal citations omitted.)
- "An employee may have more than one employer for purposes of workers' compensation, and, in situations of dual employers, the second or 'special' employer may enjoy the same immunity from a common law negligence action on account of an industrial injury as does the first or 'general' employer. Identifying and analyzing such situations 'is one of the most ancient and complex questions of law in not only compensation but tort law.' " (Santa Cruz Poultry, Inc. v. Superior Court (1987) 194 Cal.App.3d 575, 578 [239 Cal.Rptr. 578], internal citation omitted.)
- "In determining whether an employee is covered within the compensation system and thus entitled to recover compensation benefits, the 'definitional reach of these covered employment relationships is very broad.' A covered employee is 'every person in the service of an employer under any appointment or contract of hire or apprenticeship, express or implied, oral or written.' 'Any person rendering service for another, other than as an independent contractor, or unless expressly excluded herein, is presumed to be an employee.' . . . [T]hese provisions mandate a broad and generous interpretation in favor of inclusion in the system. Necessarily the other side of that coin is a presumption against the availability of a tort action where an employment relation exists. One result cannot exist without the other. Further, this result does not depend upon 'informed consent,' but rather on the parties' legal status. . . . [W]here the facts of employment are not disputed, the existence of a covered relationship is a question of law." (Santa Cruz Poultry, Inc., supra, 194 Cal.App.3d at pp. 583–584, internal citations omitted.)
- " 'The requirement of . . . section 3600 is twofold. On the one hand, the injury must occur "in the course of the employment." This concept "ordinarily refers to the time, place, and circumstances under which the injury occurs." Thus " '[a]n employee is in the "course of his employment" when he does those reasonable things which his contract with his employment expressly or impliedly permits him to do.' " And, ipso facto, an employee acts within the course of his employment when " 'performing a duty imposed upon him by his employer and one necessary to perform before the terms of the contract [are] mutually satisfied.' " ' [¶] 'On the other hand, the statute requires that an injury "arise out of" the employment. . . . It has long been settled that for an injury to "arise out of the employment" it must "occur by reason of a condition or incident of [the] employment . . . ." That is, the employment and the injury must be linked in some causal fashion.' " (LaTourette v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1998) 17 Cal.4th 644, 651 [72 Cal.Rptr.2d 217, 951 P.2d 1184], internal citations and footnote omitted.)

- "The requirements that an injury arise out of employment or be proximately caused by employment are sometimes referred to together as the requirement of industrial causation. It is a looser concept of causation than the concept of proximate cause employed in tort law. In general, the industrial causation requirement is satisfied 'if the connection between work and the injury [is] a contributing cause of the injury . . . .' " (Lee v. West Kern Water Dist. (2016) 5 Cal.App.5th 606, 624 [210 Cal.Rptr.3d 362], internal citation omitted.)
- "For our purposes here, it is important that 'arising out of' and 'in the course of' are two separate requirements. Even if it is conceded that an employee was injured while performing job tasks in the workplace during working hours, the exclusivity rule applies only if it also is shown that the work was a contributing cause of the injury." (Lee, supra, 5 Cal.App.5th at p. 625.)
- "The jury could properly make this finding [that conduct was not within scope of employment] by applying special instruction No. 5, the instruction stating that an employer's conduct falls outside the workers' compensation scheme when an employer steps outside of its proper role or engages in conduct unrelated to the employment. This instruction stated the doctrine of Fermino correctly." (Lee, supra, 5 Cal.App.5th at pp. 628–629.)
- "The concept of 'scope of employment' in tort is more restrictive than the phrase 'arising out of and in the course of employment,' used in workers' compensation." (Tognazzini v. San Luis Coastal Unified School Dist. (2001) 86 Cal.App.4th 1053, 1057 [103 Cal.Rptr.2d 790], internal citations omitted.)
- "Whether an employee's injury arose out of and in the course of her employment is generally a question of fact to be determined in light of the circumstances of the particular case. However, where the facts are undisputed, resolution of the question becomes a matter of law." (Wright v. Beverly Fabrics, Inc. (2002) 95 Cal.App.4th 346, 353 [115 Cal.Rptr.2d 503], internal citations omitted.)
- "Injuries sustained while an employee is performing tasks within his or her employment contract but outside normal work hours are within the course of employment. The rationale is that the employee is still acting in furtherance of the employer's business." (Wright, supra, 95 Cal.App.4th at p. 354.)

Secondary Sources

2 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Workers' Compensation, §§ 23–49

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 15-F, California Workers' Compensation Act Preemption, ¶¶ 15:520 et seq., 15:555 (The Rutter Group)

1 Hanna, California Law of Employee Injuries and Workers' Compensation (2d ed.) Ch. 4, §§ 4.03–4.06 (Matthew Bender)

1 Herlick, California Workers' Compensation Law (6th ed.), Ch. 10, The Injury, § 10.09 (Matthew Bender)

1 California Employment Law, Ch. 20, Liability for Work-Related Injuries, § 20.10 (Matthew Bender)

1 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 10, Effect of Workers' Compensation Law, §§ 10.02, 10.03[3], 10.10 (Matthew Bender)

51 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, §§ 577.310, 577.530 (Matthew Bender)

23 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 239, Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine (Matthew Bender)

2801. Employer's Willful Physical Assault—Essential Factual Elements (Lab. Code, § 3602(b)(1))

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was harmed because [name of defendant] assaulted [him/her/nonbinary pronoun]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] [insert one of the following:]

   [engaged in physical conduct that a reasonable person would perceive to be a real, present, and apparent threat of bodily harm;]

   [touched [*name of plaintiff] [or caused [name of plaintiff] to be touched] in a harmful or offensive manner];

2. That [name of defendant] intended to harm [name of plaintiff];
3. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
4. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

This instruction is intended for use in cases in which the employer is the defendant and the plaintiff alleges the case falls outside of the workers' compensation exclusivity rule. Use the first bracketed option in element 1 for cases involving assault. Use the second bracketed option for cases involving battery.

Do not use instructions on assault and battery (CACI No. 1300, Battery—Essential Factual Elements, and CACI No. 1301, Assault—Essential Factual Elements). For an instruction on ratification, see CACI No. 3710, Ratification.

Sources and Authority

- Exclusive Remedy: Willful Physical Assault Exception. Labor Code section 3602(b)(1).
- "[T]he 1982 amendments were not intended to provide an exhaustive list of exceptions to the exclusivity rule. They did not, for example, foreclose the recognition of an exception for injuries stemming from wrongful discharges that violated public policy, an issue that neither the Legislature nor the judicial system had confronted in 1982. Section 3602 only applies '[w]here the conditions . . . set forth in section 3600 concur,' and does not purport to resolve the ambiguities in that latter section discussed above, nor to definitively delineate the scope of the compensation bargain that has been the key to construing the meaning of section 3600. Rather, section 3602 merely confirms the judicial recognition of certain types of employer acts as outside the compensation bargain, even as it reinforces the exclusivity rule by repealing the dual capacity doctrine." (Fermino v. Fedco, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal.4th 701, 720 [30 Cal.Rptr.2d 18, 872 P.2d 559], internal citation omitted.)

- "[In Magliulo v. Superior Court,] [t]he employee sued the employer for assault and battery, and the court rejected the employer's argument that workers' compensation benefits were the exclusive remedy. The court noted that section 3601 allowed lawsuits for assaults by coemployees, and reasoned that '[i]f the employee can recover both compensation and damages caused by an intentional assault by a fellow worker, he should have no less right because the fellow worker happens to be his boss.' " (Soares v. City of Oakland (1992) 9 Cal.App.4th 1822, 1826 [12 Cal.Rptr.2d 405], internal citation omitted.)
- "Section 3602(b)(1) was enacted in 1982, 23 years after enactment of section 3601, subdivision (a)(1), to codify the result in Magliulo v. Superior Court." (Soares, supra, 9 Cal.App.4th at p. 1826, internal citations omitted.)
- "We conclude . . . that 'willful' employer assaults within the meaning of section 3602(b)(1) do not include all common law batteries, but only those batteries that are specifically intended to injure." (Soares, supra, 9 Cal.App.4th at pp. 1828–1829.)
- " 'The modern view respecting actionable intentional misconduct by the employer is that it must be alleged and proved that the employer "acted deliberately with the specific intent to injure" the employee.' " (Arendell v. Auto Parts Club, Inc. (1994) 29 Cal.App.4th 1261, 1265 [35 Cal.Rptr.2d 83], internal citations omitted.)
- "[B]odily contact is not necessary for a physical assault." (Herrick v. Quality Hotels, Inns & Resorts, Inc. (1993) 19 Cal.App.4th 1608, 1617 [24 Cal.Rptr.2d 203].)
- "Herrick explained that bodily contact was not necessary for a 'physical assault,' but that physical assault occurred when someone engaged in physical conduct which a reasonable person would perceive to be a real, present and apparent threat of bodily harm." (Gunnell v. Metrocolor Laboratories, Inc. (2001) 92 Cal.App.4th 710, 728 [112 Cal.Rptr.2d 195], internal citation omitted.)
- "[W]e conclude that the exception to the exclusivity rule contained in section 3602, subdivision (b)(1), does not authorize a civil action against an employer for injury resulting from the willful assault of a coemployee based on a theory of respondeat superior." (Fretland v. County of Humboldt (1999) 69 Cal.App.4th 1478, 1489 [82 Cal.Rptr.2d 359].)
- "[C]ourts have also recognized that an employer can be held civilly liable as a joint participant in assaultive conduct committed by its employee pursuant to the doctrine of ratification." (Fretland, supra, 69 Cal.App.4th at pp. 1489–1490.)

Secondary Sources

2 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Workers' Compensation, § 49

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 5(I)-F, Intentional Interference with Contract or Prospective Economic Advantage, ¶¶ 5:655, 5:656–5:657, 15:527, 15:566–15:567, 15:570–15:571 (The Rutter Group)

1 Herlick, California Workers' Compensation Law (6th ed.), Ch. 12, Tort Actions—Subrogation, § 12.20 (Matthew Bender)

1 California Employment Law, Ch. 20, Liability for Work-Related Injuries, §§ 20.12[1][b], 20.41 (Matthew Bender)

51 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, §§ 577.17, 577.314[2] (Matthew Bender)

23 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 239, Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine (Matthew Bender)

2802. Fraudulent Concealment of Injury—Essential Factual Elements (Lab. Code, § 3602(b)(2))

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/[name of decedent]] was harmed because [name of defendant] fraudulently concealed the fact that [name of plaintiff/decedent] had been injured on the job. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff/decedent] was injured on the job;
2. That [name of defendant] knew that [name of plaintiff/decedent] had suffered a job-related injury;
3. That [name of defendant] concealed this knowledge from [name of plaintiff/decedent]; and
4. That [name of plaintiff/decedent]'s injury was made worse as a result of this concealment.

If [*name of plaintiff] establishes this claim, [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] must prove the total damages caused by the injury. [Name of defendant] must prove the damages that [name of plaintiff/decedent] would have sustained even if [name of defendant] had not concealed the injury. [Name of plaintiff] is entitled to recover the difference between the two amounts.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

This instruction is intended for cases where the employer is the defendant and the plaintiff alleges the case falls outside of the workers' compensation exclusivity rule. This instruction pertains to aggravation of an injury caused by concealment.

Sources and Authority

- Exclusive Remedy: Fraudulent Concealment Exception. Labor Code Section 3602(b)(2).
- "[T]he 1982 amendments were not intended to provide an exhaustive list of exceptions to the exclusivity rule. They did not, for example, foreclose the recognition of an exception for injuries stemming from wrongful discharges that violated public policy, an issue that neither the Legislature nor the judicial system had confronted in 1982. Section 3602 only applies '[w]here the conditions . . . set forth in section 3600 concur,' and does not purport to resolve the ambiguities in that latter section discussed above, nor to definitively delineate the scope of the compensation bargain that has been the key to construing the meaning of section 3600. Rather, section 3602 merely confirms the judicial recognition of certain types of employer acts as outside the compensation bargain, even as it reinforces the exclusivity rule by repealing the dual capacity doctrine." (Fermino v. Fedco, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal.4th 701, 720 [30 Cal.Rptr.2d 18, 872 P.2d 559], internal citation omitted.)

- "In general, the Workers' Compensation Act provides an employee with his or her exclusive remedy for a work-related injury. Subject to narrow exceptions, 'where the . . . conditions of compensation concur,' an injured employee cannot maintain a civil action against his or her employer or another employee." (Lopez v. C.G.M. Development, Inc. (2002) 101 Cal.App.4th 430 [124 Cal.Rptr.2d 227], internal citation omitted.)
- "[A]n employee seeking to state a cause of action against an employer under section 3602(b)(2) must 'in general terms' plead facts that if found true by the trier of fact, establish the existence of three essential elements: (1) the employer knew that the plaintiff had suffered a work-related injury; (2) the employer concealed that knowledge from the plaintiff; and (3) the injury was aggravated as a result of such concealment." (Palestini v. General Dynamics Corp. (2002) 99 Cal.App.4th 80, 89–90 [120 Cal.Rptr.2d 741], internal citation omitted.)
- "While there are no cases defining the term 'fraudulent concealment' as used in the section, its general meaning is not difficult to discern. According to both statute and case law, the failure to disclose facts may constitute fraud if the party with knowledge has a duty to make disclosure. We have no reason to believe that the term 'fraudulent concealment' as used in subdivision (b)(2) was intended to have a meaning other than this." (Foster v. Xerox Corp. (1985) 40 Cal.3d 306, 309–310 [219 Cal.Rptr. 485, 707 P.2d 858], internal citations omitted.)
- "An employer's actual knowledge of the existence of an employee's injury connected with the employment is a necessary prerequisite to establishing a claim against the employer for fraudulent concealment under section 3602(b)(2). This principle is based on the rationale that an employer cannot be held liable under section 3602(b)(2) for concealing something of which it had no knowledge." (Palestini, supra, 99 Cal.App.4th at p. 93, internal citations omitted.)
- "In order to succeed in their attempt to remove their case from the workers' compensation law, appellants first had to show an 'injury.' They then had to prove that the injury was aggravated by Firestone's fraudulent concealment of the existence of the injury and its connection with the employment." (Santiago v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. (1990) 224 Cal.App.3d 1318, 1330 [274 Cal.Rptr. 576], internal citation omitted.)
- "The Supreme Court in Johns-Manville recognized that the aggravation of an injury that results when an employer fraudulently conceals the injury's cause is a harm distinct from the injury itself. For this reason, aggravation that results when an employer fraudulently conceals an injury's cause remains actionable even though the injured party has recovered worker's compensation benefits for the injury itself." (Aerojet General Corp. v. Superior Court (1986) 177 Cal.App.3d 950, 956 [223 Cal.Rptr. 249], internal citation omitted.)

Secondary Sources

2 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Workers' Compensation, §§ 50, 51

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 15-F, California Workers' Compensation Act Preemption, ¶¶ 15:526.1, 15:570, 15:570.5–15:570.6, 15:590 (The Rutter Group)

1 Herlick, California Workers' Compensation Law (6th ed.), Ch. 12, Tort Actions—Subrogation, § 12.20 (Matthew Bender)

1 California Employment Law, Ch. 20, Liability for Work-Related Injuries, § 20.12[1][c] (Matthew Bender)

1 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 10, Effect of Workers' Compensation Law, § 10.11[1][d] (Matthew Bender)

51 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, §§ 577.314[3], 577.525 (Matthew Bender)

23 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 239, Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine (Matthew Bender)

2803. Employer's Defective Product—Essential Factual Elements (Lab. Code, § 3602(b)(3))

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was harmed by a defective product manufactured by [name of defendant]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That the [product] was manufactured by [name of defendant];
2. That the [product] was [sold/leased/transferred for valuable consideration] to an independent third person;
3. That the third person then provided the [product] for [name of plaintiff]'s use;
4. That the [product] was defective in design or manufacture;
5. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
6. That the [product] was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

This instruction is intended for use in cases where the employer is the defendant and the plaintiff alleges that the case falls outside of the workers' compensation exclusivity rule. See the Products Liability series (CACI Nos. 1200–1243) for instructions on product defect.

Sources and Authority

- Exclusive Remedy: Defective Product Exception. Labor Code section 3602(b)(3).
- "[T]he 1982 amendments were not intended to provide an exhaustive list of exceptions to the exclusivity rule. They did not, for example, foreclose the recognition of an exception for injuries stemming from wrongful discharges that violated public policy, an issue that neither the Legislature nor the judicial system had confronted in 1982. Section 3602 only applies '[w]here the conditions . . . set forth in section 3600 concur,' and does not purport to resolve the ambiguities in that latter section discussed above, nor to definitively delineate the scope of the compensation bargain that has been the key to construing the meaning of section 3600. Rather, section 3602 merely confirms the judicial recognition of certain types of employer acts as outside the compensation bargain, even as it reinforces the exclusivity rule by repealing the dual capacity doctrine." (Fermino v. Fedco, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal.4th 701, 720 [30 Cal.Rptr.2d 18, 872 P.2d 559], internal citation omitted.)
- "The language 'provided for the employee's use' indicates the product must be given or furnished to the employee in order for the employee to accomplish some task." (Behrens v. Fayette Manufacturing Co. (1992) 4 Cal.App.4th 1567, 1574 [7 Cal.Rptr.2d 264].)

- "Our interpretation is in accord with that of commentators who have noted that the exception of subdivision (b)(3) requires the employee to come into contact with the defective product as a consumer." (Behrens, supra, 4 Cal.App.4th at p. 1574, internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

2 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Workers' Compensation, § 69

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 15-F, California Workers' Compensation Act Preemption, ¶ 15:571 (The Rutter Group)

1 Herlick, California Workers' Compensation Law (6th ed.), Ch. 12, Tort Actions—Subrogation, § 12.20 (Matthew Bender)

1 California Employment Law, Ch. 20, Liability for Work-Related Injuries, § 20.12[1][d] (Matthew Bender)

1 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 10, Effect of Workers' Compensation Law, § 10.11[1][e] (Matthew Bender)

51 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.314[4] (Matthew Bender)

23 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 239, Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine (Matthew Bender)

2804. Removal or Noninstallation of Power Press Guards—Essential Factual Elements (Lab. Code, § 4558)

A "power press" is a machine that forms materials with a die in the manufacture of other products. A "die" is a tool that imparts shape to material by pressing against or through the material. A "guard" is any device that keeps a worker's hands or other parts of the body outside the point of operation.

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was harmed because [name of defendant] [removed/failed to install] guards on a power press. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] was [name of plaintiff]'s [employer/supervisor];
2. That [name of plaintiff] was injured while operating a power press;
3. That [name of defendant] gave an affirmative instruction to [remove/not install] the guards before [name of plaintiff]'s injury;
4. That when [name of defendant] did so, [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] knew that the lack of guards would create a probability of serious injury or death;
5. That the power press's [designer/fabricator/assembler] [designed the press with guards/installed guards on the press/required guards be attached/specified that guards be attached] and directly or indirectly conveyed this information to [name of defendant]; and
6. That [name of defendant]'s [removal/failure to install] the guards was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003; Revised December 2011

Directions for Use

This instruction is for use if the plaintiff alleges that the claim for injury or death falls outside of the workers' compensation exclusivity rule because the employer removed or failed to install power press guards. (See Lab. Code § 4558.)

Sources and Authority

- Exclusive Remedy: Power-Press Guard Exception. Labor Code section 4558.
- "The obvious legislative intent and purpose in section 4558 is to protect workers from employers who wilfully remove or fail to install appropriate guards on large power tools. Many of these power tools are run by large mechanical motors or hydraulically. . . . These sorts of machines are difficult to stop while they are in their sequence of operation. Without guards, workers are susceptible to extremely serious injuries. For this reason, the Legislature passed section 4558, subdivision (b), which subjects employers to legal liability for removing guards from powerful machinery where the manufacturer has designed the machine to have a protective guard while in operation." (LeFiell Manufacturing Co. v. Superior Court (2014) 228 Cal.App.4th 883, 892 [175 Cal.Rptr.3d 894].)

- "A cause of action under section 4558 includes the following elements: (a) that the injury or death is proximately caused by the employer's knowing removal of, or knowing failure to install, a point of operation guard on a power press; and (b) that this removal or failure to install is specifically authorized by the employer under conditions known by the employer to create a probability of serious injury or death." (Saldana v. Globe-Weis Systems Co. (1991) 233 Cal.App.3d 1505, 1516 [285 Cal.Rptr. 385].)
- "A power press is 'any material-forming machine that utilizes a die which is designed for use in the manufacture of other products.' 'This definition entails four elements. The power press itself is a machine. It is a machine that forms materials. The formation of materials is effectuated with a die. Finally, the materials being formed with the die are being formed in the manufacture of other products.' " (LeFiell, supra, 228 Cal.App.4th at p. 893.)
- "The meaning of the term 'point of operation guard' in section 4558 is a legal question." (LeFiell, supra, 228 Cal.App.4th at p. 893.)
- "[T]he type of injury excluded from the workers' compensation system in section 4558 arises from the inherent danger to hands and other body parts at the point in which the die shapes the material in the absence of guards or safety devices." (LeFiell, supra, 228 Cal.App.4th at p. 897.)
- "Limiting the definition of 'point of operation guard' to the area where the die forms the material on a power press is consistent with the legislative purpose in enacting section 4558." (LeFiell, supra, 228 Cal.App.4th at p. 895.)
- "From the plain language of section 4558, it is clear that an exception to the exclusivity of workers' compensation only arises for a power press injury where the employer has been expressly informed by the manufacturer that a point of operation guard is required, where the employer then affirmatively removes or fails to install such guard, and where the employer does so under conditions known by the employer to create a probability of serious injury or death. Absent facts which would establish the employer's knowledge or action regarding the absence of a point of operation guard on a power press, the incident would not come within the exception of section 4558, and an employee would not be entitled to bring 'an action at law for damages' arising from the power press injury. If such action cannot be brought on its own where the facts fail to establish all the elements of the power press exception under section 4558, it follows that individual causes of action against an employer which do not meet the requirements of section 4558 cannot be bootstrapped onto a civil action for damages which is properly brought under section 4558." (Award Metals, Inc. v. Superior Court (1991) 228 Cal.App.3d 1128, 1134 [279 Cal.Rptr. 459].)

- "In all its pertinent uses, then, the term 'die' refers to a tool that imparts shape to material by pressing or impacting against or through the material, that is, by punching, stamping or extruding; in none of its uses does the term refer to a tool that imparts shape by cutting along the material in the manner of a blade." (Rosales v. Depuy Ace Medical Co. (2000) 22 Cal.4th 279, 285 [92 Cal.Rptr.2d 465, 991 P.2d 1256].)
- "[U]nder subdivisions (a)(2) and (c), liability for 'failure to install' a point of operation guard under section 4558 must be predicated upon evidence that the 'manufacturer' either provided or required such a device, which was not installed by the employer." (Flowmaster, Inc. v. Superior Court (1993) 16 Cal.App.4th 1019, 1027 [20 Cal.Rptr.2d 666].)
- "We find that the term guard, as used in section 4558, is meant to include the myriad apparatus which are available to accomplish the purpose of keeping the hands of workers outside the point of operation whenever the ram is capable of descending. Because we find that the term guard is not a specific legal term of art, we hold that the trial court properly provided the jury with a dictionary definition of the term guard to explain its meaning under section 4558." (Bingham v. CTS Corp. (1991) 231 Cal.App.3d 56, 65 [282 Cal.Rptr. 161], internal citation omitted; cf. Gonzalez v. Seal Methods, Inc. (2014) 223 Cal.App.4th 405, 410 [166 Cal.Rptr.3d 895] [point of operation guard does not include unattached device, such as a safety block, that the worker moves into and out of the point of operation].)
- "Physical removal, for the purpose of liability under section 4558, means to render a safeguarding apparatus, whether a device or point of operation guard, dysfunctional or unavailable for use by the operator for the particular task assigned." (Bingham, supra, 231 Cal.App.3d at p. 68.)
- "Nothing in the language, history or objectives underlying section 4558 convinces us that the Legislature intended that section 4558 would immunize employers who design, manufacture and install their own power presses without point of operation guards. A manufacturer is defined broadly in section 4558 as a 'designer, fabricator, or assembler of a power press.' An 'employer' is not excluded from the definition of a manufacturer, nor would doing so promote the objectives of the statute." (Flowmaster, Inc., supra, 16 Cal.App.4th at pp. 1029–1030, internal citation omitted.)
- "The element of knowledge requires 'actual awareness' by the employer—rather than merely constructive knowledge—that a point of operation guard has either been provided for or is required to prevent the probability of serious injury or death." (Flowmaster, Inc., supra, 16 Cal.App.4th at pp. 1031–1032, internal citation and footnote omitted.)
- "Liability under section 4558 can only be imposed if the employer fails to use or removes a safety device required by the manufacturer of the press. Essentially, the culpable conduct is the employer's ignoring of the manufacturer's safety directive . . . . 'From the plain language of section 4558, it is clear that an exception to the exclusivity of workers' compensation only arises for a power press injury where the employer has been expressly informed by the manufacturer that a point of operation guard is required, where the employer then affirmatively removes or fails to install such guard, and where the employer does so under conditions known by the employer to create a probability of serious injury or death.' " (Aguilera v. Henry Soss & Co. (1996) 42 Cal.App.4th 1724, 1730 [50 Cal.Rptr.2d 477], internal citation omitted.)

- "As defined in the statute, 'specifically authorized' requires an 'affirmative instruction' by the employer, as distinguished from mere acquiescence in or ratification of an act or omission." (Mora v. Hollywood Bed & Spring (2008) 164 Cal.App.4th 1061, 1068 [79 Cal.Rptr.3d 640].)
- "Specific authorization demands evidence of an affirmative instruction or other wilful acts on the part of the employer despite actual knowledge of the probability of serious harm." (Flowmaster, Inc., supra, 16 Cal.App.4th at p. 1032, internal citation and footnote omitted.)
- "[I]mputation solely because of an agency relationship cannot bring an employer within the reach of section 4558. Only an employer who directly authorized by an affirmative instruction the removal or failure to install a guard may be sued at law under section 4558." (Watters Associates v. Superior Court (1990) 218 Cal.App.3d 1322, 1325 [267 Cal.Rptr. 696].)

Secondary Sources

2 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Workers' Compensation, §§ 55–57, 108

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 13-I, Collateral (Non-OSHA) Actions Relating To Occupational Safety And Health, ¶ 13:953 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 15-F, California Workers' Compensation Act Preemption, ¶ 15:572 (The Rutter Group)

1 Herlick, California Workers' Compensation Law (6th ed.), Ch. 12, Tort Actions—Subrogation, § 12.20 (Matthew Bender)

1 California Employment Law, Ch. 20, Liability for Work-Related Injuries, § 20.12[1][e] (Matthew Bender)

1 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 10, Effect of Workers' Compensation Law, § 10.11[1][f] (Matthew Bender)

51 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.314[5] (Matthew Bender)

23 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 239, Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine, §§ 239.24, 239.41 (Matthew Bender)

2805. Employee Not Within Course of Employment—Employer Conduct Unrelated to Employment

A claim is not barred by workers' compensation if the employer engages in conduct unrelated to the employment or steps outside of its proper role.

New November 2017; Revised May 2020

Directions for Use

This instruction presents the so-called Fermino exception to the exclusivity of workers' compensation. (See Fermino v. Fedco, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal.4th 701 [30 Cal.Rptr.2d 18, 872 P.2d 559].) Its purpose is to rebut element 3 of CACI No. 2800, Employer's Affirmative Defense—Injury Covered by Workers' Compensation. Per element 3, the injury falls within the exclusive remedy of workers' compensation if it occurred while the employee was performing the work that the employee was required to do. The Fermino exception changes the focus from what the employee was doing when injured to what the employer was doing that may have caused the injury. The exclusive remedy does not apply if the employer caused the injury through conduct unrelated to the work. (Id., 7 Cal.4th at p. 717.)

Sources and Authority

- "[N]ormal employer actions causing injury would not fall outside the scope of the exclusivity rule merely by attributing to the employer a sinister intention. Conversely, . . . actions by employers that have no proper place in the employment relationship may not be made into a 'normal' part of the employment relationship merely by means of artful terminology. Indeed, virtually any action by an employer can be characterized as a 'normal part of employment' if raised to the proper level of abstraction." (Fermino, supra, 7 Cal.4th at p. 717 [30 Cal.Rptr.2d 18, 872 P.2d 559].)
- "[C]ertain types of injurious employer misconduct remain outside this bargain. There are some instances in which, although the injury arose in the course of employment, the employer engaging in that conduct ' "stepped out of [its] proper role[]" ' or engaged in conduct of ' "questionable relationship to the employment." ' " (Fermino, supra, 7 Cal.App.4th at p. 708.)
- "[CACI No. 2800] was correctly given, however, because the evidence was able to support a finding that the work was not a contributing cause of the injury. [¶] The jury could properly make this finding by applying special instruction No. 5, the instruction stating that an employer's conduct falls outside the workers' compensation scheme when an employer steps outside of its proper role or engages in conduct unrelated to the employment. This instruction stated the doctrine of Fermino correctly. If the jury found that carrying out the mock robbery was not within the employer's proper role, it could also find that unwittingly participating in the mock robbery as a victim was not part of the employee's work." (Lee v. West Kern Water Dist. (2016) 5 Cal.App.5th 606, 628–629 [210 Cal.Rptr.3d 362].)

- "The jury could properly find the injury did not arise out of the employee's work because it was caused by such employer action and therefore the conditions of compensation did not exist. To hold that the jury must first find the injury to be within the conditions of compensation and then find it also to be within the Fermino exception, instead of simply finding that the conditions of compensation were not met in the first place in light of Fermino, would be elevating form over substance." (Lee, supra, 5 Cal.App.5th at p. 629.)
- "[T]he exclusive remedy provisions are not applicable under certain circumstances, sometimes variously identified as 'conduct where the employer or insurer stepped out of their proper roles' [citations], or 'conduct of an employer having a "questionable" relationship to the employment' [citations], but which may be essentially defined as not stemming from a risk reasonably encompassed within the compensation bargain." (Light v. Department of Parks & Recreation (2017) 14 Cal.App.5th 75, 97 [221 Cal.Rptr.3d 668].)

Secondary Sources

2 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Workers' Compensation, § 62

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 15-F, California Workers' Compensation Act Preemption—Preemption Defenses, ¶ 15:526 (The Rutter Group)

2 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 20, Workers' Compensation, § 20.13 (Matthew Bender)

Hanna, California Law of Employee Injuries and Workers' Compensation, Ch. 11, Actions Against the Employer Under State Law and Third-Party Tort Actions, § 11.05 (Matthew Bender)

52 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.315 (Matthew Bender)

20 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 239, Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine, § 239.39 (Matthew Bender)

California Workers' Compensation Law and Practice, Ch. 2, Jurisdiction, § 2:122 (James Publishing)

2806–2809. Reserved for Future Use

2810. Coemployee's Affirmative Defense—Injury Covered by Workers' Compensation

---

[*Name of defendant] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] is not responsible for any harm that [name of plaintiff] may have suffered because [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was [name of defendant]'s coemployee and therefore can recover only under California's Workers' Compensation Act. To succeed, [name of defendant] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] and [name of defendant] were [name of employer]'s employees;
2. That [name of employer] [had workers' compensation insurance [covering [name of plaintiff] at the time of injury]/was self-insured for workers' compensation claims [at the time of [name of plaintiff]'s injury]]; and
3. That [name of defendant] was acting in the scope of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] employment at the time [name of plaintiff] claims [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was harmed.

New September 2003; Revised October 2004, May 2020

Directions for Use

This instruction is intended for use if a coemployee is the defendant and that coemployee claims that the case falls within the workers' compensation exclusivity rule. For instructions on scope of employment see instructions in the Vicarious Liability series (CACI Nos. 3700–3726). Scope of employment in this instruction is the same as in the context of respondeat superior. (Hendy v. Losse (1991) 54 Cal.3d 723, 740 [1 Cal.Rptr.2d 543, 819 P.2d 1].) See instructions in the Vicarious Responsibility series regarding the definition of "scope of employment."

Sources and Authority

- Exclusive Remedy. Labor Code section 3601.
- "Employee" Defined. Labor Code section 3351.
- Presumption of Employment Status. Labor Code section 3357.
- "CACI No. 2810, which the trial court gave to the jury, is intended for use when a coemployee defendant asserts the exclusivity rule as a defense. It has three elements: (1) the plaintiff and the coemployee were employees of the employer; (2) the employer had a workers' compensation insurance policy covering the plaintiff at the time of injury; and (3) the coemployee was acting in the scope of his or her employment at the time of injury." (Lee v. West Kern Water Dist. (2016) 5 Cal.App.5th 606, 633 [210 Cal.Rptr.3d 362].)

- "Labor Code section 3601 affords coemployees the benefit of the exclusivity rule only '[w]here the conditions of compensation set forth in Section 3600 concur . . . .' Those conditions, as has been mentioned, include the requirement of industrial causation." (Lee, supra, 5 Cal.App.5th at p. 634, internal citation omitted.)
- "[A] coemployee's conduct is within the scope of his or her employment if it could be imputed to the employer under the doctrine of respondeat superior. If the coemployee was not 'engaged in any active service for the employer,' the coemployee was not acting within the scope of employment." (Hendy, supra, 54 Cal.3d at p. 740, internal citation omitted.)
- "[G]enerally speaking, a defendant in a civil action who claims to be one of that class of persons protected from an action at law by the provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act bears the burden of pleading and proving, as an affirmative defense to the action, the existence of the conditions of compensation set forth in the statute which are necessary to its application." (Doney v. Tambouratgis (1979) 23 Cal.3d 91, 96 [151 Cal.Rptr. 347, 587 P.2d 1160].)
- "In general, if an employer condones what courts have described as 'horseplay' among its employees, an employee who engages in it is within the scope of employment under section 3601, subdivision (a), and is thus immune from suit, unless exceptions apply." (Torres v. Parkhouse Tire Service, Inc. (2001) 26 Cal.4th 995, 1006 [111 Cal.Rptr.2d 564, 30 P.3d 57], internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

2 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Workers' Compensation, §§ 73, 74

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 5(I)-F, Intentional Interference with Contract or Prospective Economic Advantage, ¶ 5:624 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 12-B, Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA)/California Family Rights Act (CFRA), ¶ 12:192 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 13-I, Collateral (Non-OSHA) Actions Relating to Occupational Safety and Health, ¶ 13:951 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 15-F, California Workers' Compensation Act Preemption, ¶¶ 15:546, 15:569, 15:632 (The Rutter Group)

1 Herlick, California Workers' Compensation Law (6th ed.), Ch. 12, Tort Actions—Subrogation, § 12.22 (Matthew Bender)

1 California Employment Law, Ch. 20, Liability for Work-Related Injuries, § 20.43 (Matthew Bender)

1 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 10, Effect of Workers' Compensation Law, § 10.13 (Matthew Bender)

51 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation,

§ 577.316 (Matthew Bender)

23 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 239, Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine (Matthew Bender)

2811. Co-Employee's Willful and Unprovoked Physical Act of Aggression—Essential Factual Elements (Lab. Code, § 3601(a)(1))

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was harmed because [name of defendant] assaulted [him/her/nonbinary pronoun]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] [insert one of the following:]

   [engaged in physical conduct that a reasonable person would perceive to be a real, present and apparent threat of bodily harm;]

   [touched [*name of plaintiff] [or caused [name of plaintiff] to be touched] in a harmful or offensive manner;]

   [*insert other act of physical aggression];

2. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was unprovoked;

3. That [name of defendant] intended to harm [name of plaintiff];

4. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and

5. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

This instruction is intended for use in cases where a co-employee is the defendant and the plaintiff alleges that the case falls outside of the workers' compensation exclusivity rule. If this instruction is used, do not use standard tort instructions on assault and battery.

Sources and Authority

- Exclusive Remedy: Exception for Coemployee's Willful and Unprovoked Physical Act. Labor Code section 3601(a)(1).
- "As relevant here, a civil suit is permissible when an employee proximately causes another employee's injury or death by a 'willful and unprovoked physical act of aggression' or by intoxication. If an employee brings a lawsuit against a coemployee based on either of these exceptions, the employer is not 'held liable, directly or indirectly, for damages awarded against, or for a liability incurred by the other employee . . . .' This provision is consistent with the view that a coemployee is immune from suit to the extent necessary to prevent an end-run against the employer under the exclusivity rule. 'It is self-evident that Labor Code section 3601 did not establish or create a new right or cause of action in the employee but severely limited a preexisting right to freely sue a fellow employee for damages.' " (Torres v. Parkhouse Tire Service, Inc. (2001) 26 Cal.4th 995, 1002 [111 Cal.Rptr.2d 564, 30 P.3d 57], internal citations and footnotes omitted.)

- "[W]e conclude an 'unprovoked physical act of aggression' is unprovoked conduct intended to convey an actual, present, and apparent threat of bodily injury. A 'threat,' of course, is commonly understood as 'an expression of intention to inflict evil, injury, or damage' and as '[a] communicated intent to inflict harm or loss on another . . . .' Thus, 'unprovoked physical act of aggression' logically contemplates intended injurious conduct. By adding the term 'willful,' the Legislature has underscored the need for an intent to bring about the consequences of that expression, i.e., an intent to inflict injury or harm." (Torres, supra, 26 Cal.4th at p. 1005, internal citations omitted.)
- "As with other mental states, plaintiffs may rely on circumstantial evidence to prove the intent to injure." (Torres, supra, 26 Cal.4th at p. 1009.)
- "[T]o invoke civil liability under section 3601, subdivision (a)(1), a physical act causing a reasonable fear of harm must be pleaded and proved, but the resulting harm need not also be physical." (Iverson v. Atlas Pacific Engineering (1983) 143 Cal.App.3d 219, 225 [191 Cal.Rptr. 696].)
- "We agree that conduct constituting a common law assault may be actionable under section 3601(a)(1), provided that the conduct was intended to injure . . . ." (Soares v. City of Oakland (1992) 9 Cal.App.4th 1822, 1829 [12 Cal.Rptr.2d 405].)
- "In general, if an employer condones what courts have described as 'horseplay' among its employees, an employee who engages in it is within the scope of employment under section 3601, subdivision (a), and is thus immune from suit, unless exceptions apply." (Torres, supra, 26 Cal.4th at p. 1006, internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

2 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Workers' Compensation, §§ 73, 74

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 5(I)-F, Intentional Interference with Contract or Prospective Economic Advantage, ¶ 5:624 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 13-I, Collateral (Non-OSHA) Actions Relating to Occupational Safety and Health, ¶¶ 13:951, 13:962 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 15-F, California Workers' Compensation Act Preemption, ¶¶ 15:546, 15:569, 15:632 (The Rutter Group)

1 Herlick, California Workers' Compensation Law (6th ed.), Ch. 12, Tort Actions—Subrogation, § 12.22 (Matthew Bender)

1 California Employment Law, Ch. 20, Liability for Work-Related Injuries, § 20.43

(Matthew Bender)

1 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 10, Effect of Workers' Compensation Law, § 10.13 (Matthew Bender)

51 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation, § 577.316 (Matthew Bender)

23 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 239, Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine (Matthew Bender)

2812. Injury Caused by Co-Employee's Intoxication—Essential Factual Elements (Lab. Code, § 3601(a)(2))

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was harmed because [name of defendant] was intoxicated. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] [insert description of injury-producing conduct];
2. That [name of defendant] was intoxicated;
3. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
4. That [name of defendant]'s intoxication was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

This instruction is intended for use in cases where a co-employee is the defendant and the plaintiff alleges that the case falls outside of the workers' compensation exclusivity rule.

Sources and Authority

- Exclusive Remedy: Exception for Act of Intoxicated Coemployee. Labor Code section 3601(a)(2).
- "As relevant here, a civil suit is permissible when an employee proximately causes another employee's injury or death by a 'willful and unprovoked physical act of aggression' or by intoxication. If an employee brings a lawsuit against a coemployee based on either of these exceptions, the employer is not 'held liable, directly or indirectly, for damages awarded against, or for a liability incurred by the other employee . . . .' This provision is consistent with the view that a coemployee is immune from suit to the extent necessary to prevent an end-run against the employer under the exclusivity rule. 'It is self-evident that Labor Code section 3601 did not establish or create a new right or cause of action in the employee but severely limited a preexisting right to freely sue a fellow employee for damages.' " (Torres v. Parkhouse Tire Service, Inc. (2001) 26 Cal.4th 995, 1002 [111 Cal.Rptr.2d 564, 30 P.3d 57], internal citations and footnotes omitted.)

Secondary Sources

2 Witkin, Summary of California Law (10th ed. 2005) Workers' Compensation, §§ 67, 68

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 5(I)-F, Intentional Interference with Contract or Prospective Economic Advantage, ¶ 5:624

(The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 13-I, Collateral (Non-OSHA) Actions Relating to Occupational Safety and Health, ¶¶ 13:951, 13:962 (The Rutter Group)

Chin et al., California Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 15-F, California Workers' Compensation Act Preemption, ¶¶ 15:546, 15:568–15:569, 15:632 (The Rutter Group)

1 Herlick, California Workers' Compensation Law (6th ed.), Ch. 12, Tort Actions—Subrogation, § 12.22 (Matthew Bender)

1 California Employment Law, Ch. 20, Liability for Work-Related Injuries, § 20.43 (Matthew Bender)

1 Levy et al., California Torts, Ch. 10, Effect of Workers' Compensation Law, § 10.13 (Matthew Bender)

23 California Points and Authorities, Ch. 239, Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine (Matthew Bender)

2813–2899. Reserved for Future Use

VF-2800. Employer's Willful Physical Assault (Lab. Code, § 3602(b)(1))

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of defendant] touch [name of plaintiff] in a harmful or offensive manner?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of defendant] intend to harm [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

   [a. Past economic loss

   [lost earnings $_____]

   [lost profits $_____]

   [medical expenses $_____]

   [other past economic loss $_____]

   Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

   [b. Future economic loss

   [lost earnings $_____]

   [lost profits $_____]

   [medical expenses $_____]

   [other future economic loss $_____]

   Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2801, Employer's Willful Physical Assault—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If the plaintiff alleges that defendant engaged in conduct other than that which is described in question 1, then the question may be modified by choosing one of the other options stated in element 1 of CACI No. 2801.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 4 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2801. Fraudulent Concealment of Injury (Lab. Code, § 3602(b)(2))

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of plaintiff/decedent] injured on the job?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Did [name of defendant] know [name of plaintiff/decedent] had suffered a job-related injury?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of defendant] conceal this knowledge from [name of plaintiff/decedent]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was [name of plaintiff/decedent]'s injury made worse as a result of this concealment?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. What are [name of plaintiff]'s total damages?

   [a. Past economic loss

   [lost earnings $_____]

   [lost profits $_____]

   [medical expenses $_____]

   [other past economic loss $_____]

   Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Answer question 6.

6. What are the damages that [name of plaintiff/decedent] would have sustained if [name of defendant] had not concealed the injury?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Answer question 7.

7. Subtract the total amount in question 6 from the total amount in question 5. This is the amount [name of plaintiff] is entitled to recover. $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2802, Fraudulent Concealment of Injury—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in questions 5 and 6, and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2802. Employer's Defective Product (Lab. Code, § 3602(b)(3))

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was the [product] manufactured by [name of defendant]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Was the [product] [sold/leased/transferred for valuable consideration] to an independent third person?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did the third person then provide the [product] for [name of plaintiff]'s use?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was the [product] defective in design or manufacture?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Was the [product] a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

   [a. Past economic loss

   [lost earnings $_____]

   [lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2803, Employer's Defective Product—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 6 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2803. Removal or Noninstallation of Power Press Guards (Lab. Code, § 4558)

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of defendant] [name of plaintiff]'s [employer/supervisor]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Was [name of plaintiff] injured while operating a power press?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of defendant] give an affirmative instruction to [remove/not install] the guards before [name of plaintiff]'s injury?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. When [name of defendant] did so, did [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] actually know that the lack of guards would create a probability of serious injury or death?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Did the power press's [designer/fabricator/assembler] [design the press with guards/install guards on the press/require guards be attached/specify that guards be attached] and directly or indirectly convey this information to [name of defendant]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Was [name of defendant]'s [removal/failure to install] the guards a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, December 2011, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2804, Removal or Noninstallation of Power Press Guards—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 7 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2804. Co-Employee's Willful and Unprovoked Physical Act of Aggression (Lab. Code, § 3601(a)(1))

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Did [name of defendant] touch [name of plaintiff] in a harmful or offensive manner?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct unprovoked?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Did [name of defendant] intend to harm [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing harm to [name of plaintiff]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

   [a. Past economic loss

   [lost earnings $_____]

   [lost profits $_____]

   [medical expenses $_____]

   [other past economic loss $_____]

   Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant]

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2811, Co-Employee's Willful and Unprovoked Physical Act of Aggression—Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If the plaintiff alleges that the defendant engaged in conduct other than that described in question 1, then the question may be modified by choosing one of the other options stated in element 1 of CACI No. 2811.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 5 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2805. Injury Caused by Co-Employee's Intoxication (Lab. Code, § 3601(a)(2))

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of plaintiff] harmed?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Was [name of defendant] intoxicated?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Was [name of defendant]'s intoxication a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

   [a. Past economic loss

   [lost earnings $_____]

   [lost profits $_____]

   [medical expenses $_____]

   [other past economic loss $_____]

   Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future noneconomic loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This verdict form is based on CACI No. 2812, Injury Caused by Co-Employee's Intoxication—Essential Factual Elements.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 5 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest.

This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2806–VF-2899. Reserved for Future Use

FEDERAL EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY ACT

2900. FELA—Essential Factual Elements

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that while [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/[name of decedent]] was employed by [name of defendant], [[he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was harmed by/[his/her/nonbinary pronoun] death was caused by] [name of defendant]'s negligence. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff/decedent] was employed by [name of defendant];
2. That [name of defendant] was a common carrier by railroad;
3. That [name of defendant] was engaged in interstate commerce;
4. That [name of plaintiff/decedent]'s job duties furthered, or in any way substantially affected, interstate commerce;
5. That [name of plaintiff/decedent] was acting within the scope of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] employment at the time of the incident;
6. That [name of defendant] was negligent;
7. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
8. That [name of defendant]'s negligence was a cause of [name of plaintiff/decedent]'s [harm/death].

["Interstate commerce" is commercial activity that crosses more than one country or state, such as the movement of goods from one state to another.]

New September 2003; Revised June 2011, December 2011

Directions for Use

If the plaintiff is bringing a negligence claim under the Federal Employers' Liability Act (FELA) and a claim under the Federal Safety Appliance Act (SAA) or the Boiler Inspection Act (BIA), the court may wish to add an introductory instruction that would alert the jury to the difference between the two claims.

Sources and Authority

- Federal Employers' Liability Act. Title 45 United States Code section 51.
- "While injured employees in California generally are entitled to workers' compensation benefits regardless of whether the employer was at fault, those benefits are not available to railroad employees who suffer on-the-job injuries. Instead, their right of recovery is governed by FELA, which permits recovery only if the employer acted negligently." (Fair v. BNSF Railway Co. (2015) 238

Cal.App.4th 269, 275 [189 Cal.Rptr.3d 150], original italics, internal citations omitted.)

- The FELA is "liberally construed" to further Congress's remedial goal of protecting railroad workers. (Consolidated Rail Corp. v. Gottshall (1994) 512 U.S. 532, 543 [114 S.Ct. 2396, 129 L.Ed.2d 427].)
- "The elements of a FELA case are: (1) the injury occurred while the plaintiff was working within the scope of his or her employment with the railroad; (2) the employment was in furtherance of the railroad's interstate transportation business; (3) the employer railroad was negligent; and (4) the employer's negligence played some part in causing the injury for which compensation is sought under the Act." (Monarch v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co. (1999) 70 Cal.App.4th 1197, 1210, fn. 10 [83 Cal.Rptr.2d 247], internal citations omitted.)
- "That FELA is to be liberally construed . . . does not mean that it is a workers' compensation statute. We have insisted that FELA 'does not make the employer the insurer of the safety of his employees while they are on duty. The basis of his liability is his negligence, not the fact that injuries occur.' " (Consolidated Rail Corp., supra, 512 U.S. at p. 543, internal citations omitted.)
- "We note that under the Federal Employers' Liability Act of 1908 an injured railroad employee may bring a cause of action without proof of negligence based on failure of the SAA-mandated safety appliances to function. When such strict liability does not apply, i.e., the injury does not result from defective equipment covered by the SAA, the employee must establish common law negligence." (Carrillo v. ACF Industries, Inc. (1999) 20 Cal.4th 1158, 1170, fn. 4 [86 Cal.Rptr.2d 832, 980 P.2d 386], internal citations omitted.)
- "The standard under FELA is a relaxed one; to prove that a railroad breached its duty, a 'plaintiff must show circumstances which a reasonable person would foresee as creating a potential for harm [and] then show that this breach played any part, even the slightest, in producing the injury.' 'It is well established that the quantum of evidence required to establish liability in an FELA case is much less than in an ordinary negligence action.' If the negligence of the employer 'played any part, however small, in the injury,' the employer is liable." (Fair, supra, 238 Cal.App.4th at pp. 275–276, internal citation omitted.)
- "The test for coverage under the amendment is not whether the employee is engaged in transportation, but rather whether what he does in any way furthers or substantially affects transportation." (Reed v. Pennsylvania Railroad Co. (1956) 351 U.S. 502, 505 [76 S.Ct. 958, 100 L.Ed. 1366].)
- "Where more than one inference can be drawn from the evidence, the question whether an employee was, at the time of receiving the injury sued for, engaged in interstate commerce, is for the jury." (Sullivan v. Matt (1955) 130 Cal.App.2d 134, 139 [278 P.2d 499], internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

Chin et al., Cal. Practice Guide: Employment Litigation, Ch. 15-F, California Workers' Compensation Act Preemption, ¶¶ 15:485–15:488, 15:495 (The Rutter Group)

42 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 485, Railroads, § 485.35 (Matthew Bender)

1 Matthew Bender Practice Guide: Federal Pretrial Civil Procedure in California, Ch. 3, Removing a State Court Case to Federal Court, 3.14

2901. Negligence—Duty of Railroad

A railroad must use reasonable care under the circumstances to provide its employees with a reasonably safe place to work and with reasonably safe and suitable tools, machinery, and appliances. The reasonableness of care depends on the danger associated with the workplace or the equipment. The failure to use reasonable care is negligence. A railroad is not negligent if, using reasonable care, it could not reasonably have foreseen that the particular condition could cause injury.

[*Name of defendant] is responsible for the negligence of any of its officers, agents, or employees.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

For a definition of the term "negligence," see CACI No. 401, Basic Standard of Care.

Sources and Authority

- "The plaintiff must make out a prima facie case of negligence on the part of the employer, including the element of reasonable foreseeability. . . . 'To recover, the plaintiff must prove that the railroad, with the exercise of due care, could have reasonably foreseen that a particular condition could cause injury. The defendant's duty is measured by what a reasonably prudent person should or could have reasonably anticipated as occurring under like circumstances.' " (Albert v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co. (1994) 30 Cal.App.4th 529, 534 [35 Cal.Rptr.2d 777], internal citations omitted.)
- "Absent foreseeability, negligence is not established under FELA and without a showing of negligence, recovery is not permitted." (Albert, supra, 30 Cal.App.4th at p. 536, internal citation omitted.) But note that foreseeability is not required for claims arising from the Federal Safety Appliance Act (49 U.S.C. § 20301 et seq.), or the Boiler Inspection Act (49 U.S.C. § 20701).
- "Although a railroad's duty to use reasonable care in furnishing employees a safe place to work is not stated explicitly in the statute, it has become an integral part of the FELA. Under the FELA, that duty becomes 'more imperative' as the risk to an employee increases. The duty is a 'continuing one' and requires a jury to weigh a myriad of factors—including the nature of a task, its hazards and efforts—in determining whether an employer furnished an employee with a reasonably safe place to work. This continuous duty to provide a safe place to work is broader than the general duty to use reasonable care. Other courts in FELA actions have held that failure to instruct a jury regarding an employer's duty to provide a reasonably safe place to work is reversible error. We agree that when the issue is properly raised and an instruction is requested, the FELA requires jury instructions on the duty to provide a reasonably safe place to work." (Ragsdell v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co. (9th Cir. 1982) 688 F.2d 1281, 1283, internal citations omitted.)

- "The test of negligence in supplying the employee a safe place to work is 'whether reasonable men, examining the circumstances and the likelihood of injury, would have taken those steps necessary to remove the danger.' " (Mortensen v. Southern Pacific Co. (1966) 245 Cal.App.2d 241, 244 [53 Cal.Rptr. 851], internal citations omitted.)
- The duty to use reasonable care "is a duty which becomes 'more imperative' as the risk increases. 'Reasonable care becomes then a demand of higher supremacy, and yet, in all cases it is a question of the reasonableness of the care—reasonableness depending upon the danger attending the place or the machinery.' " (Bailey v. Central Vermont Ry., Inc. (1943) 319 U.S. 350, 353 [63 S.Ct. 1062, 87 L.Ed. 1444], internal citation omitted.)
- "The employer is not the insurer of the safety of its employees and the test of the employer's liability to an injured employee is whether ordinary care was used by the employer in regard to the risk." (Baez v. Southern Pacific Co. (1962) 210 Cal.App.2d 714, 717 [26 Cal.Rptr. 899], internal citation omitted.)
- The U.S. Supreme Court has held that an independent contractor is an "agent" for purposes of establishing an employer's liability under the FELA if the contractor performs "operational activities" of the employer. (Sinkler v. Missouri Pacific Railroad Co. (1958) 356 U.S. 326, 331–332 [78 S.Ct. 758, 2 L.Ed.2d 799].)

Secondary Sources

42 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 485, Railroads, § 485.35 (Matthew Bender)

2902. Negligence—Assignment of Employees

[*Name of defendant] was negligent if

[it assigned [*name of plaintiff/decedent] to a task that it knew or should have known [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was not medically fit to perform.]

[it failed to assign a sufficient number of employees to safely perform the task that [*name of plaintiff/decedent] was assigned to at the time of the incident.]

New September 2003

Directions for Use

Read only the alternative that applies to the facts of the case.

Sources and Authority

- "The court correctly instructed the jury as to defendant's liability for assigning an employee to a job for which he is medically unfit. In this regard the jury was told that 'Under the Federal Employers' Liability Act, the word "injury" may include sickness, and it is negligence for a railroad company to assign a sick employee, of whose illness it knew or should have known, to tasks for which he is, by reason of his condition, unfitted, and the employee may recover damages from the railroad if such assignment plays any part in proximately worsening or aggravating such condition.' " (Waller v. Southern Pacific Co. (1967) 66 Cal.2d 201, 214 [57 Cal.Rptr. 353, 424 P.2d 937].)
- It is not necessary to include as an element that the defendant must have "forced" the plaintiff to perform the injurious task. (Waller, supra, 66 Cal.2d at p. 214.)
- "The employer is under the nondelegable obligation of providing sufficient help for the particular task." (Southern Ry. Co. v. Welch (6th Cir. 1957) 247 F.2d 340, 341, internal citation omitted.)
- "As a corollary to this duty to maintain safe working conditions, the carrier is required to provide its employee with sufficient help in the performance of the work assigned to him. Where the failure to provide sufficient help proximately causes injury to the employee, the carrier is liable for negligence under the provisions of the FELA." (Yawn v. Southern Ry. Co. (5th Cir. 1979) 591 F.2d 312, 315, internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

42 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 485, Railroads, § 485.35 (Matthew Bender)

2903. Causation—Negligence

[Name of defendant]'s negligence, if any, was a cause of [[name of plaintiff]'s harm/[name of decedent]'s death] if it played any part, no matter how small, in bringing about the [harm/death], even if other factors also contributed to the [harm/death].

New September 2003

Directions for Use

For an instruction on concurrent cause, see CACI No. 431, Causation: Multiple Causes.

Sources and Authority

- Federal Employers' Liability Act. Title 45 United States Code section 51.
- "Under this statute the test of a jury case is simply whether the proofs justify with reason the conclusion that employer negligence played any part, even the slightest, in producing the injury or death for which damages are sought." (Rogers v. Missouri Pacific Railroad Co. (1957) 352 U.S. 500, 506 [77 S.Ct. 443, 1 L.Ed.2d 493].)
- "In sum, the understanding of Rogers we here affirm 'has been accepted as settled law for several decades.' 'Congress has had [more than 50] years in which it could have corrected our decision in [Rogers] if it disagreed with it, and has not chosen to do so.' Countless judges have instructed countless juries in language drawn from Rogers. To discard or restrict the Rogers instruction now would ill serve the goals of 'stability' and 'predictability' that the doctrine of statutory stare decisis aims to ensure." (CSX Transp., Inc. v. McBride (2011) 564 U.S. 685, 699 [131 S.Ct. 2630, 180 L.Ed.2d 637], internal citations omitted.)
- "The standard under FELA is a relaxed one; to prove that a railroad breached its duty, a 'plaintiff must show circumstances which a reasonable person would foresee as creating a potential for harm [and] then show that this breach played any part, even the slightest, in producing the injury.' 'It is well established that the quantum of evidence required to establish liability in an FELA case is much less than in an ordinary negligence action.' If the negligence of the employer 'played any part, however small, in the injury,' the employer is liable." (Fair v. BNSF Railway Co. (2015) 238 Cal.App.4th 269, 275–276 [189 Cal.Rptr.3d 150], internal citation omitted.)
- "The common law concept of proximate cause . . . has not been adopted as the causation test in F.E.L.A. cases. Causation in an F.E.L.A. case exists even if there is a plurality of causes, including the negligence of the defendant or of a third person. The negligence of the employer need not be the sole cause or even a substantial cause of the ensuing injury." (Parker v. Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Ry. Co. (1968) 263 Cal.App.2d 675, 678 [70 Cal.Rptr. 8].)

- "Although the burden upon the plaintiff in proving causation in an F.E.L.A. case can be weighed neither in pounds nor ounces, it is a substantially lighter burden that that imposed upon him by [the common-law jury instruction]." (Parker, supra, 263 Cal.App.2d at p. 678.)
- "[T]he same standard of causation applies to railroad negligence under Section 1 as to plaintiff contributory negligence under Section 3." (Norfolk Southern Ry. v. Sorrell (2007) 549 U.S. 158, 171 [127 S.Ct. 799, 166 L.Ed.2d 638].)

Secondary Sources

2 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Workers' Compensation, § 129

42 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 485, Railroads, § 485.35 (Matthew Bender)

2904. Comparative Fault

[*Name of defendant] claims that [name of plaintiff/decedent] was negligent and that [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] negligence contributed to [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] own [harm/death]. To succeed, [name of defendant] must prove both of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff/decedent] was negligent; and
2. That [name of plaintiff/decedent]'s negligence was a cause of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] [harm/death].

[*Name of plaintiff/decedent]'s negligence, if any, was a cause of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] own [harm/death] if it played any part, no matter how small, in bringing about [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] [harm/death], even if other factors also contributed to [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] [harm/death].

If you decide that [*name of defendant] was negligent but also decide that [name of plaintiff/decedent]'s negligence contributed to the harm, then you must determine the percentage of negligence that you attribute to [name of plaintiff/decedent].

New September 2003; Revised December 2009

Directions for Use

This instruction does not apply if the claim is based on a violation of the Federal Safety Appliance Act or the Boiler Inspection Act.

For a definition of the term "negligence," see CACI No. 401, Basic Standard of Care.

Sources and Authority

- Contributory Negligence Under the FELA. Title 45 United States Code section 53.
- "The FELA provides that defense of contributory negligence is not available to an employer to defeat an employee's claim for injury, but only to diminish the amount of damages in proportion to the amount of negligence attributable to the employee. The burden of proving contributory negligence is on the defendant." (Torres v. Southern Pacific Co. (1968) 260 Cal.App.2d 757, 763 [67 Cal.Rptr. 428], internal citations omitted.)
- "Neither assumption of the risk nor the contributory negligence of the employee bars recovery, if the injury was at least in part the result of the employer's negligence." (Fair v. BNSF Railway Co. (2015) 238 Cal.App.4th 269, 276 [189 Cal.Rptr.3d 150].)
- "[T]he same standard of causation applies to railroad negligence under Section 1 as to plaintiff contributory negligence under Section 3." (Norfolk Southern Ry. v. Sorrell (2007) 549 U.S. 158, 171 [127 S.Ct. 799, 166 L.Ed.2d 638].)

- "Under this statute the test of a jury case is simply whether the proofs justify with reason the conclusion that employer negligence played any part, even the slightest, in producing the injury or death for which damages are sought." (Rogers v. Missouri Pacific Railroad Co. (1957) 352 U.S. 500, 506 [77 S.Ct. 443, 1 L.Ed.2d 493].)
- "In sum, the understanding of Rogers we here affirm 'has been accepted as settled law for several decades.' 'Congress has had [more than 50] years in which it could have corrected our decision in [Rogers] if it disagreed with it, and has not chosen to do so.' Countless judges have instructed countless juries in language drawn from Rogers. To discard or restrict the Rogers instruction now would ill serve the goals of 'stability' and 'predictability' that the doctrine of statutory stare decisis aims to ensure." (CSX Transp., Inc. v. McBride (2011) 564 U.S. 685, 699 [131 S.Ct. 2630, 180 L.Ed.2d 637], internal citations omitted.)
- "The common law concept of proximate cause . . . has not been adopted as the causation test in F.E.L.A. cases. Causation in an F.E.L.A. case exists even if there is a plurality of causes, including the negligence of the defendant or of a third person. The negligence of the employer need not be the sole cause or even a substantial cause of the ensuing injury." (Parker v. Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Ry. Co. (1968) 263 Cal.App.2d 675, 678 [70 Cal.Rptr. 8].)

Secondary Sources

2 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Workers' Compensation, § 131

42 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 485, Railroads, § 485.42 (Matthew Bender)

2905. Compliance With Employer's Requests or Directions

[*Name of plaintiff/decedent] was not negligent simply because [he/she/nonbinary pronoun], at the request or direction of [name of defendant], worked at a dangerous job, or in a dangerous place, or under dangerous conditions.

New September 2003

Sources and Authority

- "In Joyce v. Atlantic Richfield Co., 651 F.2d 676, 683 (10th Cir. 1981), this court held that when the evidence could support either contributory negligence or assumption of the risk, instructions which only define contributory negligence are not sufficient to prevent the jury from applying assumption of the risk. The court held the jury instructions should also include the following admonition: 'You may not find contributory negligence on the part of the plaintiff, however, simply because he acceded to the request or direction of the responsible representatives of his employer that he work at a dangerous job, or in a dangerous place, or under unsafe conditions.' The same instruction has been held sufficient by other circuits." (Sauer v. Burlington Northern Railroad Co. (10th Cir. 1996) 106 F.3d 1490, 1493, internal citation omitted.)
- "[I]f no evidence of impermissible assumption of risk has reached the jury, a correct instruction on contributory negligence will do. However, if, either because of evidence introduced at trial or because of statements made by counsel in opening or closing arguments, there is a risk that the implied consent theory of assumption of the risk seeped its way into the case, the jury should be instructed that it 'may not find contributory negligence on the part of the plaintiff . . . simply because he acceded to the request or direction of the responsible representatives of his employer that he work at a dangerous job, or in a dangerous place, or under unsafe conditions.' " (Fashauer v. New Jersey Transit Rail Operations, Inc. (3d Cir. 1995) 57 F.3d 1269, 1280.)

Secondary Sources

42 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 485, Railroads, § 485.35 (Matthew Bender)

2906–2919. Reserved for Future Use

2920. Federal Safety Appliance Act or Boiler Inspection Act—Essential Factual Elements

[*Name of plaintiff] [also] claims that while [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/[name of decedent]] was employed by [name of defendant], [[he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was harmed by/[his/her/nonbinary pronoun] death was caused by] [name of defendant]'s [describe violation of Federal Safety Appliance Act/Boiler Inspection Act]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff/decedent] was employed by [name of defendant];
2. That [name of defendant] was a common carrier by railroad;
3. That [name of plaintiff/decedent] was acting within the scope of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] employment at the time of the incident;
4. That [name of defendant] was engaged in interstate commerce;
5. That [name of plaintiff/decedent]'s job duties furthered, or in any way substantially affected, interstate commerce;
6. That [name of defendant] [describe violation of Federal Safety Appliance Act/Boiler Inspection Act];
7. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
8. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a cause of [[name of plaintiff]'s harm/[name of decedent]'s death].

[Interstate commerce is commercial activity that crosses more than one country or state, such as the movement of goods from one state to another.]

[*Name of defendant] is responsible for harm caused by [describe conduct that violated the FSA/BIA] even if it was not negligent. If you find that [name of defendant] is responsible for [name of plaintiff/decedent]'s [harm/death], [name of plaintiff]'s recovery, if any, must not be reduced because of [name of plaintiff/decedent]'s own conduct.

New September 2003; Revised December 2009, June 2011

Directions for Use

The statutory violation should be paraphrased in this instruction where indicated. Separate instructions may need to be drafted detailing the statutory requirements of the specific violation as alleged and any applicable defenses. (See 49 U.S.C. §§ 20301 et seq., 20501 et seq., and 20701.)

If the plaintiff is bringing a negligence claim under the Federal Employers' Liability Act (FELA) and a claim under the Federal Safety Appliance Act (SAA) or the Boiler Inspection Act (BIA), the court may wish to add an introductory instruction that would alert the jury to the difference between the two claims.

Do not give a comparative fault instruction if the case is brought under this theory.

Sources and Authority

- Federal Employers' Liability Act. Title 45 United States Code section 51.
- Contributory Negligence Under the FELA. Title 45 United States Code section 53.
- Assumption of Risk Under the FELA. Title 45 United States Code section 54.
- FELA Regulations Deemed to Be Statutes. Title 45 United States Code section 54a.
- Railroad Safety Requirements. Title 49 United States Code section 20302(a).
- Installation of Railroad Signal System. Title 49 United States Code section 20502(b).
- Use of Locomotive or Tender. Title 49 United States Code section 20701.
- "We note that under the Federal Employers' Liability Act of 1908 an injured railroad employee may bring a cause of action without proof of negligence based on failure of the SAA-mandated safety appliances to function. When such strict liability does not apply, i.e., the injury does not result from defective equipment covered by the SAA, the employee must establish common law negligence. The Supreme Court has also recognized that the SAA imposes a duty on railroads extending to nonemployee travelers at railway/highway crossings, who must bring a common law tort action in state court (absent diversity) and must prove negligence." (Carrillo v. ACF Industries, Inc. (1999) 20 Cal.4th 1158, 1170, fn. 4 [86 Cal.Rptr.2d 832, 980 P.2d 386], internal citations omitted.)
- "[An] FSAA violation is per se negligence in a FELA suit. In other words, the injured employee has to show only that the railroad violated the FSAA, and the railroad is strictly liable for any injury resulting from the violation." (Phillips v. CSX Transportation Co. (4th Cir. 1999) 190 F.3d 285, 288, original italics.)
- " 'The BIA and the SAA are regarded as amendments to the FELA. The BIA supplements the FELA to provide additional public protection and facilitate employee recovery. . . . [T]he BIA imposes on the carrier an absolute duty to maintain the locomotive, and all its parts and appurtenances, in proper condition, and safe to operate without unnecessary peril to life or limb.' " (Fontaine v. National Railroad Passenger Corp. (1997) 54 Cal.App.4th 1519, 1525 [63 Cal.Rptr.2d 644], internal citation omitted.)
- "[N]either contributory negligence nor assumption of the risk is a defense to a BIA violation which has contributed to the cause of an injury." (Fontaine, supra, 54 Cal.App.4th at p. 1525.)

- "Where an inefficient brake causes an injury the carrier in interstate commerce under the Safety Appliance Act cannot escape liability, and proof of negligence on the part of the railroad is unnecessary." (Leet v. Union Pacific Railroad Co. (1943) 60 Cal.App.2d 814, 817 [142 P.2d 37].)
- "Proof of a BIA violation is enough to establish negligence as a matter of law, and neither contributory negligence nor assumption of risk can be raised as a defense." (Law v. General Motors Corp. (9th Cir. 1997) 114 F.3d 908, 912, internal citations omitted.)
- "The purpose in enacting the BIA was to protect train service employees and the traveling public from defective locomotive boilers and equipment. '[I]t has been held consistently that the [BIA] supplements the [FELA] by imposing on interstate railroads "an absolute and continuing duty" to provide safe equipment.' In addition to the civil penalty, a person harmed by violation of the BIA is given recourse to sue under FELA, which applies only to railroad employees injured while engaged in interstate commerce. FELA provides the exclusive remedy for recovery of damages against a railroad by its employees. FELA liability is expressly limited to common carriers." (Viad Corp. v. Superior Court (1997) 55 Cal.App.4th 330, 335 [64 Cal.Rptr.2d 136], internal citations omitted, disapproved on other grounds in Scheiding v. General Motors Corp. (2000) 22 Cal.4th 471, 484, fn. 6 [93 Cal.Rptr.2d 342, 993 P.2d 996].)
- "The test for coverage under the amendment is not whether the employee is engaged in transportation, but rather whether what he does in any way furthers or substantially affects transportation." (Reed v. Pennsylvania Railroad Co. (1956) 351 U.S. 502, 505 [76 S.Ct. 958, 100 L.Ed. 1366].)
- "Where more than one inference can be drawn from the evidence, the question whether an employee was, at the time of receiving the injury sued for, engaged in interstate commerce, is for the jury." (Sullivan v. Matt (1955) 130 Cal.App.2d 134, 139 [278 P.2d 499], internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

42 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 485, Railroads, § 485.45 (Matthew Bender)

2921. Causation Under FSAA or BIA

If you decide that [*name of defendant] [describe violation of the Federal Safety Appliance Act/Boiler Inspection Act], then this is a cause of harm if it played any part, no matter how small, in bringing about the [harm/death], even if other factors also contributed to the [harm/death].

New September 2003

Sources and Authority

- "Actions alleging a violation of the BIA are brought under the FELA. The standard of causation required in a BIA case is the same as the standard of causation required in a FELA negligence case." (Summers v. Missouri Pacific Railroad System (10th Cir. 1997) 132 F.3d 599, 606, internal citations omitted.)
- "Proximate cause, as traditionally understood, is not required to establish causation under either the FELA or the BIA. 'Under the FELA [but not the BIA], an employee is entitled to recover damages if the employer's negligence played any part in producing the injury, no matter how slight.' " (Fontaine v. National Railroad Passenger Corp. (1997) 54 Cal.App.4th 1519, 1525 [63 Cal.Rptr.2d 644], internal citations omitted.)
- Liability under the BIA is established if defendant's violation of the BIA "played any part, no matter how small, in bringing about or actually causing, the injury" to the plaintiff . . . "without any requirement of a showing of negligence on the part of the defendant." (Oglesby v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 6 F.3d 603, 606–609.)

Secondary Sources

42 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 485, Railroads, § 485.45 (Matthew Bender)

2922. Statute of Limitations—Special Verdict Form or Interrogatory

---

[*Name of plaintiff] must prove that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] did not know, and could not reasonably have known, before [date three years before action was commenced],

1. That [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] had been harmed; and
2. That the harm was potentially caused by [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] work with [name of defendant].

You will be asked a question about this on a special [verdict form/interrogatory].

New September 2003

Sources and Authority

- FELA: Statute of Limitations. 45 U.S.C. section 56.
- "Compliance with the three-year statute of limitations is a condition precedent for recovery in a FELA action. In cases of latent or progressive injuries . . . the 'discovery rule' directs that the cause of action does not commence to run until the plaintiff knew or should have known of the injury and its cause." (Monarch v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co. (1999) 70 Cal.App.4th 1197, 1203 [83 Cal.Rptr.2d 247], internal citations omitted.)
- "The burden is therefore on the claimant to allege and to prove that his cause of action was commenced within the three-year period." (Emmons v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co. (5th Cir. 1983) 701 F.2d 1112, 1118, internal citations omitted.)
- "Under the discovery rule, the test is an objective inquiry into whether the plaintiff knew or should have known, in the exercise of reasonable diligence, the essential facts of injury and cause. Constructive rather than actual knowledge of the fact of causation triggers a duty to investigate the possible causes of injury. Thus, in accordance with the objective test, 'definite knowledge' that the injury is work related is not necessary in order for the cause of action to accrue. Once the plaintiff believes or suspects that the 'potential cause of his injury' is work related, an affirmative duty to investigate is imposed." (Monarch, supra, 70 Cal.App.4th at p. 1203.)

Secondary Sources

42 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 485, Railroads, § 485.41 (Matthew Bender)

[[*Name of plaintiff] claims [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/[name of decedent]] was [name of defendant]'s employee at the time of the incident even though [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was primarily employed by [name of primary employer].]

[or]

[[*Name of plaintiff] claims [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/[name of decedent]] was employed by both [name of defendant] and [name of primary employer] at the time of the incident.]

In deciding whether [*name of plaintiff/decedent] was [name of defendant]'s employee, the most important factor is whether [name of defendant] had the right to control the work of [name of plaintiff/decedent], rather than just the right to specify the result. It does not matter whether [name of defendant] exercised the right to control. Sharing information or coordinating efforts between employees of two companies, by itself, is not enough to establish the right to control.

In addition to the right of control, you must also consider all the circumstances in deciding whether [*name of plaintiff/decedent] was [name of defendant]'s employee. The following factors, if true, may show that [name of plaintiff/decedent] was the employee of [name of defendant]:

(a) [*Name of defendant] supplied the equipment, tools, and place of work;

(b) [*Name of plaintiff/decedent] was paid by the hour rather than by the job;

(c) The work being done by [*name of plaintiff/decedent] was part of the regular business of [name of defendant];

(d) [*Name of defendant] had the right to end its relationship with [name of plaintiff/decedent];

(e) The work being done by [*name of plaintiff/decedent] was [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] only occupation or business;

(f) The kind of work performed by [*name of plaintiff/decedent] is usually done under the direction of a supervisor rather than by a specialist working without supervision;

(g) The kind of work performed by [*name of plaintiff/decedent] does not require specialized or professional skill;

(h) The services performed by [*name of plaintiff/decedent] were to be performed over a long period of time;

(i) [*Name of defendant] and [name of plaintiff/decedent] acted as if they had an employer-employee relationship;

(j) [*Name of plaintiff/decedent]'s duties to [name of defendant] were only for its benefit;

(k) [*Name of plaintiff/decedent] consented to the employment with [name of defendant].

New September 2003; Revised June 2013

Directions for Use

Read the first bracketed paragraph for cases raising the borrowed-servant theory. Read the second bracketed paragraph for cases involving dual employment.

Secondary factors (a)–(k) come from the Restatement Second of Agency, section 220.

Sources and Authority

- "Under common-law principles, there are basically three methods by which a plaintiff can establish his 'employment' with a rail carrier for FELA purposes even while he is nominally employed by another. First, the employee could be serving as the borrowed servant of the railroad at the time of his injury. Second, he could be deemed to be acting for two masters simultaneously. Finally, he could be a subservant of a company that was in turn a servant of the railroad." (Kelley v. Southern Pacific Co. (1974) 419 U.S. 318, 324 [95 S.Ct. 472, 42 L.Ed.2d 498], internal citations omitted.)
- "When the nominal employer furnishes a third party with ' "men to do the work and places them under his exclusive control in the performance of it, [then] those men become pro hac vice the servants of him to whom they are furnished," ' under the loaned servant doctrine." (Collins v. Union Pacific Railroad Co. (2012) 207 Cal.App.4th 867, 879 [143 Cal.Rptr.3d 849], original italics.)
- "An employee may at the same time be under a general and a special employer, and where, either by the terms of a contract or during the course of its performance, the employee of an independent contractor comes under the control and direction of the other party to the contract, a dual employment relation is held to exist." (Collins, supra, 207 Cal.App.4th at p. 877.)
- "[A] finding of agency is not tantamount to a finding of a master-servant relationship." (Kelley, supra, 419 U.S. at p. 325.)
- "In this case . . . the evidence of contacts between Southern Pacific employees and PMT employees may indicate, not direction or control, but rather the passing of information and the accommodation that is obviously required in a large and necessarily coordinated operation. The informal contacts between the two groups must assume a supervisory character before the PMT employees can be deemed pro hac vice employees of the railroad." (Kelley, supra, 419 U.S. at p. 330.)

- "The determination of whether a worker is a borrowed servant is accomplished by ascertaining who has the power to control and direct the servants in the performance of their work, distinguishing between authoritative direction and control, and mere suggestion as to details or the necessary cooperation, where the work furnished is part of a larger undertaking. There is thus a distinction between 'authoritative direction and control' by a railroad, and the 'minimum cooperation necessary to carry out a coordinated undertaking' which does not amount to control or supervision. The control need not be exercised; it is sufficient if the right to direct the details of the work is present. (Collins, supra, 207 Cal.App.4th at p. 879.)
- "The special employment relationship and its consequent imposition of liability upon the special employer flows from the borrower's power to supervise the details of the employee's work. Mere instruction by the borrower on the result to be achieved will not suffice." (Marsh v. Tilley Steel Co. (1980) 26 Cal.3d 486, 492 [162 Cal.Rptr. 320, 606 P.2d 355] [not a FELA case].)
- "The question of whether a special employment relationship exists is generally a question of fact reserved for the jury." (Collins, supra, 207 Cal.App.4th at p. 878.)
- Contract terms are not conclusive evidence of the existence of the right to control. (Kowalski v. Shell Oil Co. (1979) 23 Cal.3d 168, 176 [151 Cal.Rptr. 671, 588 P.2d 811] [not a FELA case].)
- Restatement Second of Agency, section 220 provides:

    (1) A servant is a person employed to perform services in the affairs of another and who with respect to the physical conduct in the performance of the services is subject to the other's control or right to control.

    (2) In determining whether one acting for another is a servant or an independent contractor, the following matters of fact, among others, are considered:

        (a) the extent of control which, by the agreement, the master may exercise over the details of the work;

        (b) whether or not the one employed is engaged in a distinct occupation or business;

        (c) the kind of occupation, with reference to whether, in the locality, the work is usually done under the direction of the employer or by a specialist without supervision;

        (d) the skill required in the particular occupation;

        (e) whether the employer or the workman supplies the instrumentalities, tools, and the place of work for the person doing the work;

(f) the length of time for which the person is employed;

(g) the method of payment, whether by the time or by the job;

(h) whether or not the work is a part of the regular business of the employer;

(i) whether or not the parties believe they are creating the relation of master and servant; and

(j) whether the principal is or is not in business.

- "Section 220 (1) of the Restatement defines a servant as 'a person employed to perform services in the affairs of another and who with respect to the physical conduct in the performance of the services is subject to the other's control or right to control.' In § 220 (2), the Restatement recites various factors that are helpful in applying that definition. While that section is directed primarily at determining whether a particular bilateral arrangement is properly characterized as a master-servant or independent contractor relationship, it can also be instructive in analyzing the three-party relationship between two employers and a worker." (Kelley, supra, 419 U.S. at p. 324.)
- " 'Following common law tradition, California decisions . . . uniformly declare that "[t]he principal test of an employment relationship is whether the person to whom service is rendered has the right to control the manner and means of accomplishing the result desired. . . ." [Citations.] [¶] However, the courts have long recognized that the "control" test, applied rigidly and in isolation, is often of little use in evaluating the infinite variety of service arrangements. While conceding that the right to control work details is the "most important" or "most significant" consideration, the authorities also endorse several "secondary" indicia of the nature of a service relationship.' Those 'secondary indicia' 'have been derived principally from the Restatement Second of Agency.' They generally ' "cannot be applied mechanically as separate tests; they are intertwined and their weight depends often on particular combinations." ' " (Bowman v. Wyatt (2010) 186 Cal.App.4th 286, 301 [111 Cal.Rptr.3d 787] [not a FELA case], internal citation omitted.)
- "In 2006 the Restatement (Second) of Agency was superseded by the Restatement (Third) of Agency, which uses 'employer' and 'employee' rather than 'master' and 'servant,' Restatement (Third) of Agency, § 2.04, comment a, and defines an employee simply as a type of agent subject to a principal's control. Id., § 7.07(3)(a)." (Schmidt v. Burlington Northern & Santa Fe Ry. (9th Cir. 2010) 605 F.3d 686, 690 fn. 3.)

Secondary Sources

3 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Agency and Employment, §§ 179–182

2 Wilcox, California Employment Law, Ch. 30, Employers' Tort Liability to Third Parties for Conduct of Employees, § 30.04 (Matthew Bender)

21 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for

Employee's Torts, § 248.15 (Matthew Bender)

42 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 485, Railroads, § 485.33 (Matthew Bender)

2924. Status as Defendant's Employee—Subservant Company

[*Name of plaintiff] claims [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/[name of decedent]] was [name of defendant]'s employee because [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was employed by [name of primary employer], a company that was controlled by [name of defendant]. To succeed on this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] controlled or had the right to control the daily operations of [name of primary employer];
2. That [name of defendant] controlled or had the right to control the physical conduct of [name of primary employer]'s employees in the course of the work during which [name of plaintiff/decedent] was [injured/killed]; and
3. That [name of plaintiff/decedent] was performing services for the benefit of [name of defendant] at the time of [injury/death].

New September 2003; Revised June 2011

Directions for Use

For factors that may apply to determine whether the employer has a right to control, see CACI No. 2923, Borrowed Servant/Dual Employee. These factors are taken from section 220 of the Restatement Second of Agency. The factors were not included in the Restatement Third of Agency.

Sources and Authority

- "In the Kelley case, the Supreme Court recognized that if a second company could be shown to be a conventional common-law servant, the 'control or right to control' test would be met." (Bradsher v. Missouri Pacific Railroad (8th Cir. 1982) 679 F.2d 1253, 1257–1258, internal citation omitted.)
- "To prove WFE was [defendant]'s servant, [plaintiff] must establish [defendant] controlled or had the right to control the physical conduct of WFE's employees in the course of the work during which the injury allegedly occurred. The subservant theory presupposes the existence of two separate entities in a master-servant relationship. A plaintiff can proceed under this theory by showing his employer was the common-law servant of the defendant railroad such that the railroad controlled or had the right to control the employer's daily operations. A plaintiff must also show he was 'employed to perform services in the affairs of [the defendant railroad] and . . . with respect to the physical conduct in the performance of the services [was] subject to [that railroad's] control or right to control.' For [plaintiff] to succeed under the subservant theory, he must show [defendant] controlled or had the right to control his physical conduct on the job. It is not enough for him to merely show WFE was the railroad's agent, or that he was acting to fulfill the railroad's obligations; [defendant]'s generalized oversight of [plaintiff], without physical control or the right to exercise physical control of his daily work is insufficient." (Schmidt v. Burlington Northern & Santa Fe Ry. (9th Cir. 2010) 605 F.3d 686, 689–690, internal citations omitted.)

- "Where the evidence of control is in dispute, the case should go to the jury." (Vanskike v. ACF Industries, Inc. (8th Cir. 1981) 665 F.2d 188, 198, internal citations omitted.)
- "In this case . . . the evidence of contacts between Southern Pacific employees and PMT employees may indicate, not direction or control, but rather the passing of information and the accommodation that is obviously required in a large and necessarily coordinated operation. The informal contacts between the two groups must assume a supervisory character before the PMT employees can be deemed pro hac vice employees of the railroad." (Kelley v. Southern Pacific Co. (1974) 419 U.S. 318, 330 [95 S.Ct. 472, 42 L.Ed.2d 498].)
- Restatement Second of Agency, section 220(1), defines a servant as "a person employed to perform services in the affairs of another and who with respect to the physical conduct in the performance of the services is subject to the other's control or right to control." Section 220(2) lists various factors that are helpful in applying this definition:
  - (a) the extent of control which, by the agreement, the master may exercise over the details of the work;
  - (b) whether or not the one employed is engaged in a distinct occupation or business;
  - (c) the kind of occupation, with reference to whether, in the locality, the work is usually done under the direction of the employer or by a specialist without supervision;
  - (d) the skill required in the particular occupation;
  - (e) whether the employer or the workman supplies the instrumentalities, tools, and the place of work for the person doing the work;
  - (f) the length of time for which the person is employed;
  - (g) the method of payment, whether by the time or by the job;
  - (h) whether or not the work is a part of the regular business of the employer;
  - (i) whether or not the parties believe they are creating the relation of master and servant; and
  - (j) whether the principal is or is not in business.
- "While [section 220] is directed primarily at determining whether a particular bilateral arrangement is properly characterized as a master-servant or independent contractor relationship, it can also be instructive in analyzing the three-party relationship between two employers and a worker." (Kelley v.

Southern Pacific Co. (1974) 419 U.S. 318, 324 [95 S.Ct. 472, 42 L.Ed.2d 498].)

- "In 2006 the Restatement (Second) of Agency was superseded by the Restatement (Third) of Agency, which uses 'employer' and 'employee' rather than 'master' and 'servant,' Restatement (Third) of Agency, § 2.04, comment a, and defines an employee simply as a type of agent subject to a principal's control. Id., § 7.07(3)(a)." (Schmidt, supra, 605 F.3d at p. 690, fn. 3.)

Secondary Sources

2 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Workers' Compensation, § 126

42 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 485, Railroads, § 485.33 (Matthew Bender)

2925. Status of Defendant as Common Carrier

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] was a common carrier by railroad. To prove this, [name of plaintiff] must show that [name of defendant] was in the business of transporting [the property of] the general public by rail.

New September 2003

Sources and Authority

- FELA: "Common Carrier" Defined. 45 U.S.C. section 57.
- "A common carrier has been defined generally as one who holds himself out to the public as engaged in the business of transportation of persons or property from place to place for compensation, offering his services to the public generally. The distinctive characteristic of a common carrier is that he undertakes to carry for all people indifferently, and hence is regarded in some respects as a public servant. The dominant and controlling factor in determining the status of one as a common carrier is his public profession as to the service offered or performed." (Kelly v. General Electric Co. (E.D.Pa. 1953) 110 F.Supp. 4, 6.)
- "According to these cases various considerations are of prime importance in determining whether a particular entity is a common carrier. First—actual performance of rail service, second—the service being performed is part of the total rail service contracted for by a member of the public, third—the entity is performing as part of a system of interstate rail transportation by virtue of common ownership between itself and a railroad or by a contractual relationship with a railroad, and hence such entity is deemed to be holding itself out to the public, and fourth—remuneration for the services performed is received in some manner, such as a fixed charge from a railroad or by a percent of the profits from a railroad." (Lone Star Steel Co. v. McGee (5th Cir. 1967) 380 F.2d 640, 647.)

Secondary Sources

42 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 485, Railroads, § 485.35 (Matthew Bender)

2926. Scope of Employment

[*Name of plaintiff] must prove that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/[name of decedent]] was acting within the scope of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] employment at the time of the incident.

Conduct is within the scope of employment if:

(a) It is reasonably related to the kinds of tasks that the employee was hired to perform; or

(b) It is reasonably foreseeable in light of the employer's business or the employee's job responsibilities.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

See other instructions that further define the concept of scope of employment in the Vicarious Responsibility instructions (CACI No. 3720 et seq.).

Sources and Authority

- "FELA's limitation of a railroad's liability to injuries occurring 'while [the person] is employed by' the railroad means that it must generally be determined whether the employee was injured while she was acting within the scope of her employment. 'Normally, whether an employee is acting within the scope of employment is a question to be resolved by the jury from all the surrounding circumstances,' for 'in negligence actions brought under the FELA, . . . the role of the jury is significantly greater . . . than in common law negligence actions . . . .' Indeed, " 'trial by jury is part of the remedy.' " " (Goldwater v. Metro-North Commuter Railroad (2d Cir. 1996) 101 F.3d 296, 298, internal citations omitted.)
- "The scope of employment under FELA is broadly construed by the federal courts—and has been for more than 80 years. In the seminal FELA case of Erie Railroad Company v. Winfield (1917) 244 U.S. 170 [37 S.Ct. 556, 61 L.Ed. 1057], the Supreme Court held that an employee who leaves the railroad carrier's yard 'at the close of his day's work' is engaged in a 'necessary incident of his day's work,' and thus is 'but discharging a duty of his employment.' " (Ponce v. Northeast Illinois Regional Commuter Railroad Corp. (N.D. Ill. 2000) 103 F.Supp.2d 1051, 1056, internal citations omitted.)
- "Railroad employment has been broadly interpreted to extend not only to acts required by the employer, but also to those acts necessarily incidental to the employment. [¶] This circuit and others have nevertheless held that even 'given its most liberal interpretation, the Act cannot be extended to cover activities not necessarily incident to or an integral part of employment in interstate commerce. It obviously does not cover activities undertaken by an employee for a private purpose and having no causal relationship with his employment.' " (Feichko v. Denver & Rio Grande Western Railroad Co. (10th Cir. 2000) 213 F.3d 586, 592, internal citations omitted.)

- Restatement Second of Agency, section 229, provides:

  (1) To be within the scope of the employment, conduct must be of the same general nature as that authorized, or incidental to the conduct authorized.

  (2) In determining whether or not the conduct, although not authorized, is nevertheless so similar to or incidental to the conduct authorized as to be within the scope of employment, the following matters of fact are to be considered:

  (a) whether or not the act is one commonly done by such servants;

  (b) the time, place and purpose of the act;

  (c) the previous relations between the master and the servant;

  (d) the extent to which the business of the master is apportioned between different servants;

  (e) whether or not the act is outside the enterprise of the master or, if within the enterprise, has not been entrusted to any servant;

  (f) whether or not the master has reason to expect that such an act will be done;

  (g) the similarity in quality of the act done to the act authorized;

  (h) whether or not the instrumentality by which the harm is done has been furnished by the master to the servant;

  (i) the extent of departure from the normal method of accomplishing an authorized result; and

  (j) whether or not the act is seriously criminal.

- "The Restatement at § 229 sets forth intelligent factors for a factfinder to consider in determining whether this has happened. We emphasize that no one factor is dispositive; establishing one or more factors is not equivalent to establishing scope of employment." (Wilson v. Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific Railroad Co. (7th Cir. 1988) 841 F.2d 1347, 1355.)
- "[A]s a general rule, courts have held that an employee injured while commuting to and from work is not covered by FELA." (Ponce, supra, 103 F.Supp.2d at p. 1057.) However, FELA may apply if the injury occurs on the employer's work site "while the employee is attempting to report to or leave the job within a reasonable time of his or her shift, and is exposed to risks not confronted by the public generally." (Ibid.)

Secondary Sources

42 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 485, Railroads, § 485.35 (Matthew Bender)

2927–2939. Reserved for Future Use

2940. Income Tax Effects of Award

[Name of plaintiff] will not be required to pay any federal or state income taxes on any amount that you award.

[When calculating lost earnings, if any, you should use after-tax earnings.]

New September 2003

Directions for Use

The Eighth Circuit Model Jury Instructions state that the bracketed sentence should be given if there is evidence of both gross and net earnings and there is any danger that the jury may be confused as to the proper measure of damages.

Sources and Authority

- If requested, the jury must be instructed that the verdict will not be subject to income taxes. (Norfolk & W. Ry. Co. v. Liepelt (1980) 444 U.S. 490, 498 [100 S.Ct. 755, 62 L.Ed.2d 689].) Further, the Supreme Court in the Liepelt case stated that the jury should base its award on the "after-tax" value of lost earnings in determining lost earnings. (Id. at p. 493.)

2941. Introduction to Damages for Personal Injury

If you decide that [*name of plaintiff] has proved [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] claim against [name of defendant], you also must decide how much money will reasonably compensate [name of plaintiff] for the harm. This compensation is called "damages."

[*Name of plaintiff] must prove the amount of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] damages. However, [name of plaintiff] does not have to prove the exact amount of damages that will provide reasonable compensation for the harm. You must not speculate or guess in awarding damages.

The following are the specific items of damages claimed by [*name of plaintiff]:

New September 2003

Directions for Use

See the Damages series (CACI No. 3900 et seq.) for instructions on specific items of damages and other topics involving damages, such as the concept of present cash value, mitigation of damages, and the effect of preexisting conditions. Care should be taken to verify that the wording of these instructions is consistent with federal law regarding damages under the FELA.

Sources and Authority

- Federal Employers' Liability Act. 45 U.S.C. section 51.
- "[I]t is settled that the propriety of jury instructions concerning the measure of damages in an FELA action is an issue of 'substance' determined by federal law." (St. Louis Southwestern Railway Co. v. Dickerson (1985) 470 U.S. 409, 411 [105 S.Ct. 1347, 84 L.Ed.2d 303], internal citation omitted.)
- "A FELA plaintiff is entitled to recover for all past, present and probable future harm attributable to the defendant's tortious conduct, including pain and suffering and mental anguish." (Marchica v. Long Island Railroad Co. (2d Cir. 1994) 31 F.3d 1197, 1207.)
- "A FELA plaintiff, upon proof of employer liability, may recover damages for loss of earnings, medical expenses and pain and suffering. The burden rests upon the plaintiff to establish by sufficient evidence a factual basis for the amount of damages sought." (Williams v. Missouri Pacific Railroad Co. (10th Cir. 1993) 11 F.3d 132, 135, internal citations omitted.)
- "The Act was not intended to supersede or pre-empt the common law in railroad employee injury cases, but merely to modify it in . . . specific particulars. Thus, the Act contains no provisions regulating the measure of damages recoverable in an action to which the FELA applies, and courts have since held that the absence in the Act of specific provisions governing the measure of damages in FELA actions does not affect their availability as before the Act." (Hall v. Minnesota Transfer Railway Co. (D.Minn. 1971) 322 F.Supp. 92, 94.)

- "The seaman may thus recover for all of his pecuniary damages including such damages as the cost of employing someone else to perform those domestic services that he would otherwise have been able to render but is now incapable of doing." (Cruz v. Hendy International Co. (5th Cir. 1981) 638 F.2d 719, 723 [Jones Act case], overruled on other grounds in Miles v. Apex Marine Corp. (1990) 498 U.S. 19, 32–33 [111 S.Ct. 317, 112 L.Ed.2d 275].)
- "Although our decision in Jones & Laughlin makes clear that no single method for determining present value is mandated by federal law and that the method of calculating present value should take into account inflation and other sources of wage increases as well as the rate of interest, it is equally clear that an utter failure to instruct the jury that present value is the proper measure of a damages award is error." (St. Louis Southwestern Railway, supra, 470 U.S. at p. 412.)
- "Damages for the injury of loss of earning capacity may be recovered in a FELA action. 'Earning capacity means the potential for earning money in the future . . . .' The appropriate measure is the present value of the total amount of future earnings." (Bissett v. Burlington Northern Railroad Co. (8th Cir. 1992) 969 F.2d 727, 731, internal citations omitted.)
- "[W]e see no reason, and defendant has presented us with no reason, to create in FELA cases an exception to the general rule that the defendant has the burden of proving that the plaintiff could, with reasonable effort, have mitigated his damages." (Jones v. Consolidated Rail Corp. (6th Cir. 1986) 800 F.2d 590, 594.)
- "The federal and state courts have held with virtual unanimity over more than seven decades that prejudgment interest is not available under the FELA." (Monessen Southwestern Railway Co. v. Morgan (1988) 486 U.S. 330, 338 [108 S.Ct. 1837, 100 L.Ed.2d 349].)
- "We therefore reaffirm the conclusion . . . that punitive damages are unavailable under the FELA." (Wildman v. Burlington Northern Railroad Co. (9th Cir. 1987) 825 F.2d 1392, 1395, internal citation omitted.)
- "We have held specifically that the spouse of an injured railroad employee may not sue for loss of consortium under FELA." (Kelsaw v. Union Pacific Railroad Co. (9th Cir. 1982) 686 F.2d 819, 820, internal citation omitted.)
- 45 U.S.C. section 55 provides: "Any contract, rule, regulation, or device whatsoever, the purpose or intent of which shall be to enable any common carrier to exempt itself from any liability created by this [chapter], shall to that extent be void: Provided, That in any action brought against any such common carrier under or by virtue of any of the provisions of this [chapter], such common carrier may set off therein any sum it has contributed or paid to any insurance, relief benefit, or indemnity that may have been paid to the injured employee or the person entitled thereto on account of the injury or death for which said action was brought."

- "While at first glance the language of this provision seems broad enough to completely abrogate the common law collateral source rule, courts have limited the scope of the provision by focusing on the requirement that the covered payments be made 'on account of the injury.' Thus, the cases draw a distinction between payments emanating from a fringe benefit such as a retirement fund or a general hospital and medical insurance plan, and payments which the employer has undertaken voluntarily to indemnify itself against possible liabilities under the FELA." (Clark v. Burlington Northern, Inc. (8th Cir. 1984) 726 F.2d 448, 450, internal citation omitted.)
- "A benefit may be exempt from setoff under the collateral source rule even though the employer is the sole source of the fund. The important consideration is the character of the benefits received, rather than whether the source is actually independent of the employer. Medical expenses paid for by insurance are exempt from setoff regardless of whether the employer paid one hundred percent of the insurance premiums. Courts have also ruled private disability retirement plans established by a collective bargaining agreement and covering both job-related and non-job-related illness and injury are exempt from setoff." (Clark, supra, 726 F.2d at pp. 450–451, footnote and internal citations omitted.)
- "Generally, a tortfeasor need not pay twice for the damage caused, but he should not be allowed to set off compensation from a 'collateral source' against the amount he owes on account of his tort." (Russo v. Matson Navigation Co. (9th Cir. 1973) 486 F.2d 1018, 1020.)
- "It is well established in this circuit that the purpose and nature of the insurance benefits are controlling. Here, the purpose of the insurance coverage, as expressly described in the collective bargaining agreement, is to indemnify the employer against FELA liability. It follows that setoff should be allowed and that the benefits in this case should not be regarded as a collateral source." (Folkestad v. Burlington Northern, Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 813 F.2d 1377, 1383.)
- "The mechanics of handling the setoff provided by the plan may be dealt with either by the Court instructing the jury that the amount of benefits provided by the GA-23000 contract must be set off against any damages awarded or by the Court as a matter of law reducing damages awarded by the jury." (Brice v. National Railroad Passenger Corp. (D. Md. 1987) 664 F.Supp. 220, 224.)

Secondary Sources

42 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 485, Railroads, §§ 485.43, 485.44 (Matthew Bender)

2942. Damages for Death of Employee

If you decide that [*name of plaintiff] has proved [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] claim against [name of defendant] for the death of [name of decedent], you also must decide how much money will reasonably compensate [name of plaintiff] for this loss. This compensation is called "damages."

[*Name of plaintiff] must prove the amount of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] damages. However, [name of plaintiff] does not have to prove the exact amount of these damages. You must not speculate or guess in awarding damages.

The following are the specific items of damages claimed by [*name of plaintiff]:

1. The reasonable value of money, goods, and services that [name of decedent] would have provided [name of plaintiff] during either the life expectancy that [name of decedent] had before [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] death or the life expectancy of [name of plaintiff], whichever is shorter;
2. [The monetary value of [name of minor child]'s loss of any care, attention, instruction, training, advice, and guidance from [name of decedent];]
3. Any pain and suffering that [name of decedent] experienced as a result of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] injuries; and
4. The reasonable expense of medical care and supplies reasonably needed by and actually provided to [name of decedent].

Do not include in your award any compensation for [*name of plaintiff]'s grief, sorrow, or mental anguish or the loss of [name of decedent]'s society or companionship.

In deciding a person's life expectancy, consider, among other factors, that person's health, habits, activities, lifestyle, and occupation. Life expectancy tables are evidence of a person's life expectancy but are not conclusive.

Any award you make for the value of any money and services that you decide [*name of decedent] would have provided [name of plaintiff] in the future should be reduced to present value. Any award you make for the value of any money and services you decide [name of decedent] would have provided [name of plaintiff] between the date of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] death on [date of death] and the present should not be reduced to present value.

[In computing damages, consider the losses suffered by all plaintiffs and return a verdict of a single amount for all plaintiffs. I will divide the amount [among/between] the plaintiffs.]

New September 2003; Revised December 2011

Directions for Use

The list of damages is optional and is intended to include those items of damage for which recovery is commonly sought in the ordinary FELA case. This list is not intended to exclude any item of damages that is supported in evidence and the authorities. There must be evidence to support each item listed.

The items of damage set forth in items number 3 and 4 are recoverable by the personal representative on behalf of the spouse, children, or parents of the decedent, if supported by the evidence.

See also CACI No. 3904A, Present Cash Value, CACI No. 3904B, Use of Present-Value Tables, and CACI No. 3932, Life Expectancy.

Sources and Authority

- Federal Employers' Liability Act. Title 45 United States Code section 51.
- Contracts Waiving FELA Liability Are Void. Title 45 United States Code section 55.
- FELA Right of Action Survives. Title 45 United States Code section 59.
- "[I]t is settled that the propriety of jury instructions concerning the measure of damages in an FELA action is an issue of 'substance' determined by federal law." (St. Louis Southwestern Railway Co. v. Dickerson (1985) 470 U.S. 409, 411 [105 S.Ct. 1347, 84 L.Ed.2d 303], internal citation omitted.)
- "The elements which make up the total damage resulting to a minor child from a parent's death may be materially different from a parent's examination where the beneficiary is a spouse or collateral dependent relative; but in every instance the award must be based upon money values, the amount of which can be ascertained only upon a view of the peculiar facts presented." (Norfolk & Western Railroad Co. v. Holbrook (1915) 235 U.S. 625, 629 [35 S.Ct. 143, 59 L.Ed. 392], internal citations omitted.)
- "In the present case there was testimony concerning the personal qualities of the deceased and the interest which he took in his family. It was proper, therefore, to charge that the jury might take into consideration the care, attention, instruction, training, advice, and guidance which the evidence showed he reasonably might have been expected to give his children during their minority, and to include the pecuniary value thereof in the damages assessed." (Norfolk & Western Railroad Co., supra, 235 U.S. at p. 629.)
- " 'In the absence of evidence that an adult child is either dependent upon or had any reasonable grounds for expecting any pecuniary benefit from a continuance of the decedent's life, a recovery on behalf of such child is excluded.' " (Kozar

v. Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Co. (6th Cir. 1971) 449 F.2d 1238, 1243, internal citation omitted.)

- "[T]he conclusion is unavoidable that the personal representative is to recover on behalf of the designated beneficiaries, not only such damages as will compensate them for their own pecuniary loss, but also such damages as will be reasonably compensatory for the loss and suffering of the injured person while he lived." (St. Louis, I.M. & S. Railway Co. v. Craft (1915) 237 U.S. 648, 658 [35 S.Ct. 704, 59 L.Ed. 1160].)
- "Funeral expenses . . . may not be included in damages awarded in FELA actions." (Dubose v. Kansas City Southern Railway Co. (5th Cir. 1984) 729 F.2d 1026, 1033.)
- "In a wrongful-death action under the FELA, the measure of recovery is 'the damages . . . [that] flow from the deprivation of the pecuniary benefits which the beneficiaries might have reasonably received . . . .' The amount of money that a wage earner is able to contribute to the support of his family is unquestionably affected by the amount of the tax he must pay to the Federal Government. It is his after-tax income, rather than his gross income before taxes, that provides the only realistic measure of his ability to support his family. It follows inexorably that the wage earner's income tax is a relevant factor in calculating the monetary loss suffered by his dependents when he dies." (Norfolk & W. Ry. Co. v. Liepelt (1980) 444 U.S. 490, 493–494 [100 S.Ct. 755, 62 L.Ed.2d 689], internal citation omitted.)
- "[T]he damages are such as flow from the deprivation of the pecuniary benefits which the beneficiaries might have reasonably received if the deceased had not died from his injuries." (Michigan Central Railroad Co. v. Vreeland (1913) 227 U.S. 59, 70 [33 S.Ct. 192, 57 L.Ed. 417].)
- "The seaman may thus recover for all of his pecuniary damages including such damages as the cost of employing someone else to perform those domestic services that he would otherwise have been able to render but is now incapable of doing." (Cruz v. Hendy International Co. (5th Cir. 1981) 638 F.2d 719, 723 [Jones Act case], overruled on other grounds in Miles v. Apex Marine Corp. (1990) 498 U.S. 19, 32–33 [111 S.Ct. 317, 112 L.Ed.2d 275].)
- "While at first glance the language of this provision seems broad enough to completely abrogate the common law collateral source rule, courts have limited the scope of the provision by focusing on the requirement that the covered payments be made 'on account of the injury.' Thus, the cases draw a distinction between payments emanating from a fringe benefit such as a retirement fund or a general hospital and medical insurance plan, and payments which the employer has undertaken voluntarily to indemnify itself against possible liabilities under the FELA." (Clark v. Burlington Northern, Inc. (8th Cir. 1984) 726 F.2d 448, 450, internal citation omitted.)
- "A benefit may be exempt from setoff under the collateral source rule even though the employer is the sole source of the fund. The important consideration is the character of the benefits received, rather than whether the source is actually independent of the employer. Medical expenses paid for by insurance are exempt from setoff regardless of whether the employer paid one hundred percent of the insurance premiums. Courts have also ruled private disability retirement plans established by a collective bargaining agreement and covering both job-related and non-job-related illness and injury are exempt from setoff." (Clark, supra, 726 F.2d at pp. 450–451, footnote and internal citations omitted.)

- "Generally, a tortfeasor need not pay twice for the damage caused, but he should not be allowed to set off compensation from a 'collateral source' against the amount he owes on account of his tort." (Russo v. Matson Navigation Co. (9th Cir. 1973) 486 F.2d 1018, 1020.)
- "It is well established in this circuit that the purpose and nature of the insurance benefits are controlling. Here, the purpose of the insurance coverage, as expressly described in the collective bargaining agreement, is to indemnify the employer against FELA liability. It follows that setoff should be allowed and that the benefits in this case should not be regarded as a collateral source." (Folkestad v. Burlington Northern, Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 813 F.2d 1377, 1383.)
- "The mechanics of handling the setoff provided by the plan may be dealt with either by the Court instructing the jury that the amount of benefits provided by the GA-23000 contract must be set off against any damages awarded or by the Court as a matter of law reducing damages awarded by the jury." (Brice v. National Railroad Passenger Corp. (D. Md. 1987) 664 F.Supp. 220, 224.)

Secondary Sources

2 Hanna, California Law of Employee Injuries and Workers' Compensation, Ch. 21, Jurisdiction, § 21.01[3] (Matthew Bender)

42 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 485, Railroads, §§ 485.36, 485.43, 485.44 (Matthew Bender)

2943–2999. Reserved for Future Use

VF-2900. FELA—Negligence—Plaintiff's Negligence at Issue

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of plaintiff/decedent] employed by [name of defendant]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Was [name of defendant] a common carrier by railroad?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Was [name of defendant] engaged in interstate commerce?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did [name of plaintiff/decedent]'s job duties further, or in any way substantially affect, interstate commerce?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Was [name of plaintiff/decedent] acting within the scope of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] employment at the time of the incident?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Was [name of defendant] negligent?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. Was [name of plaintiff] harmed?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 7 is yes, then answer question 8. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

8. Was [name of defendant]'s negligence a cause of [name of plaintiff/decedent]'s [harm/death]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 8 is yes, then answer question 9. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

9. What are [name of plaintiff]'s total damages? Do not reduce the damages based on the fault, if any, of [name of plaintiff/decedent].

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

If [name of plaintiff] has proved any damages, then answer question 10. If [name of plaintiff] has not proved any damages, then stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

10. Was [name of plaintiff/decedent] negligent?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 10 is yes, then answer question 11. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

11. Was [name of plaintiff/decedent]'s negligence a cause of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] harm?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 11 is yes, then answer question 12. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

12. What percentage of responsibility for [name of plaintiff]'s harm do you assign to:

[Name of defendant]: _____%
[Name of plaintiff/decedent]: _____%

TOTAL: 100 %

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This form is based on CACI No. 2900, FELA—Essential Factual Elements, and CACI No. 2904, Comparative Fault.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 9 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-

3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2901. Federal Safety Appliance Act or Boiler Inspection Act

We answer the questions submitted to us as follows:

1. Was [name of plaintiff/decedent] employed by [name of defendant]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 1 is yes, then answer question 2. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

2. Was [name of defendant] a common carrier by railroad?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 2 is yes, then answer question 3. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

3. Was [name of defendant] engaged in interstate commerce?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 3 is yes, then answer question 4. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

4. Did [name of plaintiff/decedent]'s job duties further, or in any way substantially affect, interstate commerce?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 4 is yes, then answer question 5. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

5. Was [name of plaintiff/decedent] acting within the scope of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] employment at the time of the incident?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 5 is yes, then answer question 6. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

6. Did [name of defendant] [describe violation of Federal Safety Appliance Act/Boiler Inspection Act]?

   _____ Yes _____ No

   If your answer to question 6 is yes, then answer question 7. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

7. Was [name of plaintiff] harmed?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 7 is yes, then answer question 8. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

8. Was [name of defendant]'s conduct a cause of [[name of plaintiff]'s harm/[name of decedent]'s death]?

_____ Yes _____ No

If your answer to question 8 is yes, then answer question 9. If you answered no, stop here, answer no further questions, and have the presiding juror sign and date this form.

9. What are [name of plaintiff]'s damages?

[a. Past economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other past economic loss $_____]

Total Past Economic Damages: $_____]

[b. Future economic loss

[lost earnings $_____]

[lost profits $_____]

[medical expenses $_____]

[other future economic loss $_____]

Total Future Economic Damages: $_____]

[c. Past loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

[d. Future loss, including [physical pain/mental suffering:] $_____]

TOTAL $_____

Signed: _____
Presiding Juror

Dated: _____

After [this verdict form has/all verdict forms have] been signed, notify the [clerk/bailiff/court attendant].

New September 2003; Revised April 2007, December 2010, December 2016, May 2024

Directions for Use

This form is based on CACI No. 2920, Essential Factual Elements—Federal Safety Appliance Act or Boiler Inspection Act.

The special verdict forms in this section are intended only as models. They may need to be modified depending on the facts of the case.

If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 9 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

VF-2902–VF-2999. Reserved for Future Use

CIVIL RIGHTS

3000. Violation of Federal Civil Rights—In General—Essential Factual Elements (42 U.S.C. § 1983)

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] violated [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] civil rights. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] [intentionally/[other applicable state of mind]] [insert wrongful act];
2. That [name of defendant] was acting or purporting to act in the performance of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] official duties;
3. That [name of defendant]'s conduct violated [name of plaintiff]'s right [insert right, e.g., "of privacy"];
4. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and
5. That [name of defendant]'s [insert wrongful act] was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New September 2003

Directions for Use

In element 1, the standard is not always based on intentional conduct. Insert the appropriate level of scienter. For example, Eighth Amendment cases involve conduct carried out with "deliberate indifference," and Fourth Amendment claims do not necessarily involve intentional conduct. The "official duties" referred to in element 2 must be duties created pursuant to any state, county, or municipal law, ordinance, or regulation. This aspect of color of law most likely will not be a jury issue, so it has been omitted to shorten the wording of element 2. This instruction is intended for claims not covered by any of the following more specific instructions regarding the elements that the plaintiff must prove.

Sources and Authority

- Civil Action for Deprivation of Rights. Title 42 United States Code section 1983.
- "42 United States Code section 1983 . . . was enacted 'to deter state actors from using the badge of their authority to deprive individuals of their federally guaranteed rights and to provide relief to victims if such deterrence fails.' " (Modacure v. B&B Vehicle Processing, Inc. (2018) 30 Cal.App.5th 690, 693 [241 Cal.Rptr.3d 761].)
- "A § 1983 claim creates a species of tort liability, with damages determined 'according to principles derived from the common law of torts.' " (Mendez v. Cty. of L.A. (9th Cir. 2018) 897 F.3d 1067, 1074.)
- "A claim under 42 United States Code section 1983 may be based on a showing that the defendant, acting under color of state law, deprived the plaintiff of a federally protected right." (Modacure, supra, 30 Cal.App.5th at p. 694.)

- "As we have said many times, § 1983 'is not itself a source of substantive rights,' but merely provides 'a method for vindicating federal rights elsewhere conferred.' " (Graham v. Connor (1989) 490 U.S. 386, 393–394 [109 S.Ct. 1865, 104 L.Ed.2d 443], internal citation omitted.)
- "Section 1983 does not create any substantive rights; rather it is the vehicle whereby plaintiffs can challenge actions by governmental officials." (Jones v. Williams (9th Cir. 2002) 297 F.3d 930, 934.)
- "By the plain terms of § 1983, two—and only two—allegations are required in order to state a cause of action under that statute. First, the plaintiff must allege that some person has deprived him of a federal right. Second, he must allege that the person who has deprived him of that right acted under color of state or territorial law." (Catsouras v. Department of California Highway Patrol (2010) 181 Cal.App.4th 856, 890 [104 Cal.Rptr.3d 352].)
- "Section 1983 can also be used to enforce federal statutes. For a statutory provision to be privately enforceable, however, it must create an individual right." (Henry A. v. Willden (9th Cir. 2012) 678 F.3d 991, 1005, internal citation omitted.)
- "Section 1983 claims may be brought in either state or federal court." (Pitts v. County of Kern (1998) 17 Cal.4th 340, 348 [70 Cal.Rptr.2d 823, 949 P.2d 920].)
- "[S]tates are not 'persons' subject to suit under section 1983." (Mackey v. Board of Trustees of California State University (2019) 31 Cal.App.5th 640, 654 [242 Cal.Rptr.3d 757].)
- "The jury was properly instructed on [plaintiff]'s burden of proof and the particular elements of the section 1983 claim. (CACI No. 3000.)" (King v. State of California (2015) 242 Cal.App.4th 265, 280 [195 Cal.Rptr.3d 286].)
- " 'State courts look to federal law to determine what conduct will support an action under section 1983. The first inquiry in any section 1983 suit is to identify the precise constitutional violation with which the defendant is charged.' " (Weaver v. State of California (1998) 63 Cal.App.4th 188, 203 [73 Cal.Rptr.2d 571], internal citations omitted.)
- " 'Qualified immunity is an affirmative defense against section 1983 claims. Its purpose is to shield public officials "from undue interference with their duties and from potentially disabling threats of liability." The defense provides immunity from suit, not merely from liability. Its purpose is to spare defendants the burden of going forward with trial.' Because it is an immunity from suit, not just a mere defense to liability, it is important to resolve immunity questions at the earliest possible stage in litigation. Immunity should ordinarily be resolved by the court, not a jury." (Martinez v. County of Los Angeles (1996) 47 Cal.App.4th 334, 342 [54 Cal.Rptr.2d 772], internal citations omitted.)
- "[D]efendants cannot be held liable for a constitutional violation under 42 U.S.C.

§ 1983 unless they were integral participants in the unlawful conduct. We have held that defendants can be liable for 'integral participation' even if the actions of each defendant do not 'rise to the level of a constitutional violation.' " (Keates v. Koile (9th Cir. 2018) 883 F.3d 1228, 1241, internal citation omitted.)

- "Constitutional torts employ the same measure of damages as common law torts and are not augmented 'based on the abstract "value" or "importance" of constitutional rights . . . .' Plaintiffs have the burden of proving compensatory damages in section 1983 cases, and the amount of damages depends 'largely upon the credibility of the plaintiffs' testimony concerning their injuries.' " (Choate v. County of Orange (2000) 86 Cal.App.4th 312, 321 [103 Cal.Rptr.2d 339], internal citations omitted.)
- "[E]ntitlement to compensatory damages in a civil rights action is not a matter of discretion: 'Compensatory damages . . . are mandatory; once liability is found, the jury is required to award compensatory damages in an amount appropriate to compensate the plaintiff for his loss.' " (Hazle v. Crofoot (9th Cir. 2013) 727 F.3d 983, 992.)
- "[T]he state defendants' explanation of the jury's zero-damages award as allocating all of [plaintiff]'s injury to absent persons reflects the erroneous view that not only could zero damages be awarded to [plaintiff], but that [plaintiff]'s damages were capable of apportionment. [Plaintiff] independently challenges the jury instruction and verdict form that allowed the jury to decide this question, contending that the district judge should have concluded, as a matter of law, that [plaintiff] was entitled to compensatory damages and that defendants were jointly and severally liable for his injuries. He is correct. The district judge erred in putting the question of apportionment to the jury in the first place, because the question of whether an injury is capable of apportionment is a legal one to be decided by the judge, not the jury." (Hazle, supra, 727 F.3d at pp. 994–995.)
- "An individual acts under color of state law when he or she exercises power 'possessed by virtue of state law and made possible only because the wrongdoer is clothed with the authority of state law.' " (Naffe v. Frey (9th Cir. 2015) 789 F.3d 1030, 1036.)
- "The Supreme Court has interpreted the phrase 'under "color" of law' to mean 'under "pretense" of law.' A police officer's actions are under pretense of law only if they are 'in some way "related to the performance of his official duties." ' By contrast, an officer who is ' "pursuing his own goals and is not in any way subject to control by [his public employer]," ' does not act under color of law, unless he 'purports or pretends' to do so. Officers who engage in confrontations for personal reasons unrelated to law enforcement, and do not 'purport[] or pretend[]' to be officers, do not act under color of law." (Huffman v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1998) 147 F.3d 1054, 1058, internal citations omitted.)
- "A state employee who is off duty nevertheless acts under color of state law when (1) the employee 'purport[s] to or pretend[s] to act under color of law,' (2) his 'pretense of acting in the performance of his duties . . . had the purpose and effect of influencing the behavior of others,' and (3) the harm inflicted on plaintiff 'related in some meaningful way either to the officer's governmental status or to the performance of his duties.' " (Naffe, supra, 789 F.3d at p. 1037, internal citations omitted.)

- " 'While generally not applicable to private parties, a § 1983 action can lie against a private party when "he is a willful participant in joint action with the State or its agents." ' " (Julian v. Mission Community Hospital (2017) 11 Cal.App.5th 360, 396 [218 Cal.Rptr.3d 38].)
- "Under this Court's cases, a private entity can qualify as a state actor in a few limited circumstances—including, for example, (i) when the private entity performs a traditional, exclusive public function; (ii) when the government compels the private entity to take a particular action; or (iii) when the government acts jointly with the private entity." (Manhattan Cmty. Access Corp. v. Halleck (2019) — U.S. — [139 S.Ct. 1921, 1928, 204 L.Ed.2d 405], internal citations omitted.)
- "[P]rivate parties ordinarily are not subject to suit under [section 1983], unless, sifting the circumstances of the particular case, the state has so significantly involved itself in the private conduct that the private parties may fairly be termed state actors. Among the factors considered are whether the state subsidized or heavily regulated the conduct, or compelled or encouraged the particular conduct, whether the private actor was performing a function which normally is performed exclusively by the state, and whether there was a symbiotic relationship rendering the conduct joint state action." (Robbins v. Hamburger Home for Girls (1995) 32 Cal.App.4th 671, 683 [38 Cal.Rptr.2d 534], internal citations omitted.)
- "Under the Court's cases, a private entity may qualify as a state actor when it exercises 'powers traditionally exclusively reserved to the State.' It is not enough that the federal, state, or local government exercised the function in the past, or still does. And it is not enough that the function serves the public good or the public interest in some way. Rather, to qualify as a traditional, exclusive public function within the meaning of our state-action precedents, the government must have traditionally and exclusively performed the function." (Manhattan Cmty. Access Corp., supra, — U.S. — [139 S.Ct. at p. 1928], original italics.)
- "The Ninth Circuit has articulated four tests for determining whether a private person acted under color of law: (1) the public function test, (2) the joint action test, (3) the government nexus test, and (4) the government coercion or compulsion test. 'Satisfaction of any one test is sufficient to find state action, so long as no countervailing factor exists.' ' "[N]o one fact can function as a necessary condition across the board for finding state action; nor is any set of circumstances absolutely sufficient, for there may be some countervailing reason against attributing activity to the government." ' " (Julian, supra, 11 Cal.App.5th at p. 396.)
- "Because § 1983 'was designed to secure private rights against government encroachment,' tribal members can use it to vindicate their 'individual rights,' but not the tribe's "communal rights.' " (Chemehuevi Indian Tribe v. McMahon (9th Cir. 2019) 934 F.3d 1076, 1082, internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

8 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Constitutional Law, §§ 888, 892 et seq.

2 Civil Rights Actions, Ch. 7, Deprivation of Rights Under Color of State Law—General Principles (Civil Rights Act of 1871, 42 U.S.C. § 1983), ¶¶ 7.05–7.07, Ch. 17, Deprivation of Rights Under Color of State Law—General Principles (Civil Rights Act of 1871, 42 U.S.C. § 1983), ¶ 17.02 (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes, § 113.14 (Matthew Bender)

1 Matthew Bender Practice Guide: Federal Pretrial Civil Procedure in California, Ch. 8, Answers and Responsive Motions Under Rule 12, 8.40

3001. Local Government Liability—Policy or Custom—Essential Factual Elements (42 U.S.C. § 1983)

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was deprived of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] civil rights as a result of an official [policy/custom] of the [name of local governmental entity]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That the [name of local governmental entity] had an official [policy/custom] [specify policy or custom];
2. That [name of officer or employee] was an [officer/employee/[other]] of [name of local governmental entity];
3. That [name of officer or employee] [intentionally/[insert other applicable state of mind]] [insert conduct allegedly violating plaintiff's civil rights];
4. That [name of officer or employee]'s conduct violated [name of plaintiff]'s right [specify right];
5. That [name of officer or employee] acted because of this official [policy/custom].

New September 2003; Revised December 2010; Renumbered from CACI No. 3007 and Revised December 2012

Directions for Use

Give this instruction and CACI No. 3002, "Official Policy or Custom" Explained, if the plaintiff seeks to hold a local governmental entity liable for a civil rights violation based on the entity's official policy or custom. First give CACI No. 3000, Violation of Federal Civil Rights—In General—Essential Factual Elements, and the instructions on the particular constitutional violation alleged.

In element 3, a constitutional violation is not always based on intentional conduct. Insert the appropriate level of scienter. For example, Eighth Amendment cases involving failure to provide a prisoner with proper medical care require "deliberate indifference." (See Hudson v. McMillian (1992) 503 U.S. 1, 5 [112 S.Ct. 995, 117 L.Ed.2d 156].) And Fourth Amendment claims require an "unreasonable" search or seizure. (See Sacramento County Deputy Sheriffs' Assn. v. County of Sacramento (1996) 51 Cal.App.4th 1468, 1477 [59 Cal.Rptr.2d 834.)

For other theories of liability against a local governmental entity, see CACI No. 3003, Local Government Liability—Failure to Train—Essential Factual Elements, and CACI No. 3004, Local Government Liability—Act or Ratification by Official With Final Policymaking Authority—Essential Factual Elements.

Sources and Authority

- "[I]t is when execution of a government's policy or custom, whether made by its lawmakers or by those whose edicts or acts may fairly be said to represent official policy, inflicts the injury that the government as an entity is responsible under § 1983." (Monell v. Dept. of Social Services of New York (1978) 436 U.S. 658, 694 [98 S.Ct. 2018, 56 L.Ed.2d 611].)
- Local governmental entities " 'can be sued directly under § 1983 for monetary, declaratory, or injunctive relief where . . . the action that is alleged to be unconstitutional implements or executes a policy statement, ordinance, regulation, or decision officially adopted. . . .' " Local governmental entities also can be sued " 'for constitutional deprivations visited pursuant to governmental "custom." ' " In addition, " '[t]he plaintiff must . . . demonstrate that, through its deliberate conduct, the municipality was the "moving force" behind the injury alleged. That is, a plaintiff must show that the municipal action was taken with the requisite degree of culpability and must demonstrate a direct causal link between the municipal action and the deprivation of federal rights.' " (Zelig v. County of Los Angeles (2002) 27 Cal.4th 1112, 1147 [119 Cal.Rptr.2d 709, 45 P.3d 1171], internal citations omitted.)
- "Entity liability may arise in one of two forms. The municipality may itself have directed the deprivation of federal rights through an express government policy. This was the situation in Monell, where there was an explicit policy requiring pregnant government employees to take unpaid leaves of absence before such leaves were medically required. . . . Alternatively, the municipality may have in place a custom or practice so widespread in usage as to constitute the functional equivalent of an express policy." (Choate v. County of Orange (2000) 86 Cal.App.4th 312, 328 [103 Cal.Rptr.2d 339].)
- " '[I]n order to successfully maintain an action under 42 United States Code section 1983 against governmental defendants for the tortious conduct of employees under federal law, it is necessary to establish that the conduct occurred in execution of a government's policy or custom promulgated either by its lawmakers or by those whose edicts or acts may fairly be said to represent official policy.' " (Newton v. County of Napa (1990) 217 Cal.App.3d 1551, 1564 [266 Cal.Rptr. 682], internal citations omitted.)
- "Monell provides that a governmental entity may only be held liable where the entity causes a constitutional violation. To establish Monell liability, ' "a plaintiff must 'identify the challenged policy, [practice, or custom,] attribute it to the [county] itself, and show a causal link between the execution of the policy, [practice, or custom,] and the injury suffered.' " [Citation.] In addition, plaintiffs must "present scienter-like evidence of indifference on the part of a particular policymaker or policymakers." [Citation.] The requirement of producing scienter-like evidence on the part of an official with policymaking authority is consistent with the conclusion that "absent the conscious decision or deliberate indifference of some natural person, a [governmental entity], as an abstract entity, cannot be deemed to have engaged in a constitutional violation by virtue of a policy, a custom or failure to train." [Citation.] "[I]n the absence of any unconstitutional statute or rule, it is plaintiffs' burden to articulate a factual basis that demonstrates considerably more proof than a single incident." ' " (Arista v. County of Riverside (2018) 29 Cal.App.5th 1051, 1064 [241 Cal.Rptr.3d 437].)

- "Under Monell, a local government body can be held liable under § 1983 for policies of inaction as well as policies of action. A policy of action is one in which the government body itself violates someone's constitutional rights, or instructs its employees to do so; a policy of inaction is based on a government body's 'failure to implement procedural safeguards to prevent constitutional violations.' " (Jackson v. Barnes (9th Cir. 2014) 749 F.3d 755, 763], internal citations omitted.)
- "Normally, the question of whether a policy or custom exists would be a jury question. However, when there are no genuine issues of material fact and the plaintiff has failed to establish a prima facie case, disposition by summary judgment is appropriate." (Trevino v. Gates (9th Cir. 1996) 99 F.3d 911, 920.)
- "A triable issue exists as to whether the root of the unconstitutional behavior exhibited in [plaintiff]'s case lies in the unofficial operating procedure of [defendant] County or in the errant acts of individual social workers, and this question should go to a jury." (Kirkpatrick v. County of Washoe (9th Cir. 2015) 792 F.3d 1184, 1201.)
- "At most, Monell liability adds an additional defendant, a municipality, to the universe of actors who will be jointly and severally liable for the award." (Choate, supra, 86 Cal.App.4th at p. 328.)
- "To meet this [Monell] requirement, the plaintiff must show both causation-in-fact and proximate causation." (Gravelet-Blondin v. Shelton (9th Cir. 2013) 728 F.3d 1086, 1096.)
- "Any damages resulting from a possible Monell claim would result from the same constitutional violation of the warrantless arrest which resulted in nominal damages. Even if [plaintiff] were to prove the City failed to adequately train the police officers, the result would simply be another theory of action concerning the conduct the jury has already determined was not the proximate cause of [plaintiff]'s injuries. [Plaintiff]'s recovery, if any, based upon a Monell claim would be limited to nominal damages." (George v. Long Beach (9th Cir. 1992) 973 F.2d 706, 709.)
- "Local governmental bodies such as cities and counties are considered 'persons' subject to suit under section 1983. States and their instrumentalities, on the other hand, are not." (Kirchmann v. Lake Elsinore Unified School Dist. (2000) 83 Cal.App.4th 1098, 1101 [100 Cal.Rptr.2d 289], internal citations omitted.)
- "A municipality can be sued under section 1983 for 'constitutional deprivations visited pursuant to governmental "custom." ' However, 'Congress did not intend municipalities to be held liable unless action pursuant to official municipal policy of some nature caused a constitutional tort. In particular, . . . a municipality cannot be held liable solely because it employs a tortfeasor—or, in other words, a municipality cannot be held liable under § 1983 on a respondeat superior theory.' " (Marshall v. County of San Diego (2015) 238 Cal.App.4th 1095, 1118 [190 Cal.Rptr.3d 97], original italics, internal citation omitted.)

- "A local governmental unit is liable only if the alleged deprivation of rights 'implements or executes a policy statement, ordinance, regulation, or decision officially adopted and promulgated by that body's officers,' or when the injury is in 'execution of a [local] government's policy or custom, whether made by its lawmakers or by those whose edicts or acts may fairly be said to represent official policy.' " (County of Los Angeles v. Superior Court (1998) 68 Cal.App.4th 1166, 1171 [80 Cal.Rptr.2d 860], internal citations omitted.)
- "A municipality's policy or custom resulting in constitutional injury may be actionable even though the individual public servants are shielded by good faith immunity." (Bach v. County of Butte (1983) 147 Cal.App.3d 554, 568 [195 Cal.Rptr. 268], internal citations omitted.)
- "No punitive damages can be awarded against a public entity." (Choate, supra, 86 Cal.App.4th at p. 328, internal citation omitted.)
- "[T]he requirements of Monell do apply to suits against private entities under § 1983. . . . [W]e see no basis in the reasoning underlying Monell to distinguish between municipalities and private entities acting under color of state law." (Tsao v. Desert Palace, Inc. (9th Cir. 2012) 698 F.3d 1128, 1139, internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

8 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Constitutional Law, §§ 888, 892 et seq.

17A Moore's Federal Practice (3d ed.), Ch.123, Access to Courts: Eleventh Amendment and State Sovereign Immunity, § 123.23 (Matthew Bender)

1 Civil Rights Actions, Ch. 2, Governmental Liability and Immunity, ¶ 2.03[2][a] (Matthew Bender)

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes, § 113.14 (Matthew Bender)

3002. "Official Policy or Custom" Explained (42 U.S.C. § 1983)

"Official [policy/custom]" means: [*insert one of the following:]

[A rule or regulation approved by the [city/county]'s legislative body;] [or]

[A policy statement or decision that is officially made by the [city/county]'s lawmaking officer or policymaking official;] [or]

[A custom that is a permanent, widespread, or well-settled practice of the [city/county];] [or]

[An act or omission approved by the [city/county]'s lawmaking officer or policymaking official.]

New September 2003; Revised June 2012; Renumbered from CACI No. 3008 December 2012

Directions for Use

These definitions are selected examples of official policy drawn from the cited cases. The instruction may need to be adapted to the facts of a particular case. The court may need to instruct the jury regarding the legal definition of "policymakers."

In some cases, it may be necessary to include additional provisions addressing factors that may indicate an official custom in the absence of a formal policy. The Ninth Circuit has held that in some cases the plaintiff is entitled to have the jury instructed that evidence of governmental inaction—specifically, failure to investigate and discipline employees in the face of widespread constitutional violations—can support an inference that an unconstitutional custom or practice has been unofficially adopted. (Hunter v. County of Sacramento (9th Cir. 2011) 652 F.3d 1225, 1234, fn. 8.)

Sources and Authority

- "The [entity] may not be held liable for acts of [employees] unless 'the action that is alleged to be unconstitutional implements or executes a policy statement, ordinance, regulation, or decision officially adopted and promulgated by that body's officers' or if the constitutional deprivation was 'visited pursuant to governmental "custom" even though such a custom has not received formal approval through the body's official decisionmaking channels.' " (Redman v. County of San Diego (9th Cir. 1991) 942 F.2d 1435, 1443–1444, internal citation omitted.)
- "[A]n act performed pursuant to a 'custom' that has not been formally approved by an appropriate decisionmaker may fairly subject a municipality to liability on the theory that the relevant practice is so widespread as to have the force of law." (Bd. of the County Comm'rs v. Brown (1997) 520 U.S. 397, 404 [117 S.Ct. 1382, 137 L.Ed.2d 626].)

- "The custom or policy must be a 'deliberate choice to follow a course of action . . . made from among various alternatives by the official or officials responsible for establishing final policy with respect to the subject matter in question.' " (Castro v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2016) 833 F.3d 1060, 1075 (en banc).)
- "While a rule or regulation promulgated, adopted, or ratified by a local governmental entity's legislative body unquestionably satisfies Monell's policy requirement, a 'policy' within the meaning of § 1983 is not limited to official legislative action. Indeed, a decision properly made by a local governmental entity's authorized decisionmaker—i.e., an official who 'possesses final authority to establish [local government] policy with respect to the [challenged] action'—may constitute official policy. 'Authority to make municipal policy may be granted directly by legislative enactment or may be delegated by an official who possesses such authority, and of course whether an official had final policymaking authority is a question of state law.' " (Thompson v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1989) 885 F.2d 1439, 1443, internal citations and footnote omitted.)
- "[A] plaintiff can show a custom or practice of violating a written policy; otherwise an entity, no matter how flagrant its actual routine practices, always could avoid liability by pointing to a pristine set of policies." (Castro, supra, 833 F.3d at p. 1075 fn. 10.)
- "Appellants need not show evidence of a policy or deficient training; evidence of an informal practice or custom will suffice." (Nehad v. Browder (9th Cir. 2019) 929 F.3d 1125, 1141.)
- "As with other questions of state law relevant to the application of federal law, the identification of those officials whose decisions represent the official policy of the local governmental unit is itself a legal question to be resolved by the trial judge before the case is submitted to the jury." (Jett v. Dallas Independent School Dist. (1989) 491 U.S. 701, 737 [109 S.Ct. 2702, 105 L.Ed.2d 598].)
- "[I]t is settled that whether an official is a policymaker for a county is dependent on an analysis of state law, not fact." (Pitts v. County of Kern (1998) 17 Cal.4th 340, 352 [70 Cal.Rptr.2d 823, 949 P.2d 920], internal citations omitted.)
- "Once those officials who have the power to make official policy on a particular issue have been identified, it is for the jury to determine whether their decisions have caused the deprivation of rights at issue by policies which affirmatively command that it occur, or by acquiescence in a longstanding practice or custom which constitutes the 'standard operating procedure' of the local governmental entity." (Jett, supra, 491 U.S. at p. 737, internal citations omitted.)
- "Gibson v. County of Washoe [(9th Cir. 2002) 290 F.3d 1175, 1186] discussed two types of policies: those that result in the municipality itself violating someone's constitutional rights or instructing its employees to do so, and those that result, through omission, in municipal responsibility 'for a constitutional violation committed by one of its employees, even though the municipality's policies were facially constitutional, the municipality did not direct the employee to take the unconstitutional action, and the municipality did not have the state of mind required to prove the underlying violation.' We have referred to these two types of policies as policies of action and inaction." (Tsao v. Desert Palace, Inc. (9th Cir. 2012) 698 F.3d 1128, 1143, internal citations omitted.)

- "A policy of inaction or omission may be based on failure to implement procedural safeguards to prevent constitutional violations. To establish that there is a policy based on a failure to preserve constitutional rights, a plaintiff must show, in addition to a constitutional violation, 'that this policy "amounts to deliberate indifference" to the plaintiff's constitutional right[,]' and that the policy caused the violation, 'in the sense that the [municipality] could have prevented the violation with an appropriate policy.' " (Tsao, supra, 698 F.3d at p. 1143, internal citations omitted.)
- "To show deliberate indifference, [plaintiff] must demonstrate 'that [defendant] was on actual or constructive notice that its omission would likely result in a constitutional violation.' " (Tsao, supra, 698 F.3d at p. 1145.)
- "[P]laintiff may prove . . . deliberate indifference, through evidence of a 'failure to investigate and discipline employees in the face of widespread constitutional violations.' Thus, it is sufficient under our case law to prove a 'custom' of encouraging excessive force to provide evidence that personnel have been permitted to use force with impunity." (Rodriguez v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2018) 891 F.3d 776, 803, internal citations omitted.)
- "Discussing liability of a municipality under the federal Civil Rights Act based on 'custom,' the California Court of Appeal for the Fifth Appellate District recently noted, 'If the plaintiff seeks to show he was injured by governmental "custom," he must show that the governmental entity's "custom" was "made by its lawmakers or by those whose edicts or acts may fairly be said to represent official policy." ' " (Bach v. County of Butte (1983) 147 Cal.App.3d 554, 569, fn. 11 [195 Cal.Rptr. 268], internal citations omitted.)
- "The federal courts have recognized that local elected officials and appointed department heads can make official policy or create official custom sufficient to impose liability under section 1983 on their governmental employers." (Bach, supra, 147 Cal.App.3d at p. 570, internal citations omitted.)

Secondary Sources

8 Witkin, Summary of California Law (11th ed. 2017) Constitutional Law, § 890 et seq.

11 California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post-Civil War Civil Rights Statutes, § 113.14 (Matthew Bender)

1 Matthew Bender Practice Guide: Federal Pretrial Civil Procedure in California, Ch. 8, Answers and Responsive Motions Under Rule 12, 8.40

3003. Local Government Liability—Failure to Train—Essential Factual Elements (42 U.S.C. § 1983)

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was deprived of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] civil rights as a result of [name of local governmental entity]'s failure to train its [officers/employees]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of local governmental entity]'s training program was not adequate to train its [officers/employees];
2. That [name of local governmental entity] knew because of a pattern of similar violations[, or it should have been obvious to it,] that the inadequate training program was likely to result in a deprivation of the right [specify right violated];
3. That [name of officer or employee] violated [name of plaintiff]'s right [specify right]; and
4. That the failure to provide adequate training was the cause of the deprivation of [name of plaintiff]'s right [specify right].

New September 2003; Revised December 2010, December 2011; Renumbered from CACI No. 3009 December 2012

Directions for Use

Give this instruction if the plaintiff seeks to hold a local governmental entity liable for a civil rights violation based on the entity's failure to adequately train its officers or employees. First give CACI No. 3000, Violation of Federal Civil Rights—In General—Essential Factual Elements, and the instructions on the particular constitutional violation alleged.

The inadequate training must amount to a deliberate indifference to constitutional rights. (Clouthier v. County of Contra Costa (9th Cir. 2010) 591 F.3d 1232, 1249, overruled en banc on other grounds in Castro v. County of L.A. (9th Cir. 2016) 833 F.3d 1060, 1070.) Element 2 expresses this deliberate-indifference standard. Deliberate indifference requires proof of a pattern of violations in all but a few very rare situations in which the unconstitutional consequences of failing to train are patently obvious. (See Connick v. Thompson (2011) 563 U.S. 51, 63 [131 S.Ct. 1350, 179 L.Ed.2d 417].) Delete the bracketed language in element 2 unless the facts present the possibility of liability based on patently obvious violations.

For other theories of liability against a local governmental entity, see CACI No. 3001, Local Government Liability—Policy or Custom—Essential Factual Elements, and CACI No. 3004, Local Government Liability—Act or Ratification by Official With Final Policymaking Authority—Essential Factual Elements.

Sources and Authority

- Civil Action for Deprivation of Rights. Title 42 United States Code section 1983.
- "We hold today that the inadequacy of police training may serve as the basis for § 1983 liability only where the failure to train amounts to deliberate indifference to the rights of persons with whom the police come into contact. This rule is most consistent with our admonition in Monell and Polk County v. Dodson, that a municipality can be liable under § 1983 only where its policies are the 'moving force [behind] the constitutional violation.' Only where a municipality's failure to train its employees in a relevant respect evidences a 'deliberate indifference' to the rights of its inhabitants can such a shortcoming be properly thought of as a city 'policy or custom' that is actionable under § 1983." (City of Canton v. Harris (1989) 489 U.S. 378, 388–389 [109 S.Ct. 1197, 103 L.Ed.2d 412], internal citations and footnote omitted.)
- "In Canton, the Court left open the possibility that, 'in a narrow range of circumstances,' a pattern of similar violations might not be necessary to show deliberate indifference. The Court posed the hypothetical example of a city that arms its police force with firearms and deploys the armed officers into the public to capture fleeing felons without training the officers in the constitutional limitation on the use of deadly force. Given the known frequency with which police attempt to arrest fleeing felons and the 'predictability that an officer lacking specific tools to handle that situation will violate citizens' rights,' the Court theorized that a city's decision not to train the officers about constitutional limits on the use of deadly force could reflect the city's deliberate indifference to the 'highly predictable consequence,' namely, violations of constitutional rights. The Court sought not to foreclose the possibility, however rare, that the unconstitutional consequences of failing to train could be so patently obvious that a city could be liable under § 1983 without proof of a pre-existing pattern of violations." (Connick, supra, 131 S.Ct. at p. 1361], internal citations omitted.)
- "To impose liability on a local government for failure to adequately train its employees, the government's omission must amount to 'deliberate indifference' to a constitutional right. This standard is met when 'the need for more or different training is so obvious, and the inadequacy so likely to result in the violation of constitutional rights, that the policymakers of the city can reasonably be said to have been deliberately indifferent to the need.' For example, if police activities in arresting fleeing felons 'so often violate constitutional rights that the need for further training must have been plainly obvious to the city policymakers,' then the city's failure to train may constitute 'deliberate indifference.' " (Clouthier, supra, 591 F.3d at p. 1249, internal citations omitted.)
- "It would be hard to describe the Canton understanding of deliberate indifference, permitting liability to be premised on obviousness or constructive notice, as anything but objective." (Farmer v. Brennan (1994) 511 U.S. 825, 841 [114 S.Ct. 1970, 128 L.Ed.2d 811].)
- "The ninth cause of action was for 'Failure to Train.' The elements of such

