Approved by RUPRO: October 19, 2018
Project description from annual agenda: Item 9: Civil commitment cases—rule for the normal record on appeal and form notice of appeal. To provide guidance and ensure that the record is complete, consider developing a rule setting forth the contents of the normal record on appeal and a form notice of appeal for civil commitment cases. Civil commitment cases include extensions for those found not guilty by reason of insanity (Pen. Code, § 1026 et seq.) and those found incompetent to stand trial (Pen. Code, § 1367 et seq.). They also include commitments under the Mentally Disordered Offenders Act (Pen. Code, § 2962 et seq.), Lanterman-Petris-Short Act (Welf. & Inst. Code, § 5000 et seq.), Developmentally Disabled Persons Act (Welf. & Inst. Code, § 6500 et seq.), and Sexually Violent Predators Act (Welf. & Inst. Code, § 6600 et seq.).

Executive Summary

The Appellate Advisory Committee recommends adopting a new rule of court, describing the required contents of the normal record on appeal for civil commitment cases, and highlighting the existence of the new rule in a comment to an existing rule. The committee also proposes a new form notice of appeal for civil commitment and mental health cases. This proposal is intended to provide needed guidance to litigants and the courts and ensure that appellate records in civil commitment cases are complete.

Recommendation

The Appellate Advisory Committee recommends that the Judicial Council, effective January 1, 2020, adopt California Rules of Court, rule 8.483, describing the required contents of the normal record on appeal for civil commitment cases. Rule 8.483 would be included in title 8 (Appellate Rules), division 1 (Rules Relating to the Supreme Court and Courts of Appeal), chapter 6 (Conservatorship Appeals), as amended to expand the scope of chapter 6 to also apply to civil commitment appeals by renaming it "Conservatorship and Civil Commitment Appeals." To address any potential confusion caused by the placement of the new rule, the committee also recommends adding an Advisory Committee comment to existing rule 8.320 alerting litigants to the new rule. The committee also recommends that the council approve Notice of Appeal—Civil Commitment/Mental Health Proceedings (form APP-060).

The text of new rule 8.483 and amended rule 8.320, and the proposed new form are attached at pages 12–16.

Relevant Previous Council Action

There is no relevant previous Judicial Council action that might impact the council's consideration of this proposal.

Analysis/Rationale

Rule 8.483

The California Rules of Court[1] provide specific direction as to what should be included in the normal record on appeal in many types of cases.[2] However, no rule clearly states what constitutes the normal record on appeal in civil commitment cases. Perhaps because of the absence of a directly applicable rule, appellate records in civil commitment cases may be inadequate but there is no clear ground for asking the clerk of the superior court to correct the record. To eliminate confusion on behalf of litigants and the courts, the committee proposes a new rule of court governing the normal record on appeal in civil commitment cases.

Proposed new rule 8.483 is based on existing rule 8.320, governing the contents of the normal record on appeal in criminal cases, as modified to make the rule appropriate for civil commitment appeals. Although civil commitment cases are not criminal, per se, many of these matters stem from criminal proceedings, and thus the contents of the record on appeal will be similar. The new rule is intended to generate a complete and useful record for civil commitment appeals.

The proposed rule is limited in scope and would apply to appeals of civil commitment orders stemming from criminal proceedings, but not to other types of commitment orders such as those made under the Lanterman-Petris-Short (LPS) Act (Welf. & Inst. Code, § 5300 et seq.), which may be subject to other rules. To provide clear guidance to litigants and courts, the proposed rule explicitly states in subdivision (a) the types of proceedings to which it applies. An Advisory Committee comment to the new rule would state that: "The record on appeal of orders establishing conservatorships under Welfare and Institutions Code section 5350 et seq., including Murphy conservatorships for persons who are gravely disabled as defined in Welfare and Institutions Code section 5008(h)(1)(B), is governed by rule 8.480." Other modifications to the language of rule 8.320 have been incorporated into the new rule, including, among others, adding

[1] All further references to "rule" or "rules" are to the California Rules of Court.

[2] See, for example, rules 8.120 (unlimited civil appeals); 8.320 (criminal appeals); 8.407 (juvenile appeals and writs); 8.610 (death penalty appeals); 8.830 (limited civil appeals); and 8.860 (misdemeanor appeals). Additionally, rule 8.480 governs the record on appeal from orders establishing conservatorships under Welfare and Institutions Code section 5350 et seq. (the Lanterman-Petris-Short [LPS] Act), and rule 8.388 governs the contents of the record in appeals from orders granting relief by writ of habeas corpus.

a requirement that diagnostic or psychological reports submitted to the court be included in the record, replacing the term "defendant" with "person subject to the civil commitment order," and omitting in its entirety subdivision (d) regarding a "limited normal record in certain appeals."

With respect to placement of the new rule, the appellate rules are generally organized into divisions (Supreme Court and Courts of Appeal, appellate division, and small claims) and then divided into chapters by subject matter. Given the varying contexts in which the issue of civil commitment may arise, such appeals may not fall neatly into any one of the existing divisions or chapters of the appellate rules. Thus, the proposal is to amend title 8 (Appellate Rules), division 1 (Rules Relating to the Supreme Court and Courts of Appeal), chapter 6 (Conservatorship Appeals) to expand the scope of the chapter to also apply to civil commitment appeals by renaming it "Conservatorship and Civil Commitment Appeals."

New rule 8.483 would immediately follow the existing rules in that chapter governing LPS conservatorship appeals. To address any potential confusion caused by the placement of the new rule, it is further proposed that an Advisory Committee comment be added to rule 8.320 (governing the record for criminal appeals) to ensure that litigants and courts are aware of the separate rule governing civil commitment appeals that may be applicable.

Form APP-060

The Judicial Council publishes several form notices of appeal.[3] However, no form notice of appeal specifically applies to civil commitment cases, and it has been suggested that such a form would help simplify the appeal process for litigants and courts. The proposed new form notice of appeal (form APP-060) is based on Notice of Appeal—Felony (Defendant) (form CR-120), but has been modified for use in civil commitment and LPS Act mental health conservatorship and commitment appeals. In particular, given that the person subject to the civil commitment order may have been either a defendant or a respondent in the underlying proceeding, the form uses the term "Defendant/Respondent" throughout and defines the term to mean the "person subject to the civil commitment." The form is broader in scope than the proposed new rule governing the normal record on appeal in civil commitment cases, and may also be used in LPS Act conservatorship and commitment appeals. The form includes an item listing the types of proceedings with which it may be used. The form would be included in the "APP" (Appellate) category.

Policy implications

The committee did not identify any significant policy implications relating to the proposal, and none were raised in the public comments.

[3] See, for example, Notice of Appeal/Cross-Appeal (Unlimited Civil Case) (form APP-002); Notice of Appeal—Felony (Defendant) (form CR-120); Notice of Appeal (Juvenile) (form JV-800); Notice of Appeal/Cross-Appeal (Limited Civil Case) (form APP-102); and Notice of Appeal (Misdemeanor) (form CR-132).

Comments

The proposal was circulated for public comment between April 11 and June 10, 2019, as part of the regular spring comment cycle, and the committee received nine comments. Four commenters, including three courts and a professional organization, agreed with the proposal. One court agreed with the proposal if modified. Four commenters, including an individual attorney, a court, and two professional organizations, did not indicate a position on the proposal but provided substantive comments. A chart with the full text of the comments received and the committee's responses is attached at pages 17–38. The main comments and the committee's responses to these comments are discussed below.

Rule 8.483

None of the commenters expressed overall opposition to the adoption of a new rule governing the record on appeal in civil commitment cases, the proposed placement of the rule within an expanded chapter 6 of title 8, division 1 of the appellate rules, or the proposed Advisory Committee comment to existing rule 8.320, cross-referencing the new rule. The committee therefore recommends that the Judicial Council adopt proposed new rule 8.483 as it was circulated for public comment, subject to the modifications discussed below.

Comments regarding the scope of the rule

The invitation to comment asked whether the scope of the rule—limited to civil commitment appeals stemming from criminal proceedings—is appropriate, or whether it should be extended to any other types of proceedings such as civil commitments under the LPS Act. Four commenters responded that the scope is appropriate as drafted. But one individual commenter responded that the new rule should also cover Murphy conservatorships because they arise out of criminal proceedings. Likewise, another commenter stated that: "these changes should also apply to LPS commitments. In Murphy cases, if the case is granted and the commitment ordered, the Court must make LPS findings in addition to Murphy findings." The committee understands this comment to reflect the opinion that Murphy conservatorships, and perhaps other types of LPS Act commitments, should be included within the scope of the new rule.

The Appellate Advisory Committee considered these suggestions to expand the scope of proposed rule 8.483 to also include Murphy conservatorships under the LPS Act, but decided not to modify the rule in this way. Though Murphy conservatorships do follow from criminal proceedings and thus could reasonably be included within the scope of the new rule, Murphy conservatorship appeals appear to be covered by existing rule 8.480, governing the record on appeal from orders establishing conservatorships under Welfare and Institutions Code section 5350, et seq.[4] The committee concluded that it could create confusion if rule 8.483 were expanded to also include Murphy conservatorships under the LPS Act. However, to address this issue, the committee included an Advisory Committee comment to rule 8.483 stating, "The record on appeal of orders establishing conservatorships under Welfare and Institutions Code section 5350 et seq., including Murphy conservatorships for persons who are gravely disabled as defined in Welfare and Institutions Code section 5008(h)(1)(B), is governed by rule 8.480."

Comments regarding other provisions of the rule

The invitation to comment also asked whether any other types of documentary exhibits should be included in the clerk's transcript. Two courts responded in the negative, while a third court noted that allowed exhibits should be "based on existing rule 8.320." Because proposed rule 8.483 was drafted based on rule 8.320, the committee understood these comments to reflect agreement with the treatment of documentary exhibits under the proposed new rule as circulated.

However, an individual attorney commented that probable cause transcripts should be explicitly listed in the rule as part of the standard record on appeal, although they may be implicitly encompassed by the inclusion of the "dispositional hearing" transcript in subdivision (c)(8). The committee concluded that it would be helpful and nonburdensome to include a probable cause transcript in the relatively few cases where one is available, and modified subdivision (c)(8) to include probable cause hearing transcripts as part of the reporter's transcript.

This commenter also suggested that it is unclear whether subdivision (b)(13), which requires the clerk's transcript to include "[a]ny diagnostic or psychological reports submitted to the court," includes similar exhibits submitted to the court at trial or a probable cause hearing. To clarify that diagnostic or psychological reports submitted to the court—including at trial or a probable cause hearing—should be included in the clerk's transcript, the committee modified subdivision (b)(13).

The individual attorney's comments also reflected a concern that proposed rule 8.483(d), addressing exhibits,[5] could make it more difficult for appellate counsel to obtain a complete record on appeal. The commenter explained that exhibits in civil commitment cases are often redacted, and an unredacted version is often needed for the appeal. Additionally, according to the commenter, in civil commitment appeals, appellate counsel is often not appointed until after the record is prepared, so it is not unusual for appellate counsel to petition the Court of Appeal to augment the clerk's transcript to include additional exhibits after the record is prepared. The commenter contended that subdivision (d), as circulated for comment, could be interpreted to eliminate the Court of Appeal's authority to grant such requests. It was suggested that proposed rule 8.483 be modified to either (1) provide appellate counsel with a window of time to designate additional records under rule 8.122, or (2) make clear that the clerk's transcript can be augmented to include exhibits. However, the committee determined that no such modification was necessary because the rule, as circulated, does not create a bar to augmenting the record when otherwise appropriate.

[5] Proposed rule 8.483(d) provides: "Exhibits admitted into evidence, refused or lodged are deemed part of the record, but may be transmitted to the reviewing court only as provided in rule 8.224." This phrasing is identical to existing rule 8.320(e), governing exhibits in connection with criminal appeals.

The invitation to comment further asked whether the proposed rule should limit the record items in subdivisions (b)(15) and (c)(10) to appeals in which the appellant is the person subject to the civil commitment order. All four commenters who responded to this question agreed that the rule should limit these items to appeals in which the appellant is the person subject to the civil commitment.

Finally, one commenter proposed several additional modifications to proposed rule 8.483. First, the commenter suggested modifying subdivision (a)(1) to specify that the rule governs "appeals from civil commitment orders (including involuntary medication orders) under Penal Code . . ." because subdivision (c)(1), as circulated for public comment, required that the reporter's transcript contain the oral proceedings on a motion for involuntary medication and most commitment schemes to which the rule applies may lead to involuntary medication orders. The committee discussed this comment, and decided that involuntary medication orders, and appeals therefrom, may be separate from the civil commitment appeals intended to be encompassed by the new rule. Additionally, the records needed for the record on appeal of a civil commitment case may be different from the record in an appeal of an involuntary medication order. Thus, the committee declined to add the suggested language to subdivision (a)(1), and instead omitted the phrase "or motion for involuntary medication" from subdivision (c)(1) to clarify that the rule does not apply to the appeal of involuntary medication orders.

Second, the commenter recommended altering the parenthetical description of Penal Code section 1600 et seq., in both subdivision (a)(1) of the rule and item 3 of the form from "(continue outpatient treatment or return to confinement)" to "(outpatient placement and revocation)," to more accurately describe the scope of that statutory scheme. The committee agreed with this modification to the rule and form.

Third, the commenter recommended modifying subdivision (b)(1) to require the clerk's transcript to contain, not only the petition, but also "any supporting documents filed along with the petition." The committee agreed that this is a useful suggestion, but also considered that the proposed modification would make subdivision (b)(1) different from existing rule 8.480(b)(1) governing the record in LPS conservatorship appeals. However, because some other appellate rules require not only the petition but also supporting documents filed therewith, the committee concluded that this modification would not make rule 8.483(b)(1) an outlier and modified the proposal accordingly.

Fourth, the commenter recommended modifying subdivision (b)(10) to remove the requirement that the certificate of probable cause be included in the clerk's transcript, because the certificate of probable cause requirement does not apply to civil commitment proceedings, even those stemming from criminal proceedings. The committee agreed and modified the proposal accordingly.

None of the commenters expressed any general opposition to the adoption of a new form notice of appeal for civil commitment cases, or the proposed "APP" designation assigned to it. The committee therefore recommends that the Judicial Council approve proposed form APP-060 as it was circulated for public comment, subject to the modifications addressed below.

Comments regarding the scope of the form

The invitation to comment asked whether the scope of proposed form APP-060—circulated for public comment to be limited for use in civil commitments stemming from criminal proceedings—was appropriate, or whether it should also be available for use in other civil commitment appeals, such as those under the LPS Act. Two courts and one professional organization responded that the scope of the form was appropriate as circulated. Another professional organization similarly agreed, but noted that the proposed form was not, on its face, limited for use only in civil commitment appeals stemming from criminal proceedings and might be mistakenly used for civil commitment orders stemming from noncriminal proceedings. However, given that item 3 contains a checklist of code sections under which the defendant/respondent is being held, the committee found it unlikely that the form would be used for an unauthorized purpose and made no change to the form based on this comment.

Other commenters recommended altering the scope of form APP-060. One court recommended that the form also be made available for use in appeals from Mentally Disordered Sex Offender (MDSO) commitments under former Welfare and Institutions Code section 6300 because, although that statute has been repealed, appeals of extension orders are still being filed. The committee agreed with this suggestion, and added a checkbox to item 3 for selection where the person subject to the civil commitment is being held subject to "Former Welfare & Institutions Code, § 6300 (MDSO)." Also, though this comment was directed to the form as opposed to the rule, the committee decided that it was similarly appropriate to modify proposed new rule 8.483 subdivision (a)(1) to extend to MDSO appeals.

Another court recommended that the form not be available for use in appeals of civil commitment orders made under Welfare and Institutions Code section 6500 (developmentally disabled persons), and instead that a separate form be created for appeals where the petitioner may be someone other than the person subject to the commitment order. However, as discussed further below, rather than omit this category of civil commitments from the scope of the form and creating a second new form, the committee concluded that it would be preferable to expand the scope of the form to encompass these and other types of commitment appeals that do not necessarily stem from criminal proceedings.

Finally, one commenter recommended that the scope of proposed new form APP-060 be expanded so that it is available for use both in civil commitment appeals stemming from criminal proceedings as well as in LPS Act appeals. The commenter contended that there is no reason a single form notice of appeal cannot be used for appeals under both existing rule 8.480 and proposed new rule 8.483, and noted that a single "unofficial" form notice of appeal is already being used successfully for both types of commitment appeals in at least one county. Having further considered the issue, the committee was persuaded that a single form notice of appeal available for LPS Act proceedings (including commitments under Welfare and Institutions Code section 5300 et seq. and conservatorships under section 5350 et seq.) would be useful to litigants and courts, and the scope of the form should be expanded beyond civil commitments stemming from criminal matters to include LPS Act conservatorship and commitment appeals.

In light of the foregoing, the committee modified item 3 of the proposed new form to include a checkbox for: (1) "Welfare & Institutions Code, § 5300 et seq. (LPS Act commitments);" (2) "Welfare & Institutions Code, § 5350 et seq. (LPS Act conservatorships);" and (3) "Former Welfare & Institutions Code, § 6300 et seq. (MDSO)." To more accurately indicate the expanded scope of the form, the committee altered the form name to "Notice of Appeal—Civil Commitment/Mental Health Proceedings" and added a reference to rule 8.480 in the bottom right corner.

Other comments on the form

Several commenters addressed other aspects of the form. With respect to the form caption, one commenter recommended that the caption, currently prefilled with "People of the State of California v.," be left fillable because some cases may be initiated by a public guardian or hospital. Another recommended that the caption be modified to "People of the State of California v. / In re:" to account for civil commitment proceedings similarly captioned in the trial court. And a court recommended that the form refer only to "respondent" rather than "defendant/respondent" throughout, to make it consistent with trial court style and the Legislature's form of petition for judicial commitment set forth in Welfare and Institutions Code section 6251, reflect the treatment and public safety purposes of civil commitment, and because not all civil commitments for which the form may be used arise out of criminal proceedings.

As it did prior to circulation of the proposal for public comment, the committee gave significant consideration to these issues. With respect to the form caption, in light of the recommended expanded scope of the proposed new form and to account for appeals that do not have a criminal caption in the trial court, the committee modified the caption to remove reference to "People of the State of California v." and instead provided space for the case name in the trial court and the name of the defendant/respondent. With respect to how to reference the person subject to the civil commitment order being appealed most clearly and succinctly throughout the form, the committee concluded that using the term "Defendant/Respondent," defined as "the person subject to the civil commitment order," most clearly signifies that the form may be used for civil commitment proceedings that arise out of underlying criminal proceedings but not necessarily designate that person as a criminal defendant for purposes of the civil commitment appeal. The committee disagreed with removing all reference to "defendant" on the form.

One commenter also recommended that item 2 be modified to include a check box for when the matter has been resolved "after an admission, stipulation, or submission" and that the "other" choice be renumbered as subdivision (d) and made lower case. In item 3, this commenter recommended modifying the parenthetical descriptor of Welfare and Institutions Code section 1600 et seq. consistent with its suggestion relating to the rule discussed above. The committee agreed with both suggestions and modified the form accordingly.

Alternatives considered

The committee considered many different alternatives, most of which have been addressed above in the Comments section. Additional alternatives are discussed below.

Rule 8.483

The committee considered making no changes to the rules but concluded that the proposed new rule would provide clarity to litigants, court staff, and judicial officers. The committee also considered basing the new civil commitment rule on the language of rule 8.480 (governing LPS conservatorship appeals) and modifying that language as appropriate for civil commitment appeals. However, because the new rule is directed to appeals of civil commitment orders stemming from criminal proceedings, the committee decided that basing the new rule on the existing rule governing criminal appeals, rule 8.320, would be preferable.

The committee further considered the appropriate scope of the new rule and whether it should include an explicit definition of "civil commitment" proceeding, either in the rule itself or in an advisory committee comment. In subdivision (a), the committee included a paragraph addressing application of the rule to prevent confusion as to what type of proceedings the rule governs. Other potential modifications to the scope of the proposed new rule were considered in connection with the comments and are addressed above.

With respect to placement of the rule, the committee considered three alternative placements and decided that expanding the scope of chapter 6 to include both conservatorship and civil commitment appeals, and placing the new rule therein, would be clearest. The committee alternatively considered whether the rule should be located in title 8 (Appellate Rules), division 1 (Rules Relating to the Supreme Court and Courts of Appeal), chapter 3 (Criminal Appeals), article 2 (Record on Appeal), directly after the rule governing the normal record in criminal appeals. Although this placement could make clear that the rule is intended to cover only appeals of civil commitment orders stemming from criminal proceedings, it could also cause confusion or raise questions as to whether the new rule constitutes a change in substantive law because civil commitments are not criminal proceedings.

Consideration was also given to whether to add a new chapter 13 to division 1 of the appellate rules, directed specifically to appeals in civil commitment proceedings, and to add a new rule under this new chapter. Doing so would be consistent with the overall structure of division 1, which contains separate chapters for various types of appeals, but would require the creation of a new chapter containing only a single rule, which is discouraged. The committee specifically asked for public comment on the appropriate placement of the rule, and all commenters who responded agreed with the proposed placement in an expanded chapter 6.

Notice of Appeal—Civil Commitment/Mental Health Proceedings (form APP-060)

The committee considered not developing a new form notice of appeal for civil commitment orders, and instead expanding the scope of or adding an instruction to an existing form so that the form might also be used in civil commitment appeals. Following a review of existing forms, the committee concluded that creating a new form would be clearer and more useful than using any of the preexisting forms.

With respect to how to categorize the form, the committee considered whether the form should be included within the criminal forms and given a "CR" (Criminal) form designation. Because civil commitment appeals are not technically criminal in nature, and the scope of the proposed new form was expanded to include appeals of commitments and conservatorships that do not necessarily stem from criminal proceedings, the "CR" designation was not used. Likewise, the committee considered changing the name of the "GC" (Guardianships and Conservatorships) category to also include civil commitments and using the "GC" moniker for the new form. However, because there are no other appellate forms in this category, inclusion of a notice of appeal specific to civil commitments/mental health proceedings could cause confusion for self-represented litigants in guardianship and conservatorship proceedings. Finally, the committee considered using the "MC" (Miscellaneous) category designation, given the unique subject matter of civil commitment proceedings, but concluded that such a designation could also make it difficult for litigants to locate the new form.

Finally, the committee considered alternative names for the new form but determined that Notice of Appeal—Civil Commitment/Mental Health Proceedings is the most appropriate name.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

Some minimal fiscal and operational impacts are expected. In their comments, the Superior Courts of San Bernardino, San Diego, and Los Angeles Counties addressed the potential implementation requirements for courts. The Superior Court of San Bernardino County noted that some training on the new rule and form would be required, and it would take approximately six hours to revise the court's internal manuals and forms. The Superior Courts of San Diego and Los Angeles Counties similarly stated that some minimal staff training would be required, and internal procedures would need to be revised. It appears from these comments that any potential implementation requirements would be relatively minimal and do not present a barrier to adoption of the proposal.

Rule 8.320. Normal record; exhibits

(a)–(f) * * *

Advisory Committee Comment

Rules 8.45–8.46 address the appropriate handling of sealed and confidential records that must be included in the record on appeal. Examples of confidential records include Penal Code section 1203.03 diagnostic reports, records closed to inspection by court order under People v. Marsden (1970) 2 Cal.3d 118 or Pitchess v. Superior Court (1974) 11 Cal.3d 531, in-camera proceedings on a confidential informant, and defense expert funding requests (Pen. Code, § 987.9; Keenan v. Superior Court (1982) 31 Cal.3d 424, 430).

Subdivision (d)(1)(E). This rule identifies the minutes that must be included in the record. The trial court clerk may include additional minutes beyond those identified in this rule if that would be more cost-effective.

Rule 8.483 governs the normal record and exhibits in civil commitment appeals.

Chapter 6. Conservatorship and Civil Commitment Appeals

Rule 8.483. Appeal from order of civil commitment

(a) Application and contents

(1) Application

Except as otherwise provided in this rule, rules 8.300–8.368 and 8.508 govern appeals from civil commitment orders under Penal Code sections 1026 et seq. (not guilty by reason of insanity), 1370 et seq. (incompetent to stand trial), 1600 et seq. (outpatient placement and revocation), and 2962 et seq. (mentally disordered offenders); Welfare and Institutions Code sections 1800 et seq. (extended detention of dangerous persons), 6500 et seq. (developmentally disabled persons), and 6600 et seq. (sexually violent predators); and former Welfare and Institutions Code section 6300 et seq. (mentally disordered sex offenders).

(2) Contents

In an appeal from a civil commitment order, the record must contain a clerk's transcript and a reporter's transcript, which together constitute the normal record.

(b) Clerk's transcript

The clerk's transcript must contain:

(1) The petition and any supporting documents filed along with the petition;

(2) Any demurrer or other plea, admission, or denial;

(3) All court minutes;

(4) All jury instructions that any party submitted in writing and the cover page required by rule 2.1055(b)(2) indicating the party requesting each instruction, and any written jury instructions given by the court;

(5) Any written communication between the court and the jury or any individual juror;

(6) Any verdict;

(7) Any written opinion of the court;

(8) The commitment order and any judgment or other order appealed from;

(9) Any motion for new trial, with supporting and opposing memoranda and attachments;

(10) The notice of appeal;

(11) Any transcript of a sound or sound-and-video recording furnished to the jury or tendered to the court under rule 2.1040;

(12) Any application for additional record and any order on the application;

(13) Any diagnostic or psychological reports submitted to the court, including at the trial or probable cause hearing;

(14) Any written waiver of the right to a jury trial or the right to be present; and

(15) If the appellant is the person subject to the civil commitment order:

(A) Any written defense motion denied in whole or in part, with supporting and opposing memoranda and attachments; and

(B) Any document admitted in evidence to prove a juvenile adjudication, criminal conviction, or prison term.

(c) Reporter's transcript

The reporter's transcript must contain:

(1) The oral proceedings on the entry of any admission or submission to the commitment petition;

(2) The oral proceedings on any motion in limine;

(3) The oral proceedings at trial, excluding the voir dire examination of jurors and any opening statement;

(4) All instructions given orally;

(5) Any oral communication between the court and the jury or any individual juror;

(6) Any oral opinion of the court;

(7) The oral proceedings on any motion for new trial;

(8) The oral proceedings of the commitment hearing or other dispositional hearing, including any probable cause hearing;

(9) Any oral waiver of the right to a jury trial or the right to be present; and

(10) If the appellant is the person subject to the civil commitment order:

(A) The oral proceedings on any defense motion denied in whole or in part except motions for disqualification of a judge;

(B) The closing arguments; and

(C) Any comment on the evidence by the court to the jury.

(d) Exhibits

Exhibits admitted in evidence, refused, or lodged are deemed part of the record, but may be transmitted to the reviewing court only as provided in rule 8.224.

(e) Stipulation for partial transcript

If counsel for the person subject to the civil commitment order and the People stipulate in writing before the record is certified that any part of the record is not required for proper determination of the appeal, that part must not be prepared or sent to the reviewing court.

Advisory Committee Comment

The record on appeal of orders establishing conservatorships under Welfare and Institutions Code section 5350 et seq., including Murphy conservatorships for persons who are gravely disabled as defined in Welfare and Institutions Code section 5008(h)(1)(B), is governed by rule 8.480.

1.	California Lawyers Association Committee on Appellate Courts, Litigation Section Sacramento, CA	NI	The Committee on Appellate Courts supports this proposal. The Committee has some concerns that the proposed form, APP-060, does not facially limit its use for appeals of civil commitment orders stemming from criminal proceedings, but not other types of commitment orders. As such, there is some concern that litigants subject to other civil commitment orders may mistakenly use APP-060 to appeal civil commitment orders stemming from non-criminal proceedings.	The committee notes the commenter's support for the proposal, and has considered the concern that the form might be used for an unauthorized purpose. However, given that item 3 contains a checklist of code sections under which the person subject to the civil commitment is being held, the committee concluded that the form as drafted makes clear that it is for use in those specified proceedings.
2.	First District Appellate Project By Jonathan Soglin, Executive Director Oakland, CA	AM	A. Proposed New Rule 8.483 FDAP agrees with the Committee's proposed addition of new rule 8.483 governing the contents of the normal record on appeal in civil commitment cases. The contents of appellate records in the types of civil commitment cases to which the new rule would apply are sufficiently different from the contents of records in LPS Act appeals such that the creation of a separate rule (in additional to rule 8.480) seems appropriate. The location of the new rule appears appropriate as well. Therefore, FDAP's comments are limited to the provisions of the proposed new rule itself. Subdivision (a)(1), which specifies the types of proceedings to which the proposed new rule would apply, does not include any reference to involuntary medication proceedings, though subdivision (c)(1) indicates the rule is intended to apply to such proceedings. Therefore, FDAP recommends that the opening clause of	The committee notes the commenter's support for this portion of the proposal; no response is required. The committee appreciates this suggestion. However, involuntary medication proceedings, and appeals therefrom, may be separate from the civil commitment appeals encompassed by the new rule, and this proposed modification would thus expand the scope of the rule beyond what is intended. To minimize confusion and provide proposed subdivision (a)(1) be amended to add the following bolded language: "Except as otherwise provided in this rule, rules 8.300-8.368 and 8.508 govern appeals from civil commitment orders (including involuntary medication orders) under Penal Code…." Nearly all of the civil commitment schemes to which the proposed new rule applies may lead to involuntary medication orders. (See, e.g., Pen. Code, § 1370, subd. (a)(2)(b) [incompetent to stand trial]; In re Qawi (2004) 32 Cal.4th 1 [mentally disordered offenders]; In re Calhoun (2004) 121 Cal.App.4th 1315 [sexually violent predators]; In re Greenshields (2014) 227 Cal.App.4th 1284 [not guilty by reason of insanity].)	clarity, the proposal has instead been modified to omit the phrase "or motion for involuntary medication" from subdivision (c)(1).

			Subdivision (a)(1) includes orders issued under Penal Code section "1600 et seq. (continue outpatient treatment or return to confinement)" as one of the types of orders to which the new rule would apply. FDAP recommends altering the parenthetical description of this statutory framework to read: "(outpatient placement and revocation)." As currently proposed, the description does not account for appeals taken from the denial of conditional release into a supervised outpatient program (see, e.g., People v. Sword (1994) 29 Cal.App.4th 614); instead, it only describes continued placement and termination of outpatient status. The shorter language FDAP provides would be more comprehensive.	The committee appreciates this suggestion to revise the parenthetical description of Penal Code section 1600 et seq., and has modified the proposal accordingly.

			Subdivision (b)(1) requires inclusion of the "The petition" in the clerk's transcript as a normal record item. FDAP recommends changing this language to "The petition and any supporting documents filed along with the petition," as, in our experience, appellate records in civil commitment appeals sometimes include only the petition but not the supporting affidavits, declarations, reports, or other documents attached to the petition. (See, e.g., Pen. Code, § 2970, subd. (b) ["The petition shall be accompanied by affidavits specifying that treatment, while the prisoner was released from prison on parole, has been continuously provided by the State Department of State Hospitals either in a state hospital or in an outpatient program"]; Pen. Code, 1026.5, subd. (b)(2) ["The petition shall state the reasons for the extended commitment, with accompanying affidavits specifying the factual basis for believing that the person meets each of the requirements set forth in paragraph (1)"].)[1]	The committee appreciates this suggestion to expand subdivision (b)(1) of the proposed new rule to include "[t]he petition and any supporting documents filed along with the petition," and has modified the proposal accordingly.
			1 Although not contemplated by the invitation to comment, FDAP also recommends a similar amendment to rule 8.480(b)(1), which identifies normal record items in LPS Act appeals, such that the language, which currently reads "The petition" as well, be amended to read "The petition and any supporting documents filed along with the petition." (See, e.g., Welf. & Inst. 			of two physicians or licensed psychologists"].) Subdivision (b)(10) mandates that the clerk's transcript include "The notice of appeal and any certificate of probable cause filed under rule 8.304(b)." Because the certificate of probable cause requirement set forth in Penal Code section 1237.5 applies only to appeals taken from a judgment of conviction and does not apply to civil commitment appeals – even where the commitment follows criminal proceedings that previously involved a guilty or no contest plea – FDAP recommends omitting any reference to certificates of probable cause, such that the subdivision would simply read: "The notice of appeal." (See, e.g., People v. Sanders (2012) 203 Cal.App.4th 839, 847 [where the Court of Appeal recognized that the certificate of probable cause requirement "is not technically applicable in SVPA proceedings"]; People v. Wagoner (1979) 89 Cal.App.3d 605, 610 ["the Legislature could not have intended that [Penal Code] section 1237.5 would apply to appeals from convictions following an insanity plea"]; People v. Kraus (1975) 47 Cal.App.3d 568, 573 [no certificate of probable cause required on appeal from the denial of a post-judgment motion because "[t]he only statutory requirement for a certificate of probable cause is in Penal Code section 1237.5 which refers only to appeals 'from a judgment of conviction'"]; People v. Arriaga (2014) 58 Cal.4th 950, 959 [same].)	The committee agrees with this suggestion to omit reference to a certificate of probable cause and has modified subdivision (b)(10) of the proposed new rule accordingly.

			B. Proposed Notice of Appeal – Civil Commitment (form APP-060) 1. Comments on the Omission of LPS Act Conservatorships The Committee's proposed notice of appeal form would not apply to LPS Act appeals because such an approach, according to the Committee, would "expand the scope of the new form well beyond the scope of the associated proposed new rule of court and could create confusion for litigants and courts." (Invitation to Comment at page 4.) While it is true, as the Committee points out, that the proposed new rule of court for normal records in civil commitment appeals (8.483) solely applies to non-LPS Act civil commitments, that is only the case because there already is a rule of court for LPS Act appeals (8.480). And there is no reason why a single notice of appeal cannot be used for appeals falling under different rules of court. Significantly, the LPS Act serves as the state's "general civil commitment statute." (In re Smith (2008) 42 Cal.4th 1251, 1267.) The proposed new "Civil Commitment" notice of appeal should thus apply to LPS Act appeals as well.[2] [2] In deciding not to extend proposed rule 8.483 to LPS Act appeals, the committee pointed out, as one justification, that	The committee appreciates this comment, which it understands as a suggestion to expand the scope of the form for use in all types of civil commitment and Lanterman-Petris-Short (LPS) Act appeals. Having considered this issue, the committee agrees that it would be useful to expand the scope of the form and make it available for use in a broader range of civil commitment and LPS Act appeals and has modified the proposal accordingly.

			"civil commitments under the LPS Act do not necessarily stem from criminal proceedings[.]" (Invitation to Comment at page 3.) FDAP notes that civil commitment proceedings conducted under Welfare and Institutions Code section 6500 et seq. do not necessarily stem from criminal proceedings either, but such proceedings have been included in the proposed rule 8.483 and the proposed civil commitment notice of appeal form. Accordingly, LPS Act appeals would not be out of place alongside appeals from proceedings conducted under Welfare and Institutions Code section 6500 et seq. Omitting LPS Act appeals from the proposed form would create confusion for litigants and courts. Excluding LPS Act conservatorships from the proposed civil commitment notice of appeal form will leave such cases in limbo, as litigants are often confused as to whether they should be using the general civil form (APP-002) or the felony criminal appeal form (CR-120) for filing LPS Act appeals, especially because neither already existing form on its face appears to be appropriate for LPS Act appeals. Public defenders in the First Appellate District often contact FDAP asking which form to use to appeal from LPS Act conservatorships. Since August 2017, the Sonoma County Public Defender has been successfully using an unofficial notice of appeal form developed by that office and FDAP for appeals not just from civil commitments more closely related to criminal proceedings but also from LPS Act conservatorships. FDAP is aware of no confusion among litigants and courts attributable to the use of this form. In fact, FDAP has helped trial attorneys and conservatees file LPS Act appeals using the unofficial form and, anecdotally, is aware of litigants and courts who have used the form being pleased (and relieved) to know how to file an appeal from LPS Act conservatorships. 2. Comments on Contents of the Proposed Form Itself Sample Caption: In the third box down from the top left, the proposed form provides a sample caption that begins with "PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA vs." Although it is generally the district attorney that initiates the commitment proceedings covered by the proposed notice of appeal form, not all the listed civil commitment proceedings are commonly captioned in this manner. For examples, appellate cases involving juvenile extended detention petitions (Welf. & Inst. Code, § 1800 et seq.) are usually captioned "In re" and not "People v." (See, e.g, In re Lemanuel C. (2007) 41 Cal.4th 33; In re Howard N. (2005) 35 Cal.4th 117.) Moreover, should the Judicial Council adopt FDAP's above proposal for the civil commitment notice of appeal form to include LPS Act conservatorships, a caption	The committee appreciates this suggestion and has modified the proposal to expand the caption of the form to reflect its use in a broader range of proceedings.

			beginning with "People v." would be particularly inappropriate. Thus, FDAP recommends that the case caption language be amended to read: "PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA vs./IN RE." Section 2: The proposed form includes three checkboxes for indicating the manner in which the case was resolved in the trial court: "after a jury or court trial," "after a contested hearing," and "Other." First, FDAP notes that only one of the three options begins with a capital letter. For consistency, either "Other" should begin with a lower case "o" or the word "after" alongside the other two checkboxes should begin with a capital "A." More substantively, FDAP recommends adding a fourth checkbox for when the matter has been resolved by admission, stipulation, or submission, which commonly occurs in civil commitment cases, particularly in cases involving competency commitments and LPS Act conservatorships. (See, e.g., Proposed Rule 8.483(b)(1) [identifying as a normal record item to be included in the reporter's transcript "The oral proceedings on the entry of any admission or submission to the commitment petition or motion for involuntary medication"].) FDAP recommends the addition of a checkbox – 2.c. – that reads "after an admission, stipulation, or submission." The "Other" checkbox would then be renumbered as 2.d.	The committee appreciates these suggestions and has modified the proposal accordingly.

However, the committee has modified the proposal to add an Advisory Committee comment to proposed new rule 8.483 to clarify that rule 8.480 governs Murphy conservatorship appeals.
			Sexually violent predators proceedings have probable cause hearings. Those hearings can be an important part of the appellate record and should be part of the standard record on appeal. There are appellate issues which directly arise out of those part of the proceedings. Depending on the case, the appeal might arise directly from the ruling at the probable cause hearing. Admittedly, in those cases that hearing might be viewed as the "dispositional hearing" but it would be clearer to just state that probable cause transcripts are part of the standard record. Under current law where criminal rules are used, they are a standard part of the record on appeal. There is no reason to change this.	The committee appreciates this suggestion and has modified the language of subdivision (c)(8) to reference transcripts from probable cause hearings.

			entirely clear if a diagnostic or psychological report which is submitted to the court as an exhibit at trial or at the probable cause hearing is included. Those exhibits should not lose their status as a part of the standard record on appeal if they are introduced into evidence. In fact, the provisions of the proposed rule governing exhibits is problematic because it will make it more difficult for appellate counsel to obtain a complete record on appeal. Under current law—especially following the Supreme Court's ruling in People v. Sanchez (2006) 63 Cal.4th 665—it is not uncommon for a significant number of exhibits to be introduced into evidence in civil commitment cases. These exhibits are often critical to the appellate process and the evaluation of potential issues. Often these exhibits are redacted based upon disputed rulings by the trial court. Both the redacted and unredacted versions of these exhibits are necessary for the appellate attorney to evaluate the correctness of the trial court's rulings. Some exhibits which have not been redacted are also critical to the appellate process. Currently, some courts of appeals will grant motions to augment the records to included these exhibits (both redacted and unredacted) in the clerk's transcript while others will not. Proposed Rule 8.483(d), may well eliminate the courts of appeal's authority to grant such requests. This means that before filing the briefs, the only way for appellate counsel to view the exhibits is by traveling to	The committee appreciates the concerns relating to exhibits and has considered these alternative suggestions. However, the committee does not view the proposed rule as a bar to augmenting the record in appropriate cases, and believes appellate counsel will be able to obtain a complete record on appeal in civil commitment cases under the rule as drafted. Additionally, subdivision (d) mirrors rule 8.320(e), and the committee concluded it could cause confusion to have a different procedure for exhibits in civil commitment cases than in criminal cases.

			the trial court. This problematic because appointed counsel in civil commitment cases does not necessarily live anywhere near the trial court. As already noted, I represent civil commitment defendants from all over the state. Depending on the county it can cost the state well in excess of $1000 for me to travel to a courthouse to look at documents. On the other hand, if the documents are included in the record, the cost is just the photocopying time and expense for the superior court clerk's office. This might be a necessary problem if such exhibits are not an appropriate part of the record for some actual reason but they are a part of the record. Rule 8.483(d) makes that clear, but states that exhibits must be transmitted to the court of appeal pursuant to rule 8.224. However, that rule is not any real help both because it only kicks in after the respondent's brief has been filed and because appellate attorneys are often not located anywhere near the appellate court house. Rule 8.224(a)(1) does recognize the availability of the procedures in Rules 8.122 and 8.124 but those procedures are drafted with normal civil cases in mind where the trial attorney is likely to be the appellate attorney or at least have some involvement in the appeal. That is not now things work in the civil commitment arena. I am normally not appointed to represent my clients until after the record is prepared. Even in those cases where I am appointed before the record is complete, I know nothing about the case until I get the record on appeal. Under Rule 8.122(a)(3) all exhibits can be included in the clerk's transcript if they are specifically identified by a party in its notice of designation of the record. This procedure may be adequate in the normal civil case but it is of no use in a civil commitment case where by the time appellate counsel is appointed the Rule 8.122 record designation process is no available. (Rule 8.124 doesn't help because appointed appellate counsel will not have copies of the exhibits and even if he or she obtains them from trial counsel, he or she would not be in position to affirmatively assert that the copies are correct and complete.) Therefore, I suggest that the proposed rule should address this problem. It could provide appellate counsel with a window of time to designate additional record under Rule 8.122. In the alternative, Rule 8.493(d) could be rewritten to make it clear that the clerk's transcript can be augmented to include exhibits rather than prohibiting such an augmentation.

			Is the scope of the form appropriate, and in particular, should it be available for the appeal of any other type of civil commitment order, such as commitments under the LPS Act? The scope of the form is appropriate. It should not be available for other types of civil commitment order. Should the form be given an "APP" (Appellate) form designation, or should it be in another category of forms? Yes, give it "APP".
5.	Superior Court of Los Angeles County	AM	Proposed Modifications First, the style of the appellate case in the notice of appeal form should not refer to the committed person as "defendant/respondent" but only as "respondent." This would make it consistent with the styles used in the trial courts on these civil petitions as well as the Legislature's petition forms set forth in Welfare and Institutions Code sections 6251 et seq., and prevent the treatment and public safety purposes of these civil commitments from being tainted with any penal purpose. Additionally, not all Welfare and Institutions Code section 6500 petitions for commitment of dangerous developmentally disabled persons arise out of criminal proceedings – see, Welfare and Institutions Code section 6502.	The committee appreciates this comment and has given significant consideration to this issue. The committee has decided that using the term "Defendant/Respondent," defined in the first instance as "the person subject to the civil commitment order" most clearly signifies that the form may be used in a broad range of appeals, including civil commitment proceedings that arise out of underlying criminal proceedings, while not designating that person as a criminal defendant for purposes of the civil commitment appeal.

The committee appreciates this suggestion and has modified both the proposed new rule and form accordingly.
			Third, appeals from Welfare and Institutions Code section 6500 commitments should be covered by a separate notice of appeal form, since by statute the "petitioner" may be a number of different persons or entities, such as a parent, guardian, conservator, etc. This way, the style in the notice of appeal could be left blank to be filled in. Also, that notice should cover appeals from In re Hops petitions which also involve different persons. 			Should the rule limit the record items in subdivisions (b)(15) and (c)(10) to appeals in which the appellant is the person subject to the civil commitment order? Yes, it would be easier for the clerical staff to prepare the record if we limit the number and types of items that are required for consideration to only those that are relevant to the civil commitment. Should the new rule be placed in an expanded chapter 6 of title 8, division 1, or should it be placed elsewhere in the appellate rules? Yes, there is a close relationship between civil commitments and conservatorships. Should the form be given an "APP" (Appellate) form designation, or should it be in another category of forms? Yes, categorizing this as an appeal form allows for consistency in the designation of appeals. 6.	Superior Court of Orange County Civil, Small Claims, and Probate division By Sean E. Lillywhite, Administrative Analyst/Officer	A	We agree that these changes should also apply to LPS commitments. In Murphy cases, if the case is granted and the commitment ordered, the Court must make LPS findings in addition to Murphy findings. The proposed form is pre-filled with "People of the State of California" in the title. We recommend that this be left fillable as cases may be initiated by the Public Guardian or a hospital.	The committee appreciates this suggestion, but believes it could cause confusion to expand the scope of the rule to govern the normal record in Murphy conservatorship appeals in light of existing rule 8.480. However, the committee has modified the proposal to add an Advisory Committee Comment to proposed new rule 8.483 to clarify that rule 8.480 governs Murphy conservatorship appeals. The committee agrees that the caption of the form should be modified to reflect potential use of the form where an underlying case contains a caption other than “People v.” and the form has been modified accordingly.

Executive Summary

The Appellate Advisory Committee recommends adopting rule 8.815 to govern the form of filed documents in the appellate division. The new rule would incorporate by reference the existing formatting requirements in rule 8.883(c) for civil and misdemeanor briefs filed in the appellate division. The new rule will resolve uncertainty and provide clarity regarding the proper formatting of documents filed in the appellate division of the superior courts.

Recommendation

The Appellate Advisory Committee recommends that the Judicial Council, effective January 1, 2020, adopt rule 8.815 to govern the form of filed documents in the appellate division by incorporating the existing formatting requirements in rule 8.883(c) for civil and misdemeanor briefs filed in the appellate division set forth.

The text of the new rule is attached at page 7.

Relevant Previous Council Action

The rules governing the appellate division of the superior courts, rules 8.800 through 8.936 of the California Rules of Court, were repealed and replaced in full, effective January 1, 2009. Rule 8.883 was amended in 2011, 2013, 2014, and 2016, but these amendments are not relevant to this proposal.

Analysis/Rationale

Proceedings in the appellate division of the superior courts are generally governed by rules 8.800 through 8.936. The appellate division rules contain specific requirements governing the format of appellate division briefs for limited civil and misdemeanor appeals[1] and infraction appeals,[2] as well as briefs to be filed in the Court of Appeal after an order of transfer from the appellate division.[3] However, whereas existing appellate division rules describe specific requirements regarding service and filing, contents, envelope requirements, and disposition of applications and motions, they are silent as to the required format of these and other documents filed in the appellate division.[4] This has been a source of confusion for litigants.

The trial court rules, rules 2.1 through 2.1100, "apply to all cases in the superior courts unless otherwise specified by a rule or statute."[5] Rules 2.100 through 2.118, included within these rules, govern the "form and format of papers to be filed in the trial courts"[6] and contain detailed formatting requirements for trial court papers. Arguably, in the absence of any appellate division rule specifically governing the format of applications, motions, and other documents in that division, these trial court formatting rules should apply. However, this is unclear under the existing statutory scheme.

Separately, appellate rules 8.40 and 8.204 govern the format of "documents filed in a reviewing court,"[7] which is defined to mean the Supreme Court and Court of Appeal and to exclude the appellate division of the superior courts.[8] There is no rule expressly governing the proper format

[3] See rule 8.1012 (requiring that, except as otherwise provided, briefs following an order of transfer comply with the form and contents requirements of rule 8.204(a)(1), (b), and (d)).

[4] See rules 8.806 (Applications) and 8.808 (Motions).

[7] See rule 8.40(a).

[8] See rule 8.10(6) (" 'Reviewing court' means the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeal to which an appeal is taken, in which an original proceeding is begun, or to which an appeal or original proceeding is transferred") and rule 8.4 ("The rules in this division apply to: … Appeals from the superior courts, except appeals to the appellate divisions of the superior courts").

for applications, motions, or other documents in the appellate courts. Instead, existing rule 8.40[9] generally provides that such documents "may be either produced on a computer or typewritten and must comply with the relevant provisions of rule 8.204(b)." Rule 8.204(b), in turn, contains detailed requirements regarding the formatting of briefs to be filed in civil appeals in the Court of Appeal. Although specific to civil briefs, rule 8.204(b) is incorporated by reference into rule 8.40 and thus is also applicable to other documents filed in the appellate courts more generally, including applications and motions. As noted above, however, these rules do not apply to documents filed in the appellate division.

Although there are similarities among the rules governing the form of filed documents in the trial courts and appellate courts, as well as civil and misdemeanor briefs filed in the appellate division, there are also notable differences.[10] In the absence of specific guidance for formatting motions, applications, and other documents in the appellate division, litigants are left to format their submissions as best they can. Proposed new rule 8.815 is intended to provide clarity as to the proper formatting of applications, motions, and other documents filed in the appellate division. The new rule would mirror existing rule 8.40(a) governing formatting in the appellate courts, and provide that documents filed in the appellate division must comply with the relevant provisions of rule 8.883(c), which states the formatting requirements for briefs in limited civil and misdemeanor cases in the appellate division. Since litigants in the appellate division should already be familiar with the appellate division rules, and those appealing limited civil and misdemeanor cases will need to comply with the requirements of rule 8.883 in preparing their briefs, this approach would provide clarity for litigants and courts.

The committee did not identify any significant policy implications relating to the proposed new rule. The committee notes, however, that if the separate proposal to amend several appellate rules to create a uniform formatting scheme for electronically filed documents in the appellate courts is approved by the council, then new appellate division rule 8.815 will no longer mirror Court of Appeal rule 8.40(a) (and existing appellate division formatting rule 8.883(c) will no longer mirror amended Court of Appeal formatting rule 8.204(b)). However, as discussed further below, the committee believes that this difference is appropriate, given the relevant operational differences between the appellate division and the appellate courts, including differences in the [9] There is a separate proposal, Appellate Procedure: Uniform Formatting Rules for Electronic Documents, currently before the council that would, among other things, amend rules 8.40 and 8.204 to create uniform formatting rules for documents filed electronically in the appellate courts. The discussion of rules 8.40 and 8.204 included herein relates to the existing version of the rules.

[10] For example, 12-point font is used in trial courts (rule 2.104) whereas 13-point font is used in the Court of Appeal (rule 8.204(b)(4)) and for civil and misdemeanor briefs in the appellate division (rule 8.883(c)(4)); papers in the trial court must contain line numbers (rule 2.108), Court of Appeal documents must not (rule 8.204(b)(5)), and rule 8.883(c) is silent as to line numbering of civil and misdemeanor briefs in the appellate division. The requirements for the format of the first page of documents filed in the trial courts, appellate division, and Court of Appeal differ in numerous ways (compare rules 2.111, 8.40(b) and (c), 8.204(b)(10), 8.816(a), and 8.883(c)(8)). Compare generally rules 2.102 through 2.118 to rules 8.204(b) and 8.883(c).

electronic filing requirements and capabilities of the various appellate divisions throughout the state.

Comments

The proposed new rule was circulated for public comment between April 11 and June 10, 2019, as part of the regular spring comment cycle. One law firm, two organizations (the Committee on Appellate Courts of the Litigation Section of the California Lawyers Association and the Orange County Bar Association), and four courts submitted comments on this proposal. All seven commenters agreed with the proposal. A chart with the full text of the comments received and the committee's responses is attached at pages 8–11.

Two commenters, the Superior Court of San Bernardino County and the Superior Court of Los Angeles County, agreed with the proposal without providing further comment. One commenter, the Committee on Appellate Courts of the Litigation Section of the California Lawyers Association, specifically noted that the proposal "addresses a genuine problem for litigants and counsel in determining which formatting rules, trial court or court of appeal, govern the format of applications, motions, and other documents in the appellate division. The proposed new rule provides clarity and consistency for appellate division litigants."

The only comment addressing the substance of the proposed new rule was submitted by a law firm (Horvitz & Levy LLP), which agreed with the proposal but noted, "The new rule and Rule 8.883 do not address electronically filed documents (and I don't know if appellate divisions in superior court currently allow for electronic filing but I assume they are moving in that direction) but given Rule 8.72 alters the formatting in Rule 8.204, there should likely be some discussion or explanation of how these rules interact." The Appellate Advisory Committee understands this comment to refer to the potential interplay between this proposal and another proposal currently before the council that would, among other things, amend rules 8.40, 8.72, 8.74, and 8.204 to create uniform formatting rules for electronic documents filed in the Court of Appeal and Supreme Court (the appellate courts). If the uniform formatting rules proposal is approved as it was circulated for public comment during this spring cycle (SPR19-07), it would significantly revise and standardize the formatting requirements for documents filed electronically in the appellate courts.

The committee does not recommend that this proposal to adopt new rule 8.815 be modified based on this comment. The separate uniform formatting rules proposal does not address the format of electronically filed documents in the appellate division, creates no inconsistencies in the appellate division rules that must be addressed in this proposal, and will not alter any existing formatting requirements in the appellate division. Thus, any modification, such as adding an advisory committee comment, would seem to create, rather than negate, confusion about the interplay of the two separate rules schemes.

Additionally, it is true that proposed new rule 8.815, which incorporates by reference the formatting requirements for appellate division briefs in rule 8.883(c), was initially drafted to mirror existing appellate rule 8.40(a), which in turn incorporates by reference the existing formatting requirements for civil appellate briefs in rule 8.204(b). And if the separate proposal relating to electronically filed documents in the appellate courts is approved by the council, then new appellate division rule 8.815 and existing rule 8.883(c) will no longer mirror the amended appellate rules. The committee does not view this as an issue that requires modification of this proposal. While it is beneficial for the appellate division and appellate rules to be parallel where appropriate, this is an instance where the rules should differ, at least for now. Electronic filing is not available in all appellate divisions, and the proposed new uniform rules scheme governing electronic filing in the appellate courts is not currently appropriate for all appellate divisions or all case types within an appellate division. In any event, adding formatting requirements for electronically filed documents in the appellate division would exceed the scope of this proposal. However, electronic filing is increasing in the appellate division, and in the future the committee may well take up the issue.

The committee considered not making any changes to the rules, but concluded that a new rule specifically addressing the proper format for documents filed in the appellate division would provide clarity to litigants and courts.

The committee also considered whether to amend rule 8.817, the existing rule governing service and filing, to address the form of filed documents. However, the committee decided that it would be advisable to maintain a parallel structure between the Court of Appeal rules and appellate division rules by creating a standalone formatting rule for the appellate division that mirrors rule 8.40, rather than adding new subject matter to an existing rule.

The committee further considered whether to incorporate by reference the rules governing formatting in the trial courts (rules 2.100 through 2.118) or the Court of Appeal (rules 8.40 and 8.204(b)) into an appellate division rule regarding formatting, rather than incorporating rule 8.883(c), but decided that applying the formatting requirements contained in an existing appellate division rule would provide more clarity.

The committee also considered whether to amend rules 8.806 and 8.808, the rules governing appellate division applications and motions, to include formatting requirements. However, the committee concluded that the new formatting requirements should not be limited to applications and motions and that adopting a more general formatting rule governing all filed documents in the appellate division would be more useful.

Finally, in response to the comment discussed above about formatting for electronically filed documents (presumably in connection with the separate proposal before the council), the committee also considered whether further revision of proposed new rule 8.815, existing rule 8.883, or any other appellate division rules is necessary to address this issue. For the reasons discussed above, the committee concluded that no modification of the proposal is needed. Electronic filing in the appellate division, including rules governing the formatting of electronically filed documents in that division, may be considered in the future.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

Some minimal fiscal and/or operational impacts are expected. In their comments, the Superior Courts of San Diego, Orange, and Los Angeles Counties addressed the potential implementation requirements. The San Diego court stated that some staff training on the new rule would be required, additional counter time working with self-represented parties would be expected, and procedures for handling noncomplying filings would need to be created. The Orange court pointed out that, because the new formatting rule incorporates existing guidelines, "training requirements would be minimal for staff. Staff would just need to be made aware that specific guidelines now exist and that they are similar to what is used for misdemeanor briefs." The Los Angeles court does not believe any additional training will be required. It appears from these comments that any potential implementation requirements would be minimal and should not present a barrier to adoption of the new rule.

1.	Committee on Appellate Courts of the Litigation Section of the California Lawyers Association Sacramento, CA	A	The Committee on Appellate Courts supports this proposal. The proposal addresses a genuine problem for litigants and counsel in determining which formatting rules, trial court or court of appeal, govern the format of applications, motions, and other documents in the appellate division. The proposed new rule provides clarity and consistency for appellate division litigants.	The committee notes the commenter's support for the proposal; no response is required.
2.	Horvitz & Levy By Andrea Russi, Senior Counsel San Francisco, CA	A	Currently it is unclear whether an appellate brief filed in superior court should follow the formatting rules for superior court filings or for appellate court filings (Rule 8.204). Under the new rule, the appellate division would be governed by rule 8.815 which adopts rule 8.883 setting forth the content and form of briefs (which largely mirrors 8.204). The new rule and Rule 8.883 do not address electronically filed documents (and I don't know if appellate divisions in superior court currently allow for electronic filing but I assume they are moving in that direction) but given Rule 8.72 alters the formatting in Rule 8.204, there should likely be some discussion or explanation of how these rules interact.	The committee appreciates this comment and suggestion. The separate proposal to amend several rules governing the format of electronically filed documents in the Court of Appeal and the Supreme Court does not address the format of electronically filed documents in the appellate division. It creates no inconsistencies in the appellate division rules that must be addressed in this proposal. However, e-filing is increasing in the appellate division, and the committee agrees that rules for this process, including the format of electronically filed documents, should be considered in the future.
3.	Orange County Bar Association By Deirdre Kelly, President	A	Subject to the comments of the administering courts, this change clarifies the formatting for documents to be filed in the appellate division of the Superior Courts.	The committee notes the commenter's support for the proposal; no response is required.

Yes. The advisory committee also seeks comments from courts on the following cost and implementation matters: • What would the implementation requirements be for courts—for example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), or modifying case management systems? Because the new format mimics existing guidelines, training requirements would be minimal for staff. Staff would just need to be made aware that specific guidelines now exist and that they are similar to what is used for misdemeanor briefs. Project description from annual agenda: 2. Advisement of appellate rights in juvenile cases. To clarify the appellate rights available to parties in juvenile law cases, consider revising rule 5.590 to (1) remove the requirement that parents be present at the hearing to receive advisement of their appellate rights and (2) include reference to additional hearing types and the applicable statute. In addition, one of the advisory committee comments is no longer accurate and requires revision. This project is on the current annual agenda as a priority 2 project. The committee determined that the due process implications for parents warrant a priority 1 rating. Subcommittee: Rules.

To save resources, consider whether to amend rule 8.885(a) to clarify that oral argument will not be set in cases presenting no issues. Also, consider amending rule 8.885(d) to set forth a procedure for waiving oral argument. These are suggestions from a presiding judge of an appellate division and a member of the committee. This project is on the current annual agenda as priority 1(e); work was started this year but deferred in order to conduct more research into appellate division practices. Subcommittee: Appellate Division.

Executive Summary

The Appellate Advisory Committee recommends amending the rules regarding oral argument in limited civil and misdemeanor appeals to provide that oral argument will not be set in cases presenting no arguable issues, to state a procedure for waiving oral argument, and to establish a date of submission for appeals that are not set for oral argument. The committee also recommends the adoption of two optional forms, one for limited civil cases and one for misdemeanor cases, to assist litigants in waiving oral argument if they choose to do so. This proposal, which originated from suggestions submitted by a presiding judge of an appellate division and a member of the committee, is intended to increase efficiency for courts and provide guidance for litigants.

Recommendation

The Appellate Advisory Committee recommends that the Judicial Council, effective January 1, 2020:

1. Amend California Rules of Court, rule 8.885 to provide that oral argument will not be set in appeals that raise no arguable issues and describe the procedure for waiving oral argument in advance;
2. Amend rule 8.886 to provide a date of submission for appeals that are not set for oral argument;
3. Approve new optional form APP-108 for litigants in limited civil appeals to use in waiving oral argument;
4. Approve new optional form CR-138 for litigants in misdemeanor appeals to use in waiving oral argument;
5. Revise form APP-101-INFO to reflect the amendments to rule 8.885 for litigants in limited civil appeals; and
6. Revise form CR-131-INFO to reflect the amendments to rule 8.885 for litigants in misdemeanor appeals and to correct errors.

The text of the amended rules and the new and revised forms are attached at pages 8–36.

Relevant Previous Council Action

The rules governing the appellate division of the superior courts, California Rules of Court, rules 8.800 through 8.936, were repealed and replaced in full effective January 1, 2009. Rule 8.885 was amended in 2010, but the amendments are not relevant to this proposal. Forms APP-101-INFO and CR-131-INFO have been revised from time to time, but no previous revisions have bearing on this proposal.

Analysis/Rationale

Rule amendments

Appeals that raise no arguable issues

Oral argument in limited civil and misdemeanor appeals is governed by rule 8.885. Subdivision (a) of this rule requires that oral argument be set in every appeal, "[u]nless otherwise ordered." Thus, the rule currently requires setting oral argument in misdemeanor appeals under People v. Wende (1979) 25 Cal.3d 436 (Wende appeals) even though the appeals raise no arguable issues.

In a Wende appeal, the defendant's appellate counsel finds no arguable issues after reviewing the record, and files a brief under People v. Wende requesting that the court conduct an independent review. Although the defendant has an opportunity to file a brief, it is rarely done. The People may file a respondent's brief, but there is no need to do so because there is nothing in the opening brief to oppose.

Some, but not all, appellate divisions set oral argument in these cases. However, when a Wende appeal is placed on calendar and the case is called, if any party or attorney appears, it is only to submit the matter.

This proposal would add new paragraph (2) to rule 8.885(a) providing that "[o]ral argument will not be set in appeals under People v. Wende (1979) 25 Cal.3d 436 where no arguable issue is raised." The current content of the subdivision would be numbered as paragraph (1), and would be modified to identify paragraph (2) as providing an exception to the rule that oral argument be set in all cases.

The committee recommends the amendment to subdivision (a) to address an inefficiency in oral argument procedure. Setting Wende appeals for oral argument is unnecessary because they present no issues to be argued. However, the proposed rule amendment does not affect the court's authority to order oral argument in any particular case. In addition, in the rare instance where an arguable issue is found by the defendant or the court in conducting its review of the record, new paragraph (2) would not apply and the case would be set for oral argument.

Procedure for waiving oral argument

Subdivision (d) of rule 8.885 provides that "[p]arties may waive oral argument." The rule establishes this option for litigants but leaves it to the appellate divisions and litigants to decide how this may be accomplished. The committee is advised that, in the absence of any procedure to waive argument in advance, many litigants appear at argument only to submit the matter. Some defense counsel in misdemeanor cases inform the district attorney's office that they will not pursue oral argument, and they do not appear. The attorney for the People appears and informs the court that the appellant wishes to waive oral argument, and the People do not oppose the request. In both situations, the judges have spent time preparing for the oral argument.

The proposed amendments to rule 8.885(d) regarding waiver of argument are intended to save time and money for litigants and the courts. The current rule allows parties to waive oral argument, but provides no guidance on how or when to do so. The amendments provide a procedure that allows parties to waive argument by filing a notice of waiver within seven days after the notice of oral argument is sent by the court. If all parties waive oral argument, the court may, but is not required to, vacate the oral argument. If the court vacates the argument, it must take the affirmative step of notifying the parties. In addition, if not all parties waive oral argument, or if the court rejects a waiver request, the matter will remain on the oral argument calendar, and any party, including one who previously filed a notice of waiver, may participate in the oral argument.

Establishing a procedure that allows parties to waive and courts to vacate oral argument in advance will save parties the time and expense of appearing in court simply to waive oral argument and submit the matter. It will also spare judges the time and effort of preparing for an oral argument that is taken off calendar when the case is called.

Date of submission

One result of placing all cases on the oral argument calendar is that, unless the court permits supplemental briefing, all cases are submitted on the date of the argument or the date its waiver is approved. If cases are not set for argument, the date of submission must be determined.

Rule 8.886 governs submission in limited civil and misdemeanor cases. It provides that "[a] cause is submitted when the court has heard oral argument or approved its waiver and the time has expired to file all briefs and papers, including any supplemental brief permitted by the court." (Cal. Rules of Court, rule 8.886(a).)

For non-Wende cases in which oral argument is waived in advance and taken off calendar, the current rule provides the date of submission: the date the court approves the waiver.

However, for Wende appeals, oral argument would no longer be set and the current rule, which presupposes that oral argument is set and either heard or its waiver approved, does not provide a time of submission. Therefore, the committee recommends amending rule 8.886(a) to provide that, for Wende appeals that raise no arguable issues, the cause is submitted when the time to file all briefs and papers expires. The appellant's opening brief—in Wende appeals, counsel's brief identifying the appeal as raising no arguable issues—must be served and filed within 30 days after the record is filed in the appellate division, and any respondent's brief must be served and filed within 30 days after the appellant's opening brief is filed. (Cal. Rules of Court, rule 8.882(a)(1), (2).) In the vast majority of Wende appeals, no respondent's brief is filed, and the date of submission would be 30 days after the filing date of the appellant's opening brief.

New forms

The committee also recommends new forms for litigants to use in waiving oral argument. The forms will simplify the waiver process for litigants by taking any guesswork out of how and when to file a notice of waiver. Following the convention for appellate division forms, there is one waiver form for limited civil cases, Notice of Waiver of Oral Argument (Limited Civil Case) (form APP-108); and one for misdemeanor cases, Notice of Waiver of Oral Argument (Misdemeanor) (form CR-138); and both forms are in plain-language format. Both forms include instructions and refer the party to other forms that provide information on appeal procedures.

The forms include a box with text labeled "Notice" to present and highlight information on the waiver process. This information is based on the proposed amendments to rule 8.885(d). In addition, in item 2 above the signature line, both forms include language advising that, by signing the form, the party or the party's attorney is requesting to waive or give up the opportunity to appear in court and argue the case. Item 2 also advises that if the court accepts the waiver, the court will decide the matter on the briefs and the record. The forms are for optional use; a party may draft its own waiver.

The committee recommends amending Information on Appeal Procedures for Limited Civil Cases (form APP-101-INFO) and Information on Appeal Procedures for Misdemeanors (form CR-131-INFO) to conform to the changes to rule 8.885. Both forms describe oral argument and the option to waive it. The revisions describe the new procedure for waiving oral argument and include references to the new notice of waiver forms. The revisions also clarify that if not all parties waive and the court holds oral argument, any party may choose to participate, including any who filed a notice of waiver. In addition, the revisions clarify that the time for the appellate division to decide the appeal runs from either the date of oral argument or the date the court approved its waiver. Finally, form CR-131-INFO includes an advisement that oral argument will not be set in cases that present no arguable issues.

The committee also recommends, in response to a comment (discussed below), that certain provisions in form CR-131-INFO that contain erroneous information regarding a misdemeanor defendant's right to self-representation be corrected.

Policy implications

The committee has identified no significant policy implications associated with this proposal.

Comments

This proposal was circulated for public comment from April 11 to June 10, 2019, as part of the regular spring comment cycle. The committee received five comments. Two commenters (the Superior Court of Los Angeles County and the Orange County Bar Association) agreed with the proposal. Three commenters (the Criminal Appellate Section of the Los Angeles City Attorney's Office, the Superior Court of San Diego County, and the Joint Rules Subcommittee (JRS) of the Trial Court Presiding Judges Advisory Committee and the Court Executives Advisory Committee agreed with the proposal if modified. A chart with the full text of the comments received and the committee's responses is attached at pages 37–47.

The Criminal Appellate Section of the Los Angeles City Attorney's Office suggested that the proposal be modified by including a provision allowing each appellate division to opt out of the waiver provisions in proposed rule 8.885(d). The commenter explained that, because of the variation in rules and procedures for oral argument in appellate divisions across the state, the proposed waiver procedure might not achieve the desired efficiency for a particular court. As an example, the commenter pointed out that the Los Angeles Superior Court Appellate Division issues tentative rulings on the afternoon before oral argument.

The committee disagrees with modifying the proposed rule amendments to include an opt-out provision or otherwise provide that the rule is optional. The proposal establishes a procedure to enable parties to waive oral argument far enough in advance that the matter may be taken off calendar before the panel has prepared for the argument. The intent is not to preclude or make less efficient a practice such as issuing tentative rulings, or to preclude appellate divisions from establishing their own procedures that are not inconsistent with the rules of court.

The comment from JRS pertains to court operations. The committee has addressed it in the Fiscal and Operational Impacts section of this report.

In addition to providing comments on the proposal, the Superior Court of San Diego County requested revisions to the misdemeanor forms (CR-131-INFO and CR-138) to reflect accurately that there is no right to self-representation in misdemeanor appeals. (See e.g., Martinez v. California (2000) 528 U.S. 152; In re Walker (1976) 56 Cal.App.3d 225, 227; People v. Scott (1998) 64 Cal.App.4th 550.) Although the suggestions are outside the invitation to comment, the committee has made limited revisions to clarify that self-representation in misdemeanor appeals is allowed only if the appellate division permits it. These are minor substantive revisions that are unlikely to create controversy and are necessary to correct erroneous information on the forms. (Cal. Rules of Court, rule 10.22(d).) The committee will reserve the more extensive revisions suggested by the commenter for future consideration.

The committee considered not proposing any rule amendments or forms, but concluded that the savings in time and resources to be gained from taking Wende cases off the oral argument calendar and providing a procedure for waiving oral argument in advance justified these changes.

The committee also considered a different waiver procedure that would have allowed a party to file a notice of waiver within 10 days after the notice of oral argument is sent, and would have required the other party or parties to object within 10 days of the notice of waiver if they wished to keep the case on calendar. The committee rejected this option because it would be too cumbersome and time-consuming, and would allow one party unilaterally to take the case off calendar in the absence of a response from the other party.

Finally, the committee considered not proposing any forms for waiving oral argument, but concluded that the forms would be helpful, particularly for self-represented litigants.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

The committee does not expect any significant fiscal impacts from this proposal.

The Los Angeles court stated that implementation would include the development of docket codes in the case management system and a procedure to accept and process waivers. It expected that staff training on the process would be no more than two hours.

The San Diego court also indicated that staff training would be needed, but that it would be minimal for staff already familiar with procedures for appellate division appeals. The court would need to revise procedures, but not having to calendar and prepare for waived cases would save time and money.

The Joint Rules Subcommittee of the Trial Court Presiding Judges Advisory Committee and the Court Executives Advisory Committee (JRS) expressed concern that the proposed date for implementation "is not feasible or is problematic" and added that given the potential for a number of new rules being implemented on the same timeline, "it would be advisable to give trial courts more time to implement a rule change that affects due process rights in both limited civil and misdemeanor appeals." In following up with JRS, the committee was advised that the comment regarding the proposed implementation date is not specific to this proposal. Rather, it is based on the broader issue of the number of rules that need to be implemented and the short time frame for implementation. The committee acknowledges the challenges courts, and particularly smaller courts, face in implementing a number of new and amended rules at the same time.

Notwithstanding these potential impacts, the committee has concluded that the proposal will save time and effort for the courts, and time and expense for litigants.

Rules 8.885 and 8.886 of the California Rules of Court are amended, effective January 1, 2020, to read:

Rule 8.885. Oral argument

(a) Calendaring and sessions

(1) Unless otherwise ordered, and except as provided in (2), all appeals in which the last reply brief was filed or the time for filing this brief expired 45 or more days before the date of a regular appellate division session must be placed on the calendar for that session by the appellate division clerk. By order of the presiding judge or the division, any appeal may be placed on the calendar for oral argument at any session.

(2) Oral argument will not be set in appeals under People v. Wende (1979) 25 Cal.3d 436 where no arguable issue is raised.

(b) * * *

(c) Notice of argument

(1) Except for appeals covered by (a)(2), as soon as all parties' briefs are filed or the time for filing these briefs has expired, the appellate division clerk must send a notice of the time and place of oral argument to all parties. The notice must be sent at least 20 days before the date for oral argument. The presiding judge may shorten the notice period for good cause; in that event, the clerk must immediately notify the parties by telephone or other expeditious method.

(2) * * *

(d) Waiver of argument

(1) Parties may waive oral argument in advance by filing a notice of waiver of oral argument within 7 days after the notice of oral argument is sent.

(2) The court may vacate oral argument if all parties waive oral argument.

(3) If the court vacates oral argument, the court must notify the parties that no oral argument will be held.

(4) If all parties do not waive oral argument, or if the court rejects a waiver request, the matter will remain on the oral argument calendar. Any party who previously filed a notice of waiver may participate in the oral argument.

(e) * * *

Rule 8.886. Submission of the cause

(a) When the cause is submitted

(1) Except as provided in (2), a cause is submitted when the court has heard oral argument or approved its waiver and the time has expired to file all briefs and papers, including any supplemental brief permitted by the court. The appellate division may order the cause submitted at an earlier time if the parties so stipulate.

(2) For appeals that raise no arguable issues under People v. Wende (1979) 25 Cal.3d 436, the cause is submitted when the time has expired to file all briefs and papers, including any supplemental brief permitted by the court.

APP-101-INFO Information on Appeal Procedures for Limited Civil Cases

GENERAL INFORMATION

1 What does this information sheet cover?

This information sheet tells you about appeals in limited civil cases. These are civil cases in which the amount of money claimed is $25,000 or less.

If you are the party who is appealing (asking for the trial court's decision to be reviewed), you are called the APPELLANT, and you should read Information for the Appellant, starting on page 2. If you received notice that another party in your case is appealing, you are called the RESPONDENT and you should read Information for the Respondent, starting on page 11.

This information sheet does not cover everything you may need to know about appeals in limited civil cases. It is meant only to give you a general idea of the appeal process. To learn more, you should read rules 8.800–8.843 and 8.880–8.891 of the California Rules of Court, which set out the procedures for limited civil appeals. You can get these rules at any courthouse or county law library or online at www.courts.ca.gov/rules.

2 What is an appeal?

An appeal is a request to a higher court to review a decision made by a judge or jury in a lower court. In a limited civil case, the court hearing the appeal is the appellate division of the superior court and the lower court—called the "trial court" in this information sheet—is the superior court.

It is important to understand that an appeal is NOT a new trial. The appellate division will not consider new evidence, such as the testimony of new witnesses or new exhibits. The appellate division's job is to review a record of what happened in the trial court and the trial court's decision to see if certain kinds of legal errors were made:

For information about appeal procedures in other kinds of cases, see:

- Information on Appeal Procedures for Unlimited Civil Cases (form APP-001)
- Information on Appeal Procedures for Infractions (form CR-141-INFO)
- Information on Appeal Procedures for Misdemeanors (form CR-131-INFO)

You can get these forms at any courthouse or county law library or online at www.courts.ca.gov/forms.

- Prejudicial error: The appellant (the party who is appealing) may ask the appellate division to determine if an error was made about either the law or court procedures in the case that caused substantial harm to the appellant (this is called "prejudicial error").

  Prejudicial error can include things like errors made by the judge about the law, errors or misconduct by the lawyers, incorrect instructions given to the jury, and misconduct by the jury that harmed the appellant. When it conducts its review, the appellate division presumes that the judgment, order, or other decision being appealed is correct. It is the responsibility of the appellant to show the appellate division that an error was made and that the error was harmful.
- No substantial evidence: The appellant may also ask the appellate division to determine if there was substantial evidence supporting the judgment, order, or other decision being appealed. When it conducts its review, the appellate division only looks to see if there was evidence that reasonably supports the decision. The appellate division generally will not reconsider the jury's or trial court's conclusion about which side had more or stronger evidence or whether witnesses were telling the truth or lying.

The appellate division generally will not overturn the judgment, order, or other decision being appealed unless the record clearly shows that one of these legal errors was made.

3 Do I need a lawyer to represent me in an appeal?

You do not have to have a lawyer; if you are an individual (rather than a corporation, for example), you are allowed to represent yourself in an appeal in a limited civil case. But appeals can be complicated and you will have to follow the same rules that lawyers have to follow. If you have any questions about the appeal procedures, you should talk to a lawyer.

If you decide not to use a lawyer, you must put your address, telephone number, fax number (if available), and email address (if available) on the first page of every document you file with the court and let the court know if this contact information changes so that the court can contact you if needed.

4 Where can I find a lawyer to help me with my appeal?

You have to hire your own attorney if you want one. You can get information about finding an attorney on the California Courts Online Self-Help Center at www.courts.ca.gov/selfhelp-lowcosthelp.htm in the Getting Started section.

INFORMATION FOR THE APPELLANT

This part of the information sheet is written for the appellant—the party who is appealing the trial court's decision. It explains some of the rules and procedures relating to appealing a decision in a limited civil case. The information may also be helpful to the respondent. Additional information for respondents can be found starting on page 11 of this information sheet.

5 Who can appeal?

Only a party in the trial court case can appeal a decision in that case. You may not appeal on behalf of a friend, a spouse, a child, or another relative unless you are a legally appointed representative of that person (such as the person's guardian or conservator).

6 Can I appeal any decision the trial court made?

No. Generally, you can only appeal the final judgment—the decision at the end that decides the whole case. Other rulings made by the trial court before the final judgment generally cannot be separately appealed but can be reviewed only later as part of an appeal of the final judgment. There are a few exceptions to this general rule. Code of Civil Procedure section 904.2 lists a few types of orders in a limited civil case that can be appealed right away. These include orders that:

- Change or refuse to change the place of trial (venue);
- Grant a motion to quash service of summons or grant a motion to stay or dismiss the action on the ground of inconvenient forum;
- Grant a new trial or deny a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict;
- Discharge or refuse to discharge an attachment or grant a right to attach;
- Grant or dissolve an injunction or refuse to grant or dissolve an injunction;
- Appoint a receiver; and
- Are made after final judgment in the case.

(You can get a copy of Code of Civil Procedure section 904.2 at http://leginfo.legislature.ca.gov/faces/codes.xhtml.)

7 How do I start my appeal?

First, you must serve and file a notice of appeal. The notice of appeal tells the other party or parties in the case and the trial court that you are appealing the trial court's decision. You may use Notice of Appeal/Cross-Appeal (Limited Civil Case) (form APP-102) to prepare a notice of appeal in a limited civil case. You can get form APP-102 at any courthouse or county law library or online at www.courts.ca.gov/forms.

8 How do I "serve and file" the notice of appeal?

"Serve and file" means that you must:

- Have somebody over 18 years old mail, deliver, or electronically send ("serve") the notice of appeal to the other party or parties in the way required by law. If the notice of appeal is mailed or personally delivered, it must be by someone who is not a party to the case—so not you.

- Make a record that the notice of appeal has been served. This record is called a "proof of service." Proof of Service (Appellate Division) (form APP-109) or Proof of Electronic Service (Appellate Division) (form APP-109E) can be used to make this record. The proof of service must show who served the notice of appeal, who was served with the notice of appeal, how the notice of appeal was served (by mail, in person, or electronically), and the date the notice of appeal was served.
- Bring or mail the original notice of appeal and the proof of service to the trial court that issued the judgment, order, or other decision you are appealing. You should make a copy of the notice of appeal you are planning to file for your own records before you file it with the court. It is a good idea to bring or mail an extra copy of the notice of appeal to the clerk when you file your original and ask the clerk to stamp this copy to show that the original has been filed.

You can get more information about how to serve court papers and proof of service from What Is Proof of Service? (form APP-109-INFO) and on the California Courts Online Self-Help Center at www.courts.ca.gov/selfhelp-serving.htm.

9 Is there a deadline to file my notice of appeal?

Yes. In a limited civil case, except in the very limited circumstances listed in rule 8.823, you must file your notice of appeal within 30 days after the trial court clerk or a party serves either a document called a "Notice of Entry" of the trial court judgment or a file-stamped copy of the judgment or within 90 days after entry of the judgment, whichever is earlier.

This deadline for filing the notice of appeal cannot be extended. If your notice of appeal is late, the appellate division will not be able to consider your appeal.

10 Do I have to pay to file an appeal?

Yes. Unless the court waives this fee, you must pay a fee for filing your notice of appeal. You can ask the clerk of the court where you are filing the notice of appeal what the fee is or look up the fee for an appeal in a limited civil case in the current Statewide Civil Fee Schedule linked at www.courts.ca.gov/7646.htm (note that the "Appeal and Writ Related Fees" section is near the end of this schedule and that there are different fees for limited civil cases depending on the amount demanded in the case). If you cannot afford to pay the fee, you can ask the court to waive it. To do this, you must fill out and file a Request to Waive Court Fees (form FW-001). You can get form FW-001 at any courthouse or county law library or online at www.courts.ca.gov/forms. You can file this application either before you file your notice of appeal or with your notice of appeal. The court will review this application to determine if you are eligible for a fee waiver.

11 If I file a notice of appeal, do I still have to do what the trial court ordered me to do?

Filing a notice of appeal does NOT automatically postpone most judgments or orders, such as those requiring you to pay another party money or to deliver property to another party (see Code of Civil Procedure sections 917.1–917.9 and 1176; you can get a copy of these laws at www.leginfo.legislature.ca.gov/faces/codes.xhtml). These kinds of judgments or orders will be postponed, or "stayed," only if you request a stay and the court grants your request. In most cases, other than unlawful detainer cases in which the trial court's judgment gives a party possession of the property, if the trial court denies your request for a stay, you can apply to the appellate division for a stay. If you do not get a stay and you do not do what the trial court ordered you to do, court proceedings to collect the money or otherwise enforce the judgment or order may be started against you.

12 What do I need to do after I file my notice of appeal?

You must ask the clerk of the trial court to prepare and send the official record of what happened in the trial court in your case to the appellate division.

Since the appellate division judges were not there to see what happened in the trial court, an official record of what happened must be prepared and sent to the appellate division for its review. You can use Appellant's Notice Designating Record on Appeal (Limited Civil Case) (form APP-103) to ask the trial court to prepare this record. You can get form APP-103 at any courthouse or county law library or online at www.courts.ca.gov/forms.

You must serve and file this notice designating the record on appeal within 10 days after you file your notice of appeal. "Serving and filing" this notice means that you must:

- Have somebody over 18 years old mail, deliver, or electronically send ("serve") the notice to the other party or parties in the way required by law. If the notice is mailed or personally delivered, it must be by someone who is not a party to the case—so not you.
- Make a record that the notice has been served. This record is called a "proof of service." Proof of Service (Appellate Division) (form APP-109) or Proof of Electronic Service (Appellate Division) (form APP-109E) can be used to make this record. The proof of service must show who served the notice, who was served with the notice, how the notice was served (by mail, in person, or electronically), and the date the notice was served.
- Bring or mail the original notice and the proof of service to the trial court that issued the judgment, order, or other decision you are appealing. You should make a copy of the notice you are planning to file for your own records before you file it with the court. It is a good idea to bring or mail an extra copy of the notice to the clerk when you file your original and ask the clerk to stamp this copy to show that the original has been filed.

You can get more information about how to serve court papers and proof of service from What Is Proof of Service? (form APP-109-INFO) and on the California Courts Online Self-Help Center at www.courts.ca.gov /selfhelp-serving.htm.

13 What is the official record of the trial court proceedings?

There are three parts of the official record:

- A record of what was said in the trial court (this is called the "oral proceedings").
- A record of the documents filed in the trial court (other than exhibits).
- Exhibits that were admitted in evidence, refused, or lodged (temporarily placed with the court) in the trial court.

Read below for more information about these parts of the record.

a. Record of what was said in the trial court (the "oral proceedings")

The first part of the official record of the trial court proceedings is a record of what was said in the trial court (this is called a record of the "oral proceedings"). You do not have to send the appellate division a record of the oral proceedings. But if you want to raise any issue in your appeal that would require the appellate division to consider what was said in the trial court, the appellate division will need a record of those oral proceedings. For example, if you are claiming that there was not evidence supporting the judgment, order, or other decision you are appealing, the appellate division will need a record of the oral proceedings.

You are responsible for deciding how the record of the oral proceedings will be provided and, depending on what option you select and your circumstances, you may also be responsible for paying for preparing this record or for preparing an initial draft of the record. If you do not take care of these responsibilities, a record of the oral proceedings in the trial court will not be prepared and sent to the appellate division. If the appellate division does not receive this record, it will not be able to review any issues that are based on what was said in the trial court and it may dismiss your appeal.

In a limited civil case, you can use Appellant's Notice Designating Record on Appeal (Limited Civil Case) (form APP-103) to tell the court whether you want a record of the oral proceedings and, if so, the form of the record that you want to use. You can get form APP-103 at any courthouse or county law library or online at www.courts.ca.gov/forms.

There are four ways in which a record of the oral proceedings can be prepared for the appellate division:

- If you or the other party arranged to have a court reporter there during the trial court proceedings, the reporter can prepare a record, called a "reporter's transcript."
- If the proceedings were officially electronically recorded, the trial court can have a transcript prepared from that recording or, if the court has a local rule permitting this and you and the other party agree ("stipulate") to this, you can use the official electronic recording itself instead of a transcript.
- You can use an agreed statement.
- You can use a statement on appeal.

Read below for more information about these options.

(1) Reporter's transcript

Description: A reporter's transcript is a written record (sometimes called a "verbatim" record) of the oral proceedings in the trial court prepared by a court reporter. Rule 8.834 of the California Rules of Court establishes the requirements relating to reporter's transcripts.

When available: If a court reporter was there in the trial court and made a record of the oral proceedings, you can choose ("elect") to have the court reporter prepare a reporter's transcript for the appellate division. In most limited civil cases, however, a court reporter will not have been there unless you or another party in your case made specific arrangements to have a court reporter there. Check with the court to see if a court reporter made a record of the oral proceedings in your case before choosing this option.

Contents: If you elect to use a reporter's transcript, you must identify by date (this is called "designating") what proceedings you want included in the reporter's transcript. You can use the same form you used to tell the court you wanted to use a reporter's transcript—Appellant's Notice Designating Record on Appeal (Limited Civil Case) (form APP-103)—to do this.
If you elect to use a reporter's transcript, the respondent also has the right to designate additional proceedings to be included in the reporter's transcript. If you elect to proceed without a reporter's transcript, however, the respondent may not designate a reporter's transcript without first getting an order from the appellate division.

Cost: The appellant is responsible for paying for preparing a reporter's transcript. The trial court clerk or the court reporter will notify you of the cost of preparing an original and one copy of the reporter's transcript. You must deposit payment for this cost (and a fee for the trial court) or one of the substitutes allowed by rule 8.834 with the trial court clerk within 10 days after this notice is sent. (See rule 8.834 for more information about this deposit and the permissible substitutes, such as a waiver of this deposit signed by the court reporter.)

Unlike the fee for filing the notice of appeal and the costs for preparing a clerk's transcript, the court cannot waive the fee for preparing a reporter's transcript. A special fund, called the Transcript Reimbursement Fund, may be able to help pay for the transcript. You can get information about this fund at www.courtreportersboard.ca.gov/consumers/index.shtml#rtf. If you are unable to pay the cost of a reporter's transcript, a record of the oral proceedings can be prepared in other ways, by using an agreed statement or a statement on appeal, which are described below.

Completion and delivery: After the cost of preparing the reporter's transcript or a permissible substitute has been deposited, the court reporter will prepare the transcript and submit it to the trial court clerk. When the record is complete, the trial court clerk will submit the original transcript to the appellate division and send you a copy of the transcript. If the respondent has purchased it, a copy of the reporter's transcript will also be mailed to the respondent.

(2) Official electronic recording or transcript

When available: In some limited civil cases, the trial court proceedings were officially recorded on approved electronic recording equipment. If your case was officially recorded, you can choose ("elect") to have a transcript prepared from the recording. Check with the trial court to see if the oral proceedings in your case were officially electronically recorded before you choose this option. If the court has a local rule permitting this and all the parties agree ("stipulate"), a copy of an official electronic recording itself can be used as the record, instead of preparing a transcript. If you choose this option, you must attach a copy of this agreement ("stipulation") to your notice designating the record on appeal.

Contents: If you elect to use a transcript of an official electronic recording, you must identify by date (this is called "designating") what proceedings you want included in the transcript. You can use the same form you used to tell the court you wanted to use a transcript of an official electronic recording—Appellant's Notice Designating Record on Appeal (Limited Civil Case) (form APP-103)—to do this.

Cost: The appellant is responsible for paying the court for the cost of either (a) preparing a transcript or (b) making a copy of the official electronic recording.

(a) If you elect to use a transcript of an official electronic recording, you will need to deposit the estimated cost of preparing the transcript with the trial court clerk and pay the trial court a $50 fee. There are two ways to determine the estimated cost of the transcript:

- You can use the amounts listed in rule 8.130(b)(1)(B) for each full or half day of court proceedings to estimate the cost of making a transcript of the proceeding you have designated in your notice designating the record on appeal. Deposit this estimated amount and the $50 fee with the trial court clerk when you file your notice designating the record on appeal.
- You can ask the trial court clerk for an estimate of the cost of preparing a transcript of the proceedings you have designated in you notice designating the record on appeal. You must deposit this amount and the $50 fee with the trial court within 10 days of receiving the estimate from the clerk.

(b) If the court has a local rule permitting the use of a copy of the electronic recording itself, rather than a transcript, and you have attached your agreement with the other parties to do this ("stipulation") to the notice designating the record on appeal that you filed with the court, the trial court clerk will provide you with an estimate of the costs for this copy of the recording. You must pay this amount to the trial court.

If you cannot afford to pay the cost of preparing the transcript, the $50 fee, or the fee for the copy of the official electronic recording, you can ask the court to waive these costs. To do this, you must fill out and file a Request to Waive Court Fees (form FW-001). You can get form FW-001 at any courthouse or county law library or online at www.courts.ca.gov/forms. The court will review this application to determine if you are eligible for a fee waiver.

Completion and delivery: After the estimated cost of the transcript or official electronic recording has been paid or waived, the clerk will have the transcript or copy of the recording prepared. When the transcript is completed or the copy of the official electronic recording is prepared and the rest of the record is complete, the clerk will send it to the appellate division.

(3) Agreed statement

Description: An agreed statement is a written summary of the trial court proceedings agreed to by all the parties.

When available: If the trial court proceedings were not recorded either by a court reporter or by official electronic recording equipment or if you do not want to use one of these options, you can choose ("elect") to use an agreed statement as the record of the oral proceedings (please note that it may take more of your time to prepare an agreed statement than to use either a reporter's transcript or official electronic recording, if they are available).

Contents: An agreed statement must explain what the trial court case was about, describe why the appellate division is the right court to consider an appeal in this case (why the appellate division has "jurisdiction"), and describe the rulings of the trial court relating to the points to be raised on appeal.

The statement should include only those facts that you and the other parties think are needed to decide the appeal.

Preparation: If you elect to use this option, you must file the agreed statement with your notice designating the record on appeal or, if you and the other parties need more time to work on the statement, you can file a written agreement with the other parties (called a "stipulation") stating that you are trying to agree on a statement. If you file this stipulation, within the next 30 days you must either file the agreed statement or tell the court that you and the other parties were unable to agree on a statement and file a new notice designating the record.

(4) Statement on appeal

Description: A statement on appeal is a summary of the trial court proceedings that is approved by the trial court judge who conducted those proceedings (the term "judge" includes commissioners and temporary judges).

When available: If the trial court proceedings were not recorded either by a court reporter or by official electronic recording equipment or if you do not want to use one of these options, you can choose ("elect") to use a statement on appeal as the record of the oral proceedings (please note that it may take more of your time to prepare a statement on appeal than to use either a reporter's transcript or official electronic recording, if they are available).

Contents: A statement on appeal must include:

- A statement of the points you (the appellant) are raising on appeal;
- A summary of the trial court's rulings and judgment; and
- A summary of the testimony of each witness and other evidence that is relevant to the issues you are raising on appeal.

(See rule 8.837 of the California Rules of Court for more information about what must be included in a statement on appeal and the procedures for preparing a statement. You can get a copy of this rule at any courthouse or county law library or online at www.courts.ca.gov/rules.)

Preparing a proposed statement: If you elect to use a statement on appeal, you must prepare a proposed statement. If you are not represented by a lawyer, you must use Proposed Statement on Appeal (Limited Civil Case) (form APP-104) to prepare your proposed statement. You can get form APP-104 at any courthouse or county law library or online at www.courts.ca.gov/forms.

Serving and filing a proposed statement: You must serve and file the proposed statement with the trial court within 20 days after you file your notice designating the record. "Serve and file" means that you must:

- Have somebody over 18 years old mail, deliver, or electronically send ("serve") the proposed statement to the respondent in the way required by law. If the proposed statement is mailed or personally delivered, it must be by someone who is not a party to the case—so not you.
- Make a record that the proposed statement has been served. This record is called a "proof of service." Proof of Service (Appellate Division) (form APP-109) or Proof of Electronic Service (Appellate Division) (form APP-109E) can be used to make this record. The proof of service must show who served the proposed statement, who was served with the proposed statement, how the proposed statement was served (by mail, in person, or electronically), and the date the proposed statement was served.
- File the original proposed statement and the proof of service with the trial court. You should make a copy of the proposed statement you are planning to file for your own records before you file it with the court. It is a good idea to bring or mail an extra copy of the proposed statement to the clerk when you file your original and ask the clerk to stamp this copy to show that the original has been filed.

You can get more information about how to serve court papers and proof of service from What Is Proof of Service? (form APP-109-INFO) and on the California Courts Online Self-Help Center at www.courts.ca.gov/selfhelp-serving.htm.

Review and modifications: The respondent has 10 days from the date you serve your proposed statement to serve and file proposed changes (called "amendments") to this statement. The trial court judge then reviews both your proposed statement and any proposed amendments filed by the respondent. The trial judge will either make or order you (the appellant) to make any corrections or modifications to the statement that are needed to make sure that the statement provides an accurate summary of the testimony and other evidence relevant to the issues you indicated you are raising on appeal.

Completion and certification: If the judge makes any corrections or modifications to the proposed statement, the corrected or modified statement will be sent to you and the respondent for your review. If the judge orders you to make any corrections or modifications to the proposed statement, you must serve and file the corrected or modified statement within the time ordered by the judge. If you or the respondent disagree with anything in the modified or corrected statement, you have 10 days from the date the modified or corrected statement is sent to you to serve and file objections to the statement. The judge then reviews any objections, makes or orders you to make any additional corrections to the statement, and certifies the statement as an accurate summary of the testimony and other evidence relevant to the issues you indicated you are raising on appeal.

Sending statement to the appellate division: Once the trial court judge certifies the statement on appeal, the trial court clerk will send the statement to the appellate division along with any record of the documents filed in the trial court.

b. Record of the documents filed in the trial court

The second part of the official record of the trial court proceedings is a record of the documents that were filed in the trial court. There are three ways in which a record of the documents filed in the trial court can be prepared for the appellate division:

- A clerk's transcript;
- The original trial court file; or
- An agreed statement.

Read below for more information about these options.

(1) Clerk's transcript

Description: A clerk's transcript is a record of the documents filed in the trial court prepared by the clerk of the trial court.

Contents: Certain documents, such as the notice of appeal and the trial court judgment or order being appealed, must be included in the clerk's transcript. These documents are listed in rule 8.832(a) of the California Rules of Court and in Appellant's Notice Designating Record on Appeal (Limited Civil Case) (form APP-103).

If you want any documents other than those listed in rule 8.832(a) to be included in the clerk's transcript, you must tell the trial court in your notice designating the record on appeal. You can use form APP-103 to do this. You will need to identify each document you want included in the clerk's transcript by its title and filing date or, if you do not know the filing date, the date the document was signed.

If you—the appellant—request a clerk's transcript, the respondent also has the right to ask the clerk to include additional documents in the clerk's transcript. If this happens, you will be served with a notice saying what other documents the respondent wants included in the clerk's transcript.

Cost: The appellant is responsible for paying for preparing a clerk's transcript. The trial court clerk will send you a bill for the cost of preparing an original and one copy of the clerk's transcript. You must do one of the following things within 10 days after the clerk sends this bill or the appellate division may dismiss your appeal:

- Pay the bill.
- Ask the court to waive the cost because you cannot afford to pay. To do this, you must fill out and file a Request to Waive Court Fees (form FW-001). You can get form FW-001 at any courthouse or county law library or online at www.courts.ca.gov /forms. The court will review this application to determine if you are eligible for a fee waiver.

- Give the court a copy of a court order showing that your fees in this case have already been waived by the court.

Completion and delivery: After the cost of preparing the clerk's transcript has been paid or waived, the trial court clerk will compile the requested documents into a transcript format and, when the record on appeal is complete, will forward the original clerk's transcript to the appellate division for filing. The trial court clerk will send you a copy of the transcript. If the respondent bought a copy, the clerk will also send a copy of the transcript to the respondent.

(2) Trial court file

When available: If the court has a local rule allowing this, the clerk can send the appellate division the original trial court file instead of a clerk's transcript (see rule 8.833 of the California Rules of Court).

Cost: As with a clerk's transcript, the appellant is responsible for paying for preparing the trial court file. The trial court clerk will send you a bill for this preparation cost. You must do one of the following things within 10 days after the clerk sends this bill or the appellate division may dismiss your appeal:

- Pay the bill.
- Ask the court to waive the cost because you cannot afford to pay. To do this, you must fill out and file a Request to Waive Court Fees (form FW-001). You can get form FW-001 at any courthouse or county law library or online at www.courts.ca.gov /forms. The court will review this application to determine if you are eligible for a fee waiver.
- Give the court a copy of a court order showing that your fees in this case have already been waived by the court.

Completion and delivery: After the cost of preparing the trial court file has been paid or waived and the record on appeal is complete, the trial court clerk will send the file and a list of the documents in the file to the appellate division. The trial court clerk will also send a copy of the list of documents to the appellant and respondent so that you can put your own files of documents from the trial court in the correct order.

(3) Agreed statement

When available: If you and the respondent have already agreed to use an agreed statement as the record of the oral proceedings (see a(3) above) and agree to this, you can use an agreed statement instead of a clerk's transcript. To do this, you must attach to your agreed statement all of the documents that are required to be included in a clerk's transcript.

c. Exhibits

The third part of the official record of the trial court proceeding is the exhibits, such as photographs, documents, or other items that were admitted in evidence, refused, or lodged (temporarily placed with the court) in the trial court. Exhibits are considered part of the record on appeal, but the clerk will not include any exhibits in the clerk's transcript unless you ask that they be included in your notice designating the record on appeal. Appellant's Notice Designating Record on Appeal (Limited Civil Case) (form APP-103), includes a space for you to make this request. You also can ask the trial court to send original exhibits to the appellate division at the time briefs are filed (see rule 8.843 for more information about this procedure and see below for information about briefs).

Sometimes, the trial court returns an exhibit to a party at the end of the trial. If the trial court returned an exhibit to you or another party and you or the other party ask for that exhibit to be included in the clerk's transcript or sent to the appellate division, the party who has the exhibit must deliver that exhibit to the trial court clerk as soon as possible.

14 What happens after the official record has been prepared?

As soon as the record on appeal is complete, the clerk of the trial court will send it to the appellate division. When the appellate division receives the record, it will send you a notice telling you when you must file your brief in the appellate division.

15 What is a brief?

Description: A "brief" is a party's written description of the facts in the case, the law that applies, and the party's argument about the issues being appealed. If you are represented by a lawyer in your appeal, your lawyer will prepare your brief. If you are not represented by a lawyer, you will have to prepare your brief yourself. You should read rules 8.882–8.884 of the California Rules of Court, which set out the requirements for preparing, serving, and filing briefs in limited civil appeals, including requirements for the format and length of these briefs. You can get copies of these rules at any courthouse or county law library or online at www.courts.ca.gov/rules.

Contents: If you are the appellant, your brief, called an "appellant's opening brief," must clearly explain what you believe are the legal errors made in the trial court. Your brief must refer to the exact places in the clerk's transcript and the reporter's transcript (or the other forms of the record you are using) that support your argument. Remember that an appeal is not a new trial. The appellate division will not consider new evidence, such as the testimony of new witnesses or new exhibits, so do not include any new evidence in your brief.

Serving and filing: You must serve and file your brief in the appellate division by the deadline the court set in the notice it sent you, which is usually 30 days after the record is filed in the appellate division. "Serve and file" means that you must:

- Have somebody over 18 years old mail, deliver, or electronically send ("serve") the brief to the other parties in the way required by law. If the brief is mailed or personally delivered, it must be by someone who is not a party to the case—so not you.
- Make a record that the brief has been served. This record is called a "proof of service." Proof of Service (Appellate Division) (form APP-109) or Proof of Electronic Service (Appellate Division) (form APP-109E) can be used to make this record. The proof of service must show who served the brief, who was served with the brief, how the brief was served (by mail, in person, or electronically), and the date the brief was served.
- File the original brief and the proof of service with the appellate division. You should make a copy of the brief you are planning to file for your own records before you file it with the court. It is a good idea to bring or mail an extra copy of the brief to the clerk when you file your original and ask the clerk to stamp this copy to show that the original has been filed.

You can get more information about how to serve court papers and proof of service from What Is Proof of Service? (form APP-109-INFO) and on the California Courts Online Self-Help Center at www.courts.ca.gov/selfhelp-serving.htm.

You and the other parties can agree (stipulate) to extend the time for filing this brief by up to 30 days (see rule 8.882(b) for requirements for these agreements). You can also ask the court to extend the time for filing this brief if you can show good cause for an extension (see rule 8.811(b) for a list of the factors the court will consider in deciding whether there is good cause for an extension). You can use Application for Extension of Time to File Brief (Limited Civil Case) (form APP-106) to ask the court for an extension.

If you do not file your brief by the deadline set by the appellate division, the court may dismiss your appeal.

16 What happens after I file my brief?

Within 30 days after you serve and file your brief, the respondent may, but is not required to, respond by serving and filing a respondent's brief. If the respondent does not file a brief, the appellant does not automatically win the appeal. The court will decide the appeal on the record, the appellant's brief, and any oral argument by the appellant.

If the respondent files a brief, within 20 days after the respondent's brief was filed, you may, but are not required to, file another brief replying to the respondent's brief. This is called a "reply brief."

17 What happens after all the briefs have been filed?

Once all the briefs have been filed or the time to file them has passed, the appellate division will notify you of the date for oral argument in your case.

18 What is "oral argument"?

"Oral argument" is the parties' chance to explain their arguments to the appellate division judges in person. You do not have to participate in oral argument if you do not want to; you can notify the appellate division that you want to "waive" (give up) oral argument by serving and filing a notice within 7 days after the notice of oral argument was sent by the court. You can use Notice of Waiver of Oral Argument (Limited Civil Case) (form APP-108) to waive oral argument.

If all parties waive oral argument, and the appellate division approves the waiver and takes the oral argument off calendar, the judges will decide the appeal based on the briefs and the record that were submitted. But if one party waives oral argument and another party or parties do not, the appellate division will hold oral argument with any party or parties who choose to participate, including any party who asked to waive oral argument.

If you do choose to participate in oral argument, you will have up to 10 minutes for your argument unless the appellate division orders otherwise. Remember that the judges will have already read the briefs, so you do not need to read your brief to the judges. It is more helpful to tell the judges what you think is most important in the appeal or ask the judges if they have any questions you could answer.

19 What happens after oral argument?

After oral argument is held (or all parties waive oral argument and the court approves the waiver), the judges of the appellate division will make a decision about the appeal. The appellate division has 90 days after oral argument (or the date its waiver was approved) to decide the appeal. The clerk of the court will mail you a notice of the appellate division's decision.

20 What should I do if I want to give up my appeal?

If you decide you do not want to continue with your appeal, you must file a written document with the appellate division notifying it that you are giving up (this is called "abandoning") your appeal. You can use Abandonment of Appeal (Limited Civil Case) (form APP-107) to file this notice in a limited civil case. You can get form APP-107 at any courthouse or county law library or online at www.courts.ca.gov/forms.

INFORMATION FOR THE RESPONDENT

This section of this information sheet is written for the respondent—the party responding to an appeal filed by another party. It explains some of the rules and procedures relating to responding to an appeal in a limited civil case. The information may also be helpful to the appellant.

21 I have received a notice of appeal from another party. Do I need to do anything?

You do not have to do anything. The notice of appeal simply tells you that another party is appealing the trial court's decision. However, this would be a good time to get advice from a lawyer, if you want it. You do not have to have a lawyer; if you are an individual (not a corporation, for example), you are allowed to represent yourself in an appeal in a limited civil case. But appeals can be complicated and you will have to follow the same rules that lawyers have to follow. If you have any questions about the appeal procedures, you should talk to a lawyer. You must hire your own lawyer if you want one. You can get information about finding a lawyer on the California Courts Online Self-Help Center at www.courts.ca.gov/selfhelp-lowcosthelp.htm.

22 If the other party appealed, can I appeal too?

Yes. Even if another party has already appealed, you may still appeal the same judgment or order. This is called a "cross-appeal." To cross-appeal, you must serve and file a notice of appeal. You can use Notice of Appeal/Cross-Appeal (Limited Civil Case) (form APP-102) to file this notice in a limited civil case. Please read the information for appellants about filing a notice of appeal, starting on page 2 of this information sheet, if you are considering filing a cross-appeal.

(23) Is there a deadline to file a cross-appeal?

Yes. You must serve and file your notice of appeal within either the regular time for filing a notice of appeal (generally 30 days after mailing or service of Notice of Entry of the judgment or a file-stamped copy of the judgment) or within 10 days after the clerk of the trial court mails notice of the first appeal, whichever is later.

(24) I have received a notice designating the record on appeal from another party. Do I need to do anything?

You do not have to do anything. A notice designating the record on appeal lets you know what kind of official record the appellant has asked to be sent to the appellate division. Depending on the kind of record chosen by the appellant, however, you may have the option to:

- Add to what is included in the record;
- Participate in preparing the record; or
- Ask for a copy of the record.

Look at the appellant's notice designating the record on appeal to see what kind of record the appellant has chosen and read about that form of the record in the response to question (13) above. Then read below for what your options are when the appellant has chosen that form of the record.

a. Reporter's transcript

If the appellant is using a reporter's transcript, you have the option of asking for additional proceedings to be included in the reporter's transcript. To do this, within 10 days after the appellant files its notice designating the record on appeal, you must serve and file a notice designating additional proceedings to be included in the reporter's transcript.

Whether or not you ask for additional proceedings to be included in the reporter's transcript, you must generally pay a fee if you want a copy of the reporter's transcript. The trial court clerk or reporter will send you a notice indicating the cost of preparing a copy of the reporter's transcript. If you want a copy of the reporter's transcript, you must deposit this amount (and a fee for the trial court) or one of the substitutes allowed by rule 8.834 with the trial court clerk within 10 days after this notice is sent. (See rule 8.834 for more information about this deposit and the permissible substitutes, such as a waiver of this deposit signed by the court reporter.)

Unlike the fee for preparing a clerk's transcript, the court cannot waive the fee for preparing a reporter's transcript. A special fund, called the Transcript Reimbursement Fund, may be able to help pay for the transcript. You can get information about this fund from the Court Reporters Board of California at w*ww.courtreportersboard.ca.gov/consumers /index.shtml#trf.* The reporter will not prepare a copy of the reporter's transcript for you unless you deposit the cost of the transcript, or one of the permissible substitutes, or your application for payment by the Transcript Reimbursement Fund is approved.

If the appellant elects not to use a reporter's transcript, you may not designate a reporter's transcript without first getting an order from the appellate division.

b. Agreed statement

If you and the appellant agree to prepare an agreed statement (a summary of the trial court proceedings that is agreed to by the parties), you and the appellant will need to reach an agreement on that statement within 30 days after the appellant files its notice designating the record.

c. Statement on appeal

If the appellant elects to use a statement on appeal (a summary of the trial court proceedings that is approved by the trial court), the appellant will send you a proposed statement to review. You will have 10 days from the date the appellant sent you this proposed statement to serve and file suggested changes (called "amendments") that you think are needed to make sure that the statement provides an accurate summary of the testimony and other evidence relevant to the issues the appellant indicated he or she is raising on appeal. "Serve and file" means that you must:

- Have somebody over 18 years old mail, deliver, or electronically send ("serve") the proposed amendments to the appellant in the way required by law. If the proposed amendments are mailed or personally delivered, it must be by someone who is not a party to the case—so not you.
- Make a record that the proposed amendments have been served. This record is called a "proof of service." Proof of Service (Appellate Division) (form APP-109) or Proof of Electronic Service (Appellate Division) (form APP-109E) can be used to make this record. The proof of service must show who served the proposed amendments, who was served with the proposed amendments, how the proposed amendments were served (by mail, in person, or electronically), and the date the proposed amendments were served.
- File the original proposed amendments and the proof of service with the trial court. You should make a copy of the proposed amendments you are planning to file for your own records before you file them with the court. It is a good idea to bring or mail an extra copy of the proposed amendments to the clerk when you file your original and ask the clerk to stamp this copy to show that the original has been filed.

You can get more information about how to serve court papers and proof of service from What Is Proof of Service? (form APP-109-INFO) and on the California Courts Online Self-Help Center at www.courts.ca.gov /selfhelp-serving.htm.

d. Clerk's transcript

If the appellant is using a clerk's transcript, you have the option of asking the clerk to include additional documents in the clerk's transcript.

To do this, within 10 days after the appellant serves its notice designating the record on appeal, you must serve and file a notice designating additional documents to be included in the clerk's transcript.

Whether or not you ask for additional documents to be included in the clerk's transcript, you must pay a fee if you want a copy of the clerk's transcript. The trial court clerk will send you a notice indicating the cost for a copy of the clerk's transcript. If you want a copy, you must deposit this amount with the court within 10 days after the clerk's notice was sent. If you cannot afford to pay this cost, you can ask the court to waive it. To do this, you must fill out and file a Request to Waive Court Fees (form FW-001). You can get form FW-001 at any courthouse or county law library or online at www.courts.ca.gov/forms. The court will review this application and determine if you are eligible for a fee waiver. The clerk will not prepare a copy of the clerk's transcript for you unless you deposit payment for the cost or obtain a fee waiver.

25 What happens after the official record has been prepared?

As soon as the record on appeal is complete, the clerk of the trial court will send it to the appellate division. When the appellate division receives this record, it will send you a notice telling you when you must file your brief in the appellate division.

A brief is a party's written description of the facts in the case, the law that applies, and the party's argument about the issues being appealed. If you are represented by a lawyer, your lawyer will prepare your brief. If you are not represented by a lawyer in your appeal, you will have to prepare your brief yourself. You should read rules 8.882–8.884 of the California Rules of Court, which set out the requirements for preparing, serving, and filing briefs in limited civil appeals, including requirements for the format and length of these briefs.

You can get these rules at any courthouse or county law library or online at www.courts.ca.gov/rules.htm.

The appellant serves and files the first brief, called an "appellant's opening brief." You may, but are not required to, respond by serving and filing a respondent's brief within 30 days after the appellant's opening brief is filed. "Serve and file" means that you must:

- Have somebody over 18 years old mail, deliver, or electronically send ("serve") the brief to the other parties in the way required by law. If the brief is mailed or personally delivered, it must be by someone who is not a party to the case—so not you.
- Make a record that the brief has been served. This record is called a "proof of service." Proof of Service (Appellate Division) (form APP-109) or Proof of Electronic Service (Appellate Division) (form APP-109E) can be used to make this record. The proof of service must show who served the brief, who was served with the brief, how the brief was served (by mail, in person, or electronically), and the date the brief was served.
- File the original brief and the proof of service with the appellate division. You should make a copy of the brief you are planning to file for your own records before you file it with the court. It is a good idea to bring or mail an extra copy of the brief to the clerk when you file your original and ask the clerk to stamp this copy to show that the original has been filed. You can get more information about how to serve court papers and proof of service from What Is Proof of Service? (form APP-109-INFO) and on the California Courts Online Self-Help Center at www.courts.ca.gov/selfhelp-serving.htm.

You and the other parties can agree (stipulate) to extend the time for filing this brief by up to 30 days (see rule 8.882(b) for requirements for these agreements). You can also ask the court to extend the time for filing this brief if you can show good cause for an extension (see rule 8.811(b) for a list of the factors the court will consider in deciding whether there is good cause for an extension). You can use Application for Extension of Time to File Brief (Limited Civil Case) (form APP-106) to ask the court for an extension.

If you do not file a respondent's brief, the appellant does not automatically win the appeal. The court will decide the appeal on the record, the appellant's brief, and any oral argument by the appellant. Remember that an appeal is not a new trial. The appellate division will not consider new evidence, such as the testimony of new witnesses or new exhibits, so do not include any new evidence in your brief.

If you file a respondent's brief, the appellant then has an opportunity to serve and file another brief within 20 days replying to your brief.

26 What happens after all the briefs have been filed?

Once all the briefs have been filed or the time to file them has passed, the court will notify you of the date for oral argument in your case.

"Oral argument" is the parties' chance to explain their arguments to the appellate division judges in person. You do not have to participate in oral argument if you do not want to; you can notify the appellate division that you want to "waive" (give up) oral argument by serving and filing a notice within 7 days after the notice of oral argument was sent by the court. You can use Notice of Waiver of Oral Argument (Limited Civil Case) (form APP-108) to waive oral argument.

If all parties waive oral argument, and the appellate division approves the waiver and takes the oral argument off calendar, the judges will decide the appeal based on the briefs and the record that were submitted. But if one party waives oral argument and another party or parties do not, the appellate division will hold oral argument with any party or parties who choose to participate, including any party who asked to waive oral argument.

If you do choose to participate in oral argument, you will have up to 10 minutes for your argument unless the appellate division orders otherwise. Remember that the judges will have already read the briefs, so you do not need to read your brief to the judges. It is more helpful to tell the judges what you think is most important in the appeal or ask the judges if they have any questions you could answer.

After oral argument is held (or all parties waive oral argument and the court approves the waiver), the judges of the appellate division will make a decision about the appeal. The appellate division has 90 days after oral argument (or the date its waiver was approved) to decide the appeal. The clerk of the court will mail you a notice of the appellate division's decision.

NOTICE

For all appeals in limited civil cases, the court schedules oral argument. Parties may waive oral argument by filing a notice of waiver of oral argument within 7 days after the notice of oral argument is sent.

If all parties in the case waive oral argument, the court may vacate the oral argument and take it off the calendar. If the court vacates oral argument, you will receive notification from the court.

If not all parties waive oral argument, or if the court does not accept the waiver request, the court will not vacate oral argument and it will remain on the court's calendar. All parties will be able to participate in the oral argument, including any parties who previously requested a waiver.

(2) I have read this form and I am/my client is requesting to waive oral argument. I understand that by signing this form, I am/my client is waiving (giving up) the opportunity to appear in court and argue the case. I also understand that if all parties waive oral argument and the court accepts the waiver and takes the oral argument off calendar, the court will decide the appeal based on the briefs and the record that were submitted.

CR-131-INFO Information on Appeal Procedures for Misdemeanors

1 What does this information sheet cover?

This information sheet tells you about appeals in misdemeanor cases. It is only meant to give you a general idea of the appeal process, so it does not cover everything you may need to know about appeals in misdemeanor cases. To learn more, you should read rules 8.800–8.816 and 8.850–8.890 of the California Rules of Court, which set out the procedures for misdemeanor appeals. You can get these rules at any courthouse or county law library or online at www.courts.ca.gov/rules.

For information about appeal procedures in other cases, see:

- Information on Appeal Procedures for Infractions (form CR-141-INFO)
- Information on Appeal Procedures for Limited Civil Cases (form APP-101-INFO)

You can get these forms at any courthouse or county law library or online at www.courts.ca.gov/forms.

2 What is a misdemeanor?

A misdemeanor is a crime that can be punished by jail time of up to one year, but not by time in state prison. (See Penal Code sections 17 and 19.2. You can get a copy of these laws at at http://leginfo.legislature.ca.gov /faces/codes.xhtml.) If you were also charged with or convicted of a felony, then your case is a felony case, not a misdemeanor case.

3 What is an appeal?

An appeal is a request to a higher court to review a decision made by a lower court. In a misdemeanor case, the court hearing the appeal is the appellate division of the superior court and the lower court—called the "trial court" in this information sheet—is the superior court.

It is important to understand that an appeal is NOT a new trial. The appellate division will not consider new evidence, such as the testimony of new witnesses or new exhibits. The appellate division's job is to review a record of what happened in the trial court and the trial court's decision to see if certain kinds of legal errors were made in the case:

- Prejudicial error: The party that appeals (called the "appellant") may ask the appellate division to determine if an error was made about either the law or court procedures in the case that caused substantial harm to the appellant (this is called "prejudicial error"). Prejudicial error can include things like errors made by the judge about the law, errors or misconduct by the lawyers, incorrect instructions given to the jury, and misconduct by the jury that harmed the appellant. When it conducts its review, the appellate division presumes that the judgment, order, or other decision being appealed is correct. It is the responsibility of the appellant to show the appellate division that an error was made and that the error was harmful.
- No substantial evidence: The appellant may also ask the appellate division to determine if there was substantial evidence supporting the judgment, order, or other decision being appealed. When it conducts its review, the appellate division only looks to see if there was evidence that reasonably supports the decision. The appellate division generally will not reconsider the jury's or trial court's conclusion about which side had more or stronger evidence or whether witnesses were telling the truth or lying.

The appellate division generally will not overturn the judgment, order, or other decision being appealed unless the record clearly shows that one of these legal errors was made.

4 Do I need a lawyer to appeal?

You will probably need a lawyer. You are allowed to represent yourself in an appeal in a misdemeanor case only if the appellate division permits you to do so. But appeals can be complicated, and you would have to follow the same rules that lawyers have to follow. If you have any questions about the appeal procedures, you should talk to a lawyer.

If the appellate division permits you to represent yourself, you must put your address, telephone number, fax number, and e-mail address (if available) on the cover of every document you file with the court and let the court know if this contact information changes so that the court can contact you if needed.

5 How do I get a lawyer to represent me?

The court is required to appoint a lawyer to represent you if you are indigent (you cannot afford to pay for a lawyer) and:

- Your punishment includes going to jail or paying a fine of more than $500 (including penalty and other assessments); or
- You are likely to suffer other significant harm as a result of being convicted.

The court may, but is not required to, appoint a lawyer to represent you on appeal in other circumstances if you are indigent. You are automatically considered indigent if you were represented by the public defender or other court-appointed lawyer in the trial court. You will also be considered indigent if you can show that your income and assets are too low to pay for a lawyer.

If you think you are indigent, you can ask the court to appoint a lawyer to represent you for your appeal. You may use Request for Court-Appointed Lawyer in Misdemeanor Appeal (form CR-133) to ask the court to appoint a lawyer to represent you on appeal in a misdemeanor case. You can get form CR-133 at any courthouse or county law library or online at www.courts.ca.gov/forms.

If you want a lawyer and you are not indigent or if the court turns down your request to appoint a lawyer, you must hire a lawyer at your own expense. You can get information about finding a lawyer on the California Courts Online Self-Help Center at www.courts.ca.gov /selfhelp.htm at the "Getting Started" tab.

6 Who can appeal?

Only a party in the trial court case can appeal a decision in that case. You may not appeal on behalf of a friend, a spouse, a child, or another relative.

The party that is appealing is called the APPELLANT; in a misdemeanor case, this is usually the party convicted of committing the misdemeanor. The other party is called the RESPONDENT; in a misdemeanor case, this is usually the government agency that filed the criminal charges (on court papers, this party is called the People of the State of California).

7 Can I appeal any decision that the trial court made?

No. Generally, you may appeal only the final judgment —the decision at the end that decides the whole case. The final judgment includes the punishment that the court imposed. With the exception listed below, rulings made by the trial court before final judgment generally cannot be separately appealed, but can be reviewed only later as part of an appeal of the final judgment. In a misdemeanor case, the party convicted of committing a misdemeanor usually appeals that conviction or the sentence (punishment) ordered by the trial court. In a misdemeanor case, a party can also appeal:

- Before the trial court issues a final judgment in the case, from an order granting or denying a motion to suppress evidence (Penal Code section 1538.5(j))
- From an order made by the trial court after judgment that affects a substantial right of the appellant (Penal Code section 1466(2)(B))

You can get a copy of these laws at http://leginfo.legislature.ca.gov/faces/codes.xhtml.

8 How do I start my appeal?

First, you must file a notice of appeal. The notice of appeal tells the other party in the case and the trial court that you are appealing the trial court's decision. You may use Notice of Appeal (Misdemeanor) (form CR-132) to prepare and file a notice of appeal in a misdemeanor case. You can get form CR-132 at any courthouse or county law library or online at www.courts.ca.gov/forms.

9 Is there a deadline for filing my notice of appeal?

Yes. Except in the very limited circumstances listed in rule 8.853(b), in a misdemeanor case, you must file your notice of appeal within 30 days after the trial court makes ("renders") its final judgment in your case or issues the order you are appealing. (You can get a copy of rule 8.853 at any courthouse or county law library or online at www.courts.ca.gov/rules). The date the trial court makes its judgment is normally the date the trial court issues its order saying what your punishment is (sentences you). This deadline for filing the notice of appeal cannot be extended. If your notice of appeal is late, the appellate division will not be able to consider your appeal.

10 How do I file my notice of appeal?

To file the notice of appeal in a misdemeanor case, you must bring or mail the original notice of appeal to the clerk of the trial court that made the judgment or issued the order you are appealing. It is a good idea to bring or mail an extra copy to the clerk and ask the clerk to stamp it to show that the original has been filed.

There is no fee for filing the notice of appeal in a misdemeanor case. You can ask the clerk of that court if there are any other requirements for filing your notice of appeal.

After you file your notice of appeal, the clerk will send a copy of your notice of appeal to the office of the prosecuting attorney (for example, the district attorney, county counsel, city attorney, or state Attorney General).

11 If I file a notice of appeal, do I still have to go to jail or complete other parts of my punishment?

Filing the notice of appeal does NOT automatically postpone your punishment, such as serving time in jail, paying fines, or probation conditions.

If you have been sentenced to jail in a misdemeanor case, you have a right to be released either with or without bail while your appeal is waiting to be decided, but you must ask the court to set bail or release you. If the trial court has not set bail or released you after your notice of appeal has been filed, you must ask the trial court to set bail or release you. If the trial court denies your release or sets the bail amount higher than you think it should be, you can apply to the appellate division for release or for lower bail.

Other parts of your punishment, such as fines or probation conditions, will be postponed ("stayed") only if you request a stay and the court grants your request. If you want a stay, you must first ask the trial court for a stay. You can also apply to the appellate division for a stay, but you must show in your application to the appellate division that you first asked the trial court for a stay and that the trial court unjustifiably denied your request. If you do not get a stay and you do not pay your fine or complete another part of your punishment by the date ordered by the court, a warrant may be issued for your arrest or a civil collections process may be started against you, which could result in a civil penalty being added to your fine.

12 What do I need to do after I file my appeal?

You must tell the trial court (1) whether you have agreed with the respondent ("stipulated") that you do not need parts of the normal record on appeal, and (2) whether you want a record of what was said in the trial court (this is called a record of the "oral proceedings") sent to the appellate division and, if so, what form of that record you want to use. You may use Notice Regarding Record on Appeal (Misdemeanor) (form CR-134) for this notice. (You can get form CR-134 at any courthouse or county law library or online at www.courts.ca.gov/forms). You must file this notice either:

- Within 20 days after you file your notice of appeal; or, if it is later,
- Within 10 days after the court decides whether to appoint a lawyer to represent you (if you ask the court to appoint a lawyer within 20 days after you file your notice of appeal).

13 In what cases does the appellate division need a record of what was said in the trial court?

You do not have to send the appellate division a record of what was said in the trial court. But if you want to raise any issue in your appeal that would require the appellate division to consider what was said in the trial court, the appellate division will need a record of these oral proceedings. For example, if you are claiming that there was not substantial evidence supporting the judgment, order, or other decision you are appealing, the appellate division will need a record of the oral proceedings. Since the appellate division judges were not there for the proceedings in the trial court, an official record of these oral proceedings must be prepared and sent to the appellate division for its review.

Depending on what form of the record you choose to use, you will be responsible for paying to have the official record of the oral proceedings prepared (unless you are indigent) or for preparing an initial draft of this record yourself. If you do not take care of these responsibilities, a record of the oral proceedings in the trial court will not be prepared and sent to the appellate division. If the appellate division does not receive this record, it will not be able to consider what was said in the trial court in deciding whether a legal error was made and it may dismiss your appeal.

14 What are the different forms of the record?

There are three ways a record of the oral proceedings in the trial court can be prepared and provided to the appellate division in a misdemeanor case:

a. If a court reporter was there during the trial court proceedings, the reporter can prepare a record called a "reporter's transcript."

b. If the proceedings were officially electronically recorded, the trial court can have a transcript prepared from that recording; or if the court has a local rule permitting this and you and the respondent (the prosecuting agency) agree ("stipulate") to this, you can use the official electronic recording itself as the record, instead of a transcript.

c. You can use a statement on appeal.

Read below for more information about these options.

a. Reporter's transcript

When available: In some misdemeanor cases, a court reporter is there in the trial court and makes a record of the oral proceedings. If a court reporter made a record of your case, you can ask to have the court reporter prepare a transcript of those oral proceedings, called a "reporter's transcript." You should check with the trial court to see if a court reporter made a record of your case before you choose this option. Some courts also have local rules that establish procedures for deciding whether a statement on appeal or a transcript of only some of the oral proceedings will be a good enough record to consider the issues you are raising on appeal. You should check whether the court has such a local rule.

Cost*:* Ordinarily, the appellant must pay for preparing a reporter's transcript. The court reporter will provide the clerk of the trial court with an estimate of the cost of preparing the transcript and the clerk will notify you of this estimate. If you want the reporter to prepare a transcript, you must deposit this estimated amount or one of the substitutes allowed under rule 8.866 with the clerk within 10 days after the clerk sends you the estimate. However, under rule 8.866 you can decide to use a different form of the record or take other action instead of proceeding with a reporter's transcript.

If, however, you are indigent (you cannot afford to pay the cost of a reporter's transcript), you may be able to get a free transcript. If you were represented by the public defender or another court-appointed lawyer in the trial court, you are automatically considered indigent. If you were not represented by a court-appointed lawyer in the trial court, you can complete and file Defendant's Financial Statement on Eligibility for Appointment of Counsel and Reimbursement and Record on Appeal at Public Expense (form CR-105), to show that you are indigent. You can get form CR-105 at any courthouse or county law library or online at www.courts.ca.gov/forms. The court will review this form to decide whether you are indigent.

If the court finds that you are indigent, a court reporter made a record of your case, and you show that you need a transcript, the court must provide you with a free transcript. Whether you need a transcript depends on the issues you are raising on appeal. If the issues you are raising on appeal include that there was not substantial evidence supporting the judgment, order, or other decision you are appealing or that there was misconduct in your case that harmed you, that is generally enough to show that you need a transcript. If you ask for a reporter's transcript, the court may ask you what issues you are raising on appeal and may decide that a statement on appeal or a transcript of only some of the oral proceedings will be a good enough record to consider the issues you are raising.

If the court finds that you are not indigent, it will send you a notice and you will have a chance to pick another form of the record or take other actions listed in rule 8.866.

Completion and delivery: Once you deposit the estimated cost of the transcript or one of the substitutes allowed under rule 8.866 or show the court you are indigent and need a transcript, the clerk will notify the reporter to prepare the transcript. When the reporter completes the transcript, the clerk will send the reporter's transcript to the appellate division along with the clerk's transcript.

b. Official electronic recording or transcript from an official recording

When available: In some misdemeanor cases, the trial court proceedings are officially recorded on approved electronic recording equipment. If your case was officially recorded, you can ask to have a transcript prepared from that official electronic recording. You should check with the trial court to see if your case was officially electronically recorded before you choose this option. As with reporter's transcripts, some courts also have local rules that establish procedures for deciding whether a statement on appeal or a transcript of only some of the oral proceedings will be a good enough record to consider the issues you are raising on appeal. You should check whether the court has such a local rule.

If the court has a local rule for the appellate division permitting this and all the parties agree ("stipulate"), a copy of the official electronic recording itself can be used as the record of the oral proceedings instead of preparing a transcript. You should check with the trial court to see if your case was officially electronically recorded and check to make sure there is a local rule permitting the use of the recording itself before choosing this option. If you choose this option, you must attach a copy of your agreement with the other parties (called a "stipulation") to your notice regarding the oral proceedings.

Cost: Ordinarily, the appellant must pay for preparing a transcript or making a copy of the official electronic recording. The court will send you an estimate of the cost for this transcript or the copy of the electronic recording. If you still want this transcript or recording, you must deposit this amount with the court. However, you can also choose to use a statement on appeal instead, or take one of the other actions listed in rule 8.868.

If, however, you are indigent (you cannot afford to pay the cost of the transcript or recording), you may be able to get a free transcript or recording. If you were represented by the public defender or another court-appointed attorney in the trial court, you are automatically considered indigent. If you were not represented by a court-appointed lawyer in the trial court, you can complete and file Defendant's Financial Statement on Eligibility for Appointment of Counsel and Reimbursement and Record on Appeal at Public Expense (form CR-105) to show that you are indigent. You can get form CR-105 at any courthouse or county law library or online at www.courts.ca.gov/forms. The court will review this form to decide whether you are indigent.

If you are indigent, an official electronic recording of your case was made, and you show that you need a transcript, the court must provide you with a free transcript. As with reporter's transcripts, whether you need a transcript depends on the issues you are raising on appeal. If the issues you are raising on appeal include that there was not substantial evidence supporting the judgment, order, or other decision you are appealing or that there was misconduct in your case that harmed you, that is generally enough to show that you need a transcript. If you ask for a transcript, the court may ask you what issues you are raising on appeal and may decide that a statement on appeal or a transcript of only some of the oral proceedings will be a good enough record to consider the issues you are raising.

If the court finds that you are not indigent, it will send you a notice and you will have a chance to use a statement on appeal instead or take one of the other actions listed in rule 8.868.

Completion and delivery: Once you deposit the estimated cost of the transcript or the official electronic recording with the clerk or show the court you are indigent and need a transcript, the clerk will have the transcript or copy of the recording prepared. When the transcript is completed or the copy of the official electronic recording is prepared, the clerk will send the transcript or recording to the appellate division along with the clerk's transcript.

c. Statement on appeal

Description: A statement on appeal is a summary of the trial court proceedings approved by the trial court judge who conducted those proceedings (the term "judge" includes commissioners and temporary judges).

When available: If the trial court proceedings were not recorded either by a court reporter or by official electronic recording equipment, or if you do not want to use either of these forms of the record, you can choose ("elect") to use a statement on appeal as the record of the oral proceedings in the trial court (please note that it may take more of your time to prepare a statement on appeal than to use either a reporter's transcript or electronic recording, if they are available).

Contents: A statement on appeal must include:

- A statement of the points you (the appellant) are raising on appeal;
- A summary of the trial court's rulings and judgment; and
- A summary of the testimony of each witness and other evidence that is relevant to the issues you are raising on appeal.

(See rule 8.869 of the California Rules of Court for more information about what must be included in a statement on appeal and the procedures for preparing a statement. You can get this rule at any courthouse or county law library or online at www.courts.ca.gov/rules.htm.)

Preparing a proposed statement: If you choose to use a statement on appeal, you must prepare a proposed statement. If you are not represented by a lawyer, you must use Proposed Statement on Appeal (Misdemeanor) (form CR-135) to prepare your proposed statement. You can get form CR-135 at any courthouse or county law library or online at www.courts.ca.gov/forms.

Serving and filing a proposed statement: You must serve and file your proposed statement in the trial court within 20 days after you file your notice regarding the record of the oral proceedings. "Serve and file" means that you must:

- Have somebody over 18 years old who is not a party to the case—so not you—mail or deliver ("serve") a copy of the proposed statement to the prosecuting attorney and any other party in the way required by law.
- Make a record that the proposed statement has been served. This record is called a "proof of service." Proof of Service (Appellate Division) (form APP-109) can be used to make this record. The proof of service must show who served the proposed statement, who was served with the proposed statement, how the proposed statement was served (by mail or in person), and the date the proposed statement was served.

- File the original proposed statement and the proof of service with the trial court. You should make a copy of the proposed statement you are planning to file for your own records before you file it with the court. It is a good idea to bring or mail an extra copy of the proposed statement to the clerk when you file your original and ask the clerk to stamp this copy to show that the original has been filed.

You can get more information about how to serve court papers and proof of service from What Is Proof of Service? (form APP-109-INFO) and on the California Courts Online Self-Help Center at www.courts.ca.gov/selfhelp-serving.htm.

Review and modifications: The prosecuting attorney and any other party have 10 days from the date you serve your proposed statement to serve and file proposed changes (called "amendments") to this statement. The trial court judge then reviews both your proposed statement and any proposed amendments filed by the prosecuting attorney and any other party. The judge will then make or order you to make any corrections or modifications to the statement needed to make sure that the statement provides a complete and accurate summary of the relevant testimony and other evidence.

Completion and certification: If the judge makes or orders you to make any corrections or modifications to the proposed statement, the corrected or modified statement will be sent to you, the prosecuting attorney, and any other party for your review. If you disagree with anything in the judge's statement, you will have 10 days from the date the statement is sent you to serve and file objections to the statement. The judge then reviews any objections, makes any additional corrections to the statement, and certifies the statement as a complete and accurate summary of the relevant testimony and other evidence.

Sending the statement to appellate division: Once the trial court judge certifies the statement on appeal, the trial court clerk will send the statement to the appellate division along with the clerk's transcript.

15 Is there any other part of the record that needs to be sent to the appellate division?

Yes. There are two other parts of the official record that need to be sent to the appellate division:

- Documents filed in the trial court: The trial court clerk is responsible for preparing a record of the written documents filed in your case, called a "clerk's transcript," and sending this to the appellate division. (The documents the clerk must include in this transcript are listed in rule 8.861 of the California Rules of Court. You can get a copy of this rule at any courthouse or county law library or online at www.courts.ca.gov/rules.htm.)

- Exhibits submitted during trial: Exhibits, such as photographs, that were admitted in evidence, refused, or lodged (temporarily placed with the court) in the trial court are considered part of the record on appeal. If you want the appellate division to consider such an exhibit, however, you must ask the trial court clerk to send the original exhibit to the appellate division within 10 days after the last respondent's brief is filed in the appellate division. (See rule 8.870 of the California Rules of Court for more information about this procedure. You can get a copy of this rule at any courthouse or county law library or online at www.courts.ca.gov/rules.) Sometimes, the trial court returns an exhibit to a party at the end of the trial. If the trial court returned an exhibit to you or another party and you or the other party ask for the exhibit to be sent to the appellate division, the party who has the exhibit must deliver that exhibit to the appellate division as soon as possible.

16 What happens after the record is prepared?

As soon as the record of the oral proceeding is ready, the clerk of the trial court will send it to the appellate division along with the clerk's transcript. When the appellate division receives this record, it will send you a notice telling you when you must file your brief in the appellate division.

17 What is a brief?

A brief is a party's written description of the facts in the case, the law that applies, and the party's argument about the issues being appealed. If you are represented by a lawyer in your appeal, your lawyer will prepare your brief. If the appellate division has permitted you to represent yourself, you will have to prepare your brief yourself. You should read rules 8.880–8.891 of the California Rules of Court, which set out the requirements for preparing, serving, and filing briefs in misdemeanor appeals, including requirements for the format and length of those briefs. You can get copies of these rules at any courthouse or county law library or online at www.courts.ca.gov/rules.htm.

Contents: If you are the appellant (the party who is appealing), your brief, called the "appellant's opening brief," must clearly explain what you believe are the legal errors made in the trial court. Your brief must refer to the exact places in the clerk's transcript and the reporter's transcript (or other record of the oral proceedings) that support your argument. Remember that an appeal is not a new trial. The appellate division will not consider new evidence, such as the testimony of new witnesses or new exhibits, so do not include any new evidence in your brief.

Serving and filing: You must serve and file your brief in the appellate division by the deadline the court set in the notice it sent you, which is usually 30 days after the record is filed in the appellate division. "Serve and file" means that you must:

- Have somebody over 18 years old who is not a party to the case—so not you—mail or deliver ("serve") the brief to the respondent (the prosecuting agency) and any other party in the way required by law.
- Make a record that the brief has been served. This record is called a "proof of service." Proof of Service (Appellate Division) (form APP-109) can be used to make this record. The proof of service must show who served the brief, who was served with the brief, how the brief was served (by mail or in person), and the date the brief was served.
- File the original brief and the proof of service with the appellate division. You should make a copy of the brief you are planning to file for your own records before you file it with the court. It is a good idea to bring or mail an extra copy of the brief to the clerk when you file your original and ask the clerk to stamp this copy to show that the original has been filed.

You can get more information about how to serve court papers and proof of service from What Is Proof of Service? (form APP-109-INFO) and at www.courts.ca.gov/selfhelp-serving.htm.

If you do not file your brief by the deadline set by the appellate division, the court may dismiss your appeal.

18 What happens after I file my brief?

Within 30 days after you serve and file your brief, the respondent (the prosecuting agency) may, but is not required to, respond by serving and filing a respondent's brief. If the respondent does not file a brief, the appellant does not automatically win the appeal. The court will decide the appeal on the record, the appellant's brief, and any oral argument by the appellant.

If the respondent serves and files a brief, within 20 days after the respondent's brief was served, you may, but are not required to, serve and file another brief replying to the respondent's brief. This is called a "reply brief."

19 What happens after all the briefs have been filed?

Once all the briefs have been served and filed or the time to serve and file them has passed, the court will notify you of the date for oral argument in your case unless your case presents no arguable issues for the court to consider. If your case presents no arguable issues, the court will not hold oral argument.

20 What is oral argument?

"Oral argument" is the parties' chance to explain their arguments to the appellate division judges in person. You do not have to participate in oral argument if you do not want to; you can notify the appellate division that you want to "waive" (give up) oral argument by serving and filing a notice within 7 days after the notice of oral argument was sent by the court. You can use Notice of Waiver of Oral Argument (Misdemeanor) (form CR-138) to waive oral argument.

If all parties waive oral argument, and the appellate division approves the waiver and takes the oral argument off calendar, the judges will decide your appeal based on the briefs and the record that were submitted. But if one party waives oral argument and another party or parties do not, the appellate division will hold oral argument with any party or parties who choose to participate, including any party who asked to waive oral argument.

If you choose to participate in oral argument, each party will have up to 10 minutes for argument, unless the court orders otherwise. If the appellate division has permitted you to represent yourself, remember that the judges will already have read the briefs, so you do not need to read your brief to the judges. It is more helpful to tell the judges what you think is most important in your appeal or ask the judges if they have any questions you could answer.

21 What happens after oral argument?

After the oral argument is held (or all parties waive oral argument and the court approves the waiver), the judges of the appellate division will make a decision about your appeal. The appellate division has 90 days after oral argument (or the date its waiver was approved) to decide the appeal. The clerk of the court will mail you a notice of that decision.

22 What should I do if I want to give up my appeal?

If you decide you do not want to continue with your appeal, you must file a written document with the appellate division notifying it that you are giving up (this is called "abandoning") your appeal. You can use Abandonment of Appeal (Misdemeanor) (form CR-137) to file this notice in a misdemeanor case. You can get form CR-137 at any courthouse or county law library or online at www.courts.ca.gov/forms.htm.

If you decide not to continue your appeal and it is dismissed, you will (with only very rare exceptions) permanently give up the chance to raise any objections to your conviction, sentence, or other matter that you could have raised on the appeal. If you were released from custody with or without bail or your sentence or any probation conditions were stayed during the appeal, you may be required to start serving your sentence or complying with your probation conditions immediately after your appeal is dismissed.

NOTICE

Except in cases that raise no arguable issues under People v. Wende (1979) 25 Cal.3d 436, in all misdemeanor appeals, the court schedules oral argument. Parties may waive oral argument by filing a notice of waiver of oral argument within 7 days after the notice of oral argument is sent.

If all parties in the case waive oral argument, the court may vacate the oral argument and take it off the calendar. If the court vacates oral argument, you will receive notification from the court.

If not all parties waive oral argument, or if the court does not accept the waiver request, the court will not vacate oral argument and it will remain on the court's calendar. All parties will be able to participate in the oral argument, including any parties who previously requested a waiver.

2 Request to Waive Oral Argument (check (a) or (b)):

a. ☐ I am the appellant's attorney. I have read this form and I am requesting to waive oral argument. I understand that by signing this form, I am waiving the opportunity to appear in court and argue the case on behalf of my client. I have informed my client that I am waiving oral argument. I also understand that if all parties waive oral argument and the court accepts the waiver and takes the oral argument off the calendar, the court will decide the appeal based on the briefs and the record that were submitted.

b. ☐ The appellate division has permitted me to represent myself in this appeal. I have read this form and I am requesting to waive oral argument. I understand that by signing this form, I am waiving (giving up) the opportunity to appear in court and argue the case. I also understand that if all parties waive oral argument and the court accepts the waiver and takes the oral argument off the calendar, the court will decide the appeal based on the briefs and the record that were submitted.

1.	Criminal Appellate Section, Los Angeles City Attorney's Office by Kent J. Bullard Supervising Deputy City Attorney Los Angeles	AM	In light of variation in procedures and rules governing oral argument in appellate divisions throughout the state – for example, the Los Angeles Superior Court Appellate Division provides tentative rulings the afternoon before an oral argument calendar (see Super Ct. L.A. County, Local Rules, rule 9.7(e)), whereas some other appellate divisions apparently do not provide tentative rulings – each appellate division should be permitted to determine whether new provisions governing oral argument waivers will achieve the intended goal of efficiency, and thus any new statewide rule should include a provision allowing each appellate division to opt out of provisions such as the waiver provisions in proposed Rule 8.885(d).	The committee notes the commenter's agreement with the proposal if it is modified. The committee recognizes that appellate division procedures vary, but disagrees with making the waiver procedure optional. The proposed new provisions create a procedure for waiving oral argument in advance so that judges do not needlessly prepare for argument when the parties know ahead of time that they do not wish to argue. This does not preclude appellate divisions from issuing tentative rulings or developing other procedures that are not inconsistent with the rules of court.
2.	Joint Rules Subcommittee (JRS) of the Trial Court Presiding Judges Advisory Committee and the Court Executives Advisory Committee	AM	The JRS notes the following impact to court operations: • Proposed date for implementation is not feasible or is problematic. Given the potential for a number of new Rules of Court being implemented on the same timeline; it would be advisable to give trial courts more time to implement a rule change that affects due process rights in both limited civil and misdemeanor appeals.	The committee notes the commenter's agreement with the proposal if modified. Based on the response to a request for clarification, the committee understands that the comment regarding the proposed implementation date is not specific to this proposal. Rather, it is based on the broader issue of the number of rules that need to be implemented and the short time frames for implementation. The committee

That being said, individual appellate divisions may, in their discretion, grant a misdemeanor appellant's request for self-representation (but as there is no right to self-representation, a misdemeanor appellant may not merely "elect" to be self-represented). Specifically, correct/revise CR-131-INFO as follows:	The committee notes the commenter's agreement with the proposal if modified and appreciates the responses to questions presented in the invitation to comment. The committee thanks the commenter and has made limited revisions to the forms to clarify that self-representation in misdemeanor appeals is allowed only if the appellate division permits it. These are minor substantive changes that are unlikely to create controversy. (Rule 10.22(d).) Executive Summary

The Appellate Advisory Committee recommends amending the rule that governs the length of briefs in civil cases in the Court of Appeal to reduce the maximum length of petitions for rehearing and answers to those petitions from 14,000 words to 7,000 words for briefs produced on a computer, and from 50 pages to 25 pages for briefs produced on a typewriter. This change, which is based on suggestions from appellate practitioners to consider reducing word limits for all types of briefs filed in the Court of Appeal, is intended to establish limits on briefing that reflect the limited scope of petitions for rehearing in unlimited civil cases.

Recommendation

The Appellate Advisory Committee recommends that the Judicial Council, effective January 1, 2020:

1. Amend California Rules of Court, rule 8.204, to add a new paragraph providing for a word limit of 7,000 words and a page limit of 25 pages for petitions for rehearing and answers to those petitions; and

2. Amend rule 8.268, the rule that governs rehearing in the Court of Appeal, to cross-reference the maximum length provisions in rule 8.204 for the petition and answer.

Relevant Previous Council Action

In 2002, as part of a project to rewrite and reorganize the appellate rules, the Judicial Council added a word count as an alternative to a page count for measuring the length of a brief. The existing 50-page limit for a brief produced on a typewriter was retained, and the approximate equivalent of 14,000 words for a brief produced on a computer was added. The rule governing the contents and form of briefs in the Court of Appeal was renumbered in 2007. There is no other previous council action with respect to the length of briefs in the Court of Appeal that is relevant to this proposal.

Analysis/Rationale

The Appellate Advisory Committee recommends amending rule 8.204(c) to add new paragraph (5), providing for a word limit of 7,000 words and a page limit of 25 pages to reduce by 50 percent the permissible length of petitions for rehearing and answers to those petitions in unlimited civil appeals.[1] The new provision is intended to encourage brevity and concise, focused arguments; eliminate repetition; and set length limits that reflect the limited purpose of petitions for rehearing. Such petitions are appropriate to raise particular issues, such as a material omission or misstatement of fact or a material misstatement of the law in the court's decision, or the court's decision is based on an issue that was not raised or briefed by the parties, or the court lacked subject-matter jurisdiction. Conversely, a petition for rehearing is not an opportunity to reargue the case, raise arguments the parties did not address, or generally argue that the court reached the wrong result. The court already is familiar with the case, so the petition need not include a summary of the factual and procedural background of the case. For these reasons, the current limits seem to far exceed what is reasonably necessary.

The committee expects that reducing the permissible length of petitions for rehearing will assist courts by decreasing the time Court of Appeal justices must spend to review these petitions. The reduced limits may also save litigants time, effort, and expense. In the rare instance when longer briefing may be necessary, rule 8.204 provides, and will continue to provide, that, "[o]n application, the presiding justice may permit a longer brief for good cause."

To ensure that litigants are aware of the new word and page limits, the committee also recommends amending rule 8.268, which governs rehearing in civil appeals in the Court of Appeal. Currently, rule 8.268(b)(3) provides: "The petition and answer must comply with the relevant provisions of rule 8.204." The proposed amendment would refer specifically to the new length limits for petitions for rehearing in rule 8.204(c)(5).

[1] The proposed new length limits for briefs would not apply to rehearing in criminal cases or juvenile cases. (See rules 8.360(b) and 8.412(a)(3).) The new limits also would not apply to rehearing in limited civil and misdemeanor appeals. (See rule 8.883(b).)

Policy implications

The committee has identified no significant policy implications associated with the recommended rule amendments.

Comments

This proposal was circulated for public comment from April 11 to June 10, 2019, as part of the regular spring comment cycle. Five individuals and organizations submitted comments on this proposal. All five commenters agreed with the proposed changes. A chart with the full text of the comments received and the committee's responses is attached at pages 6–9.

Alternatives considered

Under a broader original project description on the committee's annual agenda, the committee considered whether to propose reduced length limits for other types of briefs in civil appeals.[2] However, the committee recognizes that the topic is complicated and implicates a number of competing concerns. The committee would want to further consider the issues before making any such proposal in the future.

The committee also considered not proposing any change to the length of briefs. The committee rejected this option because the benefits of reducing the length of petitions for rehearing—reducing time spent by justices to review them and resources expended by the parties to prepare them—seem clear. Any downsides—a possible increase in applications to file an overlong brief—seem minimal.

In addition, the committee considered where to place the new word and page limits—in rule 8.204 regarding briefs or rule 8.268 regarding rehearing. There were good reasons for both options, but the committee decided to include the new length limits in rule 8.204 because "briefs" are defined to include petitions for rehearing in rule 8.10, and litigants are accustomed to finding format requirements for briefs in rule 8.204. To ensure that litigants who are seeking or opposing rehearing are aware of the new word limit for briefs, the committee recommends adding a specific reference in rule 8.268 to the new length limits in rule 8.204.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

The committee anticipates no significant fiscal or operational impacts and no costs of implementation other than informing courts and litigants of the new rule amendments.

[2] The topic is timely because, effective July 1, 2019, the U.S. Supreme Court adopted rules reducing the length of merits briefs filed by the parties, excluding reply briefs, from 15,000 words to 13,000 words. The Court retained the existing 6,000-word limit for reply briefs. See U.S. Supreme Court Rule 33(g)(v)–(vii), at https://www.supremecourt.gov/filingandrules/2019RulesoftheCourt.pdf.

The Academy consists of more than 100 California appellate lawyers with substantial experience in the briefing and argument of appeals in the California court system. The Academy has a vital interest in ensuring that the rules governing appellate practice promote the efficient and fair administration of justice at the appellate level. The Academy supports the proposed rule change, which shortens the current word limit for petitions for rehearing and answers in unlimited civil appeals. Presently petitions for rehearing and answers can run to 14,000 words without leave of court, the same length as briefs on the merits. That may lead some practitioners and unrepresented parties to the erroneous conclusion that a rehearing arguments may typically be as detailed as the merits arguments or even to repeat merits arguments that the court has already considered. 			Reducing the length limitation to 7,000 words confirms what is already known to experienced practitioners: that rehearing petitions should be focused and not mere repetition of the merits briefing. Even in a complex case, rarely would a rehearing petition need to be longer than 7,000 words but, in those unusual cases, permission may be sought to file a longer petition. We appreciate the opportunity to present these comments for consideration by the Judicial Council.
2.	Orange County Bar Association by Deirdre Kelly President Newport Beach	A	The Orange County Bar Association believes that the answer to both requests for specific comments is "yes." Executive Summary

The Appellate Advisory Committee and the Information Technology Advisory Committee propose revising several rules of the California Rules of Court to make uniform the formatting guidelines for electronic documents filed in appellate courts. The rules currently lack various requirements established by local rule. Moreover, most local rules differ in their requirements and scope. By establishing uniform rules for all appellate courts, this proposal will ease the burden on filers caused by differing formatting rules. The proposal originated from a suggestion by a member of the Joint Appellate Technology Subcommittee of the Appellate Advisory Committee and the Information Technology Advisory Committee.

Recommendation

The Appellate Advisory Committee and the Information Technology Advisory Committee recommend that the Judicial Council, effective January 1, 2020, amend California Rules of Court:

1. Rule 8.40, to limit its scope to cover requirements for documents filed in paper form;

2. Rule 8.44(c), to:

    - Allow a court to require by local rule the submission of an electronic copy of a paper filing; and
    - Delete references to local court requirements for electronically filed documents, because e-filing is now mandatory and the format of electronic documents is addressed in rule 8.74;

3. Rule 8.46, to update a cross-reference to rule 8.40 (paper format) and to add a cross-reference to rule 8.74 (electronic format);

4. Rule 8.71, to impose mandatory electronic filing with some limited exceptions, including those established by the Supreme Court Rules Regarding Electronic Filing;

5. Rule 8.72, to set out the e-filing responsibilities of courts and electronic filers, and to add an advisory committee comment regarding an electronic filer's responsibilities not to harm the court's electronic filing system or other users of that system;

6. Rule 8.74, to establish uniform formatting rules for electronic documents filed with the appellate courts, and to implement formatting requirements drawn from some best practices developed among the various appellate courts through their local rules and from courts' experience reviewing electronic documents. The amendments to rule 8.74 prioritize uniformity, readability, and user-friendly formatting requirements, as follows:

    - Subdivision (a) addresses format and formatting requirements for all electronic documents;
    - Subdivision (b) sets out additional formatting requirements for documents prepared for electronic filing in the reviewing court, such as font, line spacing, margins, page alignment, and hyperlinks;
    - Subdivision (c) specifies formatting requirements for certain documents, including briefs, requests for judicial notice, appendixes, agreed statements and settled statements, reporters' transcripts and clerks' transcripts, exhibits, and sealed and confidential records;
    - Subdivision (d) provides that this rule prevails over other formatting provisions;

7. Rules 8.77 and 8.78, to make technical changes to existing cross-references;

8. Rule 8.204(b), to provide formatting requirements for briefs filed in paper form; and

9. Rule 8.252, to establish the procedure for seeking judicial notice of a matter, and to reflect the presumption of electronic filing unless an exemption applies.

The text of the amended rules is attached at pages 13–23.

Relevant Previous Council Action

Over the past three decades, the Judicial Council has regularly acted to facilitate the integration of technology in the work of the courts. For instance, the Judicial Council sponsored legislation in 1999 authorizing electronic filing and service in the trial courts. (Sen. Bill 367; Stats. 1999, ch. 514.) It first adopted implementing rules for the trial courts, effective January 1, 2003. The council expanded those rules in 2013 to address mandatory electronic filing and service in response to the enactment of Assembly Bill 2073 (Stats 2012; ch. 320). In addition, the Judicial Council has adopted rules extending electronic filing and service to the appellate courts, first in 2010 as a pilot project in the Court of Appeal, Second Appellate District, and then in 2012 to all appellate courts. Effective January 1, 2016, the Judicial Council adopted an initial round of technical rule amendments to address language in the rules that was incompatible with statutes and rules governing electronic filing and service and with e-business practices in general.

Analysis/Rationale

Although electronic filing is now common practice in California's appellate courts, the standards and requirements in the courts vary widely, consisting of a patchwork of differing local rules and formatting guidelines. The intent of these proposed amendments is to foster uniformity among the courts. The committees looked for best practices already in place in the appellate courts and proposed changes based upon the courts' experiences to date with electronic filings. The amendments are intended to improve legibility, readability, and functionality of electronic filings on monitors, screens, and ebook readers used by the bench, bar, and public. Finally, the amendments to rules 8.40, 8.44, 8.46, 8.71, 8.72, 8.74, 8.77, 8.78, 8.204, and 8.252 aim to achieve internal consistency—to the extent practicable—between existing rules for paper filings and electronic filings.

Policy implications

Because the appellate courts implemented electronic filing at different times, the rules governing electronically filed documents differ greatly between the districts. For the benefit of the courts, practitioners, and litigants, this proposal institutes mandatory electronic filing, and establishes consistent statewide formatting requirements for the appellate courts.

Comments

In total, 18 individuals, organizations, court staff, and trial and appellate courts submitted comments on this proposal. Four commenters indicated that they agreed with the proposal, 2 indicated that they agreed with the proposal if modified, and 12 did not indicate a position on the proposal but suggested changes or asked for additional clarity or consistency with other rules. (Four of the 12 indicated that they were against one specific provision: the proposed ban on Times New Roman font.) Several comments were extensive and included responses to the questions asked by the committees and suggestions for modifying the proposal. Broadly speaking, the comments addressed three areas: (1) rule language, scope, and clarity; (2) technology; and (3) page layout and content.

A chart of the comments received and the committees' responses is attached at pages 24–59.

Rule language, scope, and clarity

Rule 8.40's exceptions and cross-references to other rules. Two commenters asked for clarity on rule 8.40(a), which as circulated for public comment addressed the form of filed documents. One commenter noted that the provision suggests the existence of exceptions to mandatory electronic filing but that the rule does not reference any specific exceptions. Another commenter indicated that subdivision (a) requires compliance with "the relevant format provisions" of this rule and other rules, but that it is not entirely clear which other format provisions are relevant to electronic filing.

Because the proposal used already existing rules to implement uniform formatting, subdivision (a) was duplicative of several other rules. Under the circumstances, the committees recommend that rule 8.40 be amended to reflect only cover requirements for paper documents, thereby eliminating potentially confusing cross-references to the rules concerning mandatory electronic filing, exceptions, and format provisions for paper documents. The committees also recommend amending rules 8.74 and 8.204 to make the few remaining cross-references easier to discern.

Rule 8.74's scope and complexity. Several commenters observed that, as circulated for public comment, rule 8.74(a) (Format of electronic documents) applied to all electronic documents, and as a result it imposed formatting requirements on documents not prepared for filing in the first instance in a reviewing court. The commenters noted that such documents—including appendixes, transcripts, trial exhibits, and other documents—likely will already have margins, text, and line spacing that cannot, or should not, be reformatted to comply with rule 8.74. The commenters suggested modifying the proposal to make clear that only certain parts of rule 8.74(a) apply to all documents filed in electronic form. The e-filing working group staff of the Supreme Court commented that the text-searchable portable document format (PDF) provision set out in rule 8.74(a)(1) required e-filers to convert rather than scan documents to ensure text searchability, but staff noted that certain documents, including handwritten documents, forms, and diagrams, may not be amenable to being "converted" by a means other than scanning, or if they can be converted to PDF without scanning a paper document, the PDFs may nevertheless not be text searchable.

Based on these comments, the committees propose expanding the proposal's exception in subdivision (a)(1) for documents that an electronic filer possesses only in paper form to include documents that cannot practicably be converted to a text-searchable file, for example, if the document is entirely or substantially handwritten, a photograph, or a graphic that is not primarily text-based. To clarify this allowance, the committees recommend adopting an advisory committee comment explaining subdivision (a)(1)'s exceptions. (See the comment to amended rule 8.74(a)(1), at page 21.)

The committees also recommend adding a new subdivision (b), "Additional formatting requirements applicable to documents prepared for electronic filing in the first instance in a reviewing court." As its title indicates, new subdivision (b) outlines additional formatting requirements for documents prepared for electronic filing in the reviewing court, whereas subdivision (a) sets out the essential formatting requirements applicable to all electronic documents. As modified after public comment, the rule treats documents prepared for filing in the reviewing court differently from documents created before the appeal, but it establishes several baseline formatting requirements applicable to all electronic documents. The committees recommend including an advisory committee comment explaining subdivision (b)'s scope. (See the comment to amended rule 8.74(b), at page 21.)

In response to public comments asking for additional clarity, the committees further propose adding to rule 8.74(b) each of the relevant formatting provisions in rules 8.40(c) and 8.204(b). The proposal circulated for public comment relied on cross-references for these requirements, which commenters found confusing. By adding each of the relevant formatting provisions to rule 8.74, and expressly limiting the application of rules 8.40 and 8.204(b) to briefs and petitions filed in paper form, the rules will more clearly state those formatting requirements applicable to electronic filings and those applicable to paper filings.

Sealed materials, manual filings, and paper copies. The e-filing working group staff of the Supreme Court identified a potential need for clarification in the provision concerning sealed and confidential records. Specifically, the staff offered more consistent terminology and suggested expanding the provision to address both the filing of pages that have redactions and the filing of documents with multiple pages omitted. One bar association commenter suggested that more detailed instructions with respect to manual filings, electronic filing of sealed materials, and delivery of paper copies of electronic filings would be helpful.

The committees recommend implementing the suggestions from Supreme Court staff with minor changes. With respect to the bar association's request for more guidance on these issues, the committees will retain these comments for future consideration. If courts' and e-filers' experiences with electronic filing warrant action, the committee could address these provisions in the future. In some instances, the committees expect courts will continue to publish formatting tips and guidelines supplementing the uniform rules, and these publications may address the commenter's concerns.

Technical amendments. Four rules—one addressed in the invitation to comment (rule 8.204) and three others (rules 8.46, 8.77, and 8.78)—require technical amendments because of existing cross-references. The proposed changes to rule 8.40 would make existing cross-references in rules 8.46 and 8.204 concerning cover requirements inaccurate. The committees recommend minor changes to update those existing cross-references, including adding a cross-reference to rule 8.74(a) for documents filed in electronic form. Technical amendments to rules 8.77(a)(3) and 8.78(a)(2)(B) are necessary because of moving the electronic-filer-responsibilities provision into rule 8.72(b)(2) from rule 8.74(a)(4).

Suggested changes to rules outside the proposal. Two commenters noted that other rules related to electronic filing were not part of the proposal. One commenter suggested updating all existing provisions relating to electronic filing, including requirements for signatures (rules 8.42 and 8.75), general provisions for sealed and confidential records (rule 8.45), electronic service (rule 8.78), court order for electronic service (rule 8.79), form of the record (rule 8.144), and new authorities (rule 8.254). The comment from the e-filing working group staff of the Supreme Court noted that the proposal does not amend rule 8.78(a)(2)(B)'s provision concerning consent to electronic service. The equivalent rule for the trial court, rule 2.251(b)(1)(B), was recently amended to be in compliance with newly enacted section 1010.6 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which, at least in the trial courts, no longer permits use of the act of electronic filing to serve as consent. The committees recommend addressing this issue in part by adding rule 8.74(a)(9)(A), which would provide that "inclusion of a fax number or email address on any electronic document does not constitute consent to service by fax or email unless otherwise provided by law."

Because under California Rules of Court, rule 10.22, substantive changes to a rule need to circulate for public comment before being recommended for amendment by the Judicial Council, the committees will retain the commenters' suggestions concerning other rules in title 8 for future consideration. At this time, the committees recommend only the technical amendment to update the existing cross-reference in rule 8.78. The committees will consider possible changes to rule 8.78's consent and electronic service provisions during the winter rule cycle.[1] As to rules 8.42, 8.45, 8.75, 8.79, 8.144, and 8.254, the committee will consider additional changes if experience with electronic filing warrants amendments to these other rules.

Technology

File-size restrictions. Several commenters who expressed support for the proposal questioned rule 8.74's 25-megabytes file-size restriction. These commenters also asked whether the 300-page limit for certain appendixes was necessary if it is possible for e-filers to prepare those volumes within the 25-megabytes file-size restriction, and questioned the wisdom of requiring manual filing for filings containing over five volumes when only one court has such a volume limitation in place.

The committees considered deferring action on the file-size restriction and leaving the limits to the courts. However, the committees recommend ultimately retaining the proposal's 25-megabytes file-size restriction. The principal reason not to defer action on the file-size restriction is that the 25-megabytes limit is already uniform across the state by local rule. Concerns were raised about establishing a rule with a file-size limit when capacity may change. Although there are some drawbacks to codifying technological parameters such as file size when technological changes could outpace the Judicial Council's rules cycles, ultimately, the motivating purpose of this proposal is uniformity. That goal would be lost if each court were permitted to set unique file-size limits on e-filers. Although commenters suggested that an increased file size might be possible, none indicated that the existing 25-megabytes restriction was unworkable or regularly compromised their electronic filings.

[1] California Rules of Court, rule 8.78(a)(2)(B) still provides: "The act of electronic filing shall be deemed to show that the party agrees to accept service at the electronic service address that the party has furnished to the court under rule [8.72(b)(2)], unless the party serves a notice on all parties and files the notice with the court that the party does not accept electronic service and chooses instead to be served paper copies at an address specified in the notice."

In response to the comments, the committees made two minor changes to the proposal concerning multiple-volume filings and manual filings. First, the committees modified rule 8.74(a)(5) to permit electronic filings that exceed the 300-page limit applicable to certain types of documents (e.g., rule 8.124(d)(1) (appendixes), rule 8.144(b)(6) (clerks' and reporters' transcripts), and rule 8.144(g) (agreed or settled statements)). Because an electronic filing may contain multiple documents or volumes, the proposal would allow electronic filings comprising multiple volumes—each 300 pages or fewer—as long as each component complies with those rules' page limitations and the electronic filing does not exceed 25 megabytes. The proposed rule, as modified following public comment, acknowledges the 300-page limit for certain documents and provides that the individual components of an electronic filing must comply with the page limit of those other rules. Second, as the commenters note, only one court requires manual filing when an electronic filer seeks to file an electronic document consisting of more than 5 files. The committees recommend increasing the manual-filing restriction to 10 files because filings consisting of more than 5 files are common in complex cases. Under existing limits in the Appellate Court Case Management System (ACCMS), a 10-volume limit would not exceed the file-size restrictions currently in place, and the increase from 5 to 10 will relieve electronic filers from the burden of manual filing in more cases.

Color component prohibition. Two commenters who agreed with the proposal if modified asked whether rule 8.74's prohibition on color components was necessary in light of existing technology, and advocated for color components to be permitted if possible. These commenters emphasized that color components can be persuasive in appellate advocacy. One commenter noted that only one appellate district prohibits filings with color components. The invitation to comment erroneously indicated that color components were not supported in ACCMS. The committees have since confirmed that color components on their own do not present a problem for ACCMS. Instead, color components necessarily increase file size, and increased file size affects loading time. With this new information, the committees recommend permitting electronic documents with color components as long as they do not exceed the file-size limit of 25 megabytes, as provided by amended rule 8.74(a)(8). Although the color cover provisions of rule 8.40, as modified, apply only to paper filings, the committees recommend expressly prohibiting color covers for electronic documents to avoid unnecessarily large file sizes where color covers are not required.

Based on the public comments and the allowance for electronic filings with color components, the committees modified the proposal to delete the references to PowerPoint and "documents containing photographs or any color component" in rules 8.74(a)'s manual filing provision. The provision would still specify a format for manually filed photographs, because color photographs may require manual filing on electronic media if the file exceeds 25 megabytes. At the Joint Appellate Technology Subcommittee meeting on July 1, 2019, subcommittee members expressed concerns about original electronic files when an e-filer has to convert the format of an electronic media file for filing. Based on this concern, the committees modified the proposal to add a provision that requires an electronic filer to retain the original electronic media file if it must be converted to a required format for manual filing.

Filing problems. One commenter requested that rule 8.72's court-responsibilities provision speak to filing deadlines. The commenter asked that courts be required to address deadlines or extensions of time in any notice required by the provision. The committees have declined to add provisions concerning deadlines that add responsibilities for the courts because, under rule 8.71, filing a document electronically does not alter any filing deadline. Unless a court elects to provide otherwise in a notice to a party, it would be incumbent on the party or other person adversely affected by a filing problem, on receipt of notice of the problem, to seek relief from the court. Because existing rules already address exemptions from electronic filing (rule 8.71(d)) and a clerk's rejection of documents for filing based on noncompliance with applicable filing requirements (rule 8.77(b)), the committees chose to eliminate the proposed provision circulated as 8.74(d), which also addressed these issues. If future experience supports reallocating responsibility from electronic filers to the courts, the committees will reconsider the provisions concerning deadlines and rejection or correction of noncompliant electronic filings.

Virus and harmful computer code requirement. The appellate practice section of a bar association protested that rule 8.72(b)'s "all reasonable steps" requirement for electronic filers was likely to cause confusion.[2] The commenter suggested that rule 8.72(b)(1) be rewritten to state that "[e]ach electronic filer must: (1) Comply with all electronic filing requirements in these rules and not intentionally file any document containing computer code, including viruses, that might be harmful to the court's electronic filing system and to other users of that system."

Based on this comment, the committees recommend clarifying an e-filer's responsibilities with an advisory committee comment advising electronic filers that an absence of intent to harm is insufficient to comply with the subdivision. The committees did not want inadvertently to condone willful neglect or recklessness, but rather want to encourage e-filers to take affirmative steps to avoid causing harm. The committees recommend giving an example of a reasonable step electronic filers can take to ensure that a filing does not contain harmful computer code in the advisory committee comment to subdivision (b)(1).

Hyperlinks. In response to the questions presented in the invitation to comment, some commenters indicated that "hyperlinks" might not be commonly understood, but one court stated that the term is sufficiently clear and does not warrant further explication. Another commenter noted that rule 8.74 encourages the use of hyperlinks, but that the rule was drafted in a manner suggesting that hyperlinks are used only to link to legal authority, not to exhibits and appendixes.

Based on these comments, the committees recommend amending the hyperlinks provision to include appendixes and exhibits. (See Amended Cal. Rules of Court, rule 8.74(b)(5).) With respect to defining the term hyperlinks, the committees concluded that concerns about the clarity of the term were unwarranted because the term is reasonably well known and because use of

[2] The relevant provision of rule 8.72 would provide: "Each electronic filer must: [¶] (1) Take all reasonable steps to ensure that the filing does not contain computer code, including viruses, that might be harmful to the court's electronic filing system and to other users of that system."

hyperlinks is encouraged but not required. The committees, however, support the courts' publishing instructions on how to create hyperlinks.

Several comments addressed formatting standards, including page numbering, bookmarking, font, line spacing, page alignment, and margins. With respect to documents prepared for original filing in the reviewing courts, several commenters expressed preferences or concerns about font styles and size, footnote size, use of emphasis, line spacing, page alignment, and margins.

Page numbering. The proposed pagination rule, rule 8.74(a)(2), is consistent with the requirements set by local rules around the state. Despite the existing uniformity, one commenter advocated for the use of roman numerals for prefatory pages, such as tables of contents and tables of authorities. According to the commenter, using separate pagination for tables is superior to consecutive page numbering that the courts currently require by local rule because the pagination of the main document (e.g., brief or petition) can be finalized before any tables are created. The committees considered this comment but declined to allow for separate numbering systems for prefatory pages and the main document. As a court commenter supporting the pagination requirement noted, consecutive, all-arabic pagination allows courts and parties to accurately locate a cited page and ensures that page citations are consistent throughout a document. The utility of matching page numbers to an electronic page counter justifies any burden on electronic filers imposed by the pagination requirement. The committees understand that, at least at present, an electronic page counter cannot be reset to match the page number when different page numbering systems are employed in a document. The committees considered allowing e-filers to place tables at the end of a document to avoid problems filers may face when they create tables of contents and authorities under this pagination rule. The committees maintained the provision as circulated, because the proposed pagination rule has been in place for some time by local rule and changing the placement of tables would be a significant change that was not presented for public comment.

Bookmarking. Commenters uniformly wrote in favor of requiring bookmarks in electronic documents. Two commenters, however, suggested relaxing the proposed requirements. One commenter asked for an exception to the bookmarking requirement for shorter documents—like requests for extensions of time—where bookmarks might not be as helpful to readers. Another commenter requested that the technical requirement for setting bookmarks to retain a reader's selected zoom setting be voluntary, instead of mandatory, because existing software requires several mouse clicks to set each and every bookmark. The committees considered these requests but chose not to change the bookmarking provision. Creating bookmarks for shorter documents will not be labor-intensive, and if the zoom-level requirement were merely voluntary, many e-filers would rely on default settings that do not preserve a reader's preferred view. Although the bookmarking requirements will require e-filers to spend additional time preparing their documents for filing, the utility of bookmarks for readers outweighs the burdens placed on e-filers.

Font. As circulated for public comment, the proposed amendments to rule 8.74 required a proportionally spaced serif font such as Century Schoolbook and expressly prohibited the use of Times New Roman. The proposal came from the Court of Appeal, Second Appellate District's local rule, which seeks to promote readability. Four comments against the prohibition on Times New Roman were received, and two more commenters questioned whether the prohibition on this particular font, which itself is a proportionally spaced serif font, was necessary. Just one commenter supported banning Times New Roman, but that commenter suggested that if Times New Roman were not permitted, filers who do not have Century Schoolbook font installed may choose an even less legible font. Based on these comments, the committees removed the proposal's prohibition on Times New Roman. However, the committees retained the proposal's stated preference for Century Schoolbook, because it is considered to be one of the most readable fonts and is preferred by most appellate judges in the state.

One commenter asked why the rule required 13-point font, instead of 14-point font. Another commenter suggested that footnote size be set at 12-point instead of 13-point font. The local rules of all six appellate districts and the Supreme Court require a 13-point font for body text and footnotes. In light of the existing uniform standard, the committees declined to modify the proposal based on the comments concerning font size.

Several commenters requested that sans-serif fonts be allowed, and one commenter asked that use of all capitals in headings be prohibited because text in all caps is virtually unreadable. To promote readability, the committees recommend permitting use of sans-serif fonts in headings, subheadings, and captions and prohibiting the use of all capitals for emphasis. The committees considered but did not endorse the commenter's request to prohibit all caps in headings, where they are regularly used in short headings like "Introduction," "Discussion," and "Conclusion." If experience shows that practitioners are using all caps for longer headings that are difficult to read, the committees will revisit the issue.

Line Spacing. One commenter noted that rule 8.74's 1-1/2 line-spacing requirement is unclear, especially if read in conjunction with rule 8.204(b)(5), which defines single spaced as "six lines to a vertical inch." The committees modified the proposal to identify the requirement as "1.5 spacing," rather than "1-1/2 spacing," because word processors use a decimal to define the line spacing option between single-spaced and double-spaced. Additionally, as noted above, the proposal has since been modified to make rules 8.74 and 8.204(b) now stand alone, eliminating the inconsistency identified by the commenter. To the extent the commenter urged the committee to repeal the definition of single-spaced in the provision applicable to paper documents, the committees note that six lines to a vertical inch is a measurement for typewriters. Although line spacing on word processers can be set in various ways, typewriters have greater mechanical limitations. The committees anticipate that those seeking to file in paper form rather than electronically will frequently prepare their documents using a typewriter, and as a result, this archaic provision will continue to be instructive.

Page alignment. One commenter asked why rule 8.74 prohibits full-page justification and requested that the formatting rules allow for full justification with hyphenation. The committees considered this comment but declined to modify the proposal's requirement for left-aligned text. The rule was taken from the Second Appellate District's electronic formatting guidelines, which recognize that left-aligned text is easier to read than justified text.

Margins. A commenter noted that Microsoft Word uses default margins of 1-inch, and wondered whether future technologies like the Transcript Assembly Program might allow for 1-inch margins in electronic filings. Based on this and other comments, and as discussed above, the committees modified the proposal to clarify that documents not originally prepared for electronic filing in appellate courts such that the margin requirements for clerks' and reporters' transcripts are not directly affected by rule 8.74's margin requirements. At present, only one appellate district requires 1-1/2 inch margins on all sides. The committees also modified the proposal to provide for 1-inch margins on the top and bottom, so that paper and electronic documents have the same margin requirements. The committees retained the proposed 1-1/2 inch left and right margins because wider side margins allow readers additional room for notations, both on paper and in most annotation software for electronic documents. The committees decided to prioritize the readability and usability of a document (especially briefs and petitions) over the default settings of Microsoft Word, which Microsoft may change in the future and which users can adjust on their own. The committees will consider in the future margin requirements for transcripts after courts have more experience with mandatory electronic filing under the uniform rules, as well as if technological changes warrant revision.

Alternatives considered

This proposal initially focused on rules for exhibits and bookmarking, but was expanded in scope to include comprehensive formatting requirements for documents filed in electronic form. In addition to the initial focus and the alternatives considered in response to the public comments, the committees considered deferring action, but determined that the experience of the Supreme Court and the Courts of Appeal thus far warranted action. The committees concluded that the proposed changes were necessary to (1) institute mandatory electronic filing with limited exceptions, (2) make the appellate rules across the state consistent, and (3) eliminate confusion for appellate court litigants and practitioners who presently must comply with unique formatting requirements in each appellate district. The committees concluded that the proposed changes were necessary to give guidance and direction to e-filers, and to clarify the format requirements for documents filed in paper and electronic form.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

The proposed rules are intended to make electronic formatting rules consistent in the appellate courts. The committees expect efforts will be needed to amend local rules to harmonize them with the amended rules.[3] The appellate courts likely will incur some cost to train staff on the new rules and the procedures arising from them. No other costs or implementation challenges are anticipated.

[3] The Joint Rules Subcommittee of the Trial Court Presiding Judges Advisory Committee and Court Executives Advisory Committee expressed support for the proposal but raised a concern about the proposal's impact on court operations, namely the time needed to amend local rules. No stakeholders from the Courts of Appeal answered the timing question, so the committees expect that the appellate courts will have adequate time to amend their local rules before the January 2020 effective date.

(1) The court will publish, in both electronic form and print form~~ats~~, the court's electronic filing requirements.

~~(b) Problems with electronic filing~~

(2) If the court is aware of a problem that impedes or precludes electronic filing, it must promptly take reasonable steps to provide notice of the problem.

(b) Responsibilities of electronic filer

Each electronic filer must:

(2) Furnish one or more electronic service addresses, in the manner specified by the court, at which the electronic filer agrees to accept service; and

(3) Immediately provide the court and all parties with any change to the electronic filer's electronic service address.

Advisory Committee Comment

Subdivision (b)(1). One example of a reasonable step an electronic filer may take is to use a commercial virus scanning program. Compliance with this subdivision requires more than an absence of intent to harm the court's electronic filing system or other users' systems.

Rule 8.74. ~~Responsibilities of electronic filer~~ Format of electronic documents

~~(a) Conditions of filing~~

~~Each electronic filer must:~~

~~(1) Comply with any court requirements designed to ensure the integrity of electronic filing and to protect sensitive personal information;~~

~~(2) Furnish information that the court requires for case processing;~~

~~(3) Take all reasonable steps to ensure that the filing does not contain computer code, including viruses, that might be harmful to the court's electronic filing system and to other users of that system;~~

~~(4) Furnish one or more electronic service addresses, in the manner specified by the court, at which the electronic filer agrees to accept service; and~~

~~(5) Immediately provide the court and all parties with any change to the electronic filer's electronic service address.~~

~~(b) Format of documents to be filed electronically~~

~~(1) A document that is filed electronically with the court must be in a format specified by the court unless it cannot be created in that format.~~

~~(2) The format adopted by a court must meet the following minimum requirements:~~

~~(A) The format must be text-searchable while maintaining original document formatting.~~

~~(B) The software for creating and reading documents must be in the public domain or generally available at a reasonable cost.~~

~~(C) The printing of documents must not result in the loss of document text, format, or appearance.~~

~~(4) If a document is filed electronically under the rules in this article and cannot be formatted to be consistent with a formatting rule elsewhere in the California Rules of Court, the rules in this article prevail.~~

(a) Formatting requirements applicable to all electronic documents

in both paper form and electronic form, the pagination in both versions must comply with this paragraph.

(3) Bookmarking: An electronic bookmark is a descriptive text link that appears in the bookmarks panel of an electronic document. Each electronic document must include an electronic bookmark to each heading, subheading, and the first page of any component of the document, including any table of contents, table of authorities, petition, verification, memorandum, declaration, certificate of word count, certificate of interested entities or persons, proof of service, exhibit, or attachment. Each electronic bookmark must briefly describe the item to which it is linked. For example, an electronic bookmark to a heading must provide the text of the heading, and an electronic bookmark to an exhibit or attachment must include the letter or number of the exhibit or attachment and a brief description of the exhibit or attachment. An electronic appendix must have bookmarks to the indexes and to the first page of each separate exhibit or attachment. Exhibits or attachments within an exhibit or attachment must be bookmarked. All bookmarks must be set to retain the reader's selected zoom setting.

(4) Protection of sensitive information: Electronic filers must comply with rules 1.201, 8.45, 8.46, 8.47, and 8.401 regarding the protection of sensitive information, except for those requirements exclusively applicable to paper form.

(5) Size and multiple files: An electronic filing may not be larger than 25 megabytes. This rule does not change the limitations on word count or number of pages otherwise established by the California Rules of Court for documents filed in the court. Although certain provisions in the California Rules of Court require volumes of no more than 300 pages (see, e.g., rules 8.124(d)(1), 8.144(b)(6), 8.144(g)), an electronic filing may exceed 300 pages so long as its individual components comply with the 300-page volume requirement and the electronic filing does not exceed 25 megabytes. If a document exceeds the 25-megabyte file-size limitation, the electronic filer must submit the document in more than one file, with each file 25 megabytes or less. The first file must include a master chronological and alphabetical index stating the contents for all files. Each file must have a cover page stating (a) the file number for that file and the total number of files for that document, (b) the volumes contained in that file, and (c) the page numbers contained in that file. (For example: File 2 of 4, Volumes 3–4, pp. 301–499.) In addition, each file must be paginated consecutively across all files in the document, including the cover pages for each file. (For example, if the first file ends on page 300, the cover of the second file must be page 301.) If a multiple-file document is submitted to the court in both electronic form and paper form, the cover pages for each file must be included in the paper documents.

(6) Manual Filing:

(A) When an electronic filer seeks to file an electronic document consisting of more than 10 files, or when the document cannot or should not be electronically filed in multiple files, or when electronically filing the document would cause undue hardship, the document must not be electronically filed but must be manually filed with the court on an electronic medium such as a flash drive, DVD, or compact disc (CD). When an electronic filer files with the court one or more documents on an electronic medium, the electronic filer must electronically file, on the same day, a "manual filing notification" notifying the court and the parties that one or more documents have been filed on electronic media, explaining the reason for the manual filing. The electronic media must be served on the parties in accordance with the requirements for service of paper documents. To the extent practicable, each document or file on electronic media must comply with the format requirements of this rule.

(B) Electronic media files such as audio or video must be manually filed. Audio files must be filed in .wav or mp3 format. Video files must be filed in .avi or mp4 format.

(C) If manually filed, photographs must be filed in .jpg, .png, .tif, or .pdf format.

(D) If an original electronic media file is converted to a required format for manual filing, the electronic filer must retain the original.

(7) Page size: All documents must have a page size of 8-1/2 by 11 inches.

(8) Color: An electronic document with a color component may be electronically filed or manually filed on electronic media, depending on its file size. An electronic document must not have a color cover.

(9) Cover or first-page information:

(A) Except as provided in (B), the cover—or first page, if there is no cover—of every electronic document filed in a reviewing court must include the name, mailing address, telephone number, fax number (if available), email address (if available), and California State Bar number of each attorney filing or joining in the document, or of the party if he or she is unrepresented. The inclusion of a fax number or email address on any electronic document does not constitute consent to service by fax or email unless otherwise provided by law.

(B) If more than one attorney from a law firm, corporation, or public law office is representing one party and is joining in the document, the name and State Bar number of each attorney joining in the electronic document must be provided on the cover. The law firm, corporation, or public law office representing each party must designate one attorney to receive notices and other communication in the case from the court by placing an asterisk before that attorney's name on the cover and must provide the contact information specified under (A) for that attorney. Contact information for the other attorneys from the same law firm, corporation, or public law office is not required but may be provided.

(b) Additional formatting requirements applicable to documents prepared for electronic filing in the first instance in a reviewing court

(1) Font: The font style must be a proportionally spaced serif face. Century Schoolbook is preferred. A sans-serif face may be used for headings, subheadings, and captions. Font size must be 13-points, including in footnotes. Case names must be italicized or underscored. For emphasis, italics or boldface may be used or the text may be underscored. Do not use all capitals (i.e., ALL CAPS) for emphasis.

(2) Spacing: Lines of text must be 1.5 spaced. Footnotes, headings, subheadings, and quotations may be single-spaced. The lines of text must be unnumbered.

(3) Margins: The margins must be set at 1-1/2 inches on the left and right and 1 inch on the top and bottom. Quotations may be block-indented.

(4) Alignment: Paragraphs must be left-aligned, not justified.

(5) Hyperlinks: Hyperlinks to legal authorities and appendixes or exhibits are encouraged but not required. However, if an electronic filer elects to include hyperlinks in a document, the hyperlink must be active as of the date of filing, and if the hyperlink is to a legal authority, it should be formatted to standard citation format as provided in the California Rules of Court.

(c) Additional formatting requirements for certain electronic documents

(1) Brief: In addition to compliance with this rule, an electronic brief must also comply with the contents and length requirements stated in rule 8.204(a) and (c). The brief need not be signed. The cover must state:

(A) The title of the brief;

(B) The title, trial court number, and Court of Appeal number of the case;

(C) The names of the trial court and each participating trial judge; and

(D) The name of the party that each attorney on the brief represents.

(2) Request for judicial notice or request, application, or motion supported by documents: When seeking judicial notice of matter not already in the appellate record, or when a request, application, or motion is supported by matter not already in the appellate record, the electronic filer must attach a copy of the matter to the request, application, or motion, or an explanation of why it is not practicable to do so. The request, application, or motion and its attachments must comply with this rule.

(3) Appendix: The format of an appendix must comply with this rule and rule 8.144 pertaining to clerks' transcripts.

(4) Agreed statement and settled statement: The format for an agreed statement or a settled statement must comply with this rule and rule 8.144.

(5) Reporter's transcript and clerk's transcript: The format for an electronic reporter's transcript must comply with Code of Civil Procedure section 271 and rule 8.144. The format for an electronic clerk's transcript must comply with this rule and rule 8.144.

(6) Exhibits: Electronic exhibits must be submitted in files no larger than 25 megabytes, rather than as individual documents.

(7) Sealed and confidential records: Under rule 8.45(c)(1), electronic records that are sealed or confidential must be filed separately from publicly filed records. If one or more pages are omitted from a record and filed separately as a sealed or confidential record, an omission page or pages must be inserted in the publicly filed record at the location of the omitted page or pages. The omission page or pages must identify the type of page or pages omitted. Each omission page must be paginated consecutively with the rest of the publicly filed record. Each single omission page or the first omission page in a range of omission pages must be bookmarked and must be listed in any indexes included in the publicly filed record. The PDF counter for each omission page must match the page number of the page omitted from the publicly filed record. Separately-filed sealed or confidential records must comply with this rule and rules 8.45, 8.46, and 8.47.

(d) Other formatting rules

This rule prevails over other formatting rules.

Advisory Committee Comment

Subdivision (a)(1). If an electronic filer must file a document that the electronic filer possesses only in paper form, use of a scanned image is a permitted means of conversion to PDF, but optical character recognition must be used, if possible. If a document cannot practicably be converted to a text-searchable PDF (e.g., if the document is entirely or substantially handwritten, a photograph, or a graphic such as a chart or diagram that is not primarily text based), the document may be converted to a non-text-searchable PDF file.

Subdivision (a)(3). An electronic bookmark's brief description of the item to which it is linked should enable the reader to easily identify the item. For example, if a declaration is attached to a document, the bookmark to the declaration might say "Robert Smith Declaration," and if a complaint is attached to a declaration as an exhibit, the bookmark to the complaint might say "Exhibit A, First Amended Complaint filed 8/12/17."

Subdivision (b). Subdivision (b) governs documents prepared for electronic filing in the first instance in a reviewing court and does not apply to previously created documents (such as exhibits), whose formatting cannot or should not be altered.

Subdivision (c)(7). In identifying the type of pages omitted, the omission page might say, for example, "probation report" or "Marsden hearing transcript."

1.	Jessica Coffin Butterick Lead Appellate Court Attorney Court of Appeal, Second Appellate District	AM	I would agree with the new rules if modified. Please see my comments below. Rule 8.74(a)(8) — Font 13 pt Century in footnotes is HUGE. Footnote point size should be 12. I hate Times New Roman as much as the next person and am glad you're banning it, but there are lots of terrible system fonts out there. If you're going to ban TNR, please also ban Cambria, which is even worse, and will be people's next choice if they don't have Century Schoolbook installed on their machines. Rule 8.74(a)(9) — Spacing Headings should be added to the list of things that can be single-spaced to clarify that they are they not considered "lines of text" that must be 1.5 spaced. (Headings should not be single-spaced.) More importantly, what does 1.5 spacing mean in the context of this rule? True 1.5 line spacing (150% of point size) is 20.5 points for a 13pt font. This is what the rule should mean. In Microsoft Word, however, the "1.5 lines" spacing option yields spacing of about 175% of point size, and many people seem to think that's what 1.5 spacing means. (See explanation at https://practicaltypography.com/line-spacing.html) On its own, that doesn't matter all that much, but it becomes a big problem if we're supposed to	The committees thank the commenter and note the support for the proposal if modified. The committees appreciate the commenter's concerns. The committees decline to recommend differing font sizes, or banning additional proportional-spaced fonts. Based on this and other comments, the committees have deleted the proposals' prohibition on the use of Times New Roman, but the committees have preserved the preference for Century Schoolbook, because it is considered to be one of the most readable fonts. The committees agree that headings should be added to the list of things that may be single-spaced, and made this change. To the extent the comment relates to interaction between rules 8.74 and rule 8.204(b), based on this comment and others, the committees have modified the proposed amendments to rules 8.74 and 8.204(b). 			interpret 1.5 spacing in terms of rule 8.204(b)(5). That rule unwisely redefines a typographical term in California by defining single line spacing as "six lines to a vertical inch." Applying that definition, 1.5 line spacing is 4 lines per vertical inch. But neither true 1.5 line spacing (150% of point size) nor MS Word line spacing (175% of point size) complies with that definition. (Please see the attached document, which I prepared to demonstrate what the rule 8.204(b)(5) definition looks like in practice and how it differs from what both typographers and MS Word adherents consider 1.5 line spacing. It also shows why the definition is problematic for single line spacing with 13pt fonts.) [Commenter's document not attached to comment chart.] Or are we supposed to disregard rule 8.204(b)(5)? I can't tell. · Proposed rule 8.40(a) tells us we must comply with "relevant format provisions" of rule 8.204. This certainly seems relevant. · Proposed rule 8.74(d) tells us to comply with other formatting provisions unless it's impossible to do so. It's possible to comply with rule 8.204(b)(5), even if it's not advisable. · Proposed rule 8.74(b)(1) tells us we must comply with rule 8.204 "except for the requirements exclusively applicable to paper format including the provisions in rule 8.204(b) (2), (4), (5), and (6)." 			comply with the 6-lines-per-vertical-inch definition of line spacing, the consequence is that we'll be using at least TWO DIFFERENT definitions of the same typographical term in California courts depending on the method of filing. I suppose that's better than having to comply with rule 8.204(b)(5), but revising rule 8.204(b)(5) seems like a better choice. Please revise rule 8.204(b)(5) as part of this project. It should be consistent with this rule. Rule 8.74(a)(11) — Alignment Why can't paragraphs be justified? This seems arbitrary. Justification should be allowed as long as hyphenation is turned on. Regardless, if we're going to regulate things like justification, while we're at it, can we please tell people not to use all-caps headings if the heading is more than 3–5 words long? They are impossible to read. (Rule 8.204(b)(3) allows the complete heading to be in capital letters.) Rule 8.74(b)(1) — Brief As mentioned above, you should really, really revise rule 8.204 as part of this project. It should be consistent with rule 8.74(a). If you're not going to revise rule 8.204, you need to, AT MINIMUM, revise proposed rule 8.74(b)(1) to tell people EXACTLY which provisions of rule 8.204 continue to apply to electronically-filed documents and which don't. For example: "Electronic filers must still comply with rule	The committees decline to recommend adding an allowance for justified alignment because left-aligned text is easier to read than justified text. Based on this comment, the committees have proposed adding a prohibition on the use of all capitals for emphasis but did not endorse the commenter's request to prohibit all caps in headings, where they are regularly used in short headings like "Introduction," "Discussion," and "Conclusion." The committees thank the commenter for this input. Based on this and other comments, the committees have modified the proposal to clarify that rule 8.204(b) would not apply to electronic filings. 			8.204(X), (Y), and (Z). They do not need to comply with (R), (S), or (T), which only apply to paper filers." I do statutory interpretation for a living. I have thought deeply and at length about legal typography. Yet, based on the text of proposed rule 8.74(b)(1), I would be hard-pressed to tell you which provisions of rule 8.204 continue to apply. Does "including the provisions in rule 8.204(b)(2), (4), (5), and (6)" refer to the requirements electronic briefs must also comply with? Or, since there's no comma after the word "format," is that text part of the "except for" clause, meaning that those provisions are among those that are exclusively applicable to paper format? It would be a lot more straightforward if you (1) made the rule two sentences, and (2) made it clear which provisions are still in and which are out. Rule 8.40(a) — Form of electronic documents This rule tells me I must comply with rule 8.74 AND rule 8.204. But rule 8.74(b) tells me I don't need to comply with the provisions that exclusively relate to paper filing. Unfortunately, as discussed above, I don't know what the relevant portions of rule 8.204 are.	Based on this comment and others, the committees have modified the proposal to eliminate the cross-references between rule 8.74 and rules 8.40 and 8.204(b). The proposal now would amend subdivision (b) of rule 8.204 to apply only to documents filed in paper form, and to add the relevant provisions of rules 8.40(c) and 8.204(b) to rule 8.74.
2.	California Academy of Appellant Lawyers by John Taylor, Jr., President Burbank	A	As the current president of the California Academy of Appellate Lawyers, I'm writing on behalf of its membership to support SPR19-07. 			and argument of appeals in the California court system. The Academy has a vital interest in ensuring that the rules governing appellate practice promote the efficient and fair administration of justice at the appellate level. The Academy strongly endorses the enactment of uniform requirements for electronic filing throughout the State. We have some suggestions on the content of the proposed new state-wide rules for electronic documents filed in the appellate courts. It appears that in seeking to accommodate less technologically advanced Districts, the proposed rules will impose some limitations on more technologically advanced Districts and the lawyers who have cases there. We therefore strongly urge that, if the proposed rules are adopted in their present form, steps be taken to rapidly improve all Districts' technological capability so there can be uniform rules that permit the best practices that more advanced Districts already follow. The Academy has identified four items for comment, the first two of which involve subjects that should be revised when technologically feasible to increase access to e-filing. 1. File number/size limitation. Proposed rules 8.74(a)(5) & (6) indicate that electronic files can be up to 25MB, but (i) under subdivision (5) they must be limited to 300 pages if that is what the other rules require—particularly including appendices; and (ii) under subdivision (6) "an electronic document consisting of more than	The committees appreciate the commenter's input and have modified the proposed multiple-file provision to allow an electronic filing if the combined volumes of an electronic filing satisfy the 25 megabytes file-size limit and the individual component volumes of the electronic filing comply with any applicable 300-page five files" must be manually filed (in electronic form, but manually rather than e-filed). In other words, any appendix of more than five 300-page volumes must be filed manually even if the total file size is less than 25MB. And, apparently, only a single 25MB file—not multiple files—can be e-filed, so that if a 4-volume appendix exceeds 25M it must be manually filed, if even it could be filed as a 20MB and a 10MB file. Appendices that exceed five 300-page volumes are relatively common—and indeed frequent for our members, who tend to handle large, complex cases. In recent years, these appendices could be filed entirely electronically in some Districts. The proposed limitations therefore represent a step backward for lawyers and their staff in those Districts, creating more work and reducing some existing benefits of electronic filing.	requirement(s). The proposal also would amend the manual filing requirement for multiple files or volumes, changing the limit to 10 rather than 5. The committees will consider additional changes in the future if they are supported by technological changes.

			2. Documents with color components Rule 8.74(a)(13) prohibits electronic filing of "an electronic document with any color component." While many judicial readers may not care about colored covers or signatures, color can be an important part of a presentation. For example, a key exhibit may only make sense in color. A party may even want to include that color exhibit in their brief because it lucidly explains something that text cannot effectively convey. The Academy suggests	The committees agree that color components may be helpful, and have modified the proposal to allow for color components in electronic filings as long as the file complies with the file-size limit.

			that the courts may not wish to discourage documents with color that can make the document more useful to the court. The invitation to comment says that color "causes problems with ACCMS" (p. 4), but doesn't explain the nature of those problems. The proposal suggests that PDFs with color components are not problematic. Because any document with color can be converted to PDF, the rule could require that any document with a color component (other than videos) must be filed in PDF and, in that case, could be filed electronically, rather than manually. While color PDFs can be large, PDF programs provide ways to reduce the file size. Rather than banning color, the present or future rules could include technical specifications that keep file sizes small. Manual filing should remain an option, but the rules should make it unnecessary. 3. Manual filing and date of filing It would seem fair to parties and practitioners throughout the state that a manually filed document be considered filed on the date the notice of manual filing is submitted, and the physical electronic media with the actual document is sent to the court, rather than requiring the electronic media to be delivered to the court on the due date.	The committees have confirmed that color does not cause problems for ACCMS, but that color components may cause loading problems because color components increase file size. The committees thank the commenter for this input. The committees decline to add provisions concerning deadlines and effective filing dates where service and delivery requirements already exist in the rules. The committees will revisit the issue if courts' experience with manual delivery of electronic media warrants additional action.

			4. Paper copies We suggest the rules provide that in cases in which the Court wants paper copies of a filing, the filer be notified of that requirement by email. The filer should be given a specific deadline to file the paper copy. The Ninth Circuit has followed this practice for many years, and it works well. Among other things, this avoids parties submitting paper copies only to find that the clerk requests changes to a document, requiring another set of paper copies to be prepared and delivered. It will also ensure the Courts receive paper copies timely, as requirements for paper are few and diminishing and such requirements can be easily overlooked. In sum, the Academy supports state-wide uniformity for e-filing procedures, but hopes that the various appellate districts will strive to achieve technological uniformity, so that the problems identified above can be corrected soon, if not in the current rule cycle.	The committees appreciate this input, and note that the proposal does not require courtesy paper copies of electronic filings. No response required.

In regard to: "Rule 8.124 (appendixes), 8.144 (form of the record), and 8.212 (service and filing of briefs) were reviewed, and it was determined that amendments to those rules are not needed at this time." Comment: I would kindly suggest and request that Rule 8.144 (Form of the record) be updated to require 1.0 inch margins (or larger from left edge) rather than 1.25. My reasoning to justify the request is that Microsoft Word used to have default margins of 1.25 inch (version 2003 and prior), but since Microsoft Word 2007, have 1.0 inch margins. The margin requirement is/was likely to allow for binding and related hole punching. However, with electronic use now surpassing what is actually printed, loosening this requirement will also for more progressive technology applications (e.g. TAP) to be used for clerk's transcript assembly and therefore be in compliance of the rule.	for color components in electronic filings as long as the file complies with the file-size limit. The committees thank the commenter for this input. With respect to the commenter's suggestion to amend rule 8.144 (Form of record) to provide for 1-inch margins, that rule is beyond the scope of this proposal. Because under California Rules of Court, rule 10.22, substantive changes to a rule need to circulate for public comment before being recommended for adoption by the Judicial Council, the committees will retain the suggestion for future consideration if technological changes warrant change to margin requirements for clerk's and reporter's transcripts. To the extent this comment relates to the 1-1/2 inch margin requirement found in proposed rule 8.74, the proposed rule amendments are intended to implement best practices from the courts of appeal. The committees considered 1-inch margins but chose 1-1/2 inch margins because wider side margins allow readers additional room for notations, both on paper and in most annotation software for electronic documents. In choosing a margin requirement, the committees weighed the readability of a document over the default settings of Microsoft Word. Microsoft Word is not the only word processing software that practitioners use to create electronic filings, and default settings change and can be adjusted.

				Based on this and other comments, however, the committees have added a proposed subdivision to rule 8.74 providing that the margin provision applies to documents prepared for filing in the first instance in the reviewing court, not to documents like transcripts generated in the superior courts.
4.	Criminal Justice Legal Foundation by Kent Scheidegger, Legal Director and General Counsel Sacramento	NI	The Criminal Justice Legal Foundation is a nonprofit, public interest organization promoting the rights of victims of crime in the criminal justice system. We submit this comment regarding the proposed rules on formatting electronic documents. We are particularly concerned with the formatting of appellate briefs, as that is our primary activity in the judicial system. Proposed Rule 8.74(a)(2) quite reasonably requires that "[t]he electronic page counter for the electronic document must match the page number for each page of the document." * * * What is most remarkable about the rule's prohibition of traditional numbering, though, is the complete absence of any reason for it. Traditional numbering, if matched in the PDF file, causes no inconvenience to the reader whatever. There is simply no reason to forbid it. The United States Supreme Court allows it. The federal courts of appeals allow it. California courts should allow it.	The committees thank the commenter for providing input on this proposal. The committees considered but declined to modify the proposal as suggested to permit separate numbering for prefatory pages. The proposal's pagination requirement implements rules that already exist in California's appellate courts. All six appellate districts and the Supreme Court use consecutive arabic-numbering as set forth in the proposal. The committees appreciate that numbering all pages, including preliminary pages such as tables, in this manner may require additional preparation time, but consecutive pagination allows courts and parties to accurately locate the cited pages and ensures that page citations are consistent throughout a document. The utility of page numbers that match an

This requirement may be met either by (i) beginning with the first page or cover page as page 1 and using only Arabic numerals (e.g., 1, 2, 3), or (ii) using Roman numerals for the tables and Arabic numerals for the body of the document and conforming the electronic page counter of the electronic document to match. The page number for the cover page may be suppressed and need not appear on the cover page, or if method (ii) above is used the cover page may be unnumbered. When a document is filed in both paper and electronic formats, the pagination in both versions must comply with this subparagraph. 5.	Jeffrey Ehrlich Ehrlich Law Firm Claremont	NI	I am a certified appellate specialist and have been practicing appellate law in California for over 35 years. I would urge the Council not to adopt the current proposal concerning the font style or typefaces that are acceptable. 			in turn seems to express the idiosyncratic beliefs of the author or authors of that publication about which typefaces are desirable. First, I see no reason to ban Times New Roman. While that font is too small to read comfortably in 12-point weight, it's fine in 13-point or 14-point. I don't use that font, but the custom "Equity" font that I do use, which was created by Matthew Butterick, is very similar. By banning Times New Roman font, the proposal adds uncertainty about what fonts are acceptable, particularly because Times New Roman is a proportionally spaced font with a serif face, as the rule requires. Second, with the update to the rules concerning typeface styles, I think it's time to delete the ban on san serif fonts. I note that this comment form uses a san serif font, and it is highly readable. Most electronic devices now display text in san serif fonts, and they are highly readable -- perhaps more readable than fonts with a serif face. When I started in appellate practice, Horvitz & Levy used a very readable san serif font for all of its briefs. Given the chance, I would love to use Matthew Butterick's "Concourse" san serif font, which is highly readable and very attractive.	No further response required. The committees appreciate the commenter's input on this issue. The committees decline to recommend allowing sans-serif fonts in body and footnote text because of their more limited readability, but the committees have recommended adding an allowance for sans-serif fonts in headings, subheadings, and captions.

			The new electronic filing rule does not specifically address the service of electronic documents. The current version of Rule 8.78 addresses electronic service but neither rule incorporates the language of the current local rules on electronic filing. The existing local rules address TrueFiling. (See Third District Rule 5(l); Sixth District Rule 2(j); First District Rule 16(j)). The uniform electronic filing rule should contain similar language about service. The new rule on electronic filing should cross-reference Cal Rules of Court, Rule 8.78 re: Electronic Service. Revised Rules 8.72 or 8.74 should contain language about the service of electronic filings, including an explanation of TrueFiling.	The suggestion would be a substantive addition to the proposal. Because under California Rules of Court, rule 10.22, substantive changes to a rule need to circulate for public comment before being recommended for adoption by the Judicial Council, the committees will consider this suggestion during the next rules cycle.
7.	Joint Rules Subcommittee (JRS) of the Trial Court Presiding Judges Advisory Committee and Court Executives Advisory Committee	A	The JRS notes the following impact to court operations: • Requires development of local rules and/or forms. The JRS also notes that the proposal should be implemented because it seeks to streamline and establish consistencies for electronic filing requirements among all appellate courts. As it will also require local rule changes, a 3-month period of time considering the rule revision process may be insufficient depending upon when the changes are approved. A 6-month time table is more realistic.	The committees appreciate the commenter's input and note JRS's support for the proposal.
8.	Hon. Jo-Lynne Lee Superior Court of Alameda County	NI	I would oppose a change to the appellate rules prohibiting the use of Times New Roman. I prefer this font myself and don't understand the reason why it should be prohibited.	The committees thank the commenter for providing input on this proposal. 9.	Lynn Loschin Senior Research Attorney Court of Appeal, Fourth Appellate District	NI	As a research attorney who works with e-filed documents every day, I appreciate the opportunity to comment on the proposed changes. Pagination: Clarification that hard-coded page numbers must match electronic page counters is very useful. Being able to see what page I am looking at by looking at the counter, rather than scrolling to the bottom of the page, saves a great deal of time. It's also much more efficient to find pages using the counter than it is to scroll or search for them. I support this proposed change. Bookmarks: The requirement that bookmarks retain the reader's selected zoom setting is particularly welcome, as this has been a consistent problem with e-filed documents. When this option is not selected, it renders both bookmarks and the ability to use custom zoom settings less useful, and there is no way to quickly change all bookmarks to this option in bulk. I support this proposed change. Fonts: I am uncertain about prohibiting the use of Times New Roman. It's what everyone is must accustomed to and is the standard for most courts around the country, including California's trial courts. Further, there are far worse fonts that could be chosen that aren't specifically banned.	The committees thank the commenter for providing input on this proposal. The committees note the commenter's support for 8.74's pagination requirements. The committees note the commenter's support for 8.74's bookmarking requirements, including retention of a reader's selected zoom setting. 			I am also unsure why sans serif fonts are not allowed - they generally look better on screens (while serif fonts look better in print), which is why most web sites, including courts.ca.gov, use sans serif fonts. So much of our work is done on screens now that I am not sure that prohibiting all sans serif fonts is the direction the courts should be going. I would suggest a modification to the proposed rule that recommends specific fonts (maybe two or three others in addition to Century), but does not ban either Times New Roman or all sans serif fonts.	The committees decline to recommend allowing sans-serif fonts in body and footnote text because of their more limited readability, but the committees have recommended adding an allowance for sans-serif fonts in headings, subheadings, and captions. 10.	Steven Murray Sherman Oaks	NI	The rules regarding useable fonts should not be changed. Prohibiting Times New Roman and requiring Century Schoolbook would seriously interfere with many small firms and sole practitioners who have established formats for appellate work. The cost of appellate work is already so high, why enact a new rule which would take significant time and effort to implement. And prohibiting 14 point fonts (as this Equity Text A) does a disservice to the appellate staff and justices which have to read volumes of material.) In plain English, don't fix what is not broken. 11.	Orange County Bar Association (OCBA) by Deirdre Kelly, President	AM	The OCBA believes the proposal appropriately addresses its stated purposes if amended as follows: (1) proposed Rule 8.40 provides for electronic filing "unless these rules provide otherwise" but no references are given to any of the exceptions which are given to the basic format provisions; to this point the OCBA can only determine the "exceptions" to be under Rules 8.44, 8.71, 8.74 & 8.79 for undue hardship, significant prejudice, format problems, self-represented parties, trial courts, and Supreme Court rules, but they are scattered about the rules and difficult to locate; (2) proposed Rule 8.44(c) defeats the purpose of creating uniform rules by allowing "by local rule" for required submission of electronic copies of any paper documents which may be authorized for filing by the rules; this authorization defeats the purposes of all stated exceptions to the electronic filing rules; (3) the OCBA recommends that the Judicial Council also consider amendments to the following additional rules which are applicable to electronic filing, service, signatures, and documents: Rule 8.42 (requirements for signatures), Rule 8.45 (general provisions for sealed and confidential records), Rule 8.75 (requirements for signatures), Rule 8.78 (electronic service), Rule 8.79 (Court order for electronic service), Rule 8.144 (form of the record), and Rule 8.254 (new authorities).	The committees thank the commenter and note the OCBA's support for the proposal if modified. Based on this and other comments, the committees deleted the cross-references to exceptions in rule 8.40(a). With respect to rule 8.44(c)'s allowance for local rules requiring electronic copies of paper filings, the committees appreciate that local rules may not be uniform, which is the principal goal of this proposal. However, the proposed requirement here applies only to paper filings, and paper filers likely will not be able to comply with the uniform formatting requirements set forth in these rules. Therefore, the committees defer to the courts as to what format they require for electronic copies of paper filings. With respect to amending additional rules in title 8 that are applicable to electronic filing, service, signatures, and other documents, the suggestion would be a substantive addition to the proposal. Because under California Rules of Court, rule

Specifically, I write to urge the committee to change that portion of the rule (8.74(a)(8)) that would bar the use of Times New Roman of appellate briefs. Times New Roman should not be banned. * * * (1) There's No Conflict Between the Appellate Districts Regarding Font Choice, So There Is No Need for a Uniform Rule Regarding Font Choice I do not see how the specific proscription against Times New Roman furthers the purpose of uniformity in appellate court electronic document filing requirements. First, the e-filing requirements of only one district (i.e., the Second District) actually touch on the subject matter of font choice, so there is no true conflict among the Districts' Local Rules that has to be ironed out with a uniform rule. In this sense, the portion of the rule banning the use of Times New Roman (8.74(a)(8)) goes to far. * * * Reasonable minds can disagree about what's easiest on the eyes (I can read Times New Roman all day), but I don't think it's fair for one person's idea of what's readable (Century Schoolbook) to come at the	The committees thank the commenter for this input. At the risk of sounding like someone who's already read too much into this, I'm also going to say that I can't help but worry that this proposed rule unfairly favors the convenience of appellate justices and their staff (a small population) at the expense of practicing lawyers and their staff (a much larger body by comparison). (5) People Should Be Allowed to Use San Serif Fonts, Even if Some People Hate Them I understand that sans serif fonts can come off as too casual (I disagree with their use in pleadings), but this one (Century Gothic) is more readable than Arial and Tahoma, and even some of the fancy serif fonts out there. Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purposes? The Executive Summary of the Invitation to Comment states that the purposes of the proposed changes include creating uniform formatting rules to provide consistency and clarity across all the appellate courts in California. The Appellate Practice Section believes that practitioners benefit from having, to the extent possible, one set of rules for all California appellate courts and that the proposed rules generally seem to promote the stated purposes. The Appellate Practice Committee further believes that acceptance of the proposed changes would be enhanced if the Judicial Council also expressed that the proposed rule changes are intended to improve the readability of electronic filings on electronic readers used by judicial officers and staff and that the proposed changes are based upon the courts' experiences with electronic filings and electronic readers to date. Users should want their filings to be readable without difficulty and are more likely to embrace the proposed changes if they	The committees appreciate this feedback.

			understand that these changes are designed to ease reading on electronic reading devices. Because the proposed rules would bring about a major change from the days of paper filing documents, the Appellate Practice Committee suggests that the Judicial Council organize a webinar with speakers drawn from court staff, practitioners, and perhaps software vendors to explain the rules and address issues practitioners may encounter in implementing them. Such a webinar should be broadcast statewide by video and audio over the internet, and it should be recorded for playback by anyone not able to attend the live session. Questions about the changes also should be solicited in advance of the webinar and during the webinar itself. 2. Are there terms that need further reference or definition, such as the words "omission page" or file-type references like ".mp3" or "hyperlink"? The terms "omission page" and "hyperlink" in particular may not be well-known to all electronic filers, especially those who have limited experience to date with electronic filing. Users of the rules would benefit from providing some definition or description of these terms, as is discussed further below in the Appellate Practice Section's comments to specific proposed rule changes. Specific Comments:	The committees support the suggestion for a webinar, which could be offered by a bar group or continuing education provider. The Judicial Council's Center for Judicial Education and Research (CJER) provides educational services that support continuing professional development for justices, judges, subordinate judicial officers, and court personnel. CJER does not organize or provide education for practitioners. The committees thank the commenter for this input. The committees note that an advisory committee comment gives two examples of the type of information to include in identifying pages omitted. Because hyperlinks are encouraged but not required, the committees decided not to define this reasonably well-known term. No response required.

			The Appellate Practice Section's specific comments to the proposed rule changes are as follows: Rule 8.40 No comments. Rule 8.44 No comments. Rule 8.71(a) No comments.
			Rule 8.72 Rule 8.72(a)(1): Electronic filers should benefit from having courts publish, in both electronic and print formats, their electronic filing requirements. Such publications would be a logical place to include a statement that the requirements are intended to improve the readability of such filings on electronic readers.	The committees thank the commenter for this input.
			Rule 8.72(a)(2): As is proposed, the rules should retain the requirement that the courts take reasonable steps to provide notice of a problem that impedes or precludes electronic filing. Any such notice likely would raise the question whether, and to what extent, the stated problem requires or supports a postponement of filing deadlines. To minimize uncertainty among filers and unnecessary phone calls or other communications to court staff after each notice is given, the proposed rule should also state something like: "Any such notice should state whether, and to what extent, any filing deadlines affected by the problem are extended."	The committees thank the commenter for this input. The proposal does not require courts to provide anything more than notice to the parties because under rule 8.71 filing a document electronically does not alter any filing deadline. Unless a notice from a court provides otherwise, it would be incumbent on a party or attorney adversely affected by a problem that impedes or precludes electronic filing, upon receipt of notice of the problem, to seek appropriate relief from the court.
			Rule 8.72(b): Paragraph (1) of this proposed rule incorporates current Rule 8.74(a)(3), which requires	The committees thank the commenter for this input. The committees decline to add a mental-each filer to "take all reasonable steps to ensure that the filing does not contain computer code, including viruses, that might be harmful to the court's electronic filing system and to other users of that system." This rule seems likely to cause confusion as to what is required. The Appellate Practice Section understands that if a filer otherwise complies with the formatting rules for electronic documents, particularly those requiring filings to be in portable document format (PDF), the filing should be free of viruses given current technology. The rule as written leaves it unclear whether filing in this format is a sufficient reasonable step and, if not, what additional steps a filer must take. The Appellate Practice Section suggests that proposed Rule 8.72(b)(1) be rewritten to state that "Each electronic filer must: (1) Comply with all electronic filing requirements in these rules and not intentionally file any document containing computer code, including viruses, that might be harmful to the court's electronic filing system and to other users of that system."	state requirement to this provision. Based on this comment, however, the committees have recommended adding an advisory committee comment to clarify that more is required than not intentionally harming the court or other users, and that one reasonable step would be to use a commercial virus scanning program.

			Rule 8.74 Rule 8.74(a): The title to proposed Rule 8.74(a) is "Format requirements applicable to all electronic documents." Consequently, this rule would apply not only to the briefs, applications, motions, etc. that have been prepared for original filing in the appellate court but also to all documents in an appendix, attachment, or exhibit that were first filed	The committees agree with the commenter that, as drafted and circulated for comment, the proposed amendments to rule 8.74 unintentionally encompassed documents that are not prepared for electronic filing in the first instance in the reviewing court. Based on this and other comments, the committees have made changes to the proposal, and have included an advisory in some other forum. Proposed Rule 8.74(a) includes font, spacing, margin, and alignment requirements. Thus, as written, all documents filed in another forum from which an appeal might be taken would have to be in the format set by Rule 8.74(a) when originally filed or would be precluded from the record on appeal. The problem could be resolved by changing the title of Rule 8.74(a) to "Format requirements for all briefs, applications, motions, or other documents prepared for original filing in appellate court." Rule 8.74(a)(3): The last sentence of proposed Rule 8.74(a)(3) states, "All bookmarks must be set to retain the reader's selected zoom setting." This requirement is not likely to be understood by all users, especially those without experience with electronic filing. Also, at least for filers using current Adobe Acrobat to generate pdf documents, this requirement imposes a significant burden on the filer. Current Adobe Acrobat by default sets zoom as "custom" and does not seem to allow this setting to be changed other than by manually changing the zoom setting for each bookmark to "inherit zoom." Because this setting is buried several layers down in Adobe Acrobat, not only must the user change the setting for each bookmark, each such change requires a number of "clicks" to accomplish the change.	committee comment to make this requirement clearer. The committees appreciate the commenter's input on this proposal. The committees support the courts' publishing instructions on how to comply with the bookmarking requirement.

			The Judicial Council, which it is believed has more sway than individual attorneys with pdf software vendors, should on its own or in conjunction with local and statewide bar associations approach pdf software vendors, explain the issue, and request that the vendors change their software to allow the equivalent of "inherit zoom" either to be the default setting or to be easily changed to this setting at one time for all bookmarks rather than having to be changed bookmark-by-bookmark. Second, at least until such change has been made by the applicable software vendors, the rule should be written as permissive rather than as mandatory, such as "To maximize the readability of filings on electronic readers, bookmarks in the pdf software used by the filer should be set so that the screen retrieved by use of the bookmark maintains the zoom setting being used by the reader of the document." Rule 8.74(a)(4): See comment to proposed Rule 8.74(b)(7) below. Rule 8.74(a)(6): Consistent with the comments below to proposed Rule 8.74(a)(13), and given the 25mb size limitation in proposed rule 8.74(a)(5), this rule should be rewritten to delete the reference to Power Point and to photographs and color components as follows: "Audio or video files must be manually filed. Audio files must be filed in .wav or mp3 format. Video files must be filed in .avi or .mp4 format."	The committees appreciate the commenter's input on this proposal. The committees acknowledge the suggestion concerning software vendors and will forward it to appropriate Judicial Council staff for consideration. The committees have decided that the benefits of the bookmarking requirement outweigh the burden on electronic filers, and decline to make the proposal's bookmarking view voluntary. See response below. Based on this and other comments, the committees have modified this provision and the color component provision.

			Rule 8.74(a)(7): The proposed rule would require all electronically filed documents to use a "proportionally spaced serif face" font. The only example given of an acceptable font is "Century Schoolbook," and the only example given of a prohibited font is "Times New Roman." The purpose of this rule seems to be to require a font most easily readable on electronic readers. A problem with mandating any particular font or fonts is that the names of fonts may differ among word processing programs. It also may be difficult for filers to determine whether any particular font is a proportionally spaced serif face font. The proposed rule as drafted might create further confusion because Times New Roman, the font the rule specifically disallows, is itself a proportionally spaced serif face font. The most-preferred font or fonts also may differ from court to court. This rule could be improved by permitting a court to provide by local rule a list of fonts acceptable to that court but not required by that court. With this change, any filer could file using Century Schoolbook in any court, but a filer also could file using other acceptable fonts that may be preferred by a particular court. Because the other fonts would be permitted but not required, allowing courts to provide a list of preferred fonts by local rule would not undermine the purpose of the proposed changes to provide statewide uniform rules.	Based on this and other comments, the committees have deleted the proposal's prohibition on the use of Times New Roman, but the committees have preserved the rule's preference for Century Schoolbook, which is considered to be one of the most readable fonts. The committees have chosen to favor uniformity over the existing patchwork of local rules, which make practice in the appellate courts more complicated than is necessary.

			Rule 8.74(a)(12): This rule may cause some confusion as written. Because "hyperlink" is not defined, some users may not know what it means. Additionally, a filing could contain hyperlinks not only to legal citations but also to an appendix/record. The rule seems to be directed only at hyperlinks to legal citations, however, leaving it unclear whether the courts encourage hyperlinks to the appendix/record, as well. This should be clarified.	Based on this and other comments, the committees have clarified the provision relating to hyperlinks. Because hyperlinks are encouraged but not required, the committees chose not to draft a definition for a reasonably well-known term. The committees support the courts' publishing instructions on how to create hyperlinks.
			Also, it has been the experience of some members of the Appellate Practice Section that commercially available software, such as that provided by Lexis or West, can be problematic, which may discourage users from providing hyperlinks if not required by the courts. If done correctly, hyperlinks would be to the benefit of the court and the parties. The Appellate Practice Section suggests that, apart from the proposed rules revisions, the Judicial Council approach vendors of hyperlink software to determine whether such software could be written and purchased by the courts to be applied by to electronic filings after they are filed in pdf rather than before they are filed by parties. If this is possible, then the courts could ensure that all documents to be read by the courts are hyperlinked. Whether such software could be incorporated into current court budgets, or whether there would need to be a per document fee imposed on filers, could be	The committees acknowledge the suggestion concerning vendors of hyperlink software and will forward it to appropriate Judicial Council staff for consideration.

			determined once the cost of any such software is known. Rule 8.74(a)(13): The Appellate Section of the San Diego County Bar Association supports the goal of establishing consistency with respect to electronic filing in all Appellate Districts. However, we have a concern with the prohibition against the electronic filing of any documents containing color expressed in the proposed Rule 8.74, subd. (a)(6) and (a)(13). The Executive Summary for SPR19-07 expresses that the purpose of these rules is to ease the burden on filers. We believe that requiring manual filing of any color documents in fact increases the burden on any filing party and increases the burden on the Courts in organizing their case files. In contrast, the ability to electronically file color documents, exhibits, etc., benefits all parties, including the Courts, by providing clarity and emphasis where it is necessary. This prohibition is especially problematic in the context of proposed Rule 8.74, subd. (b), which requires exhibits not to be filed as individual documents but rather as "volumes no larger than 25 megabytes." The segregation and manual submission of color exhibits impacts the organization and order of any appendix or exhibit list. The same concern applies to the extent the filer is required to submit its brief manually. Moreover, if the purpose of this rule is to limit the size of files by	Based on this and other comments, the committees have confirmed that ACCMS allows for the filing of color components, and have removed the special filing requirements for documents with color components. Under the modified provisions, manual filing would be required when a filing with a color component exceeds the file-size requirements or in other limited circumstances under the rule.

			limiting the color content, that concern is already addressed by the size limit articulated in proposed Rule 8.74, subd. (a)(5). At present, it appears that only the Third Appellate District restricts filers' ability to electronically file color documents. (Local Rule 5, subd. (e)(7).) The Appellate Practice Section respectfully requests that the Judicial Council consider that the remainder of Appellate Districts have no such restriction and that imposing such a restriction on filers in all Districts creates an undue burden on the filers, as well as the Courts, as it negatively impacts the efficiency and economy associated with organizing and maintaining the manual and electronic portions of appellate case files. The proposed rules thus should not bar electronic filing of color documents within the 25 mb restriction but should allow the Third Appellate District to have a local rule barring color filing until such time as that District is able to accept color in electronically filed documents. Rule 8.74(b): As written, proposed Rule 8.74(b) seems to impose on all documents within its scope (including appendices under Rule 8.74(b)(3), trial transcripts under 8.74(b)(5), and trial exhibits under Rule 8.74(b)(6)) all the requirements of proposed Rule 8.74(a). In addition, for each of 8.74(b)(3) and (5), the phrase "must comply with this rule" should be changed to "must comply with parts (a)(1) through (a)(7) of this rule . . . ." If the title to proposed Rule 8.74(a) is changed as suggested above, there may not need to be any changes to proposed Rule 8.74(b)(6). Rule 8.74(b)(7): The proposed rules and California Rules of Court, rules 8.45, 8.46 and 8.47, do not provide clear instructions regarding the method for separate electronic submittal of confidential or sealed records. In order to provide clarity and uniformity, and to lessen the burden on Court Staff in answering inquiries pertaining to confidential and sealed filings, the method of electronic submittal should be specified, or if such method is set forth on the Truefiling webpage a reference to where that information can be found should be included. The suggestion would be a substantive addition to the proposal. Because under California Rules of Court, rule 10.22, substantive changes to a rule need to circulate for public comment before being recommended for adoption by the Judicial Council, the committees will retain the suggestion for future consideration. (Italics added) Although the proposed rule itself does not explicitly exclude scanning the document, assuming that is the intent, there are documents, e.g., some exhibits submitted in support of a habeas corpus petition, that are not amenable to being "converted" by a means other than scanning the document. These exhibits often include handwritten documents such as letters, forms with extensive handwriting, photographs, charts, diagrams, etc. It is unclear how such documents could be practicably converted by a means other than scanning, a scanned image of the document typically is sufficient for the purposes for which the document has been filed, and it is more efficient to have these documents part of the electronic volume of exhibits rather than, e.g.,	The committees thank the commenter for this input. Use of a scanned image of a paper document is not a permitted means of conversion unless the document cannot practicably be converted into a text-searchable file, for example, if the document is entirely or substantially handwritten, a photograph, or a graphic such as a chart or diagram that is not primarily text-based. 17.	Kristin Traicoff Law Office of Kristin Traicoff Sacramento	NI	As an appellate practitioner, I believe proposed rule 8.74(a)(3) should be amended where it states: "Each electronic document must include..." It should, instead, provide that certain electronic documents are exempted from the bookmarking requirement -- such exemptions might include requests for extensions of time, service copies of supplemental records requests made to the trial court under Rule 8.340(b), and other short motions that do not contain the subsections that this rule appears to contemplate (for instance, a request that the Court of Appeal transmit a sealed record to counsel, a Motion to Augment the Record, etc). Perhaps this could be effectuated by amending the proposed rule text to provide that bookmarking is required for each electronic document that exceeds a certain number of pages. The purpose of my proposal is to save appellate counsel the undue burden of adding bookmarks to documents where, realistically, the court is unlikely to find the bookmarks useful or rely on them in any way.	The committees thank the commenter for providing input on this proposal. The proposal's bookmarking requirements apply to documents with certain components. The bookmarking requirements are intended to aid readers of all electronic documents. The committees appreciate that creating bookmarks will require additional time, but the utility of bookmarks for readers justifies any burden on filers imposed by this requirement.

Is this really a necessary rule?	The committees thank the commenter for providing input on this proposal. Executive Summary

The Information Technology Advisory Committee and Appellate Advisory Committee recommend amending the rule regarding petitions for review in the California Supreme Court to remove the requirement to send to the Court of Appeal a service copy of a petition for review when a petition is filed electronically. Under current practice, when a petition for review is accepted for electronic filing by the Supreme Court, the Court of Appeal automatically receives a filed/endorsed copy of the petition through the electronic filing service provider (EFSP). Thus, in actual practice, the electronic filing of a petition satisfies the requirement to serve the Court of Appeal with a copy, and there is no need for an electronic filer to serve the Court of Appeal with another copy as required by the rules. The proposed amendment does not change the requirement to serve a copy of the petition on the superior court clerk in all instances, and, if a petitioner files in paper format, to also serve a copy of the petition on the Court of Appeal.

Recommendation

The Information Technology Advisory Committee and Appellate Advisory Committee recommend that the Judicial Council, effective January 1, 2020, amend California Rules of Court, rule 8.500(f)(1) to require a petitioner to serve a copy of a petition for review on the clerk/executive officer of the Court of Appeal only when the petition is filed in paper format, and to clarify that a service copy to the Court of Appeal is not required when a petition is filed electronically.

Relevant Previous Council Action

Although the Judicial Council has acted previously on this rule, this proposal recommends only minor revisions that streamline the service requirements adopted through prior action. The Judicial Council adopted the predecessor to rule 8.500(f) effective January 1, 2004. Effective January 1, 2007, the Judicial Council amended the rule to require that a petition for review also be served on the clerk of the superior court and the Court of Appeal. Effective January 1, 2018, the Judicial Council amended the rule again to require service of the petition for review on the clerk for the superior court and the clerk/executive officer of the Court of Appeal.

Analysis/Rationale

Recognizing that the Courts of Appeal are automatically receiving copies of petitions for review when they are filed electronically, this proposal would clarify that electronic filing constitutes service of a petition on the clerk/executive officer of the Court of Appeal, and that electronic filers do not need to serve a duplicate copy of an electronically filed petition on the clerk/executive officer of the Court of Appeal. When a petition for review is filed in paper format, however, the filer must still serve the petition on the superior court clerk and the clerk/executive officer of the Court of Appeal. The current EFSP automatically sends a copy of the petition for review to the clerk/executive officer of the Court of Appeal when it is filed electronically. But the current rule nevertheless requires an electronic filer to serve a copy of the petition on the clerk/executive officer of the Court of Appeal. This service requirement causes additional effort and expense for the electronic filer and additional workload for the Courts of Appeal.

Policy implications

This proposal is intended to eliminate unnecessary cost and effort for counsel and self-represented litigants in preparing and serving copies of e-filed petitions, and to eliminate duplicative processing efforts for appellate court staff relating to petitions that, in effect, already have been served on the Court of Appeal.

Comments

This proposal was circulated for public comment as part of the regular spring comment cycle from April 11 to June 10, 2019. One bar association and one superior court submitted comments, both agreeing with the proposal, without modifications.

A chart with the full text of the comments received and the committees' responses is attached at pages 5–6.

Alternatives considered

The committees considered maintaining the current requirement that petitioners serve on the Court of Appeal duplicate copies of petitions filed electronically. The committees concluded that the proposed changes were appropriate because they eliminate unnecessary and duplicative effort and expense.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

The committees anticipate that appellate courts will likely incur some cost to train staff on the new procedures, but do not anticipate any appreciable implementation costs. The superior court commenter states that minimal training in the revised procedures would be needed. The committees expect that the amended rule should save court resources by eliminating duplicate paper filings for electronically filed petitions.

It would save the costs of printing copies for the parties. •What would the implementation requirements be for courts—for example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), changing docket codes in case management systems, or modifying case management systems? Implementation requirements for court would be: Training for staff at the COC I, II, III & Lead positions. The expected number of hours are unknown; however, it should be minimal training for staff that are already familiar with working the counter in Appeals. Procedures would need to be revised to indicate the change. •Would three months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation? Yes.	The committees note the commenter's support for the proposal, and appreciate the commenter's input on these questions.

Executive Summary

The Advisory Committee on Criminal Jury Instructions recommends approving the revised and revoked criminal jury instructions prepared by the committee under rule 2.1050 of the California Rules of Court. These changes will keep the instructions current with statutory and case authority. Once approved, the revised instructions will be published in the September 2019 Supplement of the Judicial Council of California Criminal Jury Instructions (CALCRIM).

Recommendation

The Advisory Committee on Criminal Jury Instructions recommends that the Judicial Council, effective September 24, 2019, approve the following changes to the criminal jury instructions prepared by the committee:

1. Revisions to CALCRIM Nos. 101, 200, 362, 376, 402, 403, 511, 520, 524, 540A, 540B, 540C, 548, 561, 600, 703, 732, 860, 862, 863, 875, 970, 982, 983, 1128, 1191A, 1502, 2100, 2101, 2102, 2503, 2572, 2651, 2652, 2720, 2721, 2900, 2902, 3130, and 3145;

2. Technical changes to CALCRIM Nos. 123, 208, 590, 810, 890, 1015, 1016, 1017, 1018, 1019, 1020, 1021, 1022, 1070, 1080, 1081, 1082, 1090, 1091, 1101, 1123, 1203, 2306, and 3406;
3. Revocation of CALCRIM Nos. 541A, 541B, and 541C; and
4. Updates to the Introduction to Felony-Murder Series.

A table of contents and the full text of the revised instructions are attached at pages 26–306.

Relevant Previous Council Action

At its meeting on July 16, 2003, the Judicial Council adopted what is now rule 10.59 of the California Rules of Court, which established the Advisory Committee on Criminal Jury Instructions and its charge.[1] In August 2005, the council voted to approve the CALCRIM instructions under what is now rule 2.1050 of the California Rules of Court.

Since that time, the committee has complied with both rules by regularly proposing to the council additions and changes to CALCRIM. The council approved the last CALCRIM release at its March 2019 meeting.

Analysis/Rationale

The committee revised the instructions based on comments and suggestions from justices, judges, and attorneys; proposals by staff and committee members; and recent developments in the law.

Below is an overview of some of the proposed changes.

Felony Murder (CALCRIM Nos. 540A–540C and 541A–541C)

Senate Bill 1437 (Stats. 2018, ch. 1015) substantially changed accomplice liability for felony murder. As a result of these legislative changes, the instructions for felony murder need to be revised. CALCRIM No. 540A is the instruction for felony murder when the defendant is charged as the actual killer. This instruction required the least revision because felony murder liability for the actual killer did not change. CALCRIM Nos. 540B and 540C required more revisions and now contain the added elements for intent to kill (Pen. Code, § 189(e)(2)), major participant (Pen. Code, § 189(e)(3)), and the peace officer exception (Pen. Code, § 189(f)). The committee also proposes revoking CALCRIM Nos. 541A, 541B, and 541C. These instructions relate to second degree felony murder, which the new legislation effectively eliminated by adding subdivision (a)(3) to Penal Code section 188. The committee has proposed updates to the Introduction to Felony-Murder Series to explain these changes.

[1] Rule 10.59(a) states: "The committee regularly reviews case law and statutes affecting jury instructions and makes recommendations to the Judicial Council for updating, amending, and adding topics to the council's criminal jury instructions."

Natural and Probable Consequences (CALCRIM Nos. 402 and 403) and Attempted Murder (CALCRIM No. 600)

Senate Bill 1437 added subdivision (a)(3) to Penal Code section 188. This subdivision contains the following statement: "Malice shall not be imputed to a person based solely on his or her participation in a crime." The committee added a bench note to these three instructions to alert users that, as a result of this amendment, the natural and probable consequences doctrine might no longer apply to attempted murder.

Murder: Alternative Theories (CALCRIM No. 548)

Senate Bill 1437 added two theories of felony murder accomplice liability: aider and abettor with intent to kill and major participant with reckless indifference. The legislation also carved out an exception when the victim was a peace officer. The committee inserted new language in this instruction to account for murder prosecutions where the evidence supports more than one theory of felony murder liability.

Homicide: Provocative Act by Accomplice (CALCRIM No. 561)

The addition of subdivision (a)(3) to Penal Code section 188 also has potential consequences for provocative act liability when an accomplice commits the provocative act. The committee added a bench note about this possible impact.

Cautionary Admonitions and Duties of Judge and Jury (CALCRIM Nos. 101 and 200)

Addressing the potential for bias among jurors during deliberations is an important issue. Based on requests from several trial court judges, the committee added additional language about bias to highlight to jurors the importance of not allowing bias to affect their deliberations.

Engaging in Oral Copulation or Sexual Penetration (CALCRIM No. 1128)

In People v. Saavedra (2018) 24 Cal.App.5th 605 (Saavedra), the trial court erred in instructing the jury with the general intent language of CALCRIM No. 252 in a prosecution for Penal Code section 288.7(b) because the underlying act was sexual penetration and not oral copulation. The court found the error to be harmless because CALCRIM No. 1128 "correctly defined sexual penetration and informed jurors of the requisite purpose." Id. at p. 615. The committee added a bench note to instruct on specific intent when the underlying act is sexual penetration. The committee also added Saavedra to the authority section.

Consciousness of Guilt: False Statements (CALCRIM No. 362)

In People v. Burton (2018) 29 Cal.App.5th 917, the court upheld CALCRIM No. 362 over a challenge that the instruction's reference to "the charged crime" improperly undermined the defendant's claim that her false statement to the police reflected consciousness of guilt of a lesser offense. In response to this case, the committee added a bench note that suggests modifying the instruction when the evidence supports an inference that the defendant was aware of his or her guilt generally but not of the charged crime.

Instructions that involve deadly or dangerous weapon* (CALCRIM Nos. 511, 524, 860, 862, 863, 875, 982, 983, 2503, 2720, 2721, 3130, and 3145)

In People v. Stutelberg (2018) 29 Cal.App.5th 314, the defendant was convicted of assault for waiving around a box cutter. The court reversed this conviction because CALCRIM Nos. 875 and 3145 did not provide the definition for inherently deadly or dangerous weapons. As a result, the court concluded that jurors could have erroneously classified the box cutter as inherently dangerous. In response to this holding, the committee added the definition of inherently deadly or dangerous weapon to these instructions and included bench notes about when trial courts should include the phrase "inherently deadly." The committee also added case citations to the authority section.

Arson: Inhabited Structure or Property* (CALCRIM No. 1502)

A user noted that the definition of an inhabited structure in the burglary instruction (CALCRIM No. 1701) contains different wording from the definition of that term in the arson instruction. The committee decided to conform the arson instruction with the burglary definition of "inhabited." The committee also added punctuation to make "inhabited structure" and "inhabited property" optional.

Policy implications

Rule 2.1050 of the California Rules of Court requires the committee to regularly update, amend, and add topics to CALCRIM and to submit its recommendations to the council for approval. This proposal fulfills that requirement.

Comments

The proposed additions and revisions to CALCRIM circulated for public comment from May 29 through July 5, 2019. The committee received responses from nine commenters. The text of all comments received and the committee's responses are included in a comments chart attached at pages 6–25.

Alternatives considered

The proposed revisions are necessary to ensure that the instructions remain clear, accurate, and complete; therefore, the advisory committee considered no alternative actions.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

No implementation costs are associated with this proposal. To the contrary, under the publication agreement, the official publisher, LexisNexis, will print a new edition and pay royalties to the Judicial Council. The council's contract with West Publishing provides additional royalty revenue.

The official publisher will also make the revised content available free of charge to all judicial officers in both print and HotDocs document assembly software. With respect to commercial publishers, the council will register the copyright of this work and continue to license its publication of the instructions under provisions that govern accuracy, completeness, attribution, copyright, fees and royalties, and other publication matters. To continue to make the instructions freely available for use and reproduction by parties, attorneys, and the public, the council provides a broad public license for their noncommercial use and reproduction.

Instruction	Commentator	Comment	Response
101 & 200	Hon. Kelvin Filer, Los Angeles Superior Court	I definitely agree with the proposed additions to the Cautionary Instructions - CalCrim 101 and 200!! It is important to remind our jurors that, as human beings, we ALL have implied biases and that part of their job is going to be to set aside those biases to be fair to all the parties in the case. I have been using this language as additions to my regular instructions and I think it helps the jurors to relax a little in carrying out their duties - it "humanizes" the process!	No response necessary.
101 & 200	Hon. Christopher Hite, San Francisco Superior Court	I had one suggested edit to the instructions: You must not let bias, prejudice, or public opinion influence your assessment of the evidence or your decision in this case. Many people have conscious and/or unconscious biases about other people. You must not be biased in favor of or against any party, witness, attorney, defendant[s], or alleged victim because of his or her disability, gender, nationality, national origin, race or ethnicity, religion, gender identity, sexual orientation, age, [or] socioeconomic status(./,) [or _____<insert any other impermissible form of bias>.] I am sure there was a lot of time and effort put into this change, but it seems to read a bit challenging to me. I'm not sure this fixes it all that much but if not, I think the original needs to be more clear.	The committee agrees with the suggestion to add "your" before "decision." The committee disagrees with the suggestions to add "in this case" and "conscious and/or unconscious biases about other people." To make the instruction clearer, the committee changed the second sentence to read: "Many people have assumptions and biases about or stereotypes of other people and may be unaware of them."
101 & 200	Hon. Bobbi Tillmon, Los Angeles Superior Court	Please accept my comments only for CALCRIM #101 and #200. The proposed language is similar to part of the California Civil Instruction #113 which is a very important instruction to remind jurors of their responsibility to avoid biased thinking in their decision making.	No response necessary.
101 & 200	Judge Lee Tsao, Chair Judge Brenda Penny, Vice-Chair Los Angeles Superior Court Access and Fairness Committee	The Los Angeles Superior Court's Access and Fairness Committee lodges its support for the proposed changes to CALCRIM 101 and 200 which caution jurors in a criminal case against the effects of implicit bias upon their decision making. Our committee has been actively engaged in educating judicial officers in our court about implicit bias. During the last several years, we presented four judicial trainings on the subject, two of which were presented jointly with the Access to Justice Committee of the Los Angeles County Bar Association. While implicit bias has been the subject of scholarly research for many years, in the past decade have we seen an increased awareness of the harmful effects of implicit bias in the legal system. Articles published by the American Judges	No response necessary.

		Association, Judge Mark Bennett of the Northern District of Iowa, and Professor Jerry Kang of the UCLA School of Law, to name a few, reveal how implicit bias can be manifested by just about anyone in a courtroom, including jurors, witnesses, attorneys, judges and court staff. Each time a bias is left uncorrected, we undermine our ability to achieve justice for all. The research teaches us that in order to combat the effects of implicit bias upon our decision making, we must first become aware of them. This appears to be the primary purpose behind CACI 113, introduced in 2010 for jurors in civil cases. Because of the lack of any corresponding implicit bias instruction for criminal cases, some judges hearing criminal cases have been adding CACI 113 to their standard CALCIM instructions. One such person is Judge Kelvin Filer, a member of our committee who has been instructing on CACI 113 for years in his criminal cases. On behalf of our committee, Judge Filer submitted proposed changes to CALCRIM 101 to the Advisory Committee on Criminal Jury Instructions. Judge Filer's efforts were the impetus for the proposed changes to CALCRIM 101 and 200 now under consideration. When discussing these changes to CALCRIM as a committee and during our trainings on implicit bias to judges of our court, it became apparent that many judges presiding over criminal cases were unaware of the existence of an implicit bias instruction in CACI. Our committee believes that the real question is not whether courts should instruct upon implicit bias, but rather how we should do so. In this regard, we believe that judges need just as much guidance as jurors and that a standardized approach, which balances the need for education about implicit bias with demands for efficiency, is the best approach. That a standard jury instruction addressing implicit bias has been in place in civil cases for nearly a decade points to an even greater need in criminal cases where life and liberty are at stake. The proposed changes to CALCRIM 101 and 200 effectively and efficiently address that need and they are long overdue.
402 & 403	Erin Loback, Deputy District Attorney from Alameda County	Because of the changes to Penal Code section 188, consider adding a sentence such as this: "If the non-target offense is murder, you must also determine whether the defendant had the required mental state of malice aforethought as	The committee disagrees with the assertion that a defendant who harbors malice can be guilty under natural and probable

I disagree with the comment that a verdict of murder can no longer be based on the doctrine of natural and probable consequences. It can (and per Chiu it is second degree), with an individualized showing of malice aforethought.	consequences of murder as a nontarget offense. Although a codefendant's target offense might not be murder, a defendant's target offense would be murder if the defendant acts with malice.
402 & 403	Kate Chatfield, on behalf of The Justice Collaborative	Comment – add to Bench Notes: Do not give this instruction if the non-target crime committed by the coparticipant is murder. Penal Code section 188(a)(3), as amended by Statutes 2018, ch.1015 (S.B. 1437), became effective January 1, 2019. The amendment added "Except as stated in subdivision (e) of Section 189, in order to be convicted of murder, a principal in a crime shall act with malice aforethought. Malice shall not be imputed to a person based solely on his or her participation in a crime." Section 1 of S.B. 1437 stated, "(g) Except as stated in subdivision (e) of Section 189 of the Penal Code, a conviction for murder requires that a person act with malice aforethought. A person's culpability for murder must be premised upon that person's own actions and subjective mens rea." There is no more liability for murder for a non-killer based on the natural and probable consequences doctrine. (See also Senate Concurrent Resolution 48, (Resolution Chapter 175, 2017–18 Regular Session) The question whether this amendment abolished the natural and probable consequences doctrine as to attempted murder is unresolved.	The committee disagrees with this suggestion. The committee has already added language about Pen. Code, § 188(a)(3) in the Related Issues section. The commenter's proposed statement to include in the instructional duty section is unnecessary.
417	Robert Mestman, Sr. Deputy District Attorney, on behalf of the Orange County District Attorney's Office	[The] paragraph under the heading "Conspiracy Liability – Natural and Probable Consequences" [in CALCRIM No. 540B] should be added to instruction No. 417.	The committee does not currently have a proposed modification for this instruction and will consider this comment at its next meeting.

The amendment added "Except as stated in subdivision (e) of Section 189, in order to be convicted of murder, a principal in a crime shall act with malice aforethought. Malice shall not be imputed to a person based solely on his or her participation in a crime." Section 1 of S.B. 1437 stated, "(g) Except as stated in subdivision (e) of Section 189 of the Penal Code, a conviction for murder requires that a person act with malice aforethought. 540A	Kate Chatfield, on behalf of The Justice Collaborative	The note [on imperfect self-defense] states that "malice aforethought which imperfect self-defense negates, is not an element of felony murder." (See People v. Tabios (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1, 6-9) However, after SB 1437, malice now is an element of felony murder for non-perpetrators of the killing. For the non-killer accomplice, that person either has to have the mental state of an intention to kill or act with the mental state of reckless indifference to human life in the killing. (See People v. Clark (2016) 63 Cal. 4th 522, 617.). One can conceive of a situation in which a defendant could raise a defense of imperfect self-defense or defense of others. Accordingly, although this Note on Imperfect Self Defense appears in 540A (and appropriately not in 540B) to avoid confusion, it should state:	The committee disagrees with this suggestion. Intent to kill is not the same as express malice and reckless indifference is not the same as implied malice. Although malice can be mitigated by heat of passion or imperfect self-defense, intent to kill and conscious disregard are not themselves mitigated by heat of passion or imperfect self-defense. Section 189(e) continues to allow for imputed malice under certain 540A	The Offices of the Los Angeles County Public Defender and Alternate Public Defender	Escape Rule in CALCRIM 540A. The Introduction to the Proposed Changes states: [T]he committee has deleted [CALCRIM no. 549] and replaced it with appropriate bench note references. If the defendant committed the homicidal act and fled, that killing did not occur in the commission of the felony if the fleeing felon has reached a place of temporary safety. (People v. Wilkins, supra, at p. 345.) However, the language in CALCRIM 540A itself does not comport with this language and is legally insufficient. Proposed CALCRIM 540A contains a bracketed portion that states: <If the facts raise an issue whether the commission of the felony continued while a defendant was fleeing the scene, give the following sentence instead of CALCRIM No. 3261, While Committing a Felony: Defined--Escape Rule.> [The crime of -----<insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code, § 189> continues until a defendant has reached a place of temporary safety.] The instruction should contain the following statement: If the defendant committed the homicidal act and fled, that killing did not occur in the commission of the felony if the fleeing felon has reached a place of temporary safety. This language is consistent with the Supreme Court's holding in Wilkins: When the killing occurs during flight, however, the escape rule establishes the outer limits of the continuous-transaction theory. Flight following a felony is considered part of the same transaction as long as the felon has not reached a place of temporary safety. (People v. Wilkins (2013) 56 Cal.4th 333, 345, internal citations omitted.)	This comment raises issues outside the scope of the current invitation to comment. The committee will consider this comment at its next meeting.

540B & 540C	Robert Mestman, Sr. Deputy District Attorney, on behalf of the Orange County	AGREE WITH THE PROPOSAL IF IT IS MODIFIED Felony murder of a police officer should be its own instruction. For instance, CALCRIM 540B should be split into 2 instructions: 1) dealing with felony murder with the major participant language (PC § 189(e)(3)); and 2) felony	The committee previously considered whether to create a separate peace officer exception instruction. Ultimately the District Attorney's Office	murder dealing with death of law enforcement officer (PC § 189(f)). The logic behind this recommendation is that PC 189(f) states that the circumstance that are required in 189(e) [the factors that are subsequently "organized" in 540A, 540B, 540C] do not apply to felony murder of police officers. Further, 189(f) has additional factors that a jury must consider (e.g. officer in lawful performance of his duties, defendant knew or should have known victim was officer, etc.) that do not apply to felony murder under 189(e)(3). Thus, it is much cleaner to have separate instructions. Additionally, it is foreseeable where a prosecutor may proceed under both theories – a) felony murder where officer was in lawful performance of his duties and b) felony murder where defendant was a major participant. Thus, the court would have to instruct twice using 540B, but just using the different theories. [NOTE: we understand that 540B and C deal with co-participant caused murder and other acts caused murder and therefore, for uniformity, the committee may want two instructions for felony murder of a police officer to mirror 540B and C, but ultimately that makes little sense given that felony murder of a police officer is now its own subset of the felony murder rule.]	committee decided to include the peace officer exception in these two instructions because it is preferable to have all accomplice liability theories in one instruction and unnecessary to create a separate instruction. However, in response to this comment, the committee added an "[OR]" before alternative 189(f) and additional punctuation so that a trial court would only need to instruct once using 540B (or 540C) regardless of how many theories of liability the evidence supported.

540B & 540C	Robert Mestman, Sr. Deputy District Attorney, on behalf of the Orange County District Attorney's Office	These instructions contain the following sentence: "[It is not required that the defendant be present when the act causing the death occurs.]" While this is a correct statement of law, we are concerned that it potentially runs afoul of the Banks factors which are considered when deciding whether the defendant was a major participant (e.g., "4. Was the defendant in a position to facilitate or to prevent the death?") As was noted in Banks, the defendant's absence from the scene was a major factor contributing to the conclusion that he was not a major participant. So the inclusion of this bracketed language could undercut Banks. My concern, therefore, is that we may find the court overturning a conviction where this bracketed language was included in a jury instruction. Perhaps a cautionary note would be helpful.	The committee does not agree that a cautionary note is warranted. The statement about presence is not inconsistent with the identified Banks factor: the statement tells the jury not to acquit merely because the defendant is not present; whereas, the Banks factor tells the jury to consider the defendant's position to facilitate or to prevent the death among many factors when deciding whether to convict or to acquit.
540B & 540C	Erin Loback, Deputy District Attorney from Alameda County	Text is great. Consider also citing People v. Clark, 63 Cal.4th 522 (2016), along with Tison and Estrada with respect to "reckless indifference to human life."	The committee agrees with this suggestion and has added People v. Clark to the Authority section.

540B & 540C	Barry P. Helft, Chief Deputy State Public Defender, on behalf of the Office of the State Public Defender ("OSPD")	Clarification of the Reckless Indifference Standard These two proposed instructions reflect revisions undertaken in response to the amendments to the murder statutes made effective on January 1, 2019 by the passage of Senate Bill No. 1437 (2017-2018 Reg. Sess.). Specifically, both address the potential felony-murder liability of defendants who aided and abetted the underlying felony but did so without intending the resulting murder. As the instructions accurately state, such defendants can be found liable for the murder only if, as "major participant[s]" in the underlying felony they acted "with reckless indifference to human life." (Pen. Code, § 189, subd. (e) (3).) The instructions provide the following guidance regarding the mental component of that standard: A person acts with reckless indifference to human life when he or she knowingly engages in criminal activity that he or she knows involves a grave risk of death. OSPD's concern stems from the fact that the "major participant /reckless indifference" standard has long been applied in the context of the felony-murder special circumstance set forth in Penal Code section 190.2 and – although juries have been instructed accordingly – they have clearly misunderstood what the standard requires, for there have been (and continue to be) an exceptional number of appellate reversals of such findings based on the constitutional insufficiency of the evidence to support them. (E.g., People v. Clark (2016) 63 Cal.4th 522; People v. Banks (2015) 61 Cal.4th 788; In re Taylor (2019) 34 Cal.App.5th 543; In re Ramirez (2019) 32 Cal.App.5th 384; In re Bennett (2018) 26 Cal.App.5th 1002; In re Miller (2017) 14 Cal.App.5th 960.) In its opinions in these cases, the appellate courts have pointed to a ready source of confusion for jurors – namely, the notion that by merely participating in a felony that has the clear potential of resulting in violence (typically, an armed robbery) the aider and abettor has necessarily evinced "a reckless indifference to human life." The Supreme Court has emphasized – in terms that speak directly to the proposed instruction – that "participation in an armed robbery, without more, does not involve 'engaging in criminal activities known to carry a grave	When revising CALCRIM Nos. 540B and 540C pursuant to SB 1437, the committee incorporated the existing reckless indifference standard from CALCRIM No. 703 (Special Circumstances – Felony Murder) but did not evaluate whether this standard should be expanded or clarified. This suggestion is therefore outside the scope of the current invitation to comment. The committee will consider it at its next meeting.

		risk of death.'" (People v. Banks, supra, 61 Cal.4th at p. 805 [emphasis supplied; citation omitted]; accord, People v. Clark, supra, 63 Cal.4th at pp. 617-618.) Rather, to suffer liability, "[t]he defendant must be aware of and willingly involved in the violent manner in which the particular offense is committed, demonstrating reckless indifference to the significant risk of death his or her actions create." (Banks, supra, 61 Cal.4th at p. 801.) Thus the defendant's conduct must demonstrate "a willingness to kill (or to assist another in killing) to achieve a distinct aim, even if the defendant does not specifically desire that death as the outcome of his actions." (Clark, supra, 63 Cal.4th at p. 617.) OSPD suggests that, to avoid the confusion and improper, unjust results that have repeatedly arisen in the special circumstance context, the instructions incorporate the clarifying language found in the Supreme Court's opinions. Thus OSPD proposes that the portions of CALCRIM Nos. 540B and 540C discussing "reckless indifference to human life" be modified to read substantially as follows: A person acts with reckless indifference to human life when that person knowingly engages in criminal activity that he or she knows involves a grave risk of death. However, the defendant's participation in [insert underlying felony] does not, in itself, constitute engaging in a criminal activity known to carry a grave risk of death. Rather, to find that the defendant acted with reckless disregard of human life you must determine that the defendant was aware of and willingly involved in the violent manner in which the crime was committed, demonstrating reckless indifference to the significant risk of death his or her actions created. Put another way, to find the defendant guilty under this theory you must find that his or her conduct demonstrated a willingness to kill (or to assist another in killing) to achieve a distinct aim, even if the defendant did not specifically desire that death as the outcome of his or her actions.

However, the amendment of Penal Code sections 188 and 189 by Senate Bill No. 1437 makes wholesale incorporation improper. Specifically, the Related Issues section of CALCRIM No. 540A provides, in pertinent part, that "Imperfect self-defense is not a defense to felony murder because malice aforethought, which imperfect self-defense negates, is not an element of felony murder." While that remains true for perpetrators after Senate Bill No. 1437, and thus is properly included in CALCRIM No. 540A, it is now an incorrect statement of the law for accomplices who did not commit the fatal act. The language thus should not be incorporated by reference into CALCRIM Nos. 540B and 540C. Malice is now required for accomplices who did not commit the fatal act. (See Pen. Code, §§ 188, 189, as amended by Sen. Bill No. 1437.) To be guilty of first degree murder, the jury must find that a non-killer accomplice either directly aided and abetted the murder or was a major participant in a felony listed in Penal Code section 189 and acted with reckless indifference to human life. Reckless indifference to human life is a state of malice aforethought. It "requires subjective awareness of a higher degree of risk than the 'conscious disregard for human life' required for conviction of second degree murder based on implied malice." (People v. Johnson (2016) 243 Cal.App.4th 1247, 1285.) Because malice is now required, imperfect self-defense and other malice-negating theories are now applicable. OSPD suggests revising the Related Issues sections of CALCRIM Nos. 540B and 540C, so that they read as follows: See the Related Issues section of CALCRIM No. 540A, Felony Murder: First Degree – Defendant Allegedly Committed Fatal Act. However, malice-negating theories, including imperfect self-defense, remain available to defendants who did not commit the fatal act and the jury must be instructed that the prosecutor	reckless indifference is not the same as implied malice. Although malice can be mitigated by heat of passion or imperfect self-defense, intent to kill and conscious disregard are not themselves mitigated by heat of passion or imperfect self-defense. Section 189(e) continues to allow for imputed malice under certain circumstances and that imputed malice is not negated by heat of passion or imperfect self-defense.

540B, 540C & 703	Kate Chatfield, on behalf of The Justice Collaborative	In People v. Estrada, (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 568, 578, the Supreme Court stated that the court does not have a sua sponte duty to define "reckless indifference to human life" because this phrase has a "common understanding." However, as People v. Banks, People v. Clark (2016) 63 Cal. 4th 522 and its progeny[1] have made clear, this phrase is not commonly understood by juries. It has been improperly argued and applied, leading to overbroad application against defendants who did not act with reckless indifference to human life under the case law. Moreover, in its current proposed form, the limited definition that is offered as a suggestion does not adequately focus the jury on the fact that the defendant must act with reckless indifference to human life in the actual murder; participating in a dangerous felony alone is insufficient to show the requisite recklessness. The proposed definition, even should the court give it, will allow the jury to improperly conflate the mere participation in the dangerous felony with a finding of reckless indifference to human life. This will result in defendants being improperly convicted of first-degree murder, as they have of special circumstances under Penal Code § 190.2 (d). To highlight this point, instructions very similar to the proposed suggested instructions were given in In re Ramirez, 32 Cal. App. 5th at 395, fn. 5. Although the California Supreme Court determined in Estrada that trial courts have no sua sponte duty to explain the phrase "reckless indifference to human life" to the jury (Estrada, supra, 11 Cal.4th at p. 581, 46 Cal.Rptr.2d 586, 904 P.2d 1197), the written form of CALJIC No. 8.80.1 (1996 rev.) (5th ed. 1988) instructed petitioner's jury that '[a] defendant acts with reckless indifference to human life when that defendant knows or is	The committee disagrees with the comment that SB 1437 created a sua sponte duty to instruct on reckless indifference. Estrada held there was no duty to instruct on the meaning of reckless indifference for the felony-murder special circumstance. The passage of SB 1437, by making reckless indifference and major participant elements of accomplice liability for felony murder, does not change this holding. Regarding the comment that the reckless indifference standard is inadequate: the committee incorporated this standard from CALCRIM No. 703 (Special Circumstances – Felony Murder) but did not evaluate whether it should be expanded or clarified. This suggestion is therefore outside the scope of the current invitation to comment and the committee will consider it at its next meeting.

		aware that his acts involve a grave risk of death to an innocent human being.' Thus, despite the fact that the jury was given this limited instruction on reckless indifference to human life the Ramirez court held: "no reasonable juror could have found defendant aided and abetted the attempted robbery 'with reckless indifference to human life and as a major participant' (§ 190.2, subd. (d)), as those terms are set out in Tison and explicated by Banks and Clark." (Ramirez, supra, at 406.) As courts have noted, in order to determine whether someone acted with reckless indifference to human life, a court or jury must assess a person's "individual responsibility for the loss of life, not just his or her vicarious responsibility for the underlying crime." (In re Bennett (2018) 26 Cal.App.5th 1002, emphasis added.) A trier of fact must focus on whether the defendant's own actions in the killing exhibited the state of mind of reckless indifference. (See People v. Banks (2015) 61 Cal. 4th 788, 807 [as nothing at trial supported a conclusion that defendant's own actions were recklessly indifferent, or involved a grave risk of death, special circumstance finding reversed].) A defendant's own actions must evince a willingness to kill or to assist another in killing (People v. Clark (2016) 63 Cal. 4th 522, 617.); mere participation in a dangerous felony is insufficient. (See Banks, Clark, Tison, Enmunds) Accordingly, as a result of SB 1437, the court must not only give an instruction on reckless indifference and major participation in the felony for accomplices under Penal Code § 189(e)(3) when the facts require it, as these are now elements of the offense for certain accomplices to a felony murder, but the court must also properly define what it means to act with reckless indifference to human life. COMMENTER'S PROPOSED INSTRUCTIONS REGARDING RECKLESS INDIFFERENCE TO HUMAN LIFE

		<The following instructions must[2] be given when reckless indifference and major participant under Pen. Code § 189(e)(3) applies> [A person acts with reckless indifference to human life when he or she personally engages in criminal activity that he or she knows involves a grave risk of death. Recklessness to human life is a standard of behavior in which one's own actions shows a willingness to kill or to assist another in killing. The fact that defendant or another accomplice was armed during the felony and therefore there was a foreseeable risk of death is insufficient on its own to find that defendant acted with reckless indifference to human life. In determining whether defendant acted with reckless indifference to human life, you must assess the defendant's own actions and individual responsibility for the loss of life not just [his/her] responsibility for the underlying crime. In order to decide whether the defendant acted with reckless indifference to human life, you may consider the following factors: 1) The defendant's knowledge of weapons, and the use and number of weapons 2) The defendant's proximity to the killing 3) The defendant's opportunity to stop the killing or aid the victim. 4) The duration of the restraint of the victims before the murder. 5) The defendant's knowledge (either before or during the commission of the felony) that another participant was likely to kill. Awareness that another participant was armed is insufficient on its own to show that the defendant knew that participant was likely to kill. 6) The defendant's efforts to minimize the possibility of violence during the felony. 7) [any other relevant factor] No one of these factors is necessary, nor is any one of them necessarily enough, to determine whether the defendant acted with reckless indifference to human life.]

[2] As noted above, as a result of SB 1437, it must now be proven beyond a reasonable doubt that a person was the actual killer; intended to kill; or acted as a major participant in the felony and with reckless indifference to human life. Accordingly, when there is an issue as to whether a defendant acted with reckless indifference to human life, these instructions must be given.

		COMMENTER'S SUGGESTED BENCH NOTES Instructional Duty As "reckless indifference to human life" and acting as a "major participant" in the felony are necessary elements to be found liable for first degree murder under a theory of felony murder, the court has a sua sponte duty to define these elements for the jury. ~~The court does not have a sua sponte duty to define "reckless indifference to human life." 		of death.] This statement is misleading and will give jurors the misimpression that engaging in a dangerous felony is sufficient to find the defendant acted with reckless indifference: [A]lthough the felonies listed in section 189 are those that the Legislature views as "inherently dangerous," this did not collapse the differences between an analysis involving felony murder, on the one hand, and an analysis of reckless indifference to human life, on the other. [People v. Banks, supra, 61 Cal.4th at p. 810.] As we concluded, "[w]hether a category of crimes is sufficiently dangerous to warrant felony-murder treatment, and whether an individual participant has acted with reckless indifference to human life, are different inquiries." (Ibid.) (People v. Clark (2016) 63 Cal.4th 522, 616.) The jury must be informed that reckless indifference requires that the defendant "knowingly created a serious risk of death," which is a higher standard than that proposed in these instructions. [T]he governing standard as explained in People v. Banks (2015) 61 Cal.4th 788 and People v. Clark (2016) 63 Cal.4th 522, is not satisfied with evidence of a general indifference to human life, but instead with evidence of a reckless indifference, which is shown when the defendant knowingly creates a serious risk of death. (Banks, supra, 61 Cal.4th at pp. 808- 809.) (In re Taylor (2019) 34 Cal.App.5th 543, 560, emphasis added.) The proposed instructions' failure to properly define "reckless indifference" is compounded by the failure to include the case-specific factors expressly delineated in People v. Clark (2016) 63 Cal.4th 522; the Supreme Court considered these factors in upholding a determination of reckless indifference to human life: (1) Knowledge of Weapons, and Use and Number of Weapons (2) Physical Presence at the Crime and Opportunities to Restrain the Crime and/or Aid the Victim	703 (Special Circumstances – Felony Murder) but did not evaluate whether this standard should be expanded or clarified. 		(3) Duration of the Felony (4) Defendant's Knowledge of Cohort's Likelihood of Killing (5) Defendant's Efforts to Minimize the Risks of the Violence During the Felony The definition of "reckless indifference to human life" should be modified to instruct that the "person acts with reckless indifference to human life when he or she knowingly engages in criminal activity that he or she knows creates a serious risk of death," as well as include the five case-specific factors listed in Clark.
540C	The Offices of the Los Angeles County Public Defender and Alternate Public Defender	CALCRIM 540C Should Eliminate Reference to Natural and Probable Consequences. The proposed instruction states: An act causes death if the death is the direct, natural, and probable consequence of the act and the death would not have happened without the act. A natural and probable consequence is one that a reasonable person would know is likely to happen if nothing unusual intervenes. In deciding whether a consequence is natural and probable, consider all the circumstances established by the evidence. This instruction creates confusion by using the term "natural and probable consequence" to describe causation in relation to murder. SB 1437's amendments to Penal Code section 188 eliminated the natural and probable consequences doctrine as it relates to murder. Use of the term "natural and probable consequences" in this instruction will invite unnecessary confusion. Under California law there is no strict requirement of "causation" between a "killing" and the commission of a felony under the felony-murder rule, however Penal Code section 189 does require a "killing" in the perpetration of one of the designated felonies. A simultaneous or coincidental "death" is not a "killing." It has been held in California that death from a heart attack during the course of a robbery is murder if " ... but for the robbery the victim would not have experienced the fright which brought on the fatal heart attack." (People v. Stamp (1969) 2 Ca1.App.3d 203, 209.) Conversely, if death would have occurred despite the robbery, the death is not a "killing" which would constitute "murder." (People v. Gunnerson (1977) 74 Cal.App.3d 370, 378.) CALCRIM 540C should be redrafted to state:	This comment raises issues outside the scope of the current invitation to comment. The committee will consider this comment at its next meeting.

		An act causes death if the death would not have happened without the act. If the death would have occurred despite commission of the act, the death is not a killing that constitutes murder.
548	Erin Loback, Deputy District Attorney from Alameda County	"Whether" is a better choice than "that" in the last paragraph.	The committee agrees with this suggestion and has changed the word back to "whether."
548	Barry P. Helft, Chief Deputy State Public Defender, on behalf of the Office of the State Public Defender ("OSPD")	Potentially Ambiguous Language Regarding Unanimity Requirement The final sentence of the proposed instruction ("you must unanimously agree that the murder is in the first or second degree") is open to an erroneous interpretation. The jurors could understand it to mean that they could "unanimously agree that the murder is in the first or second degree" if some of them believe the murder is in the first degree, and some of them believe the murder is in the second degree. Even with that split in their opinions, they would be "unanimously agree[ing]" that the murder is either "in the first or second degree." This interpretation would be legally improper. The jury must unanimously determine whether murder is in the first or second degree. (People v. Jones (2014) 230 Cal.App.4th 373, 376.) And when two alternative theories of murder support different degrees of murder, juror unanimity is required as to the theory of guilt. (People v. Sanchez (2013) 221 Cal.App.4th 1012, 1018, 1026; see also People v. Johnson (2016) 243 Cal.App.4th 1247, 1279-1280.) To address this problem, OSPD suggests that the final sentence of the proposed instruction be replaced with the following language: You do not all need to agree on the same theory, but in order to convict the defendant of murder you must be unanimous in finding the defendant guilty of first degree murder, or unanimous in finding the defendant guilty of second degree murder. If different theories of murder support different degrees of murder, you must be unanimous as to the theory of guilt.	The committee disagrees with the assertion that this instruction could be erroneously interpreted by jurors. Jurors are told not to return a verdict on second degree murder without first acquitting on first degree murder. Therefore, in the event of a split among jurors about degree, the jurors would understand not to return a verdict for either degree. Further, there is no requirement of unanimity as to the theory of guilt. However, the committee agrees that the instruction could possibly be improved with different or additional language. Therefore, the committee will reconsider this comment at its next meeting.

548	Barry P. Helft, Chief Deputy State Public Defender, on behalf of the Office of the State Public Defender ("OSPD")	Revision of Bench Note to Reflect New Mens Rea Requirement As noted, the proposed instruction informs jurors that, when the defendant is prosecuted for murder on two or more theories "You do not all need to agree on the same theory . . . ." There is some cautionary language in the proposed Bench Notes to CALCRIM No. 548 based on People v. Dellinger (1984) 163 Cal.App.3d 284, 300-302, stating: "If there is evidence of multiple acts from which the jury might conclude that the defendant killed the decedent, the court may be required to give CALCRIM No. 3500, Unanimity." Senate Bill No. 1437 (2017-2018 Reg. Sess.) compelled statutory changes to the mens rea element of felony murder in cases where the defendant was not the actual perpetrator of the killing. Accordingly, OSPD suggests adding the following language to the Bench Note: > When the theories of murder include felony murder where the defendant allegedly committed the fatal act, and felony murder where the defendant did not commit the fatal act, a unanimity instruction must be given. The additional language is necessary because the theories of felony murder as an actual perpetrator, and felony murder as an aider and abettor, rely on different acts or factual scenarios and, following the passage of Senate Bill No. 1437, there are separate defenses to each. Malice is now an element of the latter but not the former. A unanimity instruction is warranted in such a case for the same reasons one was required in People v. Dellinger, supra, 163 Cal.App.3d 284.	The committee disagrees with this proposal. Dellinger says that unanimity might be required for a multiple-acts case; it does not say that unanimity is required when there are multiple theories of felony-murder liability that differ based on who committed the single fatal act. The presence of different defenses might mean that a theory has not been proven beyond a reasonable doubt. It does not mean that there has to be unanimity as to the theory.
561	Kate Chatfield, on behalf of The Justice Collaborative	As the proposed Bench Notes state, as a result of changes to Penal Code section 188, there can no longer be murder liability when a participant in a crime does not act with malice aforethought. ("Except as stated in subdivision (e) of Section 189, in order to be convicted of murder, a principal in a crime shall act with malice aforethought. Malice shall not be imputed to a person based solely on his or her participation in a crime." Penal Code section 188(a)(3)) As provocative act murder by an accomplice does not require malice aforethought on the part of the non-provocateur defendant, this theory of murder liability has been legislatively repealed.	The committee previously considered whether to revoke this instruction but decided instead to add the proposed cautionary bench note. To revoke this instruction in the absence of case law would be premature.

		Further, in addition to the changes Penal Code § 188 noted by Judicial Council, Section 1, subd.(g) of Senate Bill 1437 states: > Except as stated in subdivision (e) of Section 189 of the Penal Code, a conviction for murder requires that a person act with malice aforethought. A person's culpability for murder must be premised upon that person's own actions and subjective mens rea. As provocative act murder by an accomplice is not premised on the defendant's own actions, nor is the defendant's subjective state of mind at issue, there can be no more murder liability under this doctrine for a non-killer. This instruction should be revoked.

While No. 1045 does contain a brief mention to "intent" under AUTHORITY, more clarification in a note or commentary would be appropriate. 1128 & 252	Robert Mestman, Sr. Deputy District Attorney, on behalf of the Orange County	AGREE WITH THE PROPOSAL IF IT IS MODIFIED While it is a good idea to clarify that specific intent is required for a violation of PC § 288.7(b) [sexual penetration of a minor 10 or younger], we are not sure the appropriate place to include this note is in No. 252, as opposed to the instruction for the underlying crime. Such a note is included in No. 1128. Including this note	The committee agrees with this comment and has removed the proposed addition for CALCRIM No. 252.

	District Attorney's Office	in No. 252 may set a bad precedent. Should all mental states/intents for every crime now be listed in instructions Nos. 250-252? We believe that the appropriate place to include a note about mental state/intent for a particular crime is in the instruction for the underlying crime.

The instructions have been modified to add this language: [An object is inherently deadly if it is deadly or dangerous in the ordinary use for which it is designed.] This is only a partial statement of the law and, therefore, is incorrect as stated. The drafters claim to have taken this modification from People v. Stutelberg (2018) 29 Cal.App.5th 314, 317-318. The problem is that the drafters omitted the trailing portion of the definition. The Court of Appeal in Stutelberg said, "An 'inherently deadly or dangerous' weapon is a term of art describing objects that are deadly or dangerous in "the ordinary use for which they are designed," that is, weapons that have no practical nondeadly purpose." (People v. Stutelberg (2018) 29 Cal.App.5th 314, 318-319.) The correct definition, pursuant to Stutelberg is: An object is inherently deadly if it is deadly or dangerous in the ordinary use for which it is designed, that is, the object has no practical nondeadly purpose. The proposed instruction is incorrect as a matter of law because it leaves out the final clause, which specifies what makes the item deadly. The Supreme Court, in In re B.M. (2018) 6 Cal.5th 528, explains that whether an item is a deadly or dangerous weapon is nuanced. First, the object alleged to be a deadly weapon must be used in a manner that is not only capable of producing but also "likely to produce death or great bodily injury." (B.M. at p. 533, emphasis in original.) The use of an object in a manner likely to produce death or great bodily injury requires more than a mere possibility that serious injury could have resulted from	The committee disagrees with the suggestion to add the clause "that is, weapons that have no practical nondeadly purpose" to the definition of inherently deadly. This clause states an alternate and equivalent phrasing of the definition; it is not a limitation of the definition. And reliance on In re B.M. is misplaced because that case dealt with a noninherently deadly weapon.

		the way the object was used. (B.M. at p. 534.) Second, the law does not permit conjecture as to how the object could have been used. Rather, the determination of whether an object is a deadly weapon must rest on evidence of how the defendant actually used the object. (B.M. at p. 534.) Third, although it is appropriate to consider the injury that could have resulted from the way the object was used, the extent of actual injury or lack of injury is also relevant. A conviction for assault with a deadly weapon does not require proof of an injury or even physical contact, but limited injury or lack of injury may suggest that the nature of the object or the way it was used was not capable of producing or likely to produce death or serious harm. (B.M. at p. 535.) These CALCRIMs, if they are to be modified, must be modified to correctly state the definition found in In re B.M.
511, 524, 860, 862-863, 875, 982-983, 2503, 2720, 2721, 3130, 3145	The Offices of the Los Angeles County Public Defender and Alternate Public Defender	There is a modification to the Bench Note which is confusing. As modified, the Bench Note states: If there is substantial evidence whether the object is a deadly weapon as a matter of law, give both bracketed portions. This modification is poorly worded and its meaning uncertain. The intent of the drafters is unclear; it is possible, however, that the drafters meant that when it cannot be said that the object is a deadly weapon as a matter of law, then both bracketed portions should be given. If that was the intent, then the sentence should be rewritten thusly: If there is no substantial evidence that the object is a deadly weapon as a matter of law, give both bracketed portions.	The committee agrees that the proposed bench note could be improved. In response, the committee has changed the sentence to: "If determining whether the item is an inherently deadly weapon requires resolution of a factual issue, give both bracketed instructions."

101 Cautionary Admonitions: Jury Conduct (Before, During, or After Jury Is Selected)

Our system of justice requires that trials be conducted in open court with the parties presenting evidence and the judge deciding the law that applies to the case. It is unfair to the parties if you receive additional information from any other source because that information may be unreliable or irrelevant and the parties will not have had the opportunity to examine and respond to it. Your verdict must be based only on the evidence presented during trial in this court and the law as I provide it to you.

During the trial, do not talk about the case or about any of the people or any subject involved in the case with anyone, not even your family, friends, spiritual advisors, or therapists. Do not share information about the case in writing, by email, by telephone, on the Internet, or by any other means of communication. You must not talk about these things with other jurors either, until you begin deliberating.

As jurors, you may discuss the case together only after all of the evidence has been presented, the attorneys have completed their arguments, and I have instructed you on the law. After I tell you to begin your deliberations, you may discuss the case only in the jury room, and only when all jurors are present.

You must not allow anything that happens outside of the courtroom to affect your decision [unless I tell you otherwise]. During the trial, do not read, listen to, or watch any news report or commentary about the case from any source.

Do not use the Internet (, a dictionary/[, or _____<insert other relevant source of information or means of communication>]) in any way in connection with this case, either on your own or as a group. Do not investigate the facts or the law or do any research regarding this case. Do not conduct any tests or experiments, or visit the scene of any event involved in this case. If you happen to pass by the scene, do not stop or investigate.

[If you have a cell phone or other electronic device, keep it turned off while you are in the courtroom and during jury deliberations. An electronic device includes any data storage device. If someone needs to contact you in an emergency, the court can receive messages that it will deliver to you without delay.]

During the trial, do not speak to a defendant, witness, lawyer, or anyone associated with them. Do not listen to anyone who tries to talk to you about the case or about any of the people or subjects involved in it. If someone asks you about the case, tell him or her that you cannot discuss it. If that person keeps talking to you about the case, you must end the conversation.

If you receive any information about this case from any source outside of the trial, even unintentionally, do not share that information with any other juror. If you do receive such information, or if anyone tries to influence you or any juror, you must immediately tell the bailiff.

Keep an open mind throughout the trial. Do not make up your mind about the verdict or any issue until after you have discussed the case with the other jurors during deliberations. Do not take anything I say or do during the trial as an indication of what I think about the facts, the witnesses, or what your verdict should be.

~~Do not let bias, sympathy, prejudice, or public opinion influence your decision.~~ You must not let bias, prejudice, or public opinion influence your assessment of the evidence or your decision. Many people have assumptions and biases about or stereotypes of other people and may be unaware of them. You must not be biased in favor of or against any party, witness, attorney, defendant[s], or alleged victim because of his or her disability, gender, nationality, national origin, race or ethnicity, religion, gender identity, sexual orientation, age, [or] socioeconomic status(./,) [or <insert any other impermissible form of bias>.]

You must reach your verdict without any consideration of punishment.

I want to emphasize that you may not use any form of research or communication, including electronic or wireless research or communication, to research, share, communicate, or allow someone else to communicate with you regarding any subject of the trial. [If you violate this rule, you may be subject to jail time, a fine, or other punishment.]

When the trial has ended and you have been released as jurors, you may discuss the case with anyone. [But under California law, you must wait at least 90 days before negotiating or agreeing to accept any payment for information about the case.]

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty

The court has a sua sponte duty to instruct the jurors on how they must conduct themselves during trial. (Pen. Code, § 1122.) See also California Rules of Court Rule 2.1035.

When giving this instruction during the penalty phase of a capital case, the court has a sua sponte duty to delete the sentence which reads "Do not let bias, sympathy, prejudice, or public opinion influence your decision." (People v. Lanphear (1984) 36 Cal.3d 163, 165 [203 Cal.Rptr. 122, 680 P.2d 1081]; California v. Brown (1987) 479 U.S. 538, 545 [107 S.Ct. 837, 93 L.Ed.2d 934].) The court should also delete the following sentence: "You must reach your verdict without any consideration of punishment."

If there will be a jury view, give the bracketed phrase "unless I tell you otherwise" in the fourth paragraph. (Pen. Code, § 1119.)

Admonition Not to Discuss Case With Anyone

In People v. Danks (2004) 32 Cal.4th 269, 298–300 [8 Cal.Rptr.3d 767, 82 P.3d 1249], a capital case, two jurors violated the court's admonition not to discuss the case with anyone by consulting with their pastors regarding the death penalty. The Supreme Court stated:

> It is troubling that during deliberations not one but two jurors had conversations with their pastors that ultimately addressed the issue being resolved at the penalty phase in this case. Because jurors instructed not to speak to anyone about the case except a fellow juror during deliberations . . . . may assume such an instruction does not apply to confidential relationships, we recommend the jury be expressly instructed that they may not speak to anyone about the case, except a fellow juror during deliberations, and that this includes, but is not limited to, spouses, spiritual leaders or advisers, or therapists. Moreover, the jury should also be instructed that if anyone, other than a fellow juror during deliberations, tells a juror his or her view of the evidence in the case, the juror should report that conversation immediately to the court.

200 Duties of Judge and Jury

Members of the jury, I will now instruct you on the law that applies to this case. [I will give you a copy of the instructions to use in the jury room.] [Each of you has a copy of these instructions to use in the jury room.] [The instructions that you receive may be printed, typed, or written by hand. Certain sections may have been crossed-out or added. Disregard any deleted sections and do not try to guess what they might have been. Only consider the final version of the instructions in your deliberations.]

You must decide what the facts are. It is up to all of you, and you alone, to decide what happened, based only on the evidence that has been presented to you in this trial.

~~Do not let bias, sympathy, prejudice, or public opinion influence your decision.~~ You must not let bias, prejudice, or public opinion influence your assessment of the evidence or your decision. Many people have assumptions and biases about or stereotypes of other people and may be unaware of them. You must not be biased in favor of or against any party, witness, attorney, defendant[s], or alleged victim because of his or her disability, gender, nationality, national origin, race or ethnicity, religion, gender identity, sexual orientation, age, [or] socioeconomic status (./,) [or <insert any other impermissible form of bias>. ~~Bias includes, but is not limited to, bias for or against the witnesses, attorneys, defendant[s] or alleged victim[s], based on disability, gender, nationality, national origin, race or ethnicity, religion, gender identity, sexual orientation, age, [or] socioeconomic status (./,) [or _____ <insert any other impermissible basis for bias as appropriate>.]~~

You must follow the law as I explain it to you, even if you disagree with it. If you believe that the attorneys' comments on the law conflict with my instructions, you must follow my instructions.

Pay careful attention to all of these instructions and consider them together. If I repeat any instruction or idea, do not conclude that it is more important than any other instruction or idea just because I repeated it.

Some words or phrases used during this trial have legal meanings that are different from their meanings in everyday use. These words and phrases will be specifically defined in these instructions. Please be sure to listen carefully and follow the definitions that I give you. Words and phrases not specifically defined in these instructions are to be applied using their ordinary, everyday meanings.

Some of these instructions may not apply, depending on your findings about the facts of the case. [Do not assume just because I give a particular instruction that I am suggesting anything about the facts.] After you have decided what the facts are, follow the instructions that do apply to the facts as you find them.

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty

The court has a sua sponte duty to instruct that the jurors are the exclusive judges of the facts and that they are entitled to a copy of the written instructions when they deliberate. (Pen. Code, §§ 1093(f), 1137.) Although there is no sua sponte duty to instruct on the other topics described in this instruction, there is authority approving instruction on these topics.

In the first paragraph, select the appropriate bracketed alternative on written instructions. Penal Code section 1093(f) requires the court to give the jury a written copy of the instructions on request. The committee believes that the better practice is to always provide the jury with written instructions. If the court, in the absence of a jury request, elects not to provide jurors with written instructions, the court must modify the first paragraph to inform the jurors that they may request a written copy of the instructions.

Do not instruct a jury in the penalty phase of a capital case that they cannot consider sympathy. (People v. Easley (1982) 34 Cal.3d 858, 875–880 [196 Cal.Rptr. 309, 671 P.2d 813].) Instead of this instruction, CALCRIM 761 is the proper introductory instruction for the penalty phase of a capital case.

Do not give the bracketed sentence in the final paragraph if the court will be commenting on the evidence pursuant to Penal Code section 1127.

Instructional Duty

This instruction should not be given unless it can be inferred that the defendant made the false statement for self-protection rather than to protect someone else. (People v. Rankin (1992) 9 Cal.App.4th 430, 436 [11 Cal.Rptr.2d 735] [error to instruct on false statements and consciousness of guilt where defendant lied to protect an accomplice]; see also People v. Blakeslee (1969) 2 Cal.App.3d 831, 839 [82 Cal.Rptr. 839].)

Consider modifying this instruction when the evidence supports an inference that the defendant was aware of his or her guilt generally, but not of the charged crime. People v. Burton (2018) 29 Cal.App.5th 917, 926, fn.2 [241 Cal.Rptr.3d 35].

COMMENTARY

The word "willfully" was not included in the description of the making of the false statement. Although one court suggested that the jury be explicitly instructed that the defendant must "willfully" make the false statement (People v. Louis (1984) 159 Cal.App.3d 156, 161–162 [205 Cal.Rptr. 306]), the California Supreme Court subsequently held that such language is not required. (People v. Mickey (1991) 54 Cal.3d 612, 672, fn. 9 [286 Cal.Rptr. 801, 818 P.2d 84].)

RELATED ISSUES

Evidence

The false nature of the defendant's statement may be shown by inconsistencies in the defendant's own testimony, his or her pretrial statements, or by any other prosecution evidence. (People v. Kimble (1988) 44 Cal.3d 480, 498 [244 Cal.Rptr. 148, 749 P.2d 803] [overruling line of cases that required falsity to be demonstrated only by defendant's own testimony or statements]; accord People v. Edwards (1992) 8 Cal.App.4th 1092, 1103 [10 Cal.Rptr.2d 821]; People v. Williams (1995) 33 Cal.App.4th 467, 478–479 [39 Cal.Rptr.2d 358].)

Un-Mirandized Voluntary Statement

The Miranda rule (Miranda v. Arizona (1966) 384 U.S. 436, 444, 479 [86 S.Ct. 1602, 16 L.Ed.2d 694]) does not prohibit instructing the jury that it may draw an inference of guilt from a willfully false or deliberately misleading un-Mirandized statement that the defendant voluntarily introduces into evidence on direct examination. 376. Possession of Recently Stolen Property as Evidence of a Crime

If you conclude that the defendant knew (he/she) possessed property and you conclude that the property had in fact been recently (stolen/extorted), you may not convict the defendant of _____ <insert crime> based on those facts alone. However, if you also find that supporting evidence tends to prove (his/her) guilt, then you may conclude that the evidence is sufficient to prove (he/she) committed _____ <insert crime>.

The supporting evidence need only be slight and need not be enough by itself to prove guilt. You may consider how, where, and when the defendant possessed the property, along with any other relevant circumstances tending to prove (his/her) guilt of _____ <insert crime>.

[You may also consider whether _____ <insert other appropriate factors for consideration>.]

Remember that you may not convict the defendant of any crime unless you are convinced that each fact essential to the conclusion that the defendant is guilty of that crime has been proved beyond a reasonable doubt.

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty

In People v. Najera (2008) 43 Cal.4th 1132, 1141 [77 Cal.Rptr.3d 605, 184 P.3d 732], the Supreme Court abrogated People v. Clark (1953) 122 Cal.App.2d 342, 346 [265 P.2d 43] [failure to instruct that unexplained possession alone does not support finding of guilt was error]. Accordingly, there is no longer a sua sponte duty to give this instruction.

The instruction may be given when the charged crime is robbery, burglary, theft, or receiving stolen property. (See People v. McFarland (1962) 58 Cal.2d 748, 755 [26 Cal.Rptr. 473, 376 P.2d 449] [burglary and theft]; People v. Johnson (1993) 6 Cal.4th 1, 36–37 [23 Cal.Rptr.2d 593, 859 P.2d 673] [burglary]; People v. Gamble (1994) 22 Cal.App.4th 446, 453 [27 Cal.Rptr.2d 451] [robbery]; People v. Anderson (1989) 210 Cal.App.3d 414, 424 [258 Cal.Rptr. 482] [receiving stolen property].) The crime of receiving stolen property includes receiving property that was obtained by extortion (Pen. Code, § 496). Thus, the instruction also includes optional language for recently extorted property.

Use of this instruction should be limited to theft and theft-related crimes. (People v. Prieto (2003) 30 Cal.4th 226, 248-249 [66 P.3d 1123; 133 Cal.Rptr.2d 18] [trial court's failure to do so was error.]; People v. Barker (2001) 91 Cal.App.4th 1166, 1176 [111 Cal.Rptr.2d 403] [disapproving use of instruction to infer guilt of murder]; but see People v. Harden (2003) 110 Cal.App.4th 848, 856 [2 Cal.Rptr.3d 105] [court did not err in giving modified instruction on possession of recently stolen property in relation to special circumstance of murder committed during robbery]; People v. Smithey (1999) 20 Cal.4th 936, 975–978 [86 Cal.Rptr.2d 243, 978 P.2d 1171] [in a case involving both premeditated and felony murder, no error in instructing on underlying crimes of robbery and burglary]; People v. Mendoza (2000) 24 Cal.4th 130, 176–177 [99 Cal.Rptr.2d 485, 6 P.3d 150].)

Corroborating Evidence

The bracketed paragraph that begins with "You may also consider" may be used if the court grants a request for instruction on specific examples of corroboration supported by the evidence. (See People v. Russell (1932) 120 Cal.App. 622, 625–626 [8 P.2d 209] [list of examples]; see also People v. Peters (1982) 128 Cal.App.3d 75, 85–86 [180 Cal.Rptr. 76] [reference to false or contradictory statement improper when no such evidence was introduced]). Examples include the following:

a. False, contradictory, or inconsistent statements. (People v. Anderson (1989) 210 Cal.App.3d 414, 424 [258 Cal.Rptr. 482]; see, e.g., *People v. BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty

The court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on aiding and abetting when the prosecution relies on that theory of culpability. (People v. Beeman (1984) 35 Cal.3d 547, 560-561[199 Cal.Rptr. 60, 674 P.2d 1318].)

The court has a sua sponte duty to identify and instruct on any target offense relied on by the prosecution as a predicate offense when substantial evidence supports the theory. Give all relevant instructions on the alleged target offense or offenses. The court, however, does not have to instruct on all potential target offenses supported by the evidence if the prosecution does not rely on those offenses. (People v. Prettyman (1996) 14 Cal.4th 248, 267–268 [58 Cal.Rptr.2d 827, 926 P.2d 1013]; see People v. Huynh (2002) 99 Cal.App.4th 662, 677–678 [121 Cal.Rptr.2d 340] [no sua sponte duty to instruct on simple assault when prosecutor never asked court to consider it as target offense].)

The target offense is the crime that the accused parties intended to commit. The non-target is an additional unintended crime that occurs during the commission of the target.

Give the bracketed paragraph beginning, "Do not consider evidence of defendant's intoxication" when instructing on aiding and abetting liability for a non-target offense. (People v. Mendoza (1998) 18 Cal.4th 1114, 1134 [77 Cal.Rptr.2d 428, 959 P.2d 735].)

Related Instructions

Give CALCRIM No. 400, Aiding and Abetting: General Principles, and CALCRIM No. 401, Aiding and Abetting: Intended Crimes, before this instruction.

This instruction should be used when the prosecution relies on the natural and probable consequences doctrine and charges both target and non-target crimes. If only non-target crimes are charged, give CALCRIM No. 403, Natural and Probable Consequences Doctrine (Only Non-Target Offense Charged).

COMMENTARY

In People v. Prettyman (1996) 14 Cal.4th 248, 268 [58 Cal.Rptr.2d 827, 926 P.2d 1013], the court concluded that the trial court must sua sponte identify and describe for the jury any target offenses allegedly aided and abetted by the defendant.

Although no published case to date gives a clear definition of the terms "natural" and "probable," nor holds that there is a sua sponte duty to define them, we have included a suggested definition. (See People v. Prettyman, supra, 14 Cal.4th at p. 291 (conc. & dis. opn. of Brown, J.); see also People v. Coffman and Marlow (2004) 34 Cal.4th 1, 107–109 [17 Cal.Rptr.3d 710, 96 P.3d 30] [court did not err in failing to define "natural and probable"].)

RELATED ISSUES

Murder

A verdict of murder may not be based on the natural and probable consequences doctrine. Pen. Code, § 188(a)(3). Penal Code section 188, as amended by Statutes 2018, ch. 1015 (S.B. 1437), became effective January 1, 2019. The amendment added "malice shall not be imputed to a person based solely on his or her participation in a crime." The question whether this amendment abolished the natural and probable consequences doctrine as to attempted murder is unresolved.

Lesser Included Offenses

The court has a duty to instruct on lesser included offenses that could be the natural and probable consequence of the intended offense when the evidence raises a question whether the greater offense is a natural and probable consequence of the original, intended criminal act. (People v. Woods (1992) 8 Cal.App.4th 1570, 1586-1588 [11 Cal.Rptr.2d 231] [aider and abettor may be found guilty of second degree murder under doctrine of natural and probable consequences although the principal was convicted of first degree murder].)

Specific Intent—Non-Target Crimes

Before an aider and abettor may be found guilty of a specific intent crime under the natural and probable consequences doctrine, the jury must first find that the perpetrator possessed the required specific intent. (People v. Patterson (1989) 209 Cal.App.3d 610, 614 [257 Cal.Rptr. 407] [trial court erroneously failed to instruct the jury that they must find that the perpetrator had the specific intent to kill necessary for attempted murder before they could find the defendant guilty as an aider and abettor under the "natural and probable" consequences doctrine], disagreeing with People v. Hammond (1986) 181 Cal.App.3d 463 [226 Cal.Rptr. 475] to the extent it held otherwise.) However, it is not necessary that the jury find that the aider and abettor had the specific intent; the jury must only determine that the specific intent crime was a natural and probable consequence of the original crime aided and abetted. (People v. Woods (1992) 8 Cal.App.4th 1570, 1586–1587 [11 Cal.Rptr. 2d 231].)

Target and Non-Target Offense May Consist of Same Act

Although generally, non-target offenses charged under the natural and probable consequences doctrine will be different and typically more serious criminal acts than the target offense alleged, they may consist of the same act with differing mental states. (People v. Laster (1997) 52 Cal.App.4th 1450, 1463–1466 [61 Cal.Rptr.2d 680] [defendants were properly convicted of attempted murder as natural and probable consequence of aiding and abetting discharge of firearm from vehicle. Although both crimes consist of same act, attempted murder requires more culpable mental state].)

Target Offense Not Committed

The Supreme Court has left open the question whether a person may be liable under the natural and probable consequences doctrine for a non-target offense, if the target offense was not committed. (People v. Prettyman (1996) 14 Cal.4th 248, 262, fn. 4 [58 Cal.Rptr.2d 827, 926 P.2d 1013], but see People v. Ayala (2010) 181 Cal.App.4th 1440, 1452 [105 Cal.Rptr.3d 575]; *People v. The target offense is the crime that the accused parties intended to commit. The non-target is an additional unintended crime that occurs during the commission of the target.

Do not give the first bracketed paragraph in cases in which the prosecution is also pursuing a conspiracy theory.

Give the bracketed paragraph beginning, "Do not consider evidence of defendant's intoxication" when instructing on aiding and abetting liability for a non-target offense. (People v. Mendoza (1998) 18 Cal.4th 1114, 1134 [77 Cal.Rptr.2d 428, 959 P.2d 735].)

Related Instructions

Give CALCRIM No. 400, Aiding and Abetting: General Principles, and CALCRIM No. 401, Aiding and Abetting: Intended Crimes, before this instruction.

This instruction should be used when the prosecution relies on the natural and probable consequences doctrine and charges only non-target crimes. If both target and non-target crimes are charged, give CALCRIM No. 402, Natural and Probable Consequences Doctrine (Target and Non-Target Offenses Charged).

COMMENTARY

In People v. Prettyman (1996) 14 Cal.4th 248, 268 [58 Cal.Rptr.2d 827, 926 P.2d 1013], the court concluded that the trial court must sua sponte identify and describe for the jury any target offenses allegedly aided and abetted by the defendant.

Although no published case to date gives a clear definition of the terms "natural" and "probable," nor holds that there is a sua sponte duty to define them, we have included a suggested definition. (See People v. Prettyman, supra, 14 Cal.4th at p. 291 (conc. & dis. opn. of Brown, J.); see also People v. Coffman and Marlow (2004) 34 Cal.4th 1, 107–109 [17 Cal.Rptr.3d 710, 96 P.3d 30] [court did not err in failing to define "natural and probable."])

RELATED ISSUES

Murder

A verdict of murder may not be based on the natural and probable consequences doctrine. Pen. Code, § 188(a)(3). Penal Code section 188, as amended by Statutes 2018, ch. 1015 (S.B. 1437), became effective January 1, 2019. This amendment added "malice shall not be imputed to a person based solely on his or her participation in a crime." The question whether this legislation abolished the natural and probable consequences doctrine as to attempted murder is unresolved.

See the Related Issues section under CALCRIM No. 401, Aiding and Abetting, and CALCRIM No. 402, Natural and Probable Consequences Doctrine (Target and Non-Target Offenses Charged).

511 Excusable Homicide: Accident in the Heat of Passion

The defendant is not guilty of (murder/ [or] manslaughter) if (he/she) killed someone by accident while acting in the heat of passion. Such a killing is excused, and therefore not unlawful, if, at the time of the killing:

1. The defendant acted in the heat of passion;

2. The defendant was (suddenly provoked by _____<insert name of decedent>/ [or] suddenly drawn into combat by _____<insert name of decedent>);

3. The defendant did not take undue advantage of _____<insert name of decedent>;

4. The defendant did not use a dangerous weapon;

5. The defendant did not kill _____<insert name of decedent> in a cruel or unusual way;

6. The defendant did not intend to kill _____<insert name of decedent> and did not act with conscious disregard of the danger to human life;

AND

7. The defendant did not act with criminal negligence.

A person acts in the heat of passion when he or she is provoked into doing a rash act under the influence of intense emotion that obscures his or her reasoning or judgment. The provocation must be sufficient to have caused a person of average disposition to act rashly and without due deliberation, that is, from passion rather than from judgment.

Heat of passion does not require anger, rage, or any specific emotion. It can be any violent or intense emotion that causes a person to act without due deliberation and reflection.

In order for the killing to be excused on this basis, the defendant must have acted under the direct and immediate influence of provocation as I have defined it. While no specific type of provocation is required, slight or remote provocation is not sufficient. Sufficient provocation may occur over a short or long period of time.

It is not enough that the defendant simply was provoked. The defendant is not allowed to set up (his/her) own standard of conduct. You must decide whether the defendant was provoked and whether the provocation was sufficient. In deciding whether the provocation was sufficient, consider whether a person of average disposition, in the same situation and knowing the same facts, would have reacted from passion rather than judgment.

[A dangerous weapon is any object, instrument, or weapon [that is inherently deadly or dangerous or one] that is used in such a way that it is capable of causing and likely to cause death or great bodily injury.]

[An object is inherently deadly if it is deadly or dangerous in the ordinary use for which it was designed.]

[Great bodily injury means significant or substantial physical injury. It is an injury that is greater than minor or moderate harm.]

Criminal negligence* involves more than ordinary carelessness, inattention, or mistake in judgment. A person acts with criminal negligence when:

1. He or she acts in a way that creates a high risk of death or great bodily injury;

AND

2. A reasonable person would have known that acting in that way would create such a risk.

In other words, a person acts with criminal negligence when the way he or she acts is so different from how an ordinarily careful person would act in the same situation that his or her act amounts to disregard for human life or indifference to the consequences of that act.

The People have the burden of proving beyond a reasonable doubt that the killing was not excused. If the People have not met this burden, you must find the defendant not guilty of (murder/ [or] manslaughter).

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty

The trial court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on accident and heat of passion that excuses homicide when there is evidence supporting the defense. (People v. Hampton (1929) 96 Cal.App. 157, 159–160 [273 P. 854] [court erred in refusing defendant's requested instruction].)

Give the bracketed phrase "that is inherently deadly or one" and give the bracketed definition of inherently deadly only if the object is a deadly weapon as a matter of law. (People v. Stutelberg (2018) 29 Cal.App.5th 314, 317-318 [240 Cal.Rptr.3d 156].)

RELATED ISSUES

Distinguished From Voluntary Manslaughter

Under Penal Code section 195, subd. 2, a homicide is "excusable," "in the heat of passion" if done "by accident," or on "sudden . . . provocation . . . or . . . combat." (Pen. Code, § 195, subd. 2.) Thus, unlike voluntary manslaughter, the killing must have been committed without criminal intent, that is, accidentally. (See People v. Cooley (1962) 211 Cal.App.2d 173, 204 [27 Cal.Rptr. 543], disapproved on other grounds in People v. Lew (1968) 68 Cal.2d 774, 778, fn. 1 [69 Cal.Rptr. 102, 441 P.2d 942]; Pen. Code, § 195, subd. 1 [act must be without criminal intent]; Pen. Code, § 26, subd. 5 [accident requires absence of "evil design [or] intent"].) The killing must also be on "sudden" provocation, eliminating the possibility of provocation over time, which may be considered in cases of voluntary manslaughter. (See Bench Notes to CALCRIM No. 570, Voluntary Manslaughter: Heat of Passion–Lesser Included Offense.)

Distinguished From Involuntary Manslaughter

Involuntary manslaughter requires a finding of gross or criminal negligence. (See Bench Notes to CALCRIM No. 581, Involuntary Manslaughter: Murder Not Charged; Pen. Code, § 26, subd. 5 [accident requires no "culpable negligence"].)

520. First or Second Degree Murder With Malice Aforethought (Pen. Code, § 187)

The defendant is charged [in Count __] with murder [in violation of Penal Code section 187].

To prove that the defendant is guilty of this crime, the People must prove that:

[1A. The defendant committed an act that caused the death of (another person/ [or] a fetus);]

[OR]

[1B. The defendant had a legal duty to (help/care for/rescue/warn/maintain the property of/ _____ <insert other required action[s]>) _____<insert description of decedent/person to whom duty is owed> and the defendant failed to perform that duty and that failure caused the death of (another person/ [or] a fetus);]

[AND]

2. When the defendant (acted/[or] failed to act), (he/she) had a state of mind called malice aforethought(;/.)

<Give element 3 when instructing on justifiable or excusable homicide.>
[AND

3. (He/She) killed without lawful (excuse/[or] justification).]

There are two kinds of malice aforethought, express malice and implied malice. Proof of either is sufficient to establish the state of mind required for murder.

The defendant had express malice if (he/she) unlawfully intended to kill.

The defendant had implied malice if:

1. (He/She) intentionally (committed the act/[or] failed to act);

2. The natural and probable consequences of the (act/[or] failure to act) were dangerous to human life;

3. At the time (he/she) (acted/[or] failed to act), (he/she) knew (his/her) (act/[or] failure to act) was dangerous to human life;

AND

4. (He/She) deliberately (acted/[or] failed to act) with conscious disregard for (human/ [or] fetal) life.

Malice aforethought does not require hatred or ill will toward the victim. It is a mental state that must be formed before the act that causes death is committed. It does not require deliberation or the passage of any particular period of time.

[It is not necessary that the defendant be aware of the existence of a fetus to be guilty of murdering that fetus.]

[A fetus is an unborn human being that has progressed beyond the embryonic stage after major structures have been outlined, which typically occurs at seven to eight weeks after fertilization.]

[(An act/[or] (A/a) failure to act) causes death if the death is the direct, natural, and probable consequence of the (act/[or] failure to act) and the death would not have happened without the (act/[or] failure to act). A natural and probable consequence is one that a reasonable person would know is likely to happen if nothing unusual intervenes. In deciding whether a consequence is natural and probable, consider all of the circumstances established by the evidence.]

[There may be more than one cause of death. (An act/[or] (A/a) failure to act) causes death only if it is a substantial factor in causing the death. A substantial factor is more than a trivial or remote factor. However, it does not need to be the only factor that causes the death.]

[(A/An) _____<insert description of person owing duty> has a legal duty to (help/care for/rescue/warn/maintain the property of/ _____ <insert other required action[s]>) _____<insert description of decedent/person to whom duty is owed>.]

<Give the following bracketed paragraph if the second degree is the only possible degree of the crime for which the jury may return a verdict>

[If you find the defendant guilty of murder, it is murder of the second degree.]

<Give the following bracketed paragraph if there is substantial evidence of first degree murder>

[If you decide that the defendant committed murder, it is murder of the second degree, unless the People have proved beyond a reasonable doubt that it is murder of the first degree as defined in CALCRIM No. ___ <insert number of appropriate first degree murder instruction>.]

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty

The court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on the first two elements of the crime. If there is sufficient evidence of excuse or justification, the court has a sua sponte duty to include the third, bracketed element in the instruction. (People v. Frye (1992) 7 Cal.App.4th 1148, 1155–1156 [10 Cal.Rptr.2d 217].) The court also has a sua sponte duty to give any other appropriate defense instructions. (See CALCRIM Nos. 505–627, and CALCRIM Nos. 3470–3477.)

If causation is at issue, the court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on proximate cause. (People v. Bernhardt (1963) 222 Cal.App.2d 567, 590–591 [35 Cal.Rptr. 401].) If the evidence indicates that there was only one cause of death, the court should give the "direct, natural, and probable" language in the first bracketed paragraph on causation. If there is evidence of multiple causes of death, the court should also give the "substantial factor" instruction and definition in the second bracketed causation paragraph. (See People v. Autry (1995) 37 Cal.App.4th 351, 363 [43 Cal.Rptr.2d 135]; People v. Pike (1988) 197 Cal.App.3d 732, 746–747 [243 Cal.Rptr. 54].) If there is an issue regarding a superseding or intervening cause, give the appropriate portion of CALCRIM No. 620, Causation: Special Issues.

If the prosecution's theory of the case is that the defendant committed murder based on his or her failure to perform a legal duty, the court may give element 1B.

Review the Bench Notes to CALCRIM No. 582, Involuntary Manslaughter: Failure to Perform Legal Duty—Murder Not Charged.

If the defendant is charged with first degree murder, give this instruction and CALCRIM No. 521, First Degree Murder. If the defendant is charged with second degree murder, no other instruction need be given.

If the defendant is also charged with first ~~or second~~ degree felony murder, instruct on that~~ese~~ crime~~s~~ and give CALCRIM No. 548, Murder: Alternative Theories.

Gross vehicular manslaughter while intoxicated (Pen. Code, § 191.5(a)) is not a lesser included offense of murder. (People v. Sanchez (2001) 24 Cal.4th 983, 988–992 [103 Cal.Rptr.2d 698, 16 P.3d 118].) Similarly, child abuse homicide (Pen. Code, § 273ab) is not a necessarily included offense of murder. (People v. Malfavon (2002) 102 Cal.App.4th 727, 744 [125 Cal.Rptr.2d 618].)

RELATED ISSUES

Causation—Foreseeability

Authority is divided on whether a causation instruction should include the concept of foreseeability. (See People v. Autry (1995) 37 Cal.App.4th 351, 362–363 [43 Cal.Rptr.2d 135]; People v. Temple (1993) 19 Cal.App.4th 1750, 1756 [24 Cal.Rptr.2d 228] [refusing defense-requested instruction on foreseeability in favor of standard causation instruction]; but see People v. Gardner (1995) 37 Cal.App.4th 473, 483 [43 Cal.Rptr.2d 603] [suggesting the following language be used in a causation instruction: "[t]he death of another person must be foreseeable in order to be the natural and probable consequence of the defendant's act"].) It is clear, however, that it is error to instruct a jury that foreseeability is immaterial to causation. (People v. Roberts (1992) 2 Cal.4th 271, 315 [6 Cal.Rptr.2d 276, 826 P.2d 274] [error to instruct a jury that when deciding causation it "[w]as immaterial that the defendant could not reasonably have foreseen the harmful result"].)

Second Degree Murder of a Fetus

The defendant does not need to know a woman is pregnant to be convicted of second degree murder of her fetus. (People v. Taylor (2004) 32 Cal.4th 863, 868 [11 Cal.Rptr.3d 510, 86 P.3d 881] ["[t]here is no requirement that the defendant specifically know of the existence of each victim."]) "[B]y engaging in the conduct he did, the defendant demonstrated a conscious disregard for all life, fetal or otherwise, and hence is liable for all deaths caused by his conduct." 524 Second Degree Murder: Peace Officer (Pen. Code, § 190(b), (c))

If you find the defendant guilty of second degree murder [as charged in Count __], you must then decide whether the People have proved the additional allegation that (he/she) murdered a peace officer.

To prove this allegation the People must prove that:

1. _____ <insert officer's name, excluding title> was a peace officer lawfully performing (his/her) duties as a peace officer;

[AND]

2. When the defendant killed _____ *<insert officer's name, excluding title>, the defendant knew, or reasonably should have known, that _____ <insert officer's name, excluding title> was a peace officer who was performing (his/her) duties(;/.)

3. The defendant (intended to kill the peace officer/ [or] intended to inflict great bodily injury on the peace officer/ [or] personally used a (deadly or dangerous weapon/ [or] firearm) in the commission of the offense).]

[Great bodily injury means significant or substantial physical injury. It is an injury that is greater than minor or moderate harm.]

[A deadly or dangerous weapon is any object, instrument, or weapon [that is inherently deadly or dangerous or one] that is used in such a way that it is capable of causing and likely to cause death or great bodily injury.]

[An object is inherently deadly if it is deadly or dangerous in the ordinary use for which it was designed.]

[A firearm is any device designed to be used as a weapon, from which a projectile is discharged or expelled through a barrel by the force of an explosion or other form of combustion.]

[Someone personally uses a (deadly weapon/ [or] firearm) if he or she intentionally does any of the following:

1. Displays the weapon in a menacing manner;

2. Hits someone with the weapon;

OR

3. Fires the weapon.]

[The People allege that the defendant _____ *<insert all of the factors from element 3 when multiple factors are alleged>. [A person who is employed as a police officer by _____ <insert name of agency that employs police officer> is a peace officer.]

[A person employed by _____ <insert name of agency that employs peace officer, e.g., "the Department of Fish and Wildlife"> is a peace officer if _____*<insert description of facts necessary to make employee a peace officer, e.g, "designated by the director of the agency as a peace officer">.]

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty

The court has a sua sponte duty to give ~~this~~ an instruction defining the elements of the sentencing enhancement. (See People v. Marshall (2000) 83 Cal.App.4th 186, 193–195 [99 Cal.Rptr.2d 441]; Apprendi v. New Jersey (2000) 530 U.S. 466, 475–476, 490 [120 S.Ct. 2348, 147 L.Ed.2d 435].)

If the defendant is charged under Penal Code section 190(b), give only elements 1 and 2. If the defendant is charged under Penal Code section 190(c), give all three elements, specifying the appropriate factors in element 3, and give the appropriate definitions, which follow in brackets. Give the bracketed unanimity instruction if the prosecution alleges more than one factor in element 3.

In order to be "engaged in the performance of his or her duties," a peace officer must be acting lawfully. (People v. Gonzalez (1990) 51 Cal.3d 1179, 1217 [275 Cal.Rptr. 729, 800 P.2d 1159].) "[D]isputed facts bearing on the issue of legal cause must be submitted to the jury considering an engaged-in-duty element." (Ibid.) If excessive force is an issue, the court has a sua sponte duty to instruct the jury that the defendant is not guilty of the offense charged, or any lesser included offense in which lawful performance is an element, if the defendant used reasonable force in response to excessive force. (People v. Olguin (1981) 119 Cal.App.3d 39, 46–47 [173 Cal.Rptr. 663].) On request, the court must instruct that the prosecution has the burden of proving the lawfulness of the arrest beyond a reasonable doubt. (People v. Castain (1981) 122 Cal.App.3d 138, 145 [175 Cal.Rptr. 651].) If lawful performance is an issue, give the bracketed paragraph on lawful performance and the appropriate portions of CALCRIM No. 2670, Lawful Performance: Peace Officer.

The jury must determine whether the alleged victim is a peace officer. (People v. Brown (1988) 46 Cal.3d 432, 444–445 [250 Cal.Rptr. 604, 758 P.2d 1135].) The court may instruct the jury on the appropriate definition of "peace officer" from the statute (e.g., "a Garden Grove Regular Police Officer and a Garden Grove Reserve Police Officer are peace officers"). (Ibid.) However, the court may not instruct the jury that the alleged victim was a peace officer as a matter of law (e.g., "Officer Reed was a peace officer"). (Ibid.) If the alleged victim is a police officer, give the bracketed sentence that begins with "A person employed as a police officer." If the alleged victim is another type of peace officer, give the bracketed sentence that begins with "A person employed by."

"Peace officer," as used in this statute, means "as defined in subdivision (a) of Section 830.1, subdivision (a), (b), or (c) of Section 830.2, subdivision (a) of Section 830.33, or Section 830.5." (Pen. Code, § 190(b) & (c).)

The court may give the bracketed sentence that begins, "The duties of a _____ <insert title . . . .> include," on request. The court may insert a description of the officer's duties such as "the correct service of a facially valid search warrant." (People v. Gonzalez (1990) 51 Cal.3d 1179, 1222 [275 Cal.Rptr. 729, 800 P.2d 1159].)

Give the bracketed phrase "that is inherently deadly or one" and give the bracketed definition of inherently deadly only if the object is a deadly weapon as a matter of law. (People v. Stutelberg (2018) 29 Cal.App.5th 314, 317-318 [240 Cal.Rptr.3d 156].)

D. FELONY MURDER

Introduction to Felony-Murder Series

~~The Supreme Court recently clarified the temporal component necessary for liability for a death under the felony-murder rule. (People v. Wilkins (2013) 56 Cal.4th 333, 344.) In that case, the Supreme Court noted the limited usefulness of former CALCRIM No. 549, Felony Murder: One Continuous Transaction—Defined, which was based on the facts of People v. Cavitt (2004) 33 Cal.4th 187, 208, in which a non-killer fled, leaving behind an accomplice who killed. (People v. Wilkins, supra, at p. 342.) To avoid any potential confusion, the committee has deleted that instruction and replaced it appropriate bench note references. If the defendant committed the homicidal act and fled, that killing did not occur in the commission of the felony if the fleeing felon has reached a place of temporary safety. (People v. Wilkins, supra, at p. 345.)~~

Senate Bill No. 1437 (2017-2018 Reg. Sess.) substantially changed accomplice liability for felony murder. Malice may no longer be imputed simply from participation in a designated crime. (Pen. Code, § 188(a)(3).) If a defendant participated in the commission or attempted commission of a designated felony when a person was killed, the defendant is now liable under the felony-murder rule only if: (1) the defendant was the actual killer; (2) the defendant was not the actual killer but, with intent to kill, aided, abetted, counseled, commanded, induced, solicited, requested, or assisted the actual killer in committing murder in the first degree; or (3) the defendant was a major participant in the underlying designated felony and acted with reckless indifference to human life. (Pen. Code, § 189(e).) These restrictions do not apply when the victim was a peace officer and the defendant knew or reasonably should have known that the victim was a peace officer acting within the performance of his or her duties. (Pen. Code, § 189(f).)

As a result of these changes, the committee has modified CALCRIM Nos. 540B and 540C to incorporate the additional statutory elements for accomplice liability. The committee has also removed CALCRIM Nos. 541A, 541B, and 541C which addressed second degree felony murder. These instructions are included in an appendix, along with the former versions of Nos. 540A, 540B, and 540C.

The ~~committee has provided~~ three separate instructions for ~~both first and second degree~~ felony murder ~~. These instructions~~ present the following options:

A. Defendant Allegedly Committed Fatal Act

B. Coparticipant Allegedly Committed Fatal Act

C. Other Acts Allegedly Caused Death

For a simple case in which the defendant allegedly personally caused the death by committing a direct act of force or violence against the victim, the court may use ~~an option A~~ CALCRIM No. 540A~~instruction~~. This ~~option~~ instruction contains the least amount of bracketed material and requires the least amount of modification by the court.

In a case where the prosecution alleges that a participant in the felony other than the defendant caused the death~~is a "nonkiller cofelon" liable under the felony-murder rule for a death caused by another participant in the felony, ,then~~ the court must use CALCRIM No. 540B~~an option B instruction~~. This ~~option~~ instruction allows the court to instruct that the defendant may have committed the underlying felony or may have aided and abetted or conspired to commit an underlying felony that actually was committed by a coparticipant.

If the evidence indicates that either the defendant or a coparticipant may have committed the fatal act, the court should give both CALCRIM No. 540A~~option A~~ and CALCRIM No. 540B~~option B instructions~~.

In addition, the committee has provided CALCRIM No. 540C ~~option C instructions~~ to account for the unusual factual situations where a victim dies during the course of a felony as a result of a heart attack, a fire, or a similar cause, rather than as a result of some act of force or violence committed against the victim by one of the participants. (See People v. Billa (2003) 31 Cal.4th 1064, 1072.) ~~Option C~~ This instruction is the most complicated of the three ~~options~~ instructions~~provided~~. Thus, although ~~option C~~ CALCRIM No. 540C is broad enough to cover most felony-murder scenarios, the committee recommends using ~~an option A or B instruction~~ CALCRIM Nos. 540A or 540B whenever appropriate to avoid providing the jury with unnecessarily complicated instructions.

In People v. Wilkins (2013) 56 Cal.4th 333, 344, the Supreme Court clarified the temporal component necessary for liability for a death under the felony-murder rule and noted the limited usefulness of former CALCRIM No. 549, Felony Murder, One Continuous Transaction—Defined. To avoid any potential confusion, the committee has deleted that instruction and replaced it with appropriate bench note references. If the defendant committed the homicidal act and fled, that killing did not occur in the commission of the felony if the fleeing felon has reached a place of temporary safety. (People v. Wilkins, supra, at p. 345.)

540A. Felony Murder: First Degree—Defendant Allegedly Committed Fatal Act (Pen. Code, § 189)

The defendant is charged [in Count __] with murder, under a theory of first degree felony murder.

To prove that the defendant is guilty of first degree murder under this theory, the People must prove that:

1. The defendant committed [or attempted to commit] _____ *<insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code, § 189>;

2. The defendant intended to commit _____ *<insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code, § 189>;

AND

3. While committing [or attempting to commit] _____, <insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code, § 189> the defendant caused the death of another person.

A person [who was the actual killer] may be guilty of felony murder even if the killing was unintentional, accidental, or negligent.

To decide whether the defendant committed [or attempted to commit] _____ *<insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code, § 189>, please refer to the separate instructions that I (will give/have given) you on (that/those) crime[s]. You must apply those instructions when you decide whether the People have proved first degree murder under a theory of felony murder. <Make certain that all appropriate instructions on all underlying felonies are given.>

[The defendant must have intended to commit the (felony/felonies) of _____ <insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code, § 189> before or at the time that (he/she) caused the death.]

<If the facts raise an issue whether the commission of the felony continued while a defendant was fleeing the scene, give the following sentence instead of CALCRIM No. 3261, While Committing a Felony: Defined—Escape Rule.>

[The crime of _____ <insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code, § 189> continues until a defendant has reached a place of temporary safety.]

[It is not required that the person die immediately, as long as the act causing death) occurred while the defendant was committing the (felony/felonies).]

[It is not required that the person killed be the (victim/intended victim) of the (felony/felonies).]

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty

The court has a sua sponte duty to give ~~this~~ an instruction defining the elements of the crime. The court also has a sua sponte duty to instruct on the elements of any underlying felonies. (People v. Cain (1995) 10 Cal.4th 1, 36 [40 Cal.Rptr.2d 481, 892 P.2d 1224].) Give all appropriate instructions on all underlying felonies with this instruction. The court may need to modify the first sentence of the instruction on an underlying felony if the defendant is not separately charged with that offense.

If the facts raise an issue whether the homicidal act caused the death, the court has a sua sponte duty to give CALCRIM No. 240, Causation.

When giving this instruction with CALCRIM No. 540B or with CALCRIM No. 540C, give the bracketed phrase [who was the actual killer].

The felonies that support a charge of first degree felony murder are arson, rape, carjacking, robbery, burglary, kidnapping, mayhem, train wrecking, sodomy, lewd or lascivious acts on a child, oral copulation, and sexual penetration. (See Pen. Code, § 189(a).)

If there is evidence that the defendant did not form the intent to commit the felony until after the homicide, the defendant is entitled on request to an instruction pinpointing this issue. (People v. Hudson (1955) 45 Cal.2d 121, 124–127 [287 P.2d 497]; People v. Silva (2001) 25 Cal.4th 345, 371 [106 Cal.Rptr.2d 93, 21 P.3d 769].) Give the bracketed sentence that begins with "The defendant must have intended to commit the felony." For an instruction specially tailored to robbery-murder cases, see People v. Turner (1990) 50 Cal.3d 668, 691 [268 Cal.Rptr. 706, 789 P.2d 887].

Give the bracketed sentence that begins with "It is not required that the person die immediately" on request if relevant based on the evidence.

The felony-murder rule does not require that the person killed be the victim of the underlying felony. (People v. Johnson (1972) 28 Cal.App.3d 653, 658 [104 Cal.Rptr. 807] [accomplice]; People v. Welch (1972) 8 Cal.3d 106, 117–119 [104 Cal.Rptr. 217, 501 P.2d 225] [innocent bystander]; People v. Salas (1972) 7 Cal.3d 812, 823 [103 Cal.Rptr. 431, 500 P.2d 7] [police officer].) Give the bracketed sentence that begins with "It is not required that the person killed be" on request.

There is no sua sponte duty to clarify the logical nexus between the felony and the homicidal act. If an issue about the logical nexus requirement arises, the court may give the following language:

> There must be a logical connection between the cause of death and the <insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code, § 189> [or attempted <insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code, § 189>]. The connection between the cause of death and the <insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code, § 189> [or attempted <insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code, § 189>] must involve more than just their occurrence at the same time and place.]

People v. Cavitt (2004) 33 Cal.4th 187, 203–204 [14 Cal.Rtpr.3d 281, 91 P.3d 222]; People v. Wilkins (2013) 56 Cal.4th 333, 347 [153 Cal.Rptr.3d 519, 295 P.3d 903].

If the prosecutor is proceeding under both malice and felony-murder theories, also give CALCRIM No. 548, Murder: Alternative Theories. If the prosecutor is relying only on a theory of felony murder, no instruction on malice should be given. (See People v. Cain (1995) 10 Cal.4th 1, 35–37 [40 Cal.Rptr.2d 481, 892 P.2d 1224] [error to instruct on malice when felony murder only theory].)

Drive-By Shooting

The drive-by shooting clause in Penal Code section 189 is not an enumerated felony for purposes of the felony-murder rule. (People v. Chavez (2004) 118 Cal.App.4th 379, 386–387 [12 Cal.Rptr.3d 837].) A finding of a specific intent to kill is required in order to find first degree murder under this clause. (Ibid.)

~~If the prosecutor is proceeding under both malice and felony-murder theories, also give CALCRIM No. 548, Murder: Alternative Theories. If the prosecutor is relying only on a theory of felony murder, no instruction on malice should be~~

~~given. (See People v. Cain (1995) 10 Cal.4th 1, 35–37 [40 Cal.Rptr.2d 481, 892 P.2d 1224] [error to instruct on malice when felony murder only theory].)~~

Related Instructions—Other Causes of Death

This instruction should be used only when the prosecution alleges that the defendant committed the act causing the death.

If the prosecution alleges that another coparticipant in the felony committed the fatal act, give CALCRIM No. 540B, Felony Murder: First Degree—Coparticipant Allegedly Committed Fatal Act. If the evidence indicates that either the defendant or a coparticipant may have committed the fatal act, give both instructions.

When the alleged victim dies during the course of the felony as a result of a heart attack, a fire, or a similar cause, rather than as a result of some act of force or violence committed against the victim by one of the participants, give CALCRIM No. 540C, Felony Murder: First Degree—Other Acts Allegedly Caused Death. (Cf. People v. Billa (2003) 31 Cal.4th 1064, 1072 [6 Cal.Rptr.3d 425, 79 P.3d 542]; People v. Stamp (1969) 2 Cal.App.3d 203, 209–211 [82 Cal.Rptr. 598]; People v. Hernandez (1985) 169 Cal.App.3d 282, 287 [215 Cal.Rptr. 166]; but see People v. Gunnerson (1977) 74 Cal.App.3d 370, 378–381 [141 Cal.Rptr. 488] [a simultaneous or coincidental death is not a killing].)

If the evidence indicates that someone other than the defendant or a coparticipant committed the fatal act, then the crime is not felony murder. (People v. Washington (1965) 62 Cal.2d 777, 782–783 [44 Cal.Rptr. 442, 402 P.2d 130]; People v. Caldwell (1984) 36 Cal.3d 210, 216 [203 Cal.Rptr. 433, 681 P.2d 274]; see also People v. Gardner (1995) 37 Cal.App.4th 473, 477 [43 Cal.Rptr.2d 603].) Liability may be imposed, however, under the provocative act doctrine. (Pizano v. Superior Court (1978) 21 Cal.3d 128, 134 [145 Cal.Rptr. 524, 577 P.2d 659]; see CALCRIM No. 560, Homicide: Provocative Act by Defendant.)

RELATED ISSUES

Does Not Apply Where Felony Committed Only to Facilitate Murder
If a felony, such as robbery, is committed merely to facilitate an intentional murder, then the felony-murder rule does not apply. (People v. Green (1980) 27 Cal.3d 1, 61 [164 Cal.Rptr. 1, 609 P.2d 468], disapproved on other grounds in People v. Hall (1986) 41 Cal.3d 826, 834, fn. 3 [226 Cal.Rptr. 112, 718 P.2d 99] [robbery committed to facilitate murder did not satisfy felony-murder special circumstance].) If the defense requests a special instruction on this point, see CALCRIM No. 730, Special Circumstances: Murder in Commission of Felony.

No Duty to Instruct on Lesser Included Offenses of Uncharged Predicate Felony
"Although a trial court on its own initiative must instruct the jury on lesser included offenses of charged offenses, this duty does not extend to uncharged offenses relevant only as predicate offenses under the felony-murder doctrine." (People v. Silva (2001) 25 Cal.4th 345, 371 [106 Cal.Rptr.2d 93, 21 P.3d 769] [original italics]; see People v. Cash (2002) 28 Cal.4th 703, 736–737 [122 Cal.Rptr.2d 545] [no duty to instruct on theft as lesser included offense of uncharged predicate offense of robbery].)

Auto Burglary
Auto burglary may form the basis for a first degree felony-murder conviction. (People v. Fuller (1978) 86 Cal.App.3d 618, 622–623, 628 [150 Cal.Rptr. 515] [noting problems of applying felony-murder rule to nondangerous daytime auto burglary].)

Duress
"[D]uress can, in effect, provide a defense to murder on a felony-murder theory by negating the underlying felony." (People v. Anderson (2002) 28 Cal.4th 767, 784 [122 Cal.Rptr.2d 587, 50 P.3d 368] [dictum]; see also CALCRIM No. 3402, Duress or Threats.)

Imperfect Self-Defense
Imperfect self-defense is not a defense to felony murder because malice aforethought, which imperfect self-defense negates, is not an element of felony murder. (See People v. Tabios (1998) 67 Cal.App.4th 1, 6–9 [78 Cal.Rptr.2d 753], disapproved on another ground in People v. Chun (2009) 45 Cal.4th 1172, 1198-1199 [91 Cal.Rptr.3d 106; 203 P.3d 425].)

540B Felony Murder: First Degree—Coparticipant Allegedly Committed Fatal Act (Pen. Code, § 189)

[The defendant is charged [in Count __] with murder, under a theory of first degree felony murder.]

The defendant may [also] be guilty of murder, under a theory of felony murder, even if another person did the act that resulted in the death. I will call the other person the perpetrator.

To prove that the defendant is guilty of first degree murder under this theory, the People must prove that:

1. The defendant (committed [or attempted to commit][,]/ [or] aided and abetted[,]/ [or] was a member of a conspiracy to commit) _____ <insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code, § 189>;

2. The defendant (intended to commit[,]/ [or] intended to aid and abet the perpetrator in committing[,]/ [or] intended that one or more of the members of the conspiracy commit) _____ <insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code, § 189>;

3. If the defendant did not personally commit [or attempt to commit] _____ <insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code, § 189>, then a perpetrator, (whom the defendant was aiding and abetting/ [or] with whom the defendant conspired), committed [or attempted to commit] _____ <insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code, § 189>;

~~AND~~

4. While committing [or attempting to commit] _____ <insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code, § 189>, the ~~[defendant or]~~ perpetrator caused the death of another person~~.~~;

<Alternative for Pen. Code § 189(e)(2) and (e)(3) liability>
[5A. The defendant intended to kill;

AND

5B. The defendant (aided and abetted[,])/ [or] counseled[,]/ [or] commanded[,]/ [or] induced[,]/ [or] solicited[,]/ [or] requested[,]/ [or] assisted) the perpetrator in the commission of first degree murder(./;)]

[OR]

[(5A/6A). The defendant was a major participant in the _____ <insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code § 189>;

AND

(5B/6B). When the defendant participated in the _____ <insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code § 189>, (he/she) acted with reckless indifference to human life(./;)]

[OR]

<Alternative for Pen. Code § 189(f) liability>
[(5A/6A/7A). _____ <*insert officer's name, excluding title> was a peace officer lawfully performing (his/her) duties as a peace officer;

AND

(5B/6B/7B). When the defendant acted, (he/she) knew, or reasonably should have known, that _____ <*insert officer's name, excluding title> was a peace officer performing (his/her) duties.]

[A person may be guilty of felony murder of a peace officer even if the killing was unintentional, accidental, or negligent.]

To decide whether (the defendant/ [and] the perpetrator) committed [or attempted to commit] _____ <insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code, § 189>, please refer to the separate instructions that I (will give/have given) you on (that/those) crime[s]. [To decide whether the defendant aided and abetted a crime, please refer to the separate instructions that I (will give/have given) you on aiding and abetting.] [To decide whether the defendant was a member of a conspiracy to commit a crime, please refer to the separate instructions that I (will give/have given) you on conspiracy.] You must apply those instructions when you decide whether the People have proved first degree murder under a theory of felony murder.

~~<Make certain that all appropriate instructions on all underlying felonies, aiding and abetting, and conspiracy are given.>~~

[The defendant must have (intended to commit[,]/ [or] aid and abet[,]/ [or] been a member of a conspiracy to commit) the (felony/felonies) of _____ <insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code, § 189> before or at the time ~~that (he/she) caused~~ of the death.]

[It is not required that the person die immediately, as long as the act causing death occurred while the defendant was committing the (felony/felonies).]

[It is not required that the person killed be the (victim/intended victim) of the (felony/felonies).]

[It is not required that the defendant be present when the act causing the death occurs.]

[You may not find the defendant guilty of felony murder unless all of you agree that the defendant or a perpetrator caused the death of another. You do not all need to agree, ~~-~~however, whether the defendant or a perpetrator caused that death.]

<The following instructions can be given when reckless indifference and major participant under Pen. Code § 189(e)(3) applies>

[A person acts with reckless indifference to human life when he or she knowingly engages in criminal activity that he or she knows involves a grave risk of death.]

[When you decide whether the defendant was a major participant, consider all the evidence. Among the factors you may consider are:

1. What was the defendant's role in planning the crime that led to the death[s]?
2. What was the defendant's role in supplying or using lethal weapons?
3. What did the defendant know about dangers posed by the crime, any weapons used, or past experience or conduct of the other participant[s]?
4. Was the defendant in a position to facilitate or to prevent the death?
5. Did the defendant's action or inaction play a role in the death?
6. What did the defendant do after lethal force was used?

[7. _____ *<insert any other relevant factors.>]

No one of these factors is necessary, nor is any one of them necessarily enough, to determine whether the defendant was a major participant.]

[A person who is employed as a police officer by _____ <insert name of agency that employs police officer> is a peace officer.]

[A person employed by _____ <insert name of agency that employs peace officer, e.g., "the Department of Fish and Wildlife"> is a peace officer if _____ *<insert description of facts necessary to make employee a peace officer, e.g, "designated by the director of the agency as a peace officer">.]

[The duties of (a/an) _____ <insert title of peace officer> include _____ *<insert job duties>.]

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty
The court has a sua sponte duty to give ~~this~~ an instruction defining the elements of the crime. The court also has a sua sponte duty to instruct on the elements of any underlying felonies. (People v. Cain (1995) 10 Cal.4th 1, 36 [40 Cal.Rptr.2d 481, 892 P.2d 1224].)

If the facts raise an issue whether the homicidal act caused the death, the court has a sua sponte duty to give CALCRIM No. 240, Causation.

The court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on aiding and abetting when the prosecutor relies on it as a theory of culpability. (People v. Beeman (1984) 35 Cal.3d 547, 560-561 [199 Cal.Rptr.60, 674 P.2d 1318].) The court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on conspiracy when the prosecution has introduced evidence of a conspiracy to prove liability for other offenses. (See, e.g., People v. Pike (1962) 58 Cal.2d 70, 88 [22 Cal.Rptr. 664, 372 P.2d 656]; People v. Ditson (1962) 57 Cal.2d 415, 447 [20 Cal.Rptr. 165, 369 P.2d 714].)

Give all appropriate instructions on all underlying felonies, aiding and abetting, and conspiracy.

If the prosecution's theory is that the defendant, as well as the perpetrator, committed or attempted to commit the underlying felony or felonies, then select "committed [or attempted to commit]" in element 1 and "intended to commit" in element 2. In addition, in the paragraph that begins with "To decide whether," select both "the defendant and the perpetrator." Give all appropriate instructions on any underlying felonies with this instruction. The court may need to modify the first sentence of the instruction on an underlying felony if the defendant is not separately charged with that offense. The court may also need to modify the instruction to state "the defendant and the perpetrator each committed [the crime] if . . . ."

If the prosecution's theory is that the defendant aided and abetted or conspired to commit the felony, select one or both of these options in element 1 and the corresponding intent requirements in element 2. In addition, in the paragraph that begins with "To decide whether," select "the perpetrator" in the first sentence. Give the second and/or third bracketed sentences. Give all appropriate instructions on any underlying felonies and on aiding and abetting and/or conspiracy with this instruction. The court may need to modify the first sentence of the instruction on an underlying felony if the defendant is not separately charged with that offense. The court may also need to modify the instruction to state "the perpetrator committed," rather than "the defendant," in the instructions on the underlying felony.

If the defendant was a nonkiller who fled, leaving behind an accomplice who killed, see People v. Cavitt (2004) 33 Cal.4th 187, 206, fn. 7 [14 Cal.Rtpr.3d 281, 91 P.3d 222] [continuous transaction] and the discussion of Cavitt in People v. Wilkins (2013) 56 Cal.4th 333, 344 [153 Cal.Rptr.3d 519, 295 P.3d 903].

If there is evidence that the defendant did not form the intent to commit the felony until after the homicide, or did not join the conspiracy or aid and abet the felony until after the homicide, the defendant is entitled on request to an instruction pinpointing this issue. (People v. Hudson (1955) 45 Cal.2d 121, 124–127 [287 P.2d 497]; People v. Silva (2001) 25 Cal.4th 345, 371 [106 Cal.Rptr.2d 93, 21 P.3d 769].) Give the bracketed sentence that begins with "The defendant must have (intended to commit." For an instruction specially tailored to robbery-murder cases, see People v. Turner (1990) 50 Cal.3d 668, 691 [268 Cal.Rptr. 706, 789 P.2d 887].

Give the bracketed sentence that begins with "It is not required that the person die immediately" on request if relevant based on the evidence.

The felony-murder rule does not require that the person killed be the victim of the underlying felony. (People v. Johnson (1972) 28 Cal.App.3d 653, 658 [104 Cal.Rptr. 807] [accomplice]; People v. Welch (1972) 8 Cal.3d 106, 117–119 [104 Cal.Rptr. 217, 501 P.2d 225] [innocent bystander]; People v. Salas (1972) 7 Cal.3d 812, 823 [103 Cal.Rptr. 431, 500 P.2d 7] [police officer].) Give the bracketed sentence that begins with "It is not required that the person killed be" on request.

Give the last bracketed sentence, stating that the defendant need not be present, on request.

If the prosecutor is proceeding under both malice and felony-murder theories, or is proceeding under multiple felony-murder theories, give CALCRIM No. 548, Murder: Alternative Theories. If the prosecutor is relying only on a theory of felony murder, no instruction on malice should be given. (See People v. Cain (1995) 10 Cal.4th 1, 35–37 [40 Cal.Rptr.2d 481, 892 P.2d 1224] [error to instruct on malice when felony murder only theory].)

There is no sua sponte duty to clarify the logical nexus between the felony and the homicidal act. If an issue about the logical nexus requirement arises, the court may give the following language:

> There must be a logical connection between the cause of death and the _____ <insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code, § 189> [or attempted _____ *<insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code, § 189>]. The connection between the cause of death and the _____ <insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code, § 189> [or attempted _____ *<insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code, § 189>] must involve more than just their occurrence at the same time and place.]

People v. Cavitt (2004) 33 Cal.4th 187, 203-204 [14 Cal.Rtpr.3d 281, 91 P.3d 222]; People v. Wilkins (2013) 56 Cal.4th 333, 347 [153 Cal.Rptr.3d 519, 295 P.3d 903].

The court does not have a sua sponte duty to define "reckless indifference to human life." (People v. Estrada (1995) 11 Cal.4th 568, 578 [46 Cal.Rptr.2d 586, 904 P.2d 1197].) However, this "holding should not be understood to discourage trial courts from amplifying the statutory language for the jury." (Id. at p. 579.) The court may give the bracketed definition of reckless indifference if requested.

In People v. Banks (2015) 61 Cal.4th 788, 803-808 [189 Cal.Rptr.3d 208, 351 P.3d 330], the court identified certain factors to guide the jury in its determination of whether the defendant was a major participant but stopped short of holding that the court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on those factors. The trial court should determine whether the Banks factors need be given.

Related Instructions—Other Causes of Death

This instruction should be used only when the prosecution alleges that a coparticipant in the felony committed the act causing the death.

When the alleged victim dies during the course of the felony as a result of a heart attack, a fire, or a similar cause, rather than as a result of some act of force or violence committed against the victim by one of the participants, give CALCRIM No. 540C, Felony Murder: First Degree—Other Acts Allegedly Caused Death. (Cf. People v. Billa (2003) 31 Cal.4th 1064, 1072 [6 Cal.Rptr.3d 425, 79 P.3d 542]; People v. Stamp (1969) 2 Cal.App.3d 203, 209–211 [82 Cal.Rptr. 598]; People v. Hernandez (1985) 169 Cal.App.3d 282, 287 [215 Cal.Rptr. 166]; but see People v. Gunnerson (1977) 74 Cal.App.3d 370, 378–381 [141 Cal.Rptr. 488] [simultaneous or coincidental death is not killing].)

If the evidence indicates that someone other than the defendant or a coparticipant committed the fatal act, then the crime is not felony murder. (People v. Washington (1965) 62 Cal.2d 777, 782–783 [44 Cal.Rptr. 442, 402 P.2d 130]; People v. Caldwell (1984) 36 Cal.3d 210, 216 [203 Cal.Rptr. 433, 681 P.2d 274]; see also People v. Gardner (1995) 37 Cal.App.4th 473, 477 [43 Cal.Rptr.2d 603].) Liability may be imposed, however, under the provocative act doctrine. (Pizano v. Superior Court of Tulare County (1978) 21 Cal.3d 128, 134 [145 Cal.Rptr. 524, 577 P.2d 659]; see CALCRIM No. 560, Homicide: Provocative Act by Defendant.)

RELATED ISSUES

Conspiracy Liability—Natural and Probable Consequences

In the context of nonhomicide crimes, a coconspirator is liable for any crime committed by a member of the conspiracy that was a natural and probable consequence of the conspiracy. (People v. Superior Court (Shamis) (1997) 58 Cal.App.4th 833, 842–843 [68 Cal.Rptr.2d 388].) This is analogous to the rule in aiding and abetting that the defendant may be held liable for any unintended crime that was the natural and probable consequence of the intended crime. (People v. Nguyen (1993) 21 Cal.App.4th 518, 531 [26 Cal.Rptr.2d 323].) In the context of felony murder, the Supreme Court has explicitly held that the natural and probable consequences doctrine does not apply to a defendant charged with felony murder based on aiding and abetting the underlying felony. (See People v. Anderson (1991) 233 Cal.App.3d 1646, 1658 [285 Cal.Rptr. 523].) The court has not explicitly addressed whether the natural and probable consequences doctrine continues to limit liability for felony murder where the defendant's liability is based solely on being a member of a conspiracy. In People v. Pulido (1997) 15 Cal.4th 713, 724 [63 Cal.Rptr.2d 625, 936 P.2d 1235], the court stated in dicta, "[f]or purposes of complicity in a cofelon's homicidal act, the conspirator and the abettor stand in the same position. [Citation; quotation marks omitted.]

~~In People v. Pulido (1997) 15 Cal.4th 713, 724 [63 Cal.Rptr.2d 625, 936 P.2d 1235], the court stated in dicta, "[f]or purposes of complicity in a cofelon's homicidal act, the conspirator and the abettor stand in the same position. [Citation; quotation marks omitted.] In stating the rule of felony-murder complicity we have not distinguished accomplices whose responsibility for the underlying felony was pursuant to prior agreement (conspirators) from those who intentionally assisted without such agreement (aiders and abettors). [Citations]." In the court's two most recent opinions on felony-murder complicity, the court refers to the liability of "cofelons" or "accomplices" without reference to whether liability is based on directly committing the offense, aiding and abetting the offense, or conspiring to commit the offense. (People v. Cavitt (2004) 33 Cal.4th 187, 197–205 [14~~

~~The requirement for a logical nexus between the felony and the act causing the death, articulated in People v. Cavitt, supra, 33 Cal.4th at p. 193, may be sufficient to hold a conspiring defendant liable for the resulting death under the felony-murder rule. However, Cavitt did not clearly answer this question. Nor has any case explicitly held that the natural and probable consequences doctrine does not apply in the context of felony murder based on conspiracy.~~

~~Thus, if the trial court is faced with a factual situation in which the defendant's liability is premised solely on being a member of a conspiracy in which another coparticipant killed an individual, the committee recommends that the court do the following: (1) give optional element on logical connection provided above; (2) request briefing and review the current law on conspiracy liability and felony murder; and (3) at the court's discretion, add as an additional element: "The act causing the death was a natural and probable consequence of the plan to commit _____ <insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code, § 189>."~~

540C Felony Murder: First Degree—Other Acts Allegedly Caused Death (Pen. Code, § 189)

The defendant is charged [in Count __] with first degree murder, under a theory of felony murder.

The defendant may be guilty of murder, under a theory of felony murder, even if another person did the act that resulted in the death. I will call the other person the perpetrator.

To prove that the defendant is guilty of first degree murder under this theory, the People must prove that:

1. The defendant (committed [or attempted to commit][,]/ [or] aided and abetted[,]/ [or] was a member of a conspiracy to commit) _____ <insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code, § 189>;

2. The defendant (intended to commit[,]/ [or] intended to aid and abet the perpetrator in committing[,]/ [or] intended that one or more of the members of the conspiracy commit) _____ <insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code, § 189>;

[3. A perpetrator, (whom the defendant was aiding and abetting/ [or] with whom the defendant conspired), personally committed [or attempted to commit] _____ <insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code, § 189>;]

~~AND~~

(3/4). The commission [or attempted commission] of the _____ <insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code, § 189> was a substantial factor in causing the death of another person;

<Alternative for Pen. Code § 189(e)(2) and (e)(3) liability>

[(4A/5A). The defendant intended to kill;

AND

(4B/5B). The defendant (aided and abetted[,]/[or] counseled[,]/ [or] commanded[,]/ [or] induced[,]/ [or] solicited[,]/ [or] requested[,]/ [or] assisted) the perpetrator in the commission of murder(./;)]

[OR]

[(4A/5A/6A). The defendant was a major participant in the _____ <insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code § 189>;

AND

(4B/5B/6B). When the defendant participated in the _____ <insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code § 189>, (he/she) acted with reckless indifference to human life(./;)]

[OR]

[(4A/5A/6A/7A). _____ <insert officer's name, excluding title> was a peace officer lawfully performing (his/her) duties as a peace officer;

AND

(4B/5B/6B/7B). When the defendant acted, (he/she) knew, or reasonably should have known, that _____ <insert officer's name, excluding title> was a peace officer performing (his/her) duties.]

[A person may be guilty of felony murder of a peace officer even if the killing was unintentional, accidental, or negligent.]

To decide whether (the defendant/ [and] the perpetrator) committed [or attempted to commit] _____ <insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code, § 189>, please refer to the separate instructions that I (will give/have given) you on (that/those) crime[s]. [To decide whether the defendant aided and abetted a crime, please refer to the separate instructions that I (will give/have given) you on aiding and abetting.] [To decide whether the defendant was a member of a conspiracy to commit a crime, please refer to the separate instructions that I (will give/have given) you on conspiracy.] You must apply those instructions when you decide whether the People have proved first degree murder under a theory of felony murder.

~~<Make certain that all appropriate instructions on all underlying felonies, aiding and abetting, and conspiracy are given.>~~

An act causes death if the death is the direct, natural, and probable consequence of the act and the death would not have happened without the act. A natural and probable consequence is one that a reasonable person would know is likely to happen if nothing unusual intervenes. In deciding whether a consequence is natural and probable, consider all the circumstances established by the evidence.

[There may be more than one cause of death. An act causes death only if it is a substantial factor in causing the death. A substantial factor is more than a trivial or remote factor. However, it does not need to be the only factor that causes the death.]

[The defendant must have (intended to commit[,]/ [or] aid and abet[,]/ [or] been a member of a conspiracy to commit) the (felony/felonies) of _____ <insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code, § 189> before or at the time ~~that (he/she) caused~~ of the death.]

[It is not required that the person die immediately, as long as the act causing death occurred while the defendant was committing the (felony/felonies).]

[It is not required that the person killed be the (victim/intended victim) of the (felony/felonies).]

[A person acts with reckless indifference to human life when he or she knowingly engages in criminal activity that he or she knows involves a grave risk of death.]

[When you decide whether the defendant was a major participant, consider all the evidence. Among the factors you may consider are:

1. What was the defendant's role in planning the crime that led to the death[s]?
2. What was the defendant's role in supplying or using lethal weapons?
3. What did the defendant know about dangers posed by the crime, any weapons used, or past experience or conduct of the other participant[s]?

4. Was the defendant in a position to facilitate or to prevent the death?
5. Did the defendant's action or inaction play a role in the death?
6. What did the defendant do after lethal force was used?
[7. _____ <insert any other relevant factors.>]

No one of these factors is necessary, nor is any one of them necessarily enough, to determine whether the defendant was a major participant.]

[A person who is employed as a police officer by _____ <insert name of agency that employs police officer> is a peace officer.]

[A person employed by _____ <insert name of agency that employs peace officer, e.g., "the Department of Fish and Wildlife"> is a peace officer if _____ <insert description of facts necessary to make employee a peace officer, e.g, "designated by the director of the agency as a peace officer">.]

[The duties of (a/an) _____ <insert title of peace officer> include _____ <insert job duties>.]

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty

The court has a sua sponte duty to give ~~this~~ an instruction defining the elements of the crime. The court also has a sua sponte duty to instruct on the elements of any underlying felonies. (People v. Cain (1995) 10 Cal.4th 1, 36 [40 Cal.Rptr.2d 481, 892 P.2d 1224].)

The court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on aiding and abetting when the prosecutor relies on it as a theory of culpability. (People v. Beeman (1984) 35 Cal.3d 547, 560-561 [199 Cal.Rptr.60, 674 P.2d 1318].) The court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on conspiracy when the prosecution has introduced evidence of a conspiracy to prove liability for other offenses. (See, e.g., People v. Pike (1962) 58 Cal.2d 70, 88 [22 Cal.Rptr. 664, 372 P.2d 656]; People v. Ditson (1962) 57 Cal.2d 415, 447 [20 Cal.Rptr. 165, 369 P.2d 714].)

Give all appropriate instructions on all underlying felonies, aiding and abetting, and conspiracy.

If causation is at issue, the court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on proximate cause. (People v. Bernhardt (1963) 222 Cal.App.2d 567, 590–591 [35 Cal.Rptr. 401]; see generally, People v. Cervantes (2001) 26 Cal.4th 860, 866–874 [111 Cal.Rptr.2d 148, 29 P.3d 225].) Because causation is likely to be an issue in any case in which this instruction is given, the committee has included the paragraph that begins with "An act causes death if." If there is evidence of multiple potential causes, the court should also give the bracketed paragraph that begins with "There may be more than one cause of death." (People v. Sanchez (2001) 26 Cal.4th 834, 845–849 [111 Cal.Rptr.2d 129, 29 P.3d 209]; People v. Autry (1995) 37 Cal.App.4th 351, 363 [43 Cal.Rptr.2d 135].)

If the prosecution's theory is that the defendant committed or attempted to commit the underlying felony, then select "committed [or attempted to commit]" in element 1 and "intended to commit" in element 2. In addition, in the paragraph that begins with "To decide whether," select "the defendant" in the first sentence. Give all appropriate instructions on any underlying felonies with this instruction. The court may need to modify the first sentence of the instruction on an underlying felony if the defendant is not separately charged with that offense.

If the prosecution's theory is that the defendant aided and abetted or conspired to commit the felony, select one of these options in element 1 and the corresponding intent requirement in element 2. Give bracketed element 3. Give the bracketed sentence at the beginning of the instruction that begins with "The defendant may be guilty of murder." In addition, in the paragraph that begins with "To decide whether," select "the perpetrator" in the first sentence. Give the second and/or third bracketed sentences. Give all appropriate instructions on any underlying felonies and on aiding and abetting and/or conspiracy with this instruction. The court may need to modify the first sentence of the instruction on an underlying felony if the defendant is not separately charged with that offense. The court may also need to modify the instruction to state "the perpetrator committed," rather than "the defendant," in the instructions on the underlying felony.

If there is evidence that the defendant did not form the intent to commit the felony until after the homicide, or did not join the conspiracy or aid and abet the felony until after the homicide, the defendant is entitled on request to an instruction pinpointing this issue. (People v. Hudson (1955) 45 Cal.2d 121, 124–127 [287 P.2d 497]; People v. Silva (2001) 25 Cal.4th 345, 371 [106 Cal.Rptr.2d 93, 21 P.3d 769].) Give the bracketed sentence that begins with "The defendant must have (intended to commit." For an instruction specially tailored to robbery-murder cases, see People v. Turner (1990) 50 Cal.3d 668, 691 [268 Cal.Rptr. 706, 789 P.2d 887].

Give the bracketed sentence that begins with "It is not required that the person die immediately" on request if relevant based on the evidence.

The felony-murder rule does not require that the person killed be the victim of the underlying felony. (People v. Johnson (1972) 28 Cal.App.3d 653, 658 [104 Cal.Rptr. 807] [accomplice]; People v. Welch (1972) 8 Cal.3d 106, 117–119 [104 Cal.Rptr. 217, 501 P.2d 225] [innocent bystander]; People v. Salas (1972) 7 Cal.3d 812, 823 [103 Cal.Rptr. 431, 500 P.2d 7] [police officer].) Give the bracketed sentence that begins with "It is not required that the person killed be" on request.

Give the last bracketed sentence, stating that the defendant need not be present, on request.

If the defendant was a nonkiller who fled, leaving behind an accomplice who killed, see People v. Cavitt (2004) 33 Cal.4th 187, 206, fn. 7 [14 Cal.Rtpr.3d 281, 91 P.3d 222] [continuous transaction] and the discussion of Cavitt in People v. Wilkins (2013) 56 Cal.4th 333, 344 [153 Cal.Rptr.3d 519, 295 P.3d 903].

If the prosecutor is proceeding under both malice and felony-murder theories, or is proceeding under multiple felony-murder theories, give CALCRIM No. 548, Murder: Alternative Theories. If the prosecutor is relying only on a theory of felony murder, no instruction on malice should be given. (See People v. Cain (1995) 10 Cal.4th 1, 35–37 [40 Cal.Rptr.2d 481, 892 P.2d 1224] [error to instruct on malice when felony murder only theory].)

There is no sua sponte duty to clarify the logical nexus between the felony and the homicidal act. If an issue about the logical nexus requirement arises, the court may give the following language:

> There must be a logical connection between the cause of death and the _____ <insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code, § 189> [or attempted _____ *<insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code, § 189>]. The connection between the cause of death and the _____ <insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code, § 189> [or attempted _____ *<insert felony or felonies from Pen. Code, § 189>] must involve more than just their occurrence at the same time and place.]

People v. Cavitt (2004) 33 Cal.4th 187, 203-204 [14 Cal.Rtpr.3d 281, 91 P.3d 222]; People v. Wilkins (2013) 56 Cal.4th 333, 347 [153 Cal.Rptr.3d 519, 295 P.3d 903].

The court does not have a sua sponte duty to define "reckless indifference to human life." (People v. Estrada (1995) 11 Cal.4th 568, 578 [46 Cal.Rptr.2d 586, 904 P.2d 1197].) However, this "holding should not be understood to discourage trial courts from amplifying the statutory language for the jury." (Id. at p. 579.) The court may give the bracketed definition of reckless indifference if requested.

In People v. Banks (2015) 61 Cal.4th 788, 803-808 [189 Cal.Rptr.3d 208, 351 P.3d 330], the court identified certain factors to guide the jury in its determination of whether the defendant was a major participant but stopped short of holding that the court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on those factors. The trial court should determine whether the Banks factors need be given.

Related Instructions—Other Causes of Death

This instruction should be used only when the alleged victim dies during the course of the felony as a result of a heart attack, fire, or a similar cause rather than as a result of some act of force or violence committed against the victim by one of the participants in the felony. (Cf. People v. Billa (2003) 31 Cal.4th 1064, 1072 [6 Cal.Rptr.3d 425, 79 P.3d 542] [arson causing death of accomplice]; People v. Gunnerson (1977) 74 Cal.App.3d 370, 378–381 [141 Cal.Rptr. 488] [simultaneous or coincidental death is not killing].)

See the Bench Notes to CALCRIM No. 540A, Felony Murder: First Degree—Defendant Allegedly Committed Fatal Act, for a discussion of other instructions to use if the evidence indicates a person committed an act of force or violence causing the death.

541A. Felony Murder: Second Degree—Defendant Allegedly Committed Fatal Act

The defendant is charged [in Count __] with murder, under a theory of felony murder.

To prove that the defendant is guilty of second degree murder under this theory, the People must prove that:

1. The defendant committed [or attempted to commit] _____ *<insert inherently dangerous felony or felonies>;

2. The defendant intended to commit _____ *<insert inherently dangerous felony or felonies>;

AND

3. The defendant did an act that caused the death of another person.

A person may be guilty of felony murder even if the killing was unintentional, accidental, or negligent.

To decide whether the defendant committed [or attempted to commit] _____ *<insert inherently dangerous felony or felonies>, please refer to the separate instructions that I (will give/have given) you on (that/those) crime[s]. You must apply those instructions when you decide whether the People have proved second degree murder under a theory of felony murder.

<Make certain that all appropriate instructions on all underlying felonies are given.>

[The defendant must have intended to commit the (felony/felonies) of _____ <insert inherently dangerous felony or felonies> before or at the time of the act causing the death.]

[The crime of_____ <insert inherently dangerous felony or felonies> continues until a defendant has reached a place of temporary safety.]

[It is not required that the person die immediately, as long as the act causing death occurred while the defendant was committing the (felony/felonies).]
[It is not required that the person killed be the (victim/intended victim) of the (felony/felonies).]

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty

The court has a sua sponte duty to give this instruction defining the elements of the crime. The court also has a sua sponte duty to instruct on the elements of any underlying felonies. (People v. Cain (1995) 10 Cal.4th 1, 36 [40 Cal.Rptr.2d 481, 892 P.2d 1224].) Give all appropriate instructions on all underlying felonies with this instruction. The court may need to modify the first sentence of the instruction on an underlying felony if the defendant is not separately charged with that offense.

Insert the appropriate, nonassaultive, inherently dangerous felony or felonies in the blanks provided in accordance with the Supreme Court's ruling in People v. Chun (2009) 45 Cal.4th 1172, 1199 [91 Cal.Rptr.3d 106, 203 P.3d 425] [when underlying felony is assaultive in nature, felony merges with homicide and cannot be basis of a felony-murder instruction].

If the facts raise an issue whether the homicidal act caused the death, the court has a sua sponte duty to give CALCRIM No. 240, Causation.

If there is evidence that the defendant did not form the intent to commit the felony until after the homicide, the defendant is entitled on request to an instruction pinpointing this issue. (People v. Hudson (1955) 45 Cal.2d 121, 124–127 [287 P.2d 497]; People v. Silva (2001) 25 Cal.4th 345, 371 [106 Cal.Rptr.2d 93, 21 P.3d 769].) Give the bracketed sentence that begins with "The defendant must have intended to commit the felony."

Give the bracketed sentence that begins with "It is not required that the person die immediately" on request if relevant based on the evidence.

The felony-murder rule does not require that the person killed be the victim of the underlying felony. (People v. Johnson (1972) 28 Cal.App.3d 653, 658 [104 Cal.Rptr. 807] [accomplice]; People v. Welch (1972) 8 Cal.3d 106, 117–119 [104 Cal.Rptr. 217, 501 P.2d 225] [innocent bystander]; People v. Salas (1972) 7 Cal.3d 812, 823 [103 Cal.Rptr. 431, 500 P.2d 7] [police officer].) Give the bracketed sentence that begins with "It is not required that the person killed be" on request.

There is no sua sponte duty to clarify the logical nexus between the felony and the homicidal act. If an issue about the logical nexus requirement arises, the court may give the following language:

> There must be a logical connection between the cause of death and the _____ <insert inherently dangerous felony or felonies> [or attempted _____ <insert inherently dangerous felony or felonies>]. The connection between the cause of death and the _____ <insert inherently dangerous felony or felonies> [or attempted _____ <insert inherently dangerous felony or felonies>] must involve more than just their occurrence at the same time and place.]

People v. Cavitt (2004) 33 Cal.4th 187, 203-204 [14 Cal.Rtpr.3d 281, 91 P.3d 222]; People v. Wilkins (2013) 56 Cal.4th 333, 347 [153 Cal.Rptr.3d 519, 295 P.3d 903].

If the prosecutor is proceeding under both malice and felony-murder theories, give CALCRIM No. 548, Murder: Alternative Theories. If the prosecutor is relying only on a theory of felony murder, no instruction on malice should be given. (See People v. Cain (1995) 10 Cal.4th 1, 35–37 [40 Cal.Rptr.2d 481, 892 P.2d 1224] [error to instruct on malice when felony murder only theory].)

Related Instructions—Other Causes of Death

This instruction should be used only when the prosecution alleges that the defendant committed the act causing the death.

If the prosecution alleges that another coparticipant in the felony committed the fatal act, give CALCRIM No. 541B, Felony Murder: Second Degree—Coparticipant Allegedly Committed Fatal Act. If the evidence indicates that either the defendant or a coparticipant may have committed the fatal act, give both instructions.

When the alleged victim dies during the course of the felony as a result of a heart attack, a fire, or a similar cause, rather than as a result of some act of force or violence committed against the victim by one of the participants, give CALCRIM No. 541C, Felony Murder: Second Degree—Other Acts Allegedly Caused Death. (Cf. People v. Billa (2003) 31 Cal.4th 1064, 1072 [6 Cal.Rptr.3d 425, 79 P.3d 542]; People v. Stamp (1969) 2 Cal.App.3d 203, 209–211 [82 Cal.Rptr. 598]; People v. Hernandez (1985) 169 Cal.App.3d 282, 287 [215 Cal.Rptr. 166]; but see People v. Gunnerson (1977) 74 Cal.App.3d 370, 378–381 [141 Cal.Rptr. 488] [a simultaneous or coincidental death is not a killing].)

If the evidence indicates that someone other than the defendant or a coparticipant committed the fatal act, then the crime is not felony murder. (People v. Washington (1965) 62 Cal.2d 777, 782–783 [44 Cal.Rptr. 442, 402 P.2d 130]; People v. Caldwell (1984) 36 Cal.3d 210, 216 [203 Cal.Rptr. 433, 681 P.2d 274]; see also People v. Gardner (1995) 37 Cal.App.4th 473, 477 [43 Cal.Rptr.2d 603].) Liability may be imposed, however, under the provocative act doctrine. (Pizano v. Superior Court (1978) 21 Cal.3d 128, 134 [145 Cal.Rptr. 524, 577 P.2d 659]; see CALCRIM No. 560, Homicide: Provocative Act by Defendant.)

RELATED ISSUES

Second Degree Felony Murder: Inherently Dangerous Felonies

The second degree felony-murder doctrine is triggered when a homicide occurs during the commission of a felony that is inherently dangerous to human life. (People v. Satchell (1971) 6 Cal.3d 28, 33–41 [98 Cal.Rptr. 33, 489 P.2d 1361] and People v. Henderson (1977) 19 Cal.3d 86, 93 [137 Cal.Rptr. 1, 560 P.2d 1180], both overruled on other grounds in People v. Flood (1998) 18 Cal.4th 470, 484 [76 Cal.Rptr.2d 180, 957 P.2d 869].) In People v. Burroughs (1984) 35 Cal.3d 824, 833 [201 Cal.Rptr. 319, 678 P.2d 894], the court described an inherently dangerous felony as one that cannot be committed without creating a substantial risk that someone will be killed. However, in People v. Patterson (1989) 49 Cal.3d 615, 618, 626–627 [262 Cal.Rptr. 195, 778 P.2d 549], the court defined an inherently dangerous felony as "an offense carrying a high probability that death will result." (See People v. Coleman (1992) 5 Cal.App.4th 646, 649–650 [7 Cal.Rptr.2d 40] [court explicitly adopts Patterson definition of inherently dangerous felony].)

Whether a felony is inherently dangerous is a legal question for the court to determine. (See People v. Schaefer (2004) 118 Cal.App.4th 893, 900–902 [13 Cal.Rptr.3d 442] [rule not changed by Apprendi].) In making this determination, the court should assess "the elements of the felony in the abstract, not the particular facts of the case," and consider the statutory definition of the felony in its entirety. (People v. Satchell, supra, 6 Cal.3d at p. 36; People v. Henderson, supra, 19 Cal.3d at pp. 93–94.) If the statute at issue prohibits a diverse range of conduct, the court must analyze whether the entire statute or only the part relating to the specific conduct at issue is applicable. (See People v. Patterson, supra, 49 Cal.3d at pp. 622–625 [analyzing Health & Saf. Code, § 11352, which prohibits range of drug-related behavior, and holding that only conduct at issue should be considered when determining dangerousness].)

The following felonies have been found inherently dangerous for purposes of second degree felony murder (but note that since Proposition 115 amended Penal Code section 189 in 1990, that code section includes kidnapping in its list of first degree felony murder felonies):

- Attempted Escape From Prison by Force or Violence ‣ Pen. Code, § 4530; People v. Lynn (1971) 16 Cal.App.3d 259, 272 [94 Cal.Rptr. 16]; People v. Snyder (1989) 208 Cal.App.3d 1141, 1143–1146 [256 Cal.Rptr. 601].

541B. Felony Murder: Second Degree—Coparticipant Allegedly Committed Fatal Act

[The defendant is charged [in Count __] with murder, under a theory of felony murder.]

The defendant may [also] be guilty of murder, under a theory of felony murder, even if another person did the act that resulted in the death. I will call the other person the perpetrator.

To prove that the defendant is guilty of second degree murder under this theory, the People must prove that:

1. The defendant (committed [or attempted to commit][,]/ [or] aided and abetted[,]/ [or] was a member of a conspiracy to commit) _____ *<insert inherently dangerous felony or felonies>;

2. The defendant (intended to commit[,]/ [or] intended to aid and abet the perpetrator in committing[,]/ [or] intended that one or more of the members of the conspiracy commit) _____ *<insert inherently dangerous felony or felonies>;

3. The perpetrator committed [or attempted to commit] _____ *<insert inherently dangerous felony or felonies>;

AND

4. The perpetrator did an act that caused the death of another person.

A person may be guilty of felony murder even if the killing was unintentional, accidental, or negligent.

To decide whether (the defendant/ [and] the perpetrator) committed [or attempted to commit] _____ *<insert inherently dangerous felony or felonies>, please refer to the separate instructions that I (will give/have given) you on (that/those) crime[s]. [To decide whether the defendant aided and abetted a crime, please refer to the separate instructions that I (will give/have given) you on aiding and abetting.] [To decide whether the defendant was a member of a conspiracy to commit a crime, please refer to the separate instructions that I (will give/have given) you on conspiracy.] You must apply those instructions when you decide whether the People have proved second degree murder under a theory of felony murder.

<Make certain that all appropriate instructions on all underlying felonies, aiding and abetting, and conspiracy are given.>

[The defendant must have (intended to commit[,]/ [or] aid and abet[,]/ [or] been a member of a conspiracy to commit) the (felony/felonies) of _____ <insert inherently dangerous felony or felonies> before or at the time of the act causing the death.]

[It is not required that the person die immediately, as long as the act causing death occurred while the defendant was committing the (felony/felonies).]

[It is not required that the person killed be the (victim/intended victim) of the underlying (felony/felonies).]

[It is not required that the defendant be present when the act causing the death occurs.]

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty
The court has a sua sponte duty to give this instruction defining the elements of the crime. The court also has a sua sponte duty to instruct on the elements of any underlying felonies. (People v. Cain (1995) 10 Cal.4th 1, 36 [40 Cal.Rptr.2d 481, 892 P.2d 1224].)

If the facts raise an issue whether the homicidal act caused the death, the court has a sua sponte duty to give CALCRIM No. 240, Causation.

Insert the appropriate, nonassaultive, inherently dangerous felony or felonies in the blanks provided in accordance with the Supreme Court's ruling in People v. Chun (2009) 45 Cal.4th 1172 [203 P.3d 425, 91 Cal.Rptr.3d 106] [when underlying felony is assaultive in nature, felony merges with homicide and cannot be basis of a felony-murder instruction].

There is no sua sponte duty to clarify the logical nexus between the felony and the homicidal act. If an issue about the logical nexus requirement arises, the court may give the following language:

There must be a logical connection between the cause of death and the _____ <insert inherently dangerous felony or felonies> [or attempted _____ <insert inherently dangerous felony or felonies>]. The connection between the cause of death and the _____ <insert inherently dangerous felony or felonies> [or attempted _____ <insert inherently dangerous felony or felonies>] must involve more than just their occurrence at the same time and place.]

People v. Cavitt (2004) 33 Cal.4th 187, 203-204 [14 Cal.Rtpr.3d 281, 91 P.3d 222]; People v. Wilkins (2013) 56 Cal.4th 333, 347 [153 Cal.Rptr.3d 519, 295 P.3d 903].

If the prosecution's theory is that the defendant, as well as the perpetrator, committed or attempted to commit the underlying felony or felonies, then select "committed [or attempted to commit]" in element 1 and "intended to commit" in element 2. In addition, in the paragraph that begins with "To decide whether," select both "the defendant and the perpetrator." Give all appropriate instructions on any underlying felonies with this instruction. The court may need to modify the first sentence of the instruction on an underlying felony if the defendant is not separately charged with that offense. The court may also need to modify the instruction to state "the defendant and the perpetrator each committed [the crime] if . . . ."

If the prosecution's theory is that the defendant aided and abetted or conspired to commit the felony, select one or both of these options in element 1 and the corresponding intent requirements in element 2. In addition, in the paragraph that begins with "To decide whether," select "the perpetrator" in the first sentence. Give the second and/or third bracketed sentences. Give all appropriate instructions on any underlying felonies and on aiding and abetting and/or conspiracy with this instruction. The court may need to modify the first sentence of the instruction on an underlying felony if the defendant is not separately charged with that offense. The court may also need to modify the instruction to state "the perpetrator committed," rather than "the defendant," in the instructions on the underlying felony.

If the defendant was a nonkiller who fled, leaving behind an accomplice who killed, see People v. Cavitt (2004) 33 Cal.4th 187, 206 fn. 7 [14 Cal.Rtpr.3d 281, 91 P.3d 222] [continuous transaction] and the discussion of Cavitt in People v. Wilkins (2013) 56 Cal.4th 333, 344 [153 Cal.Rptr.3d 519, 295 P.3d 903].

If there is evidence that the defendant did not form the intent to commit the felony until after the homicide, or did not join the conspiracy or aid and abet the felony until after the homicide, the defendant is entitled on request to an instruction pinpointing this issue. (People v. Hudson (1955) 45 Cal.2d 121, 124–127 [287 P.2d 497]; People v. Silva (2001) 25 Cal.4th 345, 371 [106 Cal.Rptr.2d 93, 21 P.3d 769].) Give the bracketed sentence that begins with "The defendant must have (intended to commit." For an instruction specially tailored to robbery-murder cases, see People v. Turner (1990) 50 Cal.3d 668, 691 [268 Cal.Rptr. 706, 789 P.2d 887].

Give the bracketed sentence that begins with "It is not required that the person die immediately" on request if relevant based on the evidence.

The felony-murder rule does not require that the person killed be the victim of the underlying felony. (People v. Johnson (1972) 28 Cal.App.3d 653, 658 [104 Cal.Rptr. 807] [accomplice]; People v. Welch (1972) 8 Cal.3d 106, 117–119 [104 Cal.Rptr. 217, 501 p.2d 225] [innocent bystander]; People v. Salas (1972) 7 Cal.3d 812, 823 [103 Cal.Rptr. 431, 500 P.2d 7] [police officer].) Give the bracketed sentence that begins with "It is not required that the person killed be" on request.

Give the last bracketed sentence, stating that the defendant need not be present, on request.

If the prosecutor is proceeding under both malice and felony-murder theories, give CALCRIM No. 548, Murder: Alternative Theories. If the prosecutor is relying only on a theory of felony murder, no instruction on malice should be given. (See People v. Cain (1995) 10 Cal.4th 1, 35–37 [40 Cal.Rptr.2d 481, 892 P.2d 1224] [error to instruct on malice when felony murder only theory].)

Related Instructions—Other Causes of Death

This instruction should be used only when the prosecution alleges that a coparticipant in the felony committed the act causing the death.

If the prosecution alleges that the defendant committed the fatal act, give CALCRIM No. 541A, Felony Murder: Second Degree—Defendant Allegedly Committed Fatal Act. If the evidence indicates that either the defendant or a coparticipant may have committed the fatal act, give both instructions.

When the alleged victim dies during the course of the felony as a result of a heart attack, a fire, or a similar cause, rather than as a result of some act of force or violence committed against the victim by one of the participants, give CALCRIM No. 541C, Felony Murder: Second Degree—Other Acts Allegedly Caused Death. (Cf. People v. Billa (2003) 31 Cal.4th 1064, 1072 [6 Cal.Rptr.3d 425, 79 P.3d 542]; People v. Stamp (1969) 2 Cal.App.3d 203, 209–211 [82 Cal.Rptr. 598]; People v. Hernandez (1985) 169 Cal.App.3d 282, 287 [215 Cal.Rptr. 166]; but see People v. Gunnerson (1977) 74 Cal.App.3d 370, 378–381 [141 Cal.Rptr. 488] [a simultaneous or coincidental death is not a killing].)

If the evidence indicates that someone other than the defendant or a coparticipant committed the fatal act, then the crime is not felony murder. (People v. Washington (1965) 62 Cal.2d 777, 782–783 [44 Cal.Rptr. 442, 402 P.2d 130]; People v. Caldwell (1984) 36 Cal.3d 210, 216 [203 Cal.Rptr. 433, 681 P.2d 274]; see also People v. Gardner (1995) 37 Cal.App.4th 473, 477 [43 Cal.Rptr.2d 603].) Liability may be imposed, however, under the provocative act doctrine. (Pizano v. Superior Court (1978) 21 Cal.3d 128, 134 [145 Cal.Rptr. 524, 577 P.2d 659]; see CALCRIM No. 560, Homicide: Provocative Act by Defendant.)

541C. Felony Murder: Second Degree—Other Acts Allegedly Caused Death

The defendant is charged [in Count __] with murder, under a theory of felony murder.

The defendant may be guilty of murder, under a theory of felony murder, even if another person did the act that resulted in the death. I will call the other person the perpetrator.

To prove that the defendant is guilty of second degree murder under this theory, the People must prove that:

1. The defendant (committed [or attempted to commit][,]/ [or] aided and abetted[,]/ [or] was a member of a conspiracy to commit) _____ <insert inherently dangerous felony or felonies>;

2. The defendant (intended to commit[,]/ [or] intended to aid and abet the perpetrator in committing[,]/ [or] intended that one or more of the members of the conspiracy commit) _____ <insert inherently dangerous felony or felonies>;

[3. The perpetrator committed [or attempted to commit] _____ <insert inherently dangerous felony or felonies>;]

[AND]

(3/4). The commission [or attempted commission of] the _____ <insert inherently dangerous felony or felonies> caused the death of another person.

A person may be guilty of felony murder even if the killing was unintentional, accidental, or negligent.

To decide whether (the defendant/ [and] the perpetrator) committed [or attempted to commit] _____ <insert inherently dangerous felony or felonies>, please refer to the separate instructions that I (will give/have given) you on (that/those) crime[s]. [To decide whether the defendant aided and abetted a crime, please refer to the separate instructions that I (will give/have given) you on aiding and abetting.] [To decide whether the defendant was a member of a conspiracy to commit a crime, please refer to the separate instructions that I (will give/have given) you on conspiracy.] You must apply those instructions when you decide whether the People have proved second degree murder under a theory of felony murder.

[The defendant must have (intended to commit[,]/ [or] aided and abetted[,]/ [or] been a member of a conspiracy to commit) the (felony/felonies) of _____ <insert inherently dangerous felony or felonies> before or at the time of the act causing the death.]

[It is not required that the person die immediately, as long as the act causing death occurred while the defendant was committing the (felony/felonies).] An act causes death if the death is the direct, natural, and probable consequence of the act and the death would not have happened without the act. A natural and probable consequence is one that a reasonable person would know is likely to happen if nothing unusual intervenes. In deciding whether a consequence is natural and probable, consider all the circumstances established by the evidence.

[There may be more than one cause of death. An act causes death only if it is a substantial factor in causing the death. A substantial factor is more than a trivial or remote factor. However, it does not need to be the only factor that causes the death.]

[It is not required that the person killed be the (victim/intended victim) of the (felony/felonies).]

[It is not required that the defendant be present when the act causing the death occurs.]

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty

The court has a sua sponte duty to give this instruction defining the elements of the crime. The court also has a sua sponte duty to instruct on the elements of the underlying felony. (People v. Cain (1995) 10 Cal.4th 1, 36 [40 Cal.Rptr.2d 481, 892 P.2d 1224].)

If causation is at issue, the court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on proximate cause. (People v. Bernhardt (1963) 222 Cal.App.2d 567, 590–591 [35 Cal.Rptr.

401]; People v. Cervantes (2001) 26 Cal.4th 860, 865–874 [111 Cal.Rptr.2d 148, 29 P.3d 225].) Because causation is likely to be an issue in any case where this instruction is given, the committee has included the paragraph that begins with "An act causes death if." If there is evidence of multiple potential causes, the court should also give the bracketed paragraph that begins with "There may be more than one cause of death." (People v. Sanchez (2001) 26 Cal.4th 834, 845–849 [111 Cal.Rptr.2d 129, 29 P.3d 209]; People v. Autry (1995) 37 Cal.App.4th 351, 363 [43 Cal.Rptr.2d 135].)

Insert the appropriate, nonassaultive, inherently dangerous felony or felonies in the blanks provided in accordance with the Supreme Court's ruling in People v. Chun (2009) 45 Cal.4th 1172 [203 P.3d 425, 91 Cal.Rptr.3d 106] [when underlying felony is assaultive in nature, felony merges with homicide and cannot be basis of a felony-murder instruction].

If the prosecution's theory is that the defendant committed or attempted to commit the underlying felony, then select "committed [or attempted to commit]" in element 1 and "intended to commit" in element 2. In addition, in the paragraph that begins with "To decide whether," select "the defendant" in the first sentence. Give all appropriate instructions on any underlying felonies with this instruction. The court may need to modify the first sentence of an instruction on the underlying felony if the defendant is not separately charged with that offense.

If the prosecution's theory is that the defendant aided and abetted or conspired to commit the felony, select one of these options in element 1 and the corresponding intent requirement in element 2. Give bracketed element 3. Give the bracketed sentence at the beginning of the instruction that begins with "The defendant may [also] be guilty of murder." In addition, in the paragraph that begins with "To decide whether," select "the perpetrator" in the first sentence. Give the second and/or third bracketed sentences. Give all appropriate instructions on any underlying felonies and on aiding and abetting and/or conspiracy with this instruction. The court may need to modify the first sentence of an instruction on the underlying felony if the defendant is not separately charged with that offense. The court may also need to modify the instruction to state "the perpetrator committed," rather than "the defendant," in the instructions on the underlying felony.

If there is evidence that the defendant did not form the intent to commit the felony until after the homicide, or did not join the conspiracy or aid and abet the felony until after the homicide, the defendant is entitled on request to an instruction pinpointing this issue. (People v. Hudson (1955) 45 Cal.2d 121, 124–127 [287 P.2d 497]; People v. Silva (2001) 25 Cal.4th 345, 371 [106 Cal.Rptr.2d 93, 21

P.3d 769].) Give the bracketed sentence that begins with "The defendant must have (intended to commit."

Give the bracketed sentence that begins with "It is not required that the person die immediately" on request if relevant based on the evidence.
The felony-murder rule does not require that the person killed be the victim of the underlying felony. (People v. Johnson (1972) 28 Cal.App.3d 653, 658 [104 Cal.Rptr. 807] [accomplice]; People v. Welch (1972) 8 Cal.3d 106, 117–119 [104 Cal.Rptr. 217, 501 P.2d 225] [innocent bystander]; People v. Salas (1972) 7 Cal.3d 812, 823 [103 Cal.Rptr. 431, 500 P.2d 7] [police officer].) Give the bracketed sentence that begins with "It is not required that the person killed be" on request.

Give the last bracketed sentence, stating that the defendant need not be present, on request.

If the defendant was a nonkiller who fled, leaving behind an accomplice who killed, see People v. Cavitt (2004) 33 Cal.4th 187, 206, fn. 7 [14 Cal.Rtpr.3d 281, 91 P.3d 222] [continuous transaction] and the discussion of Cavitt in People v. Wilkins (2013) 56 Cal.4th 333, 344 [153 Cal.Rptr.3d 519, 295 P.3d 903].

There is no sua sponte duty to clarify the logical nexus between the felony and the homicidal act. If an issue about the logical nexus requirement arises, the court may give the following language:

> There must be a logical connection between the cause of death and the _____ <insert inherently dangerous felony or felonies> [or attempted _____ <insert inherently dangerous felony or felonies>]. If the prosecutor is proceeding under both malice and felony-murder theories, give CALCRIM No. 548, Murder: Alternative Theories. If the prosecutor is relying only on a theory of felony murder, no instruction on malice should be given. (See People v. Cain (1995) 10 Cal.4th 1, 35–37 [40 Cal.Rptr.2d 481, 892 P.2d 1224] [error to instruct on malice when felony murder only theory].)

Related Instructions—Other Causes of Death

This instruction should be used only when the alleged victim dies during the course of the felony as a result of a heart attack, fire, or a similar cause rather than as a result of some act of force or violence committed against the victim by one of the participants in the felony. (Cf. People v. Billa (2003) 31 Cal.4th 1064, 1072 [6 Cal.Rptr.3d 425, 79 P.3d 542] [arson causing death of accomplice]; *People v. Accidental Death of Accomplice During Commission of Arson

In People v. Ferlin (1928) 203 Cal. 587, 596–597 [265 P. 230], the Supreme Court held that an aider and abettor is not liable for the accidental death of an accomplice to arson when (1) the defendant was neither present nor actively participating in the arson when it was committed; (2) the accomplice acted alone in actually perpetrating the arson; and (3) the accomplice killed only himself or herself and not another person. More recently, the court stated,

> We conclude that felony-murder liability for any death in the course of arson attaches to all accomplices in the felony at least where, as here, one or more surviving accomplices were present at the scene and active participants in the crime. We need not decide here whether Ferlin was correct on its facts.

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty

This instruction is designed to be given when murder is charged on theories of malice and felony murder to help the jury distinguish between the two theories. This instruction is also designed to be given when felony murder is charged on multiple theories. This instruction should be given after the court has given any applicable instructions on defenses to homicide and before CALCRIM No. 520, Murder With Malice Aforethought.

If there is evidence of multiple acts from which the jury might conclude that the defendant killed the decedent, the court may be required to give CALCRIM No. 3500, Unanimity. (See People v. Dellinger (1984) 163 Cal.App.3d 284, 300–302 [209 Cal.Rpt. 503] [error not to instruct on unanimity where evidence that the victim was killed either by blunt force or by injection of cocaine].) 561 Homicide: Provocative Act by Accomplice

[The defendant is charged [in Count __] with _____ *<insert underlying crime>.] The defendant is [also] charged [in Count __] with murder. A person can be guilty of murder under the provocative act doctrine even if someone else did the actual killing.

To prove that the defendant is guilty of murder under the provocative act doctrine, the People must prove that:

1. The defendant was an accomplice of _____ <insert name[s] or description[s] of alleged provocateur[s]> in (committing/ [or] attempting to commit) _____ <insert underlying crime>

2. In (committing/ [or] attempting to commit) _____ *<insert underlying crime>, _____ <insert name[s] or description[s] of alleged provocateur[s]> intentionally did a provocative act;

3. _____ <insert name[s] or description[s] of alleged provocateur[s]> knew that the natural and probable consequences of the provocative act were dangerous to human life and then acted with conscious disregard for life;

4. In response to _____'s <insert name[s] or description[s] of alleged provocateur[s]> provocative act, _____ <insert name or description of third party> killed _____ *<insert name of decedent>;

AND

5. _____'s <insert name of decedent> death was the natural and probable consequence of _____'s <insert name[s] or description[s] of alleged provocateur[s]> provocative act.

A provocative act is an act:

1. [That goes beyond what is necessary to accomplish the _____ *<insert underlying crime>;]

[AND

2.] Whose natural and probable consequences are dangerous to human life, because there is a high probability that the act will provoke a deadly response.

The defendant is an accomplice of _____ <insert name[s] or description[s] of alleged provocateur[s]> if the defendant is subject to prosecution for the identical offense that you conclude _____ <insert name[s] or description[s] of alleged provocateur[s]> (committed/ [or] attempted to commit). The defendant is subject to prosecution if (he/she) (committed/ [or] attempted to commit) the crime or if:

1. (He/She) knew of _____'s <insert name[s] or description[s] of alleged provocateur[s]> criminal purpose to commit _____ <insert underlying crime*>;

AND

2. The defendant intended to, and did in fact, (aid, facilitate, promote, encourage, or instigate the commission of _____ <insert underlying crime>/ [or] participate in a criminal conspiracy to commit _____ <insert underlying crime>).

[An accomplice does not need to be present when the crime is committed. On the other hand, a person is not an accomplice just because he or she is at the scene of a crime, even if he or she knows that a crime [will be committed or] is being committed and does nothing to stop it.]

In order to prove that _____'s <insert name of decedent> death was the natural and probable consequence of _____'s <insert name[s] or description[s] of alleged provocateur[s]> provocative act, the People must prove that:

1. A reasonable person in _____'s <insert name[s] or description[s] of alleged provocateur[s]> position would have foreseen that there was a high probability that (his/her/their) act could begin a chain of events resulting in someone's death;

2. _____'s <insert name[s] or description[s] of alleged provocateur[s]> act was a direct and substantial factor in causing _____'s <insert name of decedent> death;

AND

3. _____'s <insert name or description of decedent> death would not have happened if _____ <insert name[s] or description[s] of alleged provocateur[s]> had not committed the provocative act.

A substantial factor is more than a trivial or remote factor. However, it does not need to be the only factor that caused the death.

<Multiple Provocative Acts>
[The People alleged the following provocative acts: _____ *<insert acts alleged>. You may not find the defendant guilty unless you all agree that the People have proved that:

1. _____ <insert name[s] or description[s] of alleged provocateur[s]> committed at least one provocative act;

AND

2. At least one of the provocative acts committed by _____ <insert name[s] or description[s] of alleged provocateur[s]> was a direct and substantial factor that caused the killing.

However, you do not all need to agree on which provocative act has been proved.]

<Accomplice Deceased>
[If you decide that the only provocative act that caused _____'s <insert name of deceased accomplice> death was committed by _____ *<insert name of deceased accomplice>, then the defendant is not guilty of _____'s <insert name of deceased accomplice> murder.]

<Independent Criminal Act>
[A defendant is not guilty of murder if the killing of _____ <insert name or description of decedent> was caused solely by the independent criminal act of someone other than the defendant or _____ *<insert name[s] or description[s] of all alleged accomplice[s]>. An independent criminal act is a free, deliberate, and informed criminal act by a person who is not acting with the defendant.]

<Degree of Murder>
[If you decide that the defendant is guilty of murder, you must decide whether the murder is first or second degree.

To prove that the defendant is guilty of first degree murder, the People must prove that:

1. As a result of _____'s <insert name[s] or description[s] of alleged provocateur[s]> provocative act, _____ <insert name of decedent> was killed while _____ <insert name[s] or description[s] of alleged provocateur[s]> (was/were) committing _____ *<insert Pen. Code, § 189 felony>;

AND

2. _____ <insert name[s] or description[s] of alleged provocateur[s]> specifically intended to commit _____ <insert Pen. Code, § 189 felony> when (he/she/they) did the provocative act.

In deciding whether _____ <insert name[s] or description[s] of alleged provocateur[s]> intended to commit _____ <insert Pen. Code, § 189 felony> and whether the death occurred during the commission of _____ *<insert Pen. Code, § 189 felony>, you should refer to the instructions I have given you on _____ <insert Pen. Code, § 189 felony>.

Any murder that does not meet these requirements for first degree murder is second degree murder.]

[If you decide that the defendant committed murder, that crime is murder in the second degree.]

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty

The court has a sua sponte duty to give this instruction if the provocative act doctrine is one of the general principles of law relevant to the issues raised by the evidence. (People v. Hood (1969) 1 Cal.3d 444, 449 [82 Cal.Rptr. 618, 462 P.2d 370].) If the prosecution relies on a first degree murder theory based on a Penal Code section 189 felony, the court has a sua sponte duty to give instructions relating to the underlying felony, whether or not it is separately charged.

Penal Code section 188, as amended by Statutes 2018, ch. 1015 (S.B. 1437), became effective January 1, 2019. The amendment added "malice shall not be imputed to a person based solely on his or her participation in a crime." The continued legality of provocative act murder liability when an accomplice committed the provocative act may be affected by this statutory change.

The first bracketed sentence of this instruction should only be given if the underlying felony is separately charged.

In the definition of "provocative act," the court should always give the bracketed phrase that begins, "that goes beyond what is necessary," unless the court determines that this element is not required because the underlying felony includes malice as an element. (In re Aurelio R. (1985) 167 Cal.App.3d 52, 59–60 [212 Cal.Rptr. 868].) See discussion in the Related Issues section to CALCRIM No. 560, Homicide: Provocative Act by Defendant.

In the paragraph that begins with "An accomplice does not need to be present," use the bracketed phrase "will be committed or" if appropriate under the facts of the case.

If a deceased accomplice participated in provocative acts leading to his or her own death, give the bracketed sentence that begins, "If you decide that the only provocative act that caused . . . ." (See People v. Garcia (1999) 69 Cal.App.4th 1324, 1330 [82 Cal.Rptr.2d 254]; People v. Superior Court (Shamis) (1997) 58 Cal.App.4th 833, 846 [68 Cal.Rptr.2d 388]; Taylor v. Superior Court (1970) 3 Cal.3d 578, 583–584 [91 Cal.Rptr. 275, 477 P.2d 131]; People v. Antick (1975) 15 Cal.3d 79, 90 [123 Cal.Rptr. 475, 539 P.2d 43], disapproved on other grounds in People v. McCoy (20010 25 Cal.4th 1111, 1123 [108 Cal.Rptr.2d 188, 24 P.3d 1210].)

If there is evidence that the actual perpetrator may have committed an independent criminal act, give on request the bracketed paragraph that begins, "A defendant is not guilty of murder if . . . ." (See People v. Cervantes (2001) 26 Cal.4th 860, 874 [111 Cal.Rptr.2d 148, 29 P.3d 225].)

If the evidence suggests that there is more than one provocative act, give the bracketed section on "Multiple Provocative Acts." (People v. Briscoe (2001) 92 Cal.App.4th 568, 591 [112 Cal.Rptr.2d 401].)

If the prosecution is not seeking a first degree murder conviction, omit those bracketed paragraphs relating to first degree murder and simply give the last bracketed sentence of the instruction. As an alternative, the court may omit all instructions relating to the degree and secure a stipulation that if a murder verdict is returned, the degree of murder is set at second degree. If the prosecution is seeking a first degree murder conviction, give the bracketed section on "degree of murder."

590 Gross Vehicular Manslaughter While Intoxicated (Pen. Code, § 191.5(a))

The defendant is charged [in Count __] with gross vehicular manslaughter while intoxicated [in violation of Penal Code section 191.5(a)].

To prove that the defendant is guilty of this crime, the People must prove that:

1. The defendant (drove under the influence of (an alcoholic beverage/ [or] a drug) [or under the combined influence of an alcoholic beverage and a drug]/drove while having a blood alcohol level of 0.08 or higher/drove under the influence of (an alcoholic beverage/ [or] a drug) [or under the combined influence of an alcoholic beverage and a drug] when under the age of 21/drove while having a blood alcohol level of 0.05 or higher when under the age of 21);

2. While driving that vehicle under the influence of (an alcoholic beverage/ [or] a drug) [or under the combined influence of an alcoholic beverage and a drug], the defendant also committed (a/an) (misdemeanor[,]/ [or] infraction[,]/ [or] otherwise lawful act that might cause death);

3. The defendant committed the (misdemeanor[,]/ [or] infraction[,]/ [or] otherwise lawful act that might cause death) with gross negligence;

AND

4. The defendant's grossly negligent conduct caused the death of another person.

[The People allege that the defendant committed the following (misdemeanor[s]/ [and] infraction[s]): _____ *<insert misdemeanor[s] /infraction[s]>.

Instruction[s] __ tell[s] you what the People must prove in order to prove that the defendant committed _____ *<insert misdemeanor[s]/infraction[s]>.]

[The People [also] allege that the defendant committed the following otherwise lawful act(s) that might cause death: _____ *<insert act[s] alleged>.]

Instruction[s] __ tell[s] you what the People must prove in order to prove that the defendant (drove under the influence of (an alcoholic beverage/ [or] a drug) [or under the combined influence of an alcoholic beverage and a drug]/drove while having a blood alcohol level of 0.08 or higher/drove under the influence of (an alcoholic beverage/ [or] a drug) [or under the combined influence of an alcoholic beverage and a drug] when under the age of 21).

Gross negligence involves more than ordinary carelessness, inattention, or mistake in judgment. A person acts with gross negligence when:

1. He or she acts in a reckless way that creates a high risk of death or great bodily injury;

AND

2. A reasonable person would have known that acting in that way would create such a risk.

In other words, a person acts with gross negligence when the way he or she acts is so different from the way an ordinarily careful person would act in the same situation that his or her act amounts to disregard for human life or indifference to the consequences of that act.

The combination of driving a vehicle while under the influence of (an alcoholic beverage/ [and/or] a drug) and violating a traffic law is not enough by itself to establish gross negligence. In evaluating whether the defendant acted with gross negligence, consider the level of the defendant's intoxication, if any; the way the defendant drove; and any other relevant aspects of the defendant's conduct.

[Great bodily injury means significant or substantial physical injury. It is an injury that is greater than minor or moderate harm.]

[A person facing a sudden and unexpected emergency situation not caused by that person's own negligence is required only to use the same care and judgment that an ordinarily careful person would use in the same situation, even if it appears later that a different course of action would have been safer.]

[An act causes death if the death is the direct, natural, and probable consequence of the act and the death would not have happened without the act. A natural and probable consequence is one that a reasonable person would know is likely to happen if nothing unusual intervenes. In deciding whether a consequence is natural and probable, consider all of the circumstances established by the evidence.]

[There may be more than one cause of death. An act causes death only if it is a substantial factor in causing the death. A substantial factor is more than a trivial or remote factor. However, it does not need to be the only factor that causes the death.]

[The People allege that the defendant committed the following (misdemeanor[s][,]/ [and] infraction[s][,]/ [and] otherwise lawful act[s] that might cause death): _____ *<insert alleged predicate acts when multiple acts alleged>. You may not find the defendant guilty unless all of you agree that the People have proved that the defendant committed at least one of these alleged (misdemeanors[,]/ [or] infractions[,]/ [or] otherwise lawful acts that might cause death) and you all agree on which (misdemeanor[,]/ [or] infraction[,]/ [or] otherwise lawful act that might cause death) the defendant committed.]

[The People have the burden of proving beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant committed gross vehicular manslaughter while intoxicated. If the People have not met this burden, you must find the defendant not guilty of that crime. You must consider whether the defendant is guilty of the lesser crime[s] of _____ *<insert lesser offense[s]>.]

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty

The court has a sua sponte duty to give this instruction defining the elements of the crime.

The court has a sua sponte duty to specify the predicate misdemeanor(s) or infraction(s) alleged and to instruct on the elements of the predicate offense(s). (People v. Milham (1984) 159 Cal.App.3d 487, 506 [205 Cal.Rptr. 688]; People v.

Ellis (1999) 69 Cal.App.4th 1334, 1339 [82 Cal.Rptr.2d 409].) In element 1, instruct on the particular "under the influence" offense charged. In element 2, instruct on either theory of vehicular manslaughter (misdemeanor/infraction or lawful act committed with negligence) as appropriate. The court must also give the appropriate instruction on the elements of the driving under the influence offense and the predicate misdemeanor or infraction.

If causation is at issue, the court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on proximate cause. (People v. Bernhardt (1963) 222 Cal.App.2d 567, 590–591 [35 Cal.Rptr. 401].) If the evidence indicates that there was only one cause of death, the court should give the "direct, natural, and probable" language in the first bracketed paragraph on causation. If there is evidence of multiple causes of death, the court should also give the "substantial factor" instruction in the second bracketed paragraph on causation. (See People v. Autry (1995) 37 Cal.App.4th 351, 363 [43 Cal.Rptr.2d 135]; People v. Pike (1988) 197 Cal.App.3d 732, 746–747 [243 Cal.Rptr. 54].)

There is a split in authority over whether there is a sua sponte duty to give a unanimity instruction when multiple predicate offenses are alleged. (People v. Gary (1987) 189 Cal.App.3d 1212, 1218 [235 Cal.Rptr. 30] [unanimity instruction required, overruled on other grounds in People v. Flood (1998) 18 Cal.4th 470, 481 [76 Cal.Rptr.2d 180 957 P.2d 869]; People v. Durkin (1988) 205 Cal.App.3d Supp. 9, 13 [252 Cal.Rptr. 735] [unanimity instruction not required but preferable]; People v. Mitchell (1986) 188 Cal.App.3d 216, 222 [232 Cal.Rptr. 438] [unanimity instruction not required]; People v. Leffel (1988) 203 Cal.App.3d 575, 586–587 [249 Cal.Rptr. 906] [unanimity instruction not required, harmless error if was required].) A unanimity instruction is included in a bracketed paragraph for the court to use at its discretion.

If there is sufficient evidence and the defendant requests it, the court should instruct on the imminent peril/sudden emergency doctrine. (People v. Boulware (1940) 41 Cal.App.2d 268, 269–270 [106 P.2d 436].) Give the bracketed sentence that begins with "A person facing a sudden and unexpected emergency."

If the defendant is charged with one or more prior conviction (see Pen. Code, § 191.5(d)), the court should also give CALCRIM No. 3100, Prior Conviction: Nonbifurcated Trial, unless the defendant has stipulated to the prior conviction or the court has granted a bifurcated trial. (See Bench Notes to CALCRIM No. 3100.)

RELATED ISSUES

DUI Cannot Serve as Predicate Unlawful Act

The Vehicle Code driving-under-the-influence offense of the first element cannot do double duty as the predicate unlawful act for the second element. (People v. Soledad (1987) 190 Cal.App.3d 74, 81 [235 Cal.Rptr. 208].) "[T]he trial court erroneously omitted the 'unlawful act' element of vehicular manslaughter when instructing in . . . [the elements] by referring to Vehicle Code section 23152 rather than another 'unlawful act' as required by the statute." (Id. at p. 82.)

Predicate Act Need Not Be Inherently Dangerous

"[T]he offense which constitutes the 'unlawful act' need not be an inherently dangerous misdemeanor or infraction. Rather, to be an 'unlawful act' within the meaning of section 192(c)(1), the offense must be dangerous under the circumstances of its commission. An unlawful act committed with gross negligence would necessarily be so." (People v. Wells (1996) 12 Cal.4th 979, 982 [50 Cal.Rptr.2d 699, 911 P.2d 1374].)

Lawful Act in an Unlawful Manner: Negligence

The statute uses the phrase "lawful act which might produce death, in an unlawful manner." (Pen. Code, § 191.5.) "[C]ommitting a lawful act in an unlawful manner simply means to commit a lawful act with negligence, that is, without reasonable caution and care." (People v. Thompson (2000) 79 Cal.App.4th 40, 53 [93 Cal.Rptr.2d 803].) Because the instruction lists the negligence requirement as element 3, the phrase "in an unlawful manner" is omitted from element 2 as repetitive.

600 Attempted Murder (Pen. Code, §§ 21a, 663, 664)

The defendant is charged [in Count __] with attempted murder.

To prove that the defendant is guilty of attempted murder, the People must prove that:

1. The defendant took at least one direct but ineffective step toward killing (another person/ [or] a fetus);

AND

2. The defendant intended to kill (that/a) (person/ [or] fetus).

A direct step requires more than merely planning or preparing to commit murder or obtaining or arranging for something needed to commit murder. A direct step is one that goes beyond planning or preparation and shows that a person is putting his or her plan into action. A direct step indicates a definite and unambiguous intent to kill. It is a direct movement toward the commission of the crime after preparations are made. It is an immediate step that puts the plan in motion so that the plan would have been completed if some circumstance outside the plan had not interrupted the attempt.

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty

The court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on the elements of the crime of attempted murder when charged, or if not charged, when the evidence raises a question whether all the elements of the charged offense are present. (See People v. Breverman (1998) 19 Cal.4th 142, 154 [77 Cal.Rptr.2d 870, 960 P.2d 1094] [discussing duty to instruct on lesser included offenses in homicide generally].)

The second bracketed paragraph is provided for cases in which the prosecution theory is that the defendant created a "kill zone," harboring the specific and concurrent intent to kill others in the zone. (People v. Bland (2002) 28 Cal.4th 313, 331 [121 Cal.Rptr.2d 546, 48 P.3d 1107].) "The conclusion that transferred intent does not apply to attempted murder still permits a person who shoots at a group of people to be punished for the actions towards everyone in the group even if that person primarily targeted only one of them." (Id. at p. 329.)

The Bland court stated that a special instruction on this issue was not required. (Id. at p. 331, fn.6.) The bracketed language is provided for the court to use at its discretion.

Give the next-to-last bracketed paragraph when the defendant has been charged only with attempt to commit murder, but the evidence at trial reveals that the murder was actually completed. (See Pen. Code, § 663.)

Penal Code section 188, as amended by Statutes 2018, ch. 1015 (S.B. 1437), became effective January 1, 2019. The amendment added "malice shall not be imputed to a person based solely on his or her participation in a crime." The natural and probable consequences doctrine as the basis for attempted murder may be affected by this statutory change.

703 Special Circumstances: Intent Requirement for Accomplice After June 5, 1990—Felony Murder (Pen. Code, § 190.2(d))

If you decide that (the/a) defendant is guilty of first degree murder but was not the actual killer, then, when you consider the special circumstance[s] of _____ <insert felony murder special circumstance[s]>, you must also decide whether the defendant acted either with intent to kill or with reckless indifference to human life.

In order to prove (this/these) special circumstance[s] for a defendant who is not the actual killer but who is guilty of first degree murder as (an aider and abettor/ [or] a member of a conspiracy), the People must prove either that the defendant intended to kill, or the People must prove all of the following:

1. The defendant's participation in the crime began before or during the killing;

2. The defendant was a major participant in the crime;

   AND

3. When the defendant participated in the crime, (he/she) acted with reckless indifference to human life.

[A person acts with reckless indifference to human life when he or she knowingly engages in criminal activity that he or she knows involves a grave risk of death.]

[The People do not have to prove that the actual killer acted with intent to kill or with reckless indifference to human life in order for the special circumstance[s] of _____ <insert felony-murder special circumstance[s]> to be true.]

[If you decide that the defendant is guilty of first degree murder, but you cannot agree whether the defendant was the actual killer, then, in order to find (this/these) special circumstance[s] true, you must find either that the defendant acted with intent to kill or you must find that the defendant acted with reckless indifference to human life and was a major participant in the crime.] [When you decide whether the defendant was a major participant, consider all the evidence. Among the factors you may consider are:

1. What ~~role did~~ was the defendant's role ~~play~~ in planning the crime ~~inal enterprise~~ that led to the death[s]?
2. What was the defendant's role ~~did the defendant play~~ in supplying or using lethal weapons?
3. What ~~awareness~~ did the defendant know about ~~have of particular~~ dangers posed by the ~~nature of the~~ crime, any weapons used, or past experience or conduct of the other participant[s]?
4. Was the defendant ~~present at the scene of the killing,~~ in a position to facilitate or to prevent the death ~~actual murder~~?
5. Did the defendant's ~~own~~ action~~s~~ or inaction~~s~~ play a ~~particular~~ role in the death?
6. What did the defendant do after lethal force was used?

[7._____<insert any other relevant factors.>]

No one of these factors is necessary, nor is any one of them necessarily enough, to determine whether the defendant was a major participant.]

If the defendant was not the actual killer, then the People have the burden of proving beyond a reasonable doubt that (he/she) acted with either the intent to kill or with reckless indifference to human life and was a major participant in the crime for the special circumstance[s] of _____ <insert felony murder special circumstance[s]> to be true. If the People have not met this burden, you must find (this/these) special circumstance[s] (has/have) not been proved true [for that defendant].

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty

The court has a sua sponte duty to instruct the jury on the mental state required for accomplice liability when a special circumstance is charged and there is sufficient evidence to support the finding that the defendant was not the actual killer. (See People v. Jones (2003) 30 Cal.4th 1084, 1117 [135 Cal.Rptr.2d 370, 70 P.3d 359].) If there is sufficient evidence to show that the defendant may have been an accomplice and not the actual killer, the court has a sua sponte duty to give the accomplice intent instruction, regardless of the prosecution's theory of the case. (Ibid.)

Do not give this instruction when giving CALCRIM No. 731, Special Circumstances: Murder in Commission of Felony—Kidnapping With Intent to Kill After March 8, 2000 or CALCRIM No. 732, Special Circumstances: Murder in Commission of Felony—Arson With Intent to Kill. (People v. Odom (2016) 244 Cal.App.4th 237, 256–257 [197 Cal.Rptr.3d 774].)

When multiple special circumstances are charged, one or more of which require intent to kill, the court may need to modify this instruction.

Proposition 115 modified the intent requirement of the special circumstance law, codifying the decisions of People v. Anderson (1987) 43 Cal.3d 1104, 1147 [240 Cal.Rptr. 585, 742 P.2d 1306], and Tison v. Arizona (1987) 481 U.S. 137, 157–158 [107 S.Ct. 1676, 95 L.Ed.2d 127]. The current law provides that the actual killer does not have to act with intent to kill unless the special circumstance specifically requires intent. (Pen. Code, § 190.2(b).) If the felony-murder special circumstance is charged, then the People must prove that a defendant who was not the actual killer was a major participant and acted with intent to kill or with reckless indifference to human life. (Pen. Code, § 190.2(d); People v. Banks (2015) 61 Cal.4th 788, 807-809 [189 Cal.Rptr.3d 208, 351 P.3d 330]; People v. Estrada (1995) 11 Cal.4th 568, 571 [46 Cal.Rptr.2d 586, 904 P.2d 1197].)

Use this instruction for any case in which the jury could conclude that the defendant was an accomplice to a killing that occurred after June 5, 1990, when the felony-murder special circumstance is charged.

Give the bracketed paragraph stating that the People do not have to prove intent to kill or reckless indifference on the part of the actual killer if there is a codefendant alleged to be the actual killer or if the jury could convict the defendant as either the actual killer or an accomplice.

If the jury could convict the defendant either as a principal or as an accomplice, the jury must find intent to kill or reckless indifference if they cannot agree that the defendant was the actual killer. (People v. Jones (2003) 30 Cal.4th 1084, 1117 [135 Cal.Rptr.2d 370, 70 P.3d 359].) In such cases, the court should give both the bracketed paragraph stating that the People do not have to prove intent to kill or reckless indifference on the part of the actual killer, and the bracketed paragraph that begins with "[I]f you decide that the defendant is guilty of first degree murder, but you cannot agree whether the defendant was the actual killer . . . ."

The court does not have a sua sponte duty to define "reckless indifference to human life." (People v. Estrada (1995) 11 Cal.4th 568, 578 [46 Cal.Rptr.2d 586, 904 P.2d 1197].) However, this "holding should not be understood to discourage trial courts from amplifying the statutory language for the jury." (Id. at p. 579.) The court may give the bracketed definition of reckless indifference if requested.

In People v. Banks (2015) 61 Cal.4th 788, 803-808 [189 Cal.Rptr.3d 208, 351 P.3d 330], the court identified certain factors to guide the jury in its determination of ~~about~~ whether the defendant was a major participant, but stopped short of holding that the court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on those factors. The trial court should determine whether the Banks factors need be given.

Do not give this instruction if accomplice liability is not at issue in the case.

732 Special Circumstances: Murder in Commission of Felony—Arson With Intent to Kill (Pen. Code, § 190.2(a)(17))

The defendant is charged with the special circumstance of intentional murder while engaged in the commission of arson that burned an (inhabited structure /[or] inhabited property) [in violation of Penal Code section 190.2(a)(17)].

To prove that this special circumstance is true, the People must prove that:

1. The defendant (committed [or attempted to commit][,]/ [or] aided and abetted[,]/ [or] was a member of a conspiracy to commit) arson that burned an (inhabited structure/[or] inhabited property);

2. The defendant (intended to commit[,]/ [or] intended to aid and abet the perpetrator in committing[,]/ [or] intended that one or more of the members of the conspiracy commit) arson that burned an (inhabited structure/[or] inhabited property);

<Give element 3 if defendant did not personally commit or attempt arson.>

[3. If the defendant did not personally commit [or attempt to commit] arson, then another perpetrator, (whom the defendant was aiding and abetting/ [or] with whom the defendant conspired), personally committed [or attempted to commit] arson that burned an (inhabited structure/[or] inhabited property);]

(3/4). The commission [or attempted commission] of the arson was a substantial factor in causing the death of another person;

AND

(4/5). The defendant intended that the other person be killed.

To decide whether (the defendant/ [and] the perpetrator) committed [or attempted to commit] arson that burned an (inhabited structure /[or] inhabited property), please refer to the separate instructions that I (will give/have given) you on that crime. [To decide whether the defendant aided and abetted the crime, please refer to the separate instructions that I (will give/have given) you on aiding and abetting.] [To decide whether the defendant was a member of a conspiracy to commit the crime, please refer to the separate instructions that I (will give/have given) you on conspiracy.] You must apply those instructions when you decide whether the People have proved this special circumstance.

<Make certain that all appropriate instructions on underlying arson, aiding and abetting, and conspiracy are given.>

An act causes death if the death is the direct, natural, and probable consequence of the act and the death would not have happened without the act. A natural and probable consequence is one that a reasonable person would know is likely to happen if nothing unusual intervenes. In deciding whether a consequence is natural and probable, consider all the circumstances established by the evidence.

There may be more than one cause of death. An act causes death only if it is a substantial factor in causing the death. A substantial factor is more than a trivial or remote factor. However, it does not need to be the only factor that causes the death.

[If all the listed elements are proved, you may find this special circumstance true even if the defendant intended solely to commit murder and the commission of arson was merely part of or incidental to the commission of that murder.]

New January 2006; Revised August 2013, August 2016, September 2019

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty

The court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on the elements of the special circumstance. (See People v. Williams (1997) 16 Cal.4th 635, 689 [66 Cal.Rptr.2d 573, 941 P.2d 752].) The court also has a sua sponte duty to instruct on the elements of the arson alleged. (People v. Cain (1995) 10 Cal.4th 1, 36 [40 Cal.Rptr.2d 481, 892 P.2d 1224].)

Do not give CALCRIM No. 703, Special Circumstances: Intent requirement for Accomplice After June 5, 1990, together with this instruction. See People v. Odom (2016) 244 Cal.App.4th 237, 256–257 [197 Cal.Rptr.3d 774].

Subparagraph (M) of Penal Code section 190.2(a)(17) eliminates the application of People v. Green (1980) 27 Cal.3d 1, 61 [164 Cal.Rptr. 1, 609 P.2d 468], to intentional murders during the commission of kidnapping or arson of an inhabited structure. The statute may only be applied to alleged homicides after the effective date, March 8, 2000. This instruction may be given alone or with CALCRIM No.

730, Special Circumstances: Murder in Commission of Felony, Pen. Code, § 190.2(a)(17).

For the standard felony-murder special circumstance, it is not necessary for the actual killer to intend to kill. (Pen. Code, § 190.2(b).) However, an accomplice who is not the actual killer must either act with intent to kill or be a major participant and act with reckless indifference to human life. (Pen. Code, § 190.2(d).) Subparagraph (M) of Penal Code section 190.2(a)(17) does not specify whether the defendant must personally intend to kill or whether accomplice liability may be based on an actual killer who intended to kill even if the defendant did not. (See Pen. Code, § 190.2(a)(17)(M).) This instruction has been drafted to require that the defendant intend to kill, whether the defendant is an accomplice or the actual killer. If the evidence raises the potential for accomplice liability and the court concludes that the accomplice need not personally intend to kill, then the court must modify element 5 to state that the person who caused the death intended to kill. In such cases, the court also has a sua sponte duty give CALCRIM No. 703, Special Circumstances: Intent Requirement for Accomplice After June 5, 1990—Felony Murder, Pen. Code, § 190.2(a)(17).

If causation is at issue, the court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on proximate cause. (People v. Bernhardt (1963) 222 Cal.App.2d 567, 590–591 [35 Cal.Rptr. 401]; People v. Cervantes (2001) 26 Cal.4th 860, 865–874 [111 Cal.Rptr.2d 148, 29 P.3d 225].) Because causation is likely to be an issue in any case where this instruction is given, the committee has included the paragraph that begins with "An act causes death if." If there is evidence of multiple potential causes, the court should also give the bracketed paragraph that begins with "There may be more than one cause of death." (People v. Sanchez (2001) 26 Cal.4th 834, 845–849 [111 Cal.Rptr.2d 129, 29 P.3d 209]; People v. Autry (1995) 37 Cal.App.4th 351, 363 [43 Cal.Rptr.2d 135].)

If the prosecution's theory is that the defendant committed or attempted to commit arson, then select "committed [or attempted to commit]" in element 1 and "intended to commit" in element 2. In addition, in the paragraph that begins with "To decide whether," select "the defendant" in the first sentence. Give all appropriate instructions on arson.

If the prosecution's theory is that the defendant aided and abetted or conspired to commit arson, select one or both of these options in element 1 and the corresponding intent requirement in element 2. Give bracketed element 3. In addition, in the paragraph that begins with "To decide whether," select "the perpetrator" in the first sentence. Give the second and/or third bracketed sentences. Give all appropriate instructions on arson and on aiding and abetting and/or conspiracy with this instruction.

When giving this instruction with CALCRIM No. 730, give the final bracketed paragraph.

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty

The court has a sua sponte duty to give an instruction defining the elements of the crime.

Unlike murder by torture, the crime of torture does not require that the intent to cause pain be premeditated or that any cruel or extreme pain be prolonged. (People v. Pre (2004) 117 Cal.App.4th 413, 419–420 [11 Cal.Rptr.3d 739]; People v. Aguilar (1997) 58 Cal.App.4th 1196, 1204–1205 [68 Cal.Rptr.2d 619]; People v. Vital (1996) 45 Cal.App.4th 441, 444 [52 Cal.Rptr.2d 676].) Torture as defined in section 206 of the Penal Code focuses on the mental state of the perpetrator and not the actual pain inflicted. (People v. Hale (1999) 75 Cal.App.4th 94, 108 [88 Cal.Rptr.2d 904].) Give the first bracketed paragraph on request if there is no proof that the alleged victim actually suffered pain. (See Pen. Code, § 206.)

"Extortion" need not be defined for purposes of torture. (People v. Barrera (1993) 14 Cal.App.4th 1555, 1564 [18 Cal.Rptr.2d 395]; but see People v. Hill (1983) 141 Cal.App.3d 661, 668 [190 Cal.Rptr. 628] [term should be defined for kidnapping under Pen. Code, § 209].) Nevertheless, either of the bracketed definitions of extortion, and the related definition of "official act," may be given on request if any of these issues are raised in the case. (See Pen. Code, § 518 [defining "extortion"]; People v. Norris (1985) 40 Cal.3d 51, 55–56 [219 Cal.Rptr. 7, 706 P.2d 1141] [defining "official act"].) Extortion may also be committed by using "the color of official right" to make an official do an act. (Pen. Code, § 518; see Evans v. United States (1992) 504 U.S. 255, 258 [112 S.Ct. 1881, 119 L.Ed.2d 57]; McCormick v. United States (1990) 500 U.S. 257, 273 [111 S.Ct. 1807, 114 L.Ed.2d 307] [both discussing common law definition of the term].) LESSER INCLUDED OFFENSES

In People v. Martinez (2005) 125 Cal.App.4th 1035, 1042–1046 [23 Cal.Rptr.3d 508], the court held that none of the following offenses were lesser included offenses to torture: assault with a deadly weapon (Pen. Code, § 245(a)(1)); corporal injury on a cohabitant (Pen. Code, § 273.5); forcible rape (Pen. Code, § 261(a)(2)); forcible oral copulation (Pen. Code, § 287~~8a~~(c)); criminal threats (Pen. Code, § 422); dissuading a witness by force or threats (Pen. Code, § 136.1(c)(1)); false imprisonment by violence. (Pen. Code, § 236.)

The court did not decide whether assault with force likely to cause great bodily injury is a lesser included offense to torture. (Id. at p. 1043–1044.)

860. Assault on Firefighter or Peace Officer With Deadly Weapon or Force Likely to Produce Great Bodily Injury (Pen. Code, §§ 240, 245(c) & (d))

The defendant is charged [in Count __] with assault with (force likely to produce great bodily injury/a deadly weapon/a firearm/a semiautomatic firearm/a machine gun/an assault weapon/a .50 BMG rifle) on a (firefighter/peace officer) [in violation of Penal Code section 245].

To prove that the defendant is guilty of this crime, the People must prove that:

<Alternative 1A—force with weapon>

[1. The defendant did an act with (a deadly weapon/a firearm/a semiautomatic firearm/a machine gun/an assault weapon/a .50 BMG rifle) that by its nature would directly and probably result in the application of force to a person;]

<Alternative 1B—force without weapon>

[1A. The defendant did an act that by its nature would directly and probably result in the application of force to a person, and

1B. The force used was likely to produce great bodily injury;]

2. The defendant did that act willfully;

3. When the defendant acted, (he/she) was aware of facts that would lead a reasonable person to realize that (his/her) act by its nature would directly and probably result in the application of force to someone;

4. When the defendant acted, (he/she) had the present ability to apply force (likely to produce great bodily injury/with a deadly weapon/with a firearm/with a semiautomatic firearm/with a machine gun/with an assault weapon/with a .50 BMG rifle) to a person;

5. When the defendant acted, the person assaulted was lawfully performing (his/her) duties as a (firefighter/peace officer);

[AND]

6. When the defendant acted, (he/she) knew, or reasonably should have known, that the person assaulted was a (firefighter/peace officer) who was performing (his/her) duties(;/.)

<Give element 7 when instructing on self-defense or defense of another.>
[AND

7. The defendant did not act (in self-defense/ [or] in defense of someone else).]

Someone commits an act willfully when he or she does it willingly or on purpose. It is not required that he or she intend to break the law, hurt someone else, or gain any advantage.

[The terms application of force and apply force mean to touch in a harmful or offensive manner. The slightest touching can be enough if it is done in a rude or angry way. Making contact with another person, including through his or her clothing, is enough. The touching does not have to cause pain or injury of any kind.]

[The touching can be done indirectly by causing an object [or someone else] to touch the other person.]

[The People are not required to prove that the defendant actually touched someone.]

The People are not required to prove that the defendant actually intended to use force against someone when (he/she) acted.

No one needs to actually have been injured by defendant's act. But if someone was injured, you may consider that fact, along with all the other evidence, in deciding whether the defendant committed an assault[, and if so, what kind of assault it was].

[Voluntary intoxication is not a defense to assault.]

[Great bodily injury means significant or substantial physical injury. It is an injury that is greater than minor or moderate harm.]

[A deadly weapon is any object, instrument, or weapon [that is inherently deadly or one] that is used in such a way that it is capable of causing and likely to cause death or great bodily injury.]

[A .50 BMG rifle is a center fire rifle that can fire a .50 BMG cartridge [and that is not an assault weapon or a machine gun]. A .50 BMG cartridge is a cartridge that is designed and intended to be fired from a center fire rifle and that has all three of the following characteristics:

1. The overall length is 5.54 inches from the base of the cartridge to the tip of the bullet;

2. The bullet diameter for the cartridge is from .510 to, and including, .511 inch;

AND

3. The case base diameter for the cartridge is from .800 inch to, and including, .804 inch.]

[The term[s] (great bodily injury[,]/ deadly weapon[,]/ firearm[,]/ machine gun[,]/assault weapon[,]/ [and] .50 BMG rifle) (is/are) defined in another instruction to which you should refer.]

[A person who is employed as a police officer by _____ <insert name of agency that employs police officer> is a peace officer.]

[A person employed by _____ <insert name of agency that employs peace officer, e.g., "the Department of Fish and Wildlife"> is a peace officer if _____ *<insert description of facts necessary to make employee a peace officer, e.g, "designated by the director of the agency as a peace officer">.]

[The duties of a _____ <insert title of officer> include _____ *<insert job duties>.]

[A firefighter includes anyone who is an officer, employee, or member of a (governmentally operated (fire department/fire protection or firefighting agency) in this state/federal fire department/federal fire protection or firefighting agency), whether or not he or she is paid for his or her services.]

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty

The court has a sua sponte duty to give an instruction defining the elements of the crime.

If there is sufficient evidence of self-defense or defense of another, the court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on the defense. Give bracketed element 7 and any appropriate defense instructions. (See CALCRIM Nos. 3470–3477.)

In addition, the court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on defendant's reliance on self-defense as it relates to the use of excessive force. (People v. White (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 161, 167–168 [161 Cal.Rptr. 541].) If excessive force is an issue, the court has a sua sponte duty to instruct the jury that the defendant is not guilty of the offense charged, or any lesser included offense in which lawful performance is an element, if the defendant used reasonable force in response to excessive force. (People v. Olguin (1981) 119 Cal.App.3d 39, 46–47 [173 Cal.Rptr. 663].) On request, the court must instruct that the prosecution has the burden of proving the lawfulness of the arrest beyond a reasonable doubt. (People v. Castain (1981) 122 Cal.App.3d 138, 145 [175 Cal.Rptr. 651].) If lawful performance is an issue, give the appropriate portions of CALCRIM No. 2670, Lawful Performance: Peace Officer. In addition, give CALCRIM No. 2672, Lawful Performance: Resisting Unlawful Arrest With Force, if requested.

Give element 1A if it is alleged the assault was committed with a deadly weapon, a firearm, a semiautomatic firearm, a machine gun, an assault weapon, or .50 BMG rifle. Give element 1B if it is alleged that the assault was committed with force likely to produce great bodily injury. (See Pen. Code, § 245(c) & (d).)

Give the bracketed definition of "application or force and apply force" on request.

Give the relevant bracketed definitions unless the court has already given the definition in other instructions. In such cases, the court may give the bracketed sentence stating that the term is defined elsewhere.

Give the bracketed phrase "that is inherently deadly or one" and give the bracketed definition of inherently deadly only if the object is a deadly weapon as a matter of law. (People v. Stutelberg (2018) 29 Cal.App.5th 314, 317-318 [240 Cal.Rptr.3d 156].)

Give the bracketed portion that begins with "In deciding whether" if the object is not a weapon as a matter of law and is capable of innocent uses. (People v. Aguilar (1997) 16 Cal.4th 1023, 1028–1029 [68 Cal.Rptr.2d 655, 945 P.2d 1204]; People v. Godwin (1996) 50 Cal.App.4th 1562, 1573–1574 [58 Cal.Rptr.2d 545].)

If determining whether the item is an inherently deadly weapon requires resolution of a factual issue, give both bracketed instructions.

The jury must determine whether the alleged victim is a peace officer. (People v. Brown (1988) 46 Cal.3d 432, 444–445 [250 Cal.Rptr. 604, 758 P.2d 1135].) The court may instruct the jury on the appropriate definition of "peace officer" from the statute (e.g., "a Garden Grove Regular Police Officer and a Garden Grove Reserve Police Officer are peace officers"). (Ibid.) However, the court may not instruct the jury that the alleged victim was a peace officer as a matter of law (e.g., "Officer Reed was a peace officer"). (Ibid.) If the alleged victim is a police officer, give the bracketed sentence that begins with "A person employed as a police officer." If the alleged victim is another type of peace officer, give the bracketed sentence that begins with "A person employed by."

The court may give the bracketed sentence that begins, "The duties of a _____ <insert title . . . .> include," on request. The court may insert a description of the officer's duties such as "the correct service of a facially valid search warrant." (People v. Gonzalez (1990) 51 Cal.3d 1179, 1222 [275 Cal.Rptr. 729, 800 P.2d 1159].)

Do not give an attempt instruction in conjunction with this instruction. There is no crime of "attempted assault" in California. (In re James M. (1973) 9 Cal.3d 517, 519, 521–522 [108 Cal.Rptr. 89, 510 P.2d 33].)

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty

The court has a sua sponte duty to give an instruction defining the elements of the crime.

If there is sufficient evidence of self-defense or defense of another, the court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on the defense. Give bracketed element 7 and any appropriate defense instructions. (See CALCRIM Nos. 3470–3477.)

Give element 1A if it is alleged the assault was committed with a deadly weapon. Give element 1B if it is alleged that the assault was committed with force likely to produce great bodily injury. (See Pen. Code, § 245.2.)

If the victim was an operator, driver, station agent, or ticket agent of an identified vehicle or transportation entity, give element 5A and the bracketed language in element 6. If the victim was a passenger, give element 5B and omit the bracketed language in element 6.

Give the bracketed definition of "application or force and apply force" on request.

Give the relevant bracketed definitions unless the court has already given the definition in other instructions. In such cases, the court may give the bracketed sentence stating that the term is defined elsewhere.

Give the bracketed phrase "that is inherently deadly or one" and give the bracketed definition of inherently deadly only if the object is a deadly weapon as a matter of law. (People v. Stutelberg (2018) 29 Cal.App.5th 314, 317-318 [240 Cal.Rptr.3d 156].)

Give the bracketed portion that begins with "In deciding whether" if the object is not a weapon as a matter of law and is capable of innocent uses. (People v. Aguilar (1997) 16 Cal.4th 1023, 1028–1029 [68 Cal.Rptr.2d 655, 945 P.2d 1204]; People v. Godwin (1996) 50 Cal.App.4th 1562, 1573–1574 [58 Cal.Rptr.2d 545].)

If determining whether the item is an inherently deadly weapon requires resolution of a factual issue, give both bracketed instructions.

Do not give an attempt instruction in conjunction with this instruction. There is no crime of "attempted assault" in California. (In re James M. (1973) 9 Cal.3d 517, 519, 521–522 [108 Cal.Rptr. 89, 510 P.2d 33].)

875. Assault With Deadly Weapon or Force Likely to Produce Great Bodily Injury (Pen. Code, §§ 240, 245(a)(1)–(4), (b))

The defendant is charged [in Count __] with assault with (force likely to produce great bodily injury/a deadly weapon other than a firearm/a firearm/a semiautomatic firearm/a machine gun/an assault weapon/a .50 BMG rifle) [in violation of Penal Code section 245].

To prove that the defendant is guilty of this crime, the People must prove that:

<Alternative 1A—force with weapon>

[1. The defendant did an act with (a deadly weapon other than a firearm/a firearm/a semiautomatic firearm/a machine gun/an assault weapon/a .50 BMG rifle) that by its nature would directly and probably result in the application of force to a person;]

<Alternative 1B—force without weapon>

[1A. The defendant did an act that by its nature would directly and probably result in the application of force to a person, and

1B. The force used was likely to produce great bodily injury;]

2. The defendant did that act willfully;

3. When the defendant acted, (he/she) was aware of facts that would lead a reasonable person to realize that (his/her) act by its nature would directly and probably result in the application of force to someone;

[AND]

4. When the defendant acted, (he/she) had the present ability to apply force (likely to produce great bodily injury/with a deadly weapon other than a firearm/with a firearm/with a semiautomatic firearm/with a machine gun/with an assault weapon/with a .50 BMG rifle) to a person(;/.)

<Give element 5 when instructing on self-defense or defense of another.>

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty

The court has a sua sponte duty to give this instruction defining the elements of the crime.

The court has a sua sponte duty to give a Mayberry consent instruction if the defense is supported by substantial evidence and is consistent with the defense raised at trial. (People v. May (1989) 213 Cal.App.3d 118, 124–125 [261 Cal.Rptr. 502]; see People v. Mayberry (1975) 15 Cal.3d 143 [125 Cal.Rptr. 745, 542 P.2d 1337]; see also CALCRIM No. 1000, Rape or Spousal Rape by Force, Fear, or Threats [alternative paragraph on reasonable and actual belief in consent].)

The court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on the sex offense or offense alleged. (People v. May (1989) 213 Cal.App.3d 118, 129 [261 Cal.Rptr. 502].) In the blanks, specify the sex offense or offenses that the defendant is charged with intending to commit. Included sex offenses are: rape (Pen. Code, § 261); oral copulation (Pen. Code, § 287~~8a~~ [including in-concert offense]); sodomy (Pen. Code, § 286 [including in-concert offense]); sexual penetration (Pen. Code, § 289); rape, spousal rape, or sexual penetration in concert (Pen. Code, § 264.1); and lewd or lascivious acts (Pen. Code, § 288). (See Pen. Code, § 220.) Give the appropriate instructions on the offense or offenses alleged.

The court should also give CALCRIM Nos. 1700 and 1701 on burglary, if defendant is charged with committing the offense during a first degree burglary, as well as the appropriate CALCRIM instruction on the target crime charged pursuant to Penal Code section 220.

If the specified crime is mayhem, give CALCRIM No. 891, Assault With Intent to Commit Mayhem.

Element 6 is in brackets because there is no guidance from courts of review regarding whether the first degree burglary requirement in Penal Code section 220(b) is an element or an enhancement.

The defendant is charged [in Count __] with shooting a (firearm/BB Device) in a grossly negligent manner [in violation of Penal Code section 246.3].

To prove that the defendant is guilty of this crime, the People must prove that:

1. The defendant intentionally shot a (firearm/BB device);

2. The defendant did the shooting with gross negligence;

[AND]

3. The shooting could have resulted in the injury or death of a person(;/.)

<Give element 4 when instructing on self-defense or defense of another.>
[AND

4. The defendant did not act (in self-defense/ [or] in defense of someone else).]

Gross negligence involves more than ordinary carelessness, inattention, or mistake in judgment. A person acts with gross negligence when:

1. He or she acts in a reckless way that creates a high risk of death or great bodily injury.

AND

2. A reasonable person would have known that acting in that way would create such a risk.

In other words, a person acts with gross negligence when the way he or she acts is so different from the way an ordinarily careful person would act in the same situation that his or her act amounts to disregard for human life or indifference to the consequences of that act.

[Great bodily injury means significant or substantial physical injury. It is an injury that is greater than minor or moderate harm.]

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty

The court has a sua sponte duty to give this instruction defining the elements of the crime.

Give the relevant bracketed definitions unless the court has already given the definition in other instructions. In such cases, the court may give the bracketed sentence stating that the term is defined elsewhere.

Give the bracketed paragraph about the lack of any requirement that the firearm be loaded on request.

Give the bracketed phrase "that is inherently deadly or one" and give the bracketed definition of inherently deadly only if the object is a deadly weapon as a matter of law. (People v. Stutelberg (2018) 29 Cal.App.5th 314, 317-318 [240 Cal.Rptr.3d 156].)

Give the bracketed portion that begins with "In deciding whether" if the object is not a weapon as a matter of law and is capable of innocent uses. (People v. Aguilar (1997) 16 Cal.4th 1023, 1028–1029 [68 Cal.Rptr.2d 655, 945 P.2d 1204]; People v. Godwin (1996) 50 Cal.App.4th 1562, 1573–1574 [58 Cal.Rptr.2d 545].)

If determining whether the item is an inherently deadly weapon requires resolution of a factual issue, give both bracketed instructions.

The jury must determine whether the alleged victim is a peace officer. (People v. Brown (1988) 46 Cal.3d 432, 444–445 [250 Cal.Rptr. 604, 758 P.2d 1135].) The court may instruct the jury on the appropriate definition of "peace officer" from the statute (e.g., "a Garden Grove Regular Police Officer and a Garden Grove Reserve Police Officer are peace officers"). (Ibid.) However, the court may not instruct the jury that the alleged victim was a peace officer as a matter of law (e.g., "Officer Reed was a peace officer"). (Ibid.) If the alleged victim is a police officer, give the bracketed sentence that begins with "A person employed as a police officer." If the alleged victim is another type of peace officer, give the bracketed sentence that begins with "A person employed by."

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty

The court has a sua sponte duty to give ~~this~~ an instruction defining the elements of the crime.

If there is sufficient evidence of self-defense or defense of another, the court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on the defense. Give bracketed element 3 and any appropriate defense instructions. (See CALCRIM Nos. 3470–3477.)

If the prosecution alleges that the defendant displayed the weapon in a rude, angry, or threatening manner, give alternative 2A. If the prosecution alleges that the defendant used the weapon in a fight, give alternative 2B.

If the defendant is charged under Penal Code section 417(a)(2)(A), the court must also give CALCRIM No. 984, Brandishing Firearm: Misdemeanor—Public Place.

Give the bracketed definition of "firearm" or "deadly weapon" unless the court has already given the definition in other instructions. In such cases, the court may give the bracketed sentence stating that the term is defined elsewhere.

Give the bracketed phrase "that is inherently deadly or one" and give the bracketed definition of inherently deadly only if the object is a deadly weapon as a matter of law. (People v. Stutelberg (2018) 29 Cal.App.5th 314, 317-318 [240 Cal.Rptr.3d 156].)

1015 Oral Copulation by Force, Fear, or Threats (Pen. Code, § 287~~8a~~(c)(2) & (3), (k))

The defendant is charged [in Count __] with oral copulation by force [in violation of Penal Code section 287~~8a~~].

To prove that the defendant is guilty of this crime, the People must prove that:

1. The defendant committed an act of oral copulation with someone else;

2. The other person did not consent to the act;

AND

3. The defendant accomplished the act by

<Alternative 3A—force or fear>
[force, violence, duress, menace, or fear of immediate and unlawful bodily injury to someone.]

<Alternative 3B—future threats of bodily harm>
[threatening to retaliate against someone when there was a reasonable possibility that the threat would be carried out. A threat to retaliate is a threat to kidnap, unlawfully restrain or confine, or inflict extreme pain, serious bodily injury, or death.]

<Alternative 3C—threat of official action>
[threatening to use the authority of a public office to incarcerate, arrest, or deport someone. A public official is a person employed by a government agency who has the authority to incarcerate, arrest, or deport. The other person must have reasonably believed that the defendant was a public official even if (he/she) was not.]

Oral copulation* is any contact, no matter how slight, between the mouth of one person and the sexual organ or anus of another person. Penetration is not required.

[In order to consent, a person must act freely and voluntarily and know the nature of the act.]

[Evidence that the defendant and the person (dated/were married/had been married) is not enough by itself to constitute consent.]

[Evidence that the person (requested/suggested/communicated) that the defendant use a condom or other birth control device is not enough by itself to constitute consent.]

[An act is accomplished by force if a person uses enough physical force to overcome the other person's will.]

[Duress means a direct or implied threat of force, violence, danger, hardship, or retribution that causes a reasonable person to do [or submit to] something that he or she would not otherwise do [or submit to]. When deciding whether the act was accomplished by duress, consider all the circumstances, including the age of the other person and (his/her) relationship to the defendant.]

[Retribution is a form of payback or revenge.]

[Menace means a threat, statement, or act showing an intent to injure someone.]

[An act is accomplished by fear if the other person is actually and reasonably afraid [or (he/she) is actually but unreasonably afraid and the defendant knows of (his/her) fear and takes advantage of it].]

[The defendant is not guilty of forcible oral copulation if he or she actually and reasonably believed that the other person consented to the act. The People have the burden of proving beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant did not actually and reasonably believe that the person consented. If the People have not met this burden, you must find the defendant not guilty.]

COMMENTARY

Penal Code section 287~~8a~~ requires that the oral copulation be "against the will" of the other person. (Pen. Code, § 287~~8a~~(c)(2) & (3), (k).) "Against the will" has been defined as "without consent." (People v. Key (1984) 153 Cal.App.3d 888, 895 [203 Cal.Rptr. 144]; see also People v. Young (1987) 190 Cal.App.3d 248, 257 [235 Cal.Rptr. 361].)

The instruction includes a definition of the sufficiency of "fear" because that term has meaning in the context of forcible oral copulation that is technical and may not be readily apparent to jurors. (See People v. Iniguez (1994) 7 Cal.4th 847, 856–857 [30 Cal.Rptr.2d 258, 872 P.2d 1183] [fear in context of rape].)

The court is not required to instruct sua sponte on the definition of "duress" or "menace" and Penal Code section 288a does not define either term. (People v.

Pitmon (1985) 170 Cal.App.3d 38, 52 [216 Cal.Rptr. 221] [duress]). Optional definitions are provided for the court to use at its discretion. The definition of "duress" is based on People v. Leal (2004) 33 Cal.4th 999, 1004–1010 [16 Cal.Rptr.3d 869, 94 P.3d 1071], and People v. Pitmon (1985) 170 Cal.App.3d 38, 50 [216 Cal.Rptr. 221]. The definition of "menace" is based on the statutory definitions contained in Penal Code sections 261 and 262 [rape]. (See People v. Cochran (2002) 103 Cal.App.4th 8, 13–14 [126 Cal.Rptr.2d 416] [using rape definition in case involving forcible lewd acts].) In People v. Leal, supra, 33 Cal.4th at pp. 1004–1010, the court held that the statutory definition of "duress" contained in Penal Code sections 261 and 262 does not apply to the use of that term in any other statute. The court did not discuss the statutory definition of "menace." The court should consider the Leal opinion before giving the definition of "menace."

The term "force" as used in the forcible sex offense statutes does not have a specialized meaning and court is not required to define the term sua sponte. (People v. Griffin (2004) 33 Cal.4th 1015, 1023–1024; People v. Guido (2005) 125 Cal.App.4th 566, 574–576 [22 Cal.Rptr.3d 826]). In People v. Griffin, supra, the Supreme Court further stated,

> Nor is there anything in the common usage definitions of the term "force," or in the express statutory language of section 261 itself, that suggests force in a forcible rape prosecution actually means force "substantially different from or substantially greater than" the physical force normally inherent in an act of consensual sexual intercourse. [People v. Cicero (1984) 157 Cal.App.3d 465, 474 [204 Cal.Rptr. 582].] To the contrary, it has long been recognized that "in order to establish force within the meaning of section 261, subdivision (2), the prosecution need only show the defendant used physical force of a degree sufficient to support a finding that the act of sexual intercourse was against the will of the [victim]." (People v. Young (1987) 190 Cal.App.3d 248, 257–258 [235 Cal.Rptr. 361].)

(People v. Griffin, supra, 33 Cal.4th at pp. 1023–1024 [emphasis in original]; see also People v. Guido (2005) 125 Cal.App.4th 566, 574–576 [22 Cal.Rptr.3d 826] [Griffin reasoning applies to violation of Pen. Code, § 287~~8a~~(c)(2)].)

The committee has provided a bracketed definition of "force," consistent with People v. Griffin, supra, that the court may give on request.

RELATED ISSUES

Consent Obtained by Fraudulent Representation

A person may also induce someone else to consent to engage in oral copulation by a false or fraudulent representation made with an intent to create fear, and which does induce fear and would cause a reasonable person to act contrary to his or her free will. (Pen. Code, § 266c.) While section 266c requires coercion and fear to obtain consent, it does not involve physical force or violence. (See People v. Cardenas (1994) 21 Cal.App.4th 927, 937–938 [26 Cal.Rptr.2d 567] [rejecting defendant's argument that certain acts were consensual and without physical force, and were only violations of section 266c].)

Consent Withdrawn

A forcible rape occurs when, during apparently consensual intercourse, the victim expresses an objection and attempts to stop the act and the defendant forcibly continues despite the objection. (In re John Z. (2003) 29 Cal.4th 756, 760 [128 Cal.Rptr.2d 783, 60 P.3d 183].) If there is an issue whether consent to oral copulation was withdrawn, see CALCRIM No. 1000, Rape or Spousal Rape by Force, Fear, or Threats, for language that may be adapted for use in this instruction.

Multiple Acts of Oral Copulation

An accused may be convicted for multiple, nonconsensual sex acts of an identical nature that follow one another in quick, uninterrupted succession. (People v. Catelli (1991) 227 Cal.App.3d 1434, 1446–1447 [278 Cal.Rptr. 452] [defendant properly convicted of multiple violations of former Pen. Code, § 288a where he interrupted the acts of copulation and forced victims to change positions].)

Sexual Organ

A man's "sexual organ" for purposes of Penal Code section 287~~8a~~ includes the penis and the scrotum. (Pen. Code, § 287~~8a~~; People v. Catelli (1991) 227 Cal.App.3d 1434, 1448–1449 [278 Cal.Rptr. 452].)

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty

The court has a sua sponte duty to give an instruction defining the elements of the crime. (See Pen. Code, § 287~~a~~(d).) The court also has a sua sponte duty to instruct on oral copulation. Give one or more of the following instructions defining oral copulation: CALCRIM No. 1015 or CALCRIM Nos. 1017–1022.

Select alternative A or B, or both, depending on whether the defendant personally committed the crime or aided and abetted someone else.

Depending on the evidence, give the final bracketed paragraph on request regarding the lack of a prearranged plan. (See People v. Calimee (1975) 49 Cal.App.3d 337, 341–342 [122 Cal.Rptr. 658].)

1017 Oral Copulation of an Intoxicated Person (Pen. Code, § 287~~8a~~(a), (i))

The defendant is charged [in Count __] with oral copulation of a person while that person was intoxicated [in violation of Penal Code section 287~~8a~~(i)].

To prove that the defendant is guilty of this crime, the People must prove that:

1. The defendant committed an act of oral copulation with another person;

2. An (intoxicating/anesthetic/controlled) substance prevented the other person from resisting;

AND

3. The defendant knew or reasonably should have known that the effect of an (intoxicating/anesthetic/controlled) substance prevented the other person from resisting.

Oral copulation is any contact, no matter how slight, between the mouth of one person and the sexual organ or anus of another person. Penetration is not required.

A person is prevented from resisting if he or she is so intoxicated that he or she cannot give legal consent. In order to give legal consent, a person must be able to exercise reasonable judgment. In other words, the person must be able to understand and weigh the physical nature of the act, its moral character, and probable consequences. Legal consent is consent given freely and voluntarily by someone who knows the nature of the act involved.

[_____ <If appropriate, insert controlled substance> (is/are) [a] controlled substance[s].]

<Defense: Reasonable Belief Capable of Consent>
[The defendant is not guilty of this crime if (he/she) actually and reasonably believed that the person was capable of consenting to oral copulation, even if the defendant's belief was wrong. The People have the burden of proving beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant did not actually and reasonably believe that the woman was capable of consenting. If the People have not met this burden, you must find the defendant not guilty.]

The defendant is charged [in Count __] with oral copulation of a person who was unconscious of the nature of the act [in violation of Penal Code section 287~~8a~~(f)].

To prove that the defendant is guilty of this crime, the People must prove that:

1. The defendant committed an act of oral copulation with another person;

2. The other person was unable to resist because (he/she) was unconscious of the nature of the act;

AND

3. The defendant knew that the other person was unable to resist because (he/she) was unconscious of the nature of the act.

Oral copulation is any contact, no matter how slight, between the mouth of one person and the sexual organ or anus of another person. Penetration is not required.

A person is unconscious of the nature of the act if he or she is (unconscious or asleep/ [or] not aware that the act is occurring/ [or] not aware of the essential characteristics of the act because the perpetrator tricked, lied to, or concealed information from the person/ [or] not aware of the essential characteristics of the act because the perpetrator fraudulently represented that the oral copulation served a professional purpose when it served no professional purpose).

COMMENTARY

The statutory language describing unconsciousness includes "was not aware, knowing, perceiving, or cognizant that the act occurred." (See Pen. Code, § 287~~8a~~(f)(2)–(4).) The committee did not discern any difference among the statutory terms and therefore used "aware" in the instruction. 1070 Unlawful Sexual Intercourse: Defendant 21 or Older (Pen. Code, § 261.5(a) & (d))

The defendant is charged [in Count __] with having unlawful sexual intercourse with a person who was under the age of 16 years at a time after the defendant had reached (his/her) 21st birthday [in violation of Penal Code section 261.5(d)].

To prove that the defendant is guilty of this crime, the People must prove that:

1. The defendant had sexual intercourse with another person;

2. The defendant and the other person were not married to each other at the time of the intercourse;

3. The defendant was at least 21 years old at the time of the intercourse;

AND

4. The other person was under the age of 16 years at the time of the intercourse.

Instructional Duty
The court has a sua sponte duty to give an instruction defining the elements of the crime.

For a discussion of the sua sponte duty to instruct on the defense of mistake of fact, see CALCRIM No. 3406.

Give the bracketed paragraph that begins with "It is not a defense that" on request, if there is evidence that the minor consented to the act. (See People v. Kemp (1934) 139 Cal.App. 48, 51 [34 P.2d 502].)

Give the bracketed paragraph about calculating age if requested. (Fam. Code, § 6500; In re Harris (1993) 5 Cal.4th 813, 849–850 [21 Cal.Rptr.2d 373, 855 P.2d 391].)

Defenses—Instructional Duty
If there is sufficient evidence that the defendant reasonably and actually believed that the minor was age 18 or older, the court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on the defense. (See People v. Hernandez (1964) 61 Cal.2d 529, 535–536 [39 Cal.Rptr. 361, 393 P.2d 673]; People v. Winters (1966) 242 Cal.App.2d 711, 716 [51 Cal.Rptr. 735].)

Contributing to the delinquency of a minor (Pen. Code, § 272) is not a lesser included offense of unlawful sexual intercourse. (People v. Bobb (1989) 207 Cal.App.3d 88, 93–96 [254 Cal.Rptr. 707], disapproved on another ground in People v. Barton (1995) 12 Cal.4th 186, 198, fn. 7 [47 Cal.Rptr.2d 569, 906 P.2d 531].)

RELATED ISSUES

Calculating Age

The "birthday rule" of former Civil Code section 26 (now see Fam. Code, § 6500) applies. A person attains a given age as soon as the first minute of his or her birthday has begun, not on the day before the birthday. (In re Harris (1993) 5 Cal.4th 813, 844–845, 849 [21 Cal.Rptr.2d 373, 855 P.2d 391].)

Participant Must be Over 21

One of the two participants in the act of unlawful sexual intercourse must be over 21 and the other person must be under 16. Proof that an aider and abettor was over 21 is insufficient to sustain the aider and abettor's conviction if neither of the actual participants was over 21 years old. (See People v. Culbertson (1985) 171 Cal.App.3d 508, 513, 515 [217 Cal.Rptr. 347] [applying same argument to section 287~~8a~~(c), where perpetrator must be 10 years older than victim under 14].)

Mistaken Belief About Victim's Age

A defendant is not entitled to a mistake of fact instruction if he claims that he believed that the complaining witness was over 16. His belief would still constitute the mens rea of intending to have sex with a minor. (People v. Scott (2000) 83 Cal.App.4th 784, 800–801 [100 Cal.Rptr.2d 70].) However, if he claims that he believed that the complaining witness was over 18 years old, he is entitled to the mistake of fact instruction. (See People v. Hernandez (1964) 61 Cal.2d 529, 535–536 [39 Cal.Rptr. 361, 393 P.2d 673].)

Married Minor Victim

A defendant may be convicted of unlawful sexual intercourse even if the minor victim is married or was previously married to another person. (People v. Courtney (1960) 180 Cal.App.2d 61, 62 [4 Cal.Rptr. 274] [construing former statute]; People v. Caldwell (1967) 255 Cal.App.2d 229, 230–231 [63 Cal.Rptr. 63].)

Sterility
Sterility is not a defense to unlawful sexual intercourse. (People v. Langdon (1987) 192 Cal.App.3d 1419, 1421 [238 Cal.Rptr. 158].)

1080 Oral Copulation With Person Under 14 (Pen. Code, § 287~~8a~~(c)(1))

The defendant is charged [in Count __] with oral copulation of a person who was under the age of 14 and at least 10 years younger than the defendant [in violation of Penal Code section 287~~8a~~(c)(1)].

To prove that the defendant is guilty of this crime, the People must prove that:

1. The defendant participated in an act of oral copulation with another person;

AND

2. At the time of the act, the other person was under the age of 14 and was at least 10 years younger than the defendant.

Oral copulation is any contact, no matter how slight, between the mouth of one person and the sexual organ or anus of another person. Penetration is not required.

[It is not a defense that the other person may have consented to the act.]

[Under the law, a person becomes one year older as soon as the first minute of his or her birthday has begun.]

1128 Engaging in Oral Copulation or Sexual Penetration With Child 10 Years of Age or Younger (Pen. Code, § 288.7(b))

The defendant is charged [in Count __] with engaging in (oral copulation/ [or] sexual penetration) with a child 10 years of age or younger [in violation of Penal Code section 288.7(b)].

To prove that the defendant is guilty of this crime, the People must prove that:

1. The defendant engaged in an act of (oral copulation/ [or] sexual penetration) with _____ *<insert name of complaining witness>;

2. When the defendant did so, _____ <insert name of complaining witness> was 10 years of age or younger;

3. At the time of the act, the defendant was at least 18 years old.

[Under the law, a person becomes one year older as soon as the first minute of his or her birthday has begun.]

[Oral copulation is any contact, no matter how slight, between the mouth of one person and the sexual organ or anus of another person. Penetration is not required.]

[Sexual penetration means (penetration, however slight, of the genital or anal opening of the other person/ [or] causing the other person to penetrate, however slightly, the defendant's or someone else's genital or anal opening/ [or] causing the other person to penetrate, however slightly, his or her own genital or anal opening) by any foreign object, substance, instrument, device, or any unknown object for the purpose of sexual abuse, arousal, or gratification.]

[Penetration for sexual abuse means penetration for the purpose of causing pain, injury, or discomfort.]

[An unknown object includes any foreign object, substance, instrument, or device, or any part of the body, including a penis, if it is not known what object penetrated the opening.]

[A foreign object, substance, instrument, or device includes any part of the body except a sexual organ.]

1191A Evidence of Uncharged Sex Offense

The People presented evidence that the defendant committed the crime[s] of _____ <insert description of offense[s]> that (was/were) not charged in this case. (This/These) crime[s] (is/are) defined for you in these instructions.

You may consider this evidence only if the People have proved by a preponderance of the evidence that the defendant in fact committed the uncharged offense[s]. Proof by a preponderance of the evidence is a different burden of proof from proof beyond a reasonable doubt. A fact is proved by a preponderance of the evidence if you conclude that it is more likely than not that the fact is true.

If the People have not met this burden of proof, you must disregard this evidence entirely.

If you decide that the defendant committed the uncharged offense[s], you may, but are not required to, conclude from that evidence that the defendant was disposed or inclined to commit sexual offenses, and based on that decision, also conclude that the defendant was likely to commit [and did commit] _____ <insert charged sex offense[s]>, as charged here. If you conclude that the defendant committed the uncharged offense[s], that conclusion is only one factor to consider along with all the other evidence. It is not sufficient by itself to prove that the defendant is guilty of _____ <insert charged sex offense[s]>. The People must still prove (the/each) _____ (charge/ [and] allegation) beyond a reasonable doubt.

[Do not consider this evidence for any other purpose [except for the limited purpose of _____ <insert other permitted purpose, e.g., determining the defendant's credibility>].]

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty

Although there is ordinarily no sua sponte duty (People v. Cottone (2013) 57 Cal.4th 269, 293, fn. 15 [159 Cal.Rptr.3d 385, 303 P.3d 1163]), the court must give this instruction on request when evidence of other sexual offenses has been introduced. (See People v. Falsetta (1999) 21 Cal.4th 903, 924 [89 Cal.Rptr.2d 847, 986 P.2d 182] [error to refuse limiting instruction on request]; People v. Jennings (2000) 81 Cal.App.4th 1301, 1317–1318 [97 Cal.Rptr.2d 727] [in context of prior acts of domestic violence].)

Evidence Code section 1108(a) provides that "evidence of the defendant's commission of another sexual offense or offenses is not made inadmissible by Section 1101." Subdivision (d)(1) defines "sexual offense" as "a crime under the law of a state or of the United States that involved any of the following[,]" listing specific sections of the Penal Code as well as specified sexual conduct. In the first sentence, the court must insert the name of the offense or offenses allegedly shown by the evidence. The court must also instruct the jury on elements of the offense or offenses.

In the fourth paragraph, the committee has placed the phrase "and did commit" in brackets. One appellate court has criticized instructing the jury that it may draw an inference about disposition. (People v. James (2000) 81 Cal.App.4th 1343, 1357, fn. 8 [96 Cal.Rptr.2d 823].) The court should review the Commentary section below and give the bracketed phrase at its discretion.

Give the bracketed sentence that begins with "Do not consider" on request.

COMMENTARY

The fourth paragraph of this instruction tells the jury that they may draw an inference of disposition. (See People v. Hill (2001) 86 Cal.App.4th 273, 275–279 [103 Cal.Rptr.2d 127]; People v. Brown (2000) 77 Cal.App.4th 1324, 1334–1335 [92 Cal.Rptr.2d 433] [in context of prior acts of domestic violence].) One appellate court, however, suggests using more general terms to instruct the jury how they may use evidence of other sexual offenses, "leaving particular inferences for the argument of counsel and the jury's common sense." (People v. James, supra, 81 Cal.App.4th at p. 1357, fn. 8 [includes suggested instruction].) If the trial court adopts this approach, the fourth paragraph may be replaced with the following:

> If you decide that the defendant committed the other sexual offense[s], you may consider that evidence and weigh it together with all the other evidence received during the trial to help you determine whether the defendant committed _____ <insert charged sex offense>. Remember, however, that evidence of another sexual offense is not sufficient alone to find the defendant guilty of _____ <insert charged sex offense>. The People must still prove (the/each) _____(charge/[and] allegation) of _____ <insert charged sex offense> beyond a reasonable doubt.

RELATED ISSUES

Constitutional Challenges
Evidence Code section 1108 does not violate a defendant's rights to due process (People v. Falsetta (1999) 21 Cal.4th 903, 915–922 [89 Cal.Rptr.2d 847, 986 P.2d 182]; People v. Jennings (2000) 81 Cal.App.4th 1301, 1310–1313 [97 Cal.Rptr.2d 727]; People v. Fitch, supra, 55 Cal.App.4th at pp. 184–185).

Expert Testimony
Evidence Code section 1108 does not authorize expert opinion evidence of sexual propensity during the prosecution's case-in-chief. (People v. McFarland (2000) 78 Cal.App.4th 489, 495–496 [92 Cal.Rptr.2d 884] [expert testified on ultimate issue of abnormal sexual interest in child].)

Rebuttal Evidence
When the prosecution has introduced evidence of other sexual offenses under Evidence Code section 1108(a), the defendant may introduce rebuttal character evidence in the form of opinion evidence, reputation evidence, and evidence of specific incidents of conduct under similar circumstances. (People v. Callahan (1999) 74 Cal.App.4th 356, 378–379 [87 Cal.Rptr.2d 838].)

Subsequent Offenses Admissible
"[E]vidence of subsequently committed sexual offenses may be admitted pursuant to Evidence Code section 1108." (People v. Medina (2003) 114 Cal.App.4th 897, 903 [8 Cal.Rptr.3d 158].)

Evidence of Acquittal
If the court admits evidence that the defendant committed a sexual offense that the defendant was previously acquitted of, the court must also admit evidence of the acquittal. (People v. Mullens (2004) 119 Cal.App.4th 648, 663 [14 Cal.Rptr.3d 534].)

1203 Kidnapping: For Robbery, Rape, or Other Sex Offenses (Pen. Code, § 209(b))

The defendant is charged [in Count __] with kidnapping for the purpose of (robbery/rape/spousal rape/oral copulation/sodomy/sexual penetration) [in violation of Penal Code section 209(b)].

To prove that the defendant is guilty of this crime, the People must prove that:

1. The defendant intended to commit (robbery/ [or] rape/ [or] spousal rape/ [or] oral copulation/ [or] sodomy/ [or] sexual penetration/ [or]_____<insert other offense specified in statute>;

2. Acting with that intent, the defendant took, held, or detained another person by using force or by instilling a reasonable fear;

3. Using that force or fear, the defendant moved the other person [or made the other person move] a substantial distance;

4. The other person was moved or made to move a distance beyond that merely incidental to the commission of a (robbery/ [or] rape/ [or] spousal rape/ [or] oral copulation/ [or] sodomy/ [or] sexual penetration/ [or]_____<insert other offense specified in statute>;

5. When that movement began, the defendant already intended to commit (robbery/ [or] rape/ [or] spousal rape/ [or] oral copulation/ [or] sodomy/ [or] sexual penetration/ [or] _____<insert other offense specified in statute>;

[AND]

6. The other person did not consent to the movement(;/.)

<Give element 7 if instructing on reasonable belief in consent.>
[AND

7. The defendant did not actually and reasonably believe that the other person consented to the movement.]

As used here, substantial distance means more than a slight or trivial distance. The movement must have increased the risk of [physical or psychological] harm to the person beyond that necessarily present in the (robbery/ [or] rape/ [or] spousal rape/ [or] oral copulation/ [or] sodomy/ [or] sexual penetration/ [or]_____<insert other offense specified in statute>. In deciding whether the movement was sufficient, consider all the circumstances relating to the movement.

[In order to consent, a person must act freely and voluntarily and know the nature of the act.]

[To be guilty of kidnapping for the purpose of (robbery/ [or] rape/ [or] spousal rape/ [or] oral copulation/ [or] sodomy/ [or] sexual penetration), the defendant does not actually have to commit the (robbery/ [or] rape/ [or] spousal rape/ [or] oral copulation/ [or] sodomy/ [or] sexual penetration/ [or]_____<insert other offense specified in statute>.]

To decide whether the defendant intended to commit (robbery/ [or] rape/ [or] spousal rape/ [or] oral copulation/ [or] sodomy/ [or] sexual penetration/ [or]_____<insert other offense specified in statute>), please refer to the separate instructions that I (will give/have given) you on that crime.

<Defense: Good Faith Belief in Consent>
[The defendant is not guilty of kidnapping if (he/she) reasonably and actually believed that the other person consented to the movement. The People have the burden of proving beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant did not reasonably and actually believe that the other person consented to the movement. If the People have not met this burden, you must find the defendant not guilty of this crime.]

<Defense: Consent Given>
[The defendant is not guilty of kidnapping if the other person consented to go with the defendant. The other person consented if (he/she) (1) freely and voluntarily agreed to go with or be moved by the defendant, (2) was aware of the movement, and (3) had sufficient mental capacity to choose to go with the defendant. The People have the burden of proving beyond a reasonable doubt that the other person did not consent to go with the defendant. If the People have not met this burden, you must find the defendant not guilty of this crime.]

[Consent may be withdrawn. If, at first, a person agreed to go with the defendant, that consent ended if the person changed his or her mind and no longer freely and voluntarily agreed to go with or be moved by the defendant. The defendant is guilty of kidnapping if after the other person withdrew consent, the defendant committed the crime as I have defined it.]

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty

The court has a sua sponte duty to give this instruction defining the elements of the crime.

In addition, the court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on the elements of the alleged underlying crime.

Give the bracketed definition of "consent" on request.

Defenses—Instructional Duty

The court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on the defense of consent if there is sufficient evidence to support the defense. (See People v. Davis (1995) 10 Cal.4th 463, 516–518 [41 Cal.Rptr.2d 826, 896 P.2d 119] [approving consent instruction as given]; see also People v. Sedeno (1974) 10 Cal.3d 703, 717, fn. 7 [112 Cal.Rptr. 1, 518 P.2d 913], overruled on other grounds in People v. Breverman (1998) 19 Cal.4th 142, 165 [77 Cal.Rptr.2d 870, 960 P.2d 1094] [when court must instruct on defenses].) Give the bracketed paragraph on the defense of consent. On request, if supported by the evidence, also give the bracketed paragraph that begins with "Consent may be withdrawn." (See People v. Camden (1976) 16 Cal.3d 808, 814 [129 Cal.Rptr. 438, 548 P.2d 1110].)

The defendant's reasonable and actual belief in the victim's consent to go with the defendant may be a defense. (See People v. Greenberger (1997) 58 Cal.App.4th 298, 375 [68 Cal.Rptr.2d 61]; People v. Isitt (1976) 55 Cal.App.3d 23, 28 [127 Cal.Rptr. 279] [reasonable, good faith belief that victim consented to movement is a defense to kidnapping].)

Timing of Necessary Intent

No court has specifically stated whether the necessary intent must precede all movement of the victim, or only one phase of it involving an independently adequate asportation.

1502. Arson: Inhabited Structure or Property (Pen. Code, § 451(b))

The defendant is charged [in Count __] with arson that burned an (inhabited structure /[or] inhabited property) [in violation of Penal Code section 451(b)].

To prove that the defendant is guilty of this crime, the People must prove that:

1. The defendant set fire to or burned [or (counseled[,]/ [or] helped[,]/ [or] caused) the burning of] (a structure/[or] property);

2. (He/She) acted willfully and maliciously;

AND

3. The fire burned an (inhabited structure /[or] inhabited property).

To set fire to or burn means to damage or destroy with fire either all or part of something, no matter how small the part.

Someone commits an act willfully when he or she does it willingly or on purpose.

Someone acts maliciously when he or she intentionally does a wrongful act or when he or she acts with the unlawful intent to defraud, annoy, or injure someone else.

A structure is any (building/bridge/tunnel/power plant/commercial or public tent.)

A (structure /[or] property) is inhabited if someone ~~lives there and either is present or has left but intends to return~~uses it as a dwelling, whether or not someone is inside at the time of the fire. An (inhabited structure /[or] inhabited property) does not include the land on which it is located.

[Property means personal property or land other than forest land.]

RELATED ISSUES

Inhabited Apartment
Defendant's conviction for arson of an inhabited structure was proper where he set fire to his estranged wife's apartment several days after she had vacated it. Although his wife's apartment was not occupied, it was in a large apartment building where many people lived; it was, therefore, occupied for purposes of the arson statute. (People v. Green (1983) 146 Cal.App.3d 369, 378–379 [194 Cal.Rptr. 128].)

1503–1514. Reserved for Future Use

2100 Driving a Vehicle or Operating a Vessel Under the Influence Causing Injury (Veh. Code, § 23153(a), (f), (g))

The defendant is charged [in Count __] with causing injury to another person while (driving a vehicle/operating a vessel) under the [combined] influence of (an alcoholic beverage/ [or] a drug/ [or] an alcoholic beverage and a drug) [in violation of Vehicle Code section 23153(a)/(f)/(g)].

To prove that the defendant is guilty of this crime, the People must prove that:

1. The defendant (drove a vehicle/operated a vessel);

2. When (he/she) (drove a vehicle/operated a vessel), the defendant was under the [combined] influence of (an alcoholic beverage/ [or] a drug/ [or] an alcoholic beverage and a drug);

3. While (driving a vehicle/operating a vessel) under the influence, the defendant also (committed an illegal act/ [or] neglected to perform a legal duty);

AND

4. The defendant's (illegal act/ [or] failure to perform a legal duty) caused bodily injury to another person.

A person is under the influence if, as a result of (drinking [or consuming] an alcoholic beverage/ [and/or] taking a drug), his or her mental or physical abilities are so impaired that he or she is no longer able to (drive a vehicle/operate a vessel) with the caution of a sober person, using ordinary care, under similar circumstances.

[An alcoholic beverage is a liquid or solid material intended to be consumed that contains ethanol. Ethanol is also known as ethyl alcohol, drinking alcohol, or alcohol. [An alcoholic beverage includes _____ <insert type[s] of beverage[s] from Veh. Code, § 109 or Bus. & Prof. Code, § 23004, e.g., wine, beer>.]]

[A drug is a substance or combination of substances, other than alcohol, that could so affect the nervous system, brain, or muscles of a person that it would appreciably impair his or her ability to (drive a vehicle/operate a vessel) as an ordinarily cautious person, in full possession of his or her faculties and using reasonable care, would (drive a vehicle/operate a vessel) under similar circumstances.]

[If the People have proved beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant's blood alcohol level was 0.08 percent or more at the time of the chemical analysis, you may, but are not required to, conclude that the defendant was under the influence of an alcoholic beverage at the time of the alleged offense.]

[In evaluating any test results in this case, you may consider whether or not the person administering the test or the agency maintaining the testing device followed the regulations of the California Department of Public Health.

[The People allege that the defendant committed the following illegal act[s]: _____ *<list name[s] of offense[s]>.

To decide whether the defendant committed _____*<list name[s] of offense[s]>, please refer to the separate instructions that I (will give/have given) you on (that/those) crime[s].]

[The People [also] allege that the defendant failed to perform the following legal (duty/duties) while (driving the vehicle/operating the vessel): (the duty to exercise ordinary care at all times and to maintain proper control of the (vehicle/vessel)/_____ *<insert other duty or duties alleged>).]

[You may not find the defendant guilty unless all of you agree that the People have proved that the defendant (committed [at least] one illegal act/[or] failed to perform [at least] one duty).

<Alternative A—unanimity required; see Bench Notes>
[You must all agree on which (act the defendant committed/ [or] duty the defendant failed to perform).]

<Alternative B—unanimity not required; see Bench Notes>
[But you do not have to all agree on which (act the defendant committed/ [or] duty the defendant failed to perform).]]

[Using ordinary care means using reasonable care to prevent reasonably foreseeable harm to someone else. A person fails to exercise ordinary care if he or she (does something that a reasonably careful person would not do in the same situation/ [or] fails to do something that a reasonably careful person would do in the same situation).]

[An act causes bodily injury to another person if the injury is the direct, natural, and probable consequence of the act and the injury would not have happened without the act. A natural and probable consequence is one that a reasonable person would know is likely to happen if nothing unusual intervenes. In deciding whether a consequence is natural and probable, consider all the circumstances established by the evidence.]

[There may be more than one cause of injury. An act causes bodily injury to another person only if it is a substantial factor in causing the injury. A substantial factor is more than a trivial or remote factor. However, it need not be the only factor that causes the injury.]

[It is not a defense that the defendant was legally entitled to use the drug.]

[If the defendant was under the influence of (an alcoholic beverage/ [and/or] a drug), then it is not a defense that something else also impaired (his/her) ability to (drive a vehicle/operate a vessel).]

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty

The court has a sua sponte duty to give this instruction defining the elements of the crime.

If the prosecution alleges under element 3 that the defendant committed an act forbidden by law, the court has a sua sponte duty to specify the predicate offense alleged and to instruct on the elements of that offense. (People v. Minor (1994) 28 Cal.App.4th 431, 438–439 [33 Cal.Rptr.2d 641]; People v. Ellis (1999) 69 Cal.App.4th 1334, 1339 [82 Cal.Rptr.2d 409].)

If the prosecution alleges under element 3 that the defendant neglected to perform a duty imposed by law, the court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on the duty allegedly neglected. (See People v. Minor, supra, 28 Cal.App.4th at pp. 438–439.) If the prosecution alleges that the defendant neglected the general duty of every driver to exercise ordinary care (see People v. Oyaas (1985) 173 Cal.App.3d 663, 669 [219 Cal.Rptr. 243]), the court should give the bracketed definition of "ordinary care."

If causation is at issue, the court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on proximate cause. (People v. Bernhardt (1963) 222 Cal.App.2d 567, 590–591 [35 Cal.Rptr. 401].) If the evidence indicates that there was only one cause of injury, the court should give the first bracketed paragraph on causation, which includes the "direct, natural, and probable" language. If there is evidence of multiple causes of injury, the court should also give the second bracketed paragraph on causation, which includes the "substantial factor" definition. (See People v. Autry (1995) 37

Cal.App.4th 351, 363 [43 Cal.Rptr.2d 135]; People v. Pike (1988) 197 Cal.App.3d 732, 746–747 [243 Cal.Rptr. 54].)

There is a split in authority over whether there is a sua sponte duty to give a unanimity instruction when multiple predicate offenses are alleged. (People v. Gary (1987) 189 Cal.App.3d 1212, 1218 [235 Cal.Rptr. 30] [unanimity instruction required], overruled on other grounds in People v. Flood (1998) 18 Cal.4th 470, 481 [76 Cal.Rptr.2d 180, 957 P.2d 869]; People v. Durkin (1988) 205 Cal.App.3d Supp. 9, 13 [252 Cal.Rptr. 735] [unanimity instruction not required but preferable]; People v. Mitchell (1986) 188 Cal.App.3d 216, 222 [232 Cal.Rptr. 438] [unanimity instruction not required]; People v. Leffel (1988) 203 Cal.App.3d 575, 586–587 [249 Cal.Rptr. 906] [unanimity instruction not required, failure to give harmless error if was required].) If the court concludes that a unanimity instruction is appropriate, give the unanimity alternative A. If the court concludes that unanimity is not required, give the unanimity alternative B.

The bracketed paragraph that begins with "If the People have proved beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant's blood alcohol level was 0.08 percent" explains a rebuttable presumption created by statute. (See Veh. Code, § 23610; Evid. Code, §§ 600–607.) The California Supreme Court has held that a jury instruction phrased as a rebuttable presumption in a criminal case creates an unconstitutional mandatory presumption. (People v. Roder (1983) 33 Cal.3d 491, 497–505 [189 Cal.Rptr. 501, 658 P.2d 1302].) In accordance with Roder, the instructions have been written as permissive inferences.

The court must not give the bracketed paragraph that begins with "If the People have proved beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant's blood alcohol level was 0.08 percent" if there is no substantial evidence that the defendant's blood alcohol level was at or above 0.08 percent at the time of the test. In addition, if the test falls within the range in which no presumption applies, 0.05 percent to just below 0.08 percent, do not give this bracketed sentence. (People v. Wood (1989) 207 Cal.App.3d Supp. 11, 15 [255 Cal.Rptr. 537].) The court should also consider whether there is sufficient evidence to establish that the test result exceeds the margin of error before giving this instruction for test results of 0.08 percent. (Compare People v. Campos (1982) 138 Cal.App.3d Supp. 1, 4–5 [188 Cal.Rptr. 366], with People v. Randolph (1989) 213 Cal.App.3d Supp. 1, 11 [262 Cal.Rptr. 378].)

The statute also creates a rebuttable presumption that the defendant was not under the influence if his or her blood alcohol level was less than 0.05 percent. (People v. Gallardo (1994) 22 Cal.App.4th 489, 496 [27 Cal.Rptr.2d 502].) Depending on the facts of the case, the defendant may be entitled to a pinpoint instruction on this presumption. It is not error to refuse an instruction on this presumption if the prosecution's theory is that the defendant was under the combined influence of drugs and alcohol. (People v. Andersen (1994) 26 Cal.App.4th 1241, 1250 [32 Cal.Rptr.2d 442].)

If the evidence demonstrates that the person administering the test or agency maintaining the testing device failed to follow the title 17 regulations, give the bracketed sentence that begins with "In evaluating any test results in this case." (People v. Adams (1976) 59 Cal.App.3d 559, 567 [131 Cal.Rptr. 190] [failure to follow regulations in administering breath test goes to weight, not admissibility, of the evidence]; People v. Williams (2002) 28 Cal.4th 408, 417 [121 Cal.Rptr.2d 854, 49 P.3d 203] [same]; People v. Esayian (2003) 112 Cal.App.4th 1031, 1039 [5 Cal.Rptr.3d 542] [results of blood test admissible even though phlebotomist who drew blood not authorized under title 17].)

Give the bracketed sentence stating that "it is not a defense that something else also impaired (his/her) ability to drive" if there is evidence of an additional source of impairment such as an epileptic seizure, inattention, or falling asleep.

If the defendant is charged with one or more prior convictions for driving under the influence, the defendant may stipulate to the convictions. (People v. Weathington (1991) 231 Cal.App.3d 69, 90 [282 Cal.Rptr. 170].) In addition, either the defendant or the prosecution may move for a bifurcated trial. (People v. Calderon (1994) 9 Cal.4th 69, 77–78 [36 Cal.Rptr.2d 333, 885 P.2d 83]; People v. Cline (1998) 60 Cal.App.4th 1327, 1334–1336 [71 Cal.Rptr.2d 41]; People v. Weathington, supra, 231 Cal.App.3d at p. 90.) If the defendant does not stipulate and the court does not grant a bifurcated trial, give CALCRIM No. 2125*, Driving Under the Influence or With 0.08 or 0.04 Percent Blood Alcohol: Prior Convictions*. If the court grants a bifurcated trial, give CALCRIM No. 2126, Driving Under the Influence or With 0.08 or 0.04 Percent Blood Alcohol: Prior Convictions—Bifurcated Trial. If the defendant stipulates to the truth of the convictions, the prior convictions should not be disclosed to the jury unless the court admits them as otherwise relevant. (See People v. Hall (1998) 67 Cal.App.4th 128, 135 [79 Cal.Rptr.2d 690].)

On request, give CALCRIM No. 2241, Driver and Driving Defined.

Defenses—Instructional Duty

On request, if supported by the evidence, the court must instruct on the "imminent peril/sudden emergency" doctrine. (People v. Boulware (1940) 41 Cal.App.2d 268, 269–270 [106 P.2d 436].) Act Forbidden by Law

The term " 'any act forbidden by law' . . . refers to acts forbidden by the Vehicle Code . . . ." (People v. Clenney (1958) 165 Cal.App.2d 241, 253 [331 P.2d 696].) The defendant must commit the act when driving the vehicle. (People v. Capetillo (1990) 220 Cal.App.3d 211, 217 [269 Cal.Rptr. 250] [violation of Veh. Neglect of Duty Imposed by Law

"In proving the person neglected any duty imposed by law in driving the vehicle, it is not necessary to prove that any specific section of [the Vehicle Code] was violated." (Veh. Code, § 23153(c); People v. Oyaas (1985) 173 Cal.App.3d 663, 669 [219 Cal.Rptr. 243].) "[The] neglect of duty element . . . is satisfied by evidence which establishes that the defendant's conduct amounts to no more than ordinary negligence." (*People v. Multiple Victims to One Drunk Driving Accident

"In Wilkoff v. Superior Court [(1985) 38 Cal.3d 345, 352 [211 Cal.Rptr. 742, 696 P.2d 134]] we held that a defendant cannot be charged with multiple counts of felony drunk driving under Vehicle Code section 23153, subdivision (a), where injuries to several people result from one act of drunk driving." (People v. McFarland (1989) 47 Cal.3d 798, 802 [254 Cal.Rptr. 331, 765 P.2d 493].) However, when "a defendant commits vehicular manslaughter with gross negligence[,] . . . he may properly be punished for [both the vehicular manslaughter and] injury to a separate individual that results from the same incident." (Id. at p. 804.) The prosecution may also charge an enhancement for multiple victims under Vehicle Code section 23558.

2101 Driving With 0.08 Percent Blood Alcohol Causing Injury (Veh. Code, § 23153(b))

The defendant is charged [in Count __] with causing injury to another person while driving with a blood alcohol level of 0.08 percent or more [in violation of Vehicle Code section 23153(b)].

To prove that the defendant is guilty of this crime, the People must prove that:

1. The defendant drove a vehicle;

2. When (he/she) drove, the defendant's blood alcohol level was 0.08 percent or more by weight;

3. When the defendant was driving with that blood alcohol level, (he/she) also (committed an illegal act/ [or] neglected to perform a legal duty);

AND

4. The defendant's (illegal act/ [or] failure to perform a legal duty) caused bodily injury to another person.

[If the People have proved beyond a reasonable doubt that a sample of the defendant's (blood/breath) was taken within three hours of the defendant's [alleged] driving and that a chemical analysis of the sample showed a blood alcohol level of 0.08 percent or more, you may, but are not required to, conclude that the defendant's blood alcohol level was 0.08 percent or more at the time of the alleged offense.]

[In evaluating any test results in this case, you may consider whether or not the person administering the test or the agency maintaining the testing device followed the regulations of the California Department of Public Health.]

[The People [also] allege that the defendant failed to perform the following legal (duty/duties) while driving the vehicle: (the duty to exercise ordinary care at all times and to maintain proper control of the vehicle/_____ *<insert other duty or duties alleged>).]

[You may not find the defendant guilty unless all of you agree that the People have proved that the defendant (committed [at least] one illegal act/[or] failed to perform [at least] one duty).

<Alternative A—unanimity required; see Bench Notes>
[You must all agree on which (act the defendant committed/ [or] duty the defendant failed to perform).]

<Alternative B—unanimity not required; see Bench Notes>
[But you do not have to all agree on which (act the defendant committed/ [or] duty the defendant failed to perform).]]

[Using ordinary care means using reasonable care to prevent reasonably foreseeable harm to someone else. A person fails to exercise ordinary care if he or she (does something that a reasonably careful person would not do in the same situation/ [or] fails to do something that a reasonably careful person would do in the same situation).]

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty

The court has a sua sponte duty to give this instruction defining the elements of the crime.

If the prosecution alleges under element 3 that the defendant committed an act forbidden by law, the court has a sua sponte duty to specify the predicate offense alleged and to instruct on the elements of that offense. (People v. Minor (1994) 28 Cal.App.4th 431, 438–439 [33 Cal.Rptr.2d 641]; People v. Ellis (1999) 69 Cal.App.4th 1334, 1339 [82 Cal.Rptr.2d 409].)

If the prosecution alleges under element 3 that the defendant neglected to perform a duty imposed by law, the court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on the duty allegedly neglected. (See People v. Minor, supra, 28 Cal.App.4th at pp. 438–439.) If the prosecution alleges that the defendant neglected the general duty of every driver to exercise ordinary care (see People v. Oyass (1985) 173 Cal.App.3d 663, 669 [219 Cal.Rptr. 243]), the court should give the bracketed definition of "ordinary care."

If causation is at issue, the court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on proximate cause. (People v. Bernhardt (1963) 222 Cal.App.2d 567, 590–591 [35 Cal.Rptr. 401].) If the evidence indicates that there was only one cause of injury, the court should give the first bracketed paragraph on causation, which includes the "direct, natural, and probable" language. If there is evidence of multiple causes of injury, the court should also give the second bracketed paragraph on causation, which includes the "substantial factor" definition. (See People v. Autry (1995) 37 Cal.App.4th 351, 363 [43 Cal.Rptr.2d 135]; People v. Pike (1988) 197 Cal.App.3d 732, 746–747 [243 Cal.Rptr. 54].)

There is a split in authority over whether there is a sua sponte duty to give a unanimity instruction when multiple predicate offenses are alleged. (People v. Gary (1987) 189 Cal.App.3d 1212, 1218 [235 Cal.Rptr. 30] [unanimity instruction required], overruled on other grounds in People v. Flood (1998) 18 Cal.4th 470, 481 [76 Cal.Rptr.2d 180, 957 P.2d 869]; People v. Durkin (1988) 205 Cal.App.3d Supp. 9, 13 [252 Cal.Rptr. 735] [unanimity instruction not required but preferable]; People v. Mitchell (1986) 188 Cal.App.3d 216, 222 [232 Cal.Rptr. 438] [unanimity instruction not required]; People v. Leffel (1988) 203 Cal.App.3d 575, 586–587 [249 Cal.Rptr. 906] [unanimity instruction not required, failure to give harmless error if was required].) If the court concludes that a unanimity instruction is appropriate, give the unanimity alternative A. If the court concludes that unanimity is not required, give the unanimity alternative B.

The bracketed paragraph that begins with "If the People have proved beyond a reasonable doubt that a sample of" explains a rebuttable presumption created by statute. (See Veh. Code, § 23152(b); Evid. Code, §§ 600–607.) The California Supreme Court has held that a jury instruction phrased as a rebuttable presumption in a criminal case creates an unconstitutional mandatory presumption. (People v. Roder (1983) 33 Cal.3d 491, 497–505 [189 Cal.Rptr. 501, 658 P.2d 1302].) In accordance with Roder, the instructions have been written as permissive inferences.

The court must not give the bracketed paragraph that begins with "If the People have proved beyond a reasonable doubt that a sample of" if there is no substantial evidence that the defendant's blood alcohol level was ~~below~~ at or above 0.08 percent at the time of the test.

If the evidence demonstrates that the person administering the test or agency maintaining the testing device failed to follow the title 17 regulations, give the bracketed sentence that begins with "In evaluating any test results in this case." (People v. Adams (1976) 59 Cal.App.3d 559, 567 [131 Cal.Rptr. 190] [failure to follow regulations in administering breath test goes to weight, not admissibility, of the evidence]; People v. Williams (2002) 28 Cal.4th 408, 417 [121 Cal.Rptr.2d 854, 49 P.3d 203] [same]; People v. Esayian (2003) 112 Cal.App.4th 1031, 1039 [5 Cal.Rptr.3d 542] [results of blood test admissible even though phlebotomist who drew blood not authorized under title 17].)

If the defendant is charged with one or more prior convictions for driving under the influence, the defendant may stipulate to the convictions. (People v. Weathington (1991) 231 Cal.App.3d 69, 90 [282 Cal.Rptr. 170].) In addition, either the defendant or the prosecution may move for a bifurcated trial. (People v. Calderon (1994) 9 Cal.4th 69, 77–78 [36 Cal.Rptr.2d 333, 885 P.2d 83]; People v. Cline (1998) 60 Cal.App.4th 1327, 1334–1336 [71 Cal.Rptr.2d 41]; People v. Weathington, supra, 231 Cal.App.3d at p. 90.) If the defendant does not stipulate and the court does not grant a bifurcated trial, give CALCRIM No. 2125, Driving Under the Influence or With 0.08 or 0.04 Percent Blood Alcohol: Prior Convictions. If the court grants a bifurcated trial, give CALCRIM No. 2126, Driving Under the Influence or With 0.08 or 0.04 Percent Blood Alcohol: Prior Convictions—Bifurcated Trial. If the defendant stipulates to the truth of the convictions, the prior convictions should not be disclosed to the jury unless the court admits them as otherwise relevant. (See People v. Hall (1998) 67 Cal.App.4th 128, 135 [79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 690].)

On request, give CALCRIM No. 2241, Driver and Driving Defined.

Defenses—Instructional Duty

On request, if supported by the evidence, the court must instruct on the "imminent peril/sudden emergency" doctrine. (People v. Boulware (1940) 41 Cal.App.2d 268, 269–270 [106 P.2d 436].) The court may use the bracketed instruction on sudden emergency in CALCRIM No. 590, Gross Vehicular Manslaughter While Intoxicated.

2102 Driving With 0.04 Percent Blood Alcohol Causing Injury With a Passenger for Hire (Veh. Code, § 23153(e))

The defendant is charged [in Count __] with causing injury to another person while driving with a blood-alcohol level of 0.04 percent or more [in violation of Vehicle Code section 23153(e)].

To prove that the defendant is guilty of this crime, the People must prove that:

1. The defendant drove a vehicle;

2. When (he/she) drove, the defendant's blood-alcohol level was 0.04 percent or more by weight;

3. When (he/she) drove with that blood-alcohol level, (he/she) also (committed an illegal act/ [or] neglected to perform a legal duty);

4. When (he/she) drove, there was a passenger for hire in the vehicle;

AND

5. The defendant's (illegal act/ [or] failure to perform a legal duty) caused bodily injury to another person.

A person is a passenger for hire when the person or someone else pays, or is expected to pay, for the ride, the payment is or will be with money or something else of value, and the payment is made to, or expected to be made to, the owner, operator, agent or any other person with an interest in the vehicle.

[If the People have proved beyond a reasonable doubt that a sample of the defendant's (blood/breath) was taken within three hours of the defendant's [alleged] driving and that a chemical analysis of the sample showed a blood-alcohol level of 0.04 percent or more, you may, but are not required to, conclude that the defendant's blood-alcohol level was 0.04 percent or more at the time of the alleged offense.]

[In evaluating any test results in this case, you may consider whether or not the person administering the test or the agency maintaining the testing device followed the regulations of the California Department of Public Health.]

[The People allege that the defendant committed the following illegal act[s]: _____ *<list name[s] of offense[s]>.

To decide whether the defendant committed _____*<list name[s] of offense[s]>, please refer to the separate instructions that I (will give/have given) you on (that/those) crime[s].]

[The People [also] allege that the defendant failed to perform the following legal (duty/duties) while driving the vehicle: (the duty to exercise ordinary care at all times and to maintain proper control of the vehicle/_____ *<insert other duty or duties alleged>).]

[You may not find the defendant guilty unless all of you agree that the People have proved that the defendant (committed [at least] one illegal act/[or] failed to perform [at least] one duty).

<Alternative A—unanimity required; see Bench Notes>
[You must all agree on which (act the defendant committed/ [or] duty the defendant failed to perform).]

<Alternative B—unanimity not required; see Bench Notes>
[But you do not have to all agree on which (act the defendant committed/ [or] duty the defendant failed to perform).]

[Using ordinary care means using reasonable care to prevent reasonably foreseeable harm to someone else. A person fails to exercise ordinary care if he or she (does something that a reasonably careful person would not do in the same situation/ [or] fails to do something that a reasonably careful person would do in the same situation).]

[An act causes bodily injury to another person if the injury is the direct, natural, and probable consequence of the act and the injury would not have happened without the act. A natural and probable consequence is one that a reasonable person would know is likely to happen if nothing unusual intervenes. In deciding whether a consequence is natural and probable, consider all of the circumstances established by the evidence.]

[There may be more than one cause of injury. An act causes bodily injury to another person only if it is a substantial factor in causing the injury. A substantial factor is more than a trivial or remote factor. However, it need not be the only factor that causes the injury.]

The defendant is charged [in Count __] with possessing a deadly weapon with intent to assault [in violation of Penal Code section 17500].

To prove that the defendant is guilty of this crime, the People must prove that:

1. The defendant possessed a deadly weapon on (his/her) person;

2. The defendant knew that (he/she) possessed the weapon;

AND

3. At the time the defendant possessed the weapon, (he/she) intended to assault someone.

A person intends to assault someone else if he or she intends to do an act that by its nature would directly and probably result in the application of force to a person.

[A deadly weapon is any object, instrument, or weapon [that is inherently deadly or one] that is used in such a way that it is capable of causing and likely to cause death or great bodily injury.]

[An object is inherently deadly if it is deadly or dangerous in the ordinary use for which it was designed.]

[Great bodily injury means significant or substantial physical injury. It is an injury that is greater than minor or moderate harm.]

[The term deadly weapon is defined in another instruction to which you should refer.]

[In deciding whether an object is a deadly weapon, consider all the surrounding circumstances, including when and where the object was possessed[,] [and] [where the person who possessed the object was going][,] [and] [whether the object was changed from its standard form] and any other evidence that indicates that the object would be used for a dangerous, rather than a harmless, purpose.]

The term application of force means to touch in a harmful or offensive manner. The slightest touching can be enough if it is done in a rude or angry way. Making contact with another person, including through his or her clothing, is enough. The touching does not have to cause pain or injury of any kind.

[The touching can be done indirectly by causing an object [or someone else] to touch the other person.]

[The People are not required to prove that the defendant actually touched someone.]

[The People allege that the defendant possessed the following weapons: _____ <insert description of each weapon when multiple items alleged>. You may not find the defendant guilty unless you all agree that the People have proved that the defendant possessed at least one of these weapons and you all agree on which weapon (he/she) possessed.]

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty

The court has a sua sponte duty to give this instruction defining the elements of the crime.

If the prosecution alleges under a single count that the defendant possessed multiple weapons and the possession was "fragmented as to time [or] space," the court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on unanimity. (See People v. Wolfe (2003) 114 Cal.App.4th 177, 184–185 [7 Cal.Rptr.3d 483].) Give the bracketed paragraph that begins with "The People allege that the defendant possessed the following weapons," inserting the items alleged.

Give the definition of deadly weapon unless the court has already given the definition in other instructions. In such cases, the court may give the bracketed sentence stating that the term is defined elsewhere.

Give the bracketed phrase "that is inherently deadly or one" and give the bracketed definition of inherently deadly only if the object is a deadly weapon as a matter of law. (People v. Stutelberg (2018) 29 Cal.App.5th 314, 317-318 [240 Cal.Rptr.3d 156].)

Give the bracketed paragraph that begins with "In deciding whether" if the object is not a weapon as a matter of law ~~but~~ and is capable of innocent uses. (People v. Aguilar (1997) 16 Cal.4th 1023, 1028–1029 [68 Cal.Rptr.2d 655, 945 P.2d 1204]; People v. Godwin (1996) 50 Cal.App.4th 1562, 1573–1574 [58 Cal.Rptr.2d 545].)

If determining whether the item is an inherently deadly weapon requires resolution of a factual issue, give both bracketed instructions.

Defenses—Instructional Duty

Evidence of voluntary intoxication or mental impairment may be admitted to show that the defendant did not form the required mental state. (See People v. Ricardi (1992) 9 Cal.App.4th 1427, 1432 [12 Cal.Rptr.2d 364].) The court has no sua sponte duty to instruct on these defenses; however, the trial court must give these instructions on request if supported by the evidence. (People v. Saille (1991) 54 Cal.3d 1103, 1119 [2 Cal.Rptr.2d 364, 820 P.2d 588] [on duty to instruct generally]; People v. Stevenson (1978) 79 Cal.App.3d 976, 988 [145 Cal.Rptr. 301] [instructions applicable to possession of weapon with intent to assault].) See Defenses and Insanity, CALCRIM No. 3400 et seq.

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty

The court has a sua sponte duty to give this instruction defining the elements of the crime.

If the prosecution alleges under a single count that the defendant possessed multiple items, the court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on unanimity. (People v. Heideman (1976) 58 Cal.App.3d 321, 333 [130 Cal.Rptr. 349].) Give the bracketed paragraph that begins, "The People allege that the defendant possessed the following," inserting the items alleged. The jury does not have to be unanimous about whether the defendant acted recklessly or maliciously. (Ibid.) The jury also does not have to agree on whether the item was an explosive or a destructive device. (People v. Westoby (1976) 63 Cal.App.3d 790, 797 [134 Cal.Rptr. 97]; see also People v. Quinn, (1976) 57 Cal.App.3d 251, 257 [129 Cal.Rptr. 139] [a bomb may be an explosive and may be a destructive device].)

Depending on the device or substance used, give the bracketed definitions of "explosive" or "destructive device," inserting the appropriate definition from Penal Code section 16460, unless the court has already given the definition in other instructions. In such cases, the court may give the bracketed sentence stating that the term is defined elsewhere. If the case involves a specific device listed in Health and Safety Code section 12000 or Penal Code section 16460, the court may instead give the bracketed sentence stating that the listed item "is an explosive" or "is a destructive device." For example, "A grenade is a destructive device." However, the court may not instruct the jury that the defendant used a destructive device. For example, the court may not state that "the defendant used a destructive device, a grenade," or "the device used by the defendant, a grenade, was a destructive device." (People v. Dimitrov (1995) 33 Cal.App.4th 18, 25–26 [39 Cal.Rptr.2d 257].)

If the device used is a bomb, the court may insert the word "bomb" in the bracketed definition of destructive device without further definition. (People v. Dimitrov, supra, 33 Cal.App.4th at p. 25.) Appellate courts have held that the term "bomb" is not vague and is understood in its "common, accepted, and popular sense." (People v. Quinn, supra, 57 Cal.App.3d at p. 258; People v. Dimitrov, supra, 33 Cal.App.4th at p. 25.) If the court wishes to define the term "bomb," the court may use the following definition: "A bomb is a device carrying an explosive charge fused to blow up or detonate under certain conditions." (See People v. Morse (1992) 2 Cal.App.4th 620, 647, fn. 8 [3 Cal.Rptr.2d 343].)

RELATED ISSUES

Need Not Be Set to Explode

"One need not possess a destructive device already set to explode in order to violate [now-repealed] Penal Code section 12303.2." (People v. Westoby (1976) 63 Cal.App.3d 790, 795 [134 Cal.Rptr. 97].) Thus, the defendant in Westoby was guilty of possessing a destructive device even though the battery wires were not connected on the pipe bomb. (Ibid.) Similarly, in People v. Heideman (1976) 58 Cal.App.3d 321, 335–336 [130 Cal.Rptr. 349], the defendant was guilty of illegally possessing dynamite even though he did not have the blasting caps necessary to ignite the dynamite. (See also People v. Morse (1992) 2 Cal.App.4th 620, 646–647 [3 Cal.Rptr.2d 343] [instruction on this point proper].)

~~Felony Murder~~

~~Penal Code section 18715 is an inherently dangerous felony supporting a conviction for second degree felony murder. (People v. Morse (1992) 2~~

~~Cal.App.4th 620, 646 [3 Cal.Rptr.2d 343].) However, in People v. Morse, the trial court erred in instructing that if the jury convicted the defendant of second degree murder on the basis of felony murder, the murder was then elevated to first degree murder based on the use of a destructive device. (Id. at pp. 654-655.)~~

Multiple Charges Based on Multiple Explosives or Destructive Devices
The defendant may be charged with multiple counts of violating Penal Code section 18715 based on possession of multiple explosives or destructive devices. (People v. DeGuzman (2003) 113 Cal.App.4th 538, 548 [6 Cal.Rptr.3d 739].)

Maliciously—People v. Heideman
In People v. Heideman (1976) 58 Cal.App.3d 321 [130 Cal.Rptr. 349], the defendant offered to commit murder for hire using explosives and possessed the explosives. (Id. at pp. 327–329.) The defendant asserted that he did not actually intend to physically injure anyone but simply to defraud the individuals offering to pay for the murders. (Id. at pp. 330–331.) On appeal, the defendant contended that the court had improperly instructed on the meaning of "recklessness," which the prosecution conceded. (Id. at p. 334.) Noting that the "[d]efendant admitted that his purpose in storing the dynamite in his room was to carry out a nefarious scheme to defraud his victims," the court found sufficient evidence to establish malice. (Id. at p. 335.) The court stated that under the facts of the case before it, the term "maliciously" did not "require an actual intent to physically injure, intimidate or terrify others." (Ibid.) Accordingly, the court found that the error in the instruction on "recklessness" was harmless given that there was sufficient evidence to support the higher culpability standard of malice. (Ibid.) The committee did not incorporated the language from Heideman in the definition of "maliciously" in this instruction because the committee concluded that this case reflects unique facts and that the language quoted is dicta, not essential to the ruling of the case.

2651. Trying to Prevent an Executive Officer From Performing Duty (Pen. Code, § 69)

The defendant is charged [in Count __] with trying to (prevent/ [or] deter) an executive officer from performing that officer's duty [in violation of Penal Code section 69].

To prove that the defendant is guilty of this crime, the People must prove that:

1. The defendant willfully and unlawfully used (violence/ [or] a threat of violence) to try to (prevent/ [or] deter) an executive officer from performing the officer's lawful duty;

~~AND~~

2. When the defendant acted, (he/she) intended to (prevent/ [or] deter) the executive officer from performing the officer's lawful duty;

AND

3. When the defendant acted, (he/she) knew that the person was an executive officer.

Someone commits an act willfully when he or she does it willingly or on purpose.

An executive officer is a government official who may use his or her own discretion in performing his or her job duties. [(A/An) _____ <insert title, e.g., peace officer, commissioner, etc.> is an executive officer.]

The executive officer does not need to be performing his or her job duties at the time the threat is communicated.

A threat may be oral or written and may be implied by a pattern of conduct or a combination of statements and conduct.

[Photographing or recording an executive officer while the officer is in a public place or while the person photographing or recording is in a place where he or she has the right to be is not, by itself, a crime.]

[The defendant does not have to communicate the threat directly to the intended victim, but may do so through someone else. The defendant must, however, intend that (his/her) statement be taken as a threat by the intended victim.]

[Someone who intends that a statement be understood as a threat does not have to actually intend to carry out the threatened act [or intend to have someone else do so].]

[A sworn member of _____ *<insert name of agency that employs peace officer>, authorized by _____ <insert appropriate section from Pen. Code, § 830 et seq.> to _____ *<describe statutory authority>, is a peace officer.]

[The duties of (a/an) _____ <insert title of officer specified in Pen. Code, § 830 et seq.> include _____ *<insert job duties>.]

<When lawful performance is an issue, give the following paragraph and Instruction 2670, Lawful Performance: Peace Officer.>
[A peace officer is not lawfully performing his or her duties if he or she is (unlawfully arresting or detaining someone/ [or] using unreasonable or excessive force in his or her duties). Instruction 2670 explains (when an arrest or detention is unlawful/ [and] when force is unreasonable or excessive).]

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty
The court has a sua sponte duty to give this instruction defining the elements of the crime.

In order to be "performing a lawful duty," an executive officer, including a peace officer, must be acting lawfully. (In re Manuel G. (1997) 16 Cal.4th 805, 816–817 [66 Cal.Rptr.2d 701, 941 P.2d 880]; People v. Gonzalez (1990) 51 Cal.3d 1179, 1217 [275 Cal.Rptr. 729, 800 P.2d 1159].) The court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on lawful performance and the defendant's reliance on self-defense as it relates to the use of excessive force when this is an issue in the case. (People v. Castain (1981) 122 Cal.App.3d 138, 145 [175 Cal.Rptr. 651]; People v. Olguin (1981) 119 Cal.App.3d 39, 46–47 [173 Cal.Rptr. 663]; People v. White (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 161, 167–168 [161 Cal.Rptr. 541].)

For this offense, "the relevant factor is simply the lawfulness of the official conduct that the defendant (through threat or violence) has attempted to deter, and not the lawfulness (or official nature) of the conduct in which the officer is engaged at the time the threat is made." (In re Manuel G., supra, 16 Cal.4th at p. 817.) Thus, if the evidence supports the conclusion that the defendant attempted to deter the officer's current performance of a duty, the court should instruct on the lawfulness of that duty. (Ibid.) Where the evidences supports the conclusion that the defendant attempted to deter the officer from performing a duty in the future, the court should only instruct on the lawfulness of that future duty. (Ibid.)

If there is an issue in the case as to the lawful performance of a duty by a peace officer, give the last bracketed paragraph and CALCRIM No. 2670, Lawful Performance: Peace Officer.

If a different executive officer was the alleged victim, the court will need to draft an appropriate definition of lawful duty if this is an issue in the case.

RELATED ISSUES

Resisting an Officer Not Lesser Included Offense
Resisting an officer, Penal Code section 148(a), is not a lesser included offense of attempting by force or violence to deter an officer. (People v. Smith (2013) 57 Cal.4th 232, 240-245 [159 Cal.Rptr.3d 57, 303 P.3d 368].)

Statute as Written Is Overbroad

The statute as written would prohibit lawful threatening conduct. To avoid overbreadth, this instruction requires that the defendant act both "willfully" and "unlawfully." (People v. Superior Court (Anderson) (1984) 151 Cal.App.3d 893, 895–896 [199 Cal.Rptr. 150].)

State of Mind of Victim Irrelevant

Unlike other threat crimes, the state of mind of the intended victim is irrelevant. (People v. Gutierrez (2002) 28 Cal.4th 1083, 1153 [124 Cal.Rptr.2d 373, 52 P.3d 572]; People v. Hines (1997) 15 Cal.4th 997, 1061, fn. 15 [64 Cal.Rptr.2d 594, 938 P.2d 388].)

Immediate Ability to Carry Out Threat Not Required

"As long as the threat reasonably appears to be a serious expression of intention to inflict bodily harm and its circumstances are such that there is a reasonable tendency to produce in the victim a fear that the threat will be carried out, a statute proscribing such threats is not unconstitutional for lacking a requirement of immediacy or imminence. Thus, threats may be constitutionally prohibited even when there is no immediate danger that they will be carried out." (*People v. BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty

The court has a sua sponte duty to give this instruction defining the elements of the crime.

In order to be "performing a lawful duty," an executive officer, including a peace officer, must be acting lawfully. (In re Manuel G. (1997) 16 Cal.4th 805, 816 [66 Cal.Rptr.2d 701, 941 P.2d 880]; People v. Gonzalez (1990) 51 Cal.3d 1179, 1217 [275 Cal.Rptr. 729, 800 P.2d 1159].) The court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on lawful performance and the defendant's reliance on self-defense as it relates to the use of excessive force when this is an issue in the case. (People v. Castain (1981) 122 Cal.App.3d 138, 145 [175 Cal.Rptr. 651]; People v. Olguin (1981) 119 Cal.App.3d 39, 46–47 [173 Cal.Rptr. 663]; People v. White (1980) 101 Cal.App.3d 161, 167–168 [161 Cal.Rptr. 541].)

If there is an issue in the case as to the lawful performance of a duty by a peace officer, give the last bracketed paragraph and CALCRIM No. 2670, Lawful Performance: Peace Officer.

If a different executive officer was the alleged victim, the court will need to draft an appropriate definition of lawful duty if this is an issue in the case.

LESSER INCLUDED OFFENSES

Penal Code section 148(a) is not a lesser included offense of this crime under the statutory elements test, but may be one under the accusatory pleading test. (*People v. 2720. Assault by Prisoner Serving Life Sentence (Pen. Code, § 4500)

The defendant is charged [in Count __] with assault with (force likely to produce great bodily injury/a deadly weapon) with malice aforethought, while serving a life sentence [in violation of Penal Code section 4500].

To prove that the defendant is guilty of this crime, the People must prove that:

<Alternative 1A—force with weapon>

[1. The defendant did an act with a deadly weapon that by its nature would directly and probably result in the application of force to a person;]

<Alternative 1B—force without weapon>

[1. The defendant did an act that by its nature would directly and probably result in the application of force to a person, and the force used was likely to produce great bodily injury;]

2. The defendant did that act willfully;

3. When the defendant acted, (he/she) was aware of facts that would lead a reasonable person to realize that (his/her) act by its nature would directly and probably result in the application of force to someone;

4. When the defendant acted, (he/she) had the present ability to apply force (likely to produce great bodily injury/with a deadly weapon) to a person;

5. The defendant acted with malice aforethought;

[AND]

<Alternative 6A—defendant sentenced to life term>

6. When (he/she) acted, the defendant had been sentenced to a maximum term of life in state prison [in California]

<Alternative 6B—defendant sentenced to life and to determinate term>

6. When (he/she) acted, the defendant had been sentenced to both a specific term of years and a maximum term of life in state prison [in California]

<Give element 7 when self-defense or defense of another is an issue raised by the evidence.>

[AND

7. The defendant did not act (in self-defense/ [or] in defense of someone else).]

Someone commits an act willfully when he or she does it willingly or on purpose.

[The terms application of force and apply force mean to touch in a harmful or offensive manner. The slightest touching can be enough if it is done in a rude or angry way. Making contact with another person, including through his or her clothing, is enough. The touching does not have to cause pain or injury of any kind.]

[The touching can be done indirectly by causing an object [or someone else] to touch the other person.]

[The People are not required to prove that the defendant actually touched someone.]

No one needs to actually have been injured by defendant's act. But if someone was injured, you may consider that fact, along with all the other evidence, in deciding whether the defendant committed an assault[, and if so, what kind of assault it was].

[A deadly weapon is any object, instrument, or weapon [that is inherently deadly or dangerous or one] that is used in such a way that it is capable of causing and likely to cause death or great bodily injury.]

[An object is inherently deadly if it is deadly or dangerous in the ordinary use for which it was designed.]

[In deciding whether an object is a deadly weapon, consider all the surrounding circumstances.]

[Great bodily injury means significant or substantial physical injury. It is an injury that is greater than minor or moderate harm.]

[The term (great bodily injury/deadly weapon) is defined in another instruction.]

There are two kinds of malice aforethought, express malice and implied malice. Proof of either is sufficient to establish the state of mind required for this crime.

The defendant acted with express malice if (he/she) unlawfully intended to kill the person assaulted.

The defendant acted with implied malice if:

1. (He/She) intentionally committed an act.

2. The natural and probable consequences of the act were dangerous to human life.

3. At the time (he/she) acted, (he/she) knew (his/her) act was dangerous to human life.

AND

4. (He/She) deliberately acted with conscious disregard for human life.

Malice aforethought does not require hatred or ill will toward the victim. It is a mental state that must be formed before the act is committed. It does not require deliberation or the passage of any particular period of time.

[A person is sentenced to a term in a state prison if he or she is (sentenced to confinement in _____ <insert name of institution from Pen. Code, § 5003>/committed to the Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation[, Division of Juvenile Justice,]) by an order made according to law[, regardless of both the purpose of the (confinement/commitment) and the validity of the order directing the (confinement/commitment), until a judgment of a competent court setting aside the order becomes final]. [A person may be sentenced to a term in a state prison even if, at the time of the offense, he or she is confined in a local correctional institution pending trial or is temporarily outside the prison walls or boundaries for any permitted purpose, including but not limited to serving on a work detail.] [However, a prisoner who has been released on parole is not sentenced to a term in a state prison.]]

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty

The court has a sua sponte duty to give ~~this~~ an instruction defining the elements of the crime.

If there is sufficient evidence of self-defense or defense of another, the court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on the defense. Give bracketed element 7 and any appropriate defense instructions. (See CALCRIM Nos. 3470–3477.)

In element 1, give alternative 1A if it is alleged the assault was committed with a deadly weapon. Give alternative 1B if it is alleged that the assault was committed with force likely to produce great bodily injury.

In element 6, give alternative 6A if the defendant was sentenced to only a life term. Give element 6B if the defendant was sentenced to both a life term and a determinate term. (People v. Superior Court of Monterey (Bell) (2002) 99 Cal.App.4th 1334, 1341 [121 Cal.Rptr.2d 836].)

Give the bracketed definition of "application of force and apply force" on request.

Give the relevant bracketed definitions unless the court has already given the definition in other instructions. In such cases, the court may give the bracketed sentence stating that the term is defined elsewhere.

Give the bracketed phrase "that is inherently deadly or one" and give the bracketed definition of inherently deadly only if the object is a deadly weapon as a matter of law. (People v. Stutelberg (2018) 29 Cal.App.5th 314, 317-318 [240 Cal.Rptr.3d 156].)

Give the bracketed portion that begins with "In deciding whether" if the object is not a weapon as a matter of law and is capable of innocent uses. (People v. Aguilar (1997) 16 Cal.4th 1023, 1028–1029 [68 Cal.Rptr.2d 655, 945 P.2d 1204]; People v. Godwin (1996) 50 Cal.App.4th 1562, 1573–1574 [58 Cal.Rptr.2d 545].)

If determining whether the item is an inherently deadly weapon requires resolution of a factual issue, give both bracketed instructions.

On request, give the bracketed definition of "sentenced to a term in state prison." Within that definition, give the bracketed portion that begins with "regardless of the purpose," or the bracketed second or third sentence, if requested and relevant based on the evidence.

Do not give an attempt instruction in conjunction with this instruction. There is no crime of "attempted assault" in California. (In re James M. (1973) 9 Cal.3d 517, 519, 521–522 [108 Cal.Rptr. 89, 510 P.2d 33].)

Penal Code section 4500 provides that the punishment for this offense is death or life in prison without parole, unless "the person subjected to such assault does not die within a year and a day after" the assault. If this is an issue in the case, the court should consider whether the time of death should be submitted to the jury for a specific factual determination pursuant to Apprendi v. New Jersey (2000) 530 U.S. 466, 490 [120 S.Ct. 2348, 147 L.Ed.2d 435].

Defense—Instructional Duty

As with murder, the malice required for this crime may be negated by evidence of heat of passion or imperfect self-defense. (People v. St. Martin (1970) 1 Cal.3d 524, 530–531 [83 Cal.Rptr. 166, 463 P.2d 390]; People v. Chacon (1968) 69 Cal.2d 765, 780–781 [73 Cal.Rptr. 10, 447, P.2d 106].) If the evidences raises an issue about one or both of these potential defenses, the court has a sua sponte duty to give the appropriate instructions, CALCRIM No. 570, Voluntary Manslaughter: Heat of Passion–Lesser Included Offense, or CALCRIM No. 571, Voluntary Manslaughter: Imperfect Self-Defense–Lesser Included Offense. The court must modify these instructions for the charge of assault by a life prisoner.

Note: In People v. Noah (1971) 5 Cal.3d 469, 476–477 [96 Cal.Rptr. 441, 487 P.2d 1009], the court held that assault by a prisoner not serving a life sentence, Penal Code section 4501, is not a lesser included offense of assault by a prisoner serving a life sentence, Penal Code section 4500. The court based its on conclusion on the fact that Penal Code section 4501 includes as an element of the offense that the prisoner was not serving a life sentence. However, Penal Code section 4501 was amended, effective January 1, 2005, to remove this element. The trial court should, therefore, consider whether Penal Code section 4501 is now a lesser included offense to Penal Code section 4500.

RELATED ISSUES

Status as Life Prisoner Determined on Day of Alleged Assault
Whether the defendant is sentenced to a life term is determined by his or her status on the day of the assault. (People v. Superior Court of Monterey (Bell) (2002) 99 Cal.App.4th 1334, 1341 [121 Cal.Rptr.2d 836]; Graham v. Superior Court (1979) 98 Cal.App.3d 880, 890 [160 Cal.Rptr. 10].) It does not matter if the conviction is later overturned or the sentence is later reduced to something less than life. (People v. Superior Court of Monterey (Bell), supra, 99 Cal.App.4th at p. 1341; Graham v. Superior Court, supra, 98 Cal.App.3d at p. 890.)

Undergoing Sentence of Life
This statute applies to "[e]very person undergoing a life sentence . . . ." (Pen. Code, § 4500.) In People v. Superior Court of Monterey (Bell) (2002) 99 Cal.App.4th 1334, 1341 [121 Cal.Rptr.2d 836], the defendant had been sentenced both to life in prison and to a determinate term and, at the time of the assault, was still technically serving the determinate term. The court held that he was still subject to prosecution under this statute, stating "a prisoner who commits an assault is subject to prosecution under section 4500 for the crime of assault by a life prisoner if, on the day of the assault, the prisoner was serving a sentence which potentially subjected him to actual life imprisonment, and therefore the prisoner might believe he had 'nothing left to lose' by committing the assault." (Ibid.)

Error to Instruct on General Definition of Malice and General Intent
"Malice," as used in Penal Code section 4500, has the same meaning as in the context of murder. (People v. St. Martin (1970) 1 Cal.3d 524, 536–537 [83 Cal.Rptr. 166, 463 P.2d 390]; People v. Chacon (1968) 69 Cal.2d 765, 780–781 [73 Cal.Rptr. 10, 447 P.2d 106].) Thus, it is error to give the general definition of malice found in Penal Code section 7, subdivision 4. (People v. Jeter (2005) 125 Cal.App.4th 1212, 1217 [23 Cal.Rptr.3d 402].) It is also error to instruct that Penal Code section 4500 is a general intent crime. (Ibid.)

Not Serving a Life Sentence

Previously, this statute did not apply to an inmate "undergoing a life sentence." (See People v. Noah (1971) 5 Cal.3d 469, 477 [96 Cal.Rptr. 441, 487 P.2d 1009].) The statute has been amended to remove this restriction, effective January 1, 2005. If the case predates this amendment, the court must add to the end of element 5, "for a term other than life."

2900 Vandalism (Pen. Code, § 594)

The defendant is charged [in Count __] with vandalism [in violation of Penal Code section 594].

To prove that the defendant is guilty of this crime, the People must prove that:

1. The defendant maliciously (defaced with graffiti or with other inscribed material[,]/ [or] damaged[,]/ [or] destroyed) (real/ [or] personal) property;

[AND]

2. The defendant (did not own the property/owned the property with someone else)(;/.)

<See Bench Notes regarding when to give element 3.>
[AND

3. The amount of damage caused by the vandalism was $400 or more.]

Someone acts maliciously when he or she intentionally does a wrongful act or when he or she acts with the unlawful intent to annoy or injure someone else.

Graffiti or other inscribed material* includes an unauthorized inscription, word, figure, mark, or design that is written, marked, etched, scratched, drawn, or painted on real or personal property.

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty
The court has a sua sponte duty to give this instruction defining the elements of the crime.

If the defendant is charged with a felony for causing $400 or more in damage and the court is not instructing on the misdemeanor offense, give element 3. If the court is instructing on both the felony and the misdemeanor offenses, give CALCRIM No. 2901, Vandalism: Amount of Damage, with this instruction. (Pen. Code, § 594(b)(1).) The court should also give CALCRIM No. 2901 if the defendant is charged with causing more than $10,000 in damage under Penal Code section 594(b)(1).

In element 2, give the alternative language "owned the property with someone else" if there is evidence that the property was owned by the defendant jointly with someone else. (People v. Wallace (2004) 123 Cal.App.4th 144, 150–151 [19 Cal.Rptr.3d 790]; People v. Kahanic (1987) 196 Cal.App.3d 461, 466 [241 Cal.Rptr. 722] [Pen. Code, § 594 includes damage by spouse to spousal community property].)

AUTHORITY

- General Intent Crime. ▸ People v. Moore (2018) 19 Cal.App.5th 889, 895-896 [228 Cal.Rptr.3d 261].

LESSER INCLUDED OFFENSES

This offense is a misdemeanor unless the amount of damage is $400 or more. (Pen. Code, § 594(b)(1) & (2)(A).) If the defendant is charged with a felony, then the misdemeanor offense is a lesser included offense. When instructing on both the felony and misdemeanor, the court must provide the jury with a verdict form on which the jury will indicate if the amount of damage has or has not been proved to be $400 or more. If the jury finds that the damage has not been proved to be $400 or more, then the offense should be set at a misdemeanor.

RELATED ISSUES

Lack of Permission Not an Element
The property owner's lack of permission is not an element of vandalism. (In re Rudy L. (1994) 29 Cal.App.4th 1007, 1014 [34 Cal.Rptr.2d 864].)

Damage Need Not Be Permanent
To "deface" under Penal Code section 594 does not require that the defacement be permanent. (In re Nicholas Y. (2000) 85 Cal.App.4th 941, 944 [102 Cal.Rptr.2d 511] [writing on a glass window with a marker pen was defacement under the statute].)

2902 Damaging Phone or Electrical Line (Pen. Code, § 591)

The defendant is charged [in Count __] with (taking down[,]/ [or] removing [,]/ [or] damaging[,]/ [or] disconnecting/ [or] cutting/[or] obstructing/severing/making an unauthorized connection to) a (telegraph/telephone/cable television/electrical) line [in violation of Penal Code section 591].

To prove that the defendant is guilty of this crime, the People must prove that:

<Alternative 1A—removed, damaged, or obstructed>

[1. The defendant unlawfully (took down[,]/ [or] removed[,]/ [or] damaged[,]/ [or] obstructed/ [or] disconnected/ [or] cut) [part of] a (telegraph/telephone/cable television/electrical) line [or mechanical equipment connected to the line];]

<Alternative 1B—severed>

[1. The defendant unlawfully severed a wire of a (telegraph/telephone/cable television/electrical) line;]

<Alternative 1C—unauthorized connection>

[1. The defendant unlawfully made an unauthorized connection with [part of] a line used to conduct electricity [or mechanical equipment connected to the line];]

AND

2. The defendant did so maliciously.

Someone acts maliciously when he or she intentionally does a wrongful act or when he or she acts with the unlawful intent to annoy or injure someone else.

[As used here, mechanical equipment includes a telephone.]

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty
The court has a sua sponte duty to give this instruction defining the elements of the crime.

The statute uses the term "injure." (Pen. Code, § 591.) The committee has replaced the word "injure" with the word "damage" because the word "injure" generally refers to harm to a person rather than to property.

The statute uses the phrase "appurtenances or apparatus." (Pen. Code, § 591.) The committee has chosen to use the more understandable "mechanical equipment" in place of this phrase.

Give the bracketed sentence that states "mechanical equipment includes a telephone" on request. (People v. Tafoya (2001) 92 Cal.App.4th 220, 227 [111 Cal.Rptr.2d 681]; People v. Kreiling (1968) 259 Cal.App.2d 699, 704 [66 Cal.Rptr. 582].)

3130. Personally Armed With Deadly Weapon (Pen. Code, § 12022.3)

If you find the defendant guilty of the crime[s] charged in Count[s] __[,] [or of attempting to commit (that/those) crime[s]][or the lesser crime[s] of _____ <insert name[s] of alleged lesser offense[s]>], you must then decide whether[, for each crime,] the People have proved the additional allegation that the defendant was personally armed with a deadly weapon in the commission [or attempted commission] of that crime. [You must decide whether the People have proved this allegation for each crime and return a separate finding for each crime.]

A deadly weapon is any object, instrument, or weapon [that is inherently deadly or one] that is used in such a way that it is capable of causing and likely to cause death or great bodily injury.

[An object is inherently deadly if it is deadly or dangerous in the ordinary use for which it was designed.]

[In deciding whether an object is a deadly weapon, consider all the surrounding circumstances, including when and where the object was possessed[,] [and] [where the person who possessed the object was going][,] [and] [whether the object was changed from its standard form] [and any other evidence that indicates whether the object would be used for a dangerous, rather than a harmless, purpose.]]

Great bodily injury* means significant or substantial physical injury. It is an injury that is greater than minor or moderate harm.

A person is armed with a deadly weapon when that person:

1. Carries a deadly weapon [or has a deadly weapon available] for use in either offense or defense in connection with the crime[s] charged;

   AND

2. Knows that he or she is carrying the deadly weapon [or has it available].

<If there is an issue in the case over whether the defendant was armed with the weapon "in the commission of" the offense, see Bench Notes.>

The People have the burden of proving each allegation beyond a reasonable doubt. If the People have not met this burden, you must find that the allegation has not been proved.

Instructional Duty

The court has a sua sponte duty to give ~~this~~ an instruction when the enhancement is charged. (Apprendi v. New Jersey (2000) 530 U.S. 466, 490 [120 S.Ct. 2348, 147 L.Ed.2d 435].)

Give the bracketed phrase "that is inherently deadly or one" and give the bracketed definition of inherently deadly only if the object is a deadly weapon as a matter of law. (People v. Stutelberg (2018) 29 Cal.App.5th 314, 317-318 [240 Cal.Rptr.3d 156].)

Give the bracketed portion that begins with "~~When~~ In deciding whether" if the object is not a weapon as a matter of law and is capable of innocent uses. (People v. Aguilar (1997) 16 Cal.4th 1023, 1028–1029 [68 Cal.Rptr.2d 655, 945 P.2d 1204]; People v. Godwin (1996) 50 Cal.App.4th 1562, 1573–1574 [58 Cal.Rptr.2d 545].)

If determining whether the item is an inherently deadly weapon requires resolution of a factual issue, give both bracketed instructions.

In the definition of "armed," the court may give the bracketed phrase "or has a deadly weapon available" on request if the evidence shows that the weapon was at the scene of the alleged crime and "available to the defendant to use in furtherance of the underlying felony." (People v. Bland (1995) 10 Cal.4th 991, 997–998 [43 Cal.Rptr.2d 77, 898 P.2d 391]; see also People v. Wandick (1991) 227 Cal.App.3d 918, 927–928 [278 Cal.Rptr. 274] [language of instruction approved; sufficient evidence defendant had firearm available for use]; People v. Jackson (1995) 32 Cal.App.4th 411, 419–422 [38 Cal.Rptr.2d 214] [evidence that firearm was two blocks away from scene of rape insufficient to show available to defendant].)

If the case involves an issue of whether the defendant was armed "in the commission of" the offense, the court may give CALCRIM No. 3261, In Commission of Felony: Defined—Escape Rule. (See People v. Jones (2001) 25 Cal.4th 98, 109 [104 Cal.Rptr.2d 753, 18 P.3d 674]; People v. Masbruch (1996)

RELATED ISSUES

Penal Code Section 220

A defendant convicted of violating Penal Code section 220 may receive an enhancement under Penal Code section 12022.3 even though the latter statute does not specifically list section 220 as a qualifying offense. (People v. Rich (2003) 109 Cal.App.4th 255, 261 [134 Cal.Rptr.2d 553].) Section 12022.3 does apply to attempts to commit one of the enumerated offenses, and a conviction for violating section 220, assault with intent to commit a sexual offense, "translates into an attempt to commit" a sexual offense. (People v. Rich, supra, 109 Cal.App.4th at p. 261.)

Multiple Weapons

There is a split in the Court of Appeal over whether a defendant may receive multiple enhancements under Penal Code section 12022.3 if the defendant has multiple weapons in his or her possession during the offense. (People v. Maciel (1985) 169 Cal.App.3d 273, 279 [215 Cal.Rptr. 124] [defendant may only receive one enhancement for each sexual offense, either for being armed with a rifle or for using a knife, but not both]; People v. Stiltner (1982) 132 Cal.App.3d 216, 232 [182 Cal.Rptr. 790] [defendant may receive both enhancement for being armed with a knife and enhancement for using a pistol for each sexual offense].) The court should review the current state of the law before sentencing a defendant to multiple weapons enhancements under Penal Code section 12022.3.

Pepper Spray

In People v. Blake (2004) 117 Cal.App.4th 543, 559 [11 Cal.Rptr.3d 678], the court upheld the jury's determination that pepper spray was a deadly weapon.

Instructional Duty

The court has a sua sponte duty to give ~~this~~ an instruction defining the elements of the enhancement. (Apprendi v. New Jersey (2000) 530 U.S. 466, 490 [120 S.Ct. 2348, 147 L.Ed.2d 435].)

Give all of the bracketed "or dangerous" phrases if the enhancement charged uses both the words "deadly" and "dangerous" to describe the weapon. (Pen. Code, §§ 667.61, 1192.7(c)(23), 12022(b).) Do not give these bracketed phrases if the enhancement uses only the word "deadly." (Pen. Code, § 12022.3.)

Give the bracketed phrase "inherently deadly" and give the bracketed definition of inherently deadly only if the object is a deadly weapon as a matter of law. (People v. Stutelberg (2018) 29 Cal.App.5th 314, 317-318 [240 Cal.Rptr.3d 156].)

RELATED ISSUES

No Duty to Instruct on "Lesser Included Enhancements"

"[A] trial court's sua sponte obligation to instruct on lesser included offenses does not encompass an obligation to instruct on 'lesser included enhancements.' " (People v. Majors (1998) 18 Cal.4th 385, 411 [75 Cal.Rptr.2d 684, 956 P.2d 1137].) Thus, if the defendant is charged with an enhancement for use of a weapon, the court does not need to instruct on an enhancement for being armed.

Weapon Displayed Before Felony Committed
Where a weapon is displayed initially and the underlying crime is committed some time after the initial display, the jury may conclude that the defendant used the weapon in the commission of the offense if the display of the weapon was "at least … an aid in completing an essential element of the subsequent crimes. . . ." (People v. Masbruch (1996) 13 Cal.4th 1001, 1014 [55 Cal.Rptr.2d 760, 920 P.2d 705].)

Weapon Used Did Not Cause Death
In People v. Lerma (1996) 42 Cal.App.4th 1221, 1224 [50 Cal.Rptr.2d 580], the defendant stabbed the victim and then kicked him. The coroner testified that the victim died as a result of blunt trauma to the head and that the knife wounds were not life threatening. (Ibid.) The court upheld the finding that the defendant had used a knife during the murder even though the weapon was not the cause of death. (Id. at p. 1226.) The court held that in order for a weapon to be used in the commission of the crime, there must be "a nexus between the offense and the item at issue, [such] that the item was an instrumentality of the crime." (Ibid.) [ellipsis and brackets omitted] Here, the court found that "[t]he knife was instrumental to the consummation of the murder and was used to advantage." (Ibid.)

"One Strike" Law and Use Enhancement

BENCH NOTES

Instructional Duty

The court must instruct on a defense when the defendant requests it and there is substantial evidence supporting the defense. The court has a sua sponte duty to instruct on a defense if there is substantial evidence supporting it and either the defendant is relying on it or it is not inconsistent with the defendant's theory of the case.

When the court concludes that the defense is supported by substantial evidence and is inconsistent with the defendant's theory of the case, however, it should ascertain whether defendant wishes instruction on this alternate theory. (People v. Gonzales (1999) 74 Cal.App.4th 382, 389–390 [88 Cal.Rptr.2d 111]; People v. Breverman (1998) 19 Cal.4th 142, 157 [77 Cal.Rptr.2d 870, 960 P.2d 1094].)

Substantial evidence means evidence of a defense, which, if believed, would be sufficient for a reasonable jury to find a reasonable doubt as to the defendant's guilt. (People v. Salas (2006) 37 Cal.4th 967, 982–983 [38 Cal.Rptr.3d 624, 127 P.3d 40].)

If the defendant is charged with a general intent crime, the trial court must instruct with the bracketed language requiring that defendant's belief be both actual and reasonable.

If the mental state element at issue is either specific criminal intent or knowledge, do not use the bracketed language requiring the belief to be reasonable. (People v. Reyes (1997) 52 Cal.App.4th 975, 984 & fn. 6 [61 Cal.Rptr.2d 39]; People v. Russell (2006) 144 Cal.App.4th 1415, 1425–1426 [51 Cal.Rptr.3d 263].)

Mistake of fact is not a defense to the following crimes under the circumstances described below:

1. Involuntary manslaughter (People v. Velez (1983) 144 Cal.App.3d 558, 565–566 [192 Cal.Rptr. 686] [mistake of fact re whether gun could be fired]).
2. Furnishing cannabis to a minor (Health & Saf. Code, § 11352; People v. Lopez (1969) 271 Cal.App.2d 754, 760–762 [77 Cal.Rptr. 59]).
3. Selling narcotics to a minor (Health & Saf. Code, § 11353; People v. Williams (1991) 233 Cal.App.3d 407, 410–411 [284 Cal.Rptr. 454] [specific intent for the crime of selling narcotics to a minor is the intent to sell cocaine, not to sell it to a minor]).
4. Aggravated kidnapping of a child under the age of 14 (Pen. Code, § 208(b); People v. Magpuso (1994) 23 Cal.App.4th 112, 118 [28 Cal.Rptr.2d 206]).
5. Unlawful sexual intercourse or oral copulation by person 21 or older with minor under the age of 16 (Pen. Code, §§ 261.5(d), 287~~8a~~(b)(2); People v. Scott (2000) 83 Cal.App.4th 784, 800–801 [100 Cal.Rptr.2d 70]).
6. Lewd and lascivious conduct with a child under the age of 14 (Pen. Code, § 288(a); People v. Olsen (1984) 36 Cal.3d 638, 645–646 [205 Cal.Rptr. 492, 685 P.2d 52]).

RELATED ISSUES

Mistake of Fact Based on Involuntary Intoxication

A mistake of fact defense can be based on involuntary intoxication. (People v. Scott (1983) 146 Cal.App.3d 823, 829–833 [194 Cal.Rptr. 633].) In Scott, the court held that the defendant was entitled to an instruction on mistake of fact, as a matter of law, where the evidence established that he unknowingly and involuntarily ingested a hallucinogen. As a result he acted under the delusion that he was a secret agent in a situation where it was necessary to steal vehicles in order to save his own life and possibly that of the President. The court held that although defendant's mistake of fact was irrational, it was reasonable because of his delusional state and had the mistaken facts been true, his actions would have been justified under the doctrine of necessity. The court also stated that mistake of fact would not have been available if defendant's mental state had been caused by voluntary intoxication. (Id. at pp. 829–833; see also People v. Kelly (1973) 10 Cal.3d 565, 573 [111 Cal.Rptr. 171, 516 P.2d 875] [mistake of fact based on voluntary intoxication is not a defense to a general intent crime].)

Mistake of Fact Based on Mental Disease

Mistake of fact is not a defense to general criminal intent if the mistake is based on mental disease. (People v. Gutierrez (1986) 180 Cal.App.3d 1076, 1084 [225 Cal.Rptr. 885]; see People v. Castillo (1987) 193 Cal.App.3d 119, 124–125 [238 Cal.Rptr. 207].) In Gutierrez, the defendant was charged with inflicting cruel injury on a child, a general intent crime, because she beat her own children under the delusion that they were evil birds she had to kill. The defendant's abnormal mental state was caused in part by mental illness. (People v. Gutierrez, supra, 180 Cal.App.3d at pp. 1079–1080.) The court concluded that evidence of her mental illness was properly excluded at trial because mental illness could not form the basis of her mistake of fact defense. (Id. at pp. 1083–1084.)

Executive Summary

The Civil and Small Claims Advisory Committee proposes a new form for Judicial Council approval, Mediation Disclosure Notification and Acknowledgment (form ADR-200). This optional form implements Senate Bill 954 (Stats. 2018, ch. 350), which requires attorneys to provide their clients with specific written mediation confidentiality disclosures when they are representing clients in connection with mediation.

Recommendation

The Civil and Small Claims Advisory Committee recommends that the Judicial Council approve Mediation Disclosure Notification and Acknowledgment (form ADR-200), effective January 1, 2020.

The new form is attached at page 6.

Relevant Previous Council Action

This is a new legislative requirement and as such, the Judicial Council has not taken any previous action on this matter.

Analysis/Rationale

In 2017, the California Law Revision Commission made a recommendation to the Legislature that the statutes regarding mediation confidentiality be amended to permit disclosure of otherwise confidential communications in a State Bar disciplinary proceeding or a cause of action for damages based on a claim of malpractice. This recommendation was vehemently opposed by many and was not enacted. However, the Legislature decided to address some of the concerns reflected in that recommendation—concerns that consumers were often unaware that they would not be able to use the communications in a mediation in a later challenge to that attorney's actions. SB 954 was enacted to increase consumer awareness regarding the confidentiality of the mediation process.

On September 11, 2018, Governor Brown signed SB 954 into law, requiring attorneys to provide their clients with specific written mediation confidentiality disclosures when they are representing clients in mediation. The law, which went into effect January 1, 2019, amends Evidence Code section 1122 and adds section 1129 requiring printed disclosures to mediation participants concerning mediation confidentiality.

The Evidence Code reflects the strong legislative sentiment that what happens in mediation should remain confidential. The rationale is that to encourage honest communication in furtherance of settling a case, the parties should feel free to express themselves without risk that the settlement discussions will prejudice them if the negotiations fail. Because this confidentiality also means that the communications cannot be used in any civil actions against the attorney, SB 954 requires an attorney representing a client participating in mediation to provide a disclosure informing the client of those restrictions and warning that the communications cannot be used even if the client later seeks to sue the attorney in a malpractice action.

SB 954 provides the following in new Evidence Code section 1129:

- An attorney must provide the disclosures to the client before the client agrees to participate in mediation if the attorney represents the client at the time;
- An attorney must provide the disclosures after being retained if the attorney is retained after the client agrees to participate in mediation;
- The disclosure requirement does not apply in class or representative actions;
- The printed disclosure must meet specified format requirements (12-point font; be in the preferred language of the client; be on a single, discrete page; and include the names and signatures of the attorney and client); and
- A disclosure that uses the text set out in the statute and meets the specified format requirements is deemed to comply with the statute.

The bill also amended Evidence Code section 1122(a) to allow a further exception to the confidentiality provisions for evidence relating to the attorney's compliance with new section 1129.

Evidence Code section 1129 requires that an attorney representing a client who is participating in mediation must provide the client with a printed disclosure with the confidentiality provisions described in this code section and obtain a signed acknowledgment that the client has read and understands the restrictions. The proposed form contains the text that the statute provides as a safe harbor and conforms to the layout requirements of the statute. The statute also requires that the form be presented in the preferred language of the client. Attorneys may provide translated forms in the languages needed by their clients.

Form ADR-200 informs the client that anything said at a mediation not only cannot be used against the client, but also cannot be used against the client's attorney. Without this form, parties may not realize that the communications can never be used against an attorney even if the attorney commits malpractice and the party is willing to waive the confidentiality of the proceeding. The goal is to give the information to the client as early as possible, so the client can decide whether he or she wants to engage in mediation.

The proposed optional form would provide attorneys with a uniform document to provide to their clients that complies with the Evidence Code, eliminating the need to create their own disclosure statements. The committee concluded that the form would provide uniformity and consistency.

Policy implications

The policy implications of informing consumers of legal mediation services arise from the legislation and not this proposal.

Comments

This proposal was circulated for public comment from April 11 to June 10, 2019, as part of the regular spring rules cycle. The committee received comments from 10 entities including two courts, the Superior Courts of San Diego and Los Angeles Counties, four mediators/ADR administrators, a legislative director for the California Senate, the California Lawyers Association (Committee on Administration of Justice of the Litigation Section and the Executive Committee of the Family Law Section), and the Orange County Bar Association. The commenters that answered the questions posed in the proposal all indicated that the proposal appropriately addressed the stated purpose. The committee considered all comments; discussed below are the primary issues raised by the comments.

Signature blocks

Although the model disclosure language provided in Evidence code section 1129(d) provides one signature line for an attorney and one signature line for a client, nothing in the remainder of the section specifies the number of signature lines for either the attorney or the client. The committee recognized that there may be instances when there would be more than one client or more than one attorney participating in mediation, and that it could be helpful for the form to allow multiple signature lines for each. The committee circulated a draft form that had one signature line for the client, (consistent with subdivision (d)), but two signature lines for the attorneys (a departure from subdivision(d)). The proposal requested specific comments on whether there should be multiple signature lines for attorneys and clients.

Overwhelmingly, the commenters all wanted each client to receive, acknowledge, and sign their own form to create a better record that each client received a copy of the form and independently reviewed it. The proposed form therefore includes only one signature line for the client.

Although there were commenters that agreed with the proposal to include two attorney signature lines, the committee was ultimately persuaded by the two commenters that advocated for including only one attorney signature line per form because, like the reasoning above, it would create a better record if there were a separate form for each attorney that made the disclosure. The committee revised the form to provide one attorney signature line.

Other comments

The committee was of the view that it could provide additional clarification to the language of the statute. As circulated, therefore, the form included the word "Acknowledgement" in boldface in the middle of the page, to delineate one section from another. One commenter suggested that this should be deleted because it changes the meaning of the form by stressing some parts and not others. The committee agreed with this reasoning and removed "Acknowledgment" from the form.

Two commenters suggested adding language to the form to provide more specific information to the client. The first suggestion was to provide a more specific introduction to the Mediation Disclosure Notification and Acknowledgment: "Given that the preservation of confidentiality is considered essential to the proper functioning of mediation for parties to speak with candidness, California law generally makes mediation a confidential process." The committee considered this proposed language but decided it was sufficient to use the language in Evidence Code section 1129(d). This form is optional; attorneys can prepare their own forms if they want to use different language.

The second suggestion was to add language to the form to clarify that it is not intended for court use or is not to be filed with the court or similar words to that effect. The commenter suggested that neither the court, the mediator, nor its ADR program should be responsible for monitoring the compliance or failure of the attorney to meet this requirement. Itis clear from the absence of a space for a case number or a file endorsement stamp that this form is not to be filed. Also, the statute requires 12-point font and a single page document. Given these space limitations these requirements impose, the committee did not choose to adopt this suggestion.

Another commenter suggested that the committee should provide an information sheet regarding mediation confidentiality. This suggestion may be considered by the committee as a proposal in the next rule-making cycle.

Finally, one commenter suggested that the form be translated into several different languages including Spanish, Chinese, Korean, Vietnamese, and Tagalog. Requests for translation of Judicial Council forms and other documents are referred to the Court Language Access Services Program for consideration under the priorities set forth in the Judicial Council's Translation Protocol[1] and Translation Action Plan[2].

Alternatives considered

The committee noted that the statute does not require the Judicial Council to adopt a form, but the committee ultimately decided that, for the sake of convenience to attorneys and to promote disclosure requirements, an optional form would be useful.

The committee also considered whether any changes to rules were needed—considering the new mediation disclosure requirements—but concluded that none were necessary.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

The committee does not foresee any fiscal impacts to the courts because the form is optional and not for court use. For that same reason, no training needs are anticipated.

DRAFT

MEDIATION DISCLOSURE NOTIFICATION AND ACKNOWLEDGMENT

To promote communication in mediation, California law generally makes mediation a confidential process. California's mediation confidentiality laws are laid out in sections 703.5 and 1115 to 1129, inclusive, of the Evidence Code. Those laws establish the confidentiality of mediation and limit the disclosure, admissibility, and a court's consideration of communications, writings, and conduct in connection with a mediation. In general, those laws mean the following:

- All communications, negotiations, or settlement offers in the course of a mediation must remain confidential.
- Statements made and writings prepared in connection with a mediation are not admissible or subject to discovery or compelled disclosure in noncriminal proceedings.
- A mediator's report, opinion, recommendation, or finding about what occurred in a mediation may not be submitted to or considered by a court or another adjudicative body.
- A mediator cannot testify in any subsequent civil proceeding about any communication or conduct occurring at, or in connection with, a mediation.

This means that all communications between you and your attorney made in preparation for a mediation, or during a mediation, are confidential and cannot be disclosed or used (except in extremely limited circumstances), even if you later decide to sue your attorney for malpractice because of something that happens during the mediation.

I, _____ [Name of Client], understand that, unless all participants agree otherwise, no oral or written communication made during a mediation, or in preparation for a mediation, including communications between me and my attorney, can be used as evidence in any subsequent noncriminal legal action including an action against my attorney for malpractice or an ethical violation.

NOTE: This disclosure and signed acknowledgment does not limit your attorney's potential liability to you for professional malpractice, or prevent you from (1) reporting any professional misconduct by your attorney to the State Bar of California, or (2) cooperating with any disciplinary investigation or criminal prosecution of your attorney.

Should there be multiple signature lines for multiple clients or should each client sign a separate acknowledgment? Each client should sign a separate acknowledgement form to account for the "preferred language" requirement (i.e. 2 or more clients with different preferred languages) and to recognize the separate/distinct malpractice claims multiple clients may have. 3. Should there be signature lines for more than one attorney? Neutral - I think 2 lines is enough but I am not in private practice. 4. Thank you for taking into consideration my comment. What I was thinking is along the lines as to the 'why' this new Bill is of value to the parties. Here is a more specific introduction to the Mediation Disclosure Notification and Acknowledgment, I may suggest. Given that the preservation of confidentiality is considered essential to the proper functioning of mediation for parties to speak with candidness, California law generally makes mediation a confidential process. Clients will rarely go to read Section 703.5, 1115 through 1129 of Evidence Code, therefore I think it is important to write Mediation Disclosure Notification and Acknowledgment form in such a way that demonstrates the Ca law wants to protect our confidentiality, and at the same time protect attorneys for malpractice.	The committee appreciates the comments. The committee considered the proposal but decided it was sufficient to use the language in Evidence Code 1129(d). This form is optional; attorneys can prepare their own forms if they want to use different language.

Accordingly, the proposed form should be modified to remove the inserted term and include only the safe harbor language as set forth in Evidence Code §1129. Evidence Code §1129 contemplated that the whole of the disclosure document (as the statute refers to it), when signed by the client, would constitute their acknowledging receipt and understanding of the disclosures contained therein. The third paragraph does not contain the language of an acknowledgment. It does not use any form of "acknowledge," and it does not reference the "foregoing." Rather, it continues the educative tone and function of the disclosure document, further characterizing and describing previously mentioned concepts and containing new, additional information important to the client regarding needed agreement of all participants as to the use of mediation communications Likewise, the [n]ote which follows the third paragraph contains additional clarification and information for the client. 			The wording throughout Evidence Code §1129 contemplates a single attorney providing the disclosure document to a single client. If multiple attorneys or clients were contemplated, this would have been simple to indicate. What was contemplated by the statute is an educative interaction between an attorney and a client, resulting in that client's understanding and an executed form evidencing this. This process was not meant to be a pro forma activity where shortcuts for purposes of efficiency are appropriate or wise. To fulfill the purpose of Evidence Code §1129 and afford the level of consumer protection believed due the client, each client should review and sign their own disclosure document. This would stress the importance of the disclosures set forth and provide space in what may be a multi-party conversation for contemplation of the ramifications and implications of those disclosures, while affirming the individual's understanding and avoiding cavalier response, groupthink, or peer pressure. As to the attorney who wishes to avail himself or herself of the strong protections afforded by the statute, each should want to make certain that it irrefutably may be said he or she actually and individually provided the required disclosure document to a particular

Executive Summary

The Civil and Small Claims Advisory Committee recommends that California Rules of Court, rule 3.1345, be amended, effective January 1, 2020, to reflect the change in law regarding separate statements in discovery motions enacted in Assembly Bill 2230 (Stats. 2018, ch. 317). That bill amends three sections of the Code of Civil Procedure to expressly provide that courts, for certain types of discovery, may allow the moving party to submit an outline of the discovery requests and responses in dispute rather than the separate statement currently required by rule. The proposed rule reflects those changes and expands them to several additional types of discovery as well.

Recommendation

The Civil and Small Claims Advisory Committee recommends that the Judicial Council amend California Rules of Court, rule 3.1345, effective January 1, 2020, to implement the provisions of Assembly Bill 2230.

Relevant Previous Council Action

The Judicial Council adopted the rule that separate statements be included with certain discovery motions in 1984. The council has made minor modifications over the years, most recently in 2001 when the rule was reorganized and expanded to include all motions involving the content of a discovery request or the response to such a request.

Analysis/Rationale

Currently, rule 3.1345(a)[1] requires that in all motions involving the content of a discovery request or the responses to such a request, the moving party must include with the motion a separate statement containing the text of the request; the response, including any objections thereto; a statement of the factual and legal reasons for compelling further responses; and the text of any definition or instructions necessary for the court to understand the discovery requests or responses at issue. The intent of the rule is to ensure that the separate statement accompanying a discovery motion is "full and complete so that no person is required to review any other document in order to determine the full request and the full response." (Rule 3.1345(c).) The rules also require that any motion (including motions to compel discovery) be accompanied by a memorandum, which must contain a statement of facts, a concise statement of the law, evidence and arguments relied on, and a discussion of the relevant law. (Rule 3.1113.)

In some instances, parties have believed that the rule requiring the separate statement in addition to the memorandum results in unnecessary repetition, and so have asked courts for leave to submit alternative documents in place of the separate statement. Assembly Bill 2230 expressly authorizes courts to accept an alternative to the separate statement for motions to compel further responses to the three most common types of discovery requests: interrogatories (§ 2030.300(b)(2)); demands for inspection or copying, etc. (§ 2031.310(b)(3)); and requests for admissions (§ 2033.290(b)(2)). The new statutes provide that, in those motions, the court may now allow the parties to instead submit a concise outline of the discovery request and each response in dispute rather than a separate statement.

This proposal amends rule 3.1345(b) to provide that a separate statement is not required in discovery motions that currently require such a statement if a court has allowed the moving party to submit—in place of a separate statement—"a concise outline of the discovery request and each response in dispute." This expands somewhat the impact of AB 2230 to cover all motions in which separate statements are currently required, rather than just the three types addressed in the statute. [2] The committee concluded that the exception should be extended to all the types of discovery motions subject to the separate statement rule. [3] The committee concludes that if this discretion will be useful to judicial officers on, for example, motions to compel further responses to interrogatories, it would be similarly useful on motions to compel answers at a deposition. The committee sees no reason to limit this judicial discretion to only a few discovery types. The legislative history does not indicate that the Legislature saw any need to require separate statements in the discovery types not addressed by the new law,[4] and neither does the committee.

Policy implications

The committee is not aware of any policy implications from this rule amendment.

Comments

The proposal was circulated in spring 2019 for public comment, and seven comments were received, all generally favorable. A chart containing all the comments and the proposed responses is attached following the proposed rule.

The Committee on the Administration of Justice (CAJ) of the California Lawyers Association, Orange County Bar Association, and the Superior Courts of Los Angeles and San Diego Counties all fully agreed with the amendments as proposed. In relation to expanding the impact of AB 2230, CAJ noted that it "believes there is no logical difference between the categories of discovery motions addressed by AB 2230 and those not covered by the statute. Not revising the rule of court risks confusion if some but not all discovery motions are subject to the standard set forth in AB 2230."

Two commenters, a judge from Superior Court of San Bernardino County and a chief deputy from the Superior Court of Riverside County, agreed with the proposal generally but sought modification, particularly as to the phrase "a concise outline." The language in the amendment comes directly from the statute. The committee considered the comments and concluded that the statutory language was appropriate and that more detailed requirements are not necessary in the rule.

[3] Currently, rule 3.1345 applies to and requires separate statements to be filed in all motions involving the content of a discovery request or the response to such a request, and lists the following discovery motions as being included in the application of the rule:

(1) To compel further responses to requests for admission;
(2) To compel further responses to interrogatories;
(3) To compel further responses to a demand for inspection of documents or tangible things;
(4) To compel answers at a deposition;
(5) To compel or to quash the production of documents or tangible things at a deposition;
(6) For medical examination over objection; and
(7) For issue or evidentiary sanctions.
(Cal. Rules of Court, rule 3.1345(a).)

The commenter from Superior Court of Riverside County proposed that the rule should require that for a motion to compel answers at deposition, the exact language of the deposition questions and objections should be required because the court would not have easy access to the transcripts. The committee disagrees that the rule should include different requirements as to the outlines for particular types of discovery requests. It is up to the court's discretion as to whether the exception from requirement of a separate statement—which does require the text of the questions—is appropriate for a particular motion.

There were also minor nonsubstantive textual changes made to the rule in response to comments received.

Alternatives considered

In light of the change in law, the committee had no option but to amend rule 3.1345 in some way. Because AB 2230 amends provisions regarding motions to compel only as to three types of discovery motions, the advisory committee considered the alternative of amending the rule only as to those three types. However, it decided that to amend the rule as to all motions for which separate statements are required was more logical and efficient, and not inconsistent with AB 2230.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

The amended rule should have little impact on the courts beyond the training that judicial officers and clerks may require regarding the statutory change. One court commented that it anticipated minor cost savings due to judicial officers and research attorneys spending less time reviewing discovery requests.

Rule 3.1345 of the California Rules of Court is amended, effective January 1, 2020, to read:

Rule 3.1345. Format of discovery motions

(a) Separate statement required

Except as provided in (b), ~~A~~any motion involving the content of a discovery request or the responses to such a request must be accompanied by a separate statement. The motions that require a separate statement include a motion:

(1) To compel further responses to requests for admission;

(2) To compel further responses to interrogatories;

(3) To compel further responses to a demand for inspection of documents or tangible things;

(4) To compel answers at a deposition;

(5) To compel or to quash the production of documents or tangible things at a deposition;

(6) For medical examination over objection; and

(7) For issue or evidentiary sanctions.

(b) Separate statement not required

A separate statement is not required under the following circumstances:

(1) ~~w~~When no response has been provided to the request for discovery; or

(2) When a court has allowed the moving party to submit—in place of a separate statement—a concise outline of the discovery request and each response in dispute.

1.	Committee on Administration of Justice (CAJ) of the Litigation Section of California Lawyers Association by Jordanna G. Thigpen, Chair, and Saul Bercovitch Director of Governmental Affairs California Lawyers Association	A	CAJ agrees with this proposal. Assembly Bill 2230 (effective January 1, 2020), authorizes courts to accept an outline of the discovery requests and responses in dispute in lieu of a separate statement for motions to compel further responses to interrogatories, demands for inspection, and requests for admission. The proposed revisions to Rule of Court 3.1345 would expand the categories of discovery motions for which the courts may accept an outline of the dispute to include all motions for which a separate statement is currently required. CAJ believes there is no logical difference between the categories of discovery motions addressed by AB 2230 and those not covered by the statute. Not revising the Rule of Court risks confusion if some but not all discovery motions are subject to the standard set forth in AB 2230. Further, CAJ questions the utility of separate statements in discovery motions in any event. They are often repetitive and lengthy documents that simply repeat arguments made in the body of the motion itself. That view has essentially been acknowledged by AB 2230 and should be extended to other motions to compel.	The committee acknowledges the commenters agreement with the proposal.

2.	Hon. Janet Frangie Judge of the Superior Court of California, County of San Bernardino	AM	I do not understand clearly what you are trying to change. Are you proposing that just the questions and answers be submitted in outline form and then the "Argument" portion is omitted? It is true that these Separate Statements are repetitive in the Argument section and could use some revision but it is more a function of the attorneys not taking the time to be specific in their arguments about why a response should be compelled. Clarification is needed as to what you mean by "Outline" or is this meant to be intentionally vague to allow the court to decide what format it wants. My next question is how is this implemented - by a courtroom rule? Thank you for your consideration.	The committee intends to implement AB 2230, which provides that, in lieu of the separate statement currently required by this rule to be filed along with any motion to compel, a court may allow a party to submit a concise outline of the request and response in dispute. The motion to compel itself, would still be required, and the legal argument would go in the memorandum required to accompany the motion. (See Cal. Rules of Court, rule 3.113). The committee has used the terminology used in the statute. The statute gives the authority to the court to make the exception. Implementation may be by direction of the judicial officer or by local rule.

6.	Superior Court of Riverside County By Susan Ryan Chief Deputy, Legal Services	AM	Concerning Rule 3.1345(b)(2), the phrase "a concise outline of the discovery request and each response in dispute" is unclear – whether this is intended to be a streamlined version of a separate statement or something else. Without some guidance as to the format required, it appears that it is open to interpretation by attorneys, who will potentially create an unlimited number of their own versions of the outline. Also, the change to Rule 3.1345 is proposed to be applied to all discovery that currently requires separate statements. As to motions to compel answers at deposition, an outline should still require the exact language of the deposition questions and objections since the precise wording of the question is critical to a correct resolution of the issue and the deposition transcript does not provide immediate access to the wording in the way that special interrogatories or other forms written discovery constitute an easy reference material.	The committee has used the terminology used in the statute. The committee disagrees that the rule should include different requirements for particular types of discovery requests. It is up to the court's discretion as to whether the exception from requirement of a separate statement (which does require the text of the questions) is appropriate for a particular motion.

Executive Summary

The Civil and Small Claims Advisory Committee recommends revisions to two small claims forms in light of the repeal of Code of Civil Procedure section 116.550 in Senate Bill 1155. Previously, that statute had authorized a small claims court to permit another individual other than an attorney to assist a party if the court determines that the party does not speak or understand English sufficiently to comprehend the proceedings or give testimony and needs assistance. The law had also required each court to make a reasonable effort to maintain and make available to the parties a list of interpreters who were able and willing to aid parties in small claims actions. SB 1155 repealed section 116.550 and at the same time made all the statutory provisions regarding interpreters in other civil cases applicable to small claims cases. The proposed form revisions would remove from the forms all references to the content of this repealed law and more closely reflect current law.

Recommendation

To correct information in the forms regarding interpreters, the Civil and Small Claims Advisory Committee recommends that the Judicial Council, effective January 1, 2020, revise:

1. The "How to Get Help With Your Case" section of Information for the Small Claims Plaintiff (form SC-100-INFO); and

2. The "Information for the defendant" section of Plaintiff's Claim and ORDER to Go to Small Claims Court (form SC-100).

The revised forms are attached at pages 6–12.

Relevant Previous Council Action

The Judicial Council adopted form SC-100 and the predecessor to form SC-100-INFO in 1977 and has subsequently revised both forms numerous times to reflect statutory changes, add and revise pertinent information, and make them easier for small claims litigants to understand and use. The interpreter instructions on both these forms were revised, effective January 1, 2008, to reflect statutes that previously required courts to charge for court interpreters in civil matters and case law, stating that courts could provide a free court interpreter for an indigent small claims party who needed one, and should do so if an interpreter was available. (Gardiana v. Small Claims Court (1976) 59 Cal.App.3d 412.)

The forms were revised again, effective January 1, 2017, to reflect the enactment of Evidence Code section 756. The revisions at that time removed references to fees for interpreters and fee waivers because courts can no longer charge for interpreter services. In addition, the order of information on the forms was changed to advise small claims litigants to ask about the availability of a court-provided interpreter, while also cautioning that an interpreter might be unavailable in light of the low preference given to small claims cases in Evidence Code section 756. The items also advised litigants that they could bring an adult who is not a witness or an attorney to interpret for them and could ask the court for a list of interpreters for hire, as provided in Code of Civil Procedure section 116.550.

Analysis/Rationale

Before enactment of SB 1155 (Hueso; Stats. 2018, ch. 852), Government Code section 68560.5 expressly excluded small claims cases from the requirement that certified, registered, or provisionally qualified interpreters must be provided for limited-English-proficient (LEP) litigants in court proceedings. Because courts were not required to use such interpreters in small claims courts—and in fact, for many years, could not provide any court interpreters in most cases—Code of Civil Procedure section 116.550 expressly addressed what courts should do for LEP litigants in small claims cases. Courts (1) could allow the litigants to have other individuals (friends or family members, or other individuals not formally qualified as court interpreters) assist them as informal interpreters; (2) were to maintain a list of interpreters who were willing to aid parties in small claims cases for little or no fee; and (3) could, if no interpreter was available, continue the small claims hearing to allow the litigant to obtain assistance on his or her own.

SB 1155 removed the exclusion for small claims cases from the provisions of Government Code section 68560.5, making the provisions of section 68561 applicable to small claims cases. At the same time, it repealed Code of Civil Procedure section 116.550, removing from the courts the authority to regularly allow family or friends to interpret for parties at small claims hearings. Under Government Code section 68561, generally a certified or registered court interpreter must be used to interpret in a court proceeding.[1] If one is unavailable, a court may, following the good cause and qualification procedures adopted in rules of court by the Judicial Council, appoint an interpreter who is not a registered or qualified interpreter.[2]

Rule 2.893 of the California Rules of Court is the rule that has been developed by the council in this area. That rule allows appointment of provisionally qualified interpreters (those who apply to a court and are found to be qualified to interpret on an ongoing basis for up to six months) or, in certain circumstances, temporary interpreters.[3] Although some parties might be able to bring more formally qualified interpreters with them to court (i.e., those who may be provisionally qualified by the court), many are unable to pay for such assistance. Temporary interpreters, such as the friends and family members previously permitted under Code of Civil Procedure section 116.550, may be used only to prevent burdensome delay or in other unusual circumstances, when limited to a single "brief, routine matter" that does not impact substantive rights.

The advisory committee comment for subdivisions (b)(7) and (d)(4) of rule 2.893 explains further: "When determining whether the matter before the court is a 'brief, routine matter' for which a noncertified or nonregistered interpreter who has not been provisionally qualified may be used, the judicial officer should consider the complexity of the matter at issue and likelihood of potential impacts on the LEP person's substantive rights, keeping in mind the consequences that could flow from inaccurate or incomplete interpretation of the proceedings."[4] Because small claims trials, although often not complex, are hearings that clearly affect a party's substantive rights, courts generally may not use temporary interpreters for such trials.

Currently, two Judicial Council forms for small claims parties include information directed to parties with limited English proficiency: Information for the Plaintiff (form SC-100-INFO) and Plaintiff's Claim and ORDER to Go to Small Claims Court (form SC-100). under the "Information for the defendant" section. Each contains the same basic information: the party should ask the court for an interpreter as soon as possible; if none is available, the party may bring an adult to interpret or get a list of interpreters from the court.[5]

[1] Gov. Code, § 68561(c), (d).

[2] Ibid.; Gov. Code, § 68561(f).

[3] Temporary interpreters are individuals who are not certified, registered, or provisionally qualified, but have been found able to interpret for the party on a one-time basis. They may be used to prevent burdensome delay or in other unusual circumstances, if the judge has made specified findings. (Cal. Rules of Court, rule 2.893(b)(7) and (d)(4).)

[4] The separate advisory committee comment for (d)(4) notes that the rule providing for use of temporary interpreters is "not intended to be used to meet the extended or ongoing interpretation needs of LEP court users."

The revised text eliminates the reference to the list of interpreters for hire and the informal interpreters who, under the new law, the court may no longer regularly use to interpret for small claims trials. The text identifies a form on which to make the request and warns of a possible delay while an appropriately qualified interpreter is being located. It ends by noting that, should the party want to bring a private interpreter, the interpreter must meet the same requirements applicable in any other civil trial and cites the rule where those requirements are described and a form that may be used for having an interpreter provisionally qualified, if appropriate.[6]

Policy implications

These form revisions will bring the forms in line with the current law—which is now the same in all civil cases—on the use of interpreters in small claims proceedings. The committee notes that, because small claims cases, as "other civil cases," are the lowest priority level on the list in Evidence Code section 756, complying with the new law may be difficult in those cases.

Comments

The proposal circulated for public comment in spring 2019. The three comments, all in favor of the revisions, are from the Superior Courts of Los Angeles and San Diego Counties and the Orange County Bar Association. A chart containing all the comments received is attached at pages 13–17.

In reviewing the forms following circulation, the committee decided to further simplify the language and to add a citation to the form for provisionally qualified interpreters.

Alternatives considered

Because the text of the current forms no longer reflects current law, the committee did not consider not revising the items.

The committee did consider the alternative of including an explanation that temporary interpreters might be used for nonsubstantive proceedings in small claims cases, such as requests for continuances. The committee concluded, however, that the distinction was too complex to explain in this form and was likely to lead to misunderstandings by LEP parties who might

A court-provided interpreter may not be available. Alternatively, you may bring an adult who is not a witness or an attorney to interpret for you or ask the court for a list of interpreters for hire.

Form SC-100-INFO provides the following on page 2, in the section titled "How to Get Help With Your Case":

believe they would be able to bring a friend to interpret at the small claims trial, as permitted under prior law.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

Although SB 1155 itself will have substantial fiscal and operational impacts on the courts, as well as raise access issues for parties, the form revisions will not add to those impacts.

Requests for Accommodations

Assistive listening systems, computer-assisted real-time captioning, or sign language interpreter services are available if you ask at least five days before the trial. Contact the clerk's office for form MC-410, Request for Accommodations by Persons With Disabilities and Response. (Civ. Code, § 54.8.)

SC-100 Information for the defendant (the person being sued)

"Small claims court" is a special court where claims for $10,000 or less are decided. Individuals, including "natural persons" and sole proprietors, may claim up to $10,000. Corporations, partnerships, public entities, and other businesses are limited to claims of $5,000. (See below for exceptions.*) The process is quick and cheap. The rules are simple and informal. You are the defendant—the person being sued. The person who is suing you is the plaintiff.

Do I need a lawyer? You may talk to a lawyer before or after the case. But you may not have a lawyer represent you in court (unless this is an appeal from a small claims case).

How do I get ready for court? You don't have to file any papers before your trial, unless you think this is the wrong court for your case. But bring to your trial any witnesses, receipts, and evidence that supports your case. And read "Be Prepared for Your Trial" at www.courts.ca.gov/smallclaims/prepare.

What if I need an accommodation? If you have a disability or are hearing impaired, fill out form MC-410, Request for Accommodations. Give the form to your court clerk or the ADA/ Access Coordinator.

What if I don't speak English well? Ask the court clerk as soon as possible for a court-provided interpreter. You may use form INT-300 or local court form to request an interpreter. If a court interpreter is not available at the time of your trial, it may be necessary to reschedule your trial. You cannot bring your own interpreter for the trial unless the interpreter has been approved by the court as a certified, registered, or provisionally qualified interpreter. (See Cal. Rules of Court, rule 2.893, and form INT-140.)

Where can I get the court forms I need? Go to any courthouse or your county law library, or print forms at www.courts.ca.gov/smallclaims/forms.

What happens at the trial? The judge will listen to both sides. The judge may make a decision at your trial or mail the decision to you later.

What if I lose the case? If you lose, you may appeal. You'll have to pay a fee. (Plaintiffs cannot appeal their own claims.)

- If you were at the trial, file form SC-140, Notice of Appeal. You must file within 30 days after the clerk hands or mails you the judge's decision (judgment) on form SC-200 or form SC-130, Notice of Entry of Judgment.
- If you were not at the trial, fill out and file form SC-135, Notice of Motion to Vacate Judgment and Declaration, to ask the judge to cancel the judgment (decision). If the judge does not give you a new trial, you have 10 days to appeal the decision. File form SC-140.

For more information on appeals, see www.courts.ca.gov/smallclaims/appeals.

Do I have options?

Yes. If you are being sued, you can:

- Settle your case before the trial. If you and the plaintiff agree on how to settle the case, the plaintiff must file form CIV-110, Request for Dismissal, with the clerk. Ask the Small Claims Advisor for help.
- Prove this is the wrong court. Send a letter to the court before your trial explaining why you think this is the wrong court. Ask the court to dismiss the claim. You must serve (give) a copy of your letter (by mail or in person) to all parties. (Your letter to the court must say you have done so.)
- Go to the trial and try to win your case. Bring witnesses, receipts, and any evidence you need to prove your case. To have the court order a witness to go to the trial, fill out form SC-107 (Small Claims Subpoena) and have it served on the witness.
- Sue the person who is suing you. If you have a claim against the plaintiff, and the claim is appropriate for small claims court as described on this form, you may file Defendant's Claim (form SC-120) and bring the claim in this action. If your claim is for more than allowed in small claims court, you may still file it in small claims court if you give up the amount over the small claims value amount, or you may file a claim for the full value of the claim in the appropriate court. If your claim is for more than allowed in small claims court and relates to the same contract, transaction, matter, or event that is the subject of the plaintiff's claim, you may file your claim in the appropriate court and file a motion to transfer the plaintiff's 's claim to that court to resolve both matters together. You can see a description of the amounts allowed in the paragraph above titled "Small Claims Court."
- Agree with the plaintiff's claim and pay the money. Or, if you can't pay the money now, go to your trial and say you want to make payments.
- Let the case "default." If you don't settle and do not go to the trial (default), the judge may give the plaintiff what he or she is asking for plus court costs. If this happens, the plaintiff can legally take your money, wages, and property to pay the judgment.

What if I need more time?

You can change the trial date if:

- You cannot go to court on the scheduled date (you will have to pay a fee to postpone the trial), or
- You did not get served (receive this order to go to court) at least 15 days before the trial (or 20 days if you live outside the county), or
- You need more time to get an interpreter. One postponement is allowed, and you will not have to pay a fee to delay the trial.

Ask the Small Claims Clerk about the rules and fees for postponing a trial. Or fill out form SC-150 (or write a letter) and mail it to the court and to all other people listed on your court papers before the deadline. Enclose a check for your court fees, unless a fee waiver was granted.

SC-100 Información para el demandado (la persona demandada)

La "Corte de reclamos menores" es una corte especial donde se deciden casos por $10,000 o menos. Los individuos, o sea las "personas físicas" y los propietarios por cuenta propia, pueden reclamar hasta $10,000. Las corporaciones, asociaciones, entidades públicas y otras empresas solo pueden reclamar hasta $5,000. (Vea abajo para las excepciones.*) El proceso es rápido y barato. Las reglas son sencillas e informales. Usted es el Demandado—la persona que se está demandando. La persona que lo está demandando es el Demandante.

¿Necesito un abogado? Puede hablar con un abogado antes o después del caso. Pero no puede tener a un abogado que lo represente ante la corte (a menos que se trate de una apelación de un caso de reclamos menores).

¿Cómo me preparo para ir a la corte? No tiene que presentar ningunos papeles antes del juicio, a menos que piense que ésta es la corte equivocada para su caso. Pero lleve al juicio cualquier testigos, recibos y pruebas que apoyan su caso. Y lea "Esté preparado para su juicio" en www.courts.ca.gov/reclamosmenores/preparese.

¿Qué hago si necesito una adaptación? Si tiene una discapacidad o tiene impedimentos de audición, llene el formulario MC-410, Request for Accomodations. Entregue el formulario al secretario de la corte o al Coordinador de Acceso/ADA de su corte.

¿Qué pasa si no hablo bien inglés? Pregúntele al secretario de la corte lo más pronto posible si en el juzgado habrá un intérprete disponible y cómo solicitarlo. No siempre están disponibles los intérpretes de la corte. Otra opción es llevar a un adulto que pueda interpretar para usted siempre que esa persona no sea un testigo ni un abogado. O puede pedir a la corte una lista de intérpretes particulares disponibles para contratar.

¿Dónde puedo obtener los formularios de la corte que necesito? Vaya a cualquier edificio de la corte, la biblioteca legal de su condado, o imprima los formularios en www.courts.ca.gov/ smallclaims/forms (página está en inglés).

¿Qué pasa en el juicio? El juez escuchará a ambas partes. El juez puede tomar su decisión durante la audiencia o enviársela por correo después.

¿Qué pasa si pierdo el caso? Si pierde, puede apelar. Tendrá que pagar una cuota. (El Demandante no puede apelar su propio reclamo.)

- Si estuvo presente en el juicio, llene el formulario SC-140, Aviso de apelación (Notice of Appeal). Tiene que presentarlo dentro de 30 días después de que el secretario le entregue o envíe la decisión (fallo) del juez en el formulario SC-200 o SC-130, Aviso de publicación del fallo (Notice of Entry of Judgment).
- Si no estuvo en el juicio, llene y presente el formulario SC-135, Aviso de petición para anular el fallo y Declaración para pedirle al juez que anule el fallo (decisión). Si la corte no le otorga un nuevo juicio, tiene 10 días para apelar la decisión. Presente el formulario SC-140.

Para obtener más información sobre las apelaciones, vea www.courts.ca.gov/reclamosmenores/apelaciones.

¿Tengo otras opciones? Sí. Si lo están demandando, puede:

- Resolver su caso antes del juicio. Si usted y el Demandante se ponen de acuerdo en cómo resolver el caso, el Demandante tiene que presentar el formulario CIV-110, Solicitud de desestimación (Request for Dismissal) ante el secretario de la corte. Pídale al Asesor de Reclamos Menores que lo ayude.
- Probar que es la corte equivocada. Envíe una carta a la corte antes del juicio explicando por qué cree que es la corte equivocada. Pídale a la corte que despida el reclamo.Tiene que entregar (dar) una copia de su carta (por correo o en persona) a todas las partes. (Su carta a la corte tiene que decir que hizo la entrega.)
- Ir al juicio y tratar de ganar el caso. Lleve testigos, recibos y cualquier prueba que necesite para probar su caso. Si desea que la corte emita una orden de comparecencia para que los testigos vayan al juicio, llene el formulario SC-107, Citatorio de reclamos menores (Small Claims Subpoena) y entréguelo legalmente al testigo.
- Demandar a la persona que lo demandó. Si tiene un reclamo contra el Demandante, y el reclamo se puede presentar en la corte de reclamos menores, tal como se describe en este formulario, puede presentar el formulario SC-120, Reclamo del demandado (Defendant's Claim) y presentarlo en este mismo caso. Si su reclamo excede el límite permitido en la corte de reclamos menores, puede igualmente presentarlo en la corte de reclamos menores si está dispuesto a limitar su reclamo al máximo permitido, o puede presentar un reclamo por el monto total en la corte apropiada. Si su reclamo excede el límite permitido en la corte de reclamos menores y está relacionado con el mismo contrato, transacción, asunto o acontecimiento que el reclamo del Demandante, puede presentar su reclamo en la corte apropiada y presentar una moción para transferir el reclamo del Demandante a dicha corte, para poder resolver los dos reclamos juntos. Puede ver una descripción de los montos permitidos en el párrafo anterior titulado "Corte de reclamos menores".
- Aeptar el reclamo del Demandante y pagar el dinero. O, si no puede pagar en ese momento, vaya al juicio y diga que quiere hacer los pagos.
- No ir al juicio y aceptar el fallo por falta de comparecencia. Si no llega a un acuerdo con el Demandante y no va al juicio (fallo por falta de comparecencia), el juez le puede otorgar al Demandante lo que está reclamando más los costos de la corte. En ese caso, el Demandante legalmente puede tomar su dinero, su sueldo o sus bienes para cobrar el fallo.

¿Qué hago si necesito más tiempo? Puede cambiar la fecha del juicio si:

- No puede ir a la corte en la fecha programada (tendrá que pagar una cuota para aplazar el juicio), o
- No le entregaron los documentos legalmente (no recibió la orden para ir a la corte) por lo menos 15 días antes del juicio (ó 20 días si vive fuera del condado), o
- Necesita más tiempo para conseguir intérprete. (Se permite un solo aplazamiento sin tener que pagar cuota para aplazar el juicio).

Pregúntele al secretario de reclamos menores sobre las reglas y las cuotas para aplazar un juicio. O llene el formulario SC-150 (o escriba una carta) y envíelo antes del plazo a la corte y a todas las otras personas que figuran en sus papeles de la corte. Adjunte un cheque para pagar los costos de la corte, a menos que le hayan dado una exención.

¿Necesita ayuda? El Asesor de Reclamos Menores de su condado le puede ayudar sin cargo.

O visite www.courts.ca.gov/reclamosmenores/asesores.

 Excepciones: Existen diferentes límites en un reclamo contra un garante. (Vea el Código de Procedimiento Civil, sección 116.220 (c).)

INFORMATION FOR THE SMALL CLAIMS PLAINTIFF

This information sheet is written for the person who sues in the small claims court. It explains some of the rules of, and some general information about, the small claims court. It may also be helpful for the person who is sued.

WHAT IS SMALL CLAIMS COURT?

Small claims court is a special court where disputes are resolved quickly and inexpensively. The rules are simple and informal. The person who sues is the plaintiff. The person who is sued is the defendant. In small claims court, you may ask a lawyer for advice before you go to court, but you cannot have a lawyer in court. Your claim cannot be for more than $5,000 if you are a business or public entity or for more than $10,000 if you are a natural person (including a sole proprietor). (See below for reference to exceptions.)* If you have a claim for more than this amount, you may sue in the civil division of the trial court or you may sue in the small claims court and give up your right to the amount over the limit. You cannot, however, file more than two cases in small claims court for more than $2,500 each during a calendar year.

WHO CAN FILE A CLAIM?

1. You must be at least 18 years old to file a claim. If you are not yet 18, tell the clerk. You may ask the court to appoint a guardian ad litem. This is a person who will act for you in the case. The guardian ad litem is usually a parent, a relative, or an adult friend.
2. A person who sues in small claims court must first make a demand, if possible. This means that you have asked the defendant to pay, and the defendant has refused. If your claim is for possession of property, you must ask the defendant to give you the property.
3. Unless you fall within two technical exceptions, you must be the original owner of the claim. This means that if the claim is assigned, the buyer cannot sue in the small claims court. You must also appear at the small claims hearing yourself unless you filed the claim for a corporation or other entity that is not a natural person.
4. If a corporation files a claim, an employee, an officer, or a director must act on its behalf. If the claim is filed on behalf of an association or another entity that is not a natural person, a regularly employed person of the entity must act on its behalf. A person who appears on behalf of a corporation or another entity must not be employed or associated solely for the purpose of representing the corporation or other entity in the small claims court. You must file a declaration with the court to appear in any of these instances. (See Authorization to Appear, form SC-109.)

WHERE CAN YOU FILE YOUR CLAIM?

You must sue in the right court and location. This rule is called venue. Check the court's local rules if there is more than one court location in the county handling small claims cases. If you file your claim in the wrong court, the court will dismiss the claim unless all defendants personally appear at the hearing and agree that the claim may be heard. The right location may be any of these:

1. Where the defendant lives or where the business involved is located;
2. Where the damage or accident happened;
3. Where the contract was signed or carried out;
4. If the defendant is a corporation, where the contract was broken; or
5. For a retail installment account or sales contract or a motor vehicle finance sale:
   a. Where the buyer lives;
   b. Where the buyer lived when the contract was entered into;
   c. Where the buyer signed the contract; or
   d. Where the goods or vehicle are permanently kept.

SOME RULES ABOUT THE DEFENDANT (including government agencies)

1. You must sue using the defendant's exact legal name. If the defendant is a business or a corporation and you do not know the exact legal name, check with the state or local licensing agency, the county clerk's office, or the Office of the Secretary of State, Corporate Status Unit, at www.sos.ca.gov/business. Ask the clerk for help if you do not know how to find this information. If you do not use the defendant's exact legal name, the court may be able to correct the name on your claim at the hearing or after the judgment.
2. If you want to sue a government agency, you must first file a claim with the agency before you can file a lawsuit in court. Strict time limits apply. If you are in a Department of Corrections or Youth Authority facility, you must prove that the agency denied your claim. Please attach a copy of the denial to your claim.
3. With very limited exceptions, the defendant must be served within the state of California.

HOW DOES THE DEFENDANT FIND OUT ABOUT THE CLAIM?

You must make sure the defendant finds out about your lawsuit. This has to be done according to the rules or your case may be dismissed or delayed. The correct way of telling the defendant about the lawsuit is called service of process. This means giving the defendant a copy of the claim. YOU CANNOT DO THIS YOURSELF. You should read form SC-104B, What is "Proof of Service"? Here are four ways to serve the defendant:

1. Service by a law officer—You may ask the marshal or sheriff to serve the defendant. A fee will be charged.
2. Process server—You may ask anyone who is not a party in your case and who is at least 18 years old to serve the defendant. The person is called a process server and must personally give a copy of your claim to the defendant. The person must also sign a proof of service form showing when the defendant was served. Registered process servers will serve papers for a fee. You may also ask a friend or relative to do it.
3. Certified mail—You may ask the clerk of the court to serve the defendant by certified mail. The clerk will charge a fee. You should check back with the court before the hearing to see if the receipt for certified mail was returned to the court. Service by certified mail must be done by the clerk's office except in motor vehicle accident cases involving out-of-state defendants.
4. Substituted service—This method lets you serve another person instead of the defendant. You must follow the procedures carefully. You may also wish to use the marshal or sheriff or a registered process server.

* Exceptions: Different limits apply in an action against a defendant who is a guarantor. (See Code Civ. Proc., § 116.220(c).)

Form Adopted for Mandatory Use
Judicial Council of California
SC-100-INFO [Rev. January 1, 2020]

Code of Civil Procedure, §§ 116.110 et seq.,116.220(c), 116.340(g)
www.courts.ca.gov

4. Substituted service (continued) A copy of your claim must be left at the defendant's business with the person in charge, OR at the defendant's home with a competent person who is at least 18 years old. The person who receives the claim must be told about its contents. Another copy must be mailed, first class postage prepaid, to the defendant at the address where the paper was left. The service is not complete until 10 days after the copy is mailed.
5. Timing and proof of service—No matter which method of service you choose, the defendant must be served by a certain date, or the trial will be postponed. If the defendant lives in the county, service must be completed at least 15 days before the trial date. This period is at least 20 days if the defendant lives outside the county.

   The person who serves the defendant must sign a court paper showing when the defendant was served. This paper is called a Proof of Service (form SC-104). It must be signed and returned to the court clerk as soon as the defendant has been served.

WHAT IF THE DEFENDANT ALSO HAS A CLAIM?

Sometimes the person who was sued (the defendant) will also have a claim against the person who filed the lawsuit (the plaintiff). This claim is called the Defendant's Claim. The defendant may file this claim in the same lawsuit. This helps to resolve all of the disagreements between the parties at the same time.

If the defendant decides to file the claim in the small claims court, the claim may not be for more than $5,000, or $10,000 if the defendant is a natural person (see exceptions on page 1).* If the value of the claim is more than this amount, the defendant may either give up the amount over $5,000 or $10,000 and sue in the small claims court or sue in the appropriate court for the full value of the claim. If the defendant's claim relates to the same contract, transaction, matter, or event that is the subject of your claim and exceeds the value amount for small claims court, the defendant may file the claim in the appropriate court and file a motion to transfer your claim to that court to resolve both claims together.

The defendant's claim must be served on the plaintiff at least five days before the trial. If the defendant received the plaintiff's claim 10 days or less before the trial, then the claim must be served at least one day before the trial. Both claims will be heard by the court at the same time.

WHAT HAPPENS AT THE TRIAL?

Be sure you are on time for the trial. The small claims trial is informal. You must bring with you all witnesses, books, receipts, and other papers or things to prove your case. You may ask the witnesses to come to court voluntarily, or you may ask the clerk to issue a subpoena. A subpoena is a court order that requires the witness to go to trial. The witness has a right to charge a fee for going to the trial. If you do not have the records or papers to prove your case, you may also get a court order before the trial date requiring the papers to be brought to the trial. This order is called a Small Claims Subpoena and Declaration (form SC-107).

If you settle the case before the trial, you must file a dismissal form with the clerk.

The court's decision is usually mailed to you after the trial. It may also be hand delivered to you when the trial is over and after the judge has made a decision. The decision appears on a form called the Notice of Entry of Judgment (form SC-130 or SC-200).

WHAT HAPPENS AFTER JUDGMENT?

The court may have ordered one party to pay money to the other party. The party who wins the case and is owed the money is called the judgment creditor. The party who loses the case and owes the money is called the judgment debtor. Enforcement of the judgment is postponed until the time for appeal ends or until the appeal is decided. This means that the judgment creditor cannot collect any money or take any action until this period is over. Generally both parties may be represented by lawyers after judgment. More information about your rights after judgment is available on the back of the Notice of Entry of Judgment. The clerk may also have this information on a separate sheet.

HOW TO GET HELP WITH YOUR CASE

1. Lawyers—Both parties may ask a lawyer about the case, but a lawyer may not represent either party in court at the small claims trial. Generally, after judgment and on appeal, both parties may be represented by lawyers.
2. Interpreters—If you do not speak English well, ask the court clerk as soon as possible for a court-provided interpreter. You may use form INT-300 or a local court form to request an interpreter. If a court interpreter is not available at the time of your trial, it may be necessary to reschedule your trial. You cannot bring your own interpreter for the trial unless the interpreter has been approved by the court as a certified, registered, or provisionally qualified interpreter. (See Cal. Rules of Court, rule 2.893, and form INT-140.)
3. Waiver of fees—The court charges fees for some of its procedures. Fees are also charged for serving the defendant with the claim. The court may excuse you from paying these fees if you cannot afford them. Ask the clerk for the Information Sheet on Waiver of Superior Court Fees and Costs (form FW-001-INFO) to find out if you meet the requirements so that you do not have to pay the fees.
4. Night and Saturday court—If you cannot go to court during working hours, ask the clerk if the court has trials at night or on Saturdays.
5. Parties who are in jail—If you are in jail, the court may excuse you from going to the trial. Instead, you may ask another person who is not an attorney to go to the trial for you. You may mail written declarations to the court to support your case.
6. Accommodations—If you have a disability and need assistance, immediately ask the court to help accommodate your needs. If you are hearing impaired and need assistance, notify the court immediately.
7. Forms—You can get small claims forms and more information at the California Courts Self-Help Center website (www.courts.ca.gov/smallclaims), your county law library, or the courthouse nearest you.
8. Small claims advisors—The law requires each county to provide assistance in small claims cases free of charge. (Small claims advisor information):

While you did footnote the advisory committee comments on what judges should consider when determining what constitutes a brief routine matter, it is still leaving the decision in the judge's hands. It is also our own opinion that having no interpreter at all is clearly more determinantal to the litigant's substantive rights than having a temporary interpreter. The language also runs somewhat contrary to our current understanding of the Judicial Council's guidance for language expansion. Reporting, for example, asks us to exclude any counts of temporary interpreters in small claims, as they do not consider it as the court being unable to provide services or a denial of services. (To be clear, they do ask for these counts in other	The advisory committee understands current law, in light of SB 1155's eliminating authorization for courts to use informal interpreters in small claims court, as not allowing the regular use of temporary interpreters for small claims trials. The provisions of Rule 2.893(d) do not change the impact of SB 1155, because small claims trials are not "brief, routine matters" under that rule, but rather evidentiary hearings that will have impacts on the parties' substantive rights, for which the court must "keep[] in mind the consequences that could flow from inaccurate or incomplete interpretation of the proceedings." (Rule 2.893, Advisory Committee Comment.) The Advisory Committee Comment also notes that the rule providing for use of temporary interpreters is "not intended to be used to meet the extended or ongoing interpretation needs of LEP court users." This comment appears to represent a misunderstanding of discussions with staff about rule 2.895, which requires courts to track requests for court interpreters and whether such requests are granted or denied. Staff is not aware of any distinctions for tracking such requests in small claims cases.

While we have greatly expanded our interpreter services to small claims, we do not have the resources to do so completely, particularly for rare languages.	The committee agrees that small claims cases are, with "other civil cases", at the lowest priority level in the list in Evidence Code section 756, which can make complying with the new law difficult in those cases. It is hoped that increased use of video remote interpreting and telephonic interpreting will provide greater access to certified and registered interpreters.
			We respectfully ask that the language be changed to note that a temporary interpreter may be used in small claims, with the proper qualification approved by the court.	For the reasons stated above, the committee declined to accept the suggestion that the forms should inform small claims parties that temporary interpreters could be used.
			Court staff comments: In the proposal, the committee opted to omit information on the use of temporary interpreters. Respectfully, we consider this omission a mistake that could lead to confusion among court staff and delay to the public. Although temporary appointments are discouraged in favor of certified / registered interpreters, the fact is that temporary appointments are necessary. If parties feel from the outset that they cannot bring someone with them to help, it could result in unnecessary continuances. To avoid any misunderstanding, an explanation about temporary interpreters should be included. Otherwise, the court potentially may be	See response above. Also, the only information about temporary interpreters the committee considered including was that they would be permitted for "brief, routine" procedural matters, such as requests for continuing a trial date. Executive Summary

The Civil and Small Claims Advisory Committee recommends that the discretionary exemption to the statewide case management rules be made permanent to allow flexibility in case management where courts so desire. In 2013, the Judicial Council amended the statewide rules of court on civil case management to give courts the discretion to exempt certain types or categories of general civil cases from the mandatory case management rules. The amendments were intended as an emergency measure, to help courts to better address the state's fiscal crisis by decreasing the time spent by court staff and judicial officers in filing case management statements, setting and holding individual case management conferences, and performing other actions required by the case management rules. In 2018, the Commission on the Future of California's Court System recommended that the emergency exemption be made permanent and the advisory committee is furthering that recommendation by this proposal.

Recommendation

The Civil and Small Claims Advisory Committee recommends that the Judicial Council amend California Rules of Court, rule 3.720, effective January 1, 2020, to make the emergency provisions allowing exceptions to the rule permanent.

The amended rule is attached at page 5.

Relevant Previous Council Action

The council approved the provision allowing courts to take a temporary exemption from the statewide rules regarding case management in 2013.[1] The initial request to amend the case management rules came from the Superior Court of Los Angeles County in December 2012 and was reiterated by the Superior Court of Sacramento County shortly thereafter. The courts sought relief from the current case management rules applicable to general civil cases.

The Superior Court of Los Angeles County particularly wanted the rules relaxed because of its plan—now in place—to remove all personal injury cases, of which it then had over 16,000 pending, from its individual calendar courts (in which general civil cases are assigned to a single judge for all purposes) to three master calendars.[2] The court sought relief from the mandatory case management rules because it had concluded that, with its then very limited resources, it could not continue to provide all general civil cases with the type of individualized case supervision and management envisioned by the rules of court.

While some commentators opposed the exemption in 2013, most were in favor, at least on a temporary basis. The council adopted the proposal at that time and three years later extended it, so that under rule 3.720,[3] a court currently may, by local rule, exempt types or categories of general civil cases from the mandatory case management rules. As the rule currently stands, this exemption applies only to cases filed before January 1, 2020.

Analysis/Rationale

Most courts throughout the state have not implemented a local exemption from the case management rules authorized by rule 3.720, and continue to provide the supervision and management of general civil cases through case management conferences as provided for in the state rules of court. At least six courts, however, have implemented local exemptions and suspended the mandated case management procedures for some or all of the general civil cases in their courts for at least part of the time when the exemption has been in effect:

- Superior Court of Los Angeles County currently exempts all limited cases from the case management procedures and all personal injury cases, and instead issues individual trial setting orders in each case. (Super. Ct. L.A. County, Local Rules, rule 3.23.)[4]

[1] The background of the prior action is set out in detail in Judicial Council of Cal., Advisory Com. Rep., *Civil Cases: Temporary Suspension of Case Management Rules (*Feb. 26, 2013), which may be found at http://www.courts.ca.gov/documents/jc-20130226-itemC.pdf.

[2] The court had concluded that these cases typically require fewer appearances and less direct case management than other types of general civil cases.

[3] Unless otherwise noted, all references to rules herein are to the California Rules of Court.

[4] This court reported to the advisory committee that the court finds the exemption of all personal injury cases from the case management rules particularly helpful in the court's efficient processing of those cases, now handled out of five master calendar departments.

- Superior Court of Monterey County exempted all civil cases for a period beginning in June 2013, instead holding a Case Progress Conference, with a statement required from the plaintiff only, 180 days after the filing of the complaint. That court is currently back to having the case management rules apply to all cases.
- Superior Court of Sacramento County currently exempts all limited cases and provides alternative procedures on the court's webpage for requesting trial setting and arbitration or mediation. (Super. Ct. Sacramento County, Local Rules, rule 2.21 and 2.52.)
- Superior Court of San Bernardino County previously exempted all general civil cases (all cases the case management rules apply to), but now exempts all unlimited and complex cases, holding a trial setting conference in place of a case management conference in those cases. (Super. Ct. San Bernardino County, Local Rules, rule 411.)[5]
- Superior Court of San Joaquin County currently exempts all limited cases from the case management rules. (Super. Ct. San Joaquin County, Local Rules, rule 3-102.A.6.)
- Superior Court of Shasta County exempts all limited and unlimited cases, and provides dates for settlement conference and trial, along with the assignment of a judicial officer, at the time of filing. (Super. Ct. Shasta County, Local Rules, rule 3.02.)[6]

The Commission on the Future of California's Court System considered the case management rules in making its recommendations to streamline civil litigation. Looking at how courts were making use of the emergency exemption, the commission recommended keeping the exemption in rule 3.720(b) in place permanently. In its Report to the Chief Justice (Futures Commission Report) the commission stated:

> Robust case management conferences, held early in the case, are useful tools for expediting the litigation process. [fn] However, resource and budget constraints can limit a court's ability to provide such conferences. Therefore, this recommendation retains existing case management rules. For limited cases, this approach allows judicial review of the case management conference statements without requiring the parties to attend a conference. (California Rules of Court, rule 3.720(e).)[[7]] In intermediate or unlimited cases, conferences should generally be held, unless the court decides not to do so. [fn: This approach would conform

[5] This court reports that it would like to continue using this alternate procedure for managing its civil cases.

[6] The Superior Court of Shasta County reported that the existence of this statutory exemption made it possible for that court to combine their two civil departments into one. Previously, each of the departments had a weekly CMC calendar, which the court realized would not be possible to continue when a single department was handling all aspects of all civil cases.

[7] The advisory committee notes that several courts apply this rule to all limited cases, providing by local rule that no case management conferences are held in such cases, although case management statements generally need to be filed. See, e.g., Super. Ct. Mendocino County, Local Rules, rule 2.1; and Super. Ct. Stanislaus County, Local Rules, rule 3.02.C.

to the current rule allowing for emergency exemptions from mandatory case management conferences. (See California Rules of Court, rule 3.720(b).)][8]

In light of this recommendation from the Futures Commission Report, and the directive from the Chief Justice to attempt to further those recommendations, the Civil and Small Claims Advisory Committee recommends that California Rules of Court, rule 3.720(b) be amended, to provide that the emergency suspension of the case management rules currently set to sunset in 2020 be made permanent. Specifically, the amendment will permit any court's local suspension of the case management rules to apply so long as the suspension, and the alternative procedures for trial setting, etc., are made clear in the local rules. This proposal will permit those courts that have already made use of this exemption to continue to do so and will permit additional courts to invoke the exemption if they so choose.

Comments

Four comments were received, all in favor of allowing the emergency exemptions to the rule to become permanent. Commenters were the Committee on the Administration of Justice of the California Lawyers Association, the Orange County Bar Association, and the Superior Courts of Los Angeles and San Diego Counties. The Los Angeles court noted that it was making use of the exemption in its court.

A chart containing all the comments received, and proposed committee responses, is attached at pages 6–8.

Alternatives considered

The committee considered not recommending that the exemptions be made permanent but concluded that, in light of the recommendation in the Futures Commission Report and because several courts are currently using the exemptions as a way to manage cases and want to continue doing so, the authority for the voluntary exemptions should be continued.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

This proposal should not raise any costs or place any operational impacts on the courts. The ability to exempt cases from the case management rules would remain discretionary, and only be used if a court determined that it would be of some financial benefit to the court.

Executive Summary

The Criminal Law Advisory Committee recommends adopting a new standard of judicial administration to provide guidance to judges and court administrators on implementing vacatur relief under Penal Code section 236.14, which provides for a petition process to vacate an arrest or conviction for a nonviolent offense that occurred while the petitioner was a victim of human trafficking.

Recommendation

The Criminal Law Advisory Committee recommends that the Judicial Council adopt California Standards of Judicial Administration, standard 4.15, effective January 1, 2020, to:

1. Provide guidance on procedures to consolidate hearings to vacate multiple arrests and convictions that occurred in the same county;

2. Recommend measures to preserve the confidentiality of the petition, related filings, court records, and the petitioner's identity in proceedings accessible to the public;

3. Recommend an initial court review period prior to setting a hearing;

4. Recommend that courts provide timely notification of their decisions to relevant parties; and

5. Identify additional relief the court should consider when granting a petition for vacatur relief.

The text of the new standard is attached at pages 6–8.

Relevant Previous Council Action

In the spring of 2018, the Criminal Law Advisory Committee circulated a proposal (see Link B) for two new optional forms in response to legislation establishing Penal Code section 236.14. The committee received eight comments in response. Two of the commenters agreed with the proposal; the other six raised significant issues and proposed various solutions, some of which were contrary to each other. Many of the issues arose from the absence of statutory guidance on implementing procedures, including procedures for multijurisdictional petitions, and concerns about the use of potentially incriminating information in the petition by prosecuting agencies or law enforcement.

In response, the committee chair appointed a working group of subject-matter experts from the committee to review the comments and suggest options to the full committee. After a thorough review, the working group concluded that statewide forms were limited in their ability to provide guidance on the implementation of section 236.14 and considered whether a rule of court would be more effective. The committee subsequently decided that a standard of judicial administration—a nonbinding guideline or goal recommended by the Judicial Council (Cal. Rules of Court, rule 1.5(c)) —was more appropriate at this time because of the absence of definitive legal authority on some of the issues related to the petition process. The committee also decided to move forward with the proposal due to the high level of public interest in guidance on the vacatur process.

Relatedly, at its September 2018 meeting, the Judicial Council approved two forms recommended by the Family and Juvenile Law Committee to implement section 236.14 for minors, Request to Expunge Arrest or Vacate Adjudication (Human Trafficking Victim) (form JV-748) and Order After Request to Expunge Arrest or Vacate Adjudication (Human Trafficking Victim) (form JV-749).

Analysis/Rationale

The Legislature enacted two criminal record clearing statutes for human trafficking victims in recent years. In 2014, section 1203.49 was added to the Penal Code, authorizing a defendant convicted of misdemeanor solicitation or prostitution under Penal Code section 647(b), who has completed a term of probation for that conviction, to petition the court for dismissal relief by establishing through clear and convincing evidence that the conviction was the result of their status as a victim of human trafficking.

Effective January 1, 2017, Penal Code section 236.14 established a petition process to vacate a conviction or adjudication for a person who has been arrested for or convicted of a nonviolent offense while a victim of human trafficking, and for the sealing and destruction of the petitioner's arrest and court records.

To obtain relief under Penal Code section 236.14, the petition is required to establish: (1) the petitioner was a human trafficking victim at the time the nonviolent crime was committed, (2) the commission of the crime was a direct result of being a human trafficking victim, and that (3) the petitioner is engaged in a good faith effort to distance himself or herself from the human trafficking scheme. (Pen. Code, § 236.14(g).) The court is authorized, on making specified findings, to expunge the arrests and to vacate the convictions. (Ibid.)

Section 236.14 includes both discretionary decisions, such as whether a court may consolidate into one hearing a petition with multiple convictions from different jurisdictions, and mandatory requirements, such as not disclosing the petitioner's full name at a hearing accessible to the public. However, the statute does not consistently specify criteria for courts to consider or procedures to follow. The proposed standard aims to provide courts with further guidance to implement section 236.14.

Policy implications

The committee recommends a standard of judicial administration due to the high level of public interest in receiving guidance on implementation of section 236.14. Two of the eleven commenters recommended that the Council, at a later point, adopt mandatory rules of court and statewide forms. However, the committee determined that statewide forms would be limited in their ability to provide guidance on implementation, and that the mandatory provisions of a rule of court would be premature at this time.

The committee received a significant number of comments from organizations serving or led by human trafficking victims, recommending additional guidelines intended to ease the vacatur process for petitioners. While the committee acknowledges the hardships facing human trafficking victims, the committee declines to recommend additional standards at this time absent a legislative directive or judicial interpretation. The committee believes it is prudent for the standard to have a limited scope at this time.

Comments

This proposal circulated for comment from April 11 to June 10, 2019. Eleven comments were received. Three commenters agreed with the proposal, four commenters agreed with the proposal if modified, and four commenters did not indicate a position. The committee revised the proposed standard in response to some of the comments.

Consolidating arrests and convictions from multiple jurisdictions

Four commenters requested the standard include a procedure to consolidate hearings requesting vacatur relief for arrests and convictions from multiple jurisdictions, with the responsibility for coordinating consolidation tasked to courts or law enforcement. In developing the standard, the committee carefully considered multiple options regarding the consolidation of multijurisdictional petitions and decided not to develop and recommend statewide standards because, unlike many other court actions involving multiple jurisdictions, Penal Code section 236.14 does not identify who is responsible for the procedural steps to consolidate a multijurisdictional petition. The committee declined to recommend courts take on this role absent a legislative directive.

Courts to take a victim-centered, trauma-informed approach
Five commenters requested that the standard promote a victim-centered, trauma-informed approach by the courts. The committee determined that the comment was more appropriately addressed through judicial training and education and declined to include the recommendation in the standard.

Consolidating adult and juvenile petitions:
Three commenters requested the standard include guidance on consolidating adult and juvenile petitions. The committee declined to develop standards on consolidating adult and juvenile petitions at this time due to the limited scope of the proposed standard.

Additional statutory relief:
The committee received comments requesting additional standards based on the statute, such as allowing petitioners to appear by electronic means and stating that petitioner's statement alone may provide a sufficient basis for granting vacatur relief. The committee determined that while these additional provisions had a statutory basis, some related procedural elements were not clear. The committee decided not to incorporate them into the standard without seeking further public comment.

The committee also received comments requesting a standard directing courts to consider additional relief that will carry out the purposes of the statute. The committee accepted the recommendation and amended the standard.

Notification of probation:
Three commenters requested adding language directing the court to notify probation if the court terminated probation in conjunction with granting relief. The committee determined that the court was in the best position to notify probation and amended the standard.

Setting a hearing date upon filing of the petition:
One commenter expressed concern that a petition could languish if a hearing date was not set upon filing. The committee determined that section 236.14 does not require a hearing if the petition is unopposed and the court does not otherwise deem one necessary, so that setting a hearing date after the initial court review period promotes judicial economy and efficiency.

Specifying nonexclusivity of factors:
A commenter recommended that in the portions of the standard where the court is given guidance on factors to consider, that it be specified that those factors are nonexclusive. The committee agreed with the comment and amended the standard.

Other comments:
The proposal also received one comment recommending that the standard state that documentation of a petitioner's status as a victim of human trafficking issued by federal, state, or local agencies can be considered despite evidentiary hearsay rules. The committee declined the recommendation, finding that section 236.14(m) provided similar guidance.

One commenter suggested amending subdivision (e)(3) of the standard, "Recall or return of court fines and fees, if paid," to include fees paid to collection agencies. The committee declined the recommendation, finding the circulated language sufficient.

One commenter recommended adding a subparagraph to subdivision (e), "Additional relief," to include sealing of the records in the possession of the prosecutorial agencies involved in the arrest or conviction. The committee declined the recommendation, finding it to be a substantive change that would require public comment.

Alternatives considered

As noted, the committee circulated a proposal for optional forms in 2018; it also considered proposing a rule of court. However, absent more definite legal authority, the committee decided that a standard of judicial administration—a nonbinding guideline or goal recommended by the Judicial Council—was more appropriate at this time.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

The proposed standard is nonbinding. It is intended to provide guidance to courts on recommended procedures to implement Penal Code section 236.14. If implemented by a court, expected costs are limited to training and possible case management system updates. A court may save costs if it consolidates hearings or grants relief without a hearing.

Standard 4.15 of the Standards of Judicial Administration is adopted, effective January 1, 2020, to read:

Standard 4.15. Vacatur relief under Penal Code section 236.14

(a) Request to consolidate hearings for arrests and convictions that occurred in the same county

(1) The court should allow the filing of a single petition requesting vacatur relief under Penal Code section 236.14(a) for multiple arrests and convictions that occurred in the same county.

(2) The court should favor consolidating hearings for multiple arrests and convictions that occurred in the same county.

(3) The court may require the following documentation before granting a request to consolidate hearings:

(A) An agreement between the petitioner and all of the involved state or local prosecutorial agencies, as defined in Penal Code section 236.14(c), to consolidate the hearings;

(B) Documentation that states whether any of the involved state or local prosecutorial agencies, as defined in Penal Code section 236.14(c), intend to file an opposition to the petition; and

(C) Proof of service of the request to consolidate hearings on all of the involved state or local prosecutorial agencies, as defined in Penal Code section 236.14(c).

(4) The court should consider the following nonexclusive list of factors when deciding whether to consolidate hearings:

(A) The common questions of fact or law, if any;

(B) The convenience of parties, witnesses, and counsel;

(C) The efficient utilization of judicial facilities and staff resources;

(D) The calendar of the court; and

(E) The disadvantages of duplicative and inconsistent orders.

(b) Confidentiality

(1) The court should designate the petition and related filings and court records as confidential.

(2) At the hearing or any other proceeding accessible to the public, the court should consider implementing procedures consistent with Penal Code section 236.14(q), such as ordering the identity of the petitioner to be either "Jane Doe" or "John Doe."

(c) Initial court review and orders

(1) After 45 days from the filing of the petition, the court should conduct an initial review of the case. Concurrent with granting or denying a request to consolidate hearings, the court should:

(A) Grant relief without a hearing when the prosecuting agency files no opposition within 45 days from the date of service and the court finds that the petitioner meets the requirements for relief;

(B) Set a hearing date if an opposition is filed or a hearing is otherwise warranted; or

(C) Deny the petition without prejudice if the petitioner fails to provide the information required by Penal Code section 236.14(b).

(d) Notification

(1) The court should timely notify the petitioner and prosecuting agency of its decisions under subdivision (c)(1).

(2) The court should timely notify the relevant probation department of any decision to terminate probation.

(e) Additional relief

When granting the petition for vacatur relief under Penal Code section 236.14(a), the court should consider ordering the following additional relief, including, but not limited to:

(1) Sealing or destruction of probation or other postconviction supervision agency records related to the conviction;

(2) Expungement of DNA profiles and destruction of DNA samples, if they qualify under Penal Code section 299;

(3) Recall or return of court fines and fees, if paid;

(4) Sealing of the court file, if warranted under the factors in rule 2.550(d); and

(5) Additional relief that will carry out the purposes of Penal Code section 236.14.

Bet Tzedek Legal Services by Elyssa Caplan Staff Attorney, Clean Slate Project Los Angeles, California	AM	*Bet Tzedek provides free legal assistance to eligible low-income residents of Los Angeles County, regardless of their racial, religious, or ethnic background. Bet Tzedek's Employment Rights Project litigates and advocates on behalf of human trafficking survivors. In 2018, Bet Tzedek launched the Clean Slate Project to assist survivors of trafficking in filing vacatur petitions. This sub-population of our clients isdirectly impacted by the Judicial Council proposal at issue. Thus, Bet Tzedek's experience in creating and implementing the Clean Slate Project gives us critical information about the real-life experiences of trafficking victims and how the proposed comments and suggested implementations will impact survivors as they navigate the vacatur process. To date, Bet Tzedek has found that securing this relief for survivors is logistically challenging and time- consuming, and that given current procedural hurdles, many trafficking survivors are not willing to pursue this form of relief. Bet Tzedek hopes that the Judicial Council's continued work on this issue will put into place the framework necessary so that survivors are afforded meaningful access to the vacatur process. Response to Request for Specific Comments In 2018, Bet Tzedek provided substantive comments to the Judicial Council when it first requested comments on Penal Code 236.14. Bet Tzedek was disappointed to see that the Judicial Council chose not to adopt the standard forms it proposed in 2018 and that the Council chose not to adopt rules of the Court. Nevertheless, Bet Tzedek	No response required. No response required.

			would like to thank the Judicial Council for continuing to review 236.14 filings and procedures in 2019. Bet Tzedek believes that taking the initial step of providing guidance to the Courts through the California Standards of Judicial Administration indicates movement in a positive direction. Bet Tzedek believes the outlined guidance, with some additional provisions that we propose below, is an important step toward allowing victims of human trafficking to seek relief under Penal Code 236.14. However, to be clear, in response to the Council's first specific request for comment on the question "does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose," the answer is no. Bet Tzedek believes that this proposed guidance should be viewed by the Judicial Council as a first step only and encourages the committee of appointed experts to continue the work of promulgating forms and rules for 236.14 in 2020 and beyond. Penal Code 236.14 is a complex provision with statutory language that was designed to be more fully developed at various implementation stages. Given these complexities, it makes sense that full implementation by the Judicial Council would be a multi-year process informed by on-the-ground learning. Additionally, Bet Tzedek wants to directly respond to the Committee's decision to propose a nonbinding Standard of Judicial Administration rather than a mandatory Rule of Court. Bet Tzedek believes that at this stage of learning on 236.14, implementation of a Standard of Judicial Administration may be appropriate. However, it urges the Court to work toward standardized forms	The committee intends to continue tracking further developments around the implementation of Penal Code section 236.14, including whether rules of court or forms may be appropriate at a later time.

			and mandatory court rules based on learning that Bet Tzedek hopes the Council will engage in during the next few years. To this end, Bet Tzedek's first recommendation is that the Judicial Council ensure that the committee of experts convened to address Judicial Council's implementation of Penal Code 236.14 continue, with the Committee's end goal being to publish final forms and mandatory rules for 236.14. Further, Bet Tzedek requests that attorneys and/or judges with expertise in human trafficking cases and the complex trauma involved be appointed to this ongoing Committee. Therefore, Bet Tzedek requests that as the Committee continues its work, the list of those appointed to the Committee be released, the Council solicit input about additional appropriate members, and that it adds additional members if needed. Consolidation Across Different Jurisdictions Bet Tzedek strongly urges the Judicial Council to reconsider the Committee's position that it was uncertain if "the authority for consolidation in section 236.14(e) was sufficient, on its own, to transfer jurisdiction of an offense that was adjudicated in one county to the Superior Court in another county for dismissal, merely on the agreement of the involved parties." Under 236.14(e), the Legislature gave explicit guidance to the Courts that petitions can be consolidated. Given the explicit statutory language that allows for this in 236.14(e), the authority granted by the statute is clear. It is merely the process that must	A full list of advisory committee members is available here: https://www.courts.ca.gov/documents/crimcom.pdf More information about nominations is available here: https://www.courts.ca.gov/4650.htm The committee will track further judicial interpretation or legislative direction about the process required to consolidate multi-county petitions.

			be developed by the Court to receive the court files and the agreements of the parties for consolidation. Considering the complexity of the process of attempting to vacate convictions from various counties, Bet Tzedek asks the Judicial Council Committee to review its conclusion "not to develop statewide standards on the consolidation of hearings for arrests and convictions that occurred in different counties." The Committee's own assessment and discussion highlights the complexities of consolidating petitions. As the committee explains, "[i]t would be difficult operationally for one petition to include multiple arrests and convictions from different jurisdictions because of the challenges of accurately notifying, tracking filing, and recording the order in each court's files and case management systems, given that the types of convictions and decision on vacatur relief in each case may differ ...." It is exactly because of such difficulties and the complexity of the process that the Judicial Council's guidance is necessary. For example, while Bet Tzedek's Clean Slate Project is just beginning, each of our current clients have arrests and/or convictions in multiple jurisdictions. In other words, none of our clients have convictions in only one jurisdiction, which serves to illustrate the importance of consolidation best practices to allow survivors meaningful access to this relief. At present, clients must travel to multiple courthouses and engage in multiple hearings - each presenting an opportunity for re-traumatization. This is costly and time-consuming	The committee carefully considered multiple options regarding statewide standards on the consolidation of multi-jurisdiction petitions and concluded that it was not appropriate here because, unlike many other court actions involving multiple jurisdictions, Penal Code section 236.14 does not identify who is responsible for or authorized to take the procedural steps to consolidate a multi-county petition. The committee acknowledges the hardships facing human trafficking victims but declines to recommend courts take on this role absent a legislative directive.

			for both petitioners as well as the court system, and most importantly, does not best serve these clients with a trauma-informed perspective. Bet Tzedek hopes this information will help to further educate the Committee on this difficult issue and inspire creative solutions from the Judicial Council that best support victims. Furthermore, the authority given the Courts to consolidate matters is an explicit recognition of the complex and very special nature of trafficking crimes and the Legislature's concern with the increased trauma on victims as well as the costs to the Courts in hearing multiple petitions.[1] The Committee's decision therefore fails to consider who should bear the burden of dealing with those complexities. Should it be the Courts and Law Enforcement Agencies, who criminalized trafficking victims? Or should it be the petitioner, who because of his or her victimization now must go through the arduous process of vacating arrests and/or convictions, often in multiple jurisdictions throughout California? As noted above, the legislature has already answered the question: the Courts and Law Enforcement should bear the burden, not the victims. [1] In the fiscal analysis of SB 823, the Committee highlights that if the court must hold a hearing .... for illustrative purposes, 100 such hearings would result in a cost of $167,000 for two-hour hearings, and $670,000 for full-day hearings. Given the cost to the courts in holding multiple hearings, it behooves Judicial Council to create a streamlined process for consolidation, even if it initially entails a financial investment into a new system. Suggested language: Add as new (a) (a) Requests to consolidate arrests and convictions that occurred in California Jurisdictions (1) The court shall allow the filing of a single petition requesting vacatur relief under Penal Code Section 236.14(a) for multiple arrests and convictions that occurred anywhere in the jurisdiction of California courts in accord with the explicit statutory authority granted in 236.14(e). This shall be accomplished through a process that does not create undue burden for the petitioner but asks the Courts to ensure that files are properly transferred when necessary and that the involved state or local prosecutorial agencies, as defined in Penal Code section 236.14(c), timely respond to request for stipulation for consolidation. Bet Tzedek appreciates Judicial Council's review of the authority that in other contexts requires several procedural steps to transfer a case. These procedures place the burden on the petitioner. However, there are two important factors that make the transfer and consolidation process distinct for trafficking survivors. The first is that the petitioner is a victim. The second is that there is an explicit statutory process outlined, while in	The committee declines to make the suggested changes for reasons stated above. Please see response above.

			other provisions, no such statutory process exists.[2] Therefore, the other situations are not strong precedent or comparable contexts. Bet Tzedek proposes that the Judicial Council consider that if the court has the ability to timely notify the petitioner and prosecuting agency of its decisions under subdivision (c)(l), as is recommended in the Proposed Standards of Judicial Administration, then the Courts too can be provided guidance on how they can notify the appropriate prosecuting agencies of the desire to consolidate the cases and provide a timeline for response. Therefore, Bet Tzedek proposes the following updated language to (c)(2). [2] Bet Tzedek believes the statutory authority for inter-county probation transfers under Penal Code 1203.9 and its related Rules of Court (as well as other California Rules for Change of Venue) considered by the court merely serve to highlight that what is proposed and legislated in Penal Code 236.14 is completely different and not at all in line with the requirements of these provisions where an explicit process was outlined in the statute. Suggested Language: (2) The court must timely notify the petitioner and prosecuting agency of its decision under subdivisions (c)(l). If the petitioner has requested consolidation of arrests and/or convictions that occurred in the same county or other California jurisdictions, the Court should implement a consolidation process without placing an undue burden on the victim	The committee declines this suggested change for reasons stated above.

			that streamlines the courts' decision-making on this issue in a timely manner. Factors to Consider When Consolidating Hearings Bet Tzedek appreciates the guidance provided by the Judicial Council in section (a)(4), which lists factors the court can consider when deciding whether to consolidate a hearing. To ensure the court properly considers the re-traumatization and re-triggering that can occur for victims in this process, Bet Tzedek suggests the below additions. Suggested Language: To (a)(4) add: (F) Promotion of a victim-centered, trauma-informed approach (G) The interest of the Court in creating a just result Request to Consolidate Arrests and Convictions that Occurred in the Same County Bet Tzedek was happy to see that Judicial Council suggested in its proposed guidance that a court "should allow the filing of a single petition .... for multiple arrests and convictions that occurred in the same county." Bet Tzedek fully supports the proposed guidance in (a)(l) and (a)(2) but hopes the "should" can be changed to "shall." As Bet Tzedek indicated in its 2018 comments, the approach proposed by the Council at that time only allowed courts to consolidate the hearings on separate petitions into one hearing. The option of	The committee declines the suggestion, as these concerns would be better addressed through judicial training and education. Per California Rules of Court, rule 1.5(c), the nonbinding nature of standards is indicated by the use of "should" instead of the mandatory "must" used in the rules. The committee declines the suggestion as a standard of judicial administration provides a more prudent approach overall at this time.

			consolidating the hearing, but not the filing of the petition, defeated the intent of Penal Code 236.14. Although Bet Tzedek supports the Council's suggested language in (a)(l) and (a)(2), Bet Tzedek believes the guidance outlined in (a)(3)(A-B) should be removed. Section (a)(3)(A-B) indicates a court can require (1) an agreement between the petitioner and ALL (emphasis added) the involved state or local prosecutorial agencies to consolidate the hearing or (2) documentation that states whether any of the involved state or local prosecutorial agencies intend to file an opposition. The proposed standard of judicial administration in (a)(3)(A-B) suggests a court may require this documentation but provides no additional guidance as to how the court should secure such documentation. A lack of any guidance in the proposed Standard of Judicial Administration means that the petitioner in these cases is likely to be asked to secure this documentation prior to a consolidation being granted. This places an unreasonable burden on the petitioner to conduct extensive outreach and creates a situation where it would have been better for the victim petitioner to file petitions in numerous different courts as compared to trying to negotiate these agreements. If the Council keeps the guidance as proposed, advocates are in the same place they have been for the last two years where it is impossible to know whether it is best to advise a victim petitioner to file for consolidation if the arrests and convictions occurred in the same county or file in each of the courts, as the determination is still based on the responsiveness of agencies outside the petitioner	The committee declines to recommend that a specific entity take on this role absent a legislative directive.

			victim's control. The proposed Standard of Judicial Administration gives the Court no additional information on how to best secure this information and clarifying this process is essential to the effective implementation of 236.14. Under Penal Code 236.14, petitioners are responsible only for serving petitions on the state and/or local prosecuting agency that was responsible for the conviction or had jurisdiction over the arrest. The statutory language in Penal Code 236.14 specifically requires that: "The petition for relief and supporting documentation shall be served on the state or local prosecutorial agency that obtained the conviction for which vacatur is sought or with jurisdiction over charging decisions with regard to the arrest. The state or local prosecutorial agency shall have 45 days from the date of receipt of service to respond to the petition for relief." This notice process and certification from the petitioner should be enough to apprise the relevant agencies of the filing of the petitions if a petitioner provides proof of service that occurred 45 days prior to the consolidation request. As is suggested in (a)(3)(C), a court should be able to find this sufficient to consolidate the arrests and convictions in the same county with proof of this notice. Bet Tzedek presumes that our law enforcement partners will not find this sufficient, but we would request the Council shift this burden to the Courts and law enforcement agencies and develop a	The committee declines to recommend statewide standards on this issue at this time absent further legislative direction.

			concrete solution for how a streamlined agreement between the parties can be secured. Until then, Bet Tzedek urges the Council to adopt (a)(l-2) and (a)(3)(C) for its Standards of Judicial Administration and suggest a process for the (a)(3)(C) provision. Bet Tzedek defers to Judicial Council's expertise to suggest language in this area. Bet Tzedek recommends updating the proposed language as highlighted below. Suggested Language: Remove (a)(3)(A-B) and replace with an updated victim-centered guidance on a process to secure consent for consolidation between parties in a streamlined manner. Update (a)(3)(C) with the following language: (A) ~~(C)~~ Proof of service of the request to consolidate hearings 45 days prior to consolidating the hearings, on the involved state or local prosecutorial agencies, as defined in Penal Code section 236.14(c). Juvenile Petitions As it did in 2018, Bet Tzedek again requests that, since many trafficking survivors have both juvenile and adult arrest and conviction records, the Judicial Council further examine how the process can be better coordinated and streamlined with the juvenile court system. No additional guidance was provided by the Council on this issue. For example, Bet Tzedek would propose clarifying that juvenile arrests can be cleared	The committee declines to make the suggested changes for reasons stated above. The committee declines to recommend statewide standards on coordinating adult and juvenile petitions at this time.

			through the adult petition process and do not have to be done through the juvenile court. In addition, it would be beneficial to propose a system that enables courts to coordinate the sealing of juvenile convictions at the same time as adult petitions. Confidentiality Bet Tzedek is appreciative of the Council's proposed standard to protect the confidentiality of the petition, related filings, court records and confidentiality of the petitioner's identity at the hearing or any other proceeding accessible to the public. Providing this guidance lets Bet Tzedek and other advocates assure their clients that this process is confidential from the very beginning, easing the practical and emotional burdens on survivors when they choose to file vacatur petitions. Bet Tzedek believes the proposed guidance is consistent with the explicit statutory language and legislative intent and we agree with the guidance. However, Bet Tzedek believes that given the clear legislative language in 236.14, the Judicial Council could propose a rule, not merely a Standard for Judicial Administration. Bet Tzedek worries that without a court rule or standardized forms that instruct that the petition and related court records should be designated confidential at filing, errors will occur, and petitions filed will not receive this appropriate status. Without a rule or court forms, the burden again falls on the petitioner to advocate to make sure individual courts follow the proposed guidance in the Standards of Judicial Administration.	No response required. Per California Rules of Court, rule 1.5(c), the nonbinding nature of standards is indicated by the use of "should" instead of the mandatory "must" used in the rules. The committee declines the suggestion as a standard of judicial administration provides a more prudent approach overall at this time.

			Initial Court Review and Orders Bet Tzedek thanks the Judicial Council for proposing guidance in (c)(l)(A) to the courts that emphasizes that if the prosecuting agencies file no opposition within 45 days from the date of service and the petition meets the requirement, relief can be granted without a hearing. Bet Tzedek believes that guidance in (c)(l)(A-B) is consistent with the statutory and legislative intent. Given the trauma that trafficking survivors face in returning to court after they have been arrested and convicted during the trafficking experience, Bet Tzedek emphasizes how important it is that courts understand and be trained on this as standard practice. Bet Tzedek further emphasizes that if a Court sets a hearing, it should proceed in a trauma-informed and victim-centered manner, given the subject of these petitions.	The committee believes that these concerns would be better addressed through judicial training and education.
			Bet Tzedek believes that because of the difficulty victims face in appearing in court, proposed guidance should also highlight the explicit statutory authority to appear telephonically and provide courts additional encouragement to proactively notify petitioner of this right if a hearing date is set. This is important because many trafficking victims have left the state of their trafficking for safety reasons or trauma reasons and coming back can be a barrier to applying for relief.	While this suggestion is based on section 236.14, the committee determined that some some related procedural elements are not clear. Accordingly, the committee decided not to incorporate them into the standard without seeking public comment.
			Other additional guidance the Judicial Council could provide in its Standard of Judicial	While this suggestion is based on section 236.14, the committee determined that some some related procedural elements are not clear.

			Administration regards the documentation required by the petitioner to meet the requirements for relief. The statutory language of Penal Code 236.14(m) is clear that "Official documentation shall not be required for the issuance of an order described in subdivision (a)." Since trafficking by its nature is a hidden crime, and the exploitation of a victim can go on for years without a victim being identified, often a victim petitioner seeking relief under 236.14 will have no documentation except his or her personal statement about victimization and the crimes he or she was forced to commit. Since part of the legislative intent of 236.14 is to correct a mistake of the justice system in arresting and prosecuting a victim, it is important to highlight to Courts that victims' statements alone are sufficient proof for a petition to be granted. Finally, although no official documentation is required, the Standards of Judicial Administration should make clear that documentation of a petitioner's status as a victim of human trafficking issued by federal, state, or local agencies can be considered despite hearsay rules given the statutory language in 236.14(m). Suggested Language: Initial court review and orders Move (2) to (4) and insert (2) No official documentation is required to support a petition for relief under Penal Code 236.14. The court should find, if the petitioner's written statement of the facts of the matter	Accordingly, the committee decided not to incorporate them into the standard without seeking public comment. The committee declines the suggested change as section 236.14(m) provides similar guidance. The committee declines to make the suggested changes for reasons stated above.

			is credible, that his or her statement alone is sufficient to find that the petitioner meets the requirements for relief. (3) A court should review any official documentation of a petitioner's status as a victim of human trafficking issued by federal, state or local agencies in accord with 236.14(m), despite court hearsay rules. Finally, although Bet Tzedek thanks Judicial Council for providing clear guidance that the courts must timely notify petitioner and prosecuting agency of its decisions, Bet Tzedek is disappointed that no guidance is provided to help ensure that courts notify the relevant agencies of a vacatur order so that the petitioner victim's records are cleared in a timely manner. One of the greatest hurdles for petitioners seeking this relief is ensuring that vacatur orders are implemented, and guidance from Judicial Council is necessary. Bet Tzedek defers to Judicial Council expertise in suggesting language in this area but believes that any enacted Standard of Judicial Administration adopted must provide this additional guidance to the courts. Bet Tzedek suggests that a prescriptive 30-day timeframe be required. Additional Relief Bet Tzedek thanks Judicial Council for its recommendations for additional relief listed under section (d) of the proposed standard. Bet Tzedek is especially thankful for the	The committee's position is that the statutory language is sufficient and declines to modify the proposal as suggested. Per California Rules of Court, rule 1.5(c), the nonbinding nature of standards is indicated by the use of "should" instead of the mandatory "must" used in the rules. The committee declines the suggestion as a standard of judicial guidance that the court may recall or return court fines and fees if paid. For victims struggling with rebuilding their lives, a court proactively returning fines and fees can help victims feel like the system is finally correcting a past wrong. This guidance is especially important given the Supreme Court decision in Nelson v. Colorado, 137 S. Ct. 1249 (2017). In this case, the Supreme Court held that any fees, fines, or surcharges collected must be returned to an individual once their conviction is vacated or they are exonerated. Given this Supreme Court decision, Bet Tzedek suggests that the term "may" be changed to "shall." Bet Tzedek suggests the following additions to the list of additional relief under section (d). Termination of Probation 236.14 allows victims to petition for relief while currently on probation. Therefore, if the petition is granted, Bet Tzedek suggests that in addition to the court sealing or destroying probation or post-conviction supervision agency records, the court also be instructed to notify the relevant probation office of the termination of probation after the grant of this relief. Suggested Language: (d) Additional relief (1) Notify probation agency of termination of probation and sealing or destruction of probation or other post-convictions supervision agency records related to the convictions.	administration provides a more prudent approach overall at this time. The committee agrees with this suggestion and has modified the proposed standard accordingly.

			Reguest for Additional Action Court May Take The intent of the Legislature and the clear statutory language of Penal Code 236.14(r) allows a Court to grant "additional relief to carry out the purposes of this section." This explicit language should be included in Judicial Council's Standard of Administration. Suggested Language (d) Additional relief (5) Any additional relief the Court believes carries out the purposes of Penal Code 236.14.	The committee agrees with this suggestion and has modified the proposed standard accordingly.
2.	Coalition to Abolish Slavery & Trafficking (CAST) by Stephanie Richard, Policy & Legal Services Director Los Angeles, California	AM	*Founded in 1998 in Los Angeles, California, CAST was one of the first organizations in the United States to provide comprehensive social and legal services for survivors of human trafficking. [I]n response to the Council's first specific request for comment on the question "Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose?", our answer is an unequivocal "no." This proposed guidance should only be viewed as the Council's initial effort to address this admittedly complex issue. We encourage the Committee of appointed experts not to abandon work on developing forms and rules for implementing Cal PC 236.14, recognizing that the statute itself contemplates that its provisions will likely need to be implemented in stages. Given this reality, it makes sense that full implementation of the law by the Judicial Council will be a multi-year process, continuously informed by the experiences of survivor petitioners and their advocates, as well as the Courts and Law Enforcement Agencies (LEAs).	Please see the responses to the comments of Bet Tzedek above.

			CAST also wants to take this opportunity to directly respond to the Committee's decision to propose a non-binding Standard of Judicial Administration rather than a mandatory rule of court. While CAST believes that at this stage in the process of Cal PC 236.14 implementation, a Standard of Judicial Administration may be the appropriate vehicle. However, it urges the Council to work towards standardized forms and mandatory court rules based on knowledge acquired during the next few years. To this end, CAST's first recommendation is that the Judicial Council ensure that the designated Committee of experts continues its work with the ultimate goal being to publish final forms and court rules for implementing Cal PC 236.14. CAST further requests that attorneys and/or judges with expertise in human trafficking cases and the associated physical and emotional trauma endured by survivors be appointed to the Committee. CAST also requests that the list of committee members be publicly released and that the Council solicits input from stakeholders regarding additional appropriate members, adding them to the Committee as needed. Consolidation Across Different Jurisdictions Starting with the premise that the Judicial Council should commit to a long-term goal of developing forms and additional court rules/ guidance, CAST makes two requests of the Committee of experts. First, that the Committee review its conclusion that "[i]t would be difficult operationally for one petition to include multiple arrests and convictions	A full list of advisory committee members is available here: https://www.courts.ca.gov/documents/crimcom.pdf More information about the nominations process is available here: https://www.courts.ca.gov/4650.htm Please see the responses to the comments of Bet Tzedek above.

			from different jurisdictions because of the challenges of accurately notifying, tracking filing, and recording the order in each court's files and case management systems, given that the types of convictions and decision on vacatur relief in each case may differ…." Second, that the Committee revisit its decision "not to develop statewide standards on the consolidation of hearings for arrests and convictions that occurred in different counties." It is exactly this complex process where the Judicial Council's guidance is absolutely necessary.
			The Committee's own assessment/discussion highlights the complexities of consolidating petitions. What the Committee fails to address is who should bear the burden of dealing with those complexities. Should it be the Courts and LEAs, who initially failed to identify a victim of trafficking and, as a result, arrested and criminalized the petitioner? Or should it be the victim petitioner who, solely as a result of this victimization, must now shoulder the arduous process of clearing his or her record often in multiple jurisdictions throughout California?	Please see the responses to the comments of Bet Tzedek above.
			*Under Cal PC 236.14(e), the Legislature explicitly authorized the Courts to allow consolidated petitions. It did so based on the often multi- jurisdictional records of trafficking victims combined with the unique nature of vacating convictions in the trafficking context, where the basis for the relief is that the defendant was not a	Please see the responses to the comments of Bet Tzedek above.

			criminal but a victim.[3] Our own data found that human trafficking victims are arrested seven times more frequently for activity directly related to their trafficking than for non-trafficking activity. Sadly, the records show that some victims had been arrested 30 or 40 times in only a few years under their trafficker's control. [3] In its initial comments, CAST highlighted to the Council the disproportionately large number of crimes for which trafficking victims are arrested or convicted solely as a result of their trafficking status. The National Survivor Network, in a survey of its membership, reports that 40% of the respondents were arrested and/or convicted of crimes 9 times of more while they were being trafficked. In light of the foregoing comments, CAST strongly urges the Judicial Council to revisit its determination of "uncertainty" as to whether "the authority for consolidation in section 236.14(e) was sufficient, on its own, to transfer jurisdiction of an offense that was adjudicated in one county to the Superior Court in another county for dismissal, merely on the agreement of the involved parties." Given the explicit statutory language in Cal PC 236.14(e) allowing for this process, there is no room for ambiguity. The authority granted by the statute is clear. It is only the process that must be developed by the Court to receive the court files and the agreements of the parties for consolidation. In fact, we have had at least two courts consolidate cases from multiple jurisdictions under the explicit authority provided in Cal PC 236.14(e). Thus, the	Please see the responses to the comments of Bet Tzedek above.

			Judicial Council's conclusion that courts may not have this authority is inconsistent with judicial practice. Moreover, as the original proponent for this language, and as the relevant legislative history demonstrates, CAST is confident that thinking creatively, the Judicial Council can design a system for consolidating vacatur cases that is well within the statutory authority provided.[4] [4] The June 20, 2016 Assembly Committee on Public Safety Analysis highlights how SB 823 "takes a novel approach of setting up a statutory framework for vacating convictions for a particular class of individuals. Essentially, this bill creates parity between human trafficking victims and those individuals who are found factually innocent of crimes they never committed." Further, it highlights how the motion is novel in that "the remedy is actually more forceful than an expungement. Unlike an expungement, getting a conviction vacated effectively means that the conviction never occurred. Under current California law and criminal procedure, motions to vacate a conviction are generally done through the appellate process." Indeed, Cal PC 236.14(e) as drafted encourages the Council to exercise creativity in developing associated forms and rules precisely because this is "first of its kind" authority granted to the courts based on the very special nature of trafficking crimes and the Legislature's concern with the increased trauma on victims, as well as the costs to the courts, from hearing multiple petitions.[5] Therefore, in any enacted Administrative Court Guidance, the Judicial Council must, at a minimum, recognize the statutory authority allowing for consolidation of multiple cases originally brought in the same county (as already	Please see the responses to the comments of Bet Tzedek above.

			proposed), as well as those from multiple jurisdictions throughout California. [5] In the fiscal analysis of SB 823, the Committee highlights that if the court must hold a hearing… for illustrative purposes, 100 such hearings would result in a cost of $167, 000 for two-hour hearings, and $670,000 for full-day hearings. Given the cost to the courts in holding multiple hearings, it behooves Judicial Council to create a streamlined process for consolidation, even if it initially entails a financial investment into a new system. Suggested language: Add as new (a) (a) Requests to consolidate arrests and convictions that occurred in California Jurisdictions 1) The court shall allow the filing of a single petition requesting vacatur relief under Penal Code Section 236.14 (a) for multiple arrests and convictions that occurred anywhere in the jurisdiction of California courts in accordance with the explicit statutory authority granted in 236.14(e). This shall be accomplished through a process that does not create an undue burden for the petitioner but puts the burden on the Courts to ensure that files are properly transferred when necessary and that the involved state or local prosecutorial agencies, as defined in Penal	The committee declines to make the suggested changes for reasons stated above.

			Code section 236.14(c), timely respond to requests for stipulation for consolidation. While CAST appreciates the Judicial Council's discussion of court procedures for transferring cases in other contexts, they are inapplicable to the current situation. Petitioners in this case are victims; there is no justification for placing the procedural burdens on them as in the cited examples. Moreover, in this setting the law specifically empowers the court to consolidate cases via an explicit statutory process.[6] Accordingly, the referenced cases have no precedential value nor do they provide informative models for the Council's consideration. [6] CAST believes the statutory authority for inter-county probation transfers under penal code section 1203.9 and its related rules of court and other CA rules for change of venue, considered by the court merely serve to highlight that what is proposed and legislated in PC 236.14 is completely different and not at all in line with the requirements of these provisions where an explicit process was outlined in the statute. Noting the Judicial Council's Subdivision c (1) process, CAST suggests that the same method be employed for subdivision c (2). In c (1), the Council presumes that the court has the ability to timely notify the petitioner and prosecuting agency of its decisions. If that is the case, there is no reason the Counsel cannot provide guidance on how the court can notify the appropriate prosecuting agencies of a desire to consolidate cases and provide timelines for agency response in	Please see the responses to the comments of Bet Tzedek above. Please see the responses to the comments of Bet Tzedek above.

			Subdivision c (2). CAST thus proposes the following updated language to c (2). Suggested Language: (2) The court must timely notify the petitioner and prosecuting agency of its decision under subdivisions (c)(1). If the petitioner has requested consolidation of arrests and/or convictions that occurred in the same county or other California jurisdictions, the Court should implement a consolidation process without placing an undue burden on the victim that streamlines the court's decision-making on this issue in a timely manner. Factors to Consider When Consolidating Hearings CAST appreciates the guidance provided by the Judicial Council in section (a)(4) that lists factors the court can consider when deciding whether to consolidate a hearing. To ensure the court properly considers the re-traumatization and re-triggering that can occur for victims in this process, CAST suggests the following additions. Suggested Language: To (a)(4) add: (F) Promotion of a victim-centered, trauma-informed approach. (G) The interest of the court in creating a just result.	The committee declines to make the suggested changes for reasons stated above. Please see the responses to the comments of Bet Tzedek above.

			Request to Consolidate Arrest and Convictions that Occurred in the Same County CAST was pleased to see that in its proposed guidance the Judicial Council suggests that a court "should allow the filing of a single petition….for multiple arrests and convictions that occurred in the same county." CAST fully supports the proposed guidance in a (1&2) but requests that the permissive nature of the language be made mandatory, i.e., "should" becomes "shall." As CAST indicated in its 2018 comments, the approach proposed by the Council at that time only allowed courts to consolidate hearings into one event upon the filing of separate petitions. The option of consolidating the hearing, but not the filing of the associated petition, defeats the purpose and intent of Cal PC 236.14. Indeed, in CAST's experience, all of the petitions filed to date have been granted without a hearing. Although CAST supports the Council's suggested language in a (1&2), CAST believes the guidance outlined in (a)(3)(A-B) should be removed. These sections authorize a court to require (1) an agreement between the petitioner and ALL (emphasis added) the involved state or local prosecutorial agencies to consolidate the hearing or (2) documentation stating whether any of the involved state or local prosecutorial agencies intend to file an opposition to the petition. However, the section provides no guidance as to HOW the court should secure it. This lack of guidance likely means that the petitioner will be asked to secure this	Please see the responses to the comments of Bet Tzedek above. Please see the responses to the comments of Bet Tzedek above.

			documentation prior to consolidation being granted. Conducting this extensive outreach places an unreasonable burden on the petitioner. LEAs are often unresponsive. In those cases, which are impossible to predict prior to engaging the actual LEAs, CAST's experience shows that it would have been better for the victim petitioner to forgo any attempt at consolidation. It would have been easier for the petitioner to file petitions in all the different courts as opposed to trying to negotiate the requisite agreements. If the Council keeps the guidance as proposed, advocates are in the same place they have been for the last two years, during which it has been impossible to know whether to advise a victim petitioner to file for consolidation or file separately in each of the courts, as the determination is still based on the responsiveness of LEAs outside the petitioner victim's control. The proposed Standard of Judicial Administration gives a court no additional information on how to best secure this information. Clarifying this process is essential to the effective implementation of Cal PC 236.14. Under Cal PC 236.14, petitioners are only responsible for serving petitions on the state and/or local prosecuting agency that was responsible for the relevant conviction or had jurisdiction over the arrest. The statutory language in Cal PC 236.14 specifically requires that: "The petition for relief and supporting documentation shall be served on the state or local	Please see the responses to the comments of Bet Tzedek above.

			prosecutorial agency that obtained the conviction for which vacatur is sought or with jurisdiction over charging decisions with regard to the arrest. The state or local prosecutorial agency shall have 45 days from the date of receipt of service to respond to the petition for relief." This notice process, and associated petitioner certification, should be sufficient to apprise the relevant agencies of the filing of the petitions if a petitioner provides proof that service occurred 45 days prior to the consolidation request. As is suggested in a (3)(C), a court should find this time period sufficient to consolidate the arrest and convictions in the same county. While CAST is certain that our law enforcement partners will argue that this time period is insufficient, we believe the Council should shift the burden to the courts and the LEAs to provide a concrete proposal that streamlines the process by which agreement between the parties can be secured. Until then, CAST urges the Council to adopt (a)(1 & 2) and (3)(C) for its Standards of Judicial Administration while suggesting a process for the a (3) A-B provisions. Because the Judicial Council's proposal is meant to guide the courts, it should provide real options in this novel area. CAST defers to the Judicial Council's expertise in suggesting language to meet this goal. CAST recommends updating the proposed language as highlighted below.	Please see the responses to the comments of Bet Tzedek above.

			Suggested Language: Remove (a)(3) A & B and replace with an updated victim-centered process to secure consent for consolidation between parties in a streamlined manner. Update (a)(3)(C) with the following language: (A) ~~(C)~~ Proof of service of the request to consolidate hearings 45 days prior to consolidating the hearings, on the involved state or local prosecutorial agencies, as defined in Penal Code section 236.14(c). Juvenile Petitions As included in our 2018 comments, because CAST knows that many trafficking survivors have both juvenile and adult arrest and conviction records, we request the Judicial Council to examine in more detail how the process can be better coordinated and streamlined with the juvenile system. No additional guidance was provided by the Council under the new proposed Standards of Judicial Administration on this issue. For example, clarifying that juvenile arrests can be cleared through the adult petition process, and do not have to be done through the juvenile court process, and further proposing a system that enables the adult court to coordinate sealing juvenile convictions at the same time as adult petitions, would be two very useful procedures. Confidentiality CAST is appreciative of the Council's proposed standard to protect the confidentiality of the	The committee declines to make the suggested changes for reasons stated above. 			petition, related filings, court records and confidentiality of the petitioner's identity at the hearing or any other proceedings or filings accessible to the public. Providing this guidance affords CAST and other advocates the opportunity to assure their clients that this process is confidential from the very beginning, easing the practical and emotional burdens on survivors when they choose to file under Cal PC 236.14. CAST believes the proposed guidance is consistent with the law's explicit language and legislative intent and agrees with its substance. However, CAST believes that given the clear language of Cal PC 236.14, the Judicial Council could propose a court rule, as opposed to mere guidance. CAST is concerned that without a court rule or standardized forms requiring confidentiality at the time of filing a petition, errors will occur and petitions will accidentally be made public. CAST has found that the newness of the provision, and court clerks' unfamiliarity with its requirements, has resulted in clerks refusing to accept the initial filings. Without a rule of court or actual forms, the burden once again inappropriately falls on the petitioner to make sure individual courts follow the proposed guidance offered in the Standards of Judicial Administration. Initial Court Review and Orders CAST thanks the Judicial Council for proposing guidance to the courts in (c)(1)(A) that emphasizes that if the prosecuting agencies file no opposition within 45 days from the date of service, and petitioner otherwise meets the standards for	Please see the responses to the comments of Bet Tzedek above. 			vacatur, relief can be granted without a hearing. CAST believes that the guidance in (c)(1)(A-B) is consistent with statutory and legislative intent. Given the trauma that trafficking survivors face in returning to court after having been arrested and convicted as a result of their trafficking experiences, CAST would like to emphasize how important it is that courts understand and receive training on this psychological harm as a matter of course. Moreover, CAST respectfully requests that if a court sets a hearing, it should proceed in a trauma-informed and victim-centered manner, given the sensitive subject matter and emotionally charged nature of these petitions. CAST believes that because of the difficulty victims face in appearing in court, the Council's proposed guidance should also highlight the explicit statutory authority allowing them to appear telephonically. The guidance should further encourage courts to proactively notify petitioner of this right if a hearing date is set. This is important because many trafficking victims have left the state where they were trafficked either for safety reasons or to avoid continuing trauma. Coming back to the jurisdiction can thus be a significant barrier to applying for relief. Other additional guidance the Judicial Council could provide in its proposed Standard of Judicial Administration regards the documentation petitioners need to provide for relief. Cal PC 236.14(m) is clear that "Official documentation shall not be required for the issuance of an order described in subdivision (a)." Since trafficking by	Please see the responses to the comments of Bet Tzedek above. Please see the responses to the comments of Bet Tzedek above.

			its nature is a hidden crime, and the exploitation of a victim can go on for years without a victim being identified, often a victim petitioner seeking relief under 236.14 will have no documentation except his or her personal statement about victimization and the crimes he or she was forced to commit. Because the legislative intent behind Cal PC 236.14 is to correct a mistake of the justice system in arresting and prosecuting a victim, it is important to explicitly remind courts that victims' statements alone are sufficient proof for a petition to be granted. And, while no documentation of trafficking status is required, the Standards of Judicial Administration should make clear that documentation of a petitioner's status as a victim of human trafficking issued by federal, state, or local agencies can be considered despite evidentiary hearsay rules. Suggested Language: Initial court review and orders Move (2) to (4) and insert (2) No official documentation is required to support a petition for relief under PC 236.14. The court should find, if the petitioner's written statement of the facts of the matter is credible, that his or her statement alone is sufficient to find that the petitioner meets the requirements for relief. 			victim of human trafficking issued by federal, state or local agencies in accord with 236.14(m), despite evidentiary hearsay rules. Finally, although CAST thanks the Judicial Council for providing clear guidance that the courts must timely notify both the petitioner and the prosecuting agency of its decisions, CAST is disappointed that no guidance is provided to ensure that courts immediately notify the relevant agencies of a vacatur order so that the petitioner victim's records are actually cleared in a timely manner. In CAST's experience, one of the greatest hurdles for petitioners seeking this relief is implementation of a vacatur order. More than one year after orders for relief have been granted under Cal Pc 236.14, CAST still has clients whose records have not been cleared. CAST has engaged in long-term advocacy with individual courts to correct this error. However, based on CAST's on-the-ground experience, which has been both time consuming and devastating for the victims it serves, guidance from the Judicial Council on implementation of vacatur relief is essential. CAST defers to the Judicial Council and its expertise in suggesting language in this area, but believes that any Standard of Judicial Administration must provide this additional guidance to the courts. CAST suggests that a prescriptive 30 day timeframe be required. Additional Relief	Please see the responses to the comments of Bet Tzedek above.

			CAST thanks Judicial Council for its recommendations for additional relief listed under section (d) of the proposed standard. CAST is especially thankful for the guidance expressly allowing the court to recall or return court fines and fees already paid. For victims struggling with rebuilding their lives, a court proactively returning fines and fees can help victims feel that the system is finally correcting a past wrong. This guidance is especially important given the U.S. Supreme Court Decision in Nelson v. Colorado, 137 S. Ct. 1249 (2017). In that case, the Court held that any fees, fines, or surcharges collected must be returned to an individual once their conviction is vacated or they are exonerated. Given this decision, CAST suggests that the permissive term "may," be changed to the mandatory "shall." CAST further suggests the following additions to the list of relief options enumerated in section (d). Termination of Probation Cal PC 236.14 allows victims to petition for relief while currently on probation. If the petition is granted, CAST suggests that in addition to the court sealing or destroying probation or post-conviction supervision agency records, the court also be instructed to notify the relevant probation office of the termination of probation. Suggested Language: (d) Additional relief	Please see the responses to the comments of Bet Tzedek above. 			headaches, increased depression and anxiety, and exacerbation of insomnia and nightmares. The legal process requires these patients to revisit their prior traumas, and reignites intense fear about retaliation from traffickers for escaping. We have witnessed worsening of physical and mental health symptoms when patients are navigating legal and even bureaucratic hurdles. While the end result of vacating convictions is a good one for victims, we want the Judicial Council to understand that the process of achieving that result may be traumatic for victims. We therefore urge the Council to adopt forms and procedures that minimize the trauma of the process. Any stressor or activity that results in victims feeling coerced, abused or helpless can be the basis for re-traumatization and result in an increase of symptoms such as nightmares, flashbacks, erratic emotions, fear, despondency, increased anxiety and/or depression, physical symptoms and suicidal ideation. We advise, therefore, that victims' privacy and safety be protected as fully as the Court system allows. As noted, even bureaucratic hurdles can trigger traumatic symptoms. This is especially true when victims are required to provide details and documentation about their trafficking experience. We recommend that this be minimized, and that repetition not be required. The simpler the forms, the better they will be in terms of avoiding re-traumatization.	The committee believes that these concerns are better addressed through judicial training and education. The committee has included confidentiality measures in the proposed standard. .

			We recommend consulting with trafficking survivor groups before considering the implementation of any requirements to physically visit a courthouse. Visiting a courthouse may trigger a re-visiting of trafficking trauma, especially revisiting the very courthouse where a trafficked person was convicted.	The proposed standard does not require a physical visit to a courthouse.
			We are aware that trafficking victims often have multiple arrests and convictions, and understand that the vacatur process can take 45 days or more, however anything the Courts can do to streamline this process may improve physical and mental health impacts in-the long-term.	No response required.
			Finally, if a Court orders convictions to be vacated, it is extremely important that the records be, in fact, cleansed. Trafficking victims have difficulty trusting anyone, let alone systems that they believe have failed them in the past. If a Court orders a conviction to be vacated, and it still remains on a victim's record, this can trigger new trauma, trust deficits, and prevent them from rebuilding their lives and thriving.	The committee believes that these concerns are better addressed through court clerk training and education.
			Trafficking victims have a long journey to healing and the court system can exacerbate their underlying trauma. We urge the Council to take these impacts into account and implement a trauma-informed, victim-centered approach to dealing with these difficult issues. Thank you for considering our comments. 5.	Los Angeles County Public Defender by Ricardo D. Garcia, Public Defender Los Angeles County Alternate Public Defender By Erika Anzoategui, Acting Alternate Public Defender	N/I	We are concerned that the non-binding standard of judicial administration assumes that much of the process will occur through the clerk's office and in chambers, off the record. We are particularly concerned that, without a court date, prosecutorial agencies will not timely file oppositions, if they have any. This is problematic because, under Penal Code section 236.14, subdivision (d), the statute requires the petition be deemed unopposed if no opposition is filed within 45 days. Should more than 45 days elapse, the petitioner could potentially lose an opportunity to advance his or her petition. Even if there no opposition, petitions could languish ~~if there is~~ no date by which they must be addressed. We propose that, unless the petitioner prefers otherwise, Penal Code section 236.14 petitions be filed directly in a courtroom that has jurisdiction over at least one of the cases on which relief is sought. If a petitioner has cases or arrests in other jurisdictions that are also subject to Penal Code section 236.14 relief, they can be ordered to the same courtroom, provided all prosecutorial agencies are served and agree, as per Penal Code section 236.14, subdivisions (c) and (e). We believe the court has the authority under Penal Code section 236.14, subdivision (e), to order in cases from any other jurisdiction, not just cases from the same county. Should the Legislature have wanted to limit cases to those in the same county, it could have so indicated. While certainly this is novel and it will take operational adjustments, the entire purpose of the law is to right the wrongs	Penal Code section 236.14 does not require a hearing if the petition is unopposed and the court does not otherwise deem one necessary. In February 2011, CAST launched the NSN to foster connections between survivors of diverse forms of human trafficking and to build a national anti-trafficking movement in which survivors are at the forefront and recognized as leaders. Members of the NSN include survivors with various backgrounds and origins spanning 24 countries. Active members currently reside in over 40 states including 39 in California. The NSN's diverse membership makes it uniquely representative of the myriad of situations experienced by survivors of human trafficking. This program of working within the framework of implementation in stages would allow for attorneys, judges, courts, Law Enforcement agencies, and petitioner victims and advocates to learn the best practices of this process in an appropriate manner throughout the implementation process. We hope that non-binding process once addressed becomes a binding process moving forward as we learn together these best practices of real-life implementation. Safety considerations: In regard to consolidation of charges across jurisdictions we would like to note a few apprehensions we have in regard to the confidentiality of this process, while addressing the complex process of consolidating all charges across the State. Filing a petition in one jurisdiction is far easier for the mental duress of waiting for the long process to take place in multiple jurisdictions. Our concerns around safety are complicated knowing the crimes we were forced into committing as part of our trafficking experience are beyond familiar to our traffickers. Limiting who has access to these petitions is something we strongly support. In that, our traffickers may be a part of a familial trafficking network, a criminal syndicate, or even in some cases Law Enforcement officers. 			may have employees within the system and limiting access to who can see these consolidated cases is crucial for safety of our safety. We trust the court has taken into consideration into the need of the confidentiality of these documents and destructions of records once the petition is approved. We are curious if consideration into files under Department of Children and Families are considered if a conviction history was the reason for a loss of a child and the trafficker's family has custody of the child, how can these issues be resolved with the destruction of documents including conviction records, court records or other pieces? Can a consolidated report be subpoenaed for the purpose of taking a child from a victim of a crime? If a petitioner chose to file before their T-Visa or U-Visa is processed would those convictions and histories be confidential to DHS or ICE? I myself have apprehensions on one consolidated case, albeit a concern for the burden of petitioning in multiple courts across the state is an expensive process that a victim should not have to bear for being misidentified as a victim of a crime. It seems like the onerous of the burden should be upon the system that failed to identify a victim rather than the victim. If a Statewide option is not available is there a uniform process across all jurisdictions of application where a granted petition or a sworn affidavit from that court that can be shared to all additional county seats for additional convictions? 			that granting authority should be Statewide and be able to be used to vacate all convictions in the time frame of active trafficking without the need to repeat in all jurisdictions. Clarification around 45 days: PC 236.14 states: "The Petition for relief and supporting documentation shall be served on the state or local prosecutorial agency that obtained the conviction for which vacatur is sought or with jurisdiction over prosecutorial agency shall have 45 days from the date of receipt of service to respond to the petition for relief." When filing bankruptcy, the petition process for the court to notify creditors takes about a week and the court covers said notifications. We are curious how in bankruptcy there is a process set aside for the court to notify creditors but there is not a notice of court filing those additional petitions to Law Enforcement and Prosecutors in other jurisdictions for consolidation of jurisdiction and supporting documents? If the court can file notice to creditors of intent to file bankruptcy within a week of petition filed and resolve bankruptcy within 30 days. It seems like the 45 days for vacatur petition is more than sufficient. On the 46th day if uncontested a petition should be granted as uncontested. If a petition is denied it should be denied without prejudice to allow for additional documentation to be accumulated to attempt again. There is no clarification of "timely" notice should be sent. It seems like notice should be able to be sent within a week of the determination of the	Penal Code section 236.14 does not clearly identify who should coordinate a multi-jurisdiction petition. The statutory language states that courts may grant an uncontested petition. 			Additional Considerations: There is no clarification around juvenile cases as many trafficking charges are mixed between juvenile courts and adult courts. Does the County jurisdiction also have a right to petition for all juvenile convictions that may still be present for vacatur as well?	The committee declines to recommend statewide standards on coordinating adult and juvenile petitions at this time.
			Destruction of all records in wrongful arrests for a victim of crime. If all police records, conviction records, probation records and court records are to be destroyed after vacatur—what becomes of the DNA records and fingerprints? Are these considered records of arrests and convictions being vacated and if so, are they to be destroyed? In the event of protection order of identity and name changes or other legal protections of a victim of trafficking would holding on to such records place hardship onto the victim's identity that would place additional burdens on them that the court would have not considered?	The committee appreciates the comment, but it is beyond scope of the proposal.

5.	Office of Los Angeles City Attorney Michael N. Feuer by Anh Troung, Supervising Deputy City Attorney	N/I	INTRODUCTION AND STATEMENT OF INTEREST The Los Angeles City Attorney's Office handles all human trafficking vacatur petitions that arise from misdemeanor arrests in the City of Los Angeles. Because these petitions include prostitution-related offenses, we are receiving an increased number of petitions from a variety of sources. Historically, most of the petitions we received were from victim services providers and other pro bono counsel. We expect this to change. The public defense bar has expressed great interest in pursuing this remedy more frequently, and our office is working with them, among other agencies, toward our common goal of developing uniform, streamlined procedures and ensuring that victims of human trafficking receive appropriate and life-changing relief. Towards that end, we support the current proposal, and the use of non-binding standards appears appropriate at this time based on the lack of case law interpreting Penal Code section 236.14. These standards strike the correct balance and would guide courts to apply the law more consistently, but still allow for flexibility and innovation. COMMENTS STANDARD 4.15. VACATUR RELIEF UNDER PENAL CODE SECTION 236.14 Subsection (a) - Request to consolidate arrests and convictions that occurred in the same county:	No response required. No response required.

			In our experience, consolidation for hearing pursuant to Penal Code section 236.14(e) has been the most complicated provision to implement. We appreciate the thoughtful approach the committee has taken to simplify hearings within counties while still respecting the autonomy and jurisdictional concerns of courts and prosecuting agencies. We therefore support a policy favoring consolidated hearings within a single county. This may impose some burden on agencies such as our office, which has limited jurisdiction within the greater Los Angeles County, but this impact is also mitigated by the proposal for courts to grant relief without a hearing in uncontested matters. (See below for further discussion of Standard 4.15, subd. (c).)	No response required.
			In addition to supporting consolidated hearings within the same county, we would also support the consolidation of cases between counties. However, we acknowledge the committee's detailed concerns about the numerous and complex challenges and issues in attempting to provide uniform guidance to the courts. Moreover, as a practical matter, we found that courts in other counties are unlikely to transfer files in time for a hearing, if at all. The transfer of files is even less likely if only one petition is filed in a court outside the county of the originating court.	No response required.
			Subsection (b) - Confidentiality: Our service provider partners have stressed to us how dangerous it can be for their clients to report their trafficking situations. It is consistent with the purpose of the statute and with the common goals	No response required.

			of both the prosecution and defense to ensure all documents pertaining to a vacatur petition be designated as confidential from the time of filing. We also see the value of allowing "Doe" designations to protect victims of human trafficking in court proceedings.
			We would recommend going one step further in the event a petition is granted. We have seen cases where even after the courts have granted a petition, the petitioner's conviction and even the petition hearing were still reported and publicly accessible on the court's online docket. While not explicitly addressed by Penal Code section 236.14, public access to these court records is devastating to victims of human trafficking who believe their criminal history is behind them and it is contrary to the spirit of the law. A policy to thus remove identifying information from the public records of cases where convictions have been vacated would help ensure that this does not happen.	The committee intends for proposed standard 4.15(d)(5), sealing of the court file if warranted under the factors in rule 2.550(d), to address this concern.
			Subsection (c) - Initial court review and orders: The proposed procedure is efficient and consistent with our office's previous comments on SPR18-15. It will moderate the demand for consolidation in the vast majority of cases. By eliminating the requirement of a hearing in uncontested matters, petitions may be granted on paper by courts with jurisdiction over each offense without resort to the transfer of files. Defects in petitions can also be identified and corrected without a hearing. This furthers judicial economy and preserves the resources of the parties. This will benefit victims of human	No response required.

			trafficking who will no longer be required to attend court or pay for the appearance of counsel to do so. We therefore fully support this procedure, and appreciate that it is accompanied by a standard of timeliness. Subsection (d)-Additional relief: We do not object to the consideration of each of these forms of relief as appropriate. ADDITIONAL SUGGESTIONS While we would prefer a well-pleaded petition over a Judicial Council Form, it would nonetheless be useful to develop a cover sheet that would set forth all related cases and enable the court to quickly determine whether the petitioner seeks consolidation. Likewise, a standardized form response would enable prosecutors to not only oppose the petition, but also to express non-opposition, stipulate to a hearing before a commissioner, and waive appearance where warranted.	No response required. The committee declines to recommend a form at this time. The committee circulated proposed forms for public comment in spring 2018 and concluded that statewide forms were limited in their ability to provide guidance on implementation of Penal Code section 236.14.

Orange County Bar Association by Deirdre Kelly, President	A	Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose? Proposed Standard 4.15 does appropriately address the stated purpose. Please comment on the committee's decision to propose a nonbinding standard of judicial administration rather than a mandatory rule of court. Penal Code § 236.14 sets forth certain mandatory requirements and procedures for requesting and granting relief. However, certain aspects of the statute remain legally unresolved under present law such as the potential incriminatory nature of testimony by a petitioner under subdivisions (f)(1) and (g)(3) or the consolidation "into one hearing a petition with multiple convictions from different jurisdictions" under subdivision (e). Perhaps further legislative clarification and/or statutory authority is required. In the absence of legal resolution to the aforementioned issues and others, a nonbinding standard appears prudent and at the very least, offers guidance in the four areas covered. Such guidance foreseeably would be helpful in the larger metropolitan areas where multiple prosecutorial agencies and multiple judicial districts are present in the same county.	No response required. Although I cannot quantify the savings, it appears to be significant based on the recommendation of consolidating into one filing the request for relief for multiple arrests and convictions. Additionally, savings could be achieved by consolidating hearings, or holding no hearings based on response from the prosecution. Since the proposal is directory in nature, and not mandatory, there is also no need to implement modifications, revision of processes, etc. which can be time consuming and/or costly. The advisory committee also seeks comments from courts on the following cost and implementation matters: • Would the proposal provide cost savings? If so, please quantity. See answer above. 			may be significant cost savings in terms of petitions filed and hearings heard, the recommendation under 4.15(d)(3) to recall or return paid court fines and fees would negate some of the anticipated cost savings. If court fines and fees are vacated so as to void the collection of future uncollected monies, any savings or loss would be unchanged. However, if paid fines and fees are returned any costs savings would be reduced due to time expended on behalf of staff to initiate and finalize the return of those funds as well as the loss of the funds themselves. • What would the implementation requirements be for courts? This is difficult to assess since the guidance is advisory only in nature and not mandatory. It is unclear if the standard would be adopted by our court. • Would three months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation? Yes • How well would this proposal work in courts of different sizes? It seems it would work well. The advisory nature of the proposal enables courts of different sizes to adopt those areas that would be most helpful to their circumstances.	No response required. No response required. Superior Court of San Diego County by Mike Roddy, Executive Officer	AM	Because the new rules are intended to be "non-binding guidelines," it would seem to make sense that some of the language in the proposed rule be changed from "should" to "may." In addition, there are portions of the rule where the court is given guidance on factors to consider. It is recommended that those portions of the rule specify that the lists provided are nonexclusive. The following changes are recommended: Rule 4.15, subdivision (a)(1): "The court ~~should~~ may allow the filing of a single petition requesting vacatur relief under Penal Code section 236.14(a) for multiple arrests and convictions that occurred in the same county." Rule 4.15, subdivision (d): "When granting the petition for vacatur relief under Penal Code section 236.14(a), the court ~~should~~ may consider order the following additional relief, including, but not limited to…" 4.15, subdivision (a)(4), "The court should consider the following, non-exclusive list of factors when deciding whether to consolidate hearings:…"	The committee prefers the use of "should." Per California Rules of Court, rule 1.5(b)(5), "should" expresses a preference for a nonbinding recommendation. See response above. See response above. Executive Summary

The Criminal Law Advisory Committee recommends amending the language in the immigration consequences section of two Judicial Council plea forms to conform to the plain language of Penal Code section 1016.5.

Recommendation

The Criminal Law Advisory Committee recommends that the Judicial Council, effective January 1, 2020, revise the immigration consequences advisement of Plea Form, With Explanations and Waiver of Rights—Felony (form CR-101) and Domestic Violence Plea Form With Waiver of Rights—Misdemeanor (form CR-102) to address concerns that the provision in each form contains inaccuracies, and to conform the provision to the plain language of Penal Code section 1016.5.

The revised forms are attached at pages 4–13.

Relevant Previous Council Action

The Judicial Council approved form CR-101, effective January 1, 2007, to provide increased uniformity in felony plea waiver forms used throughout the state. The immigration consequences language from the original form has never been changed. Form CR-102 includes similar language about immigration consequences. This language has not changed since the form's approval, effective July 1, 2011.

Analysis/Rationale

California law requires that, before acceptance of a plea of guilty or nolo contendere to any offense punishable as a crime under state law, except offenses designated as infractions, the court must administer the following advisement on the record to the defendant:

> If you are not a citizen, you are hereby advised that conviction of the offense for which you have been charged may have the consequences of deportation,[1] exclusion from admission to the United States, or denial of naturalization pursuant to the laws of the United States.

(Pen. Code, § 1016.5(a).)

The Judicial Council developed form CR-101 to provide increased uniformity in felony plea waiver forms used throughout the state. The form currently contains the following immigration advisement:

> I understand that if I am not a citizen of the United States, my plea of guilty or no contest may or, with certain offenses, will result in my deportation, exclusion from reentry to the United States, and denial of naturalization and amnesty, and that the appropriate consulate may be informed of my conviction. The offenses that will result in such immigration action include, but are not limited to, an aggravated felony, conspiracy, a controlled substance offense, a firearm offense, and, under certain circumstances, a moral turpitude offense.

(Judicial Council form CR-101, item (3)(i), at p. 4, original emphasis.)

The committee recognized that, contrary to Penal Code section 1016.5, forms CR-101 and CR-102 inaccurately suggest that certain consequences "will" rather than "may" follow from certain guilty pleas. Thus, the committee recommends replacing the immigration advisement in forms CR-101 and CR-102 with the following language, derived from section 1016.5:

> I understand that if I am not a citizen of the United States, my plea of guilty or no contest may result in my deportation, exclusion from admission to the United States, or denial of naturalization under the laws of the United States.

[1] The Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996 created unified "removal" proceedings in place of deportation and exclusion proceedings. (See Vartelas v. Holder (2012) 566 U.S. 257, 261.) Because Penal Code section 1016.5 was enacted before this change, it uses the earlier terminology. To conform with the Penal Code, this report and the proposed forms use the older terms of "deportation" and "exclusion."

Policy implications

The committee was concerned that by providing potentially inaccurate information in the immigration consequences advisement, these forms may discourage defendants from pleading to immigration-neutral offenses and create potential conflicts with accurate advice given by defense counsel. Thus, the committee recommends revising the advisement in forms CR-101 and CR-102 with language consistent with Penal Code section 1016.5.

Comments

This proposal circulated for comment from April 11 to June 10, 2019. Seven comments were received. Six commenters agreed with the proposal, including the Superior Courts of Los Angeles and San Diego Counties, the Orange County Bar Association (OCBA), and the Immigrant Legal Resource Center, which had originally brought this issue to the committee's attention. The Superior Court of Orange County did not indicate a position. The OCBA responded to the request for specific comments, including whether the attorney's declaration in forms CR-101 and CR-102 should be updated to include language about immigration consequences. The OCBA responded in the negative, noting that "[b]ecause defense attorneys have an affirmative duty to advise their clients of the collateral immigration consequences of the criminal case… a further affirmation that the attorney has advised the client of immigration consequences seems redundant."

Alternatives considered

The committee considered not undertaking revisions to forms CR-101 and CR-102 but recognized the importance in having the immigration consequences provision accurately reflect the language in Penal Code section 1016.5.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

Expected costs are limited to possible case management system updates and the production of revised forms. No other implementation requirements or operational impacts are expected.

a. No Contest ("Nolo Contendere") Plea ☐
I understand that a no contest plea is the same as pleading guilty and that if I plead no contest, I will be convicted and my no contest plea could be used against me in a civil case.

b. Parole and Postrelease Community Supervision ☐
I understand that if I am sentenced to state prison or a narcotics treatment facility
(1) I will be placed on parole or postrelease community supervision for up to: years after my release.
(2) If I abscond or the court tolls my supervision, the total time of parole or postrelease community supervision can be extended.
(3) If I violate any of the terms or conditions of my parole, I can be sentenced to county jail for up to 180 days for each violation, or returned to state prison for up to one year, up to a maximum of: years. If I violate any of the terms or conditions of postrelease community supervision, I can be sentenced to county jail for up to 180 days for each violation, for up to a maximum of 3 years.

c. Effect of Conviction on Other Cases ☐
I understand that a conviction in this case may constitute a violation of any other current grant of parole, mandatory supervision, postrelease community supervision, or probation in any other case and that I may receive additional punishment as a result of that violation.

d. Registration ☐
I understand that I will be required to register with the local police agency or sheriff's department in the city or county in which I reside as

(1) ☐ an arson offender
(2) ☐ a gang member
(3) ☐ a narcotics offender
(4) ☐ a sex offender (this registration is a lifelong requirement)

and that if I fail to register or to keep my registration current for any reason, new felony criminal charges may be filed against me.

e. Prints and DNA Samples ☐
I understand that I must provide biological samples and prints for identification purposes—including buccal (mouth) swab samples, right thumb prints, palm prints of each hand, and blood specimens or other biological samples required by law—and that failure to do so constitutes a new criminal offense.

f. Serious or Violent Felony ☐
(1) ☐ I understand that by pleading guilty or no contest to a serious or violent felony ("strike"), the penalty for any future felony conviction will be increased as a result of my convicion in this case, depending on the number of strikes I have, up to a mandatory prison sentence of double the term otherwise provided or a term of at least 25 years to life.
(2) ☐ I understand that if I am convicted of a violent felony, jail or prison conduct/work-time credit I may accrue will not exceed 15%.
(3) ☐ I understand that if I am admitting a prior strike conviction, prison work-time credit that I may accrue will not exceed 20% of the total term of imprisonment.
(4) ☐ I understand that if I am convicted of murder or a third felony conviction of certain offenses, I am ineligible to receive work-time credits. Count: is such an offense.

g. Prior Prison Term or County Jail Sentence Under Penal Code Section 1170(h)(5) ☐
I understand that if I am sentenced to prison or county jail under Penal Code section 1170(h)(5), the penalty for any future felony conviction may be increased as a result of my incarceration in this case.

h. Driver's License and Vehicle Forfeiture ☐
I understand that my privilege to drive a motor vehicle may be revoked or suspended by the court or the California Department of Motor Vehicles, and my vehicle may be ordered forfeited if it was involved in the offense.

3. i. Immigration Consequences INITIALS
I understand that if I am not a citizen of the United States, my plea of guilty or no contest may result in my deportation, exclusion from admission to the United States, or denial of naturalization pursuant to the laws of the United States. ☐

j. Firearms ☐
I understand that federal and state laws prohibit a convicted felon from possessing firearms or ammunition for life.

k. Other Consequences (specify): ☐

4. RIGHT TO AN ATTORNEY ☐
I understand that I have the right to an attorney of my choice to represent me throughout the proceedings. If I cannot afford to hire an attorney, the court will appoint one to represent me.

I hereby give up my right to be represented by an attorney. ☐

5. OTHER CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS
I understand that I am entitled to each of the following rights as to the charges listed in item 1 (on page 1):

a. Right to a Jury Trial ☐
I understand that I have a right to a speedy and public jury trial. At the trial, I would be presumed to be innocent, and I could not be convicted unless, after hearing all of the evidence, 12 impartial jurors chosen from the community were unanimously convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that I am guilty. I have a right, through my counsel, to participate in jury selection.

b. Right to a Court Trial ☐
I understand that, as an alternative to a jury trial, if the prosecutor agrees, I may give up a jury trial and have a court trial in which the judge alone, without a jury, hears the evidence. I still could not be convicted unless, after hearing all of the evidence, the judge was convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that I am guilty.

c. Right to Confront and Cross-Examine Witnesses ☐
I understand that I have the right to confront and cross-examine all witnesses testifying against me. This means that the prosecution must produce the witnesses in court, they must testify under oath in my presence, and my attorney may question them.

d. Right to Remain Silent and Not to Incriminate Myself ☐
I understand that I have the right to remain silent, and my silence cannot be considered as evidence against me. I understand that I also have the right not to incriminate myself, and I cannot be forced to testify.

e. Right to Produce Evidence and to Present a Defense ☐
I understand that I have a right to present evidence and to have the court issue subpoenas to bring to court all witnesses and evidence favorable to me, at no cost to me. I also have the right to testify on my own behalf.

6. BEFORE THE PLEA

a. Discussion With My Attorney ☐

Before entering this plea, I have had a full opportunity to discuss the following with my attorney:

(1) The facts of my case;
(2) The elements of the charged offenses, prior convictions, enhancements, and special allegations;
(3) Any defenses that I may have;
(4) My constitutional and statutory rights and waiver of those rights;
(5) The consequences of this plea, including the immigration consequences; and
(6) Anything else I think is important to my case.

6. b. Questions
I have no further questions of the court or of my attorney with regard to my plea and admissions in this case, any of the rights, or anything else on this form. ☐

c. Stipulation to Commissioner
I understand that I have the right to have a judge take my plea and sentence me. I give up this right and agree to have a commmissioner, sitting as a temporary judge, take my plea and sentence me. ☐

d. Medications or Controlled Substances
I am not taking any medication that affects my ability to understand this form and the consequences of my plea, have not recently consumed any alcohol or drugs, and am not suffering from any medical condition, except for the following: ☐

e. Court Approval of Plea Agreement
I understand that the plea agreement in item 2 (on pages 1 and 2) is based on the facts before the court. I understand that if the court approves this plea agreement the approval of the court is not binding, and that the court may withdraw its approval of the plea agreement upon further consideration of the matter. I understand that if the court withdraws its approval of this plea agreement I will be allowed to withdraw my plea. (Pen. Code, § 1192.5.) ☐

7. STATUTORY RIGHT TO A PRELIMINARY HEARING
I understand that before I have a trial, the law gives me the right to a speedy preliminary hearing at which the prosecution would produce evidence and the court must find reasonable cause to believe I committed the crimes with which I have been charged. I understand that I have all of the above constitutional rights at the preliminary hearing, except for the right to a jury trial. ☐

I give up my right to a preliminary hearing and the constitutional rights listed in item 5 (on page 4).

8. WAIVER OF CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS ☐
I give up, for each of the charges and allegations listed in item 1 (on page 1), my right to a jury trial, my right to a court trial, my right to confront and cross-examine witnesses, my right to remain silent and not to incriminate myself, and my right to produce evidence and to present a defense, including my right to testify on my own behalf. I understand that I am, in fact, incriminating myself with my plea.

9. THE PLEA ☐
I freely and voluntarily plead ☐ GUILTY ☐ NO CONTEST to the charges listed in item 1 (on page 1) and admit the allegations listed in item 1 (on page 1), understanding that this plea and admission will lead to the penalties listed in item 2 (on pages 1 and 2).

a. I offer my plea of guilty or no contest freely and voluntarily and with full understanding of everything in this form. No one has made any threats; used any force against me, my family, or my loved ones; or made any promises to me, except as listed in this form, in order to convince me to plead guilty or no contest. ☐

b. I understand that the court is required to find a factual basis for my plea to make sure that I am entering a plea to the proper offenses under the facts of the case.

I offer to the court the following as the basis for my plea of guilty or no contest and any admissions:

(1) I understand that the court may consider the following as proof of the factual basis for my plea: ☐

(a) ☐ Preliminary hearing transcript
(b) ☐ Police report
(c) ☐ Probation report
(d) ☐ Welfare investigator's declaration
(e) ☐ Court documents regarding any alleged prior offenses
(f) ☐ Other (specify):
(g) ☐ (Specify facts):

9. b. (2) I am pleading guilty or no contest to take advantage of a plea agreement (my attorney will stipulate to a factual basis for the plea). (People v. West (1970) 3 Cal.3d 595.) ☐

10. AFTER THE PLEA

a. Surrender
I understand that the court is allowing me to surrender at a later date to begin serving time in custody. ☐

I agree that if I fail to appear on the date set for surrender or sentencing without a legal excuse, my plea will become an "open plea" to the court, I will not be allowed to withdraw my plea, and I may be sentenced up to the maximum allowed by law. ☐

b. Sentencing Court
I understand that I have the right to be sentenced by the same judge or commissioner who takes my plea. I give up that right and agree that any judge or commissioner may sentence me. ☐

c. Sentencing Date
I understand that I have the right to be sentenced within 20 court days. I give up that right and agree to be sentenced at a later date. ☐

11. MANDATORY WARNING ☐
I understand that if I am charged with violating Vehicle Code section 23103, as specified in Vehicle Code section 23103.5, or Vehicle Code sections 23152 or 23153, the following warning applies:

You are hereby advised that being under the influence of alcohol or drugs, or both, impairs your ability to safely operate a motor vehicle. Therefore, it is extremely dangerous to human life to drive while under the influence of alcohol or drugs, or both. If you continue to drive while under the influence of alcohol or drugs, or both, and as a result of that driving someone is killed, you can be charged with murder.

DEFENDANT'S STATEMENT

I have read or have had read to me this form and have initialed each of the items that applies to my case. If I have an attorney, I have discussed each item with my attorney. By putting my initials next to the items in this form, I am indicating that I understand and agree with what is stated in each item that I have initialed. The nature of the charges, possible defenses, and effects of any prior convictions, enhancements, and special allegations have been explained to me. I understand each of the rights outlined above, and I give up each of them to enter my plea.

COURT'S FINDINGS AND ORDER

The court, having reviewed this form (and any addenda), and having orally examined the defendant, finds as follows:

1. The defendant has read or has had read to him or her and understands each of the initialed items in this form.
2. The defendant understands the nature of the crimes and allegations listed in item 1 (on page 1) and the consequences of the plea and any admissions.
3. The defendant expressly, knowingly, understandingly, and intelligently waives his or her constitutional and statutory rights.
4. The defendant's plea, admissions, and waiver of rights are made freely and voluntarily.
5. A factual basis exists for the plea and admissions, or the defendant is pleading pursuant to a plea bargain under People v. West.

The court accepts the defendant's plea, admissions, and waiver of rights, and the defendant is hereby convicted based thereon.

It is ordered that this document be filed with the court's records of this case and that the defendant's plea, admissions, and waiver of rights be accepted and entered in the minutes of this court.

Executive Summary

The Criminal Law Advisory Committee recommends removing a portion of the Interpreter's Statement on three Judicial Council forms to ensure that the statement accurately describes the role and responsibilities of interpreters. The committee also recommends adding the proposed Interpreter's Statement to the form used by mentally disordered defendants to indicate whether the defendant is challenging the Penal Code section 1606 report recommending confinement or continued outpatient treatment, or is waiving that right. Form CR-170 includes the option for waiver of a significant right of the defendant, and therefore, for cases that require an interpreter, it is appropriate to include the Interpreter's Statement certifying the information was correctly translated.

Recommendation

The Criminal Law Advisory Committee recommends that the Judicial Council, effective January 1, 2020:

1. Revise Plea Form, With Explanations and Waiver of Rights—Felony (form CR-101), Domestic Violence Plea Form With Waiver of Rights—Misdemeanor (form CR-102), and Defendant's Statement of Assets (CR-115) by removing a portion of the Interpreter's

Statement to ensure that the statement accurately describes the role and responsibilities of interpreters; and

2. Revise Notification of Decision Whether to Challenge Recommendation (CR-170)—the form used by mentally disordered defendants to indicate whether the defendant is challenging the Penal Code section 1606 report recommending confinement or continued outpatient treatment, or is waiving that right—to add the proposed Interpreter's Statement.

The revised forms are attached at pages 4–16.

Relevant Previous Council Action

The Judicial Council approved form CR-101, first effective on January 1, 2007, to provide increased uniformity in felony plea waiver forms used throughout the state. Form CR-102, first effective on July 1, 2011, and form CR-115, first effective on January 1, 2003, each have a nearly identical statement. The statement was included on forms CR-101, CR-102, and CR-115 without any explanation or comment when each of the forms was first adopted, and those statements have not been revised in the intervening years.

Analysis/Rationale

Form CR-101 includes an Interpreter's Statement section on the final page, which is signed by the person who interpreted the form to the defendant. The statement currently reads:

> I, having been duly sworn or having a written oath on file, certify that I truly translated this form to the defendant in the language noted below. The defendant stated that he or she understood the contents of the form and then initialed and signed the form.

Forms CR-102 and CR-115 have nearly identical statements.

In response to concerns raised by a certified court interpreter, the committee circulated for public comment a recommendation to remove the second sentence of the Interpreter's Statement from the forms on which it currently appears, out of concern that the second sentence may:

- Exceed the role of the interpreter, which is limited to translating or interpreting statements, proceedings, or forms from and into English and a second language;
- Violate the interpreter's code of ethics and breach confidentiality because the translation of a waiver form is an extension of an attorney-client conference;
- Require information that the interpreter may not have (whether a person other than the defendant initialed or signed the form on the defendant's behalf); and
- May be unnecessarily duplicative of the Defendant's Statement and the Court's Findings and Order included on forms CR-101 and CR-102.

The committee also recommended adding the revised version of the Interpreter's Statement to form CR-170, an optional form used to confirm whether a mentally disordered defendant has elected to challenge at a jury trial the report recommending confinement or continued outpatient treatment, or to waive that right. Since form CR-170 includes the option for waiver of a significant right of the defendant, the committee recognized that, for cases that require an interpreter, it is appropriate to include the Interpreter's Statement certifying the information was correctly translated.

Policy implications

The committee expressed its concern that retaining the Interpreter's Statement in its current form could place court interpreters in an untenable position or, alternatively, that some interpreters might refuse to sign the statement to avoid these conflicts.

Comments

This proposal circulated for comment from April 11 to June 10, 2019. Four comments were received. The Superior Courts of Orange and San Diego Counties agreed with the proposal, as did the Orange County Bar Association. The Superior Court of Los Angeles County agreed with the proposal, if modified. It recommended that all the forms be modified to include a line for the interpreter's certification number. The committee, the chairs of the Court Interpreters Advisory Committee (CAIP), and staff to CAIP with whom the committee consulted agreed that including the interpreter's nonconfidential certification number on the forms is a minor substantive change that benefits the court and the public.

The court also noted that judicial officers should be notified that the waiver form no longer contains verification of understanding and defendant's initials, and that verification would have to be placed on the record through inquiry in open court. The committee chose to notify Center for Judicial Education and Research staff of the changes to the forms so that this information can be incorporated in appropriate judicial education venues.

Alternatives considered

The committee considered not undertaking revisions to the Interpreter's Statement on forms CR-101, CR-102, and CR-115, and not adding the statement to form CR-170, but recognized the importance of having the Interpreter's Statement accurately describe the role and responsibilities of interpreters.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

Expected costs are limited to training, possible case management system updates, and the production of revised forms. No other implementation requirements or operational impacts are expected.

2. PLEA AGREEMENT. I understand that I must tell the court on this form about any promises anyone has made to me about the sentence I will receive or the sentence recommendations that will be made to the court. My attorney, the court, or the prosecutor has explained to me that if I plead guilty or no contest to the charges and admit the allegations listed above, the court will sentence me as follows:

a. Check one: ☐ State Prison (or the Division of Juvenile Justice) ☐ County Jail for INITIALS ☐
(1) ☐ years and months or
(2) ☐ Not less than years and months and/or not more than years and months.
(3) ☐ Other (specify):

b. Probation for years under conditions to be set by the court, including: ☐ ☐ days in the county jail or
☐ up to days in the county jail.

I understand that a violation of any of the conditions of probation, including failure to complete a drug education or treatment program, if ordered by the court, may cause the court to send me to county jail or state prison for up to the "Aggregate Maximum Time of Imprisonment" specified in item 1, which may include a period of mandatory supervision under Penal Code section 1170(h)(5)(B) if the court sends me to county jail.

PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA v. Defendant(s):	CASE NUMBER:

INITIALS

2. c. Split Sentence (1170(h)(5)(B)): years and days in the county jail and years and days on mandatory supervision under conditions set by the court. I understand that if I violate any of the terms or conditions of mandatory supervision, I may be remanded into custody for the entire unserved portion of the sentence. ☐

d. Narcotics Addiction Confinement ☐
I understand that if the court finds that I am addicted to narcotics or in immediate danger of becoming a narcotics addict, the court may send me to a narcotics detention, treatment, and rehabilitation facility for up to the amount of time I would otherwise have served in prison.

e. Open Plea

1. ☐ I understand the maximum and minimum sentences for the charges and allegations stated on page 1. No one has made any other promises to me about what sentence the court may order. ☐
2. ☐ I understand that I am not eligible for probation.
3. ☐ I understand that I will not be granted probation unless the court finds at the time of sentencing that this is an unusual case where the interests of justice would be best served by granting probation.

f. Restitution, Statutory Fees, and Assessments ☐
I understand that the court will order me to pay the following amounts (if an amount is not yet known, "TBD" for "to be determined" is entered next to the $); I must prepare financial disclosure statements to assist the court in determining my ability to pay; and refusal or failure to prepare the required financial disclosure statements may be used against me at sentencing:

1. ☐ $ to the Victim Restitution Fund
2. ☐ $ restitution to actual victims
3. ☐ $ restitution to the State of California, Victims of Crime Fund
4. ☐ $ court operations assessment
5. ☐ $ court facilities assessment
6. ☐ $ base fine plus any applicable penalties, assessments, and surcharges
7. ☐ $ other (specify):
8. ☐ $ other (specify):
9. ☐ An (additional) amount to be determined by the court at sentencing or such other hearing as the court may set.

g. Parole Revocation or Probation Revocation Fine ☐
I understand that if I am sentenced to state prison, the court will impose a parole revocation fine, which will be collected only if my parole is later revoked. I also understand that if I am granted probation, the court will impose a probation revocation fine, which will be collected only if my probation is later revoked.

h. Dismissal of Other Counts ☐
I understand that as part of the plea agreement bargain, the following counts will be dismissed after sentencing:

I understand and agree that the sentencing judge may consider facts underlying dismissed counts to determine restitution and to sentence me on the counts to which I am entering a plea. ☐

i. Other Terms (*specify): ☐

PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA v. Defendant(s):	CASE NUMBER:

3. CONSEQUENCES OF MY PLEA INITIALS

a. No Contest ("Nolo Contendere") Plea ☐
I understand that a no contest plea is the same as pleading guilty and that if I plead no contest, I will be convicted and my no contest plea could be used against me in a civil case.

b. Parole and Postrelease Community Supervision ☐
I understand that if I am sentenced to state prison or a narcotics treatment facility
(1) I will be placed on parole or postrelease community supervision for up to years after my release.
(2) If I abscond or the court tolls my supervision, the total time of parole or postrelease community supervision can be extended.
(3) If I violate any of the terms or conditions of my parole, I can be sentenced to county jail for up to 180 days for each violation, or returned to state prison for up to one year, up to a maximum of years. If I violate any of the terms or conditions of postrelease community supervision, I can be sentenced to county jail for up to 180 days for each violation, for up to a maximum of 3 years.

c. Effect of Conviction on Other Cases ☐
I understand that a conviction in this case may constitute a violation of any other current grant of parole, mandatory supervision, postrelease community supervision, or probation in any other case and that I may receive additional punishment as a result of that violation.

d. Registration ☐
I understand that I will be required to register with the local police agency or sheriff's department in the city or county in which I reside as

(1) ☐ an arson offender
(2) ☐ a gang member
(3) ☐ a narcotics offender
(4) ☐ a sex offender (this registration is a lifelong requirement)
(5) ☐ other (specify):

and that if I fail to register or to keep my registration current for any reason, new felony criminal charges may be filed against me.

e. Prints and DNA Samples ☐
I understand that I must provide biological samples and prints for identification purposes—including buccal (mouth) swab samples, right thumb prints, palm prints of each hand, and blood specimens or other biological samples required by law—and that failure to do so constitutes a new criminal offense.

f. Serious or Violent Felony ☐
(1) ☐ I understand that by pleading guilty or no contest to a serious or violent felony ("strike"), the penalty for any future felony conviction will be increased as a result of my convicion in this case, depending on the number of strikes I have, up to a mandatory prison sentence of double the term otherwise provided or a term of at least 25 years to life.
(2) ☐ I understand that if I am convicted of a violent felony, jail or prison conduct/work-time credit I may accrue will not exceed 15%.
(3) ☐ I understand that if I am admitting a prior strike conviction, prison work-time credit that I may accrue will not exceed 20% of the total term of imprisonment.
(4) ☐ I understand that if I am convicted of murder or a third felony conviction of certain offenses, I am ineligible to receive work-time credits. Count is such an offense.

g. Prior Prison Term or County Jail Sentence Under Penal Code Section 1170(h)(5) ☐
I understand that if I am sentenced to prison or county jail under Penal Code section 1170(h)(5), the penalty for any future felony conviction may be increased as a result of my incarceration in this case.

h. Driver's License and Vehicle Forfeiture ☐
I understand that my privilege to drive a motor vehicle may be revoked or suspended by the court or the California Department of Motor Vehicles, and my vehicle may be ordered forfeited if it was involved in the offense.

PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA v. Defendant(s):	CASE NUMBER:

INITIALS

3. i. Immigration Consequences
I understand that if I am not a citizen of the United States, my plea of guilty or no contest may or, with certain offenses, will result in my deportation, exclusion from reentry to the United States, and denial of naturalization and amnesty, and that the appropriate consulate may be informed of my conviction. The offenses that will result in such immigration action include, but are not limited to, an aggravated felony, conspiracy, a controlled substance offense, a firearm offense, and, under certain circumstances, a moral turpitude offense. ☐

j. Firearms
I understand that federal and state laws prohibit a convicted felon from possessing firearms or ammunition for life. ☐

k. Other Consequences (specify): ☐

4. RIGHT TO AN ATTORNEY
I understand that I have the right to an attorney of my choice to represent me throughout the proceedings. If I cannot afford to hire an attorney, the court will appoint one to represent me. ☐

I hereby give up my right to be represented by an attorney. ☐

5. OTHER CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS
I understand that I am entitled to each of the following rights as to the charges listed in item 1 (on page 1):

a. Right to a Jury Trial
I understand that I have a right to a speedy and public jury trial. At the trial, I would be presumed to be innocent, and I could not be convicted unless, after hearing all of the evidence, 12 impartial jurors chosen from the community were unanimously convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that I am guilty. I have a right, through my counsel, to participate in jury selection. ☐

b. Right to a Court Trial
I understand that, as an alternative to a jury trial, if the prosecutor agrees, I may give up a jury trial and have a court trial in which the judge alone, without a jury, hears the evidence. I still could not be convicted unless, after hearing all of the evidence, the judge was convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that I am guilty. ☐

c. Right to Confront and Cross-Examine Witnesses
I understand that I have the right to confront and cross-examine all witnesses testifying against me. This means that the prosecution must produce the witnesses in court, they must testify under oath in my presence, and my attorney may question them. ☐

d. Right to Remain Silent and Not to Incriminate Myself
I understand that I have the right to remain silent, and my silence cannot be considered as evidence against me. I understand that I also have the right not to incriminate myself, and I cannot be forced to testify. ☐

e. Right to Produce Evidence and to Present a Defense
I understand that I have a right to present evidence and to have the court issue subpoenas to bring to court all witnesses and evidence favorable to me, at no cost to me. I also have the right to testify on my own behalf. ☐

6. BEFORE THE PLEA

a. Discussion With My Attorney ☐

Before entering this plea, I have had a full opportunity to discuss the following with my attorney:

(1) The facts of my case;
(2) The elements of the charged offenses, prior convictions, enhancements, and special allegations;
(3) Any defenses that I may have;
(4) My constitutional and statutory rights and waiver of those rights;
(5) The consequences of this plea, including the immigration consequences; and
(6) Anything else I think is important to my case.

6. b. Questions
I have no further questions of the court or of my attorney with regard to my plea and admissions in this case, any of the rights, or anything else on this form. ☐

c. Stipulation to Commissioner
I understand that I have the right to have a judge take my plea and sentence me. I give up this right and agree to have a commmissioner, sitting as a temporary judge, take my plea and sentence me. ☐

d. Medications or Controlled Substances
I am not taking any medication that affects my ability to understand this form and the consequences of my plea, have not recently consumed any alcohol or drugs, and am not suffering from any medical condition, except for the following: ☐

e. Court Approval of Plea Agreement
I understand that the plea agreement in item 2 (on pages 1 and 2) is based on the facts before the court. I understand that if the court approves this plea agreement the approval of the court is not binding, and that the court may withdraw its approval of the plea agreement upon further consideration of the matter. I understand that if the court withdraws its approval of this plea agreement I will be allowed to withdraw my plea. (Pen. Code, § 1192.5.) ☐

7. STATUTORY RIGHT TO A PRELIMINARY HEARING
I understand that before I have a trial, the law gives me the right to a speedy preliminary hearing at which the prosecution would produce evidence and the court must find reasonable cause to believe I committed the crimes with which I have been charged. I understand that I have all of the above constitutional rights at the preliminary hearing, except for the right to a jury trial. ☐

I give up my right to a preliminary hearing and the constitutional rights listed in item 5 (on page 4).

8. WAIVER OF CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS ☐
I give up, for each of the charges and allegations listed in item 1 (on page 1), my right to a jury trial, my right to a court trial, my right to confront and cross-examine witnesses, my right to remain silent and not to incriminate myself, and my right to produce evidence and to present a defense, including my right to testify on my own behalf. I understand that I am, in fact, incriminating myself with my plea.

9. THE PLEA ☐
I freely and voluntarily plead ☐ GUILTY ☐ NO CONTEST to the charges listed in item 1 (on page 1) and admit the allegations listed in item 1 (on page 1), understanding that this plea and admission will lead to the penalties listed in item 2 (on pages 1 and 2).

a. I offer my plea of guilty or no contest freely and voluntarily and with full understanding of everything in this form. No one has made any threats; used any force against me, my family, or my loved ones; or made any promises to me, except as listed in this form, in order to convince me to plead guilty or no contest. ☐

b. I understand that the court is required to find a factual basis for my plea to make sure that I am entering a plea to the proper offenses under the facts of the case.

I offer to the court the following as the basis for my plea of guilty or no contest and any admissions:

(1) I understand that the court may consider the following as proof of the factual basis for my plea: ☐

(a) ☐ Preliminary hearing transcript
(b) ☐ Police report
(c) ☐ Probation report
(d) ☐ Welfare investigator's declaration
(e) ☐ Court documents regarding any alleged prior offenses
(f) ☐ Other (specify):
(g) ☐ (Specify facts):

PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA v. Defendant(s):	CASE NUMBER:

9. b. (2) I am pleading guilty or no contest to take advantage of a plea agreement (my attorney will stipulate to a factual basis for the plea). (People v. West (1970) 3 Cal.3d 595.) ☐

10. AFTER THE PLEA

a. Surrender
I understand that the court is allowing me to surrender at a later date to begin serving time in custody. ☐

I agree that if I fail to appear on the date set for surrender or sentencing without a legal excuse, my plea will become an "open plea" to the court, I will not be allowed to withdraw my plea, and I may be sentenced up to the maximum allowed by law. ☐

b. Sentencing Court
I understand that I have the right to be sentenced by the same judge or commissioner who takes my plea. I give up that right and agree that any judge or commissioner may sentence me. ☐

c. Sentencing Date
I understand that I have the right to be sentenced within 20 court days. I give up that right and agree to be sentenced at a later date. ☐

11. MANDATORY WARNING ☐
I understand that if I am charged with violating Vehicle Code section 23103, as specified in Vehicle Code section 23103.5, or Vehicle Code sections 23152 or 23153, the following warning applies:

You are hereby advised that being under the influence of alcohol or drugs, or both, impairs your ability to safely operate a motor vehicle. Therefore, it is extremely dangerous to human life to drive while under the influence of alcohol or drugs, or both. If you continue to drive while under the influence of alcohol or drugs, or both, and as a result of that driving someone is killed, you can be charged with murder.

DEFENDANT'S STATEMENT

I have read or have had read to me this form and have initialed each of the items that applies to my case. If I have an attorney, I have discussed each item with my attorney. By putting my initials next to the items in this form, I am indicating that I understand and agree with what is stated in each item that I have initialed. The nature of the charges, possible defenses, and effects of any prior convictions, enhancements, and special allegations have been explained to me. I understand each of the rights outlined above, and I give up each of them to enter my plea.

COURT'S FINDINGS AND ORDER

The court, having reviewed this form (and any addenda), and having orally examined the defendant, finds as follows:

1. The defendant has read or has had read to him or her and understands each of the initialed items in this form.
2. The defendant understands the nature of the crimes and allegations listed in item 1 (on page 1) and the consequences of the plea and any admissions.
3. The defendant expressly, knowingly, understandingly, and intelligently waives his or her constitutional and statutory rights.
4. The defendant's plea, admissions, and waiver of rights are made freely and voluntarily.
5. A factual basis exists for the plea and admissions, or the defendant is pleading pursuant to a plea bargain under People v. West.

The court accepts the defendant's plea, admissions, and waiver of rights, and the defendant is hereby convicted based thereon.

It is ordered that this document be filed with the court's records of this case and that the defendant's plea, admissions, and waiver of rights be accepted and entered in the minutes of this court.

Executive Summary

The Criminal Law Advisory Committee recommends amending rule 4.130 of the California Rules of Court relating to mental competency proceedings in criminal cases to incorporate changes due to Assembly Bill 1810 (Stats. 2018, ch. 34), a bill that significantly altered the statutory landscape for mental competency proceedings.

Recommendation

The Criminal Law Advisory Committee recommends that the Judicial Council amend rule 4.130 of the California Rules of Court, effective January 1, 2020, to:

1. Require an expert competency report to contain an opinion as to whether the symptoms motivating the defendant's behavior would respond to mental health treatment;

2. Address diversion for defendants found to be incompetent; and

3. Address posttrial hearings on competency, both in "off-ramp" cases under Penal Code section 1370(a)(1)(G) and after a defendant has been terminated from diversion.

The text of the amended rule is attached at pages 6–10.

Relevant Previous Council Action

Rule 4.130 was adopted effective January 1, 2007. It was subsequently amended, effective January 1, 2018, to implement recommendations from the Judicial Council's Mental Health Issues Implementation Task Force to identify the information that must be included in a court-appointed expert's report on a criminal defendant's competency to stand trial.

Analysis/Rationale

Effective June 27, 2018, AB 1810 (see Link A) established mental health diversion (Pen. Code, §§ 1001.35, 1001.36; see Links B and C). It also amended the statutes for mental competency proceedings in both misdemeanor and felony cases to allow a judge to grant diversion to a defendant who has been found incompetent to stand trial. (Pen. Code, §§ 1370, 1370.01; see Links D and E.) Assembly Bill 1810 also provided a mechanism for a judge to reconsider the competency of a defendant awaiting transfer to a state hospital when presented with substantial evidence that the defendant has regained competence—essentially providing a procedural "off-ramp" on the road to the State Hospital. (Pen. Code, §§ 1370(a)(1)(G).) This proposal updates California Rules of Court,[1] rule 4.130, which governs mental competency proceedings, to account for these significant changes in law.

Policy implications

This proposal may require that a court-appointed expert conduct an evaluation of the defendant that is more extensive than what is required by the current rule and provide greater detail in the expert report. Accordingly, implementation may result in increased costs to the courts depending on how they compensate court-appointed experts and whether their experts currently provide the information required by the rule amendments in their reports. However, the proposal also promotes efficiencies avoiding the unnecessary delay and costs caused by requiring a report by an expert that assesses competency and a separate report by another expert that assesses eligibility for diversion.

Comments

This proposal circulated for comment from April 11, 2019, to June 10, 2019. Eight comments were received. Four commenters agreed with the proposal, three commenters agreed with the proposal if modified, and one commenter disagreed with the proposed changes. The committee revised the standard in response to the comments. The comments raised four main issues, discussed below.

The People's right to request a determination of probable cause under Penal Code section 1368.1(a)

Three commenters expressed concern that the circulated language , which referred to the People's right to request a preliminary examination under Penal Code section 1368.1(a) (see Link F), was imprecise or overbroad. The committee agreed and modified the proposed amendment to rule 4.130(b)(3) to more specifically refer to the defendant's right to request a preliminary examination under Penal Code section 1368.1(a)(1), and the People's right to request a determination of probable cause as provided in Penal Code section 1368.1(a)(2) and rule 4.131 (see Link G).

Waiver of competency trial

The proposed amendment to rule 4.130(c), as circulated, stated that if mental competency proceedings are initiated, criminal proceedings are suspended and may not be reinstated until a trial on the competency of the defendant has been concluded and the defendant is found mentally competent at a trial conducted under Penal Code section 1369 (see Link H), at a hearing conducted under Penal Code section 1370(a)(1)(G), or at a hearing following a certification of restoration under Penal Code section 1372 (see Link I). One commenter stated that the circulated language did not take into account that a criminal proceeding may be reinstated when a defendant stipulates or waives the right to a competency trial. The committee discussed whether the circulated language was sufficient to cover the situation raised by the commenter, as well as other related situations, and decided not to incorporate any changes without seeking further public comment.

Proposed added requirements to court procedures

One commenter stated that the proposal would mandate court procedures that should be permissive or discretionary. The proposal includes two new requirements. (All other recommended components would be optional.) First, the proposed rule would require an expert competency report to contain an opinion as to "whether the symptoms motivating the behavior would respond to treatment." This language, proposed to be added to rule 4.130(d)(1)(B), is intended to facilitate assessment for mental health diversion eligibility for defendants in competency proceedings. The committee believes this ultimately would promote efficiencies by avoiding the unnecessary delay caused by requiring a report by an expert that assesses competency and a separate report by another expert that assesses eligibility for diversion.

The committee also notes that the rule currently in effect requires that the report include "[a] recommendation, if possible, for a placement or type of placement or treatment program that is most appropriate for restoring the defendant to competency." (Rule 4.130(d)(2)G).) The committee concluded that the likely benefit of the proposed requirement outweighed any potential burden, because it is sufficiently similar to what is already required.

Second, the proposed rule adds language in subparagraph (h)(2)(C) regarding posttrial hearings on competence, requiring the court's posttrial findings as to the defendant's mental competency to be stated on the record and recorded in the minutes. The committee recognized that, out of concerns for the defendant's privacy, the practice of many courts is to limit public access to competency reports and evaluations, which serve as the primary basis for a court's findings on mental competence. In requiring the court's findings to be on the record and recorded in the minutes, the committee sought to balance the public's First Amendment right of access to court records with a defendant's privacy interests in their personal medical information. Based on these considerations, the committee retained the requirements as proposed in the rule amendments.

Request for more guidance on proposed procedures and eligibility requirements
One commenter stated that the proposal—whether addressing procedures for mental incompetency diversion or for posttrial hearings on competency—does not provide adequate guidance to the courts. Specifically, the commenter sought additional guidance on the eligibility criteria for mental incompetency diversion. After discussion, the committee declined to revise the guidance on the proposed procedures and eligibility requirements. The committee notes that the eligibility criteria for mental health diversion is set forth in Penal Code section 1001.36(b)(1) and (2), and apply equally when a court is considering mental incompetency diversion pursuant to Penal Code section 1370(a)(1)(B)(iv). Additionally, at the outset, in developing this proposal, the committee intentionally chose to limit its scope, given the statutory language in Penal Code section 1001.35(b) favoring local discretion in development and implementation of diversion options and the lack of case law in this area.

Alternatives considered

In addition to the alternatives considered in response to the public comments, the committee considered creating a separate rule for mental health diversion that could be cross-referenced with the rule on competency for defendants who were granted diversion after being found incompetent. But ultimately—given the paucity of case law on mental health diversion and the statutory language favoring local discretion in implementation—the committee decided to solely update the existing rule on competency proceedings at this time. (See Pen. Code, § 1001.35(b).)

In developing the proposal, the committee discussed whether to require a court-appointed expert to opine on the defendant's eligibility for mental health diversion, but concluded that was too ambiguous and potentially also too burdensome.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

The fiscal and operational impacts of this proposal reflect the significant changes to mental competency proceedings set forth by AB 1810. As noted, this proposal may require that a court-appointed expert conduct a more extensive evaluation of the defendant than required by the current rule and provide greater detail in the expert report. Accordingly, it may result in increased costs to the courts depending on how they compensate court-appointed experts and whether their experts currently provide the information required by the rule amendments in their reports.

Some commenters noted that court-ordered and monitored diversion could increase court costs. The committee notes that this increase is associated with the legislative changes made by AB 1810, not as a result of this proposal.

Rule 4.130 of the California Rules of Court is amended, effective January 1, 2020, to read:

Rule 4.130. Mental competency proceedings

(a) * * *

(b) Initiation of mental competency proceedings

(1)–(2) * * *

(3) In a felony case, if the judge initiates mental competency proceedings prior to the preliminary examination, counsel for the defendant may request a preliminary examination as provided in Penal Code section 1368.1(a)(1), or counsel for the People may request a determination of probable cause as provided in Penal Code section 1368.1(a)(2) and rule 4.131.

(c) Effect of initiating mental competency proceedings

(1) If mental competency proceedings are initiated, criminal proceedings are suspended and may not be reinstated until a trial on the competency of the defendant has been concluded and the defendant ~~either:~~ is found mentally competent at a trial conducted under Penal Code section 1369, at a hearing conducted under Penal Code section 1370(a)(1)(G), or at a hearing following a certification of restoration under Penal Code section 1372.

~~(A) Is found mentally competent; or~~

~~(B) Has his or her competency restored under Penal Code section 1372.~~

(2)–(3) * * *

(d) Examination of defendant after initiation of mental competency proceedings

(1) On initiation of mental competency proceedings, the court must inquire whether the defendant, or defendant's counsel, seeks a finding of mental incompetence.

(2) Any court-appointed experts must examine the defendant and advise the court on the defendant's competency to stand trial. Experts' reports are to be submitted to the court, counsel for the defendant, and the prosecution. The report must include the following:

(A) A brief statement of the examiner's training and previous experience as it relates to examining the competence of a criminal defendant to stand trial and preparing a resulting report;

(B) A summary of the examination conducted by the examiner on the defendant, including a summary of the defendant's mental status, a ~~current~~ diagnosis under the most recent version of the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders, if possible, of the defendant's current mental disorder or disorders, and a statement as to whether symptoms of the mental disorder or disorders which motivated the defendant's behavior would respond to mental health treatment ~~summary of the defendant's mental status~~;

(C)–(G) * * *

(3) Statements made by the defendant during the examination to experts appointed under this rule, and products of any such statements, may not be used in a trial on the issue of the defendant's guilt or in a sanity trial should defendant enter a plea of not guilty by reason of insanity.

(e) * * *

(f) Posttrial procedure

(1) If the defendant is found mentally competent, the court must reinstate the criminal proceedings.

(2) If the defendant is found to be mentally incompetent, the criminal proceedings remain suspended and the court must ~~follow the procedures stated in Penal Code section 1370 et seq.~~ either issue an order committing the person for restoration treatment under the provisions of the governing statute, or, in the case of a person eligible for commitment under Penal Code sections 1370 or 1370.01, may consider placing the committed person on a program of diversion.

(g) Diversion of a person eligible for commitment under section 1370 or 1370.01

(1) After the court finds that the defendant is mentally incompetent and before the defendant is transported to a facility for restoration under section 1370(a)(1)(B)(i), the court may consider whether the defendant may benefit from diversion under Penal Code section 1001.36. The court may set a hearing to determine whether the defendant is an appropriate candidate for diversion. When determining whether to exercise its discretion to grant diversion under this section, the court may consider previous records of participation in diversion under section 1001.36.

(2) The maximum period of diversion after a finding that the defendant is incompetent to stand trial is the lesser of two years or the maximum time for restoration under Penal Code section 1370(c)(1) (for felony offenses) or 1370.01(c)(1) (for misdemeanor offenses).

(3) The court may not condition a grant of diversion for defendant found to be incompetent on either:

(A) The defendant's consent to diversion, either personally, or through counsel; or

(B) A knowing and intelligent waiver of the defendant's statutory right to a speedy trial, either personally, or through counsel.

(4) A finding that the defendant suffers from a mental disorder or disorders rendering the defendant eligible for diversion, any progress reports concerning the defendant's treatment in diversion, or any other records related to a mental disorder or disorders that were created as a result of participation in, or completion of, diversion or for use at a hearing on the defendant's eligibility for diversion under this section, may not be used in any other proceeding without the defendant's consent, unless that information is relevant evidence that is admissible under the standards described in article I, section 28(f)(2) of the California Constitution.

(5) If, during the period of diversion, the court determines that criminal proceedings should be reinstated under Penal Code section 1001.36(d), the court must, under Penal Code section 1369, appoint a psychiatrist, licensed psychologist, or any other expert the court may deem appropriate, to examine the defendant and return a report, opining on the defendant's competence to stand trial. The expert's report must be provided to counsel for the People and to the defendant's counsel.

(A) On receipt of the evaluation report, the court must conduct an inquiry into the defendant's current competency, under the procedures set forth in (h)(2) of this rule.

(B) If the court finds by a preponderance of the evidence that the defendant is mentally competent, the court must hold a hearing as set forth in Penal Code section 1001.36(d).

(C) If the court finds by a preponderance of the evidence that the defendant is mentally incompetent, criminal proceedings must remain suspended, and the court must order that the defendant be committed, under Penal Code section 1370 (for felonies) or 1370.01 (for misdemeanors), and placed for restoration treatment.

(D) If the court concludes, based on substantial evidence, that the defendant is mentally incompetent and is not likely to attain competency within the time remaining before the defendant's maximum date for returning to court, and has reason to believe the defendant may be gravely disabled, within the meaning of Welfare and Institutions Code section 5008(h)(1), the court may, instead of issuing a commitment order under Penal Code sections 1370 or 1370.01, refer the matter to the conservatorship investigator of the county of commitment to initiate conservatorship proceedings for the defendant under Welfare and Institutions Code section 5350 et seq.

(6) If the defendant performs satisfactorily and completes diversion, the case must be dismissed under the procedures stated in Penal Code section 1001.36, and the defendant must no longer be deemed incompetent to stand trial.

(h) Posttrial hearings on competence

(1) If, at any time after the court has declared a defendant incompetent to stand trial, and counsel for the defendant, or a jail medical or mental health staff provider, provides the court with substantial evidence that the defendant's psychiatric symptoms have changed to such a degree as to create a doubt in the mind of the judge as to the defendant's current mental incompetence, the court may appoint a psychiatrist or a licensed psychologist to examine the defendant and, in an examination with the court, opine as to whether the defendant has regained competence.

(2) On receipt of the evaluation report, the court must direct the clerk to serve a copy on counsel for the People and counsel for the defendant. If, in the opinion of the appointed expert, the defendant has regained competence, the court must conduct a hearing, as if a certificate of restoration of competence had been filed under Penal Code section 1372(a)(1), except that a presumption of competency does not apply. At the hearing, the court may consider any evidence, presented by any party, which is relevant to the question of the defendant's current mental competency.

(A) At the conclusion of the hearing, if the court finds that it has been established by a preponderance of the evidence that the defendant is mentally competent, the court must reinstate criminal proceedings.

(B) At the conclusion of the hearing, if the court finds that it has not been established by a preponderance of the evidence that the defendant is mentally competent, criminal proceedings must remain suspended.

(C) The court's findings on the defendant's mental competency must be stated on the record and recorded in the minutes.

1.	Los Angeles County Public Defender by Ricardo D. Garcia, Public Defender Los Angeles County Alternate Public Defender by Erika Anzoategui, Acting Alternate Public Defender	NI	This proposed rule change is overbroad in stating a judge's obligation to permit a district attorney's right to demand a preliminary hearing pursuant to Penal Code section 1368.1, subdivision (a). The proposed language states: (3) In a felony case, if the judge initiates mental competency proceedings prior to the preliminary examination, counsel for the defendant or counsel for the People may request a preliminary examination as provided in Penal Code section 1368.1(a) and rule 4.131. Penal Code section 1368.1, subdivision (a)(1), authorizes a defendant, but not a prosecutor to request a preliminary hearing. By contrast, Penal Code section 1368.1, subdivision (a)(2), authorizes the defendant and the prosecutor to request a preliminary hearing. As such, this proposed new rule should be modified to reflect the plain meaning of Penal Code section 1368.1, subdivision (a), in its entirety as suggested below: (3) (a) In a felony case, if the judge initiates mental competency proceedings prior to the preliminary examination, counsel for the defendant may request a preliminary examination as provided in Penal Code section 1368.1(a)(1) and rule 4.131. (b) In a felony case involving death, great bodily harm, or a serious threat to	The committee agrees, in part, with the comment, and has modified the proposal to more clearly distinguish between a preliminary hearing requested by the defendant under section 1368.1(a)(1) and a determination of probable cause requested by the People under Penal Code section 1368.1(a)(2) and rule 4.131.

5.	Superior Court of Riverside County by Susan Ryan, Chief Deputy – Legal Services	N	The added language to rule 4.130(b)(3) is at best imprecise, and at worst contrary to statute. Penal Code § 1368.1(a)(1) gives the defendant, and only the defendant, the right to request a preliminary hearing while criminal hearings are suspended (see Penal Code § 1368(c)), which makes sense because the purpose is to ensure that a defendant is not committed for competency treatment in the absence of probable cause to bring him to trial, and a preliminary hearing held while a defendant is incompetent cannot be used as the basis for an information anyway (see generally People v. Duncan (2000) 78 Cal.App.4th 765, 769-72). In other words, Penal Code § 1368.1 lets a defendant request a preliminary hearing to test whether the charges are baseless and a competency commitment is unnecessary; there is no similarly compelling reason why the prosecution would need to request a potentially useless preliminary hearing while criminal proceedings are suspended. But instead of saying that, the proposed amendment to rule 4.130(b)(3) is flatly contrary to statute because it permits the District Attorney to request a preliminary hearing while criminal proceedings are suspended, perhaps they were going for a reference to Penal Code § 1368.1(a)(2). This provision does not give the District Attorney the right to request a preliminary hearing to support the filing of an	The committee agrees, in part, with the comment, and has modified the proposal to more clearly distinguish between a preliminary hearing requested by the defendant under section 1368.1(a)(1) and a determination of probable cause requested by the People under Penal Code section 1368.1(a)(2) and rule 4.131.

			information, but instead the right to request a probable cause determination for the specific and limited purpose of establishing a necessary prerequisite to a conservatorship as set forth in Welfare & Institutions Code § 5008(h)(1)(B)(ii). The background here is that such a conservatorship used to require a pending indictment or information, which posed a problem when the competency proceedings in the criminal case took place prior to that point; but the statutes were amended by Stats. 2017, ch. 246 to fix this and provide the probable cause hearing located in Penal Code § 1368.1(a)(2).
			One suggestion would be to change the language of proposed rule 4.130(b)(3) so as to differentiate between the defendant's request of a prelim under Penal Code § 1368.1(a)(1), and the People's request for a probable cause determination under Penal Code § 1368.1(a)(2) and rule 4.131.	The committee agrees with these suggestions and has incorporated them into the amendments that it is recommending for adoption.

It is recommended that portion of the rule be amended as follows: "If mental competency proceedings are initiated, criminal proceedings are suspended and may not be reinstated until a trial on the competency of the defendant has been concluded or the defendant has waived his or her right to a trial and the defendant either: is found mentally competent at a trial conducted under Penal Code section 1369, at a hearing conducted under Penal Code section 1370(a)(1)(G), or at a hearing following a certification of restoration under Penal Code section 1372."	Because this would be a substantive change to the proposal, the committee believes public comment should be sought before it is considered for adoption. The committee will consider these suggestions during a future rules cycle.

			The JRS notes the following impact to court operations: • Impact on existing automated systems (e.g., case management system, accounting system, technology infrastructure or security equipment, Jury Plus/ACS, etc.) • Results in additional training, which requires the commitment of staff time and court resources. • Increases staff workload • Impact on local or statewide justice partners	No response required.
			The proposal seeks to mandate court operations/procedures that, instead, should be permissive/discretionary. The proposed rule should instead be in the form of guidelines or suggested practices.	The committee appreciates this input but determined that retaining the two requirements in the proposed rule (the other components of the proposal are discretionary) would be beneficial. First, the proposed rule adds language in subparagraph (d)(1)(B) requiring an expert report to contain an opinion as to "whether the symptoms motivating the behavior would respond to treatment," to facilitate assessment for mental health diversion eligibility. The committee believes this ultimately promotes efficiencies by avoiding the unnecessary delay caused by requiring a report by an expert that assesses competency and a separate report by another expert that assesses eligibility for diversion. The committee also notes that the rule currently in effect requires that the report include "[a] recommendation, if possible, for a placement or type of placement or treatment program that is most appropriate for restoring the defendant to competency." (Rule 4.130(d)(2)G).) The committee concluded that the likely benefit of the proposed requirement outweighed any potential burden, because it is sufficiently similar to what is already required. Second, the proposed rule adds language in subparagraph (h)(2)(C) requiring the court's posttrial findings as to the defendant's mental competency to be stated on the record and recorded in the minutes. The committee recognized that out of concerns for the defendant's privacy, the practice of many courts is to limit public access to competency reports and evaluations, which serve as the primary basis for a court's findings on mental competence. In requiring the court's findings to be on the record and recorded in the minutes, the committee sought to balance the public's First Amendment right of access to court records with a defendant's privacy interests in their personal medical information.

			This proposal may require case management vendors to modify case management systems to develop codes that will allow us to report these cases properly. We may need new JBSIS codes as well. Unfortunately, we will not know what system modifications are required until we can consult with the vendor.	No response required.
			A factor to consider in light of the fact that we are in the midst of transitioning to a new case management system, is whether asking the vendor to modify the current system is practical at this time. 			court for testing prior to implementation. We may not meet the 2020 proposed implementation date.
			Unfortunately, neither the proposed procedures for mental incompetency diversion nor the proposed procedures for posttrial hearings on competency provide adequate guidance to the courts, specifically the eligibility criteria for mental incompetency diversion.	The committee notes that the eligibility criteria for mental health diversion is set forth in Penal Code section 1001.36(b)(1) and (2), and apply equally when a court is considering mental incompetency diversion pursuant to Penal Code section 1370(a)(1)(B)(iv). Additionally, at the outset, in developing this proposal, the committee intentionally chose to limit its scope, given the statutory language in Penal Code section 1001.35(b) favoring local discretion in development and implementation of diversion options and the lack of case law in this area.
			This proposal will add additional hearings to incompetent to stand trial proceedings in that it will allow the district attorney to request a preliminary examination after the court has suspended criminal proceedings. Currently, the statute only allows defense counsel to request a preliminary hearing after a finding of incompetence.	The committee agrees, in part, with the comment, and has modified the proposal to more clearly distinguish between a preliminary hearing requested by the defendant under section 1368.1(a)(1) and a determination of probable cause requested by the People under Penal Code section 1368.1(a)(2) and rule 4.131.
			The court would also be required to set a hearing to consider diversion after the court found a defendant incompetent. New minute codes are required to record any findings of eligibility for diversion. Currently, the Riverside University Health System – Behavioral Health Department is responsible for providing treatment plans and progress reports for defendants who are placed on mental health	No response required.

			diversion. Should we utilize the same resources to monitor defendants while they are on mental incompetency diversion, we may overburden them in terms of being able to meet the demands of the court in addition to the cost of staffing and other resources.
			Additionally, if the court places a defendant on mentally incompetent diversion, the court must set a hearing when a defendant is terminated from diversion, which results in an additional hearing. The court is also required to appoint a medical examiner to reexamine the defendant's competence. Thus, the county would incur additional costs for the medical evaluation.	No response required.
			The proposal also requires the court reconsider findings of incompetency on defendant who the court previously found incompetent and are currently awaiting placement, which will result in more hearings added to the court's calendar.	No response required.
			Currently, during 1372 Certification of Mental Competency Hearings, the court is not required to state any findings on the record. However, under this proposal, the court must state its findings as to the defendant's mental competency on the record and the courtroom assistants must record the findings in the minutes. This will result in the need to create more minute codes to record accurately the court's findings. Additionally, this proposal allows the court to consider any evidence, presented by any party, which is relevant to the defendant's current mental competency. The	No response required.

			courtroom assistants may then be required to mark and admit this evidence and create an exhibit list. If these documents are not ordered returned the counsel, they will be sent to the Exhibit Custodian. According to the Department of State Hospitals, they have noticed an increase in the number of defendants requiring placement. We cannot estimate how many defendants would be eligible for incompetency diversion; therefore, we may need to consider opening a second mental health court at the Hall of Justice, and if that occurs, the court would need additional court staff. Executive Summary

The Criminal Law Advisory Committee recommends approval of a new optional form and an accompanying information sheet for petitioners to use with requests for a court to review a criminal record for dismissal, vacatur, resentencing, reduction, sealing, or other record clearing remedies. The new forms will help self-represented petitioners meet requirements for service on the prosecuting agency and other relevant parties.

Recommendation

The Criminal Law Advisory Committee recommends that the Judicial Council, effective January 1, 2020, approve:

1. Proof of Service—Criminal Record Clearing (form CR-106), which can be used by petitioners to provide proof of service of a criminal record clearing request; and

2. Information on How to File a Proof of Service in Criminal Record Clearing Requests (form CR-106-INFO), which provides general information and directions on how to use and file form CR-106.

The new forms are attached at pages 5–8.

Relevant Previous Council Action

The Judicial Council has taken no previous action on this proposal.

Analysis/Rationale

In recent years, the Legislature has passed multiple bills authorizing petitions for dismissal, sealing, or other related criminal record clearing relief in an increasing number of circumstances.[1] Many petitioners seeking relief are self-represented because these petitions are generally filed after the criminal case or inquiry has concluded. While developing forms to implement Penal Code section 851.91 (see Link A), the Criminal Law Advisory Committee discussed whether to develop an accompanying proof of service form. It determined instead to develop a single, optional proof of service form that could be used with several different record clearing requests. Such a form would help self-represented petitioners meet requirements for service on the prosecuting agency and other relevant parties, as set forth in the statutes that authorize the various forms of relief. (For example, under Penal Code section 851.91(b)(1)(D), a petition to seal arrest records must be served on the law enforcement agency that arrested petitioner.)

Policy implications

The committee intends for form CR-106 to reduce procedural barriers for self-represented petitioners seeking criminal record clearing.

Comments

This proposal circulated for comment from April 11 to June 10, 2019. Eight comments were received. Four commenters agreed with the proposal, one agreed with the proposal if modified, and three did not indicate a position but suggested changes. The committee revised the forms in response to the comments.

Several comments recommended making the forms more user-friendly by improving readability, simplifying language, and adding more information about electronic service. The committee agreed with the recommendations and incorporated them into the proposed forms.

One commenter recommended that the committee develop additional resources—such as step-by-step checklists—to guide self-represented litigants with record clearing requests. The committee declined to develop additional resources at this time.

The committee requested specific comments on whether it was confusing to have one proof of service form for use with a variety of record clearing requests arising from different statutes with different procedural requirements. Although one commenter stated that one form could be confusing, four commenters stated that a single form would not be confusing. The committee decided that a single proof of service form for use with many types of record clearing requests was more efficient.

[1] For example, Pen. Code, § 236.14 (vacatur relief for human trafficking victims meeting designated factors), Pen. Code, § 851.91 (sealing of arrest and related records), Pen. Code, § 1170.22 (recall or dismissal of conviction for violation of former Pen. Code, § 647f), and Pen. Code, § 1170.91 (resentencing of current or former members of the U.S. military who may be suffering from designated conditions).

Two commenters requested clarification on whether the proof of service form was intended for limited used—only in conjunction with the optional Judicial Council forms listed in CR-106-INFO[2]—or whether the proof of service form could be used with any record clearing request. The committee determined that it would be helpful to petitioners and the courts for the form to be used broadly, including with Proposition 64 forms and petitions for writs of habeas corpus. Accordingly, the list of optional Judicial Council forms on form CR-106-INFO was updated to include Petition/Application (Health and Safety Code, § 11361.8) (form CR-400) and Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus (form HC-001).

When developing the proposal, the committee discussed whether form CR-106 should track the requirements outlined in Code of Civil Procedure sections 1011 and 1013a, requiring service by mail or personal delivery to be accomplished by a person who is not a party to the case. No equivalent sections address service by mail or personal delivery in the Penal Code. The committee determined that these sections of the Code of Civil Procedure are likely inapplicable in record clearing actions, and there is no authority in the Penal Code for requiring that the server not be a party to the case.[3]

The committee requested specific comments on whether there were policy reasons for the server not to be a party to the action. One commenter stated that allowing a petitioner to serve copies of his or her own petition would reduce barriers for self-represented litigants. Another commenter stated that the policy reasons for nonparty service in a civil case did not seem to apply because, in the civil context, servers may need to be called as witnesses to establish proper service for ongoing court proceedings, whereas the main issue in criminal record clearing petitions is that service occurred, and the server would declare that service occurred under penalty of perjury. Two other commenters responded that there were no policy reasons for the server not to be a party to the action. Based on these comments, the committee recommends that the proof of service form reflect that petitioners may serve their own petitions.

[2] The following six petitions were listed in the circulated version of form CR-106-INFO: Petition for Dismissal (form CR-180), dismissals under Penal Code sections 1203.4, 1203.4a, 1203.41, 1203.42, 1203.43, and 1203.49, and reductions under Penal Code sections 17(b) and 17(d)(2); Petition for Dismissal (Military Personnel) (form CR-183), dismissals under Penal Code section 1170.9(h), and reductions under Penal Code section 17(b); Motion to Vacate Conviction or Sentence (form CR-187), vacating convictions under Penal Code sections 1016.5 and 1473.7; Petition/Application for Resentencing and Dismissal (form CR-404), resentencing and dismissal under Penal Code section 1170.22; Petition to Seal Arrest and Related Records (form CR-409), sealing under Penal Code section 851.91; and Petition for Resentencing Based on Health Conditions From Military Service Listed in Penal Code Section 1170.91(b) (form CR-412/MIL-412). In response to the comments, the committee added Petition/Application (Health and Safety Code, § 11361.8) (form CR-400) and Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus (form HC-001) to form CR-106-INFO.

[3] See People v. Glimps (1979) 92 Cal.App.3d 315, 325, fn. 6 (section 1011, specifying methods for service, does not apply in criminal actions because the statute appears in part 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure ["of Civil Actions"] and is not referenced in the Penal Code); People v. Superior Court (Laff) (2001) 25 Cal.4th 703, 729 ("only those procedural provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure that expressly are made applicable to penal actions apply in criminal cases").

Alternatives considered

When developing the proposal, the committee discussed whether to develop a generic proof of service form for use in all criminal proceedings. It determined that narrowing the form for use with record clearing requests would serve a more useful purpose. It noted that in many instances these requests are filed by self-represented petitioners, and the corresponding statutes require service on the prosecuting agency and other government agencies. The committee believed that an optional proof of service for use in these types of criminal proceedings would assist self-represented petitioners to better meet statutory notification and service requirements.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

The proposed forms are optional. Expected costs would be limited to the production of forms, training, and possible case management system updates.

CR-106-INFO Information on How to File a Proof of Service in Criminal Record Clearing Requests

1 What does this information sheet cover?

This information sheet tells you how to use and fill out Proof of Service—Criminal Record Clearing form CR-106. This information sheet does not need to be copied, served (delivered), or filed.

2 What is proof of service?

- A "proof of service" is a form used in legal cases.
- If you want a judge to look at your case, you or someone who is helping you has to file certain documents in court.
- You also have to give or mail copies of those documents to the other party in the case, usually the prosecutor.
- The proof of service has spaces for you or someone who is helping you to write in when, where, and how the other party got the documents.
- Once the proof of service is filled out and filed with the court, it shows the court that the other party got the documents.

3 What is record clearing?

- Record clearing is a process that allows you to ask a court to improve your criminal record.
- For example, a court may be able to change some convictions from felonies to misdemeanors.
- You can start the process of record clearing by filing certain documents or forms called "applications," "petitions," or "motions."

4 Who do I need to serve when I ask a court to clear my criminal record?

Most record clearing laws say you have to let the prosecuting agency (usually the district attorney) know about the record clearing request. Sometimes you also have to let law enforcement (like the police or sheriff) or other parties know about your request. You can do so by "serving" (delivering) a copy of the papers you filed with the court on the prosecuting agency or other parties. Read the record clearing law you are basing your request on carefully to see who needs to know about your record clearing request. Those are the parties who must be served.

5 Why do I need to file a proof of service?

Filing a proof of service shows the court that you have let the other parties know about the record clearing request by giving them a copy of the document or form you are using to make a record clearing request to the court.

6 When can I use Proof of Service—Criminal Record Clearing (form CR-106)?

Proof of Service—Criminal Record Clearing (form CR-106) is intended to be widely used with any record clearing request that requires notification or service of the request to the prosecuting agency and other parties, such as the following optional Judicial Council forms for record clearing:

- Petition for Dismissal (form CR-180), dismissals under Penal Code sections 1203.4, 1203.4a, 1203.41, 1203.42, 1203.43, and 1203.49, and reductions under Penal Code sections 17(b) and 17(d)(2)
- Petition for Dismissal (Military Personnel) (form CR-183), dismissals under Penal Code section 1170.9(h), and reductions under Penal Code section 17(b)
- Motion to Vacate Conviction or Sentence (form CR-187), vacating convictions under Penal Code sections 1016.5 and 1473.7
- Petition/Application (Health and Safety Code, § 11361.8) (form CR-400), relief under Proposition 64 for specified marijuana-related convictions
- Petition/Application for Resentencing and Dismissal (form CR-404), resentencing and dismissal under Penal Code section 1170.22
- Petition to Seal Arrest and Related Records (form CR-409), sealing under Penal Code section 851.91
- Petition for Resentencing Based on Health Conditions From Military Service Listed in Penal Code Section 1170.91(b) (form CR-412/ MIL-412)
- Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus (form HC-001)

Information on How to File a Proof of Service in Criminal Record Clearing Requests

7 Who can serve the petition or motion?

- In most cases, the law allows you (the person who is filing the record clearing request) to serve the document or form.
- You can also ask someone else to serve the document or form.
- The person who serves a document or form for record clearing and fills out the Proof of Service—Criminal Record Clearing (form CR-106) must be at least 18 years old.
- Read the record clearing law you are basing your request on carefully to see if it sets any other requirements for who can serve the request.

8 When are the other parties served, and when do I file a proof of service?

- Ask the court clerk if any local filing rules apply.
- In most cases, the other parties should be served after the original document or form is filed with the court. That way, the court may add helpful information to the document or form, such as a hearing date.
- Some courts require that the document or form is first served on the other parties, and then the original document or form is filed with the court, along with a completed and signed proof of service.
- When you file the document or form with the court, take the original plus at least two copies of your documents.
  - The court will keep the original.
  - The clerk will stamp your copies "Filed" and return them to you. Keep one copy for your records.
  - The other parties can be served with a copy of your court-stamped document or form, and then you should file the proof of service with the court after the parties are served.

9 How should the petition or motion be served?

There are three main ways to serve documents: by mail, personal delivery, or electronic service. Proof of Service—Criminal Record Clearing (form CR-106) can be used to prove service by mail or personal delivery.

If serving electronically:

- Do not use Proof of Service—Criminal Record Clearing (form CR-106).
- Carefully read and follow the requirements in California Rules of Court, rule 2.251, and use Proof of Electronic Service (form POS-050/EFS-050).

If someone else is serving documents on your behalf, make sure to provide them with the name of the agency that must be served (for example, San Francisco County District Attorney), the agency's address, and a copy of the document or form.

If serving by mail:

- The server should put one copy of the document or form in an envelope addressed to the agency, seal the envelope, and place first-class postage on the envelope; and
- The server should mail the document or form by depositing the envelope at a post office or mailbox or by depositing the envelope at an office or business mail drop where the server knows mail is picked up every day by the postal service.

If serving by personal delivery:

- The server should give the document or form to a person with the agency and note the name of the person, as well as the address, date, and time of the service.

Once the document or form has been served on the other parties by mail or personal delivery, the server should fill out and sign the proof of service form.

10 What do I do with Proof of Service—Criminal Record Clearing (form CR-106) once it is filled out?

You should file a completed proof of service with the court where you filed your document or form. Ask the court clerk if any local filing rules apply.

1.	Bay Area Legal Aid by Stacey Guillory Regional Reentry Coordinator	NI	Bay Area Legal Aid writes in response to your request for public comment concerning Judicial Council proposed forms CR-106 and CR-106-INFO. In concept, the form could achieve the stated purpose. It has the potential to empower individuals filing pro per to complete the entire process on their own. The term "record clearance" is a helpful signifier of relevancy for individuals seeking relief to diminish the impact of an arrest or criminal conviction.	No response required.
			We recommend streamlining the informational page and emphasizing key text for ease of reading (e.g., by using bold type). The use of modifiers such as "sometimes" or "in most cases" may make it more challenging to determine the appropriate course of action. The form and information sheet should be written in a way that would be understandable to a typical self-represented client who may more readily understand colloquial terms (e.g. felony reduction to a misdemeanor) rather than Penal Code sections or form titles.	The committee agrees with the suggestion to make changes to the information form to improve readability and has incorporated them into the proposed form that it is recommending for approval.
			Having one proof of service for such a variety of record clearing requests can be confusing because of the differences in procedural requirements for each criminal record remedy. If the Judicial Council believes that it is important to keep the proof of service for all record clearing requests to a singular form, we advise revising the form so that it walks an individual through each record clearing	The committee declines to develop additional resources at this time, but may in the future.

			process step by step. The information page should offer clear guidance on which process or procedure is required to remove any guesswork. We suggest five specific revisions to make form CR-106 easier for a self-represented individual to fill out. First, add checklists for: 1) the criminal record remedies a pro per litigant is filing; and 2) the documents they are filing. Second, highlight the service options under sections (4) and (5) as mutually exclusive. Third, in 4(c) include a line under the blank space to indicate information is needed for the date, city and state. Fourth, consider listing "District Attorney's Office served" and "Police Department served," if applicable, with a line under each blank space that needs to be filled out. Finally, we recommend using plain language in section 5(a) "name of person and agency:" with a line under each blank space that needs to be filled out.	The committee declines to develop additional resources at this time, but may consider these suggestions in the future. Regarding the suggestion to add lines under each blank space, the fillable version of the form has a fillable space for petitioners to indicate information in #4(c) for the date, city, and state, and in #5(a) for the name of person and agency.

			and for this reason should be allowed. An issue may arise if a party that needed to be served raises a problem with service, in which case the petitioner would need to demonstrate that they complied with the service requirements. This will probably not be a big enough occurrence to outweigh the benefit of allowing the petitioner to serve the other parties.
			• The Superior Court in Orange County requires that service be completed before filing the petition and that the completed/signed proof of service be filed at the same time as the petition.	The committee appreciates the comment. Form CR-106-INFO notes that this is the preferred process for some courts.
			• Consider adding "People v." in the Case Name box. This may help people filing on their own who may not know what the case name is.	The committee agrees with this suggestion and has incorporated it into the proposed form that it is recommending for approval.
		A	• Will this form be available for use with petitions not listed (e.g., Prop 47 and Prop 64 petitions) or where a separate proof of service form exists (e.g., Prop 64, CR-401)? If not, this should be stated. For petitions where a separate proof of service form exists, this form should state, either on the form itself or in the INFO sheet, that the person must/may check if there is another proof of service form specifically for that petition.	The committee intends for the form to be broadly used with all record clearing requests, including Prop. 47 and Prop. 64 petitions. The committee has incorporated changes reflecting this intention into the proposed forms that it is recommending for approval.
			• In Section 8 of the draft INFO sheet, the last clause of the last sentence should be amended to read, "along with a completed and signed proof of service."	The committee agrees with this suggestion and has incorporated it into the proposed form that it is recommending for approval.

3.	Los Angeles County Public Defender by Ricardo D. Garcia, Public Defender Los Angeles County Alternate Public Defender by Erika Anzoategui, Acting Alternate Public Defender	N/I	The proposal addresses the stated purpose of providing self-represented litigants with a streamlined proof of service, and instructions on how to use it. The proof of service form itself, CR-106, is understandable; one bullet point should be added informing the person who is filing to keep a copy for his or her records (see below). The information sheet, CR-106-INFO is less clear; we propose several changes below. It is not confusing to have one proof of service form for different record-clearing requests, and, particularly in this context, there is no policy reason why the server should not be a party to the case. It would in fact be helpful if this form could be used in all criminal proceedings. In the Clara Shortridge Foltz Criminal Justice Center in downtown Los Angeles, most documents that are filed in the main clerk's office must be served first, and proof of service must be included when the document is filed. If a litigant choses to file in a courtroom, the document can be filed with the judicial assistant and then served on the opposing party. Suggested Changes to Proposed Language: CR-106 Instructions Add final bullet point:	No response required. 			• You should keep a copy of the form for your records. CR-106-INFO 2. What is proof of service? A "proof of service" is a form used in legal cases. If you want a judge to review your case, you or someone who is helping you has to file certain documents in court. You also have to give or mail copies of those documents to the prosecutor on your case. The proof of service has spaces for you to write in when and where you gave the prosecutor the documents. Once you have filled it out and signed it, the proof of service shows the court that the prosecutor got the documents. 3. What is record-clearing? Record-clearing is a process that allows you to ask a court to improve your criminal record. For example, a court may be able to change some charges from felonies to misdemeanors. You can start the process of record-clearing by filing certain documents called "applications," "petitions," or "motions." 			Is there another better term for "record clearing?" "Record clearing" seems like the appropriate terminology.	No response required.

There is a risk that pro per defendants will construe the aforementioned language broadly and use this form when filing habeas petitions or other motions for resentencing or reductions in their sentence, or to vacate a conviction or sentence for a whole variety of reasons. Although the information form, in section 6, does give a more limiting list of when the form can be used, in order to avoid the confusion and overuse of the form, it may be beneficial to reference the list in CR-106 itself. Executive Summary

The Criminal Law Advisory Committee recommends approval of a new optional form, Petition for Resentencing Based on Health Conditions From Military Service Listed in Penal Code Section 1170.91(b) (form CR-412/MIL-412), for petitions for resentencing under Assembly Bill 865 (Stats. 2018, ch. 523). The legislation allows veterans to benefit retroactively from the passage of Penal Code section 1170.91, which permits a judge to consider enumerated conditions (sexual trauma, traumatic brain injury, post-traumatic stress disorder, substance abuse, or mental health problems) that have resulted from military service as a mitigating factor at sentencing. Due to a pending bill (Assem. Bill 581 (2019–2020 Reg. Sess.)) that would affect one element of the form, the committee is submitting alternate forms to the council and recommending that the appropriate form go into effect depending on whether AB 581 is enacted.

Recommendation

The Criminal Law Advisory Committee recommends that the Judicial Council, effective January 1, 2020:

1. Approve Petition for Resentencing Based on Health Conditions From Military Service Listed in Penal Code Section 1170.91(b) (form CR-412/MIL-412), only if AB 581 is not enacted, to be used by individuals who were sentenced before January 1, 2015 to petition for resentencing under Penal Code section 1170.91.

2. Approve Petition for Resentencing Based on Health Conditions From Military Service Listed in Penal Code Section 1170.91(b) (form CR-412/MIL-412), only if AB 581 is enacted, to be used by individuals to petition for resentencing under Penal Code section 1170.91, regardless of the date of the original sentence.

3. The form that does not become effective on January 1, 2020, is not approved for any use.

The new form is attached at page 5, with the alternate version incorporating statutory changes proposed by AB 581 on page 6.

Relevant Previous Council Action

At its October 2013 meeting, the Judicial Council approved an optional form, Notification of Military Status (form MIL-100), to facilitate a court's ability to address legal issues implicated by a party's military service status and to comply with alternative criminal sentencing considerations for current and former military service members under Penal Code section 1170.9. The form was subsequently amended to reflect legislation directing courts to inform criminal defendants at arraignment of laws designed for former or current military service members.

At its October 2015 meeting, the Judicial Council approved optional forms to facilitate implementation of Penal Code section 1170.9(h), legislation authorizing courts to order dismissal relief for certain defendants who acquired a criminal record due to a mental health disorder stemming from service in the United States military.

Analysis/Rationale

AB 2098 (Stats. 2014, ch. 163) enacted Penal Code section 1170.91 (see Link A), which requires courts to consider enumerated health conditions resulting from military service as a mitigating factor in felony sentencing. AB 2098 did not, however, apply to veterans convicted prior to January 1, 2015. AB 865 (see Link B) expanded the mitigating provisions of section 1170.91 to apply to veterans convicted of felonies prior to January 1, 2015, by allowing those veterans to petition for resentencing if they suffered from an enumerated health condition as a result of military service, and it was not considered as a factor in mitigation at the time of sentencing.

The California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation (CDCR) reported that as of February 2014, 4,521 currently incarcerated inmates at CDCR were verified by the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs as having prior military service. (Assem. Com. on Public Safety, Analysis of Assem. Bill No. 865 (2017–2018 Reg. Sess.) as amended Jan. 3, 2018, p. 4; see Link C.) Estimates are that about half of incarcerated veterans suffer from a mental health disorder. (Ibid.) Aside from the state prison population, eligible petitioners are likely incarcerated in county jails and out of custody on supervision (e.g., on parole or probation).

The Criminal Law Advisory Committee recommends an optional petition form since many of the AB 865 petitions for resentencing will be filed by pro se defendants, most of whom will be incarcerated and suffering from mental health problems. The committee consulted with the Veterans Subcommittee of the Collaborative Justice Courts Advisory Committee in developing the form. The subcommittee recommended developing a form and provided thoughtful feedback.

AB 581 and alternate forms

While the form circulated for public comment, the Legislature considered AB 581 (see Link D), which would amend section 1170.91 to allow a defendant to petition for resentencing without regard to whether the defendant was sentenced prior to January 1, 2015, and would clarify that relief is available whether or not there was argument or evidence about the defendant's condition at trial. If AB 581 becomes law, it will become effective January 1, 2020, and optional form CR-412/MIL-412 would have to be revised to take out item #6, a checkbox to indicate that the petitioner was sentenced before January 1, 2015. In order to assure that an appropriate version of the form becomes effective, the committee has drafted alternate versions of the form, at pages 5 and 6, to reflect a form based on current law and a form based on changes proposed by AB 581, and has submitted both to the Judicial Council. The committee recommends that the Judicial Council approve the forms so that only the relevant form goes into effect January 1, 2020. This will allow the council to approve the appropriate version of the form and make it available to eligible defendants without waiting for another rules cycle to elapse and will avoid having the council approve a form that is out of date three months before it is to take effect.

Policy implications

The Criminal Law Advisory Committee recommends an optional petition form since many of the AB 865 petitions for resentencing will be filed by pro se defendants, most of whom will be incarcerated and suffering from mental health problems. The form will facilitate the process for seeking relief for eligible defendants.

Comments

This proposal circulated for comment from April 11 to June 10, 2019. Eight comments were received. Two commenters agreed with the proposal, three agreed with the proposal if modified, and three did not indicate a position but appeared to agree with the proposal if modified. The committee revised the standard in response to the comments. The comments raised four main issues, discussed below.

Use by self-represented litigants and attorneys

The proposal requested specific comments on whether the form, which was drafted from a self-represented litigant's perspective, should be modified to include attorney information. Three commenters recommended modifying the form so that attorneys could use the form as well. One commenter recommended that the form should be limited to self-represented litigants, since attorneys could file original pleadings. The committee agreed that the form should be for use by both self-represented litigants and attorneys, noting that many courts prefer the uniformity of a standard form.

Sealing records
The circulated form included a check box for the petitioner to indicate attachment of relevant records or other documents supporting the claim; for example, military records, conviction documents, mental health treatment records, and medical records. The committee requested specific comments on whether the form should describe the process for filing these documents under seal, as they likely contained sensitive information. In response, three commenters stated that there should be more specific information about the process for filing sensitive documents under seal. Another commenter recommended removing the option from the form entirely, as the statute does not require a petitioner to submit evidence in support of the petition at the time of the initial filing. The commenter also noted that if counsel is appointed to represent the petitioner, that counsel may submit relevant evidence appropriately at the hearing. The committee agreed with the recommendation to remove the option to attach relevant records or other documents.

Appointment of Counsel
A commenter recommended that the petition include a request for appointment of counsel, since a defendant in a criminal action has the right to appointed counsel at a resentencing hearing if indigent. Because this would be a substantive change to the proposal, the committee believes public comment should be sought before the recommendation is considered for adoption. The committee intends to consider this recommendation during the next proposal cycle.

Information sheet
The proposal requested specific comments on whether the committee should develop an accompanying information sheet to aid self-represented litigants in filling out the petition and filing it with the court. Five commenters recommended development of an information sheet, largely to provide guidance on how to obtain and file records to support the petition, as well as providing information on eligibility and how to seek legal representation. As discussed, the committee decided to remove the part of the petition regarding the attachment of relevant records, reducing the need for an information sheet. Accordingly, the committee declined to develop an information sheet at this time.

Alternatives considered
In addition to the alternatives considered in response to the public comments, the committee considered titling the form Petition for Resentencing Based on Mental Health Problems From Military Service but, after receiving feedback, realized that the title did not fully capture the enumerated conditions listed in Penal Code section 1170.91(b). Specifically, though traumatic brain injury may be considered a mental health problem in some circumstances, it is more often conceived of as a physical disability or physical health problem. To remedy this ambiguity, the committee retitled the form Petition for Resentencing Based on Health Conditions From Military Service Listed in Penal Code Section 1170.91(b). For the same reason, the committee recommends using the term "health condition" throughout the form.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

Expected costs are limited to training, possible case management system updates, and the production of new forms. No other implementation requirements or operational impacts are expected.

			2. The form I feel can be understood by intended users, veterans in custody with qualifying health conditions.	No response required.
			3. The fact that it is drafted for both attorneys and self-represented litigants is a good thing. This does give eligible veterans the option of acquiring representation if so needed or desired.	No response required.
			4. The title of the form is clear enough to state that veterans are eligible for the mentioned health conditions.	No response required.
			5. The term "health condition" is a good way to word the umbrella in which the conditions are listed. I say that because it takes a bit of the stigma which comes with being labeled mentally ill. Due to pride some eligible veterans may not file if the are to be labeled "mentally ill." Plus, I am guessing that this form will be one which will become public record. Being that it can be viewed by everybody this could further hinder a veteran's ability to gain employment in order to successfully reintegrate back into society.	No response required.

The issue when incarcerated is the lack of resources. I have written the court in my county to request forms or information but only received a letter back telling me to retain an attorney since they provide no legal assistance to inmates. I have also requested the same information from the public defender's office for this AB 865 but have not received a reply. I do not want to suggest that veterans are dumb but when it comes to legal terms and different processes I know most people as a whole tend to be ignorant. It would be nice/helpful to receive instructions in layman terms. I personally get lost when a process begins to use legal terms, most of which I am unfamiliar with.	and mental health treatment records, because the statute does not require supporting documentation with the initial filing of the petition. This reduces the need for an information sheet. Accordingly, the committee declines to develop an information sheet at this time.
			7. As mentioned above, the information sheet would be very helpful. The only place to get any information here is the library. It is unfortunate that they are limited as well. If one does not know the forms needed, it is like attempting to find a needle in a hay's stack. Plus, there is a per page charge for any type of legal copy one requires.	The committee is removing the part of the form requesting submission of relevant records along with the petition, reducing the need for an information sheet. Accordingly, the committee declines to develop an information sheet at this time.

2.	Glenn Valliant Costa Mesa, California	AM	The form and the title are understandable and easy enough to use by self-represented defendants. The phrase "Health Condition" may invite submissions for non-qualifying conditions. "Mental Health Conditions" appears to be what the law specifies and you list on the form. I prefer "Mental Health Conditions", with an additional check box "other" and space to specify. We want to encourage as many as possible to try for resentence, but discourage those clearly ineligible. An info form should definitely be developed to accompany this with suggested additions (and explanations in the info form 1. PC1170.91 resentencing should only be filed if the defendant received mid or max sentence on at least one charge or received an enhancement that might be struck or dismissed by the court. If defendant received minimum term and no sentence enhancement they cannot receive relief. This is not clear. a. The form should include column indicating sentence defendant received for each offense b. The form should instruct and indicate any sentence	No response required. The committee prefers the phrase "health condition" to more accurately capture the enumerated conditions listed in Penal Code section 1170.91(b). In response to comments on this issue, the committee is taking out the portion of the petition asking for attachment of relevant medical records and mental health treatment records, because the statute does not require supporting documentation with the initial filing of the petition. 3.	Los Angeles County Public Defender by Ricardo D. Garcia, Public Defender Los Angeles County Alternate Public Defender by Erika Anzoategui, Acting Alternate Public Defender	NI	Although the form is written primarily for self-represented litigants, we do not feel that attorney information should be excluded. This would allow both attorneys and self-represented litigants to use the same form. For example, "I (add check box for counsel for or pro per) , (counsel for) , the defendant in the above-entitled case..." is preferred over the current language. A signature line including designation of counsel should be added.	The committee agrees with this suggestion and has incorporated it, with minor alterations, into the amendments that it is recommending for adoption.
			The title appears to adequately describe the purpose of the form. The term "Health Conditions" is more favorable than "Health Problems."	No response required.
			An "INFO" form with basic explanations would be helpful for self-represented litigants. For example, explaining filing under seal or giving the self-litigant the option to seek legal explanation for such filings.	In response to comments on this issue, the committee is taking out the portion of the petition asking for attachment of relevant medical records and mental health treatment records, because the statute does not require supporting documentation with the initial filing of the petition. Orange County Bar Association by Deirdre Kelly, President	AM	Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose? Yes, but see below. Is the form written in a way that would be understandable to the intended user, an unrepresented criminal defendant with prior military service who is serving a felony sentence and may still be in criminal custody? Yes, the form is sufficiently clear to be understood by an unrepresented criminal defendant who may qualify for relief. However, the form does not address a fundamental question nearly all petitioners will have—how do I get legal representation to guide me through this process? Since this is a petition for resentencing, and because a defendant in a criminal action has the right to appointed counsel at a sentencing hearing if indigent, the form should contain a mechanism which allows the defendant to request counsel. We recommend the following: If the court sets a hearing on this petition, I request counsel be appointed to represent me. (check one) I was represented by a court-appointed attorney in this case I either represented myself or was represented by a private attorney in this case but am now requesting the court appoint an attorney. 			box, please attach form MC-210 [Defendant's Financial Statement] The form is primarily intended for use by self-represented litigants, but it may also be used by attorneys. However, the form is drafted from a self-represented litigant's perspective (e.g., item #1, "I'm currently serving a sentence for the conviction listed below"). Is this confusing? Should the form be modified to exclude attorney information and limited to use only by self-represented litigants? Are there other ways this form could be drafted so that both attorneys and self-represented litigants can use the same form? The form should be limited to use by self-represented litigants. We believe the purpose of the form is to create a workable, simple document that self-represented litigants to can use to petition the court for consideration under section 1170.91. However, as with nearly all forms, the form itself is limiting by its nature and and is not the best way for attorneys to practice law. Attorneys, their clients and the judicial officers hearing these cases would be better served by robust, original pleadings that clearly spell out why relief is warranted based on the evidence submitted at the hearing. Criminal defense attorneys do this on a regular basis at felony sentencing hearings. There is no reason why it should be any different at a re-sentencing hearing under section 1170.91.	The committee discussed the suggestion and decided to draft the form so that both attorneys and self-represented litigants could use the same form, as courts prefer the uniformity of a standard form.

			Is the term "health conditions" the best term to encompass the conditions enumerated in Penal Code section 1170.91(b)? If not, what term should be used? We express no opinion on this point. Given that the form suggests providing supporting documentation, including medical and mental health treatment records, should the form also mention the process for filing those documents under seal? If so, how should that process be described for a self-represented litigant? Rather than try to explain procedures for filing confidential documents under seal to self-represented litigants, the better practice would be to remove this option from the form entirely. The statute does not require a petitioner to submit evidence in support of the petition but does require the court to set a hearing at the time the petition is received. That hearing is when the petitioning party should submit evidence to the court. We hope the Criminal Law Advisory Committee gives serious consideration to modifying the form to include an application for appointed counsel, as suggested above. Were that to happen, appointed counsel could move the court to seal confidential records at the hearing. Should an "INFO" form also be developed to accompany this form to aid self-represented litigants in filling it out and filing with the court?	No response required. The committee agrees with these suggestions and has incorporated them into the amendments that it is recommending for adoption.

			Yes. However, we suggest the form also inform potential self-represented litigants that many Public Defender Offices will represent them in these proceedings if they are indigent and encourage them to contact the Public Defender's Office in the county of conviction prior to filling out the form. 5.	Superior Court of Los Angeles County	AM	Proposed Modifications Form CR-412/MIL-412 The Petition for Dismissal (Military Personnel) (CR-183) should be used as the guide for this form. As the form asks for supplemental documentation including medical records, the information form should provide information regarding the confidentiality of such documents and how those documents should be submitted. Is the form written in a way that would be understandable to the intended user, an unrepresented criminal defendant with prior military service who is serving a felony sentence and may still be in criminal custody? Yes, the form is understandable. In addition, event codes would need to be created for the filing of the petition and the hearing of the petition at a minimum. Our current procedure directs our clerks to produce barcodes with a "confidential" security level when submitting medical reports/records to be imaged so that the public cannot view or access the document. Adding instructions for the defendant regarding the filing of documents under seal may cause confusion. The defendant might assume that the clerk receiving the documents can "seal" the documents, however only a judicial officer has the authority to order the filing of documents under seal. Executive Summary

The Criminal Law Advisory Committee recommends revisions to two optional Judicial Council forms in response to recent legislation (Assembly Bill 2867) that clarifies the timing and procedural requirements of Penal Code section 1473.7 for vacating a conviction or a sentence based on prejudicial error related to immigration consequences or newly discovered evidence of actual innocence.

Recommendation

The Criminal Law Advisory Committee recommends that the Judicial Council, effective January 1, 2020:

1. Revise Motion to Vacate Conviction or Sentence (form CR-187) and Order on Motion to Vacate Conviction or Sentence (form CR-188) to incorporate clarifications of timing and procedural requirements consistent with amendments to Penal Code section 1473.7; and

2. Further revise the format of Motion to Vacate Conviction or Sentence (form CR-187) so that it is appropriate for use by both self-represented litigants and those represented by attorneys.

The revised forms are attached at pages 4–8.

Relevant Previous Council Action

Optional forms CR-187 and CR-188 were adopted by the Judicial Council effective January 1, 2018, to implement the provisions of Assembly Bill 813 (Stats. 2016, ch. 739) and help individuals and the courts adhere to the procedural requirements of Penal Code section 1473.7.

Analysis/Rationale

Penal Code section 1473.7, adopted effective January 1, 2017 (Assem. Bill 813), permits individuals convicted of criminal offenses and no longer in custody to file a motion to vacate a conviction or sentence based on either of two claims: (1) a prejudicial error damaging the defendant's ability to meaningfully understand, defend against, or knowingly accept the actual or potential adverse immigration consequences of a plea of guilty or nolo contendere; or (2) newly discovered evidence of actual innocence.

In 2018, the Legislature passed Assembly Bill 2867 to ensure greater efficiency and uniformity in the implementation of section 1473.7 by further clarifying the timing and procedural requirements for motions under the statute. (Assem. Bill 2867; Stats. 2018, ch. 825, § 1.) Amendments to the statute replace a requirement that the individual not be currently "imprisoned or restrained" with a requirement that the individual no longer be "in criminal custody." (Forms CR-187 and CR-188 also may be used for motions and orders under Penal Code section 1016.5, but those proceedings are not affected by this proposal.)

Policy implications

The recommended revisions to forms CR-187 and CR-188 will assist courts by providing court users, both self-represented litigants and attorneys, with guidance when applying for postconviction relief under section 1473.7.

Comments

This proposal circulated for comment from April 11 to June 10, 2019. Seven comments were received. The Superior Courts of Los Angeles and San Diego Counties agreed with the proposal, as did the Orange County Bar Association. The Superior Court of Riverside County and the Trial Courts Presiding Judges Advisory Committee and Court Executives Advisory Committee Joint Rules Subcommittee agreed with the proposal if modified. The Superior Court of Orange County and the Los Angeles County Public Defender did not indicate a position.

The committee revised the forms in response to the comments, as described below:

- Header check boxes to identify applicable basis for requested relief: Both the Superior Court of Riverside County and the Joint Rules Subcommittee recommended modifying the header of forms CR-187 and CR-188 to allow check boxes for the applicable statute, e.g., Motion to Vacate Conviction or Sentence, □ PC § 1016.5 □ PC § 1473.7(a)(1) or □ PC § 1473.7(a)(2). The commenters noted that modifying the forms in this manner would allow courts to keep specific statistics on the number and types of petitions filed, if courts so chose.

In addition, the check boxes would aid self-represented litigants in clarifying the basis for their requests for relief.

- Notification of counsel: The Los Angeles County Public Defender noted that section 1473.7 requires that counsel alleged to be ineffective must be given notice of the motion and suggested adding that advisement to form CR-187. The committee agreed and incorporated a check box.

- Dual-use form: The committee included a specific request for comments regarding proposed form CR-187 as a dual-use form by self-represented litigants and attorneys. The Superior Court of Orange County and the Orange County Bar Association each responded with suggestions for revisions to the form so that it could be used by both self-represented litigants and attorneys. The committee agreed with the suggestions and revised the format of the form in response to these comments.

Alternatives considered

In addition to the alternatives considered in response to the public comments, the committee considered revising the form so that it was formatted in a manner that would allow use solely by self-represented litigants. The committee recognized, however, that providing a form that is designed for ease of use by self-represented litigants and that can also accommodate use by attorneys representing litigants would be most effective for the courts. For that reason, the committee recommends formatting form CR-187 as a dual-use form.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

Expected costs are limited to training, possible case management system updates, and the production of revised forms. No other implementation requirements or operational impacts are expected.

Instructions—Read carefully if you are filing this motion for yourself

- The term "Moving Party" as used in this form refers to you.
- This motion must be clearly handwritten in ink or typed. Make sure all answers are true and correct. If you make a statement that you know is false, you could be convicted of perjury (lying under oath).
- You must file a separate motion for each separate case number.
- Fill in the requested information. If you need more space, add an extra page and note that your answer is "continued on added page," or use Attachment to Judicial Council Form (form MC-025) as your additional page.
- Serve the motion on the prosecuting agency.
- File the motion in the superior court in the county where the conviction or sentence was imposed. Only the original motion needs to be filed unless local rules require additional copies.
- Notify the clerk of the court in writing if you change your address after filing your motion.

1. This motion concerns a conviction or sentence in the above case number. On (date) , the Moving Party was convicted of a violation of the following offenses (list all offenses included in the conviction):

CODE	SECTION	TYPE OF OFFENSE (felony, misdemeanor, or infraction)

If you need more space for listing offenses, use Attachment to Judicial Council Form (form MC-025) or any other additional page.

PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA v. DEFENDANT:	CASE NUMBER:

2. ☐ MOTION UNDER PENAL CODE SECTION 1016.5

a. GROUNDS FOR RELIEF: The Moving Party requests relief based on the following:

(1) Before acceptance of a plea of guilty or nolo contendere to the offense, the court failed to advise the Moving Party that the conviction might have immigration consequences as required under Penal Code section 1016.5(a).

(2) The conviction that was based on the plea of guilty or nolo contendere may result in immigration consequences for the Moving Party, including possible deportation, exclusion from admission to the United States, or denial of naturalization.

(3) The Moving Party likely would not have pleaded guilty or nolo contendere if the court had advised the Moving Party of the immigration consequences of the plea. (People v. Arriaga (2014) 58 Cal.4th 950.)

b. Supporting Facts

Tell your story briefly. Describe the facts you allege regarding (1) the court's failure to advise you of the immigration consequences, (2) the possible immigration consequences, and (3) the likelihood that you would not have pleaded guilty or nolo contendere if you had been advised of the immigration consequences by the court. (If necessary, attach additional pages.You may use Attachment to Judicial Council Form (form MC-025) for any additional pages. If available, attach declarations, relevant records, transcripts, or other documents supporting the claim.)

3. ☐ MOTION UNDER PENAL CODE SECTION 1473.7(a)(1), Legal Invalidity

The Moving Party is not currently in criminal custody (criminal custody includes in jail or prison; on bail, probation, mandatory supervision, postrelease community supervision (PRCS), or parole).

a. GROUNDS FOR RELIEF: Moving Party requests relief based on the following:

The conviction or sentence is legally invalid due to a prejudicial error (a mistake that causes harm) that damaged the Moving Party's ability to meaningfully understand, defend against, or knowingly accept the actual or potential adverse immigration consequences of a plea of guilty or nolo contendere (no contest). (Note: A determination of legal invalidity may, but is not required to, include a finding of ineffective assistance of counsel.) If you are claiming that your conviction or sentence is invalid due to ineffective assistance of counsel, before the hearing is held on this motion you (or the prosecutor) must give timely notice to the attorney who you are claiming was ineffective in representing you.

PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA v. DEFENDANT:	CASE NUMBER:

3.b. Supporting Facts

Tell your story briefly. Describe the facts you allege to be prejudicial error. Include information that shows that the conviction you are challenging is currently causing or has the possibility of causing your removal from the United States, or the denial of your application for an immigration benefit, lawful status, or naturalization.

CAUTION: You must state facts, not conclusions. For example, if claiming ineffective assistance of counsel, you must state facts detailing what the attorney did or failed to do and how that affected your plea.

Note: There is a presumption of legal invalidity (it will be assumed that your conviction or sentence is not legally correct) if:
(1) you pleaded guilty or nolo contendere based on a law that provided that the arrest and conviction would be deemed never to have occurred if specific requirements were completed;
(2) you completed those specific requirements; and
(3) despite completing those requirements, your guilty or nolo contendere plea has been or possibly could be used as a basis for adverse immigration consequences.

4. ☐ MOTION UNDER PENAL CODE SECTION 1473.7(a)(2), Newly Discovered Evidence of Actual Innocence

The Moving Party is not currently in criminal custody (criminal custody includes in jail or prison; or on bail, probation, mandatory supervision, postrelease community supervision (PRCS), or parole).

a. GROUNDS FOR RELIEF: Moving Party requests relief based on the following:

(1) Newly discovered evidence of actual innocence exists that requires vacating the conviction or sentence as a matter of law or in the interests of justice.

(2) The Moving Party discovered the new evidence of actual innocence on (date):

b. Supporting Facts

Tell your story briefly. Describe the facts you allege to constitute newly discovered evidence of actual innocence. 1.	Los Angeles County Public Defender Ricardo D. Garcia, Public Defender Erika Anzoategui, Acting Alternate Public Defender	N/I	For the most part, this proposed form correctly states the requirements of Penal Code section 1473.7, however, it omits the requirement that counsel who is alleged to be ineffective has been given notice of the motion which alleges ineffective assistance of counsel. As such, an additional section, 3-c. should be added stating: c. If you are asserting that your conviction or sentence is legally invalid due to ineffective assistance of counsel, you or the prosecution must give timely notice to the counsel who you are asserting was ineffective in advance of the hearing on this motion.	The committee accepts the comment and will recommend adding the proposed information regarding notification of counsel to section 3-a of the Motion to Vacate Conviction or Sentence, form CR-187.

Is this dual use confusing? Should the form be limited to use only by self-represented litigants? Are there other ways this form could be drafted so that both attorneys and self-represented litigants could use the same form? The form should not be limited for use only by self-represented litigants. While an attorney using the form may hesitate to sign a motion under penalty of perjury which uses averments as "I am" or "I discovered", counsel can simply strike the "I" leaving the rest of the pleading intact. On the other hand, the form could be modified to the provide alternative check the boxes for the averment of "I" or in the alternative, "Defendant". As with other Judicial Council forms, the use of the "Defendant" instead of "I" does cause confusion for self-represented individuals. However, designing two sets of forms for attorneys and self-represented litigants is inefficient and potentially adds confusion to what is supposed to be a simple method to move the court per 1473.7.	• The committee agrees the form should be clearly designed for use by both self-represented litigants and attorneys, and has incorporated various format changes for this purpose.

Executive Summary

The Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee recommends revising three forms to comply with recent statutory changes reforming juvenile justice and out-of-home case processes in child welfare cases. In compliance with Senate Bill 190 (Mitchell; Stats. 2017, ch. 678), references to fees associated with probation conditions and out-of-home placement of a child will be removed from one juvenile justice form. Two child welfare related forms will be revised: one to include required title IV-E findings and the other to comply with permanency goals established by Continuum of Care Reform (CCR).

Recommendation

The Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee recommends that the Judicial Council, effective January 1, 2020:

1. Revise Waiver of Rights (form JV-618) to delete the reference to payment of "fees" and reflect the correct Penal Code section related to firearm restrictions, which changed since the form was last revised;

2. Revise Termination of Dependency (form JV-364) to clarify that the form is only to be used when the permanent plan achieved is adoption and to include two title IV-E findings, the reasonable efforts finding and the permanent plan finding; and

3. Revise Request to Change Court Order (form JV-180) to include a check box in item 2 that allows parents to request statutorily authorized resumption of services and to change gendered terms to nongendered terms.

The revised forms are attached at pages 4–9.

Relevant Previous Council Action

Effective January 1, 2018, the Judicial Council approved revisions to 18 juvenile law forms, including Termination of Dependency (form JV-364) and Request to Change Court Order (form JV-180), to bring them into compliance with by Senate Bill 794 (Stats. 2015, ch. 425), frequently referred to as Continuum of Care Reform (CCR).

Analysis/Rationale

The committee recommends revising form JV-618 to ensure it remains legally accurate. Currently, form JV-618 states that the child may be required to pay fees. However, SB 190 has rescinded the requirement that delinquent wards pay fees; therefore, the form must be revised. This form also contains a citation to an outdated Penal Code section related to firearm restrictions; hence, a revision is needed to reflect the current Penal Code section.

The committee recommends that form JV-364 be revised to include the title IV-E findings that are required to claim federal dollars, to ensure that gaps in funding do not occur.[1] Such gaps are detrimental to the stability of placements. Consequently, to comply with the permanency goals established by CCR, it is important to ensure that juvenile forms do not have the potential to create funding issues. Under the federal statutory scheme, title IV-E funding is retroactive, which means that the findings the court makes at status review hearings are backward looking. For this same reason, whenever a case is dismissed, findings must establish that the agency complied with federal requirements for those months leading up to the dismissal. Form JV-364—which dismisses the dependency case—does not currently include those findings.

The committee recommends revising form JV-180 because CCR revised Welfare and Institutions Code section 366.22(a)(3) to include return home as a permanent plan option for children who are in out-of-home care when reunification services are terminated. Currently, form JV-180 does not include a check box to request that services be resumed. Due to the statutory change implemented by CCR, it is necessary to revise form JV-180 to reflect current law and provide a mechanism for parents to have their request for additional services heard.

[1] See title 42 United States Code section 671 et seq., which establishes guidelines for receipt of federal dollars for foster care.

While revising form JV-180 to comply with the law, the committee also recommends revising it to use the nongendered terms “parent’ and “sibling” for mother, father, sister, and brother.

Policy implications

The recommended revisions to these three forms are consistent with the recent and ongoing movement to make juvenile justice less punitive and to focus on permanency and normalcy for both dependent and delinquent youth in out-of-home placement.

Comments

This proposal circulated for comment as part of the spring 2019 invitation-to-comment cycle from April 11 to June 10, 2019, to the standard mailing list for family and juvenile law proposals. Included on the list were appellate presiding justices, appellate court administrators, trial court presiding judges, trial court executive officers, judges, court administrators and clerks, attorneys, family law facilitators and self-help center staff, social workers, probation officers, Court Appointed Special Advocate programs, and other juvenile and family law professionals.

The committee received seven comments on this proposal. Four of the seven commenters agreed with the proposal and the remaining three agreed if slight modifications were made. A chart with the full text of the comments received and the committee’s responses is attached at pages 10-21. Most of the comments suggested minor or technical changes, which the committee accepted without debate. Two commenters suggested revisions to form JV-618 that would change the plain language of the form. Because the wording on these forms was developed by a multidisciplinary working group to ensure accuracy and comprehension by young people, the committee declined to make changes that would substantially change the wording on the form.

Alternatives considered

Other than correcting minor typographical errors, alternatives were not considered because the proposed revisions to the forms are necessary to maintain their legal accuracy.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

In implementing the revised forms, courts would incur standard reproduction costs and retraining of affected staff.

1.	California Lawyers Association Executive Committee of the Family Law Section By: Saul Bercovitch, Director of Governmental Affairs Sacramento, CA	A	FLEXCOM agrees with this proposal.	No response required.
2.	Joint Rules Subcommittee of TCPJAC/CEAC	AM	The JRS notes that the proposal is required to conform to a change of law. The proposal should be implemented to also comply with federal mandates for reimbursement of funds and to avoid disruption in services for youth.	No response required.
3.	Superior Court of Los Angeles County	A	Request for Specific Comments Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose? -Yes, the proposal addresses the stated purpose. Would the proposal provide cost savings? If so, please quantify. -We do not anticipate cost savings. What would the implementation requirements be for courts—for example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), changing docket codes in case management systems, or modifying case management systems? Would three months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation? -Yes, three months would be sufficient.	 No response required. While this proposal may not result in costs savings, nor is it anticipated to result in additional costs. No response required. No response required.

4.	Superior Court of Orange County	AM	Rule 5.730 Adoption ▪ Currently, the rule does not mention findings are required to claim federal funding. It is recommended that Title IV-E be cross referenced in the rule.	The rule is not currently part of this proposal. Amending the rule would necessitate circulating it for comment. The committee declines amending the rule at this time but will make note of the suggestion for future revisions to the rule.
			Waiver of Rights – Juvenile Delinquency (JV-618) ▪ It is recommended the form be retitled to, Waiver of Rights – Juvenile Justice. This would be consistent with other Judicial Council juvenile forms that have been revised to replace the word "delinquency" with "justice". For example, the Juvenile Justice Court – Information for Parents (JV-060-INFO) form.	The committee agrees with this recommendation and will change the title of the form.
			▪ For section 2a, replace the word "agreeing" with "admitting" to be consistent with language used within the section.	The committee appreciates this suggestion. However, the committee declines to make the recommended revision because the wording on these forms was developed by a multidisciplinary working group after reviewing local forms to ensure accuracy and comprehension by youth.
			▪ For section 4b, it is recommended that a field be added at the end of the sentence that reads, "_____ months/years" to indicate the maximum amount of time the youth could be committed.	The committee agrees that it would be clearer to include "months/years" at the end of item 4b and will make that change.

			▪ For section 4f, it is recommended the sentence be revised to read, "I may be required to register to be listed in a database under:"	The committee agrees that it would be clearer to include the proposed language in item 4f.
			▪ For section 4g, "medical expenses" should be added as one of the items parents or legal guardians may have to pay for. Also, are juveniles subject to penalty and assessments on fines and fees? If so, it should be added as well.	Item 4g was revised purely to comply with SB 190; these suggested revisions are beyond the scope of this proposal.
			▪ For section 5c, it is recommended the sentence be revised to, "The right to testify or speak up for myself in court after I have sworn to tell the truth."	The committee appreciates this suggestion. However, the committee declines to make the recommended revision because the wording on these forms was developed by a multidisciplinary working group after reviewing local forms to ensure accuracy and comprehension by young people.
			▪ For section 5e, replace the word "come" with "ordered".	As stated above, these forms were developed to be written in a more plain language style that would be accurate and more understandable to young people.
			▪ On page two, it is recommended the first sentence of the declaration be revised to, "I declare under penalty of perjury, which means I could be charged and punished for lying under oath, that my attorney has gone	Please see the response to the previous two comments.

			over this form with me, explained what it means, and answered my questions. ▪ It is recommended that a Declaration of Prosecutor be added to page two. This would allow the prosecutor to sign the form when a disposition is negotiated. Request for Specific Comments Would the proposal provide a cost savings? -No, the proposal would not provide a cost savings. What would the implementation requirements be for courts? -Judges and staff would be notified of the changes in the rule and forms. Procedures may also require revision. Would three months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation? -Yes, three months would be sufficient time for implementation.	This proposed revision is beyond the scope of this proposal. While this proposal may not result in costs savings, nor is it anticipated to result in additional costs. 5.	Superior Court of Riverside County By: Susan Ryan Chief Deputy – Legal Services	A	Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose? 			placement, drug testing, or home detention programs. Termination of Dependency in Adoption (JV-364) Yes, adding the Title IV-E findings of "reasonable efforts" and "permanent plan finding" will the make the form comply with requirements for federal funding and Continuum of Care Reform ("CCR"). Request to Change Court Order (JV-180) Yes, adding the box in item 2 to request a resumption of unification services pursuant to WIC 366.3(f) will make the form legally accurate because CCR revised WIC 366.22(a)(3) to include "return home" as a permanent plan option for children in out-of-home care when reunification services are terminated. Would the proposal provide cost savings? No. What would the implementation requirements be for courts? Implementation would be minimum. Executive Summary

The Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee recommends amending one rule and revising one form to conform to recent statutory changes regarding (1) the circumstances that allow waiving the requirement for notice of the child welfare agency's intent to place a child out of county and (2) the time frame for notice of, and objection to, the agency's intent to move a foster child to a different county if that child is transitioning from a temporary placement facility.

Recommendation

The Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee recommends that the Judicial Council, effective January 1, 2020:

1. Amend rule 5.614 to ensure it conforms to the new statutory requirements;
2. Amend rule 5.614(b) by adding a cross-reference to new Welfare and Institutions Code section 361.2(h)(2)(A);

3. Amend rule 5.614(d) with the correct reference to Welfare and Institutions Code section 224.3 and amend rule 5.614(f) to add a paragraph requiring that notice of the hearing comply with that section;
4. Amend rule 5.614(e) to delete the time frame for written notice specified in Welfare and Institutions Code section 361.2(h) and replace it with a cross-reference to that section;
5. Amend the title of rule 5.614 to read "Out-of-county placements";
6. Amend the title of chapter 7 (in division 3 of title 5 of the rules) to read "Intercounty Transfers; Out-of-County Placements; Interstate Compact on the Placement of Children"; and
7. Revise Notice of Intent to Place Child Out of County (form JV-555) to indicate in the instructions the new time frames for notice and objection if the child is transitioning from a temporary placement facility.

The text of the amended rule and the revised form are attached at pages 5–8.

Relevant Previous Council Action

Assembly Bill 1688 (Rodriguez; Stats. 2016, ch. 608) required the county to provide notice to the child's attorney and to the child, if 10 years of age or older, before moving the child to a placement outside the county, and allowed for the child and the child's attorney to object to the move. The Judicial Council, effective January 1, 2019, amended rule 5.610 (Transfer-out hearing), repealed and adopted rule 5.614, and approved Notice of Intent to Place Child Out of County (form JV-555) and Objection to Out-of-County Placement and Notice of Hearing (form JV-556) to conform to the statutory changes in AB 1688 regarding who a child welfare agency must notice when moving a foster child to a different county.

Analysis/Rationale

Assembly Bill 1930 (Stone; Stats. 2018, ch. 910) provides for the waiving of notice, if certain circumstances exist, and shortens the time frame for notice if the child is transitioning from a temporary placement facility. These new statutory changes render recently amended rule 5.614 and recently revised form JV-555 inaccurate.

Rule 5.614

The committee recommends amending rule 5.614 to ensure it conforms to the requirements in Welfare and Institutions Code section 361.2(h)[1] that were amended by AB 1930. The committee recommends amending rule 5.614(b) to reflect the new provision that the notice required before placement may be waived if certain circumstances exist,[2] by cross-referencing the new section

[1] All further statutory references are to the Welfare and Institutions Code unless otherwise indicated.

[2] The notice required before out-of-county placement may be waived if (1) the child and family team had determined that the identified placement is in the best interest of the child, (2) no member of the child and family team objects to the placement, and (3) the child's attorney has been informed of the intended placement and has no

361.2(h)(2)(A). The committee recommends amending the rule to delete the time frame for written notice specified in section 361.2(h) and to replace it with a cross-reference to that statute. (See rule 5.614(e).) This cross-reference should obviate the need to amend the rule again if this code section is amended in the future. The rule would also continue to identify the optional forms that can be used for notice and objection.

For consistency with statutory requirements, the committee also recommends amending rule 5.614 to correct the statutory reference to section 224.3 and to add a paragraph requiring that notice of the hearing comply with section 224.3 if notice is to be served on the child's identified Indian tribe and Indian custodian. (See rule 5.614(d) and (f) respectively.) Additionally, the committee recommends that the title of rule 5.614 be changed from "Intercounty placements" to "Out-of-county placements" to correspond with the language within the rule, the names of the forms used for notice and objection, and the nomenclature used throughout the state. The committee also recommends that the first half of the title of chapter 7 be changed from "Intercounty Transfers and Placements" to "Intercounty Transfers; Out-of-County Placements."

Notice of Intent to Place Child Out of County (form JV-555)

The committee recommends revising the optional form used to notice a planned out-of-county placement. Form JV-555's instructions—for notice at the top of the form, and for objection in item 3—would be revised to indicate the new time frames for notice and objection if the child is transitioning from a temporary placement facility.

Policy implications

The committee recommends that the Judicial Council continue the process of condensing the rules of court governing dependency hearings. This proposal amends the rules of court to include statutory references rather than a paraphrase of the full statutory text. This approach should reduce the frequency of rule amendments because the rules would remain current even when these code sections are amended again.

Comments

This proposal circulated for comment as part of the spring 2019 invitation-to-comment cycle from April 12 to June 10, 2019, to the standard mailing list for family and juvenile law proposals. Included on the list were appellate presiding justices, appellate court administrators, trial court presiding judges, trial court executive officers, judges, court administrators and clerks, attorneys, family law facilitators and self-help center staff, legal services attorneys, social workers, probation officers, CASA programs, and other juvenile and family law professionals. Seven organizations provided comment: five agreed with the proposal, one agreed with the proposal if modified, no commenters opposed the proposal, and one did not indicate a position. A chart with the full text of the comments received and the committee's responses is attached at pages 9–13.

---

objection, and where applicable, the Indian custodian or child's tribe has been informed of the intended placement and has no objection. (§ 361.2(h)(2)(A).)

Alternatives considered

For this proposal, the committee did not consider not amending the rule or revising the form, because the current rule and form would be inaccurate and conflict with recent statutory amendments to section 361.2(h).

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

The recommended rule amendments and form revisions are intended to update procedures that were implemented by statutes that became effective January 1, 2017. Courts are already receiving objections to and setting hearings on proposed out-of-county placements under that law; this proposal will not increase that workload. Similarly, the written notice requirements to parents and guardians have been in place for many years and those to the child's attorney and the child aged 10 or older have been in place since January 1, 2017; therefore, this recommendation should not result in increased workload for social workers, except in counties that are not currently providing the required written notice.

One large court commented that there would be no implementation requirements. Another large court commented that judges and staff would need to be notified of the changes in the rule and form, but no changes would be needed on procedures or in the case management system. A third large court similarly commented that the implementation requirements would be notifying judicial officers, staff, and justice partners of the change to form JV-555 and rule 5.614. A fourth large court commented that the implementation requirements would be notifying judicial officers, justice partners, and court staff, and revising procedures. This court would need to create a new action code and hearing code in its case management system. A fifth large court commented that the implementation requirements would be informing bench, staff, and attorneys of the changes.

Of the courts that commented on whether the proposal would provide cost savings, one commented that the proposal would provide cost savings, and four commented that it would not.

Executive Summary

The Collaborative Justice Courts Advisory Committee and the Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee recommend amending and renumbering one rule, and amending one rule, to conform to recent statutory changes regarding a child who is the subject of a petition filed under Welfare and Institutions Code sections 601 or 602, when the court has a doubt as to the child's competency to understand the court proceedings.

Recommendation

The Collaborative Justice Courts Advisory Committee and the Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee recommend that the Judicial Council, effective January 1, 2020:

1. Renumber California Rules of Court, rule 5.645(a)–(c) as rule 5.643; and

2. Amend rule 5.645 to address expert qualifications and court proceedings for juvenile competency evaluations.

The text of the amended rule is attached at pages 8–13.

Relevant Previous Council Action

The Judicial Council adopted what is now rule 5.645, effective January 1, 1999, as rule 1498. It was renumbered and amended effective January 1, 2007. It was further amended effective January 1, 2012 to meet the requirement in Welfare and Institutions Code section 709 (added by Assem. Bill 2212; Stats. 2010, ch. 671, § 1) that the Judicial Council develop and adopt rules regarding the qualifications of experts who evaluate children when the court or child's counsel raises the issue of the child's competency in any juvenile delinquency proceeding.[1]

Analysis/Rationale

Assembly Bill 1214 (Stone; Stats. 2018, ch. 991) revises sections 709 and 712, regarding a child's competency to understand the court proceedings, to expand the duties of an expert evaluating the child whose competency is in doubt. The bill (see Link A) also requires the Judicial Council to adopt a rule of court relating to the qualifications of those experts, in consultation with specified stakeholders. The bill also mandates the Judicial Council to develop and adopt rules to implement the other requirements in section 709(b), also in consultation with specified stakeholders.

Rule 5.645 would be amended, and five new subdivisions would be added to the rule. Subdivisions (a)–(c), with slight modifications to existing language, would be renumbered as rule 5.643.

Rule 5.643

The committees recommend that the subdivisions of current rule 5.645 that address the procedures for commitment to a county facility—when the court believes a child has a mental disability or may have a mental illness—be renumbered as rule 5.643. References to "mental retardation" would be replaced with "developmental disability." The remainder of the rule would be unchanged from what is now in subdivisions (a)–(c) of rule 5.645.

Rule 5.645

The committees recommend that the remainder of current rule 5.645 be amended to address expert qualifications and court proceedings for competency evaluations.

The committees recommend that subdivision (a) (currently subdivision (d)) of the rule be amended to remove the reference to Penal Code section 1367, as this section addresses an adult's competency to stand trial, and to replace the current definition of competency with a cross-reference to the definition in section 709(a)(2).

[1] All further statutory references are to the Welfare and Institutions Code and all further rule references are to the California Rules of Court, unless otherwise indicated.

Subdivision (b) (currently subdivision (d)(1)(B)–(C)) would be amended to identify the minimum training and experience needed for an expert to be eligible for appointment for competency evaluations of juveniles.

Subdivision (c) would be added to govern the requirements for the court-appointed expert when the child refuses an interview.

Subdivision (d) would be added to address the mandate in section 709 that the expert must review all the available records, by requiring that each county, in its written protocol regarding competency required under section 709(i), include a description of the process for obtaining and providing the records to the expert to review.

Subdivision (e) would be added to identify the requirements for the expert's mandated consultation with the child's counsel.

Subdivision (f) would be added to identify the requirements for the mandate that the expert gather a developmental history of the child.

Subdivision (g) would be added to govern the requirements for the expert's written report regarding the child's competency to stand trial.

Additionally, the Advisory Committee comment to the rule would be deleted as it is misleading and does not accurately reflect the procedure for obtaining regional center services.

Policy implications

The committees considered how to best implement AB 1214, which required the development of a rule of court with specified stakeholders.

The proposed rule of court maintains the high level of training and experience requirements that competency evaluators must meet. It also requires a face-to-face interview of the child, a consult with the child's counsel, and detailed written report requirements including a developmental history of the child and recommendations for appropriate services. This proposal will result in better and more comprehensive evaluator reports which will assist the judicial officer in determining whether the child is competent, and if found incompetent will inform the judicial officer's decisions about orders for mental health services as well as at the hearings reviewing those services.

Comments

This proposal circulated for comment as part of the spring 2019 invitation-to-comment cycle, from April 12 to June 10, 2019, to the standard mailing list for family and juvenile law proposals. Included on the list were appellate presiding justices, appellate court administrators, trial court presiding judges, trial court executive officers, judges, court administrators and clerks, attorneys, family law facilitators and self-help center staff, legal services attorneys, social workers, probation officers, Court Appointed Special Advocates programs, and other juvenile and family law professionals. Additionally, it was provided to the stakeholders who helped develop the proposed rule with an invitation to distribute it as they wished. Four courts, two organizations, and one individual provided comment: two agreed with the proposal, two agreed with the proposal if modified, no commenters opposed the proposal, and three did not indicate a position. A chart with the full text of the comments received and the committees' responses is attached at pages 14–34.[2]

As circulated for public comment the term "mentally retarded" was replaced with "intellectually disabled." One commenter suggested that this phrase be changed to "has a developmental disability" to reflect the preferred usage that the person "has a disability" instead of referring to them as "developmentally disabled," thus reflecting that the person is more than their disability. The committee agreed with this suggestion, and also replaced "intellectual disability" with "developmental disability" in response to this comment and to track the statutory language.

As circulated for public comment, the rule allowed for an interview of the child, if an in-person interview was not possible due to distance, to be conducted remotely, using videoconference or another form of remote electronic communication. The intent was that this would decrease custodial time for children who lived in more remote areas. One commenter was opposed to allowing evaluator interviews that are not face-to-face. After much discussion, the committees concluded that children are not comfortable in remote communication systems and this could skew results. There also would be much of the child's demeanor and behavior that the evaluator would not be able to observe. It is also not possible to control what is going on outside of camera range, such as eavesdropping staff or other environmental issues that may affect testing. The committees concluded that until the medical or psychological profession established guidelines in this area, it was not appropriate to provide for it in the rule.

Assembly Bill 1214 amended section 709 to require the evaluator to consult with the child's counsel. As circulated for public comment, the proposed rule required that consultation to include three questions. Two commenters were opposed to requiring specific questions of the child's counsel. The committees considered removing the questions and discussed the potential for interference with the confidential attorney-client relationship. However, the committees concluded that since the child's counsel often has the most information about the child and that evaluators routinely do not consult with the child's counsel, it was important to include these minimal, basic questions all evaluators should be asking. The committees made great efforts in the language of the rule to protect the attorney-client privilege.

[2] There is also an attachment to the comment chart. One policy organization submitted proposed amendments to the rule text that corresponded with the substantive reasons given for the suggested rule changes. The substantive reasons for the suggested rule changes and the committees' responses are in the comment chart. The suggested changes to the rule text are contained in Attachment A to the comment chart.

One of the more robust of the committees' discussions was whether the rule should use the term "child" or "minor." The current rules all use "child," but the statutes use "minor." The committees note that throughout the juvenile court rules and forms there is a consistent practice of using "child," and this term is clearly defined in rule 5.502.[3] Use of the term "child" is a reminder to all in the system that juvenile offenders are developmentally distinct from adults. "Minor" is not defined in the rules of court. Section 101(b) defines "child or minor" as a person under the jurisdiction of the juvenile court under section 300, 601, or 602, but most children in delinquency court are older and do not like to be called "child." The proposal circulated for public comment using the term "minor" and sought specific comment on which term to use in the rules. After public comment, the committees also considered using the term "youth" in the rules. However, this term also is not defined in the rules of court. Any definition of the term would be an important substantive change to the proposal, and public comment should be sought before the council defines the term. The committees resolved to continue to use the word "child" in the proposed rules.

Alternatives considered

The committees discussed multiple potential rule topics, several of which the committees decided against developing.

Records review process. The committees discussed whether the rule should address the requirement that the expert must review all the records provided and specify the process, such as who provides the records to the expert and how the expert obtains confidential records. The committees concluded it was best to allow each county to determine its own process and decided instead to propose amending rule 5.645 to require that the written protocol mandated under section 709(i) include a description of the process for obtaining and providing the records to the evaluator to review, including who will obtain and provide the records to the evaluator.

Testing. The committees discussed whether the rule should address the requirement that the expert must administer age-appropriate testing unless the facts of the case render testing unnecessary or inappropriate. The committees discussed whether the rule should address the nature and content of evaluation tools and whether the rule should specify when testing is unnecessary or inappropriate. The committees concluded that these areas should be left to the discretion of the expert evaluators and did not include this topic in the proposed rule.

Interpreters. The committees discussed whether the requirements that apply to court interpreters should apply to interpreters used by competency evaluators.[4] The committees decided against proposing such an amendment, concluding in part that the requirements for a Judicial Council–certified interpreter could be too difficult to meet, particularly in smaller counties and for rarer languages. The committees also noted that the interpreters used for mental health evaluations are more akin to medical interpreters than interpreters for court proceedings.

[3] Rule 5.502(5) provides: "'Child' means a person under the age of 18 years."

[4] Specifically, the committees reviewed Government Code section 68561 et seq. and rule 2.893.

"Additional qualified experts." The committees discussed the new provision in section 709 that allows the district attorney or minor's counsel to retain or seek the appointment of additional qualified experts who may testify during the competency hearing. The committees discussed whether the rule should specify the qualifications for these experts, and whether additional experts should be subject to the requirements in the new rule. The committees concluded that the phrase "additional qualified experts" is ambiguous in the statute and that an appellate court should decide what this phrase means, not the Judicial Council through the rule-making process. The committees concluded that the current provision that does not preclude involvement of clinicians with other qualifications as consultants or witnesses should remain in the rule.

School psychologists. The committees discussed whether rule 5.645 should be amended to allow school psychologists to be appointed as experts in competency proceedings. This change would be made by removing the requirement that school psychologists have a doctoral degree and simply using the term "licensed psychologist." The committees discussed how this could create a larger pool of potential evaluators, but also discussed that not all school psychologists have the depth and breadth of education and training that one needs to obtain a doctoral degree. The committees concluded that school psychologists who do not hold a doctoral degree should not be included among the professionals listed in the rule who can conduct competency evaluations.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

It is important to note that the new legislative mandates regarding evaluators will likely increase costs to the courts and counties, with no additional funding made available. A benefit, however, is that the reports received will be of much higher quality than under current standards and will be more useful for judicial decisionmaking.

Costs for evaluations may increase due to more comprehensive evaluation and written report requirements. Some counties, particularly smaller counties, will have challenges finding qualified evaluators. For counties that do not have existing protocols, there will also be increased costs for local implementation to develop the statutorily required county protocols, again with no additional funding made available to cover these costs.[5]

There is also the potential for increased litigation costs because, as the reports become more comprehensive, there will be more information on which to cross-examine the expert. Alternatively, more thorough reports could lessen the need for contested hearings because the reports may speak for themselves.

A major operational impact is that longer time frames likely will be needed to complete the reports because of the additional requirements to interview the child's counsel, attempt to interview the child face-to-face, and increased written report requirements. Currently, the process generally takes three to four weeks. This time frame will likely expand, thus increasing the amount of time these children are held in secure custody.

[5] Section 709(i) mandates that the "presiding judge of the juvenile court, the probation department, the county mental health department, the public defender and any other entity that provides representation for minors, the district attorney, the regional center, if appropriate, and any other participants that the presiding judge shall designate, shall develop a written protocol describing the competency process and a program to ensure that minors who are found incompetent receive appropriate remediation services."

Again, however, a benefit is that the reports received will be of much higher quality than under current standards and will be more useful for judicial decisionmaking. The reports will be better and more comprehensive which will assist the judicial officer in determining whether the child is competent, and if found incompetent will inform the judicial officer's decisions about orders for mental health services as well as at the hearings reviewing those services.

Rule 5.645 of the California Rules of Court is amended, and subdivisions (a)–(c) are renumbered as rule 5.643, effective January 1, 2020, to read:

Rule ~~5.645~~ 5.643. Mental health or condition of child; court procedures

(a)–(b) * * *

(c) Findings regarding ~~mental retardation~~ developmental disability (§ 6551)

Article 1 of chapter 2 of part 1 of division 5 (commencing with section 5150) applies.

(1) If the professional finds that the child ~~is mentally retarded~~ has a developmental disability and recommends commitment to a state hospital, the court may direct the filing in the appropriate court of a petition for commitment of a child ~~as a mentally retarded person~~ who has a developmental disability to the State Department of Developmental Services for placement in a state hospital.

(2) If the professional finds that the child ~~is not mentally retarded~~ does not have a developmental disability, the child must be returned to the juvenile court on or before the expiration of the 72-hour period, and the court must proceed with the case under section 300, 601, or 602.

(3) The jurisdiction of the juvenile court must be suspended while the child is subject to the jurisdiction of the appropriate court under a petition for commitment of a ~~mentally retarded~~ person who has a developmental disability, or under remand for 90 days for intensive treatment or commitment ordered by that court.

Rule 5.645. Mental health or condition of child; competency evaluations

~~(d)~~(a) Doubt as to ~~capacity to cooperate with counsel~~ child's competency (§§ 601, 602, 709~~; Pen. Code, § 1367~~)

(1) If the court finds that there is substantial evidence ~~that~~ regarding a child who is the subject of a petition filed under section 601 or 602 ~~lacks sufficient present ability to consult with counsel and assist in preparing his or her defense with a reasonable degree of rational understanding, or lacks a rational as well as factual understanding of the nature of the charges or proceedings against him or her,~~ that raises a doubt as to the child's competency as defined in section 709, the court must suspend the proceedings and conduct a hearing regarding the child's ~~competence~~ competency. ~~Evidence is substantial if it raises a reasonable doubt about the child's competence to stand trial.~~

~~(A)~~(2) Unless the parties have stipulated to a finding of incompetency, the court must appoint an expert to ~~examine the child to~~ evaluate the child and determine whether the child suffers from a mental illness, mental disorder, developmental disability, developmental immaturity, or other condition affecting competency and, if so, whether ~~the condition or conditions impair the child's competency~~ the child is incompetent as defined in section 709(a)(2).

(3) Following the hearing on competency, the court must proceed as directed in section 709.

(b) Expert qualifications

~~(B)~~(1) To be appointed as an expert, an individual must be a:

~~(i)~~(A) Licensed psychiatrist who has successfully completed four years of medical school and either four years of general psychiatry residency, including one year of internship and two years of child and adolescent fellowship training, or three years of general psychiatry residency, including one year of internship and one year of residency that focus on children and adolescents and one year of child and adolescent fellowship training; or

~~(ii)~~(B) Clinical, counseling, or school psychologist who has received a doctoral degree in psychology from an educational institution accredited by an organization recognized by the Council for Higher Education Accreditation and who is licensed as a psychologist.

~~(C)~~(2) The expert, whether a licensed psychiatrist or psychologist, must:

~~(i)~~(A) Possess demonstrable professional experience addressing child and adolescent developmental issues, including the emotional, behavioral, and cognitive impairments of children and adolescents;

~~(ii)~~(B) Have expertise in the cultural and social characteristics of children and adolescents;

~~(iii)~~(C) Possess a curriculum vitae reflecting training and experience in the forensic evaluation of children and adolescents;

~~(iv)~~(D) Be familiar with juvenile competency standards and accepted criteria used in evaluating juvenile competence;

~~(v)~~(E) ~~Possess a comprehensive understanding of~~ Be familiar with effective interventions, as well as treatment, training, and programs for the attainment of competency available to children and adolescents; ~~and~~

~~(vi)~~(F) Be proficient in the language preferred by the child, or if that is not feasible, employ the services of a certified interpreter and use assessment tools that are linguistically and culturally appropriate for the child~~.~~; and

(G) Be familiar with juvenile competency remediation services available to the child.

~~(2)~~(3) Nothing in this rule precludes involvement of clinicians with other professional qualifications from participation as consultants or witnesses or in other capacities relevant to the case.

~~(3) Following the hearing on competence, the court must proceed as directed in section 709~~.

(c) Interview of child

The expert must attempt to interview the child face-to-face. If an in-person interview is not possible because the child refuses an interview, the expert must try to observe and make direct contact with the child to attempt to gain clinical observations that may inform the expert's opinion regarding the child's competency.

(d) Review of records

(1) The expert must review all the records provided as required by section 709.

(2) The written protocol required under section 709(i) must include a description of the process for obtaining and providing the records to the expert to review, including who will obtain and provide the records to the expert.

(e) Consult with the child's counsel

(1) The expert must consult with the child's counsel as required by section 709. This consultation must include, but is not limited to, asking the child's counsel the following:

(A) If the child's counsel raised the question of competency, why the child's counsel doubts that the child is competent;

(B) What has the child's counsel observed regarding the child's behavior; and

(C) A description of how the child interacts with the child's counsel.

(2) No waiver of the attorney-client privilege will be deemed to have occurred from the child's counsel report of the child's statements to the expert, and all such statements are subject to the protections in (g)(2) of this rule.

(f) Developmental history

The expert must gather a developmental history of the child as required by section 709. This history must be documented in the report and must include the following:

(1) Whether there were complications or drug use during pregnancy that could have caused medical issues for the child;

(2) When the child achieved developmental milestones such as talking, walking, and reading;

(3) Psychosocial factors such as abuse, neglect, or drug exposure;

(4) Adverse childhood experiences, including early disruption in the parent-child relationship;

(5) Mental health services received during childhood and adolescence;

(6) School performance, including an Individualized Education Plan, testing, achievement scores, and retention;

(7) Acculturation issues;

(8) Biological and neurological factors such as neurological deficits and head trauma; and

(9) Medical history including significant diagnoses, hospitalizations, or head trauma.

(g) Written report

(1) Any court-appointed expert must examine the child and advise the court on the child's competency to stand trial. The expert's report must be submitted to the court, to the counsel for the child, to the probation department, and to the prosecution. The report must include the following:

(A) A statement identifying the court referring the case, the purpose of the evaluation, and the definition of competency in the state of California.

(B) A brief statement of the expert's training and previous experience as it relates to evaluating the competence of a child to stand trial.

(C) A statement of the procedure used by the expert, including:

(i) A list of all sources of information considered by the expert including those required by section 709(b)(3);

(ii) A list of all sources of information the expert tried or wanted to obtain but, for reasons described in the report, could not be obtained;

(iii) A detailed summary of the attempts made to meet the child face-to-face and a detailed account of any accommodations made to make direct contact with the child; and

(iv) All diagnostic and psychological tests administered, if any.

(D) A summary of the developmental history of the child as required by this rule.

(E) A summary of the evaluation conducted by the expert on the child, including the current diagnosis or diagnoses that meet criteria under the most recent version of the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders, when applicable, and a summary of the child's mental or developmental status.

(F) A detailed analysis of the competence of the child to stand trial under section 709, including the child's ability or inability to understand the nature of the proceedings or assist counsel in the conduct of a defense in a rational manner as a result of a mental or developmental impairment.

(G) An analysis of whether and how the child's mental or developmental status is related to any deficits in abilities related to competency.

(H) If the child has significant deficits in abilities related to competency, an opinion with explanation as to whether treatment is needed to restore or attain competency, the nature of that treatment, its availability, and whether restoration is likely to be accomplished within the statutory time limit.

(I) A recommendation, as appropriate, for a placement or type of placement, services, and treatment that would be most appropriate for the child to attain or restore competence. The recommendation must be guided by the principle of section 709 that services must be provided in the least restrictive environment consistent with public safety.

(J) If the expert is of the opinion that a referral to a psychiatrist is appropriate, the expert must inform the court of this opinion and recommend that a psychiatrist examine the child.

(2) Statements made to the appointed expert during the child's competency evaluation and statements made by the child to mental health professionals during the remediation proceedings, and any fruits of these statements, must not be used in any other hearing against the child in either juvenile or adult court.

~~Advisory Committee Comment~~

~~Welfare and Institutions Code section 709(b) mandates that the Judicial Council develop and adopt rules regarding the qualification of experts to determine competency for purposes of juvenile adjudication. Upon a court finding of incompetency based on a developmental disability, the regional center determines eligibility for services under Division 4.5 of the Lanterman Developmental Disabilities Services (Welf. & Inst. Code, § 4500 et seq.).~~

1.	Commissioner Robert Leventer Superior Court of Los Angeles County	NI	This submission comments on two proposed rules: 1) Rule 5.645(b)(E) regarding the necessary qualifications of appointed competency experts; and 2) Rules 5.645(g)(I) and (J) which delineate what must be contained in an expert's written evaluation of a minor's competency. The following discussion analyzes both substantive issues in connection with the posed rules, as well as those relating to the potential economic burden posed by their implementation. Rule 5.645(b)(E). [Expert Qualifications] Possess a comprehensive understanding of effective interventions, as well as treatment, training, and programs for the attainment of competency available to children and adolescents. To the extent this rule requires an expert to have specific training as to evidence-based juvenile remediation this rule sets the bar too high. Restoration of incompetency for juveniles is a relatively new field and is not taught in professional schools. There is only one evidence based juvenile remediation program in California (Santa Clara) and only a few in the country. Information about remediation services is not readily available, in part because so few	The committees appreciate this comment and have modified this provision to track the statutory requirement that the expert "be familiar with" effective interventions, as well as treatment, training, and programs for the attainment of competency available to children and adolescents.

Positions: A = Agree; AM = Agree if modified; N = Do not agree; NI = Not indicated programs exist. Requiring experts to have comprehensive knowledge of this subject should not be required. Given the education and training available in this area, the current statutory language is sufficient. Section 709(b)(2) provides: "The expert. . .. shall be familiar with competency remediation for the condition or conditions affecting competence in the particular case." However, the committee might want to add that the expert be familiar with their county's remediation services. Rule 5.645(g)(I) [Written Report] If the minor has significant deficits in abilities related to competency, an opinion with explanation as to whether treatment can reduce the impairments related to the minor's deficits in competency abilities, the nature of that treatment, its availability, and whether restoration is likely to be accomplished within the statutory time limit.; A competency evaluation is a functional evaluation. It is not a comprehensive diagnostic assessment. A functional competency evaluation	See response above. The committees declined to make the suggested change because the committees did not want to limit familiarity with remediation services to those services within the child's county. The committees view the treatment that could result as the result of a competency evaluation broadly, and not limited to education about the will not determine whether a minor needs "treatment". Moreover, a court does not have the authority to order any "treatment", other than remediation, prior to assuming jurisdiction, i.e., when and if proceedings are reinstated. The court is only authorized to offer remediation services which consist of structured, specialized education about the court process. Again, treatment beyond remediation is not permissible in the context of a competency proceeding. Counsel may explore the need for other forms of treatment, but that should not be in the responsibility of the court appointed competency expert. Rule 5.645(g)(J) [Written Report] If psychotropic medication is considered appropriate and necessary, whether the treatment will likely restore the minor to mental competency, a list of likely or potential side effects of the medication, the expected efficacy of the medication, possible alternative treatments, whether it is medically appropriate to administer psychotropic medication in the county juvenile hall, and whether the minor has capacity to make decisions regarding psychotropic medication. If the expert is of the opinion that a referral to a psychiatrist is necessary to address these issues, the expert must inform the court of this opinion and	court process. AB 1214 added a requirement that upon a finding of incompetency, the court must refer the minor to services to attain competency. It authorizes courts to refer the minor to treatment services to assist in remediation that may include mental health services, treatment for trauma, medically supervised medication, behavioral counseling, curriculum-based legal education, or training in socialization skills.

			recommend that a psychiatrist examine the minor. A functional competency evaluation should not include an assessment of a minor's need for psychotropic medication. That goes far beyond a competency evaluation. Counsel and the court may want to explore issues and treatment unrelated to competency that might benefit a minor, but such an analysis falls far outside the purview of a competency evaluation. Also, there is no evidence-based rationale for the use of psychotropic medication to address incompetency remediation in juveniles. Cost: Los Angeles Juvenile Court has a select panel of competency experts who are appointed in rotation. The court orders about 175 competency evaluations per year. The cost of each evaluation is $850. This amount does not approach fair compensation for the experts. The cost of having a comprehensive assessment included with all competency evaluations, as contemplated by these rules, would at minimum double the cost to the court.	The committees have modified the proposal to delete the provision regarding psychotropic medication. The committees retained the proposed language requiring that if the expert is of the opinion that a referral to a psychiatrist is appropriate, the expert must inform the court of that opinion and recommend that a psychiatrist examine the minor. The committees are aware that the new legislative mandates regarding evaluators will likely increase costs to the courts and counties, with no additional funding made available, and will note this in the report to the Judicial Council.
2.	Orange County Bar Association By: Deirdre Kelly	AM	Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose?

			In part. The amendments to rule 5.645(e) go beyond the statutory requirements and invite counsel to commit ethical breaches. Welfare and Institutions Code section 709(b)(3), requires evaluators to "consult with minor's counsel." The amendments to rule 5.645(e), which implement this requirement, provide evaluators with specific direction, not included in the statutory language. The proposed rule would require experts to ask "if minor's counsel raised the question of competency, why minor's counsel doubts that the minor is competent" … "[w]hat has the minor's counsel observed regarding the minor's behavior" … and "[a] description of how the minor interacts with minor's counsel." Issues of attorney-client privilege notwithstanding, Business and Professions Code section 6068, subdivision (e), requires an attorney to "maintain inviolate the confidence, and at every peril to himself or herself to preserve the secrets of his or her client." Although the term "secrets" is not defined, the State Bar has authoritatively cited the broad definition contained in ABA Code of Professional Responsibility, which defines a secret as "information gained in the professional	The committees concluded that since minor's counsel often has the most information about the minor and that evaluators routinely do not consult with minor's counsel, it was important to include these minimal, basic questions all evaluators should be asking. The committees made great efforts in the language of the rule to protect the attorney-client privilege.

			relationships…the disclosure [of] which [would] be embarrassing and would be likely to be detrimental to the client…." (Cal. Formal Opinion 1986-87, citing the ABA Code of Prof. Responsibility, DR 4-101.) The statute has been construed broadly and includes the entire client file, even that information which has been made public. (In the Matter of Johnson (Review Department 2000) 4 Cal. State Bar Ct. Rptr. 179; see also In re Jordan (1972) 7 Cal.3d 930, 940-94 ["the protection of confidences and secrets is not a rule of mere professional conduct, but instead involves public policies of paramount importance which are reflected in numerous statutes"].) Similarly, rule 1.6 of the Rules of Professional Conduct demands an attorney "shall not reveal information protected from disclosure by Business and Professions Code section 6068, subdivision (e)(l) without the informed consent of the client unless the client gives informed consent." While an attorney may be at liberty to share some of this information with the expert that will often not be the case. And while we realize the rule requires the evaluator to ask—and not the attorney to answer—in many situations attorneys might feel compelled to share this information by virture of the proposed language or, worse yet, may not know they are violating their ethical obligations by sharing this information. We feel it is best to use the language of the statue and simply require evaluators to consult with counsel, so that the attorney can determine what information they may ethically share with the evaluator. Should rule 5.645(g)(1)(C)(i) be more specific regading the records reviewed by the evaluator? Should the rule list out the sources listed in section 709(b)(3)? Yes. Section 709(b)(3) reads, "the expert shall personally interview the minor and review all of the available records provided, including but not limited to, medical education, special education, probation, child welfare, mental health, regional center, and court records, and any other relevant information that is available." However, rule 5.645(g)(1)(C), only requires an evaluator to list the sources of information considered. While rule 5.645(f) [requiring documentation of a developmental history] can only be satisified with a review of these specific records, it would be a helpful reminder that review of these records is required by listing them in the Rule of Court. Should rules 5.643 and 5.645 use the term "child" or "minor?"	The committees prefer to add a cross reference to section 709(b)(3) rather than list out the sources in listed in that section.

			We express no opinion on this point.	No response required.
3.	Pacific Juvenile Defender Center By: Sue Burrell San Francisco, CA	NI	Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose? Yes. Should rule 5.645(g)(1)(C)(i) be more specific regarding the records reviewed by the evaluator? Should the rule list out the sources listed in section 709(b)(3)? No. We are concerned about requiring uniform lists of records. Each case is different, and what is useful in one case might not be useful in another. Our specific suggestions are contained in the comments. Should rules 5.643 and 5.645 use the term "child" or "minor"? We have struggled with this terminology in our own work, and agree with the analysis of the problem. Herein, we suggest two alternatives. First, the term "youth" can be used either by itself or in combination with "child." It reflects the fact that our young people are not yet adults, but are older than children. Young people perceive the term "youth" as respectful. Also, it is preferable to the term "minor," which is defined as "lesser in importance, seriousness, or significance" - not at all what we should be conveying about young people. A number of statutes have used the term "youth," for example, Welfare and Institutions Code sections 224.73, 625.6, 992, 1177, 1788, 1900, 2011, 2023, 13754; some statutes use a combination of "child", "youth," and "minor."	No response required. The committees prefer to add a cross reference to section 709(b)(3) to define the sources the expert must consider. The committees appreciate the input and have modified the proposal to retain the term "child," instead of the term "minor" as circulated, to be consistent with the other juvenile court rules and forms. The committees considered using the term "youth," as suggested by the comment. However, the committees declined to make this change, as this term is not defined in the rules of court and any definition of the term would be an important substantive change to the proposal and public comment should be sought before the council defines the term.

			Also, the term "person" may be useful in some situations. For example, "minor" is sometimes used to connote that the person is less that the age of majority, but this becomes confusing in situations where the person has reached the age of majority but is still treated as a juvenile under our laws. Person is a good option in those situations. (See, for example, Welf. & Inst. Code, § 208.5.) Comments by Section Please note that, to avoid confusion, we accepted the proposed changes, so the underlined text and strikeout text reflects our suggestions.* Rule 5.643 Comments: We have added "youth" throughout this rule, and "person" or "young person" in places. We kept "child," as well, because this particular rule includes dependents under Welfare and Institutions Code section 300, who are often very young.	Please see Attachment A to this comment chart which contains the commentator's suggested amendments to the rule text. The substantive reasons for those suggestions are listed in the comment column of this chart and the committees' responses are listed in this column. The committees appreciate the input and have modified the proposal to retain the term "child," instead of the term "minor" as circulated, to be consistent with the other juvenile court rules and forms. The committees considered using the term "youth," as suggested by the comment. However, the committees declined to make this change, as this term is not defined in the rules of court and any definition of the term would be an important substantive change to the proposal and public comment should be sought before the council defines the term. The committees agree with this suggestion and have modified the proposal to use the phrase "has

			Also, we suggest rewording the description of disabilities. The preferred usage is to say that the person "has a disability" instead of referring to them as "developmentally disabled," thus reflecting that the person is more than their disability. (The Centers for Disease Control and disability groups have provided helpful advice on this: https://www.cdc.gov/ncbddd/disabilityandhealth/pdf/disabilityposter_photos.pdf; https://www.reachcils.org/resources/disability/disability-rights/guidelines-writing-and-referring-people-disabilities; and https://adata.org/factsheet/ADANN-writing.) If we can begin to change the outmoded language sprinkled through the rules and the Codes, it would be good. Also, we suggest removing the word "doubt" from rule 5.643. Welfare and Institutions Code section 705 refers to "when the court is in doubt," but the way the rule is phrased ("Doubt concerning…"), it sounds too much like what happens in competency proceedings, and may cause confusion. Rule 5.645 Comments: Since this rule will apply to persons who are at least 12 years of age, we suggest replacing the terms "child" and "minor" with the term "youth."	a developmental disability" instead of "intellectually disabled." The committee also replaced "intellectual disability" with "developmental disability" in response to this comment and to track the statutory language. The committees prefer to retain the phrase "Doubt concerning the mental health of a minor" as that is the language in Welfare and Institutions Code sections 357 & 705. The committees appreciate the input and have modified the proposal to retain the term "child," instead of the term "minor" as circulated, to be consistent with the other juvenile court rules and forms. The committees considered using the term "youth," as suggested by the comment. However, the committees declined to make this change, as this term is not defined in the rules of court and any definition of the term would be an important substantive change to the proposal and public comment should be sought before the council defines the term. No response required.

			Proposed subdivision (a)(1) – we agree with enunciating the competency standard and simply referring to section 709. Proposed subdivision (a)(2) – we agree with adding the language "unless the parties have stipulated to a finding of incompetency…", as that is in the new amendments to section 709. We agree with adding "mental illness" to the specific conditions affecting competence, since that is in the statute, and with rewording the last clause to reference the statutory standard for incompetency. Proposed subdivision (b) - We are agree with the decision not to require "additional qualified experts" to meet the requirements of the rule. Those experts might have helpful testimony as consultants or witnesses even though they do not meet the requirements for the court appointed evaluator. We agree with the decision to require psychologists of all kinds, including school psychologists, to be licensed. Proposed subdivision (b)(1)(E) - We suggest including language to call for experts who are knowledgeable about the particular conditions suspected in the case. Not sure if our language is quite right, but if, for example, we think the	No response required. No response required. The committees declined to add a requirement that the expert be knowledgeable about the particular conditions suspected in the case. The rule already sets a high bar for expert qualifications. Further, the parties will likely not know the condition until the evaluation is completed.

			youth has a developmental disability, we would want to be sure that the expert evaluator knows about that disability. Proposed subdivision (b)(1)(F) – We agree with the Committee's decision about allowing certified interpreters other than Judicial Council certified, but think the rule should specify by whom they may be certified. As we understand it, California does not offer a medical certification, but people can get national certifications from National Board of Certification for Medical Interpreters, www.certifiedmedicalinterpreters.org and Certification Commission for Healthcare Interpreters, www.healthcareinterpretercertification.org. We do not have the expertise to give failproof advice, but have suggested language that could be vetted with experts in the AOC interpreter certification program. Proposed subdivision (b)(1)(G) – We like the idea of the evaluator providing the court and other parties with information about available remediation services whenever possible. There has been an unfortunate belief in some places that remediation consists solely of curriculum driven workbooks, but the universe of remediation is much broader, and the evaluator may be helpful in providing ideas for the remediation plan. Proposed subdivision (c) – We are opposed to allowing evaluator interviews that are not face-to-face. In our experience, youth are not comfortable in Skype, videoconference or other	The committees declined to specify who must certify the interpreters. There are numerous, varied interpreter certification programs and institutions. The committee prefers to not list them all out because it could miss listing several existing programs and would not include any programs that arise in the future. Further, it would limit judicial discretion to determine if an interpreter is adequately certified. No response required. The committees agree with this suggestion and have modified the proposed rule to remove the paragraph allowing the interview to be conducted remotely. The committees' original intent was that this could decrease custodial time for youth who lived in more remote areas. The committees remote communication systems, and this is sure to skew evaluation results. Doing interviews through remote communication devices interferes with the evaluator's ability to build trust with the young person, makes it much more difficult to administer testing, and impairs the evaluator in evaluating body language and affect. Also, from our experience in attorney interviews, we know that it is impossible to control for what is going on outside of camera range, such as eavesdropping staff or other environmental issues that may affect testing. These concerns are recognized as potential pitfalls of remote "telepsychology" by the American Psychological Association Guidelines for the Practice of Telepsychology, https://www.apa.org/practice/guidelines/telepsychology. One of the APA training modules specifically states that "[t]elepsychology may not be a good fit for some individuals, some diagnoses or some age groups, such as very young children…" and also points out that the integrity of testing may be at risk because "[m]ost test instruments and assessment approaches were designed for in-person use ." (Rebecca A. Clay, How to make the most of telepsychology and steer clear of pitfalls, 48 Monitor on Psychology 30 (May 2017).) In cases involving issues as serious as competency, we believe the state needs to provide the resources for face-to-face communications with evaluators. Proposed subdivision (d)(1) – In response to the question posed about whether to list out all	concluded, however, that youth are not comfortable in remote communication systems and this could skew results. There also would be much of the youth's demeanor and behaviors that the evaluator would not be able to observe. It is also not possible to control what is going on outside of camera range, such as eavesdropping staff or other environmental issues that may affect testing. The committees concluded that until the medical or psychological professions establish guidelines in this area, it was not appropriate to provide for it in the rule. No response required.

			the types of records set forth in section 709, we think the proposed language is adequate in simply referring to the statute. Proposed subdivision (d)(2) – We do not think the decision of what records should be provided and who should provide them should be left to individual counties. Section 709 already calls for the expert to review records provided by counsel or "other information" regarding lack of competency from any other person. It seems best to leave things as described in the statute. We have heard of some experts giving lawyers checklists of records, but the statute already sets forth the types of records to consider, and we believe it is up to counsel to determine what is relevant and to provide such records to the experts. Proposed subdivision (e)(1) – We do not think the rule should prescribe what the evaluator asks the young person's counsel. The evaluator should simply consult with counsel as required by the statute. We realize that the attorney has put competency into question, but have concerns that, given that this is the court's evaluator, the proposed language skirts too closely to interference with the confidential attorney client relationship. The attorney should be able to determine what to disclose. Proposed subdivision(f) – We have suggested substantial changes and additions to the elements of the developmental history to focus more on the purpose of the developmental history in the context of competency. We used	The committees prefer to allow each county to determine its own process and retained the proposed provision in rule 5.645 requiring that the written protocol mandated under section 709(i) must include a description of the process for obtaining and providing the records to the evaluator to review, including who will obtain and provide the records to the evaluator. This gives each county discretion to determine the process that will work best. The committees concluded that since minor's counsel often has the most information about the minor and that evaluators routinely do not consult with minor's counsel, it was important to include these minimal, basic questions all evaluators should be asking. The committees made great efforts in the language of the rule to protect the attorney-client privilege. The committee concluded that it would be preferable to keep the proposed provisions regarding developmental history as the suggested changes are overly broad for a rule of court. The proposed amendment to the rule was developed with the assistance of Dr. Grisso, a national expert on juvenile competency evaluations. Further, the suggested language would be important substantive changes to the proposal and would

			as a guide the writings of Thomas Grisso, a national expert on juvenile competence evaluation. If these are too detailed, they may at least serve as a guide for the categories of information that may be relevant for the developmental history. Proposed subdivision (g)(1)(C)(ii) and (iii) – Because we think what is considered should be determined by defense counsel, and that the evaluator should not be tasked with obtaining the materials, we took this out. Similarly, we took out (g)(1)(C)(iii) to conform with the earlier suggested changes on face-to-face interviews. The suggested text already covers what the evaluator should do if the youth refuses an interview. Proposed subdivision (g)(1)(H) – We object to including a provision on malingering in the rule. It is not mentioned in the statute, and we are concerned that it will create a straw man for a situation that seldom occurs in juvenile cases. Also, in our experience, malingering has occasionally been alleged in cases where the remediation services were utterly inadequate, but the blame was placed on the youth for not becoming competent. Most of the standardized tests used by evaluators have built in safeguards to capture malingering, and we believe those are sufficient to address the issue. Proposed subdivision (g)(1)(I) and (K) – we suggest using the term "attainment" for juveniles, not "restoration." That is the preferred term used by experts such as Thomas Grisso, who point out that restoration implies that the	need to circulate for public comment before they are considered for adoption. See responses above. The committees agree with this suggestion and have removed the proposed provision on malingering. The committees concluded that there are enough safeguards built into the standardized tests to capture malingering. The committees agree with this suggestion and have added the words "attain" or "attainment" whenever the rule uses "restore" or "restoration" person was once competent and now will be again, while many young people have never been competent. Proposed subdivision (g)(1) (J) - We suggest that the rule clarify that medication administered in juvenile hall is voluntary, and that if involuntary medication appears necessary, the youth should be referred for handling under the involuntary commitment statutes. Proposed subdivision (g)(1)(K) – We amended the recommendations language to emphasize that placement is not the primary goal – that services and treatment are also important. And we suggest adding the language from the statute about least restrictive environment.	The committees have removed this portion of the rule regarding psychotropic medication. The committees agree with this suggestion and recommend amending the rule to state "The recommendation must be guided by the principle of section 709 that services must be provided in the least restrictive environment consistent with public safety" as recommended by the commenter.

			Rule 5.645 Mental health condition of minor; competency evaluations

			For section (g)(1)(C), it is recommended that the sentence cross-reference Welfare and Institutions Code section 709(b)(3) to define the sources the expert is to consider	The committees agree to add a cross reference to section 709(b)(3) to define the sources the expert must consider.
7.	Superior Court of Riverside County By: Susan Ryan Chief Deputy – Legal Services	A	Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose? Yes, the updates to current Rule 5.645 to include the language "intellectual disability" or "developmental disability" and to replace "child" with the word "minor" will make the rule language more uniform. Breaking out subsections (a)-(c) to be renumbered as Rule 5.643 clarifies the expert qualifications of evaluators and the court proceedings for competency evaluations. Should rule 5.645 (g)(1)(C)(i) be more specific regarding the records reviewed by the evaluator? Should the rule list out the sources listed in section 709(b)(3)? Perhaps. Listing the sources may not be necessary, maybe the rule can just refer back to 709(b)(3). The actual evaluators are more likely to refer to the code sections when they have questions, but also referencing 709(b)(3) in the Rule could also be helpful. Should rules 5.643 and 5.645 use the term "child" or "minor"? Either is fine, but to be more consistent with language used throughout juvenile laws, rules and forms the term "minor" may be best.	No response required. The committees agree to add a cross reference to section 709(b)(3) to define the sources the expert must consider. The committees appreciate the input and have modified the proposal to retain the term "child," instead of the term "minor" as circulated, to be consistent with the other juvenile court rules and forms. The committees considered using the term "youth," as suggested by a comment. However, the committees declined to make this change, as this term is not defined in the rules of court and any definition of the term would be an important substantive change to the proposal and public comment should be sought before the council defines the term.

			Would the proposal provide cost savings? If so, please quantify. If the actual evaluators writing reports have more direction as to what they should review and what the reports should contain the quality of the reports should be better thus requiring less continuances. These efficiencies could also lead to minors being detained for as short a period as possible. However, it should be noted that many courts continue to struggle to find 709 evaluators that meet the requirements. Some courts may need to increase the evaluator fees paid to attract competent and qualified evaluators.	The committees are aware that the new legislative mandates regarding evaluators will likely increase costs to the courts and counties, with no additional funding made available, and will note this in the report to the Judicial Council.
			What would the implementation requirements be for courts? Courts may need to update local protocols, inform judicial officers, stakeholders and evaluator panels of the changes. Some minute codes in the case management system and referral orders may need to be modified.	No response required.
			Would two months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation? For our court yes. Our protocol was revised this year after AB1214 when into effect, so in large part our current protocol has already accounted for these issues.	No response required.

			How well would this proposal work in courts of different sizes? Notifications, system and order changes would likely need to occur in any size court. The proposals should work well for courts of any size. Some courts will likely continue to have difficulties in attracting qualified evaluators.	No response required.

Rule 5.643. 5.645. Mental health or condition of child or youth ~~minor~~; court procedures

(a) When the court is concerned about ~~Doubt concerning~~ the mental health of a child or youth ~~minor~~ (§§ 357, 705, 6550, 6551)

Whenever the court believes that the child or youth ~~minor~~ who is the subject of a petition filed under section 300, 601, or 602 has a mental disability or mental ~~illness is mentally disabled or may be mentally ill~~, the court may stay the proceedings and order the child or youth ~~minor~~ taken to a facility designated by the court and approved by the State Department of Mental Health as a facility for 72-hour treatment and evaluation. The professional in charge of the facility must submit a written evaluation of the child or youth ~~minor~~ to the court.

(b) Findings regarding a mental disorder (§ 6551)

~~Article 1 of chapter 2 of~~ part 1 of division 5 (commencing with section 5150) applies.

(1) If the professional reports that the child or youth ~~minor~~ is not in need of intensive treatment, the child or youth ~~minor~~ must be returned to the juvenile court on or before the expiration of the 72-hour period, and the court must proceed with the case under section 300, 601, or 602.

(2) If the professional in charge of the facility finds that the child or youth ~~minor~~ is in need of intensive treatment for a mental disorder, the child or youth ~~minor~~ may be certified for not more than 14 days of involuntary intensive treatment

according to the conditions of sections 5250(c) and 5260(b). The stay of the juvenile court proceedings must remain in effect during this time.

(A) During or at the end of the 14 days of involuntary intensive treatment, a certification may be sought for additional treatment under sections commencing with 5270.10 or for the initiation of proceedings to have a conservator appointed for the child or youth ~~minor~~ under sections commencing with 5350. The juvenile court may retain jurisdiction over the child or youth ~~minor~~ during proceedings under sections 5270.10 et seq. and 5350 et seq.

(B) For a child or youth ~~minor~~ subject to a petition under section 602, if the child or youth ~~minor~~ is found to be gravely disabled under sections 5300 et seq., a conservator is appointed under those sections, and the professional in charge of the child or youth's ~~minor's~~ treatment or of the treatment facility determines that proceedings under section 602 would be detrimental to the child or youth ~~minor~~, the juvenile court must suspend jurisdiction while the conservatorship remains in effect. The suspension of jurisdiction may end when the conservatorship is terminated, and the original 602 matter may be calendared for further proceedings.

(c) Findings regarding intellectual disability (§ 6551)

Article 1 of chapter 2 of part 1 of division 5 (commencing with section 5150) applies.

(1) If the professional finds that the child or youth ~~minor~~ has an intellectual disability ~~is mentally retarded~~ and recommends commitment to a state hospital, the court may direct the filing in the appropriate court of a petition for commitment of a child or youth ~~minor~~ as a person with a developmental disability ~~mentally retarded~~ to the State Department of Developmental Services for placement in a state hospital.

(2) If the professional finds that the child or youth ~~minor~~ does not have an intellectual disability ~~is not mentally retarded~~, the child or youth ~~minor~~ must be returned to the juvenile court on or before the expiration of the 72-hour period, and the court must proceed with the case under section 300, 601, or 602.

(3) The jurisdiction of the juvenile court must be suspended while the child or youth ~~minor~~ is subject to the jurisdiction of the appropriate court under a petition for commitment of a person with an intellectual disability ~~mentally retarded~~, or according to the conditions of sections 5250(c) and 5260(b). The stay of the juvenile court proceedings must remain in effect during this time.

Rule 5.645. Mental health or condition of youth ~~minor~~; court procedures competency evaluations

(a) Doubt as minor's competency (§§ 601, 602, 709)

(1) If the court finds that there is substantial evidence about ~~that regarding [or: about?]~~ a youth ~~minor~~ who is the subject of a petition filed under section 601 or 602 that raises a doubt as to the young person's ~~minor's~~ competency as defined in section 709, the court must suspend the proceedings and conduct a hearing regarding the youth's competency ~~minor's competence~~. Evidence is substantial if it raises a reasonable doubt about the youth's ~~child's~~ competence to stand trial.

(2) Unless the parties have stipulated to a finding of incompetency, the court must appoint an expert ~~to examine the child~~ to evaluate the youth ~~minor~~ and determine whether the youth ~~minor~~ suffers from a mental illness, mental disorder, developmental disability, developmental immaturity, or other condition affecting competency and, if so, whether the ~~condition or conditions impair the child's competency~~ the youth ~~minor~~ is incompetent as defined in section 709(a)(2).

(3) Following the hearing on competency, the court must proceed as directed in section 709.

(b) Expert qualifications

(1) To be appointed as an expert, an individual must be a:

(A) Licensed psychiatrist who has successfully completed four years of medical school and either four years of general psychiatry residency, including one year of internship and two years of child and adolescent fellowship training, or three years of general psychiatry residency, including one year of internship and one year of residency that focus on children and adolescents and one year of child and adolescent fellowship training; or

(B) Clinical, counseling, or school psychologist who has received a doctoral degree in psychology from an educational institution accredited by an organization recognized by the Council for Higher Education Accreditation and who is licensed as a psychologist.; and

(2) The expert, whether a licensed psychiatrist or psychologist, must:

(A) Possess demonstrable professional experience addressing child and adolescent developmental issues, including the emotional, behavioral, and cognitive impairments of children and adolescents;

(B) Have expertise in the cultural and social characteristics of children and adolescents;

(C) Possess a curriculum vitae reflecting training and experience in the forensic evaluation of children and adolescents;

(D) Be familiar with juvenile competency standards and accepted criteria used in evaluating juvenile competence;

(E) Possess a comprehensive understanding of effective interventions, as well as treatment, training, and programs for the attainment of competency available to children and adolescents, including the particular condition or conditions suspected in the case; and

(F) Be proficient in the language preferred by the youth ~~minor~~, or if that is not feasible, employ the services of an interpreter certified by the Administrative Office of the Courts, a recognized professional association, or an accredited college or university interpreter program, ~~certified interpreter and~~ use assessment tools that are linguistically and culturally appropriate for the youth ~~minor~~; and

(G) Be familiar with juvenile competency remediation services available to the youth ~~minor~~.

(3) Nothing in this rule precludes involvement of clinicians with other professional qualifications from participation as consultants or witnesses or in other capacities relevant to the case.

(c) Interview of minor

The expert must evaluate the youth ~~attempt to interview the minor face-to-face~~.

~~(1) If an in-person interview is not possible due to distance, the interview may be conducted remotely, using videoconference or another form of remote~~

~~electronic communication that allows the evaluator and the minor to communicate in real time and see each other during the interview, with no delay in aural or visual transmission or reception.~~

~~(2)~~ If an in-person interview is not possible because the minor refuses an interview, the evaluator must still meet with the minor ~~try to observe~~ and make direct contact with the minor to attempt to gain clinical observations that may inform the evaluator's opinion regarding the minor's competency.

(d) Review of records

(1) The evaluator must review all the records provided as required by section 709.

~~(2) The written protocol required under section 1 709(i) must include a description of the process for obtaining and providing the records to the evaluator to review, including who will obtain and provide the records to the evaluator.~~

(e) Consult with minor's counsel (1) The expert must consult with minor's counsel as required by section 709.
~~This consultation must include asking minor's counsel the following: (A) If minor's counsel raised the question of competency, why minor's counsel doubts that the minor is competent;~~
~~(B) What has minor's counsel observed regarding the minor's behavior; and~~
~~(C) A description of how the minor interacts with minor's counsel.~~

(2) No waiver of the attorney-client privilege will be deemed to have occurred from minor's counsel's report of the minor's statements to the evaluator, and all such statements are subject to the protections in (g)(2) of this rule.

(f) Developmental history

The expert must gather and include in the report a developmental history of the minor as required by section709. This history is to help explain a youth's capacity to understand the adjudication process and participate in it, explaining the clinical and/or developmental reasons for any deficits in those abilities. It ~~must be documented in the report and~~ may~~ust~~ include, but is not limited to the following:

Educational Records: A history of challenges that interfere with academic success and thus, identify possible areas of court-related weaknesses or help to confirm diagnoses. These records may contain descriptions of the youth's general learning style and/or the typical educational supports used with the youth and the efficacy of those services. Whether or not the youth has been in special education, the records may help the examiner consider the youth's daily functioning in a setting, like court, with significant verbal demands.

- Progress in school, including grade level, grades and achievement levels, testing of general intelligence, specific cognitive abilities, and/or learning abilities that help clarify the youth's developmental trajectory; records of educators or service providers indicating the young person functions at a level not commensurate with chronological age; and whether the youth is in a regular or alternative education program;
- Any history of special education, including the basis for eligibility; types of services called for in Individualized Education program (IEP); services actually provided, setting for services; date of last IEP;
- Any school suspensions or expulsions, their basis, and any alternative services provided;
- Any significant disruption in school attendance and the reasons therefore;
- Any visits to or treatment by a school psychologist and the basis;

Health and Mental Health Records: Information about physical and mental disabilities identified by providers in the past, and how they have impacted the youth, and the efficacy of any treatment.

- Medical history, including diagnoses and treatment for potentially relevant conditions;
- Early health records where potentially relevant, including evidence of in utero exposure to drugs/alcohol; history of whether the youth achieved developmental milestones such as walking, talking, and reading;
- Mental health history including diagnoses, medications, treatment by mental health professionals, or hospitalizations;
- History of head injuries or incidents of being rendered unconscious, including any diagnosis of Traumatic Brain Injury;
- Any regional center contact; determinations of eligibility; and services provided;
- History of substance use and any treatment or intervention;

Child Welfare Records/Family History that may identify potentially relevant neglect or trauma, the history and general functioning of the family and/or specific struggles the family has faced.

- History of contacts with the child welfare system; any 300 petitions filed or sustained; placements; history of any services provided to the youth;
- Family history, including current living conditions; history of moving, and other disruptions due to death, incarceration, incapacitation of parent or guardians;
- History of trauma or domestic violence in the home; other trauma history such as exposure to community violence or witnessing violence to loved ones;
- History of migration or immigration from other countries; any relevant cultural or linguistic background of the youth and family.

Legal Records that describe the youth's past record of arrests or contacts with the system that might help explain strengths and weaknesses in the youth's understanding of the legal process.

- History of involvement in juvenile justice system, including sustained petitions, dispositions, interventions and services provided.

~~(1) Whether there were complications or drug use during pregnancy that could have caused medical issues for the minor;~~

~~(2) When the minor achieved developmental milestones such as talking, walking, and reading;~~

~~(3) Psychosocial factors such as abuse, neglect, or drug exposure;~~

~~(4) Adverse childhood experiences, including early disruption in the parent-child relationship;~~

~~(5) Mental health services received during childhood and adolescence;~~

~~(6) School performance, including an Individualized Education Plan, testing, achievement scores, and retention;~~

~~(7) Acculturation issues;~~

~~(8) Biological and neurological factors such as neurological 2 deficits and head~~

~~trauma; and~~
~~(9) Medical history including significant diagnoses, hospitalizations, or head trauma.~~

(g) Written report

(1) Any court-appointed evaluator must examine the minor and advise the court on the minor's competency to stand trial. The expert's report must be submitted to the court, to the counsel for the minor, to the probation department, and to the prosecution. The report must include the following:

(A) A statement identifying the court referring the case, the purpose of the evaluation, and the definition of competency in the state of California;

(B) A brief statement of the expert's training and previous experience as it relates to evaluating the competence of a minor to stand trial;

(C) A statement of the procedure used by the expert, including:

(i) A list of all sources of information considered by the expert;

~~(ii) A list of all sources of information the expert tried or wanted to obtain but, for reasons described in the report, could not be obtained;~~

~~(iii) A detailed summary of the attempts made to meet the minor face30 to face and a detailed account of any accommodations made to make direct contact with the minor; and~~

(ii~~i~~iv~~v~~) All diagnostic and psychological tests administered, if any;

(D) A summary of the developmental history of the child;

(E) A summary of the evaluation conducted by the expert on the minor, including the current diagnosis or diagnoses that meet criteria under the most recent version of the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders, when applicable, and a summary of the minor's mental or developmental status;

(F) A detailed analysis of the competence of the minor to stand trial under section 709, including the minor's ability or inability to understand the nature of the proceedings and to ~~or~~ assist counsel in the conduct of a defense in a rational manner as a result of a mental or developmental impairment;

(G) An analysis of whether and how the minor's mental or developmental status is related to any deficits in abilities related to competency;

~~(H) A summary of an assessment conducted for malingering or feigning symptoms, if clinically indicated, which may include psychological testing;~~

(I) If the minor has significant deficits in abilities related to competency, an opinion with explanation as to whether treatment can reduce the impairments related to the minor's deficits in competency abilities, the nature of that treatment, its availability, and whether attainment ~~restoration~~ is likely to be accomplished within the statutory time limit;

(J) If psychotropic medication is considered appropriate and necessary, whether the treatment will likely enable the youth to attain ~~restore the minor to~~ mental competency, a list of likely or potential side effects of the medication, the expected efficacy of the medication, possible alternative treatments, whether it is medically appropriate to administer psychotropic medication in the county juvenile hall, and whether the minor has capacity to make decisions regarding psychotropic medication. Involuntary medication may not be administered pursuant to section 709, and may only be administered in conformity with Welfare and Institutions Code 705 or Penal Code Section 4011.6 (for non-wards), or Welfare and Institutions Code section 6550 if they are wards. If the expert is of the opinion that a referral to a psychiatrist is necessary to address these issues, the expert must inform the court of this opinion and recommend that a psychiatrist examine the minor or that the minor be referred for civil commitment proceedings pursuant to the above referenced sections; and

(K) A recommendation, as appropriate, for the type of placement, services, ~~or or type of placement and~~ treatment that would be most appropriate for restoring the minor to competency. The recommendation shall be guided by the principle of Section 709 that services shall be provided in the least restrictive environment consistent with public safety.

(2) Statements made to the appointed expert during the minor's competency evaluation and statements made by the minor to mental health professionals during the remediation proceedings, and any fruits of these statements, must not be used in any other hearing against the minor in either juvenile or adult court.

Executive Summary

Recent changes in the law on the transfer of jurisdiction to a criminal court for children 14 and 15 years of age require rule and form changes to be consistent with the new provisions. Senate Bill 1391 (Lara; Stats. 2018, ch. 1012) amends Welfare and Institutions Code section 707 to provide that a child must be at least 16 years of age to be considered for transfer of jurisdiction to criminal court unless the individual for whom transfer is sought was 14 or 15 at the time of the offense, the offense is listed in section 707(b), and the individual was not apprehended until after the end of juvenile court jurisdiction. To implement these age-related changes in the jurisdiction of the juvenile court, the Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee recommends that the Judicial Council amend three rules of court and one form pertaining to the transfer-of-jurisdiction process and an informational form to reflect the new provisions.

Recommendation

The Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee recommends that the Judicial Council, effective January 1, 2020:

1. Amend California Rules of Court, rules 5.766, 5.768, and 5.770 to implement statutory and recent case law changes pertaining to the transfer-of-jurisdiction process;

2. Revise Juvenile Justice Court: Information for Parents (form JV-060-INFO) to reflect modified age limits on transferring jurisdiction to criminal court over juvenile offenders; and

3. Revise Order to Transfer Juvenile to Criminal Court Jurisdiction (form JV-710) to reflect recent changes in the transfer statute and case law.

The text of the amended rules and the revised forms are attached at pages 6–17.

Relevant Previous Council Action

The Judicial Council adopted California Rules of Court,[1] rules 5.766, 5.768, and 5.770 effective January 1, 1991, as rules 1480, 1481, 1482, and 1483 respectively, and they were renumbered effective January 1, 2007. These rules have been amended numerous times, most recently effective May 22, 2017, to implement the changes enacted by Proposition 57.

Juvenile Fitness Hearing Order (Welfare and Institutions Code, § 707) (form JV-710) was adopted by the council effective January 1, 2006, and made optional effective January 1, 2012. It was significantly revised effective May 22, 2017, to implement the changes enacted by Prop. 57. Juvenile Justice Court: Information for Parents (form JV-060-INFO) was significantly revised effective January 1, 2019, to bring it up to date (using plain language), and to reformat it to make printing easier.

Analysis/Rationale

On November 8, 2016, the people of the State of California enacted Prop. 57, the Public Safety and Rehabilitation Act of 2016, effective November 9, 2016. Proposition 57 amended existing law to require that the juvenile court consider a motion by the district attorney or other appropriate prosecuting officer to transfer the minor to the jurisdiction of the criminal court before a juvenile can be prosecuted in a criminal court. To that end, the proposition repealed Welfare and Institutions Code section 602(b),[2] which had provided that certain serious and violent felonies were to be prosecuted in criminal court, as well as section 707(d), which had authorized the district attorney to directly file an accusatory pleading involving certain minors in criminal court. In addition, the proposition eliminated a set of presumptions that applied in determining whether a case should be transferred and instead provided the court with broad discretion to determine whether the child should be transferred to a court of criminal jurisdiction, taking into account numerous factors and criteria.

Senate Bill 1391 (see Link A) further amended these provisions to limit the transfer of cases involving offenders who were 14 or 15 years old at the time of the alleged offense to those in which the alleged offender is not apprehended until after reaching adulthood, and the offense is one listed in section 707(b). Since January 1, 2019, district attorneys in at least 10 counties have lodged challenges to the constitutionality of the law. Trial courts have ruled both for and against upholding the constitutionality of the statute and, thus, its status is in question. However, the Court of Appeal has ruled, in two cases in different appellate districts, that SB 1391 is not an unconstitutional modification of the voters' intent in enacting Prop. 57. The Supreme Court has denied review in both cases.[3]

To implement the new jurisdictional changes, the transfer rules and form must be changed. In addition, the information form for parents whose children have been arrested must be updated to contain the accurate information about transfer of jurisdiction to criminal court and the lower limit on jurisdiction for children under 12 years of age in most cases.

Transfer rules 5.766, 5.768, and 5.770

The current rules of court governing the process for transfer of jurisdiction from juvenile to criminal court provide that transfer can occur when the subject of the petition is age 14 or 15 and is alleged to have committed an offense listed in Welfare and Institutions Code section 707(b), or is 16 years of age or older and is alleged to have committed a felony. These rules must be amended to state that a transfer petition may be considered only for those who were 14 or 15 years of age at the time of the offense when the individual who is the subject of the petition was apprehended after the end of juvenile court jurisdiction. In addition, the changes to section 707 require that code references be updated to reflect the new structure of the statute. The proposal would also update rule 5.770 to include the requirement that the court make specific findings for each of the transfer criteria in section 707(a)(3) as provided in C.S. v. Superior Court (2018) 29 Cal.App.5th 1009. Finally, the committee recommends revising rule 5.776 to correct a typographical error in the most recent version approved by the council.

Transfer order form JV-710

Order to Transfer Juvenile to Criminal Court Jurisdiction (form JV-710), for optional use, would be revised to update item 3 to include the limitation on transferring individuals who were age 14 or 15 at the time of the offense to those situations in which apprehension of the subject of the petition occurred after the end of juvenile court jurisdiction; and to update item 4 to correct the statutory reference to 707(a)(2) and make it 707(a)(3), consistent with the changes enacted by SB 1391.

Information form for parents (JV-060-INFO)

To provide accurate information to parents about when a juvenile case can be transferred to criminal court, Juvenile Justice Court: Information for Parents (form JV-060-INFO) would be revised to reflect the limitations on transfer of people 14 and 15 years of age.

[3] People v. Superior Court (Alexander C.) (2019) 34 Cal.App.5th 994, review denied June 26, 2019, S255985; and People v. Superior Court of Sacramento County (K.L. and R.Z.), (2019) 36 Cal.App.5th 529, review denied July 17, 2019, S256637.

Policy implications

The change to the law made by SB 1391 will result in fewer cases being eligible to transfer to criminal court jurisdiction. As a result, juvenile courts will have to determine appropriate dispositions for offenders who have been found to have committed serious offenses, including homicide, between ages 14 and 16. This proposal seeks to provide accurate rules and forms for the courts to use to carry out their transfer obligations, given the new law, and to ensure that the information form for parents reflects the current state of the law.

Comments

This proposal was circulated for public comment from April 11 to June 10, 2019, as part of the regular spring comment cycle. Six organizations submitted comments on this proposal. Three commenters agreed with the proposal. Three organizations agreed if the proposal was modified. A chart with the full text of the comments received and the committee's responses is attached at pages 18–30.

Implementing C.S. v. Superior Court (2018) 29 Cal.App.5th 1009

The committee asked for specific comment on whether the proposal should include rule or form changes to assist the courts in implementing the holding in C.S. v. Superior Court (2018) 29 Cal.App.5th 1009, which requires the court to articulate its findings on each of the transfer criteria in the statute. The committee asked whether rule 5.770 or form JV-710 should be changed to reflect this holding. The commenters expressed an array of opinions on this question, from making no change to changing both the rule and the form. The committee concluded that it was critical for courts to be prompted to make the detailed and specific findings required for each statutory criterion, but also agreed with a number of commenters that form JV-170 was not the optimal place to record such findings. Thus, the committee recommends adding language requiring such findings to rule 5.770, and revising the text of item 4 of form JV-710 to clearly state that the court has considered and made findings on the record for each of the criteria.

Referring to the subject of a transfer order—minor v. child

The committee in recent rules and forms cycles has been confronted with what is the best term to use to refer to the young people subject to the jurisdiction of the juvenile justice courts. The last time the transfer rules and forms were amended or revised to implement Prop. 57, the committee opted to stick with its general practice of using the term "child" as opposed to the term "minor"—which is used in the statute. In this comment cycle, two commenters objected to the use of the term child with one suggesting "youth" as a substitute and one suggesting "minor" or "youth." While there was significant division within the committee on this issue, the majority favored maintaining the status quo and retaining the use of child because it is defined in both statute and rule of court, and because it signals the developmental differences that impact those who are subject to transfer motions and that the Legislature has directed the courts to take into account.

Adding an item to form JV-710 for withdrawal of a transfer motion

One commenter suggested that form JV-710 be revised to allow for the withdrawal of a transfer order to accommodate cases impacted by SB 1391's restrictions on the age for transfers. The committee ultimately determined that this was not a necessary addition to the form because it did not fit within the transfer order process and because such motions can easily be made currently without this form.

In addition to these substantive comments, the committee received numerous clarifying and technical suggestions, most of which it adopted.

Alternatives considered

As described in the discussion of the comments, the committee discussed a number of alternative approaches to this proposal, including modifying form JV-710 to allow for courts to record their findings on the section 707(a)(3) criteria, modifying the form to place a check box for a transfer motion to be withdrawn, and changing the terminology on the form to use the term minor or youth in place of child. For the reasons set forth above, the committee opted not to adopt those alternatives.

In addition, given the legal challenges to the underlying legislation that the proposal seeks to implement, the committee considered deferring action until all appellate review is final, but determined that it would be preferable to move forward at the same time as the litigation in order to assist courts with implementation in a timely manner. Given that two courts have published opinions upholding the statute and the Supreme court has denied petitions for review in both of those cases, the committee has concluded that the statute should be implemented now.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

The restrictions on the use of transfer to criminal court for juvenile offenders ages 14 and 15 will result in the filing of fewer transfer petitions for these youth and, thus, fewer hearings on those petitions. These impacts are the result of legislative changes. The revisions to form JV-060-INFO may impose additional printing costs for any courts that need to replace existing copies of this form with the revised information form.

Rules 5.766, 5.768, and 5.770 of the California Rules of Court are amended, effective January 1, 2020, to read:

Rule 5.766. General provisions

(a) Hearing on transfer of jurisdiction to criminal court (§ 707)

A child who is the subject of a petition under section 602 and who was 14 years or older at the time of the alleged felony offense may be considered for prosecution under the general law in a court of criminal jurisdiction. The district attorney or other appropriate prosecuting officer may make a motion to transfer the child from juvenile court to a court of criminal jurisdiction, in one of the following circumstances:

(1) The ~~child~~ individual was 14 or 15 years ~~or older~~ of age at the time of the alleged offense listed in section 707(b) and was not apprehended before the end of juvenile court jurisdiction.

(2) The child was 16 years or older at the time of the alleged felony offense.

(b)–(c) * * *

(d) Time of transfer hearing—rules 5.774, 5.776

The transfer of jurisdiction hearing must be held and the court must rule on ~~the~~ the request to transfer jurisdiction before the jurisdiction hearing begins. Absent a continuance under rule 5.776 or the child's waiver of the statutory time period to commence the jurisdiction hearing, the jurisdiction hearing must begin within the time limits under rule 5.774.

Rule 5.768. Report of probation officer

(a) Contents of report (§ 707)

The probation officer must prepare and submit to the court a report on the behavioral patterns and social history of the child being considered. The report must include information relevant to the determination of whether the child should be retained under the jurisdiction of the juvenile court or transferred to the jurisdiction of the criminal court, including information regarding all of the criteria in section 707(a)~~(2)~~(3). The report must also include any written or oral statement offered by the victim pursuant to section 656.2.

(b)–(c) * * *

Rule 5.770. Conduct of transfer of jurisdiction hearing under section 707

(a) * * *

(b) Criteria to consider (§ 707)

Following receipt of the probation officer's report and any other relevant evidence, the court may order that the child be transferred to the jurisdiction of the criminal court if the court finds:

(1) The child was 16 years or older at the time of any alleged felony offense, or the ~~child~~ individual was 14 or 15 years of age at the time of an alleged felony offense listed in section 707(b) and was not apprehended before the end of juvenile court jurisdiction; and

(2) The child should be transferred to the jurisdiction of the criminal court based on an evaluation of all of the criteria in section 707(a)~~(2)~~(3) as provided in that section. The court must document on the record the basis for its decision, detailing how it weighed the evidence and identifying the specific facts that persuaded the court to reach its decision, notwithstanding that the decision must be based on the totality of the circumstances and the child need not be found amenable on each of the five criteria in order to remain in juvenile court.

JV-060-INFO Juvenile Justice Court: Information for Parents

Juvenile justice court (sometimes called delinquency court) is a court that decides if a child broke the law. The juvenile justice court helps to protect, guide, and rehabilitate children. And it helps keep the community safe.

This information sheet answers common questions that many parents have. It has three sections:

1. What Happens When Your Child Is Arrested
2. Your child's Court Hearings and Orders
3. How to Keep Your Child's Juvenile Court Record Private

This form describes the juvenile justice court process. Some children who break the law and become involved with law enforcement or probation never need to go to court.

1 What Happens When Your Child Is Arrested

This section is about:

- What to expect when your child is arrested,
- What your child's legal rights are,
- What the notice to appear and the petition are,
- What it means to transfer your child to adult court, and
- What a probation officer does.

My child was arrested. What happens next?

Your child might be brought home or allowed to go home with you.

You will be given or mailed a notice to appear that tells you the date, time, and place you and your child need to go to the probation department or juvenile court. Talk to a qualified juvenile defense lawyer about your child's case. Many juvenile defenders offer free consultations.

Warning! You and your child must go to the meeting listed on the notice to appear even if no one contacts you again. Sometimes the meeting will be at probation. Sometimes the notice will order you to go to the juvenile court.

Your child might NOT be sent home immediately after the arrest.

If that happens, the officer who arrested your child may:

- Let your child go later.
- Take your child to juvenile hall and keep them there. This is called in-custody detention. If this happens, the arresting officer must try to contact you immediately to tell you where your child is and that your child is in custody.

What are my child's legal rights after arrest?

Your child has the right to make at least two phone calls within 1 hour of being arrested.

- One call must be a completed call to a parent, guardian, responsible relative, or employer.
- The other call must be a completed call to a lawyer.
- If your child is currently in court-ordered foster care, your child may also be allowed to call a foster parent or social worker.

Will they tell my child about the right to remain silent?

Yes. Before any officer asks your child about what happened, the officer must first tell your child about your child's Miranda rights.

They will say:

"You have the right to remain silent. Anything you say will be used against you in court. You have a right to have a lawyer with you during questioning. If you or your parents cannot afford a lawyer, one will be appointed for you."

JV-060-INFO Juvenile Justice Court: Information for Parents

NOTE: If your child is 15 years old or younger and in custody, your child must talk to a lawyer—in person, by phone, or by videoconference (like Skype or FaceTime)—before answering any questions or giving up any rights. Your child cannot decide to answer questions or give up rights without first talking to a lawyer.

Does my child need a lawyer?

If a petition is filed, your child has a right to an effective and prepared court-appointed lawyer, who must have specific education and training in juvenile justice cases. Many parents hire a lawyer for their child as soon as the child is arrested.

Your child's lawyer represents only your child, not you, even if you are paying for that lawyer.

Do I need a lawyer for myself?

The court can order you to do things for your child and can order you to pay restitution to the victim. Some parents hire lawyers for legal advice about these issues.

NOTE: If you think you need your own lawyer and cannot afford to hire one, you can ask the court to appoint a lawyer for you. The court will decide whether to appoint you a lawyer. If it does, you might be ordered to pay back the cost of the lawyer if the court decides you can.

If my child is required to meet with probation, how can we get ready?

It's a good idea to get legal advice. A defense lawyer who specializes in juvenile justice cases can help you understand your child's rights and know what to expect. Try to find school records and other information that shows what you and your child are doing to get back on track.

At the meeting, the probation officer will talk with you and your child to figure out the best way to handle your child's case.

NOTE: At this meeting, the probation officer must tell you and your child about the Miranda rights. Any information you or your child share with the probation officer might be shared with the court or the prosecuting attorney (DA).

- If the alleged offense is not serious or it's the first time your child has been accused of breaking the law, the probation officer might just tell your child what they did was wrong (reprimand them) and let your child go.
- The probation officer might offer to let your child do a special diversion program instead of going to court. Each county has different rules and different programs. If you and your child agree to the program and your child does everything the program requires, the juvenile court does not need to get involved.
- If the offense is more serious, the probation officer might refer your child's case to the prosecuting attorney (DA). If the prosecutor decides to file charges, they will file a petition in juvenile court. That's what the rest of this form is about.

What happens if my child is taken to juvenile hall after getting arrested?

The probation officer can decide to:

- Keep your child in custody, or
- Let your child go home with you.

If the officer lets your child go, they may still:

- Ask the DA to file a petition, and
- Set limits on what your child is allowed to do while at home.

If the officer does not let your child go, a petition must be filed within 48 hours of the arrest. A detention hearing must be held the next day the court is in session. The courts are closed on Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays. You and your child must be given a copy of the petition. Exception: If your child is under 8, your child does not have a right to get a copy of the petition.

How long can they keep my child in juvenile hall?

The judge will decide at the detention hearing. The judge may release your child or keep your child in juvenile hall until the next hearing or until the whole case is over.

Can I visit my child in juvenile hall?

Usually, but before you go, contact the juvenile hall or the probation officer to find out when you can see your child.

What if the probation officer says a petition will be filed?

The petition states the things your child is accused of or charged with. It means your child's case will be sent to juvenile court. You have the right to receive a copy of the petition. If you have not received a copy of the petition, ask the probation officer or the court clerk for one.

The petition says your child did something against the law and asks the juvenile court to decide that what it says is true, but it does not prove anything.
Read the Petition Carefully! It is important to know what your child is accused of.

Are all petitions the same?

No. Each petition is tailored to the child and the alleged offense. There are two kinds of petitions:

A 601 Petition is filed when a child has:

- Run away,
- Skipped school a lot,
- Violated a curfew, or
- Regularly disobeyed a parent or guardian.

These petitions are filed by the probation department at the juvenile court. If the court decides the charges are true, your child can become a "ward" of the court. That means the court will supervise your child, and your child must obey the court's orders.

A 602 Petition is for a charge that would be a misdemeanor (like shoplifting or simple assault) or felony (like stealing a car, selling drugs, rape, or murder) if an adult had done it.

These petitions are filed by the prosecuting attorney (DA). If the court decides the charges are true, the judge can:

- Order your child put on probation,
- Make your child a "ward" of the court, and
- Order your child placed out of your home or committed (locked up).

NOTE: If your family is involved with the child welfare system, talk with your lawyer about what your child's arrest means for that case. Depending on everything that has happened, the court might decide that it's best for your child to stay in the child welfare system, to be supervised in the juvenile justice system, or to be supervised and served in both systems.

Can my child's case be moved to adult court?

In certain situations, the prosecuting attorney (DA) can ask the juvenile court to transfer your child's case to adult criminal court. If that happens, talk to your child's lawyer right away. Adult criminal cases are handled very differently and there may be very serious consequences for your child.

A case can be transferred to adult court only if your child is:

- 16 years old or older; and
- Charged with a felony.

What does the probation officer do?

Probation officers investigate children's situations and backgrounds and write reports for the court. They also supervise children to see if they are doing what the court has ordered them to do.

Why does the probation officer write a report?

The probation officer writes reports to give the court information about your child. The reports give the judge a description of your child's situation, including life at home and school, the current charge(s), and any previous arrests or petitions. It can also include:

- Statements from your child, you, your family, and other people who know your child well;
- A school report;
- A statement by the victim; and
- Recommendations about what the court should do if the judge finds that your child did what the petition says.

When does the judge see the reports?

The probation officer presents a report at the detention hearing, disposition hearing, and each review hearing. The judge uses the reports to help decide how to handle your child's case.

2 Your Child's Court Hearings and Orders

If a petition is filed in your child's case, you and your child will have to go to juvenile court. Each time you go to court is called a "hearing." You may have to go to several court hearings. This section is about:

- What happens at the different court hearings,
- What happens after the hearings,
- What if your child becomes a ward of the court, and
- What your duties and responsibilities as a parent are.

Get Ready for Court

How will I find out about court hearings?

If your child is in custody, both you and your child will get notice at least 5 days before the hearing. Someone will deliver it personally or by certified mail.

If your child is* not *in custody, both you and your child will get notice of each court hearing at least 10 days before the date of the hearing. Someone will deliver it personally, by first-class mail, or, if you agree, electronically.

Can I go to my child's court hearings?

Yes. In fact, the law says you must go. The judge decides what is best for your child. Depending on the charges, if you can show that your child will listen to you and follow your rules, and that you will hold your child accountable and be supportive at home, the judge may let your child go home with you.

How many times will we have to go to court?

You and your child will probably need go to court several times. There will be different kinds of hearings where the court makes different decisions. See page 8 for a table of different hearing types.

Do we have the right to an interpreter?

Your child has a right to an interpreter. You might have a right to one, too. Ask for one if you do not speak English well and don't understand everything being said in court.

Can I speak at the court hearings?

Yes. You may speak when:

- The judge asks you questions,
- You are called as a witness, or
- The judge gives you permission.

Who else speaks at the court hearings?

Your child's lawyer will speak for your child. The prosecuting attorney (DA) will speak for the government. The probation officer may speak for the Probation Department.

Can the victim go to the hearings?

Yes. A crime victim has a right to go to and speak at any court hearing. The victim and the victim's parents (if the victim is under 18) will get notice of the hearing. Do not talk to the victim unless your lawyer tells you to.

When is the first court hearing?

If your child is in custody, the first hearing, called the detention hearing, must take place on the court day immediately after the petition is filed. The probation officer or prosecuting attorney (DA) must tell you when and where the hearing will be. You will also get a copy of the petition. At this hearing, the court decides only whether your child can go home or needs to stay in custody until the next hearing.

If your child is* not *in custody, the first hearing, often called the initial hearing, must take place no more than 30 days after the petition is filed. In addition to the notice described earlier, you and your child will get a copy of the petition at least 10 days before the date of this hearing.

What is a jurisdiction hearing?

The jurisdiction hearing is when the judge decides if your child actually did what it says in the petition.

Here's what to expect:

- The judge will ask your child to admit or deny the charges listed in the petition.
- Your child's lawyer will consider the evidence and the possible outcomes, and then advise your child what to do.

- If your child admits the charges, they give up the right to a trial. The judge will decide that the petition is true.
- If your child denies the charges, there will be a trial (called a contested hearing). The court may hold the trial on another day to give your child's lawyer time to get ready.

What happens at the "trial"?

At the trial, the prosecuting attorney (DA) will show evidence to prove the charges. Then your child's lawyer will show evidence in your child's defense. The judge will consider all the evidence and decide if the charges are true "beyond a reasonable doubt."

If there is not enough proof to decide the charges are true, the judge will dismiss the case. If your child is in custody, she or he will be let go. If this happens, skip ahead to section 3 of this form.

If the judge decides the charges are true, there will be a disposition hearing. That's when the judge will say what your child will need to do and where your child will live. Sometimes this hearing is right after the jurisdiction hearing, but it can also be later on the same day or on another day.

If your child is in custody, the judge can order your child to stay in custody or be released until the disposition hearing.

> If you live in a different county, the court can transfer the case to your county court for the disposition hearing. Ask your child's lawyer if that is a good idea for your child's case.

What happens at the disposition hearing?

The judge will decide what orders to make to protect and rehabilitate your child and to protect the community.

The judge might order your child to:

- Live at home and obey informal probation rules for up to six months.
- Live at home, be supervised by a probation officer, and obey rules set by the judge.
- Live at a relative's home, a foster family home, a private group home, or a residential treatment program; be supervised by a probation officer; and obey rules set by the judge.
- Spend time in a county camp, home, ranch, or hall (in custody) and on probation.
- Spend time in the Division of Juvenile Justice (DJJ) of the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation (in custody).

The judge may also order you, the parent, to get counseling or parent training or do other activities.

What if the judge puts my child on probation?

If your child is put on probation, the probation officer will supervise and work with your child to make sure that your child follows:

- The law,
- The court's orders, and
- All the rules of probation.

The probation officer will also encourage your child to do well in school and participate in job training, counseling, and community programs.

How often will the probation officer see my child?

Each case is different. The probation officer may meet with your child twice a week or only once a month.

What if the judge makes my child a ward of the court?

The juvenile law uses special language. Children who have committed offenses become wards of the court, but are not convicted. If your child becomes a ward of the court, that means the court is in charge of some of your child's care and conduct. The court does this to protect your child and the community.

What if the judge orders my child placed in foster care?

If the judge orders suitable out-of-home or foster placement, the probation officer may place your child in:

- An adult relative's home,
- An approved foster family home,
- A licensed private group home, or
- A residential treatment program.

What if the court sends my child to a secure county facility?

Most wards of the court who need secure confinement are sent to county facilities, like a ranch, camp, or juvenile hall, where they can be close to their families and local rehabilitative services. Ask the probation department about your child's program and how you can visit and stay in touch.

What if the court sends my child to DJJ?

Only wards who have committed the most serious violent actions or need intensive treatment are sent to DJJ. If the court sends your child to DJJ, visit www.cdcr.ca.gov/Juvenile_Justice/ to get more information about where your child might go and how you can visit and stay in touch.

If my child's case was moved to adult court, can my child be sent to adult prison?

Yes, but there are limits:

- Between the ages of 16 and 18, your child must stay at a juvenile facility (DJJ) even if sentenced to adult prison.
- If your child's sentence will end before your child turns 25, your child can stay at a juvenile facility (DJJ) for the entire sentence.
- If your child's sentence will last past the age of 25, your child can stay at DJJ until age 18, then be moved to an adult prison on the child's 18th birthday.

Important! If your child's case gets moved to adult court, talk to your child's lawyer right away.

Do I have to pay for what my child did?

The court may order you to pay fines or penalties.

If the court decides that the victim is entitled to restitution, you and your child are equally responsible for paying the victim back. Restitution is money that pays the victim to make up for the damage or harm your child caused. Restitution can pay the victim back for:

- Stolen or damaged property,
- Medical expenses, and
- Lost wages.

If restitution is not completely paid when your child's case is closed, it will become a civil judgment, which can affect your credit score.

Do I have to pay fees for services my child receives from the court or county?

No. You do not have to pay fees or pay back the cost of services, support, or an attorney given to your child by the county or court as part of this case.

But if you can afford it, you might have to pay back the cost of services, including an attorney, given to you or other family members by the county or the court.

What are my responsibilities as a parent?

Your parental duties do not end when the court gets involved. Your child may need you now more than ever.

If the judge decides the charges in the petition are true, you may be ordered to do things to:

- Help make up for harm your child caused, and
- Keep your child out of trouble in the future.

The court may order you to:

- Take classes,
- Go to counseling, or
- Do other activities that will help you and your child.

What if my child is in foster care or in custody?

Wherever your child goes, stay in touch as much as you can, however you can. Visit your child as often as you can. Support your child's programs and activities. Encourage your child to obey the court's orders and not to leave the placement without permission.

Find out what is happening in your child's life so that you can get ready for your child to return home. Learn how to make a protective and supportive environment for your child's return to school or work. Develop plans to hold your child accountable for their actions.

Where can I find parenting resources?

Contact your child's probation officer. Ask for referrals to community organizations, such as parents' groups or counseling services, that can help you. Your school district and local hospital or mental health department may also have useful programs.

If you have any questions that have not been answered, you may want to contact a lawyer for help.

3 How to Keep Your Child's Juvenile Court Records Private

Will anyone be able to look at my child's juvenile records?

Maybe. Although most juvenile court records are confidential, the law sometimes allows government officials to look at them.

However, in many cases the court will "seal" your child's juvenile records. Once the records are sealed, the law treats the arrest and court case as if they never happened. That means your child can truthfully say that your child does not have a criminal or juvenile record.

Exception: If your child wants to join the military or get a federal security clearance, your child may need to disclose information about the juvenile record.

How can we seal my child's juvenile records?

It depends on your child's situation.

Sealing at dismissal. If the juvenile court dismisses your child's case without making your child a ward of the court, the court must seal your child's records.

If the court does make your child a ward and later dismisses the case because your child has satisfactorily completed probation, the court will also seal your child's records and send your child copies of the sealing order and form JV-596-INFO, Sealing of Records for Satisfactory Completion of Probation.

If your child completes a probation diversion program, the probation department will seal those records and give notice to your child.

Sealing on request. If your child does not satisfactorily complete probation or the probation diversion program, the court will not dismiss the case and your child's records will not be automatically sealed. Your child can either:

- Ask the court to review the probation department's decision and order the records sealed, or
- Ask the court later to seal the records. (See form JV-595-INFO, How to Ask the Court to Seal Your Records, for more information.)

If your child is made a ward for an offense listed in Welfare and Institutions Code section 707(b), other than sex offenses requiring the child to register as a sex offender, your child can ask the court to seal the records:

- At age 21, if your child was sent to DJJ; or
- At age 18, if your child was not sent to DJJ.

Even sealed records can be viewed by the prosecuting attorney in some cases.

Sealing not allowed. If the court found that that your child committed a sex offense listed in Welfare & Institutions Code section 707(b) when your child was 14 or older for which your child needs to register as a sex offender, then the court cannot seal your child's records.

Can my child's juvenile court record be used against him or her as an adult?

Under the three-strikes law, some serious or violent felonies committed by a child at age 16 or 17 can be counted as strikes and used against the child in the future.

Court Hearings in Juvenile Justice Court

You and your child may have go to court several times. Each time you go is called a "hearing." Depending on your case, there may be different kinds of hearings to make different decisions. Here are some of them. Each time you have to go to court, you and your child (if 8 or older) will get a notice. The notice will tell you the date, time, and place to go.

Kind of Hearing	What happens at this hearing
Detention	The judge will decide if your child can go home or must stay in custody until the next hearing.
Transfer to Criminal Court	The juvenile court judge will decide if the case of a child who is 16 or older should be transferred to adult criminal court. Children under 16 cannot have their cases transferred to adult court. This hearing only happens for felony charges and only if the prosecuting attorney (DA) asks for the transfer.
Jurisdiction, part 1 (pretrial or settlement conference)	The judge, lawyers, and probation officer try to resolve the case without having a trial. The judge decides if your child actually did what the petition says. The judge will ask your child to admit or deny the charges listed in the petition. Your child's lawyer will consider the evidence and possible outcomes, and then advise your child what to do. If your child admits the charges, your child will give up the right to a trial. The judge will decide that the petition is true. If your child denies the charges, there will be a trial, usually a week or two later.
Jurisdiction, part 2 (trial)	At the trial, the prosecuting attorney will show evidence to prove the charges. Then your child's lawyer will present your child's defense. The judge will consider all the evidence and decide if the charges are true "beyond a reasonable doubt." – If there is not enough proof to decide the charges are true, the judge will dismiss the case. If your child is in custody, she or he will be let go. – If the judge decides the charges are true, there will be a disposition hearing.
Disposition	This happens only if the judge decides that the petition is true. The judge then decides what orders to make for your child. This hearing is often right after the jurisdiction hearing but can also be postponed to another day.
Hearings on Motions	The court decides legal questions that affect the case.
Review Hearings	This hearing provides a way for the court to check how your child is doing on probation or in placement. If your child is placed in foster care, the court must hold a review hearing at least once every six months.

GLOSSARY OF TERMS

1.	Orange County Bar Association By: Deirdre Kelly President	A	Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose? Yes. Should rule 5.770 or form JV-710 be modified in to C.S. v. Superior Court, 29 Cal.App.5th 1009 (2018), which held that the court must clearly articulate its findings for each criterion in issuing a transfer order? No. Prior to the most recent amendments to JV-710 (to comport with Prop. 57), the form contained the five factors the court needed consider for transfer and then asked the court to check a box next to each factor on which transfer was based. This committee recognized this was an outdated holdover from pre-Proposition 57 fitness hearings and needed to be changed to conform with the change in law. Specifically, prior to Proposition 57, a juvenile court judicial officer could declare a minor unfit for juvenile court by finding the minor unfit under a single factor. The Proposition 57 amendments to Welfare and Institutions Code section 707, subdivision (a)(2), clarified that the court must look to the totality of circumstances, not a single factor: "In making its decision, the court shall consider the criteria specified in subparagraphs (A) to (E) below." This committee recognized there was an inherent and irreconcilable tension between asking the court to consider the totality of circumstances on the one hand and asking the court to check a box related to an individual circumstance in support	No response required. The committee determined that the best way to ensure that the rules and forms are consistent with the C.S. case and prompt judges to create a detailed record of their findings on each criterion in 707(a)(3) would be to amend the rule to include that requirement and to reword the findings and orders section of the form order to clarify that the record must document the court's findings on each of the criteria.

			of transfer and deleted the check-the-box approach of the prior form. C.S. v. Superior Court (2018) 29 Cal.App.5th 1009 ("C.S."), should not cause this committee to re-adopt the old approach. In C.S., the Court of Appeal made clear that to provide a sufficient record for review, a judge considering transfer must provide a "statement of reasons" which "articulates its evaluative process and shows how it weighed the evidence presented in light of the applicable standards." (Id. at p. 1029, internal citations and quotation marks omitted.) The court explained that "without a statement of reasons detailing the lower court's analytical process an appellate court cannot determine whether the trial court properly exercised its discretion." (Ibid.) Stated plainly, C.S. urged trial courts to show their work: "[W]e conclude that the juvenile court's transfer decision does not permit meaningful appellate review because the juvenile court did not clearly and explicitly articulate it's evaluative process by detailing how it weighed the evidence and by identifying[ing] the specific facts which persuaded the court to reach its decision to transfer C.S. to adult/criminal court." (Id. at p. 1035, internal citations and quotation marks omitted.) Reverting to the check-the-box approach of the prior form is the opposite of what the court in C.S. is asking of trial judges, which is to create a record of how the court reached its conclusion.

Superior Court, 29 Cal.App.5th 1009 (2018), which held that the court must clearly articulate its findings for each criterion in issuing a transfer order? Yes, but we also believe the rule should clarify that while specific findings are needed, the law has changed through Proposition 57, so that it is no longer required that a youth be amenable to juvenile court treatment (previously "fit") on each of the criteria to avoid transfer. Prior to Proposition 57, Welfare and Institutions Code section 707, subdivision (c), required that in order to overcome the presumption of unfitness, the young person had to be found fit on all five statutory criteria: A determination that the minor is a fit and proper subject to be dealt with under the juvenile court law shall be based on a finding of amenability after consideration of the five criteria set forth in subparagraph (A) of paragraphs (1) to (5) inclusive, and findings therefore recited in the order as to each of those criteria that the minor is a fit and proper minor under each and every one of those criteria, in making a	No response required. 			finding of fitness. (Former Welf. & Inst. Code §707, subd. (c), italics added.) For youth who were presumed fit for juvenile court, transfer could occur based on "any one or a combination of the factors set forth in clause (i) of subparagraphs (A) to (E)". (Former Welf. & Inst Code, § 707, subd. (a).) Those specific statutory directives were eliminated by Proposition 57. (Prop 57, § 4.2, approved Nov. 8, 2016, Ballot Pamp., Gen. Elec. (Nov. 8, 2016) text of Prop. 57, p. 144.) Section 707 now provides only that the court "shall consider the criteria specified in subparagraphs (A) to (E), inclusive; shall "decide whether the minor shall be transferred to a court of criminal jurisdiction"; and "shall recite the basis for its decision in an order entered upon the minutes." (Welf. & Inst. Code, § 707 (a)(3), as amended by Prop 57, §4.2, approved Nov. 8, 2016.) Prior to Proposition 57, many youths were found "unfit" based on one or two of the five criteria. So while we agree with the proposal to include the principle in the C.S. case on having findings sufficient to facilitate appellate review, we also think it is important to clarify that C.S. does not take us back to the pre-Proposition 57 law requiring youth to be fit on all five criteria to stay in juvenile court. Additional global comment: Consider changing "minor" to "youth" throughout.	The committee determined that it was appropriate to continue using the standard Judicial Council

			We are pleased at the efforts to modernize the terminology for referring to young people through use of the term "child" or "individual" to replace "minor." We suggest further changing the term to "youth" whenever possible. That would get rid of the pejorative term "minor," which the dictionary defines as meaning "lesser in importance, seriousness, or significance." "Youth" seems even more appropriate than "child" for the transfer rules since most will be 16 or 17 years of age, and the ones who are eligible for crimes alleged to have been committed at 14 or 15 years of age will be past the age for juvenile court jurisdiction. A number of statutes have used the term "youth," for example, Welfare and Institutions Code sections 224.73, 625.6, 992, 1177, 1788, 1900, 2011, 2023, 13754; some statutes use a combination of "child", "youth," and "minor." Suggested Language Rule 5.766. General provisions (a) Hearing on transfer of jurisdiction to criminal court (§ 707) A ~~child~~ youth who is the subject of a petition under section 602 and who was 14 years or older at the time of the alleged felony offense may be considered for prosecution under the general law in a court of criminal jurisdiction. The district attorney or other appropriate prosecuting officer may make a motion to transfer the ~~child~~ youth from juvenile court to a	term "child" because it has a definition in statute and rule and serves as a reminder that the juvenile justice courts are focused on persons who are developmentally different from adults. The committee declined to change the term to youth because that latter term is not defined and is too broad.

			▪ To remind judges that findings must be considered, and an order must be made pursuant to section 707(a)(3), it is recommended that a new section #4 be added and titled, The Court Finds, that will provide a court finding for each individual relevant factor under 707(a)(3). This would comply with the required findings set forth in the C.S. case (29 Cal.App.5th 1009). 			▪ The existing number #4, The Court Also Finds and Orders section, should be renumbered to #5. ▪ Minors who were under the adult court jurisdiction prior to section 707 being amended may be referred to juvenile court for a transfer hearing. The prosecutor or the former minor may request to have the motion withdrawn if the petitioner was under 16 years of age at the time of the violation. Due to this, it is recommended that a subsection "b" be added to The Court Also Finds and Orders section that reads: □ The transfer motion has been withdrawn by the □ petitioner □ prosecutor. The next hearing is on (date): at (time): Rule 5.766, 5.768, and 5.770 ▪ It is recommended the word "child" be replaced with "minor" in the rules to be consistent with language used in section 707. ▪ Orange County has started referring to "minors" as "youth" since in many cases the accused youth are no longer minors. Request for Specific Comments Would the proposal provide a cost savings? -No, the proposal would not provide a cost savings.	The committee determined that this form was not the appropriate place to include this motion as the form is expressly an order on a transfer motion and any withdrawal can be made in a minute order without using a Judicial Council form. The committee determined that it was appropriate to continue using the standard Judicial Council terminology of child because it has a definition in statute and rule and serves as a reminder that the juvenile justice courts are focused persons who are developmentally different from adults. The committee declined to change to youth because that term is not defined and is too broad. No response required.

			What would the implementation requirements be for courts? -Judges and staff would be notified of the changes in the rule and forms. Procedures updates and changes to the case management system may be needed.	The committee will note these impacts in its report to the Judicial Council.

Some courts do not use the JV-710 but instead would include the findings for each criteria in the minute order for the transfer. It may be a good idea to update Rule 5.770 to state that the trial court must clearly articulate each criterion.	The committee determined that the best way to ensure that the rules and forms are consistent with the C.S. case and prompt judges to create a detailed record of their findings on each criterion in 707(a)(3) would be to amend the rule to include that requirement and to reword the findings and orders section to clarify that the record must document the court's findings on each of the criteria.

Executive Summary

The Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee proposes amending one rule of court and revising one information form so that they conform to recently enacted statutory provisions concerning the sealing of juvenile records. The proposal would update the recently adopted rule and form, which implement sealing of records for cases sealed under Welfare and Institutions Code section 786, to include changes to that section that went into effect on January 1, 2019.

Recommendation

The Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee recommends that the Judicial Council effective January 1, 2020:

1. Amend California Rules of Court, rule 5.840, to incorporate changes to Welfare and Institutions Code section 786; and

2. Revise Sealing of Records for Satisfactory Completion of Probation (form JV-596-INFO) to accurately describe Welfare and Institutions code section 786.

The text of the amended rule and the revised form are attached at pages 6–8.

Relevant Previous Council Action

Rule 5.840 was adopted by the Judicial Council effective July 1, 2016, to implement the provisions of Welfare and Institutions Code section 786,[1] and amended effective September 1, 2018, to incorporate legislative changes. Sealing of Records for Satisfactory Completion of Probation (form JV-596-INFO) was adopted effective July 1, 2016, to implement section 786, and subsequently revised effective September 1, 2017, and September 1, 2018, to incorporate ongoing changes in the law on sealing of records.

Analysis/Rationale

In 2014, the Legislature enacted Welfare and Institutions Code section 786 to require the sealing and dismissal of specified juvenile petitions when a child has satisfactorily completed probation. In that legislation and a number of subsequent bills, the Legislature has sought to provide access to those records for a variety of purposes. In 2018, Assembly Bill 2952 (Stone; Stats. 2018, ch. 1002) enacted an additional provision allowing access to a record by a prosecuting attorney when the attorney has reason to believe that the record may contain favorable or exculpatory information that must be disclosed to a defendant in a criminal case. These changes require that the court notify the person whose records have been sealed that the prosecutor's request is being considered so that the person may have an opportunity to respond to the request. They further require the court to review the records and make a specific order with regard to access that protects the confidentiality of the person whose records are being accessed.

In 2017, the Court of Appeal heard a dispute regarding a potential conflict between section 786 and Penal Code section 29820. That latter statute prohibits juveniles with sustained petitions for specified offenses, including firearms and domestic violence offenses, from owning or possessing a firearm before age 30. The court in In re Joshua R. (2017) 7 Cal.App.5th 864, found that the statutory provisions could be reconciled absent legislative clarification by preserving the information needed to enforce the firearms prohibition at the Department of Justice while destroying the rest of the records. In 2018, the Legislature stepped in to clarify its intent by enacting Senate Bill 1281 (Stern; Stats. 2018, ch. 793), which provides that sealed records under section 786 for an offender subject to the firearms prohibition must be maintained beyond the offender's 30th birthday and destroyed on the date the offender attains age 33.

The committee proposes amending rule 5.840 of the California Rules of Court and revising form JV-596-INFO to conform to and implement the changes in section 786 enacted by AB 2952 and SB 1281.

Rule 5.840 amended to clarify dates for destruction

Rule 5.840 describes the procedures for sealing and dismissing petitions under section 786. Subdivision (d) of the rule currently states the parameters for the court to use when setting a destruction date for the records being sealed. This subdivision would be amended to include the new requirement that records that contain a sustained petition that is subject to Penal Code section 29820 should not be destroyed until the subject of the order attains the age of 33.

Form JV-596-INFO updated to include new provisions allowing access to sealed records

Sealing of Records for Satisfactory Completion of Probation (form JV-596-INFO) is an information form provided to all juveniles at the end of their cases when their records have been sealed under section 786. This form includes a bulleted list of all the circumstances under which a sealed record may be accessed without requiring that the records be unsealed. The committee proposes adding two bullets to that list to explain that records may be accessed to enforce a firearms prohibition or to allow a prosecutor to comply with Brady obligations.

Policy implications

As described above, this proposal narrowly implements the changes made to section 786 by recent legislation. The committee opted not to implement a standard procedure to carry out one aspect of the legislative change relating to the changes in access allowed for prosecutors to comply with their Brady obligations; instead, the committee asked for comments on whether considering such a procedure in the future would be of value. With one exception, all the commenters recommended that the committee put in place such a procedure; thus, the committee will be proposing to the Rules and Projects Committee that this work be included on its annual agenda for 2020. Much of the increased workload from these legislative changes will come from implementation of these provisions, and the committee will work to try and mitigate those impacts in drafting a proposal to be circulated for public comment.

The Joint Rules Subcommittee of the Trial Court Presiding Judges Advisory Committee and Court Executives Advisory Committee suggested that it might be too difficult for courts to implement this proposal in the four months from its proposed approval until its effective date. The committee considered the suggestion to delay implementation of the proposal for an additional two months but decided against a delay given that the underlying statutory changes have been in effect since January 1, 2019.

Comments

This proposal circulated for public comment from April 9 to June 8, 2019, as part of the regular spring comment cycle. Eight organizations submitted comments: four commenters agreed with the proposal; four organizations—including the aforementioned Joint Rules Subcommittee—agreed if the proposal was modified. A chart with the full text of the comments received and the committee's responses is attached at pages 9–25.

Date for destruction of records

Three commenters had concerns about the implementation of the new provisions in section 786(a), which require the court to destroy records for persons subject to firearms prohibitions because of their offenses on the date they reach 33 years of age. Rule 5.40 of the California Rules of Court, which states the provisions for sealing and destroying court records under section 786, was written to give courts broad discretion to set a destruction date up to the limits set in the other juvenile court records sealing statute, section 781. Section 781 provides for destruction at age 38. Before the change concerning the firearms prohibition, section 786 provided no guidance on this issue, and thus the committee drafted a rule giving courts full discretion to make a case-by-case determination.

One commenter was concerned that implementation of the requirement to destroy cases subject to the firearms prohibition at age 33 would have the anomalous result that some less serious records would be preserved until the person reaches age 38 while these more serious offense records would be destroyed when the person reaches age 33. That commenter proposed that the committee modify the rule to require destruction at age 25 (when the juvenile court no longer has jurisdiction) or at age 33 so that this anomaly would be addressed. Two other commenters suggested that the rule of court provide that the records in the firearms cases be destroyed "no sooner than" the date the person reaches age 33 so that these records could be maintained until age 38, as is their practice with other 786 records.

Although the committee recognizes the logic of both these approaches, it determined that such a decision is a policy choice that must be made by the Legislature. The Legislature has amended section 786 on numerous occasions but has yet to set a standard destruction date for these records. As a result, the committee opted to implement the plain language of the statute narrowly and not substitute its judgment on the larger policy question of the most appropriate destruction date for records not subject to the firearms preservation statute. The committee would note that each court may mitigate the workload impact of this change by opting to select the date a person reaches age 33 as a default destruction date if the court determines that is the appropriate way to implement the discretion inherent in the rule. Alternately, courts may determine that the Brady implications of these records push in favor of their preservation for a longer period. Until this issue is clarified by the Legislature, the committee recommends maintaining maximum discretion.

Alternatives considered

The committee considered changing only the rule and leaving the information form incomplete, but determined that it would be misleading to include some of the bases for access to 786 records while remaining silent on others. As described above, the committee also considered setting a destruction date consistent with the date prescribed by section 786 for offenses involving firearms prohibitions, but it determined that such an approach was beyond its purview and required clearer legislative guidance.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

Courts may incur additional costs in ensuring that they set the appropriate destruction dates for records that must be maintained to enforce the firearms restrictions. Commenters noted that included in the costs for this compliance would be training, case management system changes, and changes in file storage management. The provisions allowing for courts to determine if files should be accessed for mitigating evidence will result in additional judicial workload. Printing costs may be incurred by courts to provide form JV-596-INFO, as required by law. Some courts may incur programming charges if electronic systems are used for the court orders. In addition, because the informational forms are available in other languages, there will be costs to translate the revised forms. All these impacts are a result of legislative changes and are necessary to make the rule and form legally accurate.

Rule 5.840 of the California Rules of Court is amended, effective January 1, 2020, to read:

Rule 5.840. Dismissal of petition and sealing of records (§ 786)

(a) * * *

(b) Dismissal of petition

If the court finds that a minor subject to this rule has satisfactorily completed his or her informal or formal probation supervision, the court must order the petition dismissed. The court must not dismiss a petition if it was sustained based on the commission of an offense listed in subdivision (b) of section 707 when the minor was 14 or older unless the finding on that offense has been dismissed or was reduced to a misdemeanor or an offense not listed in subdivision (b) of section 707. The court may also dismiss prior petitions filed or sustained against the minor if they appear to the satisfaction of the court to meet the sealing and dismissal criteria in section 786. An unfulfilled order~~,~~ or condition~~, or~~ of restitution or an unpaid restitution fee must not be deemed to constitute unsatisfactory completion of probation supervision. The court may not extend the period of supervision or probation solely for the purpose of deferring or delaying eligibility for dismissal and sealing under section 786.

(c) * * *

(d) Destruction of records

The court must specify in its order the date by which all sealed records must be destroyed, consistent with the following provisions:

(1) If the record to be sealed contains a sustained petition that makes the subject of the order ineligible to own or possess a firearm until attaining 30 years of age under Penal Code section 29820, the court must order the records destroyed on the date that the subject attains 33 years of age.

(2) If the record does not contain a sustained petition that results in firearms prohibitions for the subject, as described in paragraph (1), the date for destruction of the records must be set consistent with this paragraph. For court records, this date may be no earlier than the date the subject of the order attains age 21 and no later than the end of the time frame ~~set forth~~ stated in section 781(d). For all other records, the date may be no earlier than the date the subject of the order attains age 18~~,~~ and no later than the time frame ~~set forth~~ stated in section 781(d), unless that time frame expires ~~prior to~~ before the date the subject attains 18 years of age.

JV-596-INFO Sealing of Records for Satisfactory Completion of Probation

In many cases, the court will seal your juvenile records if you satisfactorily complete probation (formal or informal supervision).

If your case is terminated by the juvenile court after January 1, 2015, because you satisfactorily completed your probation (formal or informal), or if your case was otherwise dismissed after the petition was filed, in many cases, the court will have dismissed the petition(s) and sealed your records. If the court sealed your records for this reason, you should have received a copy of the sealing order with this form.

If the court finds you have not satisfactorily completed your probation, it will not dismiss your case and will not seal your records at termination. If you want to have your records sealed in this situation, you will need to ask the court to seal your records at a later date (see form JV-595-INFO for information about asking the court to seal your records).

The court will not seal your records at the end of your case if you were found to have committed an offense listed in Welfare and Institutions Code section 707(b) (a violent offense such as murder, rape, or kidnapping, and some offenses involving drugs or weapons) when you were 14 or older unless it was dismissed or reduced to a misdemeanor or a lesser offense not listed in 707(b), but unless you were found to have committed one or more of certain sex offenses, you can ask the court to seal your records at age 18 (or age 21 if you were committed to the Division of Juvenile Facilities).

How will the court decide if probation is satisfactorily completed?

If you have done what you were ordered to do while on probation and have not been found to have committed any further crimes (felonies or misdemeanor crimes involving moral turpitude, such as a sex crime or a crime involving dishonesty), the court will find that your probation was satisfactorily completed even if you still owe restitution, court ordered fees, and fines, BUT...

Restitution and court fines must still be paid.

Even if your records are sealed, you must still pay your restitution and court-ordered fines. Your sealed records can be looked at to enforce those orders.

Which records will be sealed?

The court will order your court, probation, Department of Justice, and law enforcement agency records sealed for the case the court is closing and earlier cases, if the court determines you are eligible. If you or your attorney ask the court, it can also seal records of other agencies (such as the District Attorney's office) if it finds that doing so would help you to be rehabilitated.

If you have more than one juvenile case and are unsure which records were sealed, ask your attorney or probation officer.

Who can see your sealed records?

- If your records were sealed by the court at termination, the prosecutor and others can look at your record to determine if you are eligible to participate in a deferred entry of judgment or informal supervision program.
- If you apply for benefits as a nonminor dependent, the court may see your records.
- If a new petition is filed against you for a felony offense, probation can look at what programs you were in but cannot use that information to keep you in juvenile hall or to punish you.
- If the juvenile court finds you have committed a felony, your sealed records can be viewed to decide what disposition (sentence) the court should order.
- If you are arrested for a new offense and the prosecuting attorney asks the court to transfer you to adult court, your record can be reviewed to decide if transfer is appropriate.
- If you are in foster care, the child welfare agency can look at your records to determine where you should live and what services you need.
- If your case was dismissed before you became a ward, the prosecutor can look at your records for six months after the dismissal in order to refile the dismissed petition based on new information or evidence.
- If you are not allowed to have a gun because of your offense, the Department of Justice can look at your records to make sure you do not buy or own a gun.
- If a prosecutor thinks something in your record would be helpful to someone who is charged with a crime in another case, the prosecutor can ask the court to provide that information. If this request is made, the court will let you know. You and your lawyer may object.

- If you want to see your records or allow someone else to see them, you can ask the court to unseal them.

  NOTE: Even if someone looks at your records in one of these situations, your records will stay sealed and you do not need to ask the court to seal them again.

Do you have to report the offenses in the sealed records on job, school, or other applications?

No. Once your records are sealed, the law treats those offenses as if they did not occur and you do not need to report them. However, the military and some federal agencies may not recognize sealing of records and may be aware of your juvenile justice history, even if your records are sealed. If you want to enlist in the military or apply for a job that asks you to provide information about your juvenile records, seek legal advice about this issue.

Can employers see your records if they are not sealed?

Juvenile records are not allowed to be disclosed to most employers, and employers are not allowed to ask about or consider your juvenile history in most cases. There are exceptions to this rule if you are applying to be a peace officer or to work in health settings. Also, federal employers may still have access to your juvenile history. You should seek legal advice if you have questions about what an employer can ask.

1.	Judicial Council and Trial Court Leadership By: Corey Rada, Senior Analyst Sacramento, CA	AM	The proposal is required to conform to a change of law. The proposal is required by statute or Judicial Council directive to be adopted, amended, or revised by a specific date. The JRS notes the following impact to court operations: ▪ Significant fiscal impact ▪ Impact on existing automated systems (e.g., case management system, accounting system, technology infrastructure or security equipment, Jury Plus/ACS, etc.) ▪ Results in additional training, which requires the commitment of staff time and court resources. ▪ Increases court staff workload. ▪ Changes the responsibilities of the presiding judge and/or supervising judge. ▪ Impact on local or statewide justice partners. The JRS also notes that the fiscal impact, particularly for larger courts will be significant, although unmeasurable at this point. As discussed in the specific comments below, the staff training will be significant. Case management systems will have to be reprogrammed. Actual file storage will be modified. Future requests to release the otherwise sealed information will increase judicial workload. Requests for Specific Comments, SPR19-26 1. Does the proposal address the stated purpose?	No response required. The committee will note these impacts in its report to the council, but notes that they are a consequence of the legislative changes and not the proposal.

			2. Should the committee draft and circulate for comment a proposal in a future cycle to provide procedures for courts to comply with the notice requirements for the subject of an order whose records are sought to be disclosed by the prosecutor to comply with Brady obligations? If so, what specific requirements should be included? -Yes, the committee should draft and circulate for comment a proposal in a future cycle to provide procedures for courts to comply with notice requirements. Specifically, Welfare and Institutions Code Section 786(g)(1)(I) provides, A request to access information in the sealed record for this purpose, including the prosecutor's rationale for believing that access to the information in the record is necessary to meet the disclosure obligation, shall be submitted by the prosecuting attorney to the juvenile court. The juvenile court shall notify the person having the sealed record, including the person's attorney of record, that the court is considering the prosecutor's request to access the record, and the court shall provide that person with the opportunity to respond, in writing or by appearance, to the request prior to making its determination.	The committee received consistent feedback from commenters that a rule would be of value and will seek to add that task to its upcoming annual agenda.

			council form with a response or hearing date noticed. The committee should circulate such a form that would provide efficiency and consistency for juvenile courts.	developing a proposal to implement these provisions in a future cycle.
			3. Would the proposal provide cost savings? If so, please quantify. -No, the proposal would not provide cost savings. To the contrary, the proposal would have result in an increase in court labor, training, programming, changes to automated systems, printing, translation, and mailing costs, as well as increased judicial workload.	The committee takes note of these impacts and will report them with the proposal.
			4. What would the implementation requirements be for courts—for example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), changing docket codes in case management systems, or modifying case management systems? -Implementation of the rule modification will include significant action by the courts. For instance, the implementation will require training all juvenile clerks of the new requirements. Such training will be substantial to the extent legal considerations will be necessary (i.e., determining who will be prohibited from possession a firearm until the age of 30). Two to four hours of training should be expected for each clerk. Court processes will be significantly modified. This will include changes to case management	The committee takes note of these impacts and will report them with the proposal.

			systems, and re-programming any automated destruction date calculations. Court staff workload will increase significantly. This will include substantial communication with law enforcement agencies, substantial notice requirements, and potentially substantial court hearings. 5. Would four months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation? -For larger courts, four months is a not a reasonable amount of time to allow for implementation. To accomplish the changes in process and the training required, implementation should take approximately 6 months. 6. How well would this proposal work in courts of different sizes? -The burden on the court will vary, depending on the size of the court and juvenile department. Larger courts, with many law enforcement agencies will be tasked with significant additional workload.	The underlying statute has been in effect since January 1, 2019 so the committee has concluded that a January 1, 2020 implementation date is preferable to any further delay. The committee takes note of these impacts and will report them with the proposal.

			prosecutor to comply with Brady obligation? If so, what specific requirements should be included? Yes. The statute is clear on who must provide notice (the court) and to whom notice must be provided (the person with sealed record and their attorney of record). It is also clear that the court must provide the impacted party the opportunity to respond in writing or request an appearance. It is unclear on how long in advance notice must be given prior to the court's ruling, how far in advance of the ruling the party must submit a written objection, or when the party must request an appearance. A uniform approach to these issues would be preferable to leaving it up to individual superior courts to address through locals rules issued in accordance with rule 10.613.	The committee received consistent feedback from commenters that a rule would be of value and will seek to add that task to its upcoming annual agenda.

			PJDC also agrees that the committee should draft and circulate for comment a proposal that provides the courts with procedures they should follow when complying with the requirements to notify an individual whose sealed records are sought for disclosure to allow a prosecutor to comply with Brady obligations. These procedures need to outline the minimum amount of due diligence the prosecutor seeking such records must undertake to locate and notify the individual, including some type of proof of service of the notice. The procedures need to also require the prosecutor to report his or her efforts to locate the individual to the court in cases where the individual cannot be located. PJDC further recommends that in addition to these notice procedures, the committee should draft and circulate for comment procedures: (1) governing the minimum amount of time (at least 30 days) for the individual to respond after he or she has been served notice; (2) allowing multiple ways for individuals to respond to the notice; and (3) requiring courts to establish procedures that increase indigent individuals' access to this process. PJDC's Concerns With Rule 5.840, Subdivision (d) SPR 19-26 requests, among other things, comment on the addition of language to comport with the changes set forth in recent amendments to Welfare and Institutions Code section 786, subdivision (a) which require that "[i]f a record contains a sustained petition	The committee received consistent feedback from commenters that a rule would be of value and will seek to add that task to its upcoming annual agenda. The committee will keep these suggestions in mind when and if that proposal is undertaken. The committee appreciates the policy arguments underlying this comment, but has concluded that those arguments are better addressed to the legislative branch which has amended section 786 numerous times but has not to date placed any guidance on the destruction dates for these records other than to ensure that they are not destroyed rendering the person ineligible to own or possess a firearm until 30 years of age pursuant to Section 29820 of the Penal Code, then the date the sealed records shall be destroyed is the date upon which the person turns 33 years of age." This makes sense as far as this all goes as the language added to Rule 5.840(d) says essentially the same thing. At the same time, however, this proposed modification to Rule 5.840(d) raises the issue that for any record sealed under Welfare and Institutions Code section 786 that does not contain a sustained petition resulting in this firearms prohibition, the juvenile court should look to section 781(d) for setting the destruction date. (See proposed Rule 5.840(d) ["If the record does not contain a sustained petition that results in firearms prohibitions . . . the date for destruction of the records must be set . . . [f]or court records . . . no earlier than the date the subject of the order attains age 21 and no later than the time frame set forth stated in section 781(d)."] This means that the court can set a destruction date for a sealed record as late as the individual's 38th birthday. (See Welf. & Inst. Code, § 781, subd. (d) ["the court shall order the destruction of a person's juvenile court records that are sealed pursuant to this section as follows: . . . when the person who is the subject of the record reaches 38 years of age if the person was alleged or adjudicated to be a person described by Section 602 . . ."].) So potentially individuals without a Penal Code section 29820 restriction, who often have much less serious	before the firearms restrictions expire. Given the new attention to the Brady uses of these records the committee is not inclined to select a mandatory destruction date by rule of court that is shorter than what is contained in section 781 without clear guidance from the legislative branch. The committee has concluded, after significant discussion that the silence on this matter in the statute was intended to provide each trial court judicial officer with the discretion to set a destruction date on a case by case basis. The amended rule continues to preserve that discretion with the caveat that the committee has made the rule consistent with the express direction of the legislature that destruction occur at age 33 where firearms restrictions are in place.

			sustained offenses in their juvenile record or in some cases none at all, could have their sealed records still in existence up to five years longer than if they had committed certain firearm offenses. Presumably, Rule 5.840(d) refers to the older sealing statute Welfare and Institutions Code section 781 because section 786 itself is largely silent on the destruction deadlines for sealed records. Besides the issue set forth above, Rule 5.840(d)'s reference to Welfare and Institutions Code section 781 is problematic because section 786 is a statute enacted to address issues seen over the years with its older counterpart. (Sen. Com. on Public Safety, Analysis of Sen. Bill No. 1038 (2013-2014 Reg. Sess.) as amended Mar. 28, 2014, pp. 6-7.) Section 786 allows the automatic sealing of records for qualified youths without Welfare and Institutions Code section 707(b) offenses on their record (Welf. & Inst. Code, § 786, subds. (a) & (d)), while section 781's more complicated procedures remain available to youth with section 707(b) offenses (See Welf. & Inst. Code, § 781, subd. (a)(1)(D)). Indeed among the stated needs for the enactment of S.B. 1038, the legislation that put the original version of Welfare and Institutions Code section 786 in place, was to streamline the process of sealing eligible juveniles' records, thereby "better ensuring that juveniles have a clear pathway to cleaning their records, when in compliance with existing statutory and probationary requirements." (Sen. Com. on Public Safety, Analysis of Sen. Bill No. 1038

	Commenter	Position	Comment	Committee Response
			(2013-2014 Reg. Sess.) as amended Mar. 28, 2014, p. 7.) In essence, S.B. 1038 was designed to give system involved youth "a second chance at a clean slate when pursuing higher education or entering the workforce," which are two highly effective ways to fight recidivism. (Ibid.) Section 786 was later amended to ensure it covered youths whose petitions were dismissed prior to adjudication or not sustained following adjudication. (See Welf. & Inst. Code, § 786, subd. (e), as amended by Stats. 2017, ch. 685, § 1.5 (A.B. 529).) The use of Welfare and Institutions Code section 781(d) as the guide for setting the destruction dates for sealed records runs counter to many of the stated purposes of the underlying legislation that resulted in the section 786. It does little to streamline the process on the juvenile court's end if it ends up keeping copies of the sealed record until the age of 38. It likewise undermines the "clean slate" intention of the law if a youth's sealed record still exists 20 or more years after he or she has left the juvenile court system. And allowing the sealed records of non-culpable individuals to potentially remain in existence five years longer than their counterparts who incurred a gun restriction is an unjust, though likely unintended, result indeed. PJDC acknowledges that Welfare and Institutions Code section 786, subdivision (g) sets forth twelve separate categories under which a sealed record may be "accessed, inspected or utilized" and thus there are

	Commenter	Position	Comment	Committee Response
			justifications for maintaining the sealed records after they are sealed. However, most, if not all, of these will no longer be viable after the juvenile court loses jurisdiction of a minor which at the upper end is 25 years of age. (See Welf. & Inst. Code, §§ 607; 786, subd. (g)(1) & (g)(2).) Accordingly, PJDC urges Rule 5.840(d) be amended to set the maximum age for maintaining the individuals whose record was sealed according to section 786 at age 25, unless the minor has sustained an offense subjecting him or her to the firearms prohibition pursuant to Penal Code section 29820. Even if this committee finds that age 25 is for some reason too early to set as a maximum, PJDC urges to amend Rule 5.840(d) so that the maximum age for the destruction of sealed juvenile records is no greater than the 33 years set forth for those with firearms prohibitions. In any case, PJDC urges the committee to maintain the court's flexibility of the setting the date of destruction in that the Rule provides a range from a minimum age of 18 or 21 as applicable. Below are PJDC's proposed changes to Rule 5.840 in red text: Rule 5.840. Dismissal of petition and sealing of records (§ 786) (a)–(c) * * * (d) Destruction of records The court must specify in its order the date by which all sealed records must be destroyed, consistent with the following provisions: (1) If the record to be sealed contains a sustained petition that makes the subject of the order ineligible to own or possess a firearm until

			CRC 5.840(d): The revision to subdivision (d) does comply with the amendment to WIC 786. Our court's policy has been to set the destruction date on the youth's 38th birthday, which is the end of the time frame stated in WIC 781(d). The amendments to WIC 786 and CRC 5.840 should have said "no sooner than the date upon which the person turns 33 years of age," but they say the records shall be destroyed on the date the person turns 33 years of age. This will require our court to separate our gun cases from other cases and sets up the odd situation that gun cases will be destroyed earlier than some less serious cases. Proposed revisions to form JV-596-INFO: 1) page 1, first section: The court will not seal your records at the end of your case if you were found to have committed an offense listed in Welfare and Institutions Code section 707(b) (a violent offense such as murder, rape, or kidnapping, and some offenses involving drugs or weapons) when you were 14 or older unless it was ~~not~~ dismissed or reduced to a misdemeanor or a lesser offense not listed in 707(b) . . . 2) page 2, final sentence: You should seek legal advice if you have questions ~~of~~ about what an employer can ask ~~about you~~.	While this comment is supported by policy logic, the plain language of the statute requires destruction on the date the person attains 33 years of age and the committee is not at liberty to substitute its judgment for that of the legislature. Executive Summary

The Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee proposes adopting a new rule, approving a new form, and revising two forms to implement the requirements of Senate Bill 273 (Hill; Stats. 2018, ch. 660) relating to minors who seek a court order to marry, establish a domestic partnership, or both.

Recommendation

The Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee recommends that the council, effective January 1, 2020:

1. Adopt California Rules of Court, rule 5.448 to set forth procedures to implement recent statutory changes concerning court approval of a request by a minor to marry or establish a domestic partnership;

2. Approve Consent for Minor to Marry or Establish Domestic Partnership (form FL-912) to allow a parent or legal guardian to consent to the marriage of his or her child;
3. Revise Request of Minor to Marry or Establish Domestic Partnership (form FL-910) and Order and Notices to Minor on Request to Marry or Establish a Domestic Partnership (form FL-915) to implement recent statutory changes to the requirements to seek court approval for minors to marry or establish domestic partnerships and make them mandatory forms.

The text of the new rule and the new and revised forms are attached at pages 8–19.

Relevant Previous Council Action

The Judicial Council approved forms FL-910 (request) and FL-915 (order) as optional forms effective January 1, 2009, as required by the enactment of Family Code sections 302 through 304. They were both revised effective January 1, 2012, to make them dual-purpose forms to allow for a request and order for a minor domestic partnership or a marriage pursuant to legislation allowing minors to seek court approval to establish domestic partnerships.

Analysis/Rationale

In September 2018, the Legislature enacted SB 273, amending several Family Code sections relating to marriage and domestic partnerships involving minors. Amended Family Code sections 297.1 and 304 now require that Family Court Services (FCS) do the following, unless the minor is 17 years of age and has achieved a high school diploma or a high school equivalency certificate:

- Separately interview the parties intending to marry or establish a domestic partnership;
- Interview at least one of the parents or the guardian of each party who is a minor, if applicable;
- Prepare and submit to the court a report of any potential force, threat, persuasion, fraud, or coercion or duress by either of the parties or their family members relating to the intended marriage or domestic partnership; and
- Report to the court recommendations for granting or denying permission to the parties to marry or establish a domestic partnership.

In addition, if FCS is required to interview the minor and write a report, Family Code sections 297.1 and 304 require that the court:

- Separately interview the parties in camera before making a final determination; and
- Consider whether there is any evidence of coercion or undue influence on the minor.

The court must also:

- Provide the minor with specific information on issuing an order granting permission to marry or establish a domestic partnership; and
- Document certain statistical data of the parties on the order.

To implement these changes the committee proposes adopting a new rule of court, approving one new form, and substantially revising the existing forms to incorporate the statutory changes.

Rule 5.448. Minor's request to marry or establish a domestic partnership
The new rule would set forth the procedures for the court and Family Court Services to follow including requirements for providing a copy of the FCS report to the court to the parties, the confidentiality requirement for the storage of the report, and clear guidance that the rule applies in courts in which FCS does not prepare recommendations in child custody matters as well as those that do.

Request of Minor to Marry or Establish a Domestic Partnership* (form FL-910)
This form would be revised at items 1 and 2 to include an optional entry for the parties to identify their gender (male, female, or nonbinary). New item 5, "Minor's Age and Education," would be included on the form. This would allow the parties to identify whether the minor is exempt from the interview process. The two questions asked of each party that is a minor are (1) is the minor 17 years of age, and (2) has the minor achieved a high school diploma or a high school equivalency certificate. This information would help the court clerk identify early in the process if the case is one that requires an appointment with Family Court Services.

Consent for Minor to Marry or Establish a Domestic Partnership* (form FL-912)
A minor must provide written consent to marry from a parent or legal guardian, unless the minor does not have a parent or legal guardian who is capable of consenting. This optional new form would provide consistency in the presentation of the written consent to the court. Form FL-912 could be completed by a minor's parent with legal authority to consent or by a legal guardian, and filed by the parties with the initial request or after form FL-910 is filed. Having an optional form would not preclude the minor from filing a different document; however, the rule would indicate that any other document filed must contain the same information that is included in form FL-912.

Order and Notices to Minor on Request to Marry or Establish a Domestic Partnership* (form FL-915)
The committee proposes numerous changes to comply with the new statutory requirements to include:

- Requesting information about the parties' gender and age for purposes of complying with the statutory reporting requirements for local registrars of marriage;
- A new item 4, "Review," to identify the items that the court considered in the case. These items include those that are mandated by statute (the request, the written permissions, FCS's written report of recommendations, and the court's own private interviews);
- A findings section to allow the court to make the statutorily required findings relating to the minor's request;
- Additional specifically required statutory language relating to counseling.

The form would also be revised to include instructions to the parties on the next steps after the court makes the order, and to include a series of new statutorily required notices, including:

- The rights and responsibilities of an emancipated minor;
- The circumstances under which a marriage or domestic partnership may be determined by a court to be void or voidable and adjudged a nullity, and the procedure for obtaining such an order;
- The procedure for legal separation or divorce;
- The telephone numbers for the National Domestic Violence Hotline and the National Sexual Assault Hotline;
- Information about unemancipated minors, including the following:
  - The conditions under which an unemancipated minor may leave home and seek to remain in a shelter or live separately from parents or guardians, and whether consent of a parent is required to remain away from the home of the parent or guardian;
  - The rights of an unemancipated minor to apply for a protective or restraining order to prevent abuse; and
  - The rights of an unemancipated minor to enter into contracts, including contracts for legal services and mental health counseling.

Mandatory request and order forms

The committee proposes that forms FL-910 and FL-915 be changed to mandatory forms. Due to the extensive statutory changes relating to a request for a minor to marry or establish a domestic partnership, the committee believes it is necessary to implement the request and order forms on a statewide basis. This would be the most effective way of helping the courts and applicants comply with the new and extensive requirements of Family Code sections 297.1 and 304. A mandatory order and notices to minor form would provide consistency in the orders and the delivery of information statewide to the parties. It would also centralize the process for updating the language in the future, if necessary.

Policy implications

Although statewide data on the exact number of petitions for permission for minors to marry or enter domestic partnerships are not available, surveys of courts suggest that the numbers are very small each year. The legislation that this proposal seeks to implement was introduced as legislation to prohibit minors from marrying under any circumstances in California, and was amended to ensure a consistent statewide practice across the courts that would subject these unusual petitions to significant review to ensure that minors seeking to marry are not subject to any coercion or abuse. This proposal seeks to provide the courts with the tools and information necessary to carry out these new responsibilities as effectively and efficiently as possible as these petitions are filed while ensuring that the parties are advised as the Legislature has directed. Because the statute requires each county to submit data to the Secretary of State concerning the domestic partnerships of minors, and the State Registrar concerning marriage certificates issued, it is anticipated that the Legislature will be monitoring this data to determine if further revisions to the statutory provisions are required.

Comments

This proposal was circulated for public comment from April 11 to June 10, 2019, as part of the regular spring comment cycle. Six organizations submitted comments on this proposal. Three commenters agreed with the proposal. Two commenters, including the Joint Rules Subcommittee of the Trial Court Presiding Judges Advisory Committee and Court Executives Advisory Committee, agreed if the proposal were modified. One commenter did not indicate a position but provided suggested revisions to the proposal. A chart with the full text of the comments received and the committee's responses is attached at pages 20–30.

Inclusion of notices on request and order and use of mandatory forms

Two commenters suggested that the committee remove statutorily required notices from the request form and the order form and place those on a separate information form. One of these commenters additionally suggested that the request and order forms be made optional so that courts can elect to implement the new requirements in the manner that best meets their needs. The committee opted to maintain the notices on the proposed mandatory forms to ensure statutory compliance and to eliminate any confusion as to who should provide the notice because these requests are uncommon and subject to very specific requirements.

Collection of data regarding gender

The committee considered whether to revise the forms to include a query about the parties' genders. Family Code sections 297.1 and 304 only require that the court order document the ages of the parties in this type of action. The current forms already include an item for the parties to provide their ages. While SB 273 requires that the court order include information about the parties' genders, it makes that requirement conditional on the parties providing that information. Because the statute seems to contemplate that information about gender should be reported when available, the committee decided to revise the request and order forms to illustrate where information about gender would appear on the request and order, and to seek specific comment on this issue. The comments received were all supportive of including this requirement, provided that it was optional and it was explained that the court would not use that information to make its order on the request.

Alternatives considered

Notices to minor

The committee considered how to implement the requirement of SB 273 that the minor receive specific notices after the court makes an order in the case. The committee considered either developing a separate Judicial Council form for the notices or including them with the court order. The committee decided to propose that the notices be included with the court order. This would eliminate confusion about whether it would become the responsibility of the judicial officer, the court clerk, or Family Court Services to ensure that the minor receives the notices.

New rule of court

The committee considered whether there was a need for a rule of court to implement SB 273 and determined that there was a need to provide guidance to the parties and to the court about implementing the new laws. For example, the parties and the courts would need to know the following: the request and order forms in these cases are mandatory; Family Court Services is required to make certain recommendations to the court, even if FCS does not normally do so with respect to other proceedings, such as those relating to child custody and visitation (parenting time); and FCS must provide a copy of the written recommendations to the parties, even though SB 273 is silent on this matter. Thus, the proposed new rule would not simply recite the language of the new and amended Family Code sections.

Further, because the process under SB 273 is not a "mediation" within the meaning of the Family Code, the committee considered but did not propose amending rule 5.210 (Court-connected child custody mediation) to include new provisions to address SB 273's requirements.

Terminology in the proposed new rule and forms

Although Family Code sections 297.1, 303, and 304 use the terms "parent" and "guardian" and provide that, if applicable, the minor must have a parent's or a guardian's written consent to marry or establish a domestic partnership, the committee considered that these terms may need clarification in the proposed forms. This is because a parent or guardian may not actually have the legal authority to consent to the minor's request. For example, a court order that grants "sole legal custody" to a parent gives only one of the child's parents the legal authority to consent to any issue relating the child's health, safety, and welfare. Thus, in this situation, the other parent would not have the legal authority to consent to the minor's request to marry or establish a domestic partnership. On the other hand, a court order of "joint legal custody" enables each of the minor's parents to give consent. With respect to the term "guardian," minors may apply this term liberally to a person in their lives who is not related to them. It takes a court order for a person to become a minor's legal guardian. For the foregoing reasons, the committee decided to replace the terms "parent" and "guardian" with "parent with legal authority" and "legal guardian" where appropriate in proposed form FL-912 and revised forms FL-910 and FL-915. One commenter suggested that the term "legal guardian" also needed qualification and clarification, but the committee determined that legal guardians would all have the requisite authority and thus additional language would be duplicative rather than clarifying.

Confidentiality

The committee considered whether the case files for these actions should be confidential and whether the written report from Family Court Services should be kept in the confidential portion of the family law file. In other proceedings, such as those involving psychological evaluations of children to determine child custody or visitation rights, Family Code section 3025.5 requires that the evaluation be kept confidential and not be disclosed, except to those persons or entities specifically enumerated in the statute. Although members generally believed that the reports from FCS should be confidential, SB 273 did not provide the same statutory protections for FCS's written reports in actions for minors seeking to marry or establish a domestic partnership, even though the reports could potentially contain information about the minor's psychological condition or capacity to consent to the intended marriage or domestic partnership.

To address the concern for privacy at this time, the committee has proposed including language in rule 5.448(c)(5) to require that FCS protect party confidentiality in the storage and disposal of records and any personal information gathered during the interviews, as well as in the management of reports containing recommendations about the minor's request to marry or establish a domestic partnership.

Education and training requirements

The committee considered including a subdivision in the proposed new rule to address specific education and training requirements for Family Court Services professionals who interview the minors in these cases and write recommendations for granting or denying the minor's request to marry or establish a domestic partnership. The committee also considered proposing amendments to the education and training requirements for mediators under rule 5.210.

Although the committee understands that interviewing minors and specifically assessing for coercion, duress, or undue influence on the minor may currently be outside the scope of training these court professionals have received, the committee decided not to propose additional educational components in the new or existing rules at this time. Instead, the committee directed that staff from the Center for Families, Children & the Courts provide courses and introduce new curricula at upcoming statewide Family Court Services conferences, remote monthly trainings for FCS personnel, and the annual institute for new FCS personnel.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

The statutory changes would increase the workload of Family Court Services mediators and child custody recommending counselors who do not already interview minors and their parents or guardians in these cases. Specific training might be needed to help them assess any potential force, threat, persuasion, or duress by either of the parties or their family members relating to the intended marriage or domestic partnership. The mandated changes would also increase the responsibilities of judicial officers who must review the FCS reports and interview the minors in chambers before making a determination on the request to marry or establish a domestic partnership or marriage. In addition, changes to court case management systems may be required to incorporate the new forms. However, because courts report that there are relatively few of these types of filings each year, the overall operational impact on the courts may not be significant.

Rule 5.448 of the California Rules of Court is adopted, effective January 1, 2020, to read:

Title 5. Family and Juvenile Rules

Division 1. Family Rules

Chapter 19. Minor Marriage or Domestic Partnership

Article 1. General Provisions

Rule 5.448. Minor's request to marry or establish a domestic partnership

(a) Application

(1) This rule implements Family Code sections 297.1, 303, and 304, allowing a person under 18 years of age (a minor) to seek a court order for permission to marry or establish a domestic partnership.

(2) The responsibilities of Family Court Services under (c) apply equally to courts that adopt a confidential child custody mediation program, recommending child custody counseling, or a tiered/hybrid program.

(3) For the purpose of this rule, the terms "parent" and "parent with legal authority" are used interchangeably.

(b) Required initial filings

(1) The minor and the minor's proposed spouse or domestic partner must complete and file with the court clerk a Request of Minor to Marry or Establish a Domestic Partnership (form FL-910).

(2) Unless the minor has no parent or legal guardian capable of consenting, each minor must file, in addition to form FL-910, the written consent from a parent with legal authority to provide consent or a legal guardian. Consent for Minor to Marry or Establish a Domestic Partnership (form FL-912) may be used for this purpose.

(c) Responsibilities of Family Court Services

Unless the minor is 17 years of age and has achieved a high school diploma or a high school equivalency certificate, Family Court Services must:

(1) Interview the parties intending to marry or establish a domestic partnership.

(A) The parties must initially be interviewed separately; and

(B) The parties may subsequently be interviewed together.

(2) Interview at least one of the parents or the legal guardian of each party who is a minor, if the minor has a parent or legal guardian. If more than one parent or legal guardian is interviewed, the parents or guardians must be interviewed separately.

(3) Inform the parties that Family Court Services must:

(A) Prepare a written report, including recommendations for granting or denying the parties permission to marry or establish a domestic partnership;

(B) Provide the parties and the court with a copy of the report; and

(C) Submit a report of known or suspected child abuse or neglect to the county child protective services agency if Family Court Services knows or reasonably suspects that either party is a victim of child abuse or neglect.

(4) Prepare a written report, which must:

(A) Include an assessment of any potential force, threat, persuasion, fraud, coercion, or duress by either of the parties or their family members relating to the intended marriage or domestic partnership;

(B) Include recommendations for granting or denying the parties permission to marry or establish a domestic partnership; and

(C) Be submitted to the parties and the court.

(5) Protect party confidentiality in:

(A) Storage and disposal of records and any personal information gathered during the interviews; and

(B) Management of written reports containing recommendations for either granting or denying permission for a minor to marry or establish a domestic partnership.

(d) Responsibilities of judicial officer

In determining whether to issue a court order granting permission for the minor to marry or establish a domestic partnership:

(1) The judicial officer must:

(A) If Family Court Services is required to interview the parties, do the following before making a final determination:

(i) Separately and privately interview each of the parties; and

(ii) Consider whether there is any evidence of coercion or undue influence on the minor.

(B) Complete Order and Notices to Minor on Request to Marry or Establish a Domestic Partnership (form FL-915).

(2) The judicial officer may order that the parties:

(A) Appear at a hearing to consider whether it is in the best interest of the minor to marry or establish a domestic partnership.

(B) Participate in counseling concerning the social, economic, and personal responsibilities incident to the marriage or domestic partnership before the marriage or domestic partnership is established. The judicial officer:

(i) Must not require the parties to confer with counselors provided by religious organizations of any denomination;

(ii) Must consider, among other factors, the ability of the parties to pay for the counseling in determining whether to order the parties to participate in counseling;

(iii) May impose a reasonable fee to cover the cost of any counseling provided by the county or the court; and

(iv) May require the parties to file a certificate of completion of counseling before granting permission to marry or establish a domestic partnership.

(e) Waiting period

After obtaining a court order granting a minor permission to marry or establish a domestic partnership, the parties must wait 30 days from the date the court made the order before filing a marriage license or filing a declaration of domestic partnership. This waiting period is not required if the minor is:

(1) 17 years of age and has a high school diploma or a high school equivalency certificate; or

(2) 16 or 17 years of age and is pregnant or whose prospective spouse or domestic partner is pregnant.

When you file this request, the court must determine whether to grant permission for you to marry or establish a domestic partnership.

1. Unless the minor is 17 years of age and has achieved a high school diploma or high school equivalency certificate, the law requires that all of the following be completed before the court can make a decision in your case:

a. Family Court Services must:

(1) Interview the parties separately.

(2) Interview at least one of the parents or the guardians of each party who is a minor if the minor has a parent or guardian who has legal authority to consent to the minor's intended marriage or domestic partnership.

If the minor has more than one parent or guardian with legal authority, Family Court Services must interview them separately.

(3) Prepare a written report based on the information collected from the interviews and give it to the court.

b. The judge must:

(1) Review the report and recommendations written by Family Court Services;

(2) Interview each of the parties separately and privately; and

(3) Make an order on the request to marry or establish a domestic partnership.

2. Court order

The court will make an order on the party's request using Order and Notices to Minor on Request to Marry or Establish a Domestic Partnership (form FL-915). Important notices are included with the order. You may want to review the notices before you file the request.

3. Order for counseling

If the court considers it necessary, and the court determines that the parties can afford it, the law allows the judge to require the parties to participate in counseling before obtaining a marriage license or establishing a domestic partnership. As to this order:

a. The counseling must relate to the social, economic, and personal responsibilities incident to marriage or domestic partnership.

b. The court must consider, among other factors, the ability of the parties to pay for counseling before ordering the parties to attend counseling.

c. The court cannot order the parties to participate in counseling that is provided by religious organizations of any denomination.

d. The court may require the parties to pay a reasonable fee to cover the cost of any counseling provided by the county or the court.

4. Data collection

Gender: Parties are not required to specify their gender on form FL-910. If the parties volunteer this information, the court must include it in the order.

Age: The parties must specify their ages on form FL-910. By law, the court order must include this information in the order.

The judge does not use the age and gender information in form FL-910 to decide whether to grant the request.

The parties' ages are reported to the State Registrar or the Secretary of State to allow them to document and update each year the number of recorded marriages and domestic partnerships in which one or both of the parties were minors at the time the parties married or registered the domestic partnership.

2 What it means to be an emancipated minor

If you are under the age of 18 years and have an order allowing you to marry or register a domestic partnership, you are considered to be an emancipated minor when you have entered into a valid marriage or domestic partnership.

When you are emancipated, you are no longer under the care and control of your parents or legal guardian. If you are a dependent or ward of the juvenile court, your legal status also changes when you are emancipated. This affects certain rights relating to you and your parents or legal guardians. For example:

- You give up the right to financial support from your parents or legal guardians.
- Your parents or legal guardians lose the right to control your finances, and they are no longer required to support you.

National Domestic Violence Hotline

For a referral to a local domestic violence or legal assistance program, call the National Domestic Violence Hotline at:

1-800-799-7233 (TDD: 1-800-787-3224).

It's free and private. Help is available in over 100 languages.

National Sexual Assault Hotline

Anyone affected by sexual assault, whether it happened to you or someone you care about, can find support by contacting the National Sexual Assault Hotline at:

1-800-656.HOPE (4673).

You can also visit rainn.org to receive online support by confidential online chat.

3 Rights of an emancipated minor

As specified in Family Code sections 7050 through 7052, as an emancipated minor you have the right to:

- Decide where you want to live;
- Enroll yourself in school;
- Apply for a work permit;
- Make or revoke a will;
- Keep the money you earn;
- Decide how to spend the money you earn;
- Enter into contracts, get a bank loan or credit card;
- File a lawsuit or be sued in your own name;
- Consent to your own medical, dental, and psychiatric care; and
- Buy, sell, lease, exchange, or transfer any interest you have in real estate or personal property.

Case Number:

4 Other rights of an emancipated minor

With respect to shares of stock in a domestic or foreign corporation, a membership in a nonprofit corporation, or other property held by an emancipated minor, you may do all of the following:

- Vote in person, and give proxies to exercise any voting rights, with respect to the shares, membership, or property;
- Waive notice of any meeting or give consent to the holding of any meeting; and
- Authorize, ratify, approve, and affirm any action that could be taken by shareholders, members, or property owners.

5 Limits on the rights of an emancipated minor

Even if you have been declared an emancipated minor:

- You must still attend school as required by law.
- If you are charged with a crime, your case will be in the Juvenile Court.
- Labor laws relating to minors still apply to you and prevent you from performing dangerous kinds of work.
- You must still meet the age requirements in California for obtaining a driver's license.
- You cannot consent to sexual intercourse with anyone who is not your legal spouse or domestic partner. This means that any other adult who has sex with an emancipated minor can still be prosecuted for unlawful sexual intercourse with a minor.

6 Alternatives to emancipation

As an alternative to emancipation, you can consider:

- Family counseling to help improve your relationship with your parents while living with them.
- Obtaining an order to make someone you trust your legal guardian until you become 18 years old.
- Getting help from public or private agencies in your area.
- Making an informal agreement with your parents that allows you to live with someone else. Note: The law allows the caregiver to enroll you in school and obtain basic medical care for you by completing a Caregiver's Authorization Affidavit, even if the caregiver does not have a court order for child custody. The affidavit can be found online at http://www.courts.ca.gov/documents/caregiver.pdf

7 Rights of *un*emancipated minors

A minor who is 12 years or older may file for a domestic violence restraining order in the minor's own name.

A minor may consent to the matters provided in Family Code sections 6920 to 6930, subject to certain limitations, and the consent of the minor's parent or legal guardian is not necessary. For example:

Mental health treatment, outpatient counseling, emergency residential shelter service

A minor who is 12 years of age or older may consent to mental health treatment or counseling on an outpatient basis, or to residential shelter services or other supportive services on a temporary or emergency basis. Both of the following requirements must be satisfied:

(1) The minor, in the opinion of the attending professional person, is mature enough to participate intelligently in the outpatient services or residential shelter services.

(2) The minor (A) would present a danger of physical or mental harm to self or to others without the mental health treatment or counseling or residential shelter services, or (B) is the alleged victim of incest or child abuse.

Other rights

(1) A minor who is 12 years of age or older may consent to medical care and counseling relating to the diagnosis and treatment of a drug- or alcohol-related problem, prevention of a sexually transmitted disease, or prevention or treatment of pregnancy.

(2) A minor may make a contract in the same manner as an adult. However, the contract can be disaffirmed if the law so permits.

(3) Minors may never (A) give a delegation of power (B) contract relating to real property, or (C) contract relating to personal property not within the minor's immediate possession or control.

8 Annulments: void marriage or domestic partnership

The law describes circumstances in which a marriage or domestic partnership is void (not legally valid) from the very beginning.

Bigamous relationship: One or both people are already married to (or in a registered domestic partnership with) someone else. For more information, see Family Code section 2201.

Incestuous relationship: This is a marriage or partnership between two people who are close blood relatives. See Family Code section 2200.

9 Annulments: voidable marriage or domestic partnership

Family Code section 2210 describes circumstances in which a marriage or domestic partnership can be declared invalid (or voidable). The following must have taken place at the time the parties married or registered the domestic partnership:

Under age: The person filing for annulment was under 18 years old.

Unsound mind: Either party was unable to understand the nature of the marriage or domestic partnership, including the obligations that come with it.

Fraud: Either party decided to marry or register the domestic partnership as a result of fraud. The party was deceived about something vital to the relationship that directly affected the decision to marry or become a domestic partner. Some examples are hiding the inability to have children or just wanting to get a green card.

Force: Either party was forced to consent.

Physical incapacity: One of the parties was physically incapable of "consummating" the relationship (having sexual intercourse) and the incapacity appears to be "incurable."

Prior existing marriage or domestic partnership: The marriage or domestic partnership took place after the former spouse or domestic partner was absent for five years and not known to be living, or was thought to be dead.

Note: See Family Code section 2211 for the time limits for filing to nullify a voidable legal relationship.

10 How to annul a marriage or domestic partnership

There are a number of forms and steps to complete when filing for annulment. For information and procedures for filing and responding to an annulment case that is filed in family court, you can:

- Visit the California Courts Online Self-Help Center at www.courts.ca.gov/1037.htm#legal.
- Talk to a lawyer. For help finding a lawyer, go to www.courts.ca.gov/selfhelp-findlawyer.htm.
- Visit your local court's self-help center at www.courts.ca.gov/selfhelp-selfhelpcenters.htm.

11 How to end a marriage, domestic partnership, or both

Dissolution (Divorce): A divorce judgment ends your marriage or domestic partnership, or both. You will be legally a single person again. In a divorce case you can ask the judge to make orders about parenting issues, child support, spousal or partner support, and dividing property and debts.

Legal Separation: A legal separation does not end a marriage or domestic partnership. A couple may decide to file for legal separation instead of a divorce for religious reasons, financial reasons, or because they just want to live apart and have court orders about money, property, and parenting issues.

For information about divorce and legal separation, including the procedures for filing in family court go to www.courts.ca.gov/selfhelp-divorce.htm.

Read Legal Steps for a Divorce or Legal Separation (form FL-107-INFO). This form can be found online at www.courts.ca.gov/documents/fl107info.pdf.

Summary Dissolution: This type of action is available for couples who have been married or domestic partners for less than five years, do not have children together, do not seek an order for support, do not own real estate or land, and have limited debts and property. For more information, go to:

In general, this proposal makes the process more user friendly for the pro per with added instructions. The proposed forms provide clear instructions on how to complete. I like how the forms indicate that it's optional to provide info re: gender, but there should be information provided to litigants what's the purpose of providing their gender information.	The committee agrees that gender information should be requested consistent with the statutory directive that it be reported if available. There is an explanation on the form at item 4 on page 2 explaining that the gender information is for data collection and the committee deems it comprehensive.
3.	Superior Court of California, County of San Diego by Michael Roddy, Executive Officer	AM	Identify Gender: Yes. The form indicates this item is optional and thus protects the parties' right to not disclose gender identity. On the other hand, if a party voluntarily chooses to disclose gender and wishes to have that information included in the court order, the item provides this option as well. A party's gender identity can be valuable information for the Family Court Services worker and the bench officer who will be interviewing the party as part of the application process.	The committee agrees that gender information should be requested consistent with the statutory directive that it be reported if available.

Suggested modification(s): Rule 5.448, subdivision (b)(2) should apply the qualifier "with legal authority to provide consent" to the "legal guardian" just as it does to the "parent." The committee discusses the need for the qualifier in the rule proposal, recognizing that not all parents or legal guardians necessarily have the authority to provide the requisite consent. The rule applies the qualifier to the parent only. Subdivision (b)(2) could read: Unless the minor has no parent or legal guardian capable of consenting, each minor must file, in addition to form FL-910, the written consent from a parent with legal authorization to provide consent, or a legal guardian with such legal authorization. …. The above change should also be made to paragraph 6 of form FL-910 for the same reason.	The committee cannot identify a circumstance in which a legal guardian would not have legal authority to provide this consent and so is electing not to add this qualifying language.

Executive Summary

The Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee recommends changes to four rules of court and three forms, and the adoption of one new rule of court and one new form; and the approval of three new forms, including an information sheet to implement new procedures for rescheduling a hearing in family court. The new procedures would (1) respond to the concerns raised by court professionals following the publication of an amended rule and revised forms relating to continuing hearings in family court, and (2) specify when a party can and cannot file a request to reschedule a hearing without first notifying and serving the other party.

Recommendation

The Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee recommends that the Judicial Council, effective July 1, 2020:

1. Adopt rule 5.95 of the California Rules of Court, “Request to reschedule hearing”;

2. Amend rule 5.2 to include a new item 11 to provide that "reschedule the hearing" means the same as "continue the hearing" and to include a definition that both refer to "moving a hearing to another date and time";

3. Amend rule 5.94 by revoking subdivision (f), "Procedures to request continued hearing date," and changing the rule title to Order shortening time; other filing requirements; failure to serve request for order to reflect the change; replacing the word "continue" with "reschedule" in subdivision (e); and adding "as described in rule 5.95" at the end;

4. Amend rules 5.151 to incorporate the term "reschedule" and refer to new rule 5.95.

5. Amend rule 5.165(a) by eliminating "in writing" and adding "fax transmission," "electronic means," or "overnight carrier" as delivery options;

6. Adopt mandatory form Order on Request to Reschedule Hearing (form FL-309) to implement new rule 5.95;

7. Approve optional forms How to Reschedule a Hearing in Family Court (form FL 304-INFO), Agreement and Order to Reschedule Hearing (form FL-308), and Responsive Declaration to Request to Reschedule Hearing (form FL-310) to implement new rule 5.95;

8. Revise Declaration Regarding Notice and Service of Request for Temporary Emergency (Ex Parte) Orders (form FL-303) and Request to Reschedule Hearing (form FL-306) to incorporate the term "reschedule" and refer to new rule 5.95; and

9. Revoke and replace form FL-307 from Order on Request to Continue Hearing to Request to Reschedule Hearing Involving Temporary Emergency (Ex Parte) Orders to implement new rule 5.95.

The text of the amended and new rules and the new and revised forms are attached at pages 12–33.

Relevant Previous Council Action

Effective January 1, 2014, the Judicial Council revised and renumbered form FL-306/JV-251, separating it into two forms, FL-306 and JV-251, to clarify what orders are appropriate in family and juvenile law proceedings. Effective July 1, 2016, the council approved form FL-303 to help fill a need for a standard form that can be accepted for filing in family courts across the state. Also effective July 1, 2016, the council revised form FL-306, changing its title from "Application for Order and Reissuance of Request for Order and Temporary Emergency (Ex Parte) Orders" to "Request and Order to Continue Hearing and Extend Temporary Emergency (Ex Parte) Orders." The form was also revised to delete references to any filing other than a request for order and temporary emergency (ex parte) orders.

Effective September 1, 2017, the Judicial Council approved amending rule 5.94 to remove "and extend temporary emergency (ex parte) orders" from the title and reflect revised procedures relating to continuances; revised form FL-303 to provide a space for a party to specify the hearing date requested for the no-notice hearing or the date that the party will submit the request for the court to decide based on declarations; and revoked form FL-306 and replaced it with two new forms, Request to Continue Hearing (form FL-306) and Order on Request to Continue Hearing (form FL-307).

The title of new form FL-306 was changed to harmonize it with other civil forms used to request a continuance to effect service with temporary emergency (ex parte) orders. In addition, form FL-306 was expanded to cover actions filed by the Department of Child Support Services in parentage cases and to allow a party to use the form to ask the court to continue a hearing on a Request for Order (RFO) (form FL-300), order to show cause, or other moving papers without temporary emergency orders "to allow for service on the other party before the hearing" (emphasis added).[1]

Analysis/Rationale

The recommended rules and forms for requests to reschedule a hearing in family law, as described above, would help parties more clearly understand the procedures that apply and need to be followed.

Currently, rule 5.94(f) and forms FL-306 and FL-307 cover requests to continue a hearing in limited circumstances. They allow a party to request that the court continue a hearing when the other parties in the case have not been served with notice of the hearing. In this situation, under rule 5.94, the moving party is not required to provide notice to the other party before seeking an order to continue the hearing. Rule 5.94 also allows responding parties who have been served to use form FL-306 to request a continuance of a hearing involving temporary emergency orders, as permitted by Family Code section 245. However, the rule does not address how notice to the other party is to be provided.

When the title of the mandatory form was changed to Request to Continue Hearing, effective September 1, 2017, courts observed that parties and attorneys started using form FL-306 to ask to continue a hearing date in all cases, including when the other party had actually been served with notice of the hearing.

Currently, no statewide rules or forms cover procedures for family law continuances other than as provided by rule 5.94(f). The procedure for all other continuances is governed by local court rules. Local procedures generally require that the party asking to continue the hearing provide notice of the request to the other parties and serve copies of the request. This process allows the other parties the opportunity to be heard on the request to continue the hearing before the court makes an order.

In response to the above concerns, the committee recommends changes to four rules of court and three forms, and the adoption of one new rule of court and one new form; and the approval of three new forms, including an information sheet to implement new procedures for rescheduling a hearing in family court.

Rules

Rule 5.2. Division title; definitions; application of rules and laws

Rule 5.2 would be amended to include a new item 11 to provide that "reschedule the hearing" means the same as "continue the hearing." The change reflects the committee's recommendation to use the term "reschedule" to replace "continue" or "continuance" throughout the rules and forms in this proposal. This change would respond to comments from court professionals and organizations that assist self-represented litigants that the term "continue" is often misunderstood and should be clarified so that a party understands that the hearing will not proceed as scheduled but will be reset to a future date.

Rule 5.94. Order shortening time; other filing requirements; request to continue hearing

The committee recommends extensive changes to the rescheduling procedures in rule 5.94(f). For this reason, the committee recommends striking subdivision (f) and placing the rescheduling rules under new rule 5.95. To reflect the change, the title of rule 5.94 would be changed to Order shortening time; other filing requirements; failure to serve request for order.

Rule 5.95. Request to reschedule hearing

Recommended new rule 5.95 organizes the requirements for rescheduling a hearing under subdivisions that highlight the reason for the request. For example, subdivisions (b) through (e) would be titled as follows:

- Reschedule a hearing because the other party was not served;
- Written agreements (stipulations) to reschedule a hearing;
- Reschedule a hearing after the other party was served with the request for order or other moving papers; and
- Reschedule a hearing to attend mediation or child custody recommending counseling.

Reorganizing the rules for rescheduling a hearing under a separate rule will help the parties better understand the procedures that apply in each situation, along with the relevant forms associated with those procedures.

A significant recommended change to the rescheduling rule is reflected in rule 5.95. Under subdivision (b)(2)(B), the rule would allow the court to delegate to the court clerk the authority to reschedule a hearing on the party's written request if the initial RFO did not involve temporary emergency orders or if the party asking to reschedule does not request a change to any temporary emergency (ex parte) orders that were initially granted. If temporary emergency orders are involved, the expiration date of the temporary emergency (ex parte) orders would be extended to the date of the new hearing. This change would increase court efficiencies by eliminating the requirement for judicial officers to review the request and sign the order to reschedule a hearing.

The recommended rules and forms also promote judicial efficiency by continuing to provide clear guidelines to submit a request to reschedule a hearing, allowing sufficient notice for the court to adjust courtroom calendars and prevent any unnecessary preparation and review of those case files. Current rule 5.94(f)(5)(A)(i) provides that the party asking for the continuance should submit Request to Continue Hearing (form FL-306) to the court no later than five court days before the hearing date set on the RFO, order to show cause, or other moving papers. The committee sought comment about whether this provision should be included in recommended new rule 5.95.

Recommended rule 5.95(d) clarifies that a party may not file a request to reschedule a hearing without first notifying and serving the other party with the request. In addition, the rule requires that the party file with the request to reschedule the hearing a declaration demonstrating when and how notice and service were completed.

Further, recommended rule 5.95 specifies that the process for notice and service on the other party would follow the same procedure for when a party requests temporary emergency (ex parte) orders under rules 5.151 through 5.169. For example, the party would have to obtain a court date describing when the party will submit the request to reschedule papers to the court (or when the court will have a hearing on the request to reschedule). Then the party would have to notify the other party by 10 a.m. the day before the date obtained from the court and serve the papers on the other party.

The recommended amendments also prompt the parties to refer to their court's local rules and procedures when proceeding under rule 5.95(d). This prompt acknowledges that courts differ in how these filings are processed. For example, as previously noted, some courts set a hearing on the request to reschedule and others process the request based on pleadings without a hearing.

Rules 5.151 and 5.165

These rules would be amended to incorporate the term "reschedule" and refer to new rule 5.95. In addition, subdivision (a) of rule 5.165 (Requirements for notice) would be amended to provide:

> (a) Method of notice
> Notice of appearance at a hearing to request emergency orders may be given personally or by telephone, ~~in writing~~, voicemail, fax transmission, electronic means (if permitted), overnight mail, or other overnight carrier.

As illustrated above, the rule would be amended to clarify that "in writing" means that notice may be given by voicemail, fax transmission, or overnight mail or other overnight carrier. These proposed amendments would align the rule to the current methods of notice listed in form FL-303. In addition, the committee proposes adding "electronic means" to these methods, which could include notice to the other party by e-mail.

Revised forms

Request to Continue Hearing (form FL-306)

The committee recommends changing this form as follows:

- The title would be changed to Request to Reschedule Hearing;
- All references to "continue" or "continuance" would be replaced with "reschedule," as previously noted;
- The content would be distributed under these headings: "Case Information," "Request," "Reason for Rescheduling," "Special Procedures May Apply," and "Proposed Order Required;"
- The form would include a reference to a new information sheet about how to reschedule a hearing in family court; and
- The form would allow the party to request that the court reschedule the hearing after a certain date and specify dates that the party is not available.

Order on Request to Continue Hearing (form FL-307)

This form would be renumbered from FL-307 to FL-309. The form number FL-307 would be reassigned to a proposed new form, Request to Reschedule Hearing Involving Temporary Emergency (Ex Parte) Order, as described below. The renumbered order form would be revised to include a space for the court to order the parties to attend child custody mediation or child custody recommending counseling.

Declaration Regarding Notice and Service of Request for Temporary Emergency (Ex Parte) Orders (form FL-303)

Item 2 of this form would be revised to provide check boxes for a party to check if the party seeks to reschedule a hearing with or without temporary emergency (ex parte) orders. Item 3a(2) would be reformatted and a new check box added for a party to specify if notice was given electronically to the other party. Item 4 would be revised to add check boxes for the forms a party would need to have served on the other party before filing the request to reschedule.

New forms

How to Reschedule a Hearing in Family Court (form FL-304-INFO)

The recommended new form would provide general information to the parties involved in a proceeding to reschedule a hearing. The form would reflect the requirements of recommended new rule 5.95, provide references to specific rules of court and how to find the rules, and include references to resources for parties who have questions about the process or wish to seek legal advice.

Request to Reschedule Hearing Involving Temporary Emergency (Ex Parte) Orders (form FL-307)

The committee recommends a new form to reschedule a hearing when the court has issued temporary emergency (ex parte) orders with a Request for Order (form FL-300). The form includes procedures specific to actions involving temporary emergency orders. For example, Family Code section 245 specifies that a party responding to temporary emergency orders for property restraint (under Family Code sections 2045 or 4620) is entitled to continue the hearing one time as a matter of course. The entitlement is limited to these types of cases and the form would clarify this point in "Reason for Rescheduling." Specifically, item 7c would provide:

> The hearing needs to be rescheduled because: [¶] … [¶] as the responding party to a request for temporary emergency (ex parte) orders for property restraint, I am entitled as a matter of course to have the court reschedule the hearing one time for a reasonable period to respond to the request. (This reason is only available if you checked item 5b.)

The form would also specify that if the court grants the request to reschedule the hearing, the expiration date of the emergency orders would be extended to the end of the new hearing. Having this separate form would eliminate confusion for parties whose case does not involve emergency orders.

Agreement and Order to Reschedule Hearing (form FL-308)

This recommended optional form would provide parties with a form to serve as their stipulation if the court does not provide a local form for agreements. As with Order on Request to Reschedule Hearing (form FL-309), the court order section of form FL-308 would include a space for the court to order the parties to attend child custody mediation or recommending counseling. It would be limited to cases in which a party is only seeking to reschedule the hearing to a new date or, if applicable, extend the expiration date of a temporary emergency (ex parte) order. Parties who want to agree to reschedule the hearing as well as modify temporary emergency (ex parte) orders would be required to draft their own agreement for the court to sign.

Responsive Declaration to Request to Reschedule Hearing (form FL-310)

This recommended optional form would help implement the new procedures specified in rule 5.95 and the information sheet. The availability of this form would likely encourage the other party to file and serve a response, thereby providing information for the judicial officer to consider before making an order on the request to reschedule the hearing.

Policy implications

As mentioned above, the committee's proposal seeks to address a demonstrated need that exists for statewide consistency and clarity for requests to reschedule hearings in family law proceedings, and the recommendations are expected to result in a greater understanding of a complicated process by the public, particularly for self-represented litigants, and an increase in judicial efficiency for the courts.

Comments

The proposal circulated for public comment from April 10 to June 10, 2019, as part of the spring 2019 invitation-to-comment cycle to the standard mailing list for family and juvenile law proposals. Fourteen organizations and individuals, as well as the Joint Rules Subcommittee of the Trial Court Presiding Judges and Court Executives Advisory Committees, provided comment: three agreed with the proposal, six agreed with modifications, one disagreed, and four did not indicate a position but provided comments. Generally, all but one commenter agreed that the proposal appropriately addressed the stated purpose. Concerns raised by one commenter disagreeing with the entirety of the proposal, are addressed in the Alternatives Considered section below. Several comments suggested straightforward changes, including simple changes to language and to correct for typographical errors. A chart with the full text of the comments received and the recommended committee responses is attached at pages 34 to 77.

Rule 5.2

One commenter suggested defining what "reschedule" and "continue" means, in addition to stating that the two terms should be used interchangeably. In response to the comment, the committee has included recommended language to rule 5.2 further clarifying that either word "refers to moving a hearing to another date and time."

Rule 5.94

One commenter suggested adding to rule 5.94(e)(2) a cross-reference to direct the reader to rule 5.95 for requests to reschedule a hearing. In response to the comment, the committee has included the recommended cross-reference to rule 5.94.

Rule 5.95

Submission of request to reschedule at least five court days before the hearing. Every commenter responding to this request for specific comment, except one, stated that the recommended rules and forms should include guidance to parties that a request to reschedule should be submitted to the court at least five court days before the hearing date. In response to the overwhelming majority of commenters, the committee recommends including language stating that parties should submit the forms to the court no later than five court days before the hearing date throughout the rules and forms in this proposal.

New "Application" section. One commenter suggested adding an application or purpose section—similar to that in rule 5.151(b)—at the beginning of rule 5.95. The committee agrees with the commenter and recommends including an "Application" section because, in addition to stating the rule's purpose, the new recommended language also clarifies that rule 5.95 does not apply to Domestic Violence Prevention Act cases.

Specific comment requested on rule 5.95(a) option 1 or option 2. The committee asked for specific comment on whether rule 5.95(a), now reordered to subdivision (b), should end with one of two options:

> If a Request for Order (form FL-300) (with or without temporary emergency (ex parte) orders, order to show cause, or other moving paper is not served on the other party and the requesting party still wishes to proceed with the hearing,…
> [Option 1] the party must ask the court reschedule the hearing date.
> [Option 2] the party must ask the court to reschedule the hearing date by the deadline described in rule 5.92 or as ordered by the court.

As noted by one commenter, rule 5.92, which is referenced by option 2, provides no guidance for deadlines pertaining to requests to reschedule as implied by the language contained in option 2. Rule 5.92 instead applies to deadlines for the initial Request for Order (form FL-300), order to show cause, or other moving paper. Thus, rule 5.95(b) was revised to make clear that the deadline for service described in rule 5.92 pertains to the underlying motion and not to requests to reschedule. Accordingly, in new recommended rule 5.95(b), option 1, and not option 2, was used to end the paragraph with "…the party must ask the court to reschedule the hearing date."

Rule 5.165

One commenter suggested that "(if permitted)" be added to rule 5.165 to be consistent with the options listed on the recommended revisions to Declaration Regarding Notice and Service of Request for Temporary Emergency (Ex Parte) Orders (form FL-303). The committee has added the recommended language to the rule.

Proposed new form FL-306/FL-307/FL-308-INFO

One commenter remarked that the number of the proposed form was "unnecessarily long." The committee agreed and renumbered the INFO sheet to form FL-304-INFO. As with rule 5.95, the overwhelming majority of commenters stated that guidance to submit the forms at least five court days before the hearing should be provided in item 10 on forms FL-306 and FL-307, as well as on new form FL-304-INFO.

Form FL-309 as a mandatory form

The invitation to comment categorized Order on Request to Reschedule Hearing (FL-309) as a mandatory form. However, as many commenters indicated, references throughout the rules and forms to form FL-309 used permissive language such as "may be used" when describing use of the form. The committee has revised all language referring to form FL-309 throughout the proposal to clarify that it is a mandatory and not an optional form.

Implementation date

Multiple commenters from the superior courts requested a longer implementation period than three months. Because a specific date for implementation of this proposal is not mandated by law or otherwise urgent, staff recommends that the effective date be changed from January 1 to July 1, 2020, to allow more time for courts to prepare as requested. However, if subsequent legislatively mandated rules or forms in family law require an effective date of September 1, 2020, then the effective date of this proposal may be postponed until then for more efficient implementation processes by the courts.

Alternatives considered

The Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee considered whether to circulate the proposal in the winter 2018 comment cycle or the spring 2019 cycle. The committee opted for spring 2019 to allow time for committee members to undertake a comprehensive review of rule 5.94 and its associated forms before responding to the concerns raised by court professionals following the September 1, 2017, publication of the amended rule and revised forms. The committee also considered proposing interim technical changes to the forms used to continue a hearing in family court but did not pursue this option, because doing so would have required courts to incur additional costs to produce copies over three consecutive forms publication cycles. Instead, the committee directed staff to provide technical assistance to the courts for form FL-306 and concurrently work with committee members to draft a proposal to circulate for comment in the spring 2019 cycle.

One commenter argued that no changes should be made to the rules and forms related to continuances in family law proceedings, or even revoking the current forms. The commenter raised concerns that the proposal would make the procedures for rescheduling a hearing a more convoluted, confusing process than it currently is, would therefor negatively impact self-represented litigants and create more workload issues for the courts. The committee considered making no changes to the current rules and forms for requests to reschedule a hearing in family law proceedings. However, based on comments received, both in the previous and current invitation-to-comment periods, the committee has recognized a demonstrated need to create a more consistent and clear process—particularly for self-represented litigants—than currently exists, by establishing uniform statewide rules and forms for all requests to reschedule a hearing in family law. As mentioned above, there are no statewide rules or forms for requests to reschedule a hearing in family law, other than under the limited circumstances outlined in rule 5.94(f) and form FL-306. Courts have reported that this has resulted in parties and attorneys attempting to improperly use current form FL-306 for all requests to reschedule a hearing in family law cases. In addition, the current statewide rules and forms offer no guidance on providing notice and serving the other party with a request to reschedule a hearing, which has also contributed to much confusion, especially for self-represented litigants, and concerns regarding due process. To minimize the burden on implementation and changes to local court business processes, the committee has also aligned the recommended procedures for requests to reschedule a court hearing with existing ex parte rules in family law. The committee expects that the recommended rules and forms contained in this proposal will ultimately lead to less confusion and more clarity for self-represented litigants, than the current process for rescheduling family law hearings, and result in a long term net increase in efficiency for judicial officers, court calendars, and court operations.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

The committee anticipates that this proposal will result in costs incurred by the courts to revise forms and add them to their case management systems, train court staff about the new and amended rules and the new and revised forms, and possibly revise local court rules and forms so they are consistent with the changes adopted by the Judicial Council. However, the committee expects that the changes will save resources for the courts in the long term by clarifying procedures.

Rule 5.95 of the California Rules of Court are adopted and rules 5.2, 5.94, 5.151, and 5.165 are amended, effective July 1, 2020, to read:

Rule 5.2. Division title; definitions; application of rules and laws

(a) * * *

(b) Definitions and use of terms

As used in this division, unless the context or subject matter otherwise requires, the following definitions apply:

(1)–(10) * * *

(11) "Reschedule the hearing" means the same as "continue the hearing" under the Family Code and refers to moving a hearing to another date and time.

(c)–(g) * * *

Rule 5.94. Order shortening time; other filing requirements; ~~request to continue hearing~~ failure to serve request for order

(a)–(d) * * *

(e) Failure to ~~timely~~ serve request for order

The Request for Order (form FL-300) or other moving papers such as an order to show cause, along with any temporary emergency (ex parte) orders, will expire on the date and time of the scheduled hearing if the requesting party fails to:

(1) Have the other party ~~timely~~ served before the hearing with the Request for Order (form FL-300) or other moving papers, such as an order to show cause; supporting documents; and any temporary emergency (ex parte) orders; or

(2) Obtain a court order to ~~continue~~ reschedule the hearing, as described in rule 5.95.

~~(f) Procedures to request continued hearing date~~

~~(1) If a Request for Order (form FL-300), order to show cause, or other moving paper is not timely served on the other party before the date of the hearing, and the party requesting the order wishes to proceed with the request, he or she must ask the court to continue the hearing date.~~

~~(2) On a showing of good cause or on its own motion, the court may:~~

~~(A) Continue the hearing and set a new date; and~~

~~(B) Modify or terminate any temporary emergency (ex parte) orders initially granted with the Request for Order, order to show cause, or other moving paper.~~

~~(3) If the court grants a continuance and makes no change to the temporary emergency (ex parte) orders, those orders are extended until the time of the continued hearing or to another date specified by the court.~~

~~(4) The party served with a Request for Order (form FL-300), order to show cause, or other moving paper that includes temporary emergency (ex parte) orders:~~

~~(A) Is entitled to one continuance as a matter of course for a reasonable period of time to respond. A second or subsequent request by the responding party to continue the hearing must be supported by facts showing good cause for the continuance;~~

~~(B) May ask the court to continue the hearing by using Request to Continue Hearing (form FL-306); and~~

~~(C) Must file and serve a Responsive Declaration to Request for Order (form FL-320) before the date of the new hearing, as required by law or described in Order on Request to Continue Hearing (form FL-307).~~

~~(5) The following procedures apply to either party's request to continue the hearing:~~

~~(A) The party asking for the continuance must complete and submit an original Request to Continue Hearing (form FL-306) with two copies for the court to review, as follows:~~

~~(i) The form should be submitted to the court no later than five court days before the hearing date set on the Request for Order, order to show cause, or other moving papers.~~

~~(ii) The party may present the form to the court on the date of the hearing.~~

~~(iii) The party who, on the date of the hearing, makes an oral request to the court to continue the hearing, is not required to complete form FL-306, but must complete and submit an Order on Request to Continue Hearing (form FL-307) if the court grants the request.~~

~~(B) Along with form FL-306, the party asking for the continuance must submit to the court an Order on Request to Continue Hearing (form FL-307) with the caption and initial items completed as described on the form.~~

~~(C) After the court signs and files form FL-307, a filed copy must be served on the other party as follows, unless the court orders otherwise:~~

~~(i) If the continuance is granted, an Order on Request to Continue Hearing (form FL-307) must be attached as the cover page and served, along with the Request for Order (form FL-300) or other moving papers such as an order to show cause and any temporary emergency (ex parte) orders and supporting documents.~~

~~(ii) If the court grants the responding party's request for a continuance, and the party who asked for the order was absent when the continuance was granted, then an Order on Request to Continue Hearing (form FL-307) must be attached as the cover page to any documents the court orders served on that party.~~

~~(iii) Service must be in the manner required by rule 5.92 or as ordered by the court.~~

~~(D) If the Order on Request to Continue Hearing (form FL-307), Request for Order (FL-300) or order to show cause, original or modified temporary emergency (ex parte) order, and supporting documents are not timely served on the other party, and the requesting party wishes to proceed with the hearing, he or she must repeat the procedures in this rule unless the opposing party agrees to waive notice and proceed with the hearing.~~

Rule 5.95. Request to reschedule hearing

(a) Application

The rules in this chapter govern requests to reschedule a hearing in family law cases, unless otherwise provided by statute or rule. Unless specifically stated, these rules do not apply to ex parte applications for domestic violence restraining orders under the Domestic Violence Prevention Act.

(b) Reschedule a hearing because the other party was not served

If a Request for Order (form FL-300) (with or without temporary emergency [ex parte] orders), order to show cause, or other moving paper is not served on the other party as described in rule 5.92 or as ordered by the court and the requesting party still wishes to proceed with the hearing, the party must ask the court to reschedule the hearing date.

(1) To request that the court reschedule the hearing to serve papers on the other party, the party must take one of the following actions:

(A) Before the date of the hearing

(i) The party must complete and file with the court a written request and a proposed order. The following forms may be used for this purpose: Request to Reschedule Hearing (form FL-306) or Request to Reschedule Hearing Involving Temporary Emergency (Ex Parte) Orders (form FL-307), whichever form is appropriate for the case, and Order on Request to Reschedule Hearing (form FL-309); and

(ii) The party should submit the request to the court no later than five court days before the hearing set on the Request for Order (form FL-300), order to show cause, or other moving paper.

(B) On the date of the hearing

The party may appear and orally ask the court to reschedule the hearing. The party is not required to file a written request but must complete and submit a proposed Order on Request to Reschedule Hearing (form FL-309).

(2) The court may do any of the following:

(A) Grant or deny the request to reschedule the hearing.

(B) Delegate to the court clerk the authority to reschedule the hearing if:

(i) The request to reschedule the hearing is required to allow more time to serve the other party with notice of the hearing; and

(ii) The party asking to reschedule the hearing does not request a change to any temporary emergency (ex parte) orders issued with the Request for Order (form FL-300).

(3) If the court reschedules the hearing:

(A) The court, on a showing of good cause, may modify or terminate any temporary emergency (ex parte) orders initially granted with the Request for Order (form FL-300), order to show cause, or other moving paper.

(B) The requesting party must serve the Order on Request to Reschedule Hearing (form FL-309) on the other party in the case, along with the Request for Order (form FL-300) or other moving papers such as an order to show cause, any temporary emergency (ex parte) orders, and supporting documents.

(C) If the other party has not been served with the papers in (B) after the court granted the request to reschedule, the party must repeat the procedures in this rule, unless the court orders otherwise.

(c) Written agreements (stipulations) to reschedule a hearing

The court may reschedule the hearing date of a Request for Order (FL-300), order to show cause, or other moving paper based on a written agreement (stipulation) between the parties and/or their attorneys.

(1) The parties may complete Agreement and Order to Reschedule Hearing (form FL-308) for this purpose.

(2) The parties may agree to reschedule the hearing to a date that must be provided by the court clerk. Parties should follow the court's local rules and procedures for obtaining a new hearing date.

(3) Any temporary emergency orders will remain in effect until after the end of the new hearing date, unless modified by the court.

(4) The parties should submit the agreement to the court no later than five days before the hearing set on the Request for Order (form FL-300), order to show cause, or other moving paper.

(5) The court must approve and sign the agreement to make it a court order.

(6) The court may limit the number of times that parties can agree to reschedule a hearing.

(d) Reschedule a hearing after the other party was served with the request for order or other moving papers

The procedures in this section apply when a Request for Order (form FL-300) was served on the other party as described in rule 5.92 or as ordered by the court and either party seeks to reschedule the hearing date, and the parties are unable to reach an agreement about rescheduling the hearing.

(1) To reschedule a hearing, either party must submit a written request to reschedule before the hearing date as described below in (A) or appear in court on the date of the hearing and orally ask the court to reschedule, as described below in (B):

(A) Before the date of the hearing

(i) The party wishing to reschedule the hearing must complete a written request and a proposed order. The following forms may be used for this purpose: Request to Reschedule Hearing (form FL-306) or Request to Reschedule Hearing Involving Temporary Emergency (Ex Parte) Orders (form FL-307), whichever form is appropriate for the case, and Order on Request to Reschedule Hearing (form FL-309).

(ii) The party must first notify and serve the other party. Notice and service to the other party of the documents in (i) must be completed as required by rules 5.151 through 5.169.

(iii) The party must file or submit to the court the forms in (i), along with a declaration describing how the other party was notified of the request to reschedule and served the documents. Declaration Regarding Notice and Service of Request for Temporary Emergency (Ex Parte) Orders (form FL-303), a local form, or a declaration that contains the same information as form FL-303 may be used for this purpose.

(iv) The party should submit the forms in (iii) to the court no later than five court days before the hearing date set on the Request for Order (form FL-300), order to show cause, or other moving paper.

(v) The party responding to a written request to reschedule may file and serve a responsive declaration to the request to reschedule before the court considers the written request. Responsive Declaration to Request to Reschedule Hearing (form FL-310) may be used for this purpose.

(B) On the date of the hearing

The party wishing to reschedule the hearing may appear in court and orally ask to reschedule the hearing. The party is not required to file a written request but must complete and submit a proposed Order on Request to Reschedule Hearing (form FL-309).

(2) The court may do any of the following:

(A) Grant the request to reschedule the hearing on a showing of good cause or as required by law.

(B) Deny the request to reschedule absent a showing of good cause.

(C) Modify or terminate any temporary emergency (ex parte) orders initially granted with the Request for Order (form FL-300), order to show cause, or other moving paper.

(e) Reschedule a hearing to attend mediation or child custody recommending counseling

(1) When parties need to reschedule a hearing relating to child custody and visitation (parenting time) because they have been unable to attend the family court services appointment, they should follow their local court rules and procedures for requesting and obtaining an order to reschedule the hearing.

(2) If the local court has no local rules and procedures for rescheduling hearings under (1), the parties may:

(A) Complete and file a written agreement (stipulation) for the court to sign as described in (c) of this rule; or

(B) Follow the procedures in (d) to ask for a court order to reschedule the hearing.

Rule 5.151. Request for temporary emergency (ex parte) orders; application; required documents

(a) * * *

(b) Purpose

The purpose of a request for emergency orders is to address matters that cannot be heard on the court's regular hearing calendar. In this type of proceeding, notice to the other party is shorter than in other proceedings. Notice to the other party can also be waived under exceptional and other circumstances as provided in these rules. The process is used to request that the court:

(1)–(2) * * *

(3) Make orders about procedural matters, including the following:

(A) Setting a date for a hearing on the matter that is sooner than that of a regular hearing (granting an order shortening time for hearing);

(B) Shortening or extending the time required for the moving party to serve the other party with the notice of the hearing and supporting papers (grant an order shortening time for service); and

(C) ~~Continuing~~ Rescheduling a hearing or trial.

(c) Required documents

(1) Request for order

A request for emergency orders must be in writing and must include all of the following completed documents:

~~(1)~~(A) Request for Order (form FL-300) that identifies the relief requested.

~~(2)~~(B) When relevant to the relief requested, a current Income and Expense Declaration (form FL-150) or Financial Statement (Simplified) (form FL-155) and Property Declaration (form FL-160).

~~(3)~~(C) Temporary Emergency (Ex Parte) Orders (form FL-305) to serve as the proposed temporary order.

~~(4)~~(D) A written declaration regarding notice of application for emergency orders based on personal knowledge. Declaration Regarding Notice and Service of Request for Temporary Emergency (Ex Parte) Orders (form FL-303), a local court form, or a declaration that contains the same information as form FL-303 may be used for this purpose.

~~(5)~~(E) A memorandum of points and authorities only if required by the court.

(2) Request to reschedule hearing

A request to reschedule a hearing must comply with the requirements of rule 5.95.

(d)–(e) * * *

Rule 5.165. Requirements for notice

(a) Method of notice

Notice of appearance at a hearing to request emergency orders may be given personally or by telephone, ~~in writing~~, voicemail, fax transmission, electronic means (if permitted), overnight mail, or other overnight carrier.

FL-304-INFO How to Reschedule a Hearing in Family Court

1 General Information

This form provides information about how to obtain a court order to reschedule a hearing in family court. This information sheet may not cover everything you need to know about rescheduling a hearing in your court. To learn more:

- Find a lawyer through your local bar association, the State Bar of California at calbar.ca.gov, or the Lawyer Referral Service at 1-866-442-2529. For free and low-cost legal help (if you qualify), go to www.lawhelpca.org.
- Contact the family law facilitator or self-help center for information and assistance, and referrals to local legal services providers. Go to www.courts.ca.gov/selfhelp-courtresources.htm.
- Read California Rules of Court, rules 5.92 through 5.95, for the procedures to reschedule a hearing.
- Read rules 5.151 through 5.169 for the procedures to notify and serve the other party with a request to reschedule.

You can find these rules at any courthouse or county law library or online at www.courts.ca.gov/rules.

2 Written agreement (stipulation) to reschedule a hearing (form FL-308)

The judge in your family court case may order that the hearing date be rescheduled based on an agreement (stipulation) between the parties or their attorneys.

You may use Agreement and Order to Reschedule Hearing (form FL-308) if you do not want to change temporary emergency orders. You may use a local form approved by the court, or write your own agreement.

You must follow your court's local procedures to obtain the new hearing date from the court clerk.

If the court has issued temporary emergency orders and those orders are in effect, the parties could further agree that those emergency orders will remain in effect until the end of the new hearing. A draft of a new temporary order with new end dates may have to be given to the court for the judge to sign with your agreement.

When the parties have signed the agreement, you can present it to the court on the day of the hearing, but it is best if you can file it at least five days before that date, so the judge doesn't have to read your file multiple times.

Remember, the agreement is not an order until it is signed by a judge.

Some courts may limit the number of times the parties can agree to rescheduling a hearing. Check your local court rules before submitting your written agreement. For information about how to write up your agreement, get it approved by the court, and filed in your case, see www.courts.ca.gov/selfhelp-agreeFL, speak with an attorney, or get help at your court's self-help center or the Family Law Facilitator.

If you and the other party do not have an agreement, the party who wants to reschedule the hearing must file papers, such as form FL-306 or form FL-307, to ask for a court order.

3 When to use Request to Reschedule Hearing (form FL-306)

You may use this form to ask to reschedule the hearing if the request for order or order to show cause you want to reschedule:

- Does not include temporary emergency (ex parte) orders;
- Was not served on the other parties; or
- Was served, but there is a good reason why the hearing should be changed to a new date. See 6 for other requirements.

Form FL-306 may also be used to reschedule a hearing to be able to meet with a child custody mediator or recommending counselor before the hearing.

If this situation applies to you, ask your mediator or child custody recommending counselor for information.

Most courts have local procedures and forms for rescheduling a hearing but will accept form FL-306 or your agreement to reschedule the hearing.

Do not use form FL-306 to ask to change the date of a domestic violence restraining order hearing. For more information, read How to Ask for a New Hearing Date (form DV-115-INFO).

4 When to use Request to Reschedule Hearing Involving Temporary Emergency (Ex Parte) Orders (form FL-307)

You may use form FL-307 to ask to reschedule the hearing if the request for order or order to show cause you want to reschedule:

- Includes temporary emergency (ex parte) orders.
- Was not served on the other parties.
- Includes property restraint orders and you are the responding party.
- Was served but there is a good reason why the hearing should be changed to a new date. See 6 for other requirements.

Form FL-307 may also be used to reschedule a hearing to be able to meet with a child custody mediator or recommending counselor before the hearing.

If this situation applies to you, ask your mediator or child custody recommending counselor for information. Most courts have local procedures and forms for recheduling, but will accept form FL-307 or your agreement to reschedule the hearing.

Do not use form FL-307 to ask to change the date of a domestic violence restraining order hearing. For more information, read How to Ask for a New Hearing Date (form DV-115-INFO).

5 What if I need to reschedule a hearing because the Request for Order or an order to show cause was not served on the other party?

You should complete and file with the court a written request to reschedule the hearing and a proposed order at least five court days before the hearing, unless you have a very good reason to submit them later.

Another option is to appear in court on the date of the hearing and ask the court to reschedule the hearing. In this case, the party is not required to file a written request but must complete and submit a proposed order to the court. Order on Request to Reschedule Hearing (form FL-309) must be used for this purpose.

6 What if I need to reschedule the hearing for a good reason after the Request for Order or an order to show cause was served?

- Complete a written request and a proposed order.
  You may use form FL-306 or FL-307, whichever form applies to your case, and must use Order on Request to Reschedule Hearing (form FL-309).
- Follow your court's local rules.
  To get a date for the court to consider your request to reschedule the hearing, find your court's local rules online at www.courts.ca.gov/3027.htm and follow them.

  Some courts will set a court hearing for the judge to consider the request to reschedule. Other courts do not have a hearing, but will make an order based on the papers submitted to the court clerk. Before you complete any forms, it is important that you know how your court handles requests to reschedule a hearing.
- Notify and serve the other party.
  The other party must be given notice of the request to reschedule the hearing and given a copy of the documents at the first reasonable opportunity before the court can consider the request. You may also include a blank Responsive Declaration to Request to Reschedule Hearing (form FL-310).
- Submit the written request and order to the court.
  You should complete and file with the court a written request to reschedule the hearing and a proposed order at least five court days before the hearing, unless you have a very good reason to submit them later.

  When you submit the request and order, you must also submit to the court proof that the party was notified and served with the documents. You may use Declaration Regarding Notice and Service of Request for Temporary Emergency (Ex Parte) Orders (form FL-303), a local court form, or a declaration that contains the same information as form FL-303.

- Follow your court's procedure for obtaining the court order on your written request.
  If for some reason, you do not receive a response to your request to reschedule from the court before the hearing, you should still attend the hearing, or the court may make a decision without you.
- Make an oral request on the date of the hearing.
  Another option is to appear in court on the date of the hearing and ask the court to reschedule the hearing. In this case, the party is not required to file a written request but must complete and submit a proposed order to the court. Order on Request to Reschedule Hearing (form FL-309) may be used for this purpose.

7 What do I do after the court makes the order?

You must have the other party served with the order and other documents. For example:

- Order to reschedule hearing (for example, form FL-309);
- A filed Request for Order (form FL-300) or other moving papers;
- Any temporary emergency (ex parte) orders; and
- Other papers that the court requires you to serve.

Prepare for your hearing. Find more information online at www.courts.ca.gov/1094.htm.

2.	California Lawyers Association, by the Executive Committee of the Family Law Section (FLEXCOM)	A	FLEXCOM agrees with this proposal.	No response required.
3.	Julie Camacho Court Manager Ventura Superior Court	NI	Agree with the proposed revisions, which will help to clarify the continuance process, with the following modifications: 1. FL-309 Order on Request to Rescheduled Hearing – recommend modifying Item number 9 to add an additional box stating "Documents listed in Item 10 to be served per code" - if the court delegates to the court clerk the authority to reschedule a hearing, it would be within the clerk's ministerial duties to check this box and would not require the clerk to enter dates that documents must be served by as this could appear to the public as orders beyond the clerk's authority. This would also make the process more efficient for Judicial Officers who have been writing this statement on the form each time it is presented.	The committee agrees with the commenter and recommends adding another option under item 9(b) to include the language, "as required by rule 5.92."

14.	Hon. Rebecca Wightman, Commissioner Superior Court of San Francisco, Dept. 416	N	DO NOT AGREE. These comments are not on behalf of any organization, but are from a judicial officer who has spent decades in family law dealing primarily with pro per litigants. When I first read this proposal, the first question that came to mind was: How did we get to this point – where what was originally supposed to address a few limited situations (the 2017 changes) has now grown to, in my view, a convoluted and confusing set of new forms and rules, that create an even greater workload on both the clerks and the bench, in a time when staffing and resources are still limited? This newest proposal, especially with regard to the situation where an RFO has already been served, is exacerbating the problems caused by the changes made in 2017. Combined, these changes – at least with regard to the situations where an RFO has already been served – have now created a new and unnecessary parallel system for attorneys and litigants to bring requests to reschedule to an area to what was previously an established ex parte process designed primarily for emergencies (including continuances), orders shortening time, and reissuances. What appears to have started out in 2017 as a well-meaning task to try to simplify processes and address the few limited situations where a continuance was statutorily allowed for a respondent once a certain type of request was	Following the revisions to form FL-306 in 2017, many courts reported that both attorneys and self-represented litigants were attempting to use the form for all requests to reschedule, including when the other party had already been served. Currently, if a party needs to request a rescheduling of a court date for good cause, after service has been completed, and there is no agreement reached with the other party, they would generally be required to complete and file a Request for Order (form FL-300). For self-represented litigants, filling out a multi-purpose form, such as the FL-300, simply for a request to reschedule is a very complicated, confusing, and cumbersome process. By separating out all requests to reschedule into a separate form set, the committee believes that the new proposed rules and forms will be a much more clear and simple process than the current alternatives available, especially with regard to self-represented litigants.

			served, has unfortunately morphed into another proposal that makes it even more confusing to navigate, and raises concerns on various levels -- procedurally, operationally, ethically and due-process wise. Sometimes, when one tries to address all of the various situations that may occur, the proposed solutions get harder to navigate and cause more work for everyone. One look no farther than the chart provided at the end of the report – where the "B" category (p.3 of 4 of chart) is difficult for me – trained in the law – to follow, let alone a pro per. The more rules and forms produced in this area, the more confusing it gets. Until the unfortunate change in 2017, the Ex Parte rules were intended for situations that occurred on a temporary emergency basis. Now, however, and with the proposed changes, essentially all manner of requests to continue for RFOs already served are pushed into a one-day notice time frame. I strongly urge that consideration be given to starting over, and only addressing the following situations when it comes to continuances (i.e. adhere to the process that existed even before the changes to the ex parte process started in 2017 but add the limited situation of any statutorily required continuance): (1) where RFO not served, (2) where parties agree to a continuance, (3) where a statutory right to a continuance is allowed, and (4) where there are	Based on the majority of comments received, both in previous years and the current comment period, the committee has recognized that there is a demonstrated need to have statewide uniform rules and forms to cover all requests to reschedule a hearing to address the various types of requests to reschedule that inevitably arise every day in the courtroom and at the clerks office.

			exigent, i.e. emergency circumstances. Once an RFO has been served and the hearing date set, then to the extent a court wishes to allow for other continuances by local rule (such as mediation has not been completed), then it should be up to the individual courts. Otherwise, once an RFO has been with a fixed hearing date has been set and served, a party should be filing a noticed motion, and if necessary, seek an order shortening time for hearing it if it is so important to move that set date. (1) RFO not served: this situation is easily addressed, and there used to be a wonderful reissuance form that worked quite well, and was used by many courts to provide a new hearing date (reissue a new date or "continue"), which new date was prominently displayed and which had to be attached to the front of the original RFO when being served. (And if I recall correctly, the problems first started when that form was revised to include an "other" box.) Perhaps this old form could be revived and modified to accommodate any RFO not served, i.e. with or without temporary emergency (ex parte) orders, and the court could decide whether to reissue with or without extending such orders. The draft Form FL-306 tries to do too much (making it confusing), and by combining its use for situations in which the RFO was not served, along with RFOs that were served but where no temporary emergency (ex parte) orders were made, and adding "other" boxes for free form information to be given to the court, you create a potential ethical problem (discussed below). I also do not understand why there are multiple boxes in #6, as the court should only be interested in the dates one is not available (and even those would not be binding), and the "after" box may encourage an unintended push to delay more than is needed. (2) Agreement to Continue: this situation is also easily addressed, however I would point out that the draft Form FL-308 makes and instructions infer it will get completed and filed by the court – i.e. the court will in fact make an order if it is submitted (and the chart says so too) – but that is not necessarily true if the court does not agree with the "agreement" of the parties – essentially a denial – in which case it becomes very important that this document NOT get accidently filed when not signed – as it can inadvertently cause problems on a court's case management system given its title. Limited Circumstances or Emergency Once an RFO has been served: Under the FL code, there are only a few instances where a continuance is allowed as a matter of right (JC staff is aware of these). And if a limited form is needed there, then create one for those few limited circumstances. Otherwise, at least in the	The committee is recommending the option for an "After" box in situations that are not necessarily dependent on party or attorney unavailability on certain dates (e.g. parties requesting more time for settlement or mediation). The FL-304-INFO form, How to Reschedule a Hearing in Family Court (formerly FL-306/FL-307/FL-308-INFO), in item 2, specifically instructs the parties to present the signed agreement to the court. However, in response to the commenter's concern, the committee has added an additional sentence stating that the agreement is not an order until signed by a judicial officer. The committee anticipates that local courts will process the FL-308 the same way all other proposed agreements are currently handled prior to being signed by a judicial officer, to avoid the situation that the commenter has described. The committee has recognized that there is a demonstrated need to have statewide uniform rules and forms to cover all requests to reschedule a hearing. Currently, courts routinely receive requests to reschedule up until the date of hearing, by attorneys and self-represented situations when the RFO has been served with a set date, it should stay set unless it is absolutely necessary (an emergency) to move it. To do otherwise raises various concerns addressed further below. If there is a category of cases, where courts find it helpful to have an optional form developed for use after an RFO has been served, such as those courts whose custody/visitation protocol is more fluid (e.g. orientation and mediation did not occur before the hearing date), which does not happen in all courts as their systems flow differently), perhaps just address that category, although I believe that really should be left to the individual courts – but please do not just open it up to general requests to reschedule after a firm date has been set (anyone who believes they have "good cause") as that just invites both attorneys and pro per litigants to use the forms more frequently in situations that are not warranted. To respond by saying the judicial officer can always simply deny the request, does not address the extra workload concerns, and other concerns noted below. CONCERNS Practical and Procedural concerns: One big reason it is important to keep the date set once an RFO is served, and not allow general requests to reschedule unless it is	litigants, and are already exercising their discretion to approve or deny these requests based on good cause. By providing more clear guidelines for filing the request to reschedule at least 5 court days prior to the hearing and providing designated forms that are used only for this purpose, the committee believes that this proposal will lead to a more predictable, understandable, and efficient process for the courts and the public. The committee has made the request to reschedule forms (FL-306/FL-307) optional to allow courts the flexibility to continue using any local forms and procedures that currently exist for requests to reschedule a hearing. 			absolutely necessary to move it is that as a practical matter, the other party (often times a pro per) has relied upon that date to arrange for coverage at and time off of work, child care, etc.. I hear repeatedly in my court that a person is in danger of losing their job if they have to take another day off. And if these new forms are allowed to be filed up to only five days before, or worse, up until the hearing date, there will likely be individuals who end up showing up anyway, only to be told the matter was continued. Once again, to allow the date to be moved for anything other than for exigent, emergency circumstances – for which there is/was an established ex parte process – interjects more work for everyone, and more confusion as to which forms, rules apply. To respond that a court can always deny the request, does not address this reliance issue. Operational and Workload concerns: The proposed system creates another layer of daily work for both the staff and the bench for more situations than was previously allowed under the pre-2017 system. It is more work for the clerks, who will now have to figure out if the litigant is using the correct form(s), track the forms, track timing and track down any opposition, track the bench officer to get it put under his/her nose, so to speak, and process the paperwork. In addition,	reschedule a hearing. 			there is a greater danger, with no hearing dates on the request forms submitted and served, coupled with the fact that some courts do not have an immediate turn around time for opening mail and getting it to the right place the same day (e.g. if someone sent response by fed-ex), for the opposition papers not to get to the appropriate clerk in time, and thus the court not having all the proper paperwork to review in a timely fashion. It is more work for the judicial officer, who may have already prepared a tentative ruling, and who now may be faced with reviewing information from a pro per that actually amounts to an ex parte communication (addressed further below under ethical concerns). And when the "good cause" is really non-existent, it intrudes upon the other bench work needing to get done. Since the rules were changed in 2017, I have seen an increase in the attempts by attorneys and pro pers to try to get their hearing dates moved – including one recently where the pro per (who filed the RFO, which was also served) now wanted to move the date because it conflicted with a lab class which they did not want to miss. I had another individual who had been served with an RFO and date certain, who wanted to continue the hearing date to an unspecified date in the future because there was an unrelated matter pending in another court and she did not want to come to my court until the other matter was resolved. I could go on…and on… and am saddened at the wasted time and paperwork that these requests cause since the rules were first changed in 2017. In addition, from a court perspective, there are many times where the court may wish to make an interim order before allowing a continuance, especially in a Title IV-D court, where often one is dealing with amounts coming out of a person's paycheck, which can be difficult to do on short notice, and requires more careful deliberation. It is more work for the FLFs/Self-Help Centers, who have to spend more time explaining which forms to use and examining (including looking up if the litigant failed to bring their filed RFO) the content of the served RFO to determine what types of temporary or emergency orders were made to figure out which forms to utilize. When it was just the prior ex parte process – again, before changes were made the first time around in 2017 – family law facilitators had a consistent way to explain the process and provide information to the litigant indicating it really needed to be an emergency if the RFO had already been served on the other party. As a practical matter, it is now going to be even harder in my view for a pro per to understand exactly what they need to do – both to initiate and respond, because there are so many	The committee has reviewed comments submitted from a Self-Help Center and several others from superior courts who agree that the proposal meets its stated purpose and would lead to greater consistency and reduced court hearings. 			variables and more rules and forms to sort through, as well as the fact that the actual paperwork to be served has no date on it whatsoever. E.g. New Rule 5.95(c)(1)(A)(ii) – where the RFO has already been served and someone wants to request the hearing be "re-scheduled" – tells the individual that they must first notify and serve the other party, and that "Notice…must be completed as required by rules 5.151 through 5.169." When you go to those rules 5.151(c) refers the individual back to 5.95 for the required documents, and 5.167(a) Method of Notice, states "Notice of appearance at a hearing to request emergency orders may be given [various ways]…" -- yet there is no "appearance at a hearing" when using the new forms, and no clear way for a responding litigant to really know what to do by what time. So, while FL-303 actually has a box with a date on it (which is pretty clear and what folks are used to looking at), ironically THAT document is not the one required to be served; instead a party may only receive the Request to Reschedule (FL 306 or FL 307), which has no dates, and a telephone message would have simply been left saying I'm going to submit my request to the court tomorrow. The new rules being proposed have so many sections and sub-sections and sub-provisions to

I would recommend a comprehensive review to simplify (back to a clearer version of what existed prior to the changes made in 2017). Ethical concerns: Please refer to CJEO Formal Opinion 2014-004 While I understand the local rule in question that was examined in CJEO Formal Opinion 2014-004 - JUDICIAL SCREENING OF EX PARTE APPLICATIONS FOR NON-DOMESTIC-VIOLENCE EMERGENCY FAMILY LAW ORDERS is different, the underpinning concept in the opinion regarding the dangers of information being presented on an ex parte basis – especially where a proposed form allows a litigant to put in any additional information even where the only reason is because the RFO wasn't served – apply here. Pro per litigants are notorious for wanting to "add" information about how bad the other parent is behaving, which would be wholly inappropriate for a judicial officer to review where the RFO has not been served, for example. In addition, the changes in the rules – beginning with the 2017 changes and continuing with the proposed changes – have created a system for the parties to essentially "duke it out" on extremely short notice anytime there is no agreement to reschedule once an RFO has	Based on the committee's recommendations, any request for rescheduling a hearing must be noticed and served on the other party, unless the requirement is waived by the court for good cause, consistent with existing ex parte rules 5.151 through 5.169. Any additional information included in an "other" box on a form that a requesting party submits to the court therefore, must be provided to the other party before the court decides on the request. Accordingly, the committee does not believe that the proposed forms provide any greater opportunity or encouragement for parties to submit ex parte communication to the court, without first completing notice and service to the other party.

			been served – and the forms allows parties to write in all kinds of information (in "other" boxes) for any other reasons beyond emergency reasons, which also invites potential ethical issues and due-process issue (the latter being that the responding party is given 24 hours to potentially address all kinds of information put into a request). If the rules and forms not limited and simplified, as well as separated out as noted above, e.g. one category for no timely service (where no extraneous information is being invited) and for true emergencies, the risk is much greater for problems to arise. Due-process concerns By creating forms that do not have specific hearing dates on them indicating exactly when a party will be presenting a request to reschedule – the way ex parte emergency requests were working before the changes were made in 2017 (and where, for example pre-2017 an RFO request for continuance would be set on shortened time, and not necessarily decided on the spot) – I remain concerned that the notice given is too vague for the other side in these situations, as well as the time to adequately respond too short. Telling the party to read the INFO instructions (multiple pages) is only going to create more confusion, as reading those is like reading the instructions to find one's way	The committee was intent on not creating separate notice and service requirements for requests to reschedule a hearing by aligning the process with existing rules (both statewide and local), and procedures used in courts for all family law ex parte requests contained in rules 5.151 through 5.169. In a review of local rules across the state, the committee noted that the process courts use to decide ex parte requests to reschedule a hearing vary considerably. Once proof of notice and service of the request to reschedule is submitted, some courts set the issue for hearing and others make a decision based on the pleadings alone. To out of a maze. When an RFO has been served, the hearing date has been one that the responding party has been operating under. The proposed rule does not require the filing of the form FL-306 or FL-307- rather the party must "file or submit" it. If it is merely submitted and served without any date on it (hearing date or filing date), how long does a responding party actually have to submit a response before the court reviews/rules on it? Just looking at it from the pro per litigant perspective (as I do know it well from the court side) I honestly got dizzy trying to find the answer – and to simply refer one to the INFO page (e.g. such as what is stated on proposed FL-310, which tells litigants to check the local rules is adding a layer of research required by a responding party that was not there previously. And again, on such a short time frame, where you are creating a system for litigants to simply ask to re-schedule – for what they think is a good reason, but which is not an emergency, you are inviting unnecessary problems with people showing up (only to find out the matter was continued) or not showing up either to the original hearing date and any continued hearing date (because could not take more time off of work, for example). In sum, I believe the expansion of the number of forms and the creation of more rules and	account for these local differences and allow as much flexibility at the superior court level as possible, the committee decided that using existing ex parte rules would require the least amount of change to court operations, procedures, and business processes. To minimize confusion about the proper procedure to use, the committee has recommended instructions on the notice and service requirements in numerous places throughout the proposed rules and forms. Proposed rule 5.95 requires that notice and service of a request to reschedule, when service has been completed, must follow ex parte rules 5.151 through 5.169. In addition to the instruction included in the INFO sheet, as noted by the commenter, the committee has also included specific instructions on notice and service requirements in forms FL-306 and FL-307, under the "Special Procedures May Apply" section so that attorneys and especially, self-represented parties, are more likely to review and understand the correct procedures to follow.

			instructions over the past two cycles of rule and forms changes in this area has exacerbated what has always been a balancing act of stability in hearing dates and the need to address emergencies. The process has become more cumbersome and confusing, and quite frankly, needs to be drastically simplified to addressing only those areas noted above. I was considering trying to take the time to address the specific questions and the items form by form, as well as address the rules and instructions on a more particular level, but I ultimately felt that because this area has already become way too confusing, it would take too much time and I honestly do not think small changes to a line or box would make the process any clearer. I also did not want to indicate in any way that adoption of these additional rules and forms are appropriate. Honestly, the process really needs to be dialed back so that it is not so confusing. Thank you for the opportunity to comment. Rebecca Wightman, Commissioner - San Francisco Superior Court

Commenter	Comment	Committee Response
California Department of Child Support Services By: Kristen Donadee Chief Counsel and Deputy Director	The Department does not oppose replacing references to "continue" with references to "reschedule" throughout the rules. The word "reschedule" is likely to be more widely understood among self-represented litigants than the word "continue." Nonetheless, with respect to the proposed changes to Rule 5.2(b)(11), the Department believes defining the word that is likely known to self-represented litigants—"reschedule"—using terms that are potentially unfamiliar—"'continue the hearing' under the Family Code"—would have an effect opposite to that which is intended. Specifically, defining the familiar using unfamiliar terms may cause self-represented litigants to question whether "reschedule" is a term of art that has a special meaning under the Family Code. This, in turn, may create the confusion the changes to Rule 5.2 intend to alleviate. As such, the Department respectfully requests that the Judicial Council of California (JCC) consider adding language to clarify that "reschedule" and "continue" simply mean to move the hearing to another date and or time.	The committee agrees with the commenter and recommends additional language in rule 5.2(b)(11) further defining the meaning of "reschedule" and "continue."

Rule 5.94
Commenter	Comment	Committee Response
California Department of Child Support Services By: Kristen Donadee Chief Counsel and Deputy Director	The proposed amendment to Rule 5.94 would make this section of the rules easier to navigate from a subject matter perspective by removing the comprehensive set of requirements applicable to rescheduling hearings from 5.94(f) and making it a standalone rule. Also, the proposed amendment to the title of Rule 5.94 is appropriate as it more accurately reflects the topics covered by the rule in light of the addition of Rule 5.95. In all, the Department does not oppose this change.	No response required.

Julie Camacho Court Manager Ventura Superior Court	➢ The opening paragraph in Rule 5.95(a) should end with the language in Option 1. (There is no reference in Rule 5.92 to deadline for rescheduling the hearing.) ➢ Yes, Rule 5.95(c)(1)(A)(iv) should maintain the language that is in the current rule at 5.94(f)(5)(A)(i), and yes, It has been extremely helpful to have a deadline for submitting the written request so that litigants submit these requests with enough time for the court receive, rule on and process the request prior to the date of the hearing.	The committee has revised the opening paragraph to make clear that the deadline described pertains to service of the initial Request for Order, order to show cause or other moving paper and not the Request to Reschedule and now ends with the language in Option 1. In response to a majority of commenters, the committee has included language in the proposed rules and forms stating that the Request to Reschedule should be submitted at least 5 court days before the hearing date.

Candice Garcia-Rodrgio Superior Court of Riverside	CRC 5.95 (c) as it currently reads has led to abuse by the attorneys. Many attorneys do not appear on the day of the hearing. Instead, the attorney will send their client or another person to request to continue the hearing on the same date as the hearing without obtaining a stipulation from the other side (or without notifying the other side). The other side will often want to proceed with the hearing, but the requesting attorney may or may not be present. Unless there is an emergency, the rule should require that a Request to Reschedule be filed no later than 5 court days (or even 5 calendar days) prior to the hearing date so the opposing party has an opportunity to object and/or meet and confer prior to the hearing. The attorneys who appear the day of the hearing to request to reschedule (or do not appear, but send someone with the request or fax it), cause a further a delay in the calendar of an already overburdened family law calendar. Additionally, the rule needs to be made clear that it applies to the party and/or his/her attorney. Attorneys abuse this request procedure by sending their clients to make an oral request, rather than appearing on the date of the hearing to show good cause for a continuance. In other words, the attorney will not appear the date of the hearing, but send their client instead to request to reschedule, knowing the judicial officer will be ethically bound to reschedule or wait to track down the attorney before making any orders. Finally, Rule 5.95 does not clearly specify that if the court grants the request to continue that the requesting party must service notice of the continued hearing date. I would suggest adding that into the new rule. The old rule 5.94 contained such language.	The committee understands and appreciates the commenter's concerns regarding oral requests to reschedule being made at the hearing. However, for consistency, the committee intended all requests to reschedule made orally at a hearing to be permissible, although not preferable. For temporary emergency orders involving property restraint and other enumerated restraining orders, under Family Code section 245, this option is statutorily mandated. In any case, the request to reschedule must still be based on a showing of good cause and will be subject to the exercise of judicial discretion. The committee has addressed notice and service requirements of the rescheduled hearing in the Order on Request to Reschedule Hearing (form FL-309), items 9 and 10 and FL-304-INFO sheet (formerly FL-306/FL-307/FL-308-INFO). The committee believes that placing service instructions on the forms, rather than in the rule, increases the likelihood that self-represented litigants will see and better understand what is required.

(a)(2)(B) The Department supports the language in proposed new Rule 5.95(a)(2)(B) that would allow courts to delegate to clerks the authority to reschedule a hearing under the limited circumstances provided in the rule. As noted in the proposal, the change would promote judicial efficiencies by eliminating the need for judicial officers to review and sign each request, especially since the requests anticipated by this change do not involve a change to the temporary emergency (ex parte) orders issued with the FL-300. Rule 5.95, subd. (a)(3)(B) This subdivision provides that the subject papers "must be served on the other party in the case[.]" However, the Department notes that it does not identify who—the requesting party or the court—is responsible for such service. This omission may create confusion among self-represented litigants who mistakenly believe the court would be serving the papers following its order. Therefore, the Department respectfully requests that the JCC consider amending proposed new Rule 5.95(a)(3)(B) to expressly reflect that the requesting party is responsible for service of the appropriate documents if the court reschedules the hearing. Not only would this alleviate the afore-mentioned confusion, but it would bring the terms of Rule 5.95(a)(3)(B) in line with those of Rule 5.95(a)(3)(C). Rule 5.95, subd.(c)(1)(A)(iv) The Department agrees with the proposed language and deadline for either party to submit a request to reschedule the hearing. Including bright-lined guidance, even if only intended as a best practice, promotes clarity for all parties concerned and would be especially beneficial to self-represented litigants.	Request to Reschedule and now ends with the language in Option 1. No response required. The committee agrees with the commenter and has added additional language to renumbered subdivision (b)(3)(B) to clarify that the requesting party is responsible for service. Harriett Buhai Center for Family Law by: Rebecca L.	Rule 5.95(a)(2)(B) should make it clear that while the court may delegate the authority to reschedule the hearing to a court clerk, the clerk does not have the authority to deny a request to reschedule the hearing. It would be inappropriate for clerks to deny a litigant's request to continue a hearing where the litigant did not fall within the bounds	Proposed rule 5.95 clearly only allows courts to delegate authority to clerks if the request to reschedule is to serve the other party and does not request any changes to temporary emergency

Orange County Bar Association By: Deirdre Kelly, President	The proposed change to Rule 5.95 (a) contains two options, first option is "the other party must ask the court to reschedule the hearing date." The second option sets forth the requirement that the party must ask the court to reschedule the hearing date by the deadline described in rule 5.92 or as ordered by the court. Rule 5.92 sets forth the procedural requirements for filing an RFO and refers to CCP 1005 for service requirements. Many litigants in family law are self-represented. The inclusion of 5.92 may cause more confusion to self-represented individuals. The first option sets forth that the party must ask the court to reschedule the hearing date. The first option will be less confusing for self-represented individuals and should be used. Rule 5.95 (c): The form should contain the language that the request to continue should be no later than five court days before the hearing date. This will provide a guideline for attorneys and self-represented individuals and be helpful to the clerks if the suggested guideline is followed. The proposal appropriately addresses the stated purpose, except that the revised Rule 5.94 should expressly state "court" days for when notice of the request for continuance should be given to avoid confusion about when the notice for the continuance should be requested.	The committee has revised the opening paragraph to make clear that the deadline described pertains to service of the initial Request for Order, order to show cause or other moving paper and not the Request to Reschedule and now ends with the language in Option 1.

Commenter	Comment	Committee Response
California Department of Child Support Services By: Kristen Donadee Chief Counsel and Deputy Director	The Department supports replacing references to "continuing" with "rescheduling" as provided in the proposed change. The latter term is more widely used and thus less likely to be misunderstood, especially by self-represented litigants. Similarly, the Department supports directing the parties to proposed new Rule 5.95 in order to find the rules applicable to the subject request. All in all, the changes to Rule 5.151 achieve the intended result of the proposal.	No response required.
Superior Court of San Diego by: Mike Roddy Executive Officer	Rule 5.151(b)(3)(C): The rule references rescheduling a trial but Form FL-303 does not list trial as something to reschedule.	The committee considered the commenter's suggestion, but decided to not make any changes to form FL-303 to add "trial" at this time.

California Department of Child Support Services By: Kristen Donadee Chief Counsel and Deputy Director	The Department agrees with the proposed changes to this rule. Expressly articulating the various means by which a party can provide notice "in writing" promotes clarity, especially when the notion may not be intuitive to some litigants.	No response required.
Superior Court of San Diego by: Mike Roddy Executive Officer	Rule 5.165: Propose that "if permitted" be added in parentheses following electronic means.	The committee agrees with the commenter and has added "(if permitted)" to rule 5.165.

	The proposal to clarify "in writing" seems beneficial for the rule and adding "electronic means" seems appropriate. Consider adding a cross-reference to what "electronic service" means as a self-represented litigant may think that means by social media or text.

The proposal did not recommend making the 5 court day timeline mandatory because the Family Code allows requests to reschedule for cases involving certain emergency orders (e.g. property restraint) to be made orally at a hearing. Also, generally, a request to reschedule can be requested for "good cause" at any time and granted or denied, in the court's discretion.

While the distinction between "must" and "should" is well understood by attorneys, a pro per litigant may lump these categories together and may deem their action barred by item 10 even if good cause exists for filing the request to continue less than 5 court days before the hearing date. The association with items 8 and 9 is strengthened by the items falling under the same heading. In the event this language is included, it should be visually separated from items 8 and 9 and/ or should include language further qualifying that item 10 is best practice, not an absolute requirement.	The committee has opted to include guidance in the proposed rule and forms, to file a request to reschedule at least 5 court days before the hearing. Executive Summary

The Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee proposes amending California Rules of Court, rule 5.275, to require guideline child support calculators to display the low-income adjustment range on the first page of the calculator results printout, if applicable per Family Code section 4055(b)(7), to improve consistency in child support calculations for low-income obligors, and to delete the requirement to submit an application form and fee for certification to better align with current practice for certifying guideline calculators.

Recommendation

The Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee recommends that the Judicial Council, effective January 1, 2020, amend California Rules of Court:

1. Rule 5.275(b), to add a provision requiring the printout of the calculation results to display the range of the low-income adjustment as permitted by Family Code section 4055(b)(7) on the first page of the results, if the low-income adjustment applies; and

2. Rule 5.275(i), to remove the requirement for guideline software developers to submit an application form supplied by the Judicial Council and a fee for certification of the software.

Relevant Previous Council Action

Rule 5.275 was adopted by the Judicial Council as rule 1258, effective December 1, 1993. It was amended, effective January 1, 2000, to add a subsection clarifying that all certified support calculators are acceptable in superior courts to avoid giving preference to a particular software. It was further amended to mandate the use of the California Department of Child Support Services calculator for all title IV-D child support proceedings, effective January 1, 2009. Most recently, the council amended rule 5.275, effective January 1, 2016, to add a provision defining software.

Analysis/Rationale

Inconsistent application of the low-income adjustment

Family Code section 4055(b)(7) states that there is a rebuttable presumption that obligors with a net monthly income of less than $1,500 (adjusted annually for cost-of-living increases) are entitled to a low-income adjustment to reduce their child support obligation. Under Family Code section 4055(c), the low-income adjustment is displayed on guideline child support software programs as a range, with the high end of the range being the unadjusted guideline support amount and the low end being the lowest amount of support allowed under Family Code section 4055(b)(7).

The Review of Statewide Uniform Child Support Guideline 2017 observed, based on the review of case files and discussions with focus group participants, that the application of the low-income adjustment is inconsistent among judicial officers and that uniformity in how the low-income adjustment range is displayed on guideline child support calculators could lead to more consistency in its application. Family Code section 4055(c) does not specify how the range is to be displayed. Consequently, because the six currently approved guideline child support software programs vary in how each displays the low-income adjustment range, the range may be more apparent on some programs than on others, which may be a cause of the inconsistent application of the low-income adjustment. Requiring all printouts of guideline calculator results to display the low-income adjustment range on the first page should serve to remedy this problem. Because some calculators offer multiple types of reports to display the calculator results, the proposed rule would mandate that the low-income adjustment range be displayed only on the first page of the report that shows the user inputs. This type of report generally is the most common type used to show the guideline child support amount for court proceedings.

Under Family Code section 3830, the council has the authority to mandate how the low-income adjustment is displayed. The statute requires courts to use only guideline child support software that "conforms to rules of court adopted by the Judicial Council prescribing standards for the software." These standards are established by rule 5.275. Since the rule's adoption in December 1993, the council each year has certified guideline child support software that meets the standards. Under rule 5.275(c), the certifications last for one year, and then the software must be recertified to continue to be approved for court use. Amending rule 5.275 to standardize how the low-income adjustment range is displayed will bring about greater uniformity among the support calculators, thereby promoting more consistent application of the low-income adjustment by judicial officers.

Provision regarding application form and fee not aligned with current practice

Additionally, rule 5.275(i) requires that software developers complete and submit an application form supplied by the Judicial Council, along with an application fee of $250, to be certified. For the past several years, the Judicial Council's AB 1058 Program has been responsible for the certification of software. In practice, developers wishing to have their guideline child support software certified have communicated directly with AB 1058 Program staff rather than through an application form. Moreover, because the AB 1058 Program is federally funded, fees that are collected have to be forwarded to the federal government rather than used to offset the costs of certifying the software. As such, the AB 1058 Program has returned all application fees. To align with current practice, the committee proposes amending subdivision (i) to remove the requirement to submit an application form and fee to the Judicial Council to be certified and to replace it with a requirement that any person seeking certification of software must apply in writing to the Judicial Council, but not on any specified form.

Policy implications

Because these recommendations improve litigants' access to appropriate child support orders based on a litigant's individual economic circumstances, they support Goal I, Access, Fairness, and Diversity, of the council's Strategic Plan for California's Judicial Branch.

Comments

This proposal circulated for comment as part of the spring 2019 invitation-to-comment cycle, from April 12 to June 10, 2019, to the standard mailing list for family and juvenile law proposals. Included on the list were appellate presiding justices, appellate court administrators, trial court presiding judges, trial court executive officers, judges, court administrators and clerks, attorneys, family law facilitators and self-help center staff, legal services attorneys, social workers, probation officers, Court Appointed Special Advocate programs, and other juvenile and family law professionals. The proposal also went to the Department of Child Support Services, the chairs of the Child Support Directors Association of California's Legal Practices Committee and Judicial Council Forms Subcommittee, and child support commissioners.

Seven organizations provided comment: six agreed with the proposal and one did not indicate a position but provided comments. A chart with the full text of the comments received and the committee's responses is attached at pages 6–10. Commenters agreed that the proposal would lead to greater uniformity in the application of the low-income adjustment. One commenter added that the proposal would benefit self-represented litigants.

Alternatives considered

The committee considered making no changes to rule 5.275. Adding a provision requiring the low-income adjustment range to be displayed on the first page of the results printout will require some developers to make programmatic changes to their software. If making these changes is overly burdensome, developers could stop providing their product to California. However, none of the current guideline calculator software developers expressed any concerns with adjusting their programs to display the low-income adjustment range on the first page of the printout, and in fact one developer, the California Department of Child Support Services, submitted a comment in support of the proposal. As such, the committee determined that adding this requirement to rule 5.275 was unlikely to be burdensome to the developers and should serve to increase consistency in the application of the low-income adjustment.

The committee also considered not changing subdivision (i) of the rule, which requires developers to submit an application form and $250 fee to have their software certified. Given the challenges for a federally funded program to accept a fee and given the program's current practice of not using a specific application form, the committee opted to propose amending the subdivision to align with current practice.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

The committee anticipates that this proposal will neither result in any costs to the branch, nor any requirements for implementation—or fiscal or operational impacts on the courts.

California Department of Child Support Services by Selis Koker, Attorney III	A	The department supports the Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee's proposal to amend California Rules of Court, rule 5.275, to require guideline child support calculators to display the low-income adjustment range on the first page of the calculator results printout. The low-income adjustment range is already displayed on the first page of the department's guideline calculator "Calculation Results Summary" page when the low-income adjustment is applicable based on the support obligor's net income under Family Code section 4055(b)(7). We believe requiring all support calculators to display the low-income range when applicable will help the courts uniformly apply the low-income adjustment. Executive Summary

The Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee proposes amending the rule governing the circumstances under which a judge may hear a title IV-D matter when exceptional circumstances prevent a child support commissioner from doing so. By removing the requirement that a judge must make an "interim" order with a follow-up hearing set in front of a commissioner, costs currently incurred by the courts, parties, and local child support agencies resulting from the second hearing would be eliminated.

Recommendation

The Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee recommends that the Judicial Council, effective January 1, 2020, amend California Rules of Court, rule 5.305(b) to more clearly define the roles of the judge and the court at the hearing, as authorized in Family Code sections 4521(a), 4252(b)(7).

Relevant Previous Council Action

The Judicial Council adopted California Rules of Court, rule 1280.1[1], effective July 1, 1997, to define the exceptional circumstances under which a judge may hear a title IV-D matter when a child support commissioner is unable to do so. Minor technical and formatting amendments were made to the rule effective January 1, 2003, and January 1, 2007.

Analysis/Rationale

While the Family Code allows for a judge to hear a title IV-D matter, only when a child support commissioner is unavailable due to "exceptional circumstances," defining what constitutes "exceptional circumstances" was left to the Judicial Council. (Fam. Code, §§ 4251(a), 4252(b)(7).) (See Link A.)

In addition to defining "exceptional circumstances," the rule also states in the subdivision entitled "Duty of judge hearing matter" that a judge "must make an interim order and refer the matter to the commissioner for further proceedings." (Cal. Rules of Court, rule 5.305(b).) This provision has been interpreted inconsistently statewide. In some courts, the judge's order is treated as a temporary order and the motion is subsequently calendared to be heard by a title IV-D child support commissioner when available. In other courts, the order is treated as final, and only later motions are calendared for hearing by the title IV-D child support commissioner.

Moreover, interpreting the rule as requiring the judge to only make an interim order and requiring referral to the title IV-D child support commissioner for further action places the subordinate judicial officer in the position of reviewing a judge's order and unnecessarily incurs additional costs by the courts, parties, and local child support agency. Finally, Family Code section 4251(a) provides that a judge may hear a title IV-D matter only if a child support commissioner is unavailable "due to exceptional circumstances." However, nothing in the statute requires that the judge only make an interim order or that a commissioner review that order at a follow-up hearing.

The committee therefore recommends amending rule 5.305(b) to clarify that the judge has the discretion to make a substantive order or to instead make an interim order and refer the matter back to the commissioner for further proceedings by deleting the term "must" and instead state the judge "may make an order or may make an interim order and refer the matter to the commissioner…when appropriate." In addition, the committee recommends that the rule be amended to add a sentence stating "any future proceedings" must be heard by a child support commissioner, so long as the local child support agency remains a party to the case. The full text of the amended rule is attached at page 5.

Policy implications

By removing the requirement that the judge must make an "interim" order with a follow-up hearing then set in front of a commissioner, costs currently incurred by the courts, parties, and local child support agency resulting from the second hearing would be eliminated. The requirement of setting a second hearing is especially burdensome for self-represented litigants, who make up the vast majority of case participants in title IV-D matters, and often must take time off from work, arrange for childcare, and pay for transportation or parking to attend such a court hearing.

Comments

This proposal circulated for comment as part of the spring 2019 invitation-to-comment cycle, from April 12 to June 10, 2019, to the standard mailing list for family and juvenile law proposals. Included on the list were appellate presiding justices, appellate court administrators, trial court presiding judges, trial court executive officers, judges, court administrators and clerks, attorneys, family law facilitators and self-help center staff, legal services attorneys, social workers, and other family law professionals. The proposal also went to the Department of Child Support Services, the Child Support Directors Association of California's Legal Practices Committee chair, and child support commissioners.

Eleven organizations and individuals provided comment: six agreed with the proposal, four agreed with the proposal if modified, and one did not agree with the proposal. A chart with the full text of the comments received and the committee's responses is attached at pages 6–16.

Included in the invitation-to-comment was the following question "[s]hould the proposed rule include a provision that states a judge has the discretion to make a temporary order and continue the matter to be heard by a commissioner?" Two commentators answered "no" and five commentators answered "yes" to this question or offered other comments that would support this position. In support of the "yes" position, one commentator stated that they believed "the judge should have discretion to make temporary orders." This sentiment was echoed by three other commentators. The committee considered these comments, recommends that the rule be further amended to include this provision, and has made this change.

Alternatives considered

Amendments to rule 5.305 are needed to ensure uniformity statewide regarding the authority of judges to hear title IV-D motions when the child support commissioner is unavailable and to eliminate the need for a second court hearing. The committee considered either taking no action at this time or circulating the rule to request specific comment on the proposed changes. The committee decided to recommend circulation of the proposal to obtain suggestions for alternative language and give courts notice regarding this change in court operations and procedures.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

The committee anticipates that this proposal will result in some initial costs to the courts to train judicial officers and court staff regarding the amended rule. However, the committee expects that the changes will reduce costs in the long term for the courts, parties, and local child support agencies, by simplifying procedures and reducing the number of court hearings on calendar.

Rule 5.305 of the California Rules of Court is amended, effective January 1, 2020, to read:

Rule 5.305. Hearing of matters by a judge under Family Code sections 4251(a) and 4252(b)(7)

(a) Exceptional circumstances

The exceptional circumstances under which a judge may hear a title IV-D support action include:

(1) The failure of the judge to hear the action would result in significant prejudice or delay to a party including added cost or loss of work time;

(2) Transferring the matter to a commissioner would result in undue consumption of court time;

(3) Physical impossibility or difficulty due to the commissioner being geographically separate from the judge presently hearing the matter;

(4) The absence of the commissioner from the county due to illness, disability, death, or vacation; and

(5) The absence of the commissioner from the county due to service in another county and the difficulty of travel to the county in which the matter is pending.

(b) Duty of judge hearing matter

A judge hearing a title IV-D support action under this rule and Family Code sections 4251(a) and 4252(b)(7) ~~must~~ may make an order or may make an interim order and refer the matter to the commissioner for further proceedings when appropriate. As long as a local child support agency is a party to the action, any future proceedings must be heard by a commissioner, unless the commissioner is unavailable because of exceptional circumstances.

(c) Discretion of the court

Notwithstanding (a) and (b) of this rule, a judge may, in the interests of justice, transfer a case to a commissioner for hearing.

1.	California Department of Child Support Services by Lucila Ledesma, Attorney	A	The California Department of Child Support Services wishes to provide the following comments in support of the proposed amendment to California Rules of Court, rule 5.305(b). Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose? Yes, the proposal creates efficiencies for all parties involved by allowing the judge hearing the matter to make a judgment that does not require review and ratification by a IV-D commissioner and therefore eliminates the need for a second hearing on the same issue. Should the proposed rule include a provision that states a judge has the discretion to make a temporary order and continue the matter to be heard by a commissioner? No, this would essentially negate the proposed change in some cases. It could also have the effect of causing a commissioner, who is a temporary judge, to overrule the actions of a permanent judge. Any matter that a commissioner can definitively decide, a judge can definitively decide.	No response required. The committee discussed if the proposed rule should include a provision that states a judge maintains the discretion to make a temporary order and continue the matter to be heard by a commissioner when appropriate and recommends to include such a provision into the revisions that it is recommending for adoption.

2.	Orange County Bar Association by Deirdre Kelly, President	AM	Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose? The proposal appropriately addresses the stated purpose. However, there is likely to be issues with the undefined term "exceptional circumstances." Should the proposed rule include a provision that states a judge has the discretion to make a temporary order and continue the matter to be heard by a commissioner? The current state of the law regarding IF there can be a "temporary" support order is that our statutes do not provide for such an order. IRMO Goodman& Gruen (2011) 191 Cal.App.4th 627 holds for the proposition that court orders cannot be modified until/unless a party files a motion, and then retroactivity can only be to the filing date of that motion. The amendment to the Rule of Court regarding "temporary orders" creates a certain amount of confusion unless the Family Code is changed. 10	Hon. Rebecca Wightman, Superior Court of San Francisco County	AM	AGREE ONLY IF MODIFIED - I do not disagree generally with the need to modify the language in the existing rule for the reasons noted in the proposal, but the current proposed changes in the rule now fail to address at an important function the original language provided: to wit, to prevent incorrect orders from being made by a judicial officer, i.e. judge, who is inexperienced in the unique aspects of AB1058 proceedings. Further, the proposed directive language which now requires a judge to make an order, without more, could be misconstrued that it must be a substantive order. By providing options, and adding clarifying language, it can help alleviate the concerns noted. There are many laws and aspects of AB1058 proceedings which are unfamiliar	The committee discussed if the proposed rule should include a provision that states a judge maintains the discretion to make a temporary order and continue the matter to be heard by a commissioner when appropriate and recommends to include such a provision into the revisions that it is recommending for adoption.

			to a judge, which can result in inadvertent incorrect orders being made. Such unfamiliarity can encompass jurisdictional matters (e.g. failing to recognize an original out of state registration or UIFSA matter as being limited in purpose, so no jurisdiction to modify), or involve different rules applicable in IV-D proceedings (e.g. seek work orders cannot be made against a party receiving cash public assistance), or simply making orders that are difficult to enforce (e.g. issuing off-sets to child support for variable monthly add-on expenses paid by the other parent). These are just a few of the many more situations and examples that exist. While the local child support agency may be able to point out some of these issues, the local agency often misses issues themselves, particularly the jurisdictional ones, and because they are a party to the case, it puts them in the awkward situation of trying to tell the judge what they can and cannot do. An alternative suggestion to address both the reasons noted in the proposal, as well as the problems that can occur when there is no direction whatsoever other than stating the obvious of "make an order" would be to keep the interim language but simply change the word "must" to "may" in 5.305(b), as well as clarifying that the judge can also issue an order and in either case reserve jurisdiction for a limited period of time (which would allow the parties or the court on its own to correct any problematic orders). (b) A judge hearing a title IV-D support action under this rule and Family Code sections 4251(a) and 4252(b)(7) must may make an interim order and refer the matter to the commissioner for further proceedings, or issue an order and reserve jurisdiction for a limited or reasonable period of time as appropriate. As long as a local child support agency is a party to the action, any future proceedings must be heard by a commissioner, unless the commissioner is unavailable because of exceptional circumstances. I have decades of AB1058 experience and have discussed this issue with many other AB1058 colleagues over the years. I am certain I am not alone when I say that often times after someone has covered a calendar where they do not have the experience in Title IV-D proceeding, the orders emanating from that calendar are less than ideal and have caused problems – which could no longer be easily fixed if the proposed rule is not modified. The exact language or sequence of the suggested re-wording is not as important as addressing the concerns

11	Child Support Directors Association of California by Ronald Ladage, Chair, CSDA Judicial Council Forms Committee, Director/Chief Attorney, El Dorado County DCSS	AM	The Committee generally agrees with this proposal. We believe the proposal appropriately addresses its stated purpose; however, the Committee recommends modifying the Rule to allow for more judicial discretion as follows: Rule 5.305: A judge hearing a title IV-D support action under this rule and Family Code sections 4251 (a) and 4252(b)(7) must make either temporary or final orders. As long as a local child support agency is a party to the action, any future proceedings must be heard by a commissioner, unless the commissioner is unavailable because of exceptional circumstances, or the court finds that in the interests of judicial economy, the continued proceedings regarding the temporary order(s) should be heard by the same judge. The Committee believes that the judge should have discretion to make temporary orders along with the discretion to hear the continued matter in the interests of judicial economy until final orders are made. Thank you for the opportunity to provide input, express our ideas, experiences and concerns with respect to the proposed rules and form changes. Executive Summary

The Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee recommends that the Judicial Council adopt a new Judicial Council form and revise two other Judicial Council forms for registration of support orders. These changes are required to make the forms suitable for use by all parties to the action and to correct inadvertent omissions.

Recommendation

The Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee recommends that the Judicial Council, effective January 1, 2020:

1. Adopt Request for Hearing Regarding Registration of California Support Order (form FL-445); and

2. Revise Notice of Registration of Out-of-State Support Order (form FL-570) and Request for Hearing Regarding Registration of Support Order (form FL-575).

The new and revised forms are attached at pages 7–14.

Relevant Previous Council Action

The council adopted forms 1285.88 and 1285.90[1], effective January 1, 1999. The council revised both forms, effective January 1, 2017, to comply with modifications that were made to federal forms by the Office of Child Support Enforcement (OCSE) and due to modifications and renumbering of the Uniform Interstate Family Support Act.

Analysis/Rationale

The committee proposes the council adopt form FL-445 to request a hearing regarding the registration of a California support order. Additionally, the committee proposes the council revise forms FL-570 and FL-575 to replace references to federal child support forms with references that describe both the relevant federal forms or paperwork submitted by an individual and make other technical changes, and revise form FL-575 so that it may only be used to request a hearing regarding the registration of an out-of-state support order.

Separate forms to contest registration of California or out-of-state support orders
If a support order is entered in one jurisdiction and one or both parents move to a different jurisdiction, the support order can be registered for enforcement purposes in the new jurisdiction of the support obligor. Consequently, it is common practice for support orders from other counties in California, other states within the U.S., or even from foreign countries to be registered in California courts.

California support orders can be registered (from one county to another county) by a local child support agency (LCSA) or an individual party. (Fam. Code, §§ 5601, 5602; see Link A) If the named obligor wishes to contest the registration of the support order, currently form FL-575 must be filed with the court. This form was originally created to contest either the registration of a California support or the registration of an out-of-state support order. Consequently, the current form contains defenses to both types of registration listed on the same form: item 2a applies only to California orders, items 2b–2d and 2g apply only to out-of-state orders, and items 2e and 2f apply to both types of orders. However, while the grounds for contesting each type of registration are similar, they are not identical.

Family Code section 5603(a) states that the defenses available to contest the registration of a California support order "shall be limited strictly to the identity of the obligor, the validity of the underlying … order, or the accuracy … of the amount of support remaining unpaid unless the amount has been previously established by a judgment or order." Additionally, if the underlying support order has been appealed, the court must stay enforcement until the appeal process has concluded, if the obligor has provided security for payment of the ordered support. (Fam. Code, § 5603(b).) These limited defenses to the registration of a California support order are listed on the new proposed form FL-445, which also includes instructions regarding filing and service specific to contesting this type of registration.

[1] Effective January 1, 2003, these forms were renumbered to FL-570 and FL-575 respectively.

Additionally, the committee proposes revising form FL-575 to limit its use to contesting the registration of out-of-state orders and to revise the form title accordingly. Item 2a on form FL-575, which states, "I am not the Obligor named in the Letter of Transmittal Requesting Registration," has been removed, as this defense is only applicable to contest the registration of a California support order. A new defense was added as it was not previously included on the form, "there is another support order that is the controlling (correct) order." (Fam. Code, § 5700.607.) Finally, minor technical changes are proposed to the attached information sheet, such as replacing "attorney" with the more plain language "lawyer" and replacing the term "notice or statement of registration" with "notice of registration." This is because "statement of registration" refers to forms FL-440 and FL-650, which are only used to register a California support order, not an out-of-state order.

Replacing references to federal forms on forms FL-570 and FL-575

The framework for registering out-of-state support orders is set forth in the Uniform Interstate Family Support Act (UIFSA) as amended in 2008 (adopted in California as Fam. Code, §§ 5700.101–5700.905). In addition to submitting a certified copy of the support order, "a letter of transmittal to the tribunal requesting registration and enforcement" must be included, along with a sworn statement stating "the amount of any arrearage" and identifying information of the obligor, such as address, social security number, employer information, etc., if known. (Fam. Code, § 5700.602; see Link B.)

When a court receives a request to register an out-of-state support order, it is required to send notice to the nonregistering party. (Fam. Code, § 5700.605; see Link C.) The vast majority of these requests come from an LCSA after receiving an intergovernmental request from a child support agency in a different state, which includes a copy of the support order and various federal forms. However, on occasion, courts also receive requests to register support orders from individuals. In fact, the comments to section 603 of UIFSA state:

> UIFSA provides that either the obligor, the obligee, or a support enforcement agency, may register a support order of another state or a foreign support order. In fact, even a stranger to the litigation, for example a grandparent or an employer of an alleged obligor, may register a support order.

While UIFSA contemplates that individuals, not just LCSAs, will register out-of-state support orders, forms FL-570 and FL-575 in their current format can only be used when an LCSA is the registering party. This is because the forms refer multiple times to two different OCSE forms, Letter of Transmittal Requesting Registration (five times on form FL-570 and two times on form FL-575) and Personal Information Form (one time on form FL-570), without making any mention of the paperwork that could instead be submitted by an individual. Therefore, when an individual registers an out-of-state support order, there is no corresponding Judicial Council form that is appropriate for the courts to give the required notice to the nonregistering party, nor is there a form for a party to use to contest the registration in the same scenario.

The committee proposes making all references to the required letter of transmittal on the current forms lower case, so that the forms would state "letter of transmittal requesting registration." This way, the reference is descriptive of any letter of transmittal received by the court (instead of being limited to just the federal form by the same name) and the forms could then be used if the request to register was made by an LCSA or an individual using their own letter of transmittal. Additionally, the reference to the federal Personal Information Form in item 7 of form FL-570 would be removed.
