If specificity is not required, users do not have to itemize all the damages listed in question 8 and do not have to categorize "economic" and "noneconomic" damages, especially if it is not a Proposition 51 case. The breakdown of damages is optional depending on the circumstances.

If there are multiple causes of action, users may wish to combine the individual forms into one form. If different damages are recoverable on different causes of action, replace the damages tables in all of the verdict forms with CACI No. VF-3920, Damages on Multiple Legal Theories.

If the jury is being given the discretion under Civil Code section 3288 to award prejudgment interest (see Bullis v. Security Pac. Nat'l Bank (1978) 21 Cal.3d 801, 814 [148 Cal.Rptr. 22, 582 P.2d 109]), give CACI No. 3935, Prejudgment Interest. This verdict form may need to be augmented for the jury to make any factual findings that are required in order to calculate the amount of prejudgment interest.

2612. Affirmative Defense—Employment Would Have Ceased

[Name of defendant] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] was not required to allow [name of plaintiff] to return to work when [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] [family care/medical] leave was over because [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] employment would have ended for other reasons. To succeed, [name of defendant] must prove both of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] would have [discharged/laid off] [name of plaintiff] if [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] had continued to work during the leave period; and

2. That [name of plaintiff]'s [family care/medical] leave was not a reason for [discharging [him/her/nonbinary pronoun]/laying [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] off].

An employee on [family care/medical] leave has no greater right to ~~his or her~~the employee's job or to other employment benefits than if ~~he or she~~that employee had continued working during the leave.

2701. Nonpayment of Minimum Wage—Essential Factual Elements (Lab. Code, § 1194)

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] owes [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] the difference between the wages paid by [name of defendant] and the wages [name of plaintiff] should have been paid according to the minimum wage rate required by state law. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] performed work for [name of defendant];

2. That [name of plaintiff] was paid less than the minimum wage by [name of defendant] for some or all hours worked; and

3. The amount of wages owed.

The minimum wage for labor performed from [beginning date] to [ending date] was [minimum wage rate] per hour.

An employee is entitled to be paid the legal minimum wage rate even if ~~he or she~~the employee agrees to work for a lower wage.

New September 2003; Revised June 2005, June 2014, June 2015, May 2020

Directions for Use

The court must determine the prevailing minimum wage rate from applicable state or federal law. (See, e.g., Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, § 11000.) The jury must be instructed accordingly.

Both liquidated damages (See Lab. Code, § 1194.2) and civil penalties (See Lab. Code, § 1197.1) may be awarded on a claim for nonpayment of minimum wage.

Wage and hour claims are governed by two sources of authority: the provisions of the Labor Code and a series of 18 wage orders, adopted by the Industrial Welfare Commission. (See Mendiola v. CPS Security Solutions, Inc. (2015) 60 Cal.4th 833, 838 [182 Cal.Rptr.3d 124, 340 P.3d 355].) The California Labor Code and the IWC's wage orders provide that certain employees are exempt from minimum wage requirements (for example, outside salespersons; see Lab. Code, § 1171), and that under certain circumstances employers may claim credits for meals and lodging against minimum wage pay (see Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, § 11000, subd. 3, § 11010, subd. 10, and § 11150, subd. 10(B)). The assertion of an exemption from wage and hour laws is an affirmative defense. (See generally Ramirez v. Yosemite Water Co. (1999) 20 Cal.4th 785, 794 [85 Cal.Rptr.2d 844, 978 P.2d 2].) The advisory committee has chosen not to write model instructions for the numerous fact-specific affirmative defenses to minimum wage claims. (Cf. CACI No. 2720, Affirmative Defense—Nonpayment of Overtime—Executive Exemption, and CACI No. 2721, Affirmative Defense—Nonpayment of Overtime—Administrative Exemption.)

2702. Nonpayment of Overtime Compensation—Essential Factual Elements (Lab. Code, § 1194)

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] owes [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] overtime pay as required by state law. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] performed work for [name of defendant];

2. That [name of plaintiff] worked overtime hours;

3. That [name of defendant] knew or should have known that [name of plaintiff] had worked overtime hours;

4. That [name of plaintiff] was [not paid/paid less than the overtime rate] for some or all of the overtime hours worked; and

5. The amount of overtime pay owed.

Overtime hours are the hours worked longer than [insert applicable definition(s) of overtime hours].

Overtime pay is [insert applicable formula].

An employee is entitled to be paid the legal overtime pay rate even if ~~he or she~~the employee agrees to work for a lower rate.

New September 2003; Revised June 2005, June 2014, June 2015, May 2020

Directions for Use

The court must determine the overtime compensation rate under applicable state or federal law. (See, e.g., Lab. Code, §§ 1173, 1182; Cal. Code Regs., tit. 8, § 11000, subd. 2, § 11010, subd. 4(A), and § 11150, subd. 4(A).) The jury must be instructed accordingly. It is possible that the overtime rate will be different over different periods of time.

Wage and hour claims are governed by two sources of authority: the provisions of the Labor Code, and a series of 18 wage orders adopted by the Industrial Welfare Commission. (See Mendiola v. CPS Security Solutions, Inc. (2014) 60 Cal.4th 833, 838 [182 Cal.Rptr.3d 124, 340 P.3d 355].) Both the Labor Code and the IWC wage orders provide for certain exemptions from overtime laws. (See, e.g., Lab. Code, § 1171 [outside salespersons are exempt from overtime requirements]).The assertion of an employee's exemption is an affirmative defense, which presents a mixed question of law and fact. (Ramirez v. Yosemite Water Co. (1999) 20 Cal.4th 785, 794 [85 Cal.Rptr.2d 844, 978 P.2d 2].) 2704. Damages—Waiting-Time Penalty for Nonpayment of Wages (Lab. Code, §§ 203, 218)

If you decide that [name of plaintiff] has proved [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] claim against [name of defendant] for [unpaid wages/[insert other claim]], then [name of plaintiff] may be entitled to receive an award of an additional penalty based on the number of days [name of defendant] failed to pay [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] [wages/other] when due.

To recover this penalty, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff]'s employment with [name of defendant] ended;

2. That [name of defendant] failed to pay [name of plaintiff] all wages when due; and

3. That [name of defendant] willfully failed to pay these wages.

The term "willfully" means only that the employer intentionally failed or refused to pay the wages. It does not imply a need for any additional bad motive.

[Name of plaintiff] must also prove the following:

1. The date on which [name of plaintiff]'s wages were due;

2. [Name of plaintiff]'s daily wage rate at the time [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] employment with [name of defendant] ended[; and/.]

[3. The date on which [name of defendant] finally paid [name of plaintiff] all wages due.]

[The term "wages" includes all amounts for labor performed by an employee, whether the amount is calculated by time, task, piece, commission, or some other method.]

New September 2003; Revised June 2005, May 2019, May 2020

Directions for Use

The first part of this instruction sets forth the elements required to obtain a waiting time penalty under Labor Code section 203. The second part is intended to instruct the jury on the facts required to assist the court in calculating the amount of waiting time penalties. Some or all of these facts may be stipulated, in which case they may be omitted from the instruction. Give the third optional fact if the employer eventually paid all wages due, but after their due date.

The court must determine when final wages are due based on the circumstances of the case and applicable law. (See Lab. Code, §§ 201, 202.) Final wages are generally due on the day an employee is discharged by the employer (Lab. Code, § 201(a)), but are not due for 72 hours if an employee quits without notice. (Lab. Code, § 202(a).)

If there is a factual dispute, for example, whether plaintiff gave advance notice of ~~his or her~~ the intention to quit, or whether payment of final wages by mail was authorized by plaintiff, the court may be required to give further instruction to the jury.

The definition of "wages" may be deleted if it is included in other instructions.

It is called a waiting time penalty because it is awarded for effectively making the employee wait for his or her final paycheck. - "[Plaintiff] fails to distinguish between a request for statutory penalties provided by the Labor Code for employer wage-and-hour violations, which were recoverable directly by employees well before the Act became part of the Labor Code, and a demand for 'civil penalties,' previously enforceable only by the state's labor law enforcement agencies. An example of the former is section 203, which obligates an employer that willfully fails to pay wages due an employee who is discharged or quits to pay the employee, in addition to the unpaid wages, a penalty equal to the employee's daily wages for each day, not exceeding 30 days, that the wages are unpaid." (Caliber Bodyworks, Inc. v. Superior Court (2005) 134 Cal.App.4th 365, 377–378 [36 Cal.Rptr.3d 31].)

- "In light of the unambiguous statutory language, as well as the practical difficulties that would arise under defendant's interpretation, we conclude there is but one reasonable construction: section 203(b) contains a single, three-year limitations period governing all actions for section 203 penalties irrespective of whether an employee's claim for penalties is accompanied by a claim for unpaid final wages." New December 2014; Revised May 2020

One who is the victim of an "unfair immigration-related practice" as defined, or ~~his or her~~ that person's representative, may bring a civil action for equitable relief and any damages or penalties. (Lab. Code, § 1019(a).) While most commonly this claim would be brought by an employee against an employer, the statute prohibits unfair immigration-related practices by "an employer or any other person" against "an employee or other person." (Lab. Code, § 1019(d)(1).) Therefore, the statute does not require an employment relationship between the parties.

Engaging in an unfair immigration-related practice against a person within 90 days of the person's exercise of protected rights raises a rebuttable presumption that the defendant did so in retaliation for the plaintiff's exercise of those rights. (Lab. Code, § 1019(c).) The statute does not specify whether the presumption is one affecting only the burden of producing evidence (see Evid. Code, §§ 603, 604) or one affecting the burden of proof. (See Evid. Code, § 605.) If the statute implements a public policy against the use of immigration-related coercion to deter workers from exercising their rights under the Labor Code, its presumption would affect the burden of proof. (See Evid. Code, § 605.) The last optional paragraph of the instruction may then be given if applicable on its facts. If, however, the presumption affects only the burden of producing evidence, it ceases to exist when the defendant produces evidence rebutting the presumption, such as a reason for the action other than retaliation. (Evid. Code, § 604.) In that case, the last paragraph would not be given.

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was paid at a wage rate that is less than the rate paid to employees of [the opposite sex/another race/another ethnicity]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] was paid less than the rate paid to [a] person[s] of [the opposite sex/another race/another ethnicity] working for [name of defendant];

2. That [name of plaintiff] was performing substantially similar work as the other person[s], considering the overall combination of skill, effort, and responsibility required; and

3. That [name of plaintiff] was working under similar working conditions as the other person[s].

New May 2018; Revised January 2019, November 2019, May 2020

Directions for Use

The California Equal Pay Act prohibits paying employees at lower wage rates than rates paid to employees of the opposite sex or a different race or ethnicity for substantially similar work. (Lab. Code, § 1197.5(a), (b).) An employee receiving less than the wage to which ~~he or she~~the employee is entitled may bring a civil action to recover the balance of the wages, including interest, and an equal amount as liquidated damages. Costs and attorney fees may also be awarded. (Lab. Code, § 1197.5(h).) There is no requirement that an employee show discriminatory intent as an element of the claim. (Green v. Par Pools, Inc. (2003) 111 Cal.App.4th 620, 622–625, 629 [3 Cal.Rptr.3d 844].)

This instruction presents singular and plural options for the comparator, the employee or employees whose pay and work are being compared to the plaintiff's to establish a violation of the Equal Pay Act. The statute refers to employees of the opposite sex or different race or ethnicity. There is language in cases, however, that suggests that a single comparator (e.g., one woman to one man) is sufficient. (See Hall v. County of Los Angeles (2007) 148 Cal.App.4th 318, 324 [55 Cal.Rptr.3d 732] [plaintiff had to show that she is paid lower wages than a male comparator, italics added]; Green, supra, 111 Cal.App.4th at p. 628 [plaintiff in a section 1197.5 action must first show that the employer paid a male employee more than a female employee for equal work, italics added].) No California case has expressly so held, however.

There are a number of defenses that the employer may assert to defend what appears to be an improper pay differential. (Lab. Code, § 1197.5(a), (b).) See CACI No. 2741, Affirmative Defense—Different Pay Justified, and CACI No. 2742, Bona Fide Factor Other Than Sex, Race, or Ethnicity, for instructions on the employer's affirmative defenses. (See Lab. Code, § 1197.5(a)(1), (b)(1).)

2743. Equal Pay Act—Retaliation—Essential Factual Elements (Lab. Code, § 1197.5(k))

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] retaliated against [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] for [pursuing/assisting another in the enforcement of] [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] right to equal pay regardless of [sex/race/ethnicity]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] [specify acts taken by plaintiff to enforce or assist in the enforcement of the right to equal pay];

2. That [name of defendant] [discharged/[other adverse employment action]] [name of plaintiff];

3. That [name of plaintiff]'s [pursuit of/assisting in the enforcement of another's right to] equal pay was a substantial motivating reason for [name of defendant]'s [discharging/[other adverse employment action]] [name of plaintiff];

4. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and

5. That [name of defendant]'s retaliatory conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New May 2018; Revised May 2020

Directions for Use

Use this instruction in cases of alleged retaliation against an employee under the Equal Pay Act. The act prohibits adverse employment actions against an employee who has taken steps to enforce the equal pay requirements of the act. Also, the employer cannot prohibit an employee from disclosing ~~his or her~~that employee's own wages, discussing the wages of others, inquiring about another employee's wages, or aiding or encouraging any other employee to exercise ~~his or her~~that employee's rights. (Lab. Code, § 1197.5(k)(1).) An employee who has been retaliated against may bring a civil action for reinstatement, reimbursement for lost wages and work benefits, interest, and equitable relief. (Lab. Code, § 1197.5(k)(2).)

Note that there are two causation elements. First, there must be a causal connection between the employee's pursuit of equal pay and the adverse employment action (element 3). Second, the employee must have suffered harm because of the employer's retaliatory acts (element 5).

Element 3 uses the term "substantial motivating reason" to express both intent and causation between the employee's pursuit of equal pay and the adverse employment action. "Substantial motivating reason" has been held to be the appropriate standard under the discrimination prohibitions of the Fair Employment and Housing Act to address the possibility of both discriminatory and nondiscriminatory motives. (See Harris v. City of Santa Monica (2013) 56 Cal.4th 203, 232 [152 Cal.Rptr.3d 392, 294 P.3d 49]; CACI

No. 2507, "Substantial Motivating Reason" Explained.) Whether this standard applies to the Equal Pay Act retaliation cases has not been addressed by the courts.

2805. Employee Not Within Course of Employment—Employer Conduct Unrelated to Employment

A claim is not barred by workers' compensation if the employer engages in conduct unrelated to the employment or steps outside of its proper role.

New November 2017; Revised May 2020

Directions for Use

This instruction presents the so-called Fermino exception to the exclusivity of workers' compensation. (See Fermino v. Fedco, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal.4th 701 [30 Cal.Rptr.2d 18, 872 P.2d 559].) Its purpose is to rebut element 3 of CACI No. 2800, Employer's Affirmative Defense—Injury Covered by Workers' Compensation. Per element 3, the injury falls within the exclusive remedy of workers' compensation if it occurred while the employee was performing the work that ~~he or she~~the employee was required to do. The Fermino exception changes the focus from what the employee was doing when injured to what the employer was doing that may have caused the injury. The exclusive remedy does not apply if the employer caused the injury through conduct unrelated to the work. (Id., 7 Cal.4th at p. 717.)

Sources and Authority

- "[N]ormal employer actions causing injury would not fall outside the scope of the exclusivity rule merely by attributing to the employer a sinister intention. Conversely, … actions by employers that have no proper place in the employment relationship may not be made into a 'normal' part of the employment relationship merely by means of artful terminology. Indeed, virtually any action by an employer can be characterized as a 'normal part of employment' if raised to the proper level of abstraction." (Fermino, supra, 7 Cal.4th at p. 717 [30 Cal.Rptr.2d 18, 872 P.2d 559].)

- "[C]ertain types of injurious employer misconduct remain outside this bargain. There are some instances in which, although the injury arose in the course of employment, the employer engaging in that conduct ' "stepped out of [its] proper role[]" ' or engaged in conduct of ' "questionable relationship to the employment." ' " (Fermino, supra, 7 Cal.App.4th at p. 708.)

- "[CACI No. 2800] was correctly given, however, because the evidence was able to support a finding that the work was not a contributing cause of the injury. [¶] The jury could properly make this finding by applying special instruction No. 5, the instruction stating that an employer's conduct falls outside the workers' compensation scheme when an employer steps outside of its proper role or engages in conduct unrelated to the employment. This instruction stated the doctrine of Fermino correctly. If the jury found that carrying out the mock robbery was not within the employer's proper role, it could also find that unwittingly participating in the mock robbery as a victim was not part of the employee's work." (Lee v. West Kern Water Dist. (2016) 5 Cal.App.5th 606, 628–629 [210 Cal.Rptr.3d 362].)

- "The jury could properly find the injury did not arise out of the employee's work because it was caused by such employer action and therefore the conditions of compensation did not exist. To hold that the jury must first find the injury to be within the conditions of compensation and then find it also to be within the Fermino exception, instead of simply finding that the conditions of compensation were not met in the first place in light of Fermino, would be elevating form over substance." (Lee, supra, 5 Cal.App.5th at p. 629.)

- "[T]he exclusive remedy provisions are not applicable under certain circumstances, sometimes variously identified as 'conduct where the employer or insurer stepped out of their proper roles' [citations], or 'conduct of an employer having a "questionable" relationship to the employment' [citations], but which may be essentially defined as not stemming from a risk reasonably encompassed within the compensation bargain." (Light v. Department of Parks & Recreation (2017) 14 Cal.App.5th 75, 97 [221 Cal.Rptr.3d 668].)

2810. Coemployee's Affirmative Defense—Injury Covered by Workers' Compensation

[Name of defendant] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] is not responsible for any harm that [name of plaintiff] may have suffered because [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was [name of defendant]'s coemployee and therefore can recover only under California's Workers' Compensation Act. To succeed, [name of defendant] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] and [name of defendant] were [name of employer]'s employees;

2. That [name of employer] [had workers' compensation insurance [covering [name of plaintiff] at the time of injury]/was self-insured for workers' compensation claims [at the time of [name of plaintiff]'s injury]]; and

3. That [name of defendant] was acting in the scope of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] employment at the time [name of plaintiff] claims [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] was harmed.

New September 2003; Revised October 2004, May 2020

Directions for Use

This instruction is intended for use if a coemployee is the defendant and ~~he or she~~that coemployee claims that the case falls within the workers' compensation exclusivity rule. For instructions on scope of employment see instructions in the Vicarious Liability series (CACI Nos. 3700–3726). Scope of employment in this instruction is the same as in the context of respondeat superior. (Hendy v. Losse (1991) 54 Cal.3d 723, 740 [1 Cal.Rptr.2d 543, 819 P.2d 1].) 3040. Violation of Prisoner's Federal Civil Rights—Eighth Amendment—Substantial Risk of Serious Harm (42 U.S.C. § 1983)

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] subjected [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] to prison conditions that violated [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] constitutional rights. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That while imprisoned, [describe violation that created risk, e.g., [name of plaintiff] was placed in a cell block with rival gang members];

2. That [name of defendant]'s [conduct/failure to act] created a substantial risk of serious harm to [name of plaintiff]'s health or safety;

3. That [name of defendant] knew that [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] [conduct/failure to act] created a substantial risk of serious harm to [name of plaintiff]'s health or safety;

4. That [name of defendant] disregarded the risk by failing to take reasonable measures to address it;

5. That there was no reasonable justification for the [conduct/failure to act];

6. That [name of defendant] was performing [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] official duties when [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] [acted/purported to act/failed to act];

7. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and

8. That [name of defendant]'s [conduct/failure to act] was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

Whether the risk was obvious is a factor that you may consider in determining whether [*name of defendant] knew of the risk.

Directions for Use

Give this instruction in a case involving conduct that allegedly created a substantial risk of serious harm to an inmate. (See Farmer v. Brennan (1994) 511 U.S. 825 [114 S.Ct. 1970, 128 L.Ed.2d 811].) For an instruction on deprivation of medical care, see CACI No. 3041, Violation of Prisoner's Federal Civil Rights—Eighth Amendment—Medical Care. For an instruction involving the deprivation of necessities, see CACI No. 3043, Violation of Prisoner's Federal Civil Rights—Eight Amendment—Deprivation of Necessities.

In element 1, describe the act or omission that created the risk. In elements 2 and 3, choose "conduct" if the risk was created by affirmative action. Choose "failure to act" if the risk was created by an omission.

In prison-conditions cases, the inmate must show that the defendant was deliberately indifferent to ~~his or her~~the inmate's health or safety. (Farmer, supra, 511 U.S. at p. 834.) "Deliberate indifference" involves a two part inquiry. First, the inmate must show that the prison officials were aware of a "substantial risk of serious harm" to the inmate's health or safety, but failed to act to address the danger. (See Castro v. ~~Cnty.~~County of L.A. (9th Cir. 2016) 833 F.3d 1060, 1073.) Second, the inmate must show that the prison officials had no "reasonable" justification for the conduct, in spite of that risk. (Thomas v. Ponder (9th Cir. 2010) 611 F.3d 1144, 1150.) Elements 3, 4, and 5 express the deliberate-indifference components.

The "official duties" referred to in element 6 must be duties created by any state, county, or municipal law, ordinance, or regulation. This aspect of color of law most likely will not be an issue for the jury, so it has been omitted to shorten the wording of element 6.

- "It is undisputed that the treatment a prisoner receives in prison and the conditions under which he is confined are subject to scrutiny under the Eighth Amendment." (Helling v. McKinney (1993) 509 U.S. 25, 31 [113 S.Ct. 2475, 125 L.Ed.2d 22].)

- "Our cases have held that a prison official violates the Eighth Amendment only when two requirements are met. First, the deprivation alleged must be, objectively, 'sufficiently serious.' For a claim ... based on a failure to prevent harm, the inmate must show that he is incarcerated under conditions posing a substantial risk of serious harm. The second requirement follows from the principle that 'only the unnecessary and wanton infliction of pain implicates the Eighth Amendment.' To violate the Cruel and Unusual Punishments Clause, a prison official must have a 'sufficiently culpable state of mind.' In prison-conditions cases that state of mind is one of 'deliberate indifference' to inmate health or safety ... ." (Farmer, supra, 511 U.S. at p. 834, internal citations omitted.)

- "[D]irect causation by affirmative action is not necessary: 'a prison official may be held liable under the Eighth Amendment if he knows that inmates face a substantial risk of serious harm and disregards that risk by failing to take reasonable measures to abate it.' " (Castro, supra, 833 F.3d at p. 1067, original italics.)

- "Whether a prison official had the requisite knowledge of a substantial risk is a question of fact subject to demonstration in the usual ways, including inference from circumstantial evidence, and a factfinder may conclude that a prison official knew of a substantial risk from the very fact that the risk was obvious." (Farmer, supra, 511 U.S. at p. 842, internal citation omitted.)

- "When instructing juries in deliberate indifference cases with such issues of proof, courts should be careful to ensure that the requirement of subjective culpability is not lost. It is not enough merely to find that a reasonable person would have known, or that the defendant should have known, and juries should be instructed accordingly." (Farmer, supra, 511 U.S. at p. 843 fn. 8.)

- "We hold ... that a prison official cannot be found liable under the Eighth Amendment for denying an inmate humane conditions of confinement unless the official knows of and disregards an excessive risk to inmate health or safety; the official must both be aware of facts from which the inference could be drawn that a substantial risk of serious harm exists, and he must also draw the inference." (Farmer, supra, 511 U.S. at p. 837.)

- "The precise role of legitimate penological interests is not entirely clear in the context of an Eighth Amendment challenge to conditions of confinement. The Supreme Court has written that the test of Turner v. Safley, 482 U.S. 78, 107 S. Ct. 2254, 96 L. Ed. 2d 64 (1987), which requires only a reasonable relationship to a legitimate penological interest to justify prison regulations, does not apply to Eighth Amendment claims. … The existence of a legitimate penological justification has, however, been used in considering whether adverse treatment is sufficiently gratuitous to constitute punishment for Eighth Amendment purposes." (Grenning v. Miller-Stout (9th Cir. 2014) 739 F.3d 1235, 1240.)

- "We recognize that prison officials have a 'better grasp' of the policies required to operate a correctional facility than either judges or juries. For this reason, in … conditions of confinement cases, we instruct juries to defer to prison officials' judgments in adopting and executing policies needed to preserve discipline and maintain security." (Mendiola-Martinez v. Arpaio (9th Cir. 2016) 836 F.3d 1239, 1254, internal citation omitted.)

- "However, our precedent should not be misread to suggest that jail officials are automatically entitled to deference instructions in conditions of confinement or excessive force cases brought by prisoners, or § 1983 actions brought by former inmates. We have long recognized that a jury need not defer to prison officials where the plaintiff produces substantial evidence showing that the jail's policy or practice is an unnecessary, unjustified, or exaggerated response to the need for prison security." (Shorter v. Baca (9th Cir. 2018) 895 F.3d 1176, 1183, internal citations omitted.)

- "Although claims by pretrial detainees arise under the Fourteenth Amendment and claims by convicted prisoners arise under the Eighth Amendment, our cases do not distinguish among pretrial and postconviction detainees for purposes of the excessive force, conditions of confinement, and medical care deference instructions." (Shorter, supra, 895 F.3d at p. 1182, fn. 4.)

- "The Supreme Court has interpreted the phrase 'under "color" of law' to mean 'under "pretense" of law.' A police officer's actions are under pretense of law only if they are 'in some way "related to the performance of his official duties." ' By contrast, an officer who is ' "pursuing his own goals and is not in any way subject to control by [his public employer]," ' does not act under color of law, unless he 'purports or pretends' to do so. Officers who engage in confrontations for personal reasons unrelated to law enforcement, and do not 'purport[] or pretend[]' to be officers, do not act under color of law." (Huffman v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1998) 147 F.3d 1054, 1058, internal citations omitted.)

3041. Violation of Prisoner's Federal Civil Rights—Eighth Amendment—Medical Care (42 U.S.C. § 1983)

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] provided [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] with inadequate medical care in violation of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] constitutional rights. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] had a serious medical need;

2. That [name of defendant] knew that [name of plaintiff] faced a substantial risk of serious harm if [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] medical need went untreated;

3. That [name of defendant] consciously disregarded that risk by not taking reasonable steps to treat [name of plaintiff]'s medical need;

4. That [name of defendant] was acting or purporting to act in the performance of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] official duties;

5. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and

6. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

A serious medical need exists if the failure to treat a prisoner's condition could result in further significant injury or the unnecessary and pointless infliction of pain.

Neither medical negligence alone, nor a difference of opinion between medical personnel or between doctor and patient, is enough to establish a violation of [name of plaintiff]'s constitutional rights.

[In determining whether [name of defendant] consciously disregarded a substantial risk, you should consider the personnel, financial, and other resources available to [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] or those that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] could reasonably have obtained. [Name of defendant] is not responsible for services that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] could not provide or cause to be provided because the necessary personnel, financial, and other resources were not available or could not be reasonably obtained.]

Directions for Use

Give this instruction in a case involving the deprivation of medical care to a prisoner. For an instruction on the creation of a substantial risk of serious harm, see CACI No. 3040, Violation of Prisoner's Federal Civil Rights—Eighth Amendment—Substantial Risk of Serious Harm. For an instruction involving the deprivation of necessities, see CACI No. 3043, Violation of Prisoner's Federal Civil Rights—Eighth Amendment—Deprivation of Necessities.

In prison-conditions cases, the inmate must show that the defendant was deliberately indifferent to ~~his or her~~the inmate's health or safety. In a medical-needs case, deliberate indifference requires that the prison officials have known of and disregarded an excessive risk to the inmate's health or safety. Negligence is not enough. (Farmer v. Brennan (1994) 511 U.S. 825, 834−837 [114 S.Ct. 1970, 128 L.Ed.2d 811].) Elements 2 and 3 express deliberate indifference.

The "official duties" referred to in element 3 must be duties created by a state, county, or municipal law, ordinance, or regulation. This aspect of color of law most likely will not be an issue for the jury, so it has been omitted to shorten the wording of element 3.

The Ninth Circuit has held that in considering whether an individual prison medical provider was deliberately indifferent, the jury should be instructed to consider the economic resources made available to the prison health care system. (See Peralta v. Dillard (9th Cir. 2014) 744 F.3d 1076, 1084 [en banc].) Although this holding is not binding on California courts, the last optional paragraph may be given if the defendant has presented evidence of lack of economic resources and the court decides that this defense should be presented to the jury.

- Deprivation of Civil Rights. Title 42 United States Code section 1983.

- "[D]eliberate indifference to serious medical needs of prisoners constitutes the 'unnecessary and wanton infliction of pain,' proscribed by the Eighth Amendment. This is true whether the indifference is manifested by prison doctors in their response to the prisoner's needs or by prison guards in intentionally denying or delaying access to medical care or intentionally interfering with the treatment once prescribed. Regardless of how evidenced, deliberate indifference to a prisoner's serious illness or injury states a cause of action under section 1983." (Estelle v. Gamble (1976) 429 U.S. 97, 104–105 [97 S.Ct. 285, 50 L.Ed.2d 251], internal citation and footnotes omitted.)

- "Our cases have held that a prison official violates the Eighth Amendment only when two requirements are met. First, the deprivation alleged must be, objectively, 'sufficiently serious.' For a claim ... based on a failure to prevent harm, the inmate must show that he is incarcerated under conditions posing a substantial risk of serious harm. The second requirement follows from the principle that 'only the unnecessary and wanton infliction of pain implicates the Eighth Amendment.' To violate the Cruel and Unusual Punishments Clause, a prison official must have a 'sufficiently culpable state of mind.' In prison-conditions cases that state of mind is one of 'deliberate indifference' to inmate health or safety ... ." (Farmer, supra, 511 U.S. at p. 834, internal citations omitted.)

- " 'To set forth a constitutional claim under the Eighth Amendment predicated upon the failure to provide medical treatment, first the plaintiff must show a serious medical need by demonstrating that failure to treat a prisoner's condition could result in further significant injury or the unnecessary and wanton infliction of pain. Second, a plaintiff must show the defendant's response to the need was deliberately indifferent.' The 'deliberate indifference' prong requires '(a) a purposeful act or failure to respond to a prisoner's pain or possible medical need, and (b) harm caused by the indifference.' 'Indifference may appear when prison officials deny, delay or intentionally interfere with medical treatment, or it may be shown in the way in which prison [officials] provide medical care.' '[T]he indifference to [a prisoner's] medical needs must be substantial. Mere "indifference," "negligence," or "medical malpractice" will not support this [claim].' Even gross negligence is insufficient to establish deliberate indifference to serious medical needs." (Lemire v. Cal. Dep't of Corr. & Rehab. (9th Cir. 2013) 726 F.3d 1062, 1081−1082, internal citations omitted.)

"Indications that a plaintiff has a serious medical need include '[t]he existence of an injury that a reasonable doctor or patient would find important and worthy of comment or treatment; the presence of a medical condition that significantly affects an individual's daily activities; or the existence of chronic and substantial pain.' " (Colwell v. Bannister (9th Cir. 2014) 763 F.3d 1060, 1066.)

- "Consistent with that concept and the clear connections between mental health treatment and the dignity and welfare of prisoners, the Eighth Amendment's prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment requires that prisons provide mental health care that meets 'minimum constitutional requirements.' When the level of a prison's mental health care 'fall[s] below the evolving standards of decency that mark the progress of a maturing society,' the prison fails to uphold the constitution's dignitary principles." (Disability Rights Montana, Inc. v. Batista (9th Cir. 2019) 930 F.3d 1090, 1097, internal citation omitted.)

- "We hold ... that a prison official cannot be found liable under the Eighth Amendment for denying an inmate humane conditions of confinement unless the official knows of and disregards an excessive risk to inmate health or safety; the official must both be aware of facts from which the inference could be drawn that a substantial risk of serious harm exists, and he must also draw the inference." (Farmer, supra, 511 U.S. at p. 837.)

- "The subjective standard of deliberate indifference requires 'more than ordinary lack of due care for the prisoner's interests or safety.' The state of mind for deliberate indifference is subjective recklessness. But the standard is 'less stringent in cases involving a prisoner's medical needs . . . because "the State's responsibility to provide inmates with medical care ordinarily does not conflict with competing administrative concerns." ' " (Snow v. McDaniel (9th Cir. 2012) 681 F.3d 978, 985, internal citations omitted.)

- "[D]eliberate indifference 'may appear when prison officials deny, delay or intentionally interfere with medical treatment, or it may be shown by the way in which prison physicians provide medical care.'. … '[A] prisoner need not show his harm was substantial.' " (Wilhelm v. Rotman (9th Cir. 2012) 680 F.3d 1113, 1122, internal citation omitted.)

- "[A]llegations that a prison official has ignored the instructions of a prisoner's treating physician are sufficient to state a claim for deliberate indifference." (Wakefield v. Thompson (9th Cir. 1999) 177 F.3d 1160, 1165.)

- "[A] complaint that a physician has been negligent in diagnosing or treating a medical condition does not state a valid claim of medical mistreatment under the Eighth Amendment. Medical malpractice does not become a constitutional violation merely because the victim is a prisoner." (Estelle, supra, 429 U.S. at p. 106.)

- " 'A difference of opinion between a physician and the prisoner—or between medical professionals—concerning what medical care is appropriate does not amount to deliberate indifference.' Rather, '[t]o show deliberate indifference, the plaintiff "must show that the course of treatment the doctors chose was medically unacceptable under the circumstances" and that the defendants "chose this course in conscious disregard of an excessive risk to plaintiff's health." ' " (Colwell, supra, 763 F.3d at p. 1068.)

- "It has been recognized ... that inadequate medical treatment may, in some instances, constitute a violation of 42 United States Code section 1983. In Sturts v. City of Philadelphia, for example, the plaintiff alleged that defendants acted 'carelessly, recklessly and negligently' when they failed to remove sutures from his eye, neck and face. The court concluded that although plaintiff was alleging inadequate medical treatment, he had stated a cause of action under section 1983: '... where a prisoner has received some medical attention and the dispute is over the adequacy of the treatment, federal courts are generally reluctant to second guess medical judgments. In some cases, however, the medical attention rendered may be so woefully inadequate as to amount to no treatment at all, thereby rising to the level of a § 1983 claim. ...' " (Ochoa v. Superior Court (1985) 39 Cal.3d 159, 176-177 [216 Cal.Rptr. 661, 703 P.2d 1], internal citations omitted.)

- "Because society does not expect that prisoners will have unqualified access to health care, deliberate indifference to medical needs amounts to an Eighth Amendment violation only if those needs are 'serious.' " (Hudson v. McMillian (1992) 503 U.S. 1, 9 [112 S.Ct. 995, 117 L.Ed.2d 156], internal citation omitted.)

- "[T]here is a two-pronged test for evaluating a claim for deliberate indifference to a serious medical need: First, the plaintiff must show a serious medical need by demonstrating that failure to treat a prisoner's condition could result in further significant injury or the unnecessary and wanton infliction of pain. Second, the plaintiff must show the defendant's response to the need was deliberately indifferent. This second prong . . . is satisfied by showing (a) a purposeful act or failure to respond to a prisoner's pain or possible medical need and (b) harm caused by the indifference." (Akhtar v. Mesa (9th Cir. 2012) 698 F.3d 1202, 1213.)

- "Where a plaintiff alleges systemwide deficiencies, 'policies and practices of statewide and systematic application [that] expose all inmates in [the prison's] custody to a substantial risk of serious harm,' we assess the claim through a two-pronged inquiry. The first, objective, prong requires that the plaintiff show that the conditions of the prison pose 'a substantial risk of serious harm.' The second, subjective, prong requires that the plaintiff show that a prison official was deliberately indifferent by being 'aware of the facts from which the inference could be drawn that a substantial risk of serious harm exists,' and 'also draw[ing] the inference.' " (Disability Rights Montana, Inc., supra, 930 F.3d at p. 1097, internal citations and footnote omitted.)

- "A prison medical official who fails to provide needed treatment because he lacks the necessary resources can hardly be said to have intended to punish the inmate. The challenged instruction properly advised the jury to consider the resources [defendant] had available in determining whether he was deliberately indifferent." (Peralta, supra, 744 F.3d at p. 1084.)

- "We recognize that prison officials have a 'better grasp' of the policies required to operate a correctional facility than either judges or juries. For this reason, in excessive force and conditions of confinement cases, we instruct juries to defer to prison officials' judgments in adopting and executing policies needed to preserve discipline and maintain security. [¶] Such deference is generally absent from serious medical needs cases, however, where deliberate indifference 'can typically be established or disproved without the necessity of balancing competing institutional concerns for the safety of prison staff or other inmates.' " (Mendiola-Martinez v. Arpaio (9th Cir. 2016) 836 F.3d 1239, 1254, internal citations omitted.)

- "[T]rial judges in prison medical care cases should not instruct jurors to defer to the adoption and implementation of security-based prison policies, unless a party's presentation of the case draws a plausible connection between a security-based policy or practice and the challenged medical care decision." (Chess v. Dovey (9th Cir. 2015) 790 F.3d 961, 962.)

- "Although claims by pretrial detainees arise under the Fourteenth Amendment and claims by convicted prisoners arise under the Eighth Amendment, our cases do not distinguish among pretrial and postconviction detainees for purposes of the excessive force, conditions of confinement, and medical care deference instructions." (Shorter v. Baca (9th Cir. 2018) 895 F.3d 1176, 1182, fn. 4.)

- "We now turn to the second prong of the inquiry, whether the defendants were deliberately indifferent. This is not a case in which there is a difference of medical opinion about which treatment is best for a particular patient. Nor is this a case of ordinary medical mistake or negligence. Rather, the evidence is undisputed that [plaintiff] was denied treatment for his monocular blindness solely because of an administrative policy, even in the face of medical recommendations to the contrary. A reasonable jury could find that [plaintiff] was denied surgery, not because it wasn't medically indicated, not because his condition was misdiagnosed, not because the surgery wouldn't have helped him, but because the policy of the [defendant] is to require an inmate to endure reversible blindness in one eye if he can still see out of the other. This is the very definition of deliberate indifference." (Colwell, supra, 763 F.3d at p. 1068.)

- "[C]laims for violations of the right to adequate medical care 'brought by pretrial detainees against individual defendants under the Fourteenth Amendment' must be evaluated under an objective deliberate indifference standard. Based thereon, the elements of a pretrial detainee's medical care claim against an individual defendant under the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment are: (i) the defendant made an intentional decision with respect to the conditions under which the plaintiff was confined; (ii) those conditions put the plaintiff at substantial risk of suffering serious harm; (iii) the defendant did not take reasonable available measures to abate that risk, even though a reasonable official in the circumstances would have appreciated the high degree of risk involved—making the consequences of the defendant's conduct obvious; and (iv) by not taking such measures, the defendant caused the plaintiff's injuries. 'With respect to the third element, the defendant's conduct must be objectively unreasonable, a test that will necessarily "turn[ ] on the facts and circumstances of each particular case." ' The ' "mere lack of due care by a state official" does not deprive an individual of life, liberty, or property under the Fourteenth Amendment.' Thus, the plaintiff must 'prove more than negligence but less than subjective intent—something akin to reckless disregard.' "

- "A 'serious' medical need exists if the failure to treat a prisoner's condition could result in further significant injury or the 'unnecessary and wanton infliction of pain.' The 'routine discomfort' that results from incarceration and which is 'part of the penalty that criminal offenders pay for their offenses against society' does not constitute a 'serious' medical need." (Doty v. County of Lassen (9th Cir. 1994) 37 F.3d 540, 546, internal citations and footnote omitted.)

3043. Violation of Prisoner's Federal Civil Rights—Eighth Amendment—Deprivation of Necessities (42 U.S.C. § 1983)

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] subjected [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] to prison conditions that deprived [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] of basic rights. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of plaintiff] was imprisoned under conditions that deprived [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] of [describe deprivation, e.g., clothing];

2. That this deprivation was sufficiently serious in that it denied [name of plaintiff] a minimal necessity of life;

3. That [name of defendant]'s conduct created a substantial risk of serious harm to [name of plaintiff]'s health or safety;

4. That [name of defendant] knew that [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] conduct created a substantial risk of serious harm to [name of plaintiff]'s health or safety;

5. That there was no reasonable justification for the deprivation;

6. That [name of defendant] was acting or purporting to act in the performance of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] official duties;

7. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and

8. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

Whether the risk was obvious is a factor that you may consider in determining whether [*name of defendant] knew of the risk.

Directions for Use

Give this instruction in a prisoner case involving deprivation of something serious. (See Thomas v. Ponder (9th Cir. 2010) 611 F.3d 1144, 1150–1151.) For an instruction involving the creation of a risk, see CACI No. 3040, Violation of Prisoner's Federal Civil Rights—Eighth Amendment—Substantial Risk of Serious Harm. For an instruction on deprivation of medical care, see CACI No. 3041, Violation of Prisoner's Federal Civil Rights—Eighth Amendment—Medical Care.

In prison-conditions cases, the inmate must show that the defendant was deliberately indifferent to ~~his or her~~the inmate's health or safety. (Farmer v. Brennan (1994) 511 U.S. 825, 834 [114 S.Ct. 1970, 128 L.Ed.2d 811].) "Deliberate indifference" involves a two-part inquiry. First, the inmate must show that the prison officials were aware of a substantial risk of serious harm to the inmate's health or safety. Second, the inmate must show that the prison officials had no reasonable justification for the conduct, in spite of that risk. (Thomas, supra, 611 F.3d at p. 1150.) Elements 4 and 5 express the deliberate-indifference components.

The "official duties" referred to in element 6 must be duties created by any state, county, or municipal law, ordinance, or regulation. This aspect of color of law most likely will not be an issue for the jury, so it has been omitted to shorten the wording of element 6.

- "[E]xtreme deprivations are required to make out a conditions-of-confinement claim. Because routine discomfort is 'part of the penalty that criminal offenders pay for their offenses against society,' 'only those deprivations denying "the minimal civilized measure of life's necessities" are sufficiently grave to form the basis of an Eighth Amendment violation.' - "'[O]nly the unnecessary and wanton infliction of pain implicates the Eighth Amendment.' To violate the Cruel and Unusual Punishments Clause, a prison official must have a 'sufficiently culpable state of mind.' In prison-conditions cases that state of mind is one of 'deliberate indifference' to inmate health or safety ... ." (Farmer, supra, 511 U.S. at p. 834, internal citations omitted.)

- "[A]n inmate seeking to prove an Eighth Amendment violation must 'objectively show that he was deprived of something "sufficiently serious," ' and 'make a subjective showing that the deprivation occurred with deliberate indifference to the inmate's health or safety.' The second step, showing 'deliberate indifference,' involves a two part inquiry. First, the inmate must show that the prison officials were aware of a 'substantial risk of serious harm' to an inmate's health or safety. This part of our inquiry may be satisfied if the inmate shows that the risk posed by the deprivation is obvious. Second, the inmate must show that the prison officials had no 'reasonable' justification for the deprivation, in spite of that risk." (Thomas, supra, 611 F.3d at p. 1150,

- "Next, the inmate must 'make a subjective showing that the deprivation occurred with deliberate indifference to the inmate's health or safety.' To satisfy this subjective component of deliberate indifference, the inmate must show that prison officials 'kn[e]w[] of and disregard[ed]' the substantial risk of harm, but the officials need not have intended any harm to befall the inmate; 'it is enough that the official acted or failed to act despite his knowledge of a substantial risk of serious harm.' " (Lemire v. Cal. Dep't of Corr. & Rehab. (9th Cir. 2013) 726 F.3d 1062, 1074, internal citations omitted.)

- "Whether a prison official had the requisite knowledge of a substantial risk is a question of fact subject to demonstration in the usual ways, including inference from circumstantial evidence, and a factfinder may conclude that a prison official knew of a substantial risk from the very fact that the risk was obvious." (Farmer, supra, 511 U.S. at p. 842, internal citation omitted.)

- "When instructing juries in deliberate indifference cases with such issues of proof, courts should be careful to ensure that the requirement of subjective culpability is not lost. It is not enough merely to find that a reasonable person would have known, or that the defendant should have known, and juries should be instructed accordingly." (Farmer, supra, 511 U.S. at p. 843 fn. 8.)

- "The precise role of legitimate penological interests is not entirely clear in the context of an Eighth Amendment challenge to conditions of confinement. The Supreme Court has written that the test of Turner v. Safley, 482 U.S. 78, 107 S.Ct. 2254, 96 L.Ed.2d 64 (1987), which requires only a reasonable relationship to a legitimate penological interest to justify prison regulations, does not apply to Eighth Amendment claims. The existence of a legitimate penological justification has, however, been used in considering whether adverse treatment is sufficiently gratuitous to constitute punishment for Eighth Amendment purposes." (Grenning v. Miller-Stout (9th Cir. 2014) 739 F.3d 1235, 1240.)

- "We recognize that prison officials have a 'better grasp' of the policies required to operate a correctional facility than either judges or juries. (Mendiola-Martinez v. Arpaio (9th Cir. 2016) 836 F.3d 1239, 1254, internal citation omitted.)

- "However, our precedent should not be misread to suggest that jail officials are automatically entitled to deference instructions in conditions of confinement or excessive force cases brought by prisoners, or § 1983 actions brought by former inmates. We have long recognized that a jury need not defer to prison officials where the plaintiff produces substantial evidence showing that the jail's policy or practice is an unnecessary, unjustified, or exaggerated response to the need for prison security." (Shorter v. Baca (9th Cir. 2018) 895 F.3d 1176, 1183, internal citations omitted.)

Directions for Use

Use this instruction if a plaintiff seeks statutory damages based on a construction-related accessibility claim under the Disabled Persons Act (DPA) or the Unruh Civil Rights Act. (See Civ. Code, § 55.56(a).) Do not give this instruction if actual damages are sought. CACI No. 3067, Unruh Civil Rights Act—Damages, may be given for claims for actual damages under the Unruh Act and adapted for use under the DPA.

The DPA provides disabled persons with rights of access to public facilities. (See Civ. Code, §§ 54, 54.1.) Under the DPA, a disabled person who encounters barriers to access at a public accommodation may recover minimum statutory damages for each particular occasion on which ~~he or she~~the disabled person was denied access. (Civ. Code, §§ 54.3, 55.56(f).) However, the Construction Related Accessibility Standard Act (CRASA) requires that before statutory damages may be recovered, the disabled person either have personally encountered the violation on a particular occasion or have been deterred from accessing the facility on a particular occasion. (See Civ. Code, § 55.56(b).) Also, specified violations are deemed to be merely technical and are presumed to not cause a person difficulty, discomfort, or embarrassment for the purpose of an award of minimum statutory damages. (See Civ. Code, § 55.56(e).)

Give either or both options for element 2 depending on whether the plaintiff personally encountered the barrier or was deterred from patronizing the business because of awareness of the barrier. The next-to-last paragraph is explanatory of the first option, and the last paragraph is explanatory of the second option.

- Action for Interference With Admittance to or Enjoyment of Public Facilities. Civil Code section 54.3.

- Construction-Related Accessibility Standard Act. Civil Code section 55.56.

- "Part 2.5 of division 1 of the Civil Code, currently consisting of sections 54 to 55.3, is commonly referred to as the "Disabled Persons Act," although it has no official title. Sections 54 and 54.1 generally guarantee individuals with disabilities equal access to public places, buildings, facilities and services, as well as common carriers, housing and places of public accommodation, while section 54.3 specifies remedies for violations of these guarantees, including a private action for damages." (Munson v. Del Taco, Inc. (2009) 46 Cal.4th 661, 674 fn. 8 [94 Cal.Rptr.3d 685, 208 P.3d 623].)

- "[L]egislation (applicable to claims filed on or after Jan. 1, 2009 ([Civ. Code,] § 55.57)) restricts the availability of statutory damages under sections 52 and 54.3, permitting their recovery only if an accessibility violation actually denied the plaintiff full and equal access, that is, only if 'the plaintiff personally encountered the violation on a particular occasion, or the plaintiff was deterred from accessing a place of public accommodation on a particular occasion' (§ 55.56, subd. (b)). It also limits statutory damages to one assessment per occasion of access denial, rather than being based on the number of accessibility standards violated. (Id., subd. (e).)" (Munson, supra, 46 Cal.4th at pp. 677−678.)

- " '[S]ection 54.3 imposes the standing requirement that the plaintiff have suffered an actual denial of equal access before any suit for damages can be brought. … [A] plaintiff cannot recover damages under section 54.3 unless the violation actually denied him or her access to some public facility. [¶] Plaintiff's attempt to equate a denial of equal access with the presence of a violation of federal or state regulations would nullify the standing requirement of section 54.3, since any disabled person could sue for statutory damages whenever he or she encountered noncompliant facilities, regardless of whether that lack of compliance actually impaired the plaintiff's access to those facilities. Plaintiff's argument would thereby eliminate any distinction between a cause of action for equitable relief under section 55 and a cause of action for damages under section 54.3.' " (Reycraft v. Lee (2009) 177 Cal.App.4th 1211, 1223 [99 Cal.Rptr.3d 746].)

- "We do not read Reycraft and Urhausen for the proposition that plaintiffs may not sue someone other than the owner or operator of the public facility described in section 54, for violating a plaintiff's rights under the DPA. A defendant's ability to control a particular location may ultimately be relevant to the question of liability, that is, whether the defendant interfered with the plaintiff's admission to or enjoyment of a public facility. But nothing in the language of section 54.3 suggests that damages may not be recovered against nonowners or operators. To the contrary, section 54.3 broadly and plainly provides: '[a]ny person or persons, firm or corporation who denies or interferes with admittance to or enjoyment of the public facilities as specified in [s]ections 54 and 54.1 or otherwise interferes with the rights of an individual with a disability under [s]ections 54, 54.1 and 54.2 is liable for … actual damages … .' " (Ruiz v. Musclewood Investment Properties, LLC (2018) 28 Cal.App.5th 15, 24 [238 Cal.Rptr.3d 835].)

- "In our view, Reycraft does not require that a plaintiff who sues for interference of his rights must present himself to defendant's business, with the intent to utilize defendant's services. Instead, a plaintiff who seeks damages for a violation of section 54.3 must establish that he 'presented himself' to a 'public place' with the intent of 'utilizing its services in the manner in which those … services are typically offered to the public and was actually denied' admission or enjoyment (or had his admission or enjoyment interfered with) on a particular occasion. Here, as alleged, plaintiff presented himself at a public place (the sidewalk) with the intent of using it in the manner it is typically offered to the public (walking on it for travel), and actually had his enjoyment interfered with on six occasions. Plaintiff therefore has standing to sue for damages." (Ruiz, supra, 28 Cal.App.5th at p. 24, original italics, internal citation omitted.)

- "Like the Unruh Civil Rights Act, the DPA incorporates the ADA to the extent that 'A violation of the right of an individual under the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (Public Law 101-336) also constitutes a violation of this section.' (Civ. Code, § 54, subd. (c)." (Baughman v. Walt Disney World Co. (2013) 217 Cal.App.4th 1438, 1446 [159 Cal.Rptr.3d 825].)

[*Name of plaintiff] claims that [name of defendant] discriminated against [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] because [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] refused to authorize disclosure of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] medical information to [name of defendant]. To establish this claim, [name of plaintiff] must prove all of the following:

1. That [name of defendant] asked [name of plaintiff] to sign an authorization so that [name of defendant] could obtain medical information about [name of plaintiff] from [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] health care providers;

2. That [name of plaintiff] refused to sign the authorization;

3. That [name of defendant] [specify retaliatory acts, e.g., terminated plaintiff's employment];

4. That [name of plaintiff]'s refusal to sign the authorization was a substantial motivating reason for [name of defendant]'s decision to [e.g., terminate plaintiff's employment];

5. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and

6. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

Even if [*name of plaintiff] proves all of the above, [name of defendant]'s conduct was not unlawful if [name of defendant] proves that the lack of the medical information made it necessary to [e.g., terminate plaintiff's employment].

New June 2015; Revised May 2020

Directions for Use

An employer may not discriminate against an employee in terms or conditions of employment due to the employee's refusal to sign an authorization to release ~~his or her~~the employee's medical information to the employer. (Civ. Code, § 56.20(b).). However, an employer may take any action that is necessary in the absence of the medical information due to the employee's refusal to sign an authorization. (Ibid.)

Give this instruction if an employee claims that ~~his or her~~the employer retaliated against ~~him or her~~the employee for refusing to authorize release of medical information. The employee has the burden of proving a causal link between the refusal to authorize and the employer's retaliatory actions. The employer then has the burden of proving necessity. (See Kao v. University of San Francisco (2014) 229 Cal.App.4th 437, 453 [177 Cal.Rptr.3d 145].) If necessary, the instruction may be expanded to define "medical information." (See Civ. Code, § 56.05(j) ["medical information" defined].)

The statute requires that the employer's retaliatory act be "due to" the employee's refusal to release the medical information. (Civ. Code, § 56.20(b).) One court has instructed the jury that the refusal to release must be a "motivating reason" for the retaliation. (See Kao, supra, 229 Cal.App.4th at p. 453.) With regard to the causation standard under the Fair Employment and Housing Act, the California Supreme Court has held that the protected activity must have been a substantial motivating reason. (See Harris v. City of Santa Monica (2013) 56 Cal.4th 203, 232 [152 Cal.Rptr.3d 392, 294 P.3d 49]; see also CACI No. 2507, "Substantial Motivating Reason" Explained.)

Code, § 56.11), or for refusing to authorize the employer to disclose confidential medical information relating to the employee to a third party (see Civ. Code, § 56.21)." (*Loder v. This instruction should be given with CACI No. 3104 (neglect), CACI No. 3107 (physical abuse), or CACI No. 3110 (abduction) if the plaintiff is seeking the enhanced remedies of attorney fees and costs and/or damages for a decedent's pain and suffering against an employer and the employee is also a defendant. (See Civ. Code, § 3294(b); Welf. & Inst. Code, §§ 15657(c), 15657.05.) If the employer is the only defendant, give CACI No. 3102B, Employer Liability for Enhanced Remedies—Employer Defendant Only. The requirements of Civil Code section 3294(b) need not be met in order to obtain enhanced remedies from an employer for financial abuse. (See Welf. & Inst. Code, § 15657.5(c).)

- "In order to obtain the remedies available in section 15657, a plaintiff must demonstrate by clear and convincing evidence that defendant is guilty of something more than negligence; he or she must show reckless, oppressive, fraudulent, or malicious conduct. The latter three categories involve 'intentional,' 'willful,' or 'conscious' wrongdoing of a 'despicable' or 'injurious' nature. 'Recklessness' refers to a subjective state of culpability greater than simple negligence, which has been described as a 'deliberate disregard' of the 'high degree of probability' that an injury will occur. Recklessness, unlike negligence, involves more than 'inadvertence, incompetence, unskillfulness, or a failure to take precautions' but rather rises to the level of a 'conscious choice of a course of action ... with knowledge of the serious danger to others involved in it.' "Malice" means that [[name of individual defendant]/[name of employer defendant]'s employee] acted with intent to cause injury or that [his/her*/nonbinary pronoun*] conduct was despicable and was done with a willful and knowing disregard of the rights or safety of another. A person acts with knowing disregard when ~~he or she~~the person is aware of the probable dangerous consequences of ~~his or her~~the person's conduct and deliberately fails to avoid those consequences.

"Despicable conduct" is conduct that is so vile, base, or contemptible that it would be looked down on and despised by reasonable people.

3203. Reasonable Number of Repair Opportunities—Rebuttable Presumption (Civ. Code, § 1793.22(b))

3. [[*Name of plaintiff] directly notified [name of manufacturer] in writing about the need to repair the defect;] [or]]

[B.

[C. The vehicle was out of service for repair of substantially impairing defects by [*name of defendant] [or its authorized repair facility] for more than 30 days.]

If [*name of plaintiff] has proved these facts, then the number of opportunities to make repairs was reasonable unless [name of defendant] proves that under all the circumstances [name of defendant] [or its authorized repair facility] was not given a reasonable opportunity to repair the defect.

[The 30-day limit for repairing defects will be lengthened if [*name of defendant] proves that repairs could not be made because of conditions beyond the control of [name of defendant] or its authorized repair facility.]

New September 2003; Revised February 2005, May 2020

Directions for Use

This instruction should not be given if none of the enumerated situations apply to the plaintiff's case. (Jiagbogu v. Mercedes-Benz USA (2004) 118 Cal.App.4th 1235, 1245 [13 Cal.Rptr.3d 679].)

Note that the factfinder's inquiry should be focused on overall reasonableness of the opportunities plaintiff gave defendant to make repairs. Therefore, while satisfying the rebuttable presumption (without having it overcome by defendant) is one way for plaintiff to satisfy the reasonable opportunities requirement, ~~he or she~~the plaintiff may do so in other ways instead. Likewise, because the statutory presumption is rebuttable, defendant is allowed an opportunity to overcome it.

The rebuttable presumption concerning the number of repair attempts applies only to new motor vehicles-see the Tanner Consumer Protection Act. (Civ. Code, § 1793.22(b).)

The bracketed language in the first two optional paragraphs concerning notice made directly to the manufacturer are applicable only if "the manufacturer has clearly and conspicuously disclosed to the buyer, with the warranty or the owner's manual, the provisions of [the Tanner Consumer Protection Act] and that of [Civil Code section 1793.2(d)], including the requirement that the buyer must notify the manufacturer directly." (See Civ. Code, § 1793.22(b)(3).) This is a matter that the judge should determine ahead of time as an issue of law.

3230. Continued Reasonable Use Permitted

The fact that [name of plaintiff] continued to use the [consumer good/new motor vehicle] after delivering it for repair does not waive [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] right to demand replacement or reimbursement. Nor does it reduce the amount of damages that you should award to [name of plaintiff] if you find that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] has proved [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] claim against [name of defendant].

New June 2012; Revised May 2020

Directions for Use

Give this instruction to make it clear to the jury that the fact that the buyer continued to use the product after delivering it for repair does not waive ~~his or her~~the buyer's right to reimbursement and damages. (See Jiagbogu v. Mercedes-Benz USA (2004) 118 Cal.App.4th 1235, 1240–1244 [13 Cal.Rptr.3d 679].) Continued use is relevant, however, to the jury's consideration of whether the vehicle was substantially impaired. See CACI No. 3204, "Substantially Impaired" Explained, factor (d).

There may be some uncertainty about the defendant's right to a damages offset for continued use. In an older case, the court held that principles of rescission under the Uniform Commercial Code survive under the Song-Beverly Consumer Warranty Act, and that the seller remains protected through a recoupment right of setoff for the buyer's use of the good beyond the time of revoking acceptance. (Ibrahim v. Ford Motor Co. (1989) 214 Cal.App.3d 878, 898 [263 Cal.Rptr. 64].) However, a more recent case rejected the proposition that pre Song-Beverly Commercial Code rules on continued use survive under Song-Beverly. (See Jiagbogu, supra, 118 Cal.App.4th at p. 1240.) The last sentence of this instruction is based on Jiagbogu, but in light of the potential uncertainty on the damages offset issue, the trial court will need to decide whether Jiagbogu or Ibrahim states the applicable rule.

Sources and Authority

- "[Defendant] contends that [plaintiff]'s request for restitution amounted to a rescission. But [Civil Code] section 1793.2 does not refer to rescission or any portion of the Commercial Code that discusses rescission. The [Song-Beverly] Act does not parallel the Commercial Code; it provides different and more extensive consumer protections. [Plaintiff] did not invoke rescission, or any of the common law doctrines or Commercial Code provisions relating to that remedy. It would not matter if he had referred to rescission in his buyback request, as long as he sought a remedy only under the Act, which contains no provision requiring formal rescission to obtain relief. [Defendant] acknowledges in its brief that [plaintiff] requested refund or replacement. That comports with a claim under the Act, not with a traditional cause of action for rescission." (Jiagbogu, supra, 118 Cal.App.4th at p. 1240, original italics, internal citations omitted.)

- "Within the context of the California Uniform Commercial Code courts around the country are in general agreement that reasonable continued use of motorized vehicles does not, as a matter of law, prevent the buyer from asserting rescission (or its U.Com.Code equivalent, revocation of acceptance). This consensus is based upon the judicial recognition of practical realities—purchasers of unsatisfactory vehicles may be compelled to continue using them due to the financial burden to securing alternative means of transport for a substantial period of time. The seller remains protected through a recoupment right of setoff for the buyer's use of the good beyond the time of revoking acceptance." (Ibrahim, supra, 214 Cal.App.3d at pp. 897–898, internal citations omitted.)

- "Nothing in the language of either the Uniform Commercial Code or the Song-Beverly Act suggests that abrogation of the common law principles relating to continued use and waiver of a buyer's right to rescind was intended. The former expressly specifies that 'the principles of law and equity . . . shall supplement its provisions.' (Cal. U. Com. Code, § 1103.) The legal principles governing continued use quoted previously are thus still applicable, as are the rules regulating the equitable right of setoff." (Ibrahim, supra, 214 Cal.App.3d at p. 898, internal citations omitted.)

- "Since we reject [defendant]'s basic argument that a request for replacement or refund under the Act constitutes rescission, we find no error in the trial court's refusal to instruct on waiver of right to rescind or on statutory offsets for postrescission use." (Jiagbogu, supra, 118 Cal.App.4th at p. 1242.)

- "[Civil Code] Section 1793.2, subdivision (d)(2)(C), and (d)(2)(A) and (B) to which it refers, comprehensively addresses replacement and restitution; specified predelivery offset; sales and use taxes; license, registration, or other fees; repair, towing, and rental costs; and other incidental damages. None contains any language authorizing an offset in any situation other than the one specified. This omission of other offsets from a set of provisions that thoroughly cover other relevant costs indicates legislative intent to exclude [post-delivery use] offsets." (Jiagbogu, supra, 118 Cal.App.4th at pp. 1243–1244.)

3335. Affirmative Defense—"Good Faith" Explained

In deciding whether [name of defendant] acted in good faith in attempting to meet competition, you must decide whether [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] belief was based on facts that would lead a reasonable person to believe that the price ~~he or she~~the defendant was offering would meet the legal price of ~~his or her~~the defendant's competitor. You must consider all of the facts and circumstances present, including, but not limited to:

1. The nature and source of the information on which [name of defendant] relied;

2. [Name of defendant]'s prior experience, if any, with similar information or with persons who provided the information;

3. [Name of defendant]'s prior pricing practices; and

4. [Name of defendant]'s general business practices.

[Name of defendant] does not have to prove that [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] price did actually meet the legal price of its competitor; only that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] reasonably believed that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] was offering a price that would meet the competitor's price.

Directions for Use

This instruction provides the jury with a general listing of circumstances against which it might consider evidence in the record to decide whether a defendant's attempts to meet competition were in good faith. The final paragraph eases the defendant's burden of proof with respect to the "meet but don't beat" element because a defendant is required only to prove its reasonable belief that its prices would meet, but not beat, a competitor's prices.

3408. Vertical Restraints—"Coercion" Explained

Coercion is conduct that interferes with the freedom of a reseller to sell in accordance with ~~his or her~~ the reseller's own judgment. [It may include a threat by [name of defendant] to stop doing business with [[name of plaintiff]/a reseller] or to hold back any product or service important to [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] competition in the market.] A unilateral decision to deal or refuse to deal with a particular reseller does not constitute coercion.
Coercion may be proven directly or indirectly. In deciding whether there was coercion, you may consider, among other factors, the following:

(a) Whether [name of defendant] penalized or threatened to penalize [name of plaintiff] for not following [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] suggestions;

(b) Whether [name of defendant] made or threatened to make an important benefit depend on [name of plaintiff] following [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] suggestions;

(c) Whether [name of defendant] required [name of plaintiff] to get approval before doing something other than what [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] suggested; and

(d) The relative bargaining power of [name of defendant] and [name of plaintiff].

Directions for Use

In the bracketed portion of the first paragraph, the word "reseller" should be used if the plaintiff is not the reseller.

- "[T]he 'conspiracy' or 'combination' necessary to support an antitrust action can be found where a supplier or producer, by coercive conduct, imposes restraints to which distributors involuntarily adhere. If a 'single trader' pressures customers or dealers into adhering to resale price maintenance, territorial restrictions, exclusive dealing arrangements or illegal 'tie-ins,' an unlawful combination is established, irrespective of any monopoly or conspiracy, and despite the recognized right of a producer to determine with whom it will deal." - "If a seller does no more than announce a policy designed to restrain trade, and declines to sell to those who fail to adhere to the policy, no illegal combination is established." (Kolling, supra, 137 Cal.App.3d at p. 721, internal citations omitted.)

- "A manufacturer may choose those with whom it wishes to deal and unilaterally may refuse to deal with a distributor or customer for business reasons without running afoul of the antitrust laws. It will thus be rare for a court to infer a vertical combination solely from a business's unilateral refusal to deal with distributors or customers who do not comply with certain conditions. Nonetheless, there is a line of cases that supports the proposition that a manufacturer may form a 'conspiracy' or 'combination' under the antitrust laws if it imposes restraints on dealers or customers by coercive conduct and they involuntarily adhere to those restraints." 3511B. Damage to Remainder During Construction (Code Civ. Proc., § 1263.420(b))

The [name of condemnor] has taken only a part of [name of property owner]'s property. [Name of property owner] claims that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun/it] suffered damage to the remaining property during construction of the project for which the property was taken. This loss was because of [specify reasons alleged for damage due to construction, e.g., reduced business because construction made access to owner's business more difficult].

If you determine that [name of property owner] suffered damage to [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] remaining property during construction, you must determine the amount of this damage and include it in determining just compensation.

New May 2017; Revised May 2020

Directions for Use

Give this instruction if the owner claims that ~~he or she~~the owner suffered an economic loss on the property not taken during construction of the project, for example because of decreased business due to access being made more difficult. (See City of Fremont v. Fisher (2008) 160 Cal.App.4th 666, 676 [73 Cal.Rptr.3d 54].) Courts have referred to these damages as "temporary severance damages" (see, e.g., City of Fremont, supra, 160 Cal.App.4th at p. 676.), though the statute does not call them either "temporary" or "severance." (See Code Civ. Proc., § 1263.420(b) [damage to the remainder caused by the construction and use of the project for which the property is taken].)

It is for the jury to determine if such a loss has actually occurred as long as the claim is not speculative, conjectural, or remote. (Metropolitan Water Dist. of So. California v. Campus Crusade for Christ, Inc. (2007) 41 Cal.4th 954, 973 [62 Cal.Rptr.3d 623, 161 P.3d 1175].)

A property owner may also be able to recover severance damages if the remaining property has decreased in value because of the partial taking. If severance damages are sought, give CACI No. 3511A, Severance Damages to Remainder. Read CACI No. 3512, Severance Damages—Offset for Benefits, if benefits to the owner's remaining property are at issue.

- Benefit to Remainder. Code of Civil Procedure section 1263.430.
- "When property acquired by eminent domain is part of a larger parcel, compensation must be awarded for the injury, if any, to the remainder. Such compensation is commonly called severance damages. When the property taken is but part of a single legal parcel, the property owner need only demonstrate injury to the portion that remains to recover severance damages." (City of San Diego v. Neumann (1993) 6 Cal.4th 738, 741 [25 Cal.Rptr.2d 480, 863 P.2d 725], internal citations omitted.)

- "Temporary severance damages resulting from the construction of a public project are also compensable. A property owner 'generally should be able "to present evidence to show whether and to what extent the delay disrupted its use of the remaining property." ' However, 'the mere fact of a delay associated with construction' does not, without more, entitle the property owner to temporary severance damages. The temporary easement or taking must interfere with the owner's actual intended use of the property." (City of Fremont, supra, 160 Cal.App.4th at p. 676, original italics.)

- "If [owner] had sold the property during the construction period and if the ongoing construction had temporarily lowered the sales price of the property, it would appear that [owner] would be entitled to recover that loss from [city]. But the mere fact of a delay associated with construction of the pipeline did not, without more, entitle [owner] to temporary severance damages relating to the financing or marketing of the property in this eminent domain action. [¶] This is not to say, however, that [owner] is barred from recovering damages for actual injury it may have suffered during the construction of the pipeline. On remand, [owner] may have the opportunity before the trial court to create an appropriate record to support its claim of severance damages. In addition, '[w]hen the condemnation action is tried before the improvement is constructed, and substantial although temporary interference with the property owner's rights of possession or access occurs during construction, the property owner may maintain a subsequent action for such damage occurring during construction.' " (Metropolitan Water Dist. of So. California, supra, 41 Cal.4th at p. 975, internal citations omitted.)

- "[Owner] sought temporary severance damages for impairment to his property because of construction activities associated with the project. Specifically, [owner] asserted the effect of removal of all landscaping for a period of one year, and the closure of two of four driveways on his property for four months during construction entitles him to temporary severance damages. In addition, [owner] asserts the access to his property was substantially impaired by the traffic detour traveling east through the intersection of East Airway Boulevard and Isabel Avenue created by the construction project." (City of Livermore v. Baca (2012) 205 Cal.App.4th 1460, 1471 [141 Cal.Rptr.3d 271] [court erred in excluding evidence of the above].)

- "The Legislature has framed the question of whether property should be viewed as an integrated whole in terms of whether the land remaining after the taking forms part of a 'larger parcel'; the issue is one of law for decision by the court." (City of San Diego, supra, 6 Cal.4th at p. 745, internal citations omitted.)

- "Both sides here thus agree that the court, not the jury, must make certain determinations that are a predicate to the award of severance damages. But [condemnor] is on weaker ground when it attempts to derive … a general rule that 'as a matter of constitutional and decisional law, all issues having to do with the existence of, or entitlement to, severance damages are entrusted to the trial judge,' such that '[o]nly after the trial judge has determined that severance damages exist does the jury consider the amount of those severance damages.' [Condemnor]'s proposed rule assumes that questions relating to the measurement of severance damages can be readily distinguished from questions relating to the entitlement to them in the first place but, as we have previously cautioned, the two concepts are not necessarily 'so easily separable.' " (Metropolitan Water Dist. of So. California, supra, 41 Cal.4th at p. 972, original italics, internal citations omitted.)

- "In determining severance damage, the jury must assume 'the most serious damage' which will be caused to the remainder by the taking of the easement and construction of the property." (San Diego Gas & Electric Co. v. Daley (1988) 205 Cal.App.3d 1334, 1345 [253 Cal.Rptr. 144], internal citations omitted, disapproved on other grounds in Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority v. Continental Development Corp. (1997) 16 Cal.4th 694, 720 [66 Cal.Rptr.2d 630, 941 P.2d 809].)

- "[W]hether access to a property has been 'substantially impaired' for purposes of determining severance damages is a question for the court, even though '[s]ubstantial impairment cannot be fixed by abstract definition; it must be found in each case upon the basis of the factual situation.' " (City of Perris v. Stamper (2016) 1 Cal.5th 576, 594 [205 Cal.Rptr.3d 797, 376 P.3d 1221].)

- "Although the measure of compensation that is 'just' for purposes of both the federal and state takings clause is often determined by the 'fair market value' of what has been lost, both federal and state takings cases uniformly recognize that the fair market value standard is not applicable in all circumstances and that there is no rigid or fixed standard that is appropriate in all settings." (Property Reserve, Inc. v. Superior Court (2016) 1 Cal.5th 151, 186 [204 Cal.Rptr.3d 770, 375 P.3d 887].)

3513. Goodwill

In this case, [name of business owner] is entitled to compensation for any loss of goodwill as a part of just compensation. "Goodwill" is the benefit that a business gains as a result of its location, reputation for dependability, skill, or quality, and any other circumstances that cause a business to keep old customers or gain new customers. You must include the amount of any loss of goodwill as an item in your award for just compensation.

New September 2003; Revised February 2007

Sources and Authority

- Compensation for Loss of Goodwill. Code of Civil Procedure section 1263.510.

- "Goodwill is the amount by which a business's overall value exceeds the value of its constituent assets, often due to a recognizable brand name, a sterling reputation, or an ideal location. Regardless of the cause, however, goodwill almost always translates into a business's profitability." (People ex rel. Dept. of Transportation v. Dry Canyon Enterprises, LLC (2012) 211 Cal.App.4th 486, 493−494 [149 Cal.Rptr.3d 601], internal citation omitted.)

- "Historically, lost business goodwill was not recoverable under eminent domain law. However, in 1975 the Legislature enacted section 1263.510 'in response to widespread criticism of the injustice wrought by the Legislature's historic refusal to compensate condemnees whose ongoing businesses were diminished in value by a forced relocation. [Citations.] The purpose of the statute was unquestionably to provide monetary compensation for the kind of losses which typically occur when an ongoing small business is forced to move and give up the benefits of its former location.' Thus, a business owner's right to compensation for loss of goodwill is a statutory right, not a constitutional right." (City and County of San Francisco v. Coyne (2008) 168 Cal.App.4th 1515, 1522 [86 Cal.Rptr.3d 255], internal citations omitted.)

- "Determining liability for loss of goodwill under section 1263.510 involves a two-step process. 'First, the court determines entitlement: that is, whether the party seeking compensation has presented sufficient evidence of the conditions for compensation set forth in subdivision (a)—causation, unavoidability, and no double recovery—such that the party is entitled to some compensation. If the party meets this burden, the matter proceeds to a second step, in which a jury (unless waived) determines the amount of the loss.' Thus, if that party meets certain ' "qualifying conditions for such compensation," ' it has a right to a jury trial on the amount of compensation due." (Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority v. Yum Yum Donut Shops, Inc. (2019) 32 Cal.App.5th 662, 669 [244 Cal.Rptr.3d 201], original italics, internal citation omitted.)

- "[T]he owner of a business conducted on property taken by eminent domain is entitled to compensation for loss of goodwill resulting from the taking. (Thee Aguila, Inc. v. Century Law Group, LLP (2019) 37 Cal.App.5th 22, 27 [249 Cal.Rptr.3d 254, 258].)

- "Since the conditions set forth in subdivision (a) all pertain to the 'loss' of 'goodwill,' the initial obligation to establish entitlement to compensation requires a showing, 'as a threshold matter, that the business had goodwill to lose.' " (People ex rel. Dept. of Transportation v. Presidio Performing Arts Foundation (2016) 5 Cal.App.5th 190, 201 [209 Cal.Rptr.3d 461].)

- "[I]n the entitlement phase, the party seeking compensation need only show that there was some loss of the benefit that the business was enjoying before the taking due to its location, reputation, and the like, without necessarily having to quantify its precise value." (People ex rel. Dept. of Transportation v. Presidio Performing Arts Foundation, supra, 5 Cal.App.5th at p. 204, original italics.)

- "After entitlement to goodwill is shown (which includes a showing that compensation for the loss will not be duplicated) neither party has the burden of proof with regard to valuation." - "[W]hile there are no explicit statutory requirements regarding an expert's use of a particular methodology for valuing lost goodwill, the expert's methodology must provide a fair estimate of actual value and cannot be based on hypothetical or speculative uses of a condemned business … ." (City and County of San Francisco, supra, 168 Cal.App.4th at p. 1523, original italics.)

- "The underlying purpose of this statute is to provide compensation for the kind of losses which typically occur when an ongoing business is forced to move and give up the benefits of its former location. It includes not only compensation for lost patronage itself, but also for expenses reasonably incurred in an effort to prevent a loss of patronage." (San Diego Metropolitan Transit Development Bd., supra, 73 Cal.App.4th at p. 537, internal citations omitted.)

- "Goodwill must, of course, be measured by a method which excludes the value of tangible assets or the normal return on those assets. However, the courts have wisely maintained that there is no single acceptable method of valuing goodwill. Valuation methods will differ with the nature of the business or practice and with the purpose for which the evaluation is conducted." (People ex rel. Dept. of Transportation v. Muller (1984) 36 Cal.3d 263, 271, fn. 7 [203 Cal.Rptr. 772, 681 P.2d 1340], internal citations omitted.)

- "The value of this goodwill may be determined using a variety of methods: for example, determining the total value of the business by capitalizing its cash flow, and then subtracting its tangible assets; or determining the amount by which the business's average profits exceed a fair rate of return on the fair market value of its tangible assets, and then capitalizing that amount. But the essential idea is that there is some intangible 'X-factor' that gives the business greater value than it would otherwise have." (People ex rel. Dept. of Transportation v. Presidio Performing Arts Foundation, supra, 5 Cal.App.5th at p. 201, internal citation omitted.)

- "Certainly a comparison of the pre-taking and post-taking goodwill values would be one way to quantify the amount of goodwill that was lost due to the taking. But it is not evident from the appellate record that the amount of lost goodwill could not be calculated in some other manner." (People ex rel. Dept. of Transportation v. Presidio Performing Arts Foundation, supra, 5 Cal.App.5th at p. 205.)

- "Section 1263.510 does not dictate that the only way to obtain compensation for the loss of goodwill is to prove pre-taking goodwill value based on a business value in excess of its tangible assets. Nor does the statute define goodwill as the value of a business not attributable to its tangible assets." (People ex rel. Dept. of Transportation v. Presidio Performing Arts Foundation, supra, 5 Cal.App.5th at p. 211.)

- "[A] 'cost to create' approach is a permissible means by which to value goodwill under [Code of Civil Procedure] section 1263.510 where, as here, a nascent business has not yet experienced excess profits but clearly has goodwill within the meaning of the statute and experiences a total loss of goodwill due to condemnation of the property on which the business is operated." (Inglewood Redevelopment Agency v. Aklilu (2007) 153 Cal.App.4th 1095, 1102 [64 Cal.Rptr.3d 519].)

- "As Aklilu implicitly recognized, unless there is independent proof that a business possesses goodwill in the first place, the cost-to-create methodology does not reflect the cost of creating any actual goodwill. Instead, it simply adds up costs and calls the total 'goodwill.' The relationship between goodwill and the costs to create breaks down even further when the condemnation takes only a portion of the business's goodwill. In that situation, it becomes necessary to figure out which costs match up with which portions of goodwill that are lost; in most cases, this will devolve into an exercise in futility or fiction." (Dry Canyon Enterprises, LLC, supra, 211 Cal.App.4th at p. 494.)

- "Since quantifying the loss of goodwill is a matter concerning the amount of goodwill lost, it is for the jury to decide between the competing views of the experts." (People ex rel. Dept. of Transportation v. Presidio Performing Arts Foundation, supra, 5 Cal.App.5th at pp. 213–214.)

- "A business which is required to move because of the taking of the property on which it operates has suffered a loss from the taking. This is true whether the tenancy is for a fixed term, or is a periodic tenancy as in this case. The value of the lost goodwill is affected by the probable remaining term of the tenancy. Evidence of the remaining length of a lease and the existence of an option to renew a lease are, of course, relevant for determining the amount of compensation, if any, to be paid for loss of goodwill. Similarly, evidence of the pre-condemnation duration of a periodic tenancy and the quality and mutual satisfaction in the landlord and tenant relationship are probative for determination of compensation for loss of goodwill." (Los Angeles Unified Sch. Dist. v. Pulgarin (2009) 175 Cal.App.4th 101, 107 [95 Cal.Rptr.3d 527], internal citation omitted.)

- "The statute's unambiguous plain language provides that a condemnee must show it cannot prevent a loss of goodwill by relocating or otherwise taking reasonable steps to prevent that loss to be entitled to a jury trial on the amount of that unavoidable loss. A fortiori, if the condemnee would lose goodwill—even if it relocated its business or otherwise reasonably mitigated the loss—the condemnee satisfies its threshold burden." (Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority, supra, 32 Cal.App.5th at p. 670.)

- "[I]n some circumstances, there may be a limited right to reimbursement for costs incurred to mitigate loss of goodwill." (Los Angeles Unified School Dist. v. Casasola (2010) 187 Cal.App.4th 189, 208 [114 Cal.Rptr.3d 318].)

- "Although the statutory scheme applies only to eminent domain proceedings, the right to recover lost goodwill has been extended to the indirect condemnee. Thus, 'goodwill is compensable in an inverse condemnation action to the same extent and with the same limitations on recovery found in ... section 1263.510.' " (San Diego Metropolitan Transit Development Bd., supra, 73 Cal.App.4th at p. 537, internal citations omitted.)

3700. Introduction to Vicarious Responsibility

[One may authorize another to act on ~~his or her~~one's behalf in transactions with third persons. This relationship is called "agency." The person giving the authority is called the "principal"; the person to whom authority is given is called the "agent."]

[An employer/A principal] is responsible for harm caused by the wrongful conduct of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] [employees/agents] while acting within the scope of their [employment/authority].

[An [employee/agent] is always responsible for harm caused by [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] own wrongful conduct, whether or not the [employer/principal] is also liable.]

New September 2003; Revised June 2015, May 2020

Directions for Use

This instruction provides the jury with some basic background information about the doctrine of respondeat superior. Include the first paragraph if the relationship at issue is one of principal-agent. If the employee or agent is also a defendant, give the third paragraph.

This instruction should be followed by either CACI No. 3703, Legal Relationship Not Disputed, CACI No. 3704, Existence of "Employee" Status Disputed, or CACI No. 3705, Existence of "Agency" Relationship Disputed.

3711. Partnerships

A partnership and each of its partners are responsible for the wrongful conduct of a partner acting within the scope of ~~his or her~~the partner's authority.

You must decide whether a partnership existed in this case. A partnership is a group of two or more persons who own a business in which all the partners agree to share the profits and losses. A partnership can be formed by a written or oral agreement or by an agreement implied by the parties' conduct.

3723. Substantial Deviation

If [an employee/a representative] combines ~~his or her~~the [employee/representative]'s personal business with the employer's business, then the [employee/representative]'s conduct is within the scope of [employment/authorization] unless the [employee/representative] substantially deviates from the employer's business.

Deviations that do not amount to abandoning the employer's business, such as incidental personal acts, minor delays, or deviations from the most direct route, are reasonably expected and within the scope of employment.

[Acts that are necessary for [an employee/a representative]'s comfort, health, and convenience while at work are within the scope of employment.]

New September 2003; Revised June 2006, April 2008, June 2014, May 2020

Directions for Use

This instruction may be given with CACI No. 3720, Scope of Employment, if the facts indicate that the employee has combined business and personal activities. In such a situation, the employee's personal activities must constitute a "substantial deviation" from or "abandonment" of the employer's business in order to be outside of the scope of employment. (See Farmers Ins. Group v. County of Santa Clara (1995) 11 Cal.4th 992, 1004 [47 Cal.Rptr.2d 478, 906 P.2d 440].) The words "reasonably expected" express foreseeability.

This instruction may be given with CACI No. 3725, Going-and-Coming Rule—Vehicle-Use Exception, but not with CACI No. 3724, Going-and-Coming Rule—Business-Errand Exception. (See Moradi v. Marsh USA, Inc. (2013) 219 Cal.App.4th 886, 907−908 [162 Cal.Rptr.3d 280].)

Give the optional third paragraph if the employee was at the work site when the act giving rise to liability occurred, but was not directly involved in performing job duties at the time (for example, at lunch or on break). (See Vogt v. Herron Construction, Inc. (2011) 200 Cal.App.4th 643, 651 [132 Cal.Rptr.3d 683].)

- "An exception [to employer liability] is made when the employee has substantially deviated from his duties for personal purposes at the time of the tortious act. While a minor deviation is foreseeable and will not excuse the employer from liability, a deviation from the employee's duties that is ' "so material or substantial as to amount to an entire departure" ' from those duties will take the employee's conduct out of the scope of employment." (Halliburton Energy Services, Inc. v. Department of Transportation (2013) 220 Cal.App.4th 87, 95 [162 Cal.Rptr.3d 752], internal citations omitted.)

- "While the question of whether an employee has departed from his special errand is normally one of fact for the jury, where the evidence clearly shows a complete abandonment, the court may make the determination that the employee is outside the scope of his employment as a matter of law." (Moradi, supra, 219 Cal.App.4th at p. 907.)

- "In some cases, the relationship between an employee's work and wrongful conduct is so attenuated that a jury could not reasonably conclude that the act was within the scope of employment." (Mary M., supra, 54 Cal.3d at p. 213, internal citations omitted.)

- "The fact that an employee is not engaged in the ultimate object of his employment at the time of his wrongful act does not preclude attribution of liability to an employer." (Alma W. v. Oakland Unified School Dist. (1981) 123 Cal.App.3d 133, 139 [176 Cal.Rptr. 287], internal citation omitted.)

- "One traditional means of defining this foreseeability is seen in the distinction between minor 'deviations' and substantial 'departures' from the employer's business. The former are deemed foreseeable and remain within the scope of employment; the latter are unforeseeable and take the employee outside the scope of his employment." (Moradi, supra, 219 Cal.App.4th at p. 901, original italics.)

- " ' "[W]here the employee is combining his own business with that of his employer, or attending to both at substantially the same time, no nice inquiry will be made as to which business he was actually engaged in at the time of injury, unless it clearly appears that neither directly nor indirectly could he have been serving his employer." ' " (Farmers Ins. Group, supra, 11 Cal.4th at p. 1004.)

- "Generally, '[i]f the main purpose of [the employee's] activity is still the employer's business, it does not cease to be within the scope of the employment by reason of incidental personal acts, slight delays, or deflections from the most direct route.' " (Halliburton Energy Services, Inc., supra, 220 Cal.App.4th at p. 98.)

- "Important factors in determining whether there has been a complete departure or merely a deviation are those of time and place. Thus, the fact that the employee is on the same route of return which he would use for both his employer's mission and his own is a factor tending to show a combination of missions. The amount of time consumed in the personal activity is likewise to be weighed. The nature of the digression is also to be considered. If the digression was in itself an inducement for [employee] to undertake the special errand or was connected with the performance of the errand, for example, as a reward, the jury would be entitled to weigh these facts in deciding whether there had been the complete departure from duty which is requisite to terminate course of employment." (Trejo v. Maciel (1966) 239 Cal.App.2d 487, 496–497 [48 Cal.Rptr. 765].)

- "[A]cts necessary to the comfort, convenience, health, and welfare of the employee while at work, though strictly personal and not acts of service, do not take the employee outside the scope of employment." (Vogt, supra, 200 Cal.App.4th at p. 651.)

- "Here, the required vehicle exception to the going and coming rule, not the special errand exception, governs our analysis. Accordingly, we have not applied the six factors used in special errand cases to determine whether [employee] was acting within the scope of her employment at the time of the accident. [¶] Rather, we have applied the relevant principles under the required vehicle exception. Those principles differ from the six factors used to determine whether the special errand exception applies. In the present case, [employer] required [employee] to use her personal vehicle to travel to and from the office and other destinations. She also had to use her personal vehicle before, during, and after regular work hours to develop new business. We have properly examined whether [employee]'s use of her personal vehicle conferred an incidental benefit on [employer]—it did; whether her planned stops at the frozen yogurt shop and the yoga studio were an unforeseeable, substantial departure from her commute—they were not; whether they were a foreseeable, minor deviation from her regular commute—they were; whether they were not so unusual or startling that it would be unfair to include the resulting loss among the other costs of the employer's business—they were not; and whether they were necessary for [employee]'s comfort, convenience, health, and welfare—they were." (Moradi, supra, 219 Cal.App.4th at pp. 907–908.)

- "We envision the link between respondeat superior and most work-related cell phone calls while driving as falling along a continuum. Sometimes the link between the job and the accident will be clear, as when an employee is on the phone for work at the moment of the accident. Oftentimes, the link will fall into a gray zone, as when an employee devotes some portion of his time and attention to work calls during the car trip so that the journey cannot be fairly called entirely personal. But sometimes, as here, the link is de minimis—one call of less than one minute eight or nine minutes before an accident while traveling on a personal errand of several miles' duration heading neither to nor from a worksite. When that happens, we find no respondeat superior as a matter of law." (Miller v. American Greetings Corp. (2008) 161 Cal.App.4th 1055, 1063 [74 Cal.Rptr.3d 776].)

3725. Going-and-Coming Rule—Vehicle-Use Exception

In general, an employee is not acting within the scope of employment while traveling to and from the workplace. But if an employer requires an employee to drive to and from the workplace so that the vehicle is available for the employer's business, then the drive to and from work is within the scope of employment. The employer's requirement may be either express or implied.

The drive to and from work may also be within the scope of employment if the use of the employee's vehicle provides some direct or incidental benefit to the employer. There may be a benefit to the employer if (1) the employee has agreed to make the vehicle available as an accommodation to the employer, and (2) the employer has reasonably come to rely on the vehicle's use and expects the employee to make it available regularly. The employee's agreement may be either express or implied.

New September 2003; Revised June 2014, May 2017, May 2019, May 2020

Directions for Use

This instruction sets forth the vehicle use exception to the going-and-coming rule, sometimes called the required-vehicle exception. (See (Jorge v. Culinary Institute of America (2016) 3 Cal.App.5th 382, 398, fn. 6 [207 Cal.Rptr.3d 586]; see also Pierson v. Helmerich & Payne International Drilling Co. (2016) 4 Cal.App.5th 608, 624–630 [209 Cal.Rptr.3d 222 [vehicle-use exception encompasses two categories; required-vehicle and incidental-use, both of which are expressed within CACI No. 3725].) It may be given with CACI No. 3720, Scope of Employment.

Under the going-and-coming rule, commute time is not within the scope of employment. However, commute time is within the scope of employment if the use of a personally owned vehicle is either an express or implied condition of employment, or if the employee has agreed, expressly or implicitly, to make the vehicle available as an accommodation to the employer and the employer has reasonably come to rely on its use and to expect the employee to make the vehicle available on a regular basis while still not requiring it as a condition of employment. (See Lobo v. Tamco (2010) 182 Cal.App.4th 297, 301 [105 Cal.Rptr.3d 718].) Whether there is such a requirement or agreement can be a question of fact for the jury. (See Ducey v. Argo Sales Co. (1979) 25 Cal.3d 707, 723 [159 Cal. Rptr. 835, 602 P.2d 755].)

Under this exception, the commute itself is considered the employer's business. However, scope of employment may end if the employee substantially deviates from the commute route for personal reasons. (See Moradi v. Marsh USA, Inc. (2013) 219 Cal.App.4th 886, 899, 907–908 [162 Cal.Rptr.3d 280].) If substantial deviation is alleged, give CACI No. 3723, Substantial Deviation.

One court has stated that the employee must have been using the vehicle to do the employer's business or provide a benefit for the employer at the time of the accident. (Newland v. County of L.A. (2018) 24 Cal.App.5th 676, 693 [234 Cal.App.3d 374], emphasis added.) However, many cases have applied the vehicle use exception without imposing this time-of-the-accident requirement. (See, e.g., Moradi, supra, 219 Cal.App.4th at p. 892 (employee was just going home at the time of the accident); Lobo, supra, 182 Cal.App.4th at p. 302 (same); Huntsinger v. Glass Containers Corp. (1972) 22 Cal.App.3d 803, 806–807 [99 Cal.Rptr. 666] (same); see also Smith v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1968) 69 Cal.2d 814, 815 [73 Cal.Rptr. 253, 447 P.2d 365] (workers compensation case: accident happened on the way to work).) Newland could be read as requiring the employee to need the vehicle for the employer's business on the day of the accident, even if ~~he or she~~the employee was not engaged in the employer's business at the time of the accident. (See Newland supra, 24 Cal.App.5th at p. 696 ["no evidence that [employee] required a vehicle for work on the day of the accident, and no evidence that the [employer] received any direct or incidental benefit from [employee] driving to and from work that day"].)

- " 'An offshoot of the doctrine of respondeat superior is the so-called "going and coming rule." Under this rule, an employee is not regarded as acting within the scope of employment while going to or coming from the workplace. … This is based on the concept that the employment relationship is suspended from the time the employee leaves work until he or she returns, since the employee is not ordinarily rendering services to the employer while traveling. …' " (Jeewarat v. Warner Brothers Entertainment, Inc. (2009) 177 Cal.App.4th 427, 435 [98 Cal.Rptr.3d 837].)

- "The 'required-vehicle' exception to the going and coming rule and its variants have been given many labels. In Halliburton, supra, 220 Cal.App.4th 87, we used the phrase 'incidental benefit exception' as the equivalent of the required-vehicle exception. In Felix v. Asai (1987) 192 Cal.App.3d 926 [237 Cal. Rptr. 718] (Felix), we used the phrase 'vehicle-use exception.' The phrase 'required-use doctrine' also has been used. The 'vehicle-use' variant appears in the title to California Civil Jury Instruction (CACI) No. 3725, 'Going-and-Coming Rule—Vehicle-Use Exception.' The various labels and the wide range of circumstances they cover have the potential to create uncertainty about the factual elements of the exception—a topic of particular importance when reviewing a motion for summary judgment for triable issues of material fact. [¶] To structure our analysis of this exception, and assist the clear statement of the factual elements of its variants, we adopt the phrase 'vehicle-use exception' from Felix and CACI No. 3725 to describe the exception in its broadest form. Next, under the umbrella of the vehicle-use exception, we recognize two identifiable categories with different factual elements. We label those two categories as the 'required-vehicle exception' and 'incidental benefit exception' because those labels emphasize the factual difference between the two categories." (Pierson, supra, 4 Cal.App.5th at pp. 624–625, original italics, internal citations omitted.)

- "Our division of the vehicle-use exception for purposes of this summary judgment motion should not be read as implying that this division is required, or even helpful, when presenting the scope of employment issue to a jury. The broad formulation of the vehicle-use exception in CACI No. 3725 correctly informs the jury that the issue of ultimate fact—namely, the scope of employment—may be proven in different ways." (Pierson, supra, 4 Cal.App.5th at p. 625, fn. 4.)

- "The portion of CACI No. 3725 addressing an employer requirement states: '[I]f an employer requires an employee to drive to and from the workplace so that the vehicle is available for the employer's business, then the drive to and from work is within the scope of employment. The employer's requirement may be either express or implied.' " (Pierson, supra, 4 Cal.App.5th at p. 625.)

"Our formulation of the incidental benefit exception is based on the part of CACI No. 3725 that states: 'The drive to and from work may … be within the scope of employment if the use of the employee's vehicle provides some direct or incidental benefit to the employer. There may be a benefit to the employer if (1) the employee has agreed to make the vehicle available as an accommodation to the employer, and (2) the employer has reasonably come to rely on the vehicle's use and expects the employee to make it available regularly.' The 'agreement may be either express or implied.' The existence of an express or implied agreement can be a question of fact for the jury." (Pierson, supra, 4 Cal.App.5th at p. 629.)

- " '[W]hen a business enterprise requires an employee to drive to and from its office in order to have his vehicle available for company business during the day, accidents on the way to or from the office are statistically certain to occur eventually, and, the business enterprise having required the driving to and from work, the risk of such accidents are risks incident to the business enterprise.' [¶] These holdings are the bases for the CACI instruction, the first paragraph of which tells the jury that the drive to and from work is within the scope of employment if the "employer requires [the] employee to drive to and from the workplace so that the vehicle is available for the employer's business," and the second paragraph, that the drive may be if 'the use of the employee's vehicle provides some direct or incidental benefit to the employer' and 'there may be a benefit to the employer if, one, the employee has [agreed] to make the vehicle available as an accommodation to the employer, and two, the employer has reasonably come to rely on the vehicle's use and expect the employee to make it available regularly.' (CACI No. 3725.)" (Jorge, supra, 3 Cal.App.5th at pp. 401–402, internal citation omitted.)

- " 'A well-known exception to the going-and-coming rule arises where the use of the car gives some incidental benefit to the employer. Thus, the key inquiry is whether there is an incidental benefit derived by the employer. [Citation.]' … The exception can apply if the use of a personally owned vehicle is either an express or implied condition of employment, or if the employee has agreed, expressly or implicitly, to make the vehicle available as an accommodation to the employer and the employer has 'reasonably come to rely upon its use and [to] expect the employee to make the vehicle available on a regular basis while still not requiring it as a condition of employment.' " (Lobo, supra, 182 Cal.App.4th at p. 297, original italics, internal citations omitted.)

- " 'To be sure, ordinary commuting is beyond the scope of employment … . Driving a required vehicle, however, is a horse of another color because it satisfies the control and benefit elements of respondeat superior. An employee who is required to use his or her own vehicle provides an "essential instrumentality" for the performance of the employer's work. … When a vehicle must be provided by an employee, the employer benefits by not having to have available an office car and yet possessing a means by which off-site visits can be performed by its employees.' " (Moradi, supra, 219 Cal.App.4th at p. 899.)

- "When an employer requires an employee to use a personal vehicle, it exercises meaningful control over the method of the commute by compelling the employee to foreswear the use of carpooling, walking, public transportation, or just being dropped off at work." (Moradi, supra, 219 Cal.App.4th at p. 899.)

- "The cases invoking the required-vehicle exception all involve employees whose jobs entail the regular use of a vehicle to accomplish the job in contrast to employees who use a vehicle to commute to a definite place of business." (Tryer v. Ojai Valley School Dist. (1992) 9 Cal.App.4th 1476, 1481 [12 Cal.Rptr.2d 114].)

- "[N]ot all benefits to the employer are of the type that satisfy the incidental benefits exception. The requisite benefit must be one that is 'not common to commute trips by ordinary members of the work force.' Thus, employers benefit when employees arrive at work on time, but this benefit is insufficient to satisfy the incidental benefits exception. An example of a sufficient benefit is where an employer enlarges the available labor market by providing travel expenses and paying for travel time." (Pierson, supra, 4 Cal.App.5th at p. 630.)

- "Where the incidental benefit exception applies, the employee's commute directly between work and home is considered to be within the scope of employment for respondeat superior purposes. Minor deviations from a direct commute are also included, but there is no respondeat superior liability if the employee substantially departs from the employer's business or is engaged in a purely personal activity at the time of the tortious injury." (Halliburton Energy Services, Inc. v. Department of Transportation (2013) 220 Cal.App.4th 87, 97 [162 Cal.Rptr.3d 752].)

- "Here, the required vehicle exception to the going and coming rule, not the special errand exception, governs our analysis. Accordingly, we have not applied the six factors used in special errand cases to determine whether [employee] was acting within the scope of her employment at the time of the accident. [¶] Rather, we have applied the relevant principles under the required vehicle exception. Those principles differ from the six factors used to determine whether the special errand exception applies. In the present case, [employer] required [employee] to use her personal vehicle to travel to and from the office and other destinations. She also had to use her personal vehicle before, during, and after regular work hours to develop new business. We have properly examined whether [employee]'s use of her personal vehicle conferred an incidental benefit on [employer]—it did; whether her planned stops at the frozen yogurt shop and the yoga studio were an unforeseeable, substantial departure from her commute—they were not; whether they were a foreseeable, minor deviation from her regular commute—they were; whether they were not so unusual or startling that it would be unfair to include the resulting loss among the other costs of the employer's business—they were not; and whether they were necessary for [employee]'s comfort, convenience, health, and welfare—they were." (Moradi, supra, 219 Cal.App.4th at pp. 907−908.)

- "One exception to the going and coming rule has been recognized when the commute involves ' "an incidental benefit to the employer, not common to commute trips by ordinary members of the work force." [Citation.]' When the employer incidentally benefits from the employee's commute, that commute may become part of the employee's workday for the purposes of respondeat superior liability. [¶] The incidental benefit exception has been applied when the employer furnishes, or requires the employee to furnish, a vehicle for transportation on the job, and the negligence occurs while the employee is traveling to or from work in that vehicle." (Halliburton Energy Services, Inc., supra, 220 Cal.App.4th at p. 96, internal citation omitted.)

- "Public policy would be ill-served by a rule establishing 24-hour employer liability for on-call employees, regardless of the nature of the employee's activities at the time of an accident." (Le Elder v. Rice (1994) 21 Cal.App.4th 1604, 1610 [26 Cal.Rptr.2d 749].)

- "[T]he trier of fact remains free to determine in a particular case that the employee's use of his or her vehicle was too infrequent to confer a sufficient benefit to the employer so as to make it reasonable to require the employer to bear the cost of the employee's negligence in operating the vehicle. This is particularly true in the absence of an express requirement that the employee make his or her vehicle available for the employer's benefit or evidence that the employer actually relied on the availability of the employee's car to further the employer's purposes." (Lobo v. Tamco (2014) 230 Cal.App.4th 438, 447 [178 Cal.Rptr.3d 515].)

- "Whether the transit is part of the employment relationship tends to be a more subtle issue than whether the transit was between home and work. … 'These are the extraordinary transits that vary from the norm because the employer requires a special, different transit, means of transit, or use of a car, for some particular reason of his own. When the employer gains that kind of a particular advantage, the job does more than call for routine transport to it; it plays a different role, bestowing a special benefit upon the employer by reason of the extraordinary circumstances. The employer's special request, his imposition of an unusual condition, removes the transit from the employee's choice or convenience and places it within the ambit of the employer's choice or convenience, restoring the employer-employee relationship.' " (Zhu v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2017) 12 Cal.App.5th 1031, 1038–1039 [219 Cal.Rptr.3d 630].)

"Liability may be imposed on an employer for an employee's tortious conduct while driving to or from work, if at the time of the accident, the employee's use of a personal vehicle was required by the employer or otherwise provided a benefit to the employer." (Newland, supra, 24 Cal.App.5th at p. 679.)

3726. Going-and-Coming Rule—Business-Errand Exception

In general, an employee is not acting within the scope of employment while traveling to and from the workplace. But if the employee, while commuting, is on an errand for the employer, then the employee's conduct is within the scope of ~~his or her~~the employee's employment from the time the employee starts on the errand until ~~he or she~~the employee returns from the errand or until ~~he or she~~the employee completely abandons the errand for personal reasons.

In determining whether an employee has completely abandoned a business errand for personal reasons, you may consider the following:

a. The intent of the employee;

b. The nature, time, and place of the employee's conduct;

c. The work the employee was hired to do;

d. The incidental acts the employer should reasonably have expected the employee to do;

e. The amount of freedom allowed the employee in performing [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] duties; and

f. The amount of time consumed in the personal activity;

g. [specify other factors, if any].

New September 2003; Revised June 2014, June 2017, Revised and Renumbered from CACI No. 3724 November 2017, Revised May 2020

Directions for Use

This instruction sets forth the business errand exception to the going-and-coming rule, sometimes called the "special errand" or "special mission" exception. (Sumrall v. Modern Alloys, Inc. (2017) 10 Cal.App.5th 961, 968, fn. 1 [216 Cal.Rptr.3d 848]; see Pierson v. Helmerich & Payne Internat. Drilling Co. (2016) 4 Cal.App.5th 608, 632–633, fn.6 [209 Cal.Rptr.3d 222] [citing this instruction].) It may be given with CACI No. 3720, Scope of Employment.

Under the going-and-coming rule, commute time is not within the scope of employment. However, if the employee is engaged in a "special errand" or a "special mission" for the employer while commuting, it will negate the going-and-coming rule and put the employee within the scope of employment. (Jeewarat v. Warner Brothers Entertainment, Inc. (2009) 177 Cal.App.4th 427, 435−436 [98 Cal.Rptr.3d 837].)

Scope of employment ends once the employee abandons or substantially deviates from the special errand. The second paragraph sets forth factors that the jury may consider in determining whether there has been abandonment of a business errand. (See Moradi v. Marsh USA, Inc. (2013) 219 Cal.App.4th 886, 907 [162 Cal.Rptr.3d 280] [opinion may be read to suggest that for the business-errand exception, CACI No. 3723, Substantial Deviation, should not be given].)

Sources and Authority

- " 'An offshoot of the doctrine of respondeat superior is the so-called "going and coming rule." Under this rule, an employee is not regarded as acting within the scope of employment while going to or coming from the workplace. … This is based on the concept that the employment relationship is suspended from the time the employee leaves work until he or she returns, since the employee is not ordinarily rendering services to the employer while traveling. …' " (Jeewarat, supra, 177 Cal.App.4th at p. 435.)

- " 'The special-errand exception to the going-and-coming rule is stated as follows: "If the employee is not simply on his way from his home to his normal place of work or returning from said place to his home for his own purpose, but is coming from his home or returning to it on a special errand either as part of his regular duties or at a specific order or request of his employer, the employee is considered to be in the scope of his employment from the time that he starts on the errand until he has returned or until he deviates therefrom for personal reasons." ' " (Moradi, supra, 219 Cal.App.4th at p. 906, original italics.)

- "When an employee is engaged in a 'special errand' or a 'special mission' for the employer it will negate the 'going and coming rule.' … The employer is 'liable for torts committed by its employee while traveling to accomplish a special errand because the errand benefits the employer. … ' " (Jeewarat, supra, 177 Cal.App.4th at p. 436, internal citations omitted.)

- "The term 'special errand' is something of a misnomer because it implies that the employer must make a specific request for a particular errand. However, the 'special errand' can also be part of the employee's regular duties. Thus, we have chosen to use the term 'business errand' throughout this opinion, as it is more precise and descriptive." (Sumrall, supra, 10 Cal.App.5th at p. 968 fn.1, internal citation omitted.)

- "[T]he jury's instruction on the business errand exception explains it concisely: … ." (Sumrall, supra, 10 Cal.App.5th at p. 969, quoting this instruction.)

- "It is not necessary that the employee is directly engaged in his job duties; included also are errands that incidentally or indirectly benefit the employer. It is essential, however, that the errand be either part of the employee's regular duties or undertaken at the specific request of the employer." (Morales-Simental v. Genentech, Inc. (2017) 16 Cal.App.5th 445, 452–453 [224 Cal.Rptr.3d 319], internal citation omitted.)

- "[T]he mere fact that a trip may be related to an employee's job does not impose liability on the employer. … [T]o bring an employee's trip within the special errand exception, the employer must request or at least expect it of the employee." (Morales-Simental, supra, 16 Cal.App.5th at p. 455, internal citation omitted.)

- "[Plaintiffs] assert that [employee], as a supervisorial employee tasked with hiring, had authority to act on [employer]'s behalf and, in essence, request himself to complete a special errand connected to that task. This argument finds no support in the extensive body of going and coming case law, and we decline plaintiffs' invitation to expand the special errand exception in the manner they suggest. What they propose is an invitation to self-serving pretense by anyone with a plausible claim to supervisorial authority." (Morales-Simental, supra, 16 Cal.App.5th at p. 456.)

  - "[I]n determining whether an employee has completely abandoned pursuit of a business errand for pursuit of a personal objective, a variety of relevant circumstances should be considered and weighed. Such factors may include [(1)] the intent of the employee, [(2)] the nature, time and place of the employee's conduct, [(3)] the work the employee was hired to do, [(4)] the incidental acts the employer should reasonably have expected the employee to do, [(5)] the amount of freedom allowed the employee in performing his duties, and [(6)] the amount of time consumed in the personal activity. … While the question of whether an employee has departed from his special errand is normally one of fact for the jury, where the evidence clearly shows a complete abandonment, the court may make the determination that the employee is outside the scope of his employment as a matter of law." (Moradi, supra, 219 Cal.App.4th at p. 907, original italics.)

- "Several general examples of the special-errand exception appear in the cases. One would be where an employee goes on a business errand for his employer leaving from his workplace and returning to his workplace. Generally, the employee is acting within the scope of his employment while traveling to the location of the errand and returning to his place of work. The exception also may be applicable to the employee who is called to work to perform a special task for the employer at an irregular time. The employee is within the scope of his employment during the entire trip from his home to work and back to his home. The exception is further applicable where the employer asks an employee to perform a special errand after the employee leaves work but before going home. In this case, as in the other examples, the employee is normally within the scope of his employment while traveling to the special errand and while traveling home from the special errand." (Felix v. Asai (1987) 192 Cal.App.3d 926, 931–932 [237 Cal.Rptr. 718], internal citations omitted.)

- "Plaintiffs contend an employee's attendance at an out-of-town business conference authorized and paid for by the employer may be a special errand for the benefit of the employer under the special errand doctrine. [Defendant] asserts that the special errand doctrine does not apply to commercial travel. We conclude that a special errand may include commercial travel such as the business trip in this case." (Jeewarat, supra, 177 Cal.App.4th at p. 436.)

"An employee who has gone upon a special errand does not cease to be acting in the course of his employment upon his accomplishment of the task for which he was sent. He is in the course of his employment during the entire trip." (Trejo v. Maciel (1966) 239 Cal.App.2d 487, 495 [48 Cal.Rptr. 765].)

- "Whether the transit is part of the employment relationship tends to be a more subtle issue than whether the transit was between home and work. … 'These are the extraordinary transits that vary from the norm because the employer requires a special, different transit, means of transit, or use of a car, for some particular reason of his own. When the employer gains that kind of a particular advantage, the job does more than call for routine transport to it; it plays a different role, bestowing a special benefit upon the employer by reason of the extraordinary circumstances. The employer's special request, his imposition of an unusual condition, removes the transit from the employee‘s choice or convenience and places it within the ambit of the employer's choice or convenience, restoring the employer-employee relationship.’ ” (Zhu v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2017) 12 Cal.App.5th 1031, 1038–1039 [219 Cal.Rptr.3d 630].)

- “[W]here an employee is required by the employment to work at both the employer's premises and at home, he is in the course of employment while traveling between the employer's premises and home.” (Zhu, supra, 12 Cal.App.5th at p. 1040.)

3727. Going-and-Coming Rule—Compensated Travel Time Exception

If an employer has agreed to compensate an employee for ~~his or her~~the employee's commuting time, then the employee's conduct is within the scope of ~~his or her~~ employment as long as the employee is going to the workplace or returning home.

New November 2017; Revised May 2020

Directions for Use

This instruction sets forth the compensated travel time exception to the going-and-coming rule. It may be given with CACI No. 3720, Scope of Employment. CACI No. 3723, Substantial Deviation, may also be given if the employee did not go directly from home to work or work to home.

Under the going-and-coming rule, commute time is generally not within the scope of employment. (Jeewarat v. Warner Bros. Entertainment, Inc. (2009) 177 Cal.App.4th 427, 435 [98 Cal.Rptr.3d 837].) However, commute time is within the scope of employment if the employer compensates the employee for the time spent commuting. (Lynn v. Tatitlek Support Services, Inc. (2017) 8 Cal.App.5th 1096, 1111 [214 Cal.Rptr.3d 449].)

- "[T]he employer may agree, either expressly or impliedly, that the relationship shall continue during the period of 'going and coming,' in which case the employee is entitled to the protection of the act during that period. Such an agreement may be inferred from the fact that the employer furnishes transportation to and from work as an incident of the employment. It seems equally clear that such an agreement may also be inferred from the fact that the employer compensates the employee for the time consumed in traveling to and from work." (Kobe v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1950) 35 Cal.2d 33, 35 [215 P.2d 736], internal citations omitted.)

- "There is a substantial benefit to an employer in one area to be permitted to reach out to a labor market in another area or to enlarge the available labor market by providing travel expenses and payment for travel time. It cannot be denied that the employer's reaching out to the distant or larger labor market increases the risk of injury in transportation. In other words, the employer, having found it desirable in the interests of his enterprise to pay for travel time and for travel expenses and to go beyond the normal labor market or to have located his enterprise at a place remote from the labor market, should be required to pay for the risks inherent in his decision." (Hinman v. Westinghouse Electric Co. (1970) 2 Cal.3d 956, 962 [88 Cal.Rptr. 188, 471 P.2d 988].)

- "We are satisfied that, where, as here, the employer and employee have made the travel time part of the working day by their contract, the [employee] should be treated as such during the travel time, and it follows that so long as the employee is using the time for the designated purpose, to return home, the doctrine of respondeat superior is applicable." (Hinman, supra, 2 Cal.3d at pp. 962.)

- "[C]ourts have excepted from the going and coming rule those cases in which the employer and employee have entered into an employment contract in which the employer agrees to pay the employee for travel time and expenses associated with commuting, thus making 'the travel time part of the working day by their contract.' " (Lynn, supra, 8 Cal.App.5th at p. 1111.)

- "To the same effect are the cases where the employer furnishes transportation to and from work. ' "The essential prerequisite to compensation is that the danger from which the injury results be one to which he is exposed as an employee in his particular employment," and '[t]his requirement is met when, as an employee and solely by reason of his relationship as such to his employer, he enters a vehicle regularly provided by his employer for the purpose of transporting him to or from the place of employment.' Here, again, it is the employer's decision to make the transit part of the employment relationship." (Zhu v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2017) 12 Cal.App.5th 1031, 1039 [219 Cal.Rptr.3d 630].)

- "[T]he mere payment of a travel allowance as shown in the present case does not reflect a sufficient benefit to defendant so that it should bear responsibility for plaintiff's injuries." (Caldwell v. A.R.B., Inc. (1986) 176 Cal.App.3d 1028, 1042 [222 Cal.Rptr. 494].)

Directions for Use

Read the last bracketed portion when the indemnitor claims that the indemnitor was not the sole cause of the indemnitee's liability or loss~~he or she was not the sole cause~~.

This instruction is intended for use in cases where the plaintiff seeks equitable indemnity from another responsible tortfeasor who was not a party to the original action or proceeding from which the liability in question arose. For cases in which the indemnitee seeks equitable indemnity against a co-defendant or cross-defendant as part of the original tort action, see CACI No. 406, Apportionment of Responsibility.

- "In order to attain ... a system ... in which liability for an indivisible injury caused by concurrent tortfeasors will be borne by each individual tortfeasor 'in direct proportion to [his] respective fault,' we conclude that the current equitable indemnity rule should be modified to permit a concurrent tortfeasor to obtain partial indemnity from other concurrent tortfeasors on a comparative fault basis." "[O]ne person is unjustly enriched at the expense of another when the other discharges liability that it should be his responsibility to pay." [Citations.] [¶] California common law recognizes a right of partial indemnity under which liability among multiple tortfeasors may be apportioned according to the comparative negligence of each.' The test for indemnity is thus whether the indemnitor and indemnitee jointly caused the plaintiff's injury." (*AmeriGas Propane, L.P. v. - "[Indemnitor]'s liability was not based on its independent acts or omissions, but was based solely on its role as retailer of [manufacturer]'s defectively designed product. As a matter of fundamental fairness, a manufacturer … cannot seek equitable indemnification from a retailer found not to have been negligent or independently at fault, but found to be liable solely under the strict liability theory of design defect. Under these limited circumstances the retailer is not 'at fault' within the meaning of a cause of action for equitable indemnification." (Bailey, supra, 199 Cal.App.4th at p. 215.)

- For purposes of equitable indemnity, "it matters not whether the tortfeasors acted in concert to create a single injury, or successively, in creating distinct and divisible injury." (Blecker v. Wolbart (1985) 167 Cal.App.3d 1195, 1203 [213 Cal.Rptr. 781].)

extent that comparative equitable indemnification can be applied between concurrent intentional tortfeasors." (Baird v. Jones (1993) 21 Cal.App.4th 684, 690 [27 Cal.Rptr.2d 232].)

- Statutes may limit one's right to recover comparative indemnity. (See, e.g., E.W. Bliss Co. v. Superior Court (1989) 210 Cal.App.3d 1254, 1259 [258 Cal.Rptr. 783] [Lab. Code, § 4558(d) provides that there is no right of action for comparative indemnity against an employer for injuries resulting from the removal of an operation guard from a punch press].)

New September 2003; Revised December 2007, May 2020

Directions for Use

The party identifications in this instruction assume a cross-complaint between indemnitor and indemnitee defendants. In a direct action by the indemnitee against the indemnitor, "name of plaintiff" will refer to the person to whom the indemnitee has incurred liability.

Implied contractual indemnity may arise for reasons other than the indemnitor's negligent performance under the contract. If the basis of the claim is other than negligence, specify the conduct involved. (See Garlock Sealing Technologies, LLC v. NAK Sealing Technologies Corp. (2007) 148 Cal.App.4th 937, 974 [56 Cal.Rptr.3d 177] [breach of warranty].)

Read the last bracketed portion if the indemnitor claims that ~~he or she~~the indemnitor was not the sole cause of the indemnitee's liability or loss. Select options depending on whether the indemnitor alleges contributory conduct of the indemnitee, of others, or of both. Element 1 will have to be modified if there are different contributing acts alleged against the indemnitee and others; for example, if the indemnitee is alleged to have been negligent and another party is alleged to be strictly liable.

A special finding that an agreement existed may create a need for instructions, but it is a question of law whether an agreement implies a duty to indemnify.

- "In general, indemnity refers to 'the obligation resting on one party to make good a loss or damage another party has incurred.' Historically, the obligation of indemnity took three forms: (1) indemnity expressly provided for by contract (express indemnity); (2) indemnity implied from a contract not specifically mentioning indemnity (implied contractual indemnity); and (3) indemnity arising from the equities of particular circumstances (traditional equitable indemnity). [¶] Although the foregoing categories of indemnity were once regarded as distinct, we now recognize there are only two basic types of indemnity: express indemnity and equitable indemnity. Though not extinguished, implied contractual indemnity is now viewed simply as 'a form of equitable indemnity.' " (Prince v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (2009) 45 Cal.4th 1151, 1157 [90 Cal.Rptr.3d 732, 202 P.3d 1115], internal citations omitted.)

- "The right to implied contractual indemnity is predicated upon the indemnitor's breach of contract, 'the rationale ... being that a contract under which the indemnitor undertook to do work or perform services necessarily implied an obligation to do the work involved in a proper manner and to discharge foreseeable damages resulting from improper performance absent any participation by the indemnitee in the wrongful act precluding recovery.' ... 'An action for implied contractual indemnity is not a claim for contribution from a joint tortfeasor; it is not founded upon a tort or upon any duty which the indemnitor owes to the injured third party. It is grounded upon the indemnitor's breach of duty owing to the indemnitee to properly perform its contractual duties.' " (West v. Superior Court (1994) 27 Cal.App.4th 1625, 1633 [34 Cal.Rptr.2d 409], internal citations omitted, original italics.)

- "[A]n implied contractual indemnity claim, like a traditional equitable indemnity claim, is subject to the American Motorcycle rule that a party's liability for equitable indemnity is based on its proportional share of responsibility for the damages to the injured party." (Prince, supra, 45 Cal.4th at p. 1165, original italics.)

- "[O]ur recognition that 'a claim for implied contractual indemnity is a form of equitable indemnity subject to the rules governing equitable indemnity claims' corrects any misimpression that joint liability is not a component." (Prince, supra, 45 Cal.4th at p. 1166, internal citation omitted.)

- "[U]nder [Code of Civil Procedure] section 877.6, subsection (c), ... an [implied contractual] indemnity claim, like other equitable indemnity claims, may not be pursued against a party who has entered into a good faith settlement." (Bay Development, Ltd. v. Superior Court (1990) 50 Cal.3d 1012, 1031 [269 Cal.Rptr. 720, 791 P.2d 290].)

- "We conclude the trial court erred in denying [the indemnitee's] implied contractual indemnity based on [indemnitee's] failure to prove [the indemnitor's] breach of warranty was the product of [indemnitor's] failure to use reasonable care in performing its contractual duties. [Indemnitee] does not need to prove a negligent breach of contract to be entitled to implied contractual indemnity." (Garlock Sealing Technologies, supra, 148 Cal.App.4th at p. 974, internal citations omitted.)

3903Q. Survival Damages (Economic Damage) (Code Civ. Proc, § 377.34)

If you decide that [name of plaintiff] has proved [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] claim against [name of defendant] for the death of [name of decedent], you must also decide the amount of damages that [name of decedent] sustained before death and that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] would have been entitled to recover because of [name of defendant]'s conduct[, including any [penalties/ [or] punitive damages] as explained in the other instructions that I will give you].

[Name of plaintiff] may recover the following damages:

[1. The reasonable cost of reasonably necessary medical care that [name of decedent] received;]

[2. The amount of [income/earnings/salary/wages] that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] lost before death;]

[3. The reasonable cost of health care services that [name of decedent] would have provided to [name of family member] before [name of decedent]'s death;]

[4. [Specify other recoverable economic damage.]]

You may not award damages for any loss for [name of decedent]'s shortened life span attributable to [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] death.

New May 2019; Revised November 2019, May 2020

Directions for Use

Give this instruction if a deceased person's estate claims survival damages for harm that the decedent incurred in ~~his or her~~the decedent's lifetime. This instruction addresses survival damages in a claim against a defendant who is alleged to have caused the decedent's death. However, survival damages are available for any claim incurred while alive, not just a claim based on the decedent's death. (See County of Los Angeles v. Superior Court (1999) 21 Cal.4th 292, 294 [87 Cal.Rptr.2d 441, 981 P.2d 68].) In a case that does not involve conduct that caused the decedent's death, modify the instruction to include the damages recoverable under the particular claim rather than the damages attributable to the death.

Survival damages can include punitive damages and penalties. (See Code Civ. Proc., § 377.34.) Include the bracketed language in the last sentence of the opening paragraph if either or both are sought. If punitive damages are claimed, give the appropriate instruction from CACI Nos. 3940–3949.

If items 1 and 2 are given, do not also give CACI No. 3903A, Medical Expenses—Past and Future (Economic Damages), and CACI No. 3903C, Past and Future Lost Earnings (Economic Damages), as the future damages parts of those instructions are not applicable. Other 3903 group instructions may be omitted if their items of damages are included under item 3 and must not be given if they include future damages.

Damages for pain, suffering, or disfigurement are not recoverable in a survival action except at times in an elder abuse case. (Code Civ. Proc., § 377.34; see Quiroz v. Seventh Ave. Center (2006) 140 Cal.App.4th 1256, 1265 [45 Cal.Rptr.3d 222]; see also instructions in the 3100 Series, Elder Abuse and Dependent Adult Civil Protection Act.)

- Survival Damages. Code of Civil Procedure section 377.34.

- "In California, 'a cause of action for or against a person is not lost by reason of the person's death' and no 'pending action . . . abate[s] by the death of a party . . .' In a survival action by the deceased plaintiff's estate, the damages recoverable expressly exclude 'damages for pain, suffering, or disfigurement.' They do, however, include all 'loss or damage that the decedent sustained or incurred before death, including any penalties or punitive or exemplary damages.' Thus, under California's survival law, an estate can recover not only the deceased plaintiff's lost wages, medical expenses, and any other pecuniary losses incurred before death, but also punitive or exemplary damages." (County of L.A., supra, 21 Cal.4th at pp. 303–304, internal citations omitted.)

- "The first category consists of the reasonable value of nursing and other services that Decedent would have provided to his wife prior to his death, but was unable to provide due to his illness (replacement care). Again, [defendant] does not contest the recoverability of such damages here. Nor did it below. Such damages are recoverable. (See … CACI No. 3903E ["Loss of Ability to Provide Household Services (Economic Damage)"].)" (Williams v. The Pep Boys Manny Moe & Jack of California (2018) 27 Cal.App.5th 225, 238 [238 Cal.Rptr.3d 809], internal citations omitted.)

- "The second category requires more discussion. That consists of the reasonable value of 24-hour nursing care that Decedent would have provided to his wife after his death and before she passed away in 2014, nearly four years later. As appellants explain this claim, 'to the extent his children were forced to provide gratuitous home health care and other household services to [wife] up to the time of her death, [Decedent's] estate is also entitled to recover those costs as damages since he had been providing those services for his wife before he died.' … The parties disagree as to whether such damages are recoverable. Appellants contend that they are properly recovered as ' "lost years" damages,' representing economic losses the decedent incurred during the period by which his life expectancy was shortened; [defendant], in contrast, contends that they are not recoverable because they were not 'sustained or incurred before death,' as required by section 377.34. We conclude that [defendant] has the better argument." (Williams, supra, 27 Cal.App.5th at p. 238, original italics.)

- "By expressly authorizing recovery of only penalties or punitive damages that the decedent would have been entitled to recover had the decedent lived, the Legislature necessarily implied that other categories of damages that the decedent would have been entitled to recover had the decedent lived would not be recoverable in a survival action." (Williams, supra, 27 Cal.App.5th at p. 239, original italics.)

- "In survival actions, … damages are narrowly limited to 'the loss or damage that the decedent sustained or incurred before death', which by definition excludes future damages. For a trial court to award ' "lost years" damages' in a survival action—that is, damages for 'loss of future economic benefits that [a decedent] would have earned during the period by which his life expectancy was shortened'—would collapse this fundamental distinction and render the plain language of 377.34 meaningless." (Williams, supra, 27 Cal.App.5th at p. 240, original italics, internal citations omitted.)

- "The same conclusion [that they are not recoverable in a survival action] would seem to follow as to the trial court's award of damages for the value of Decedent's lost pension benefits and Social Security benefits." (Williams, supra, 27 Cal.App.5th at p. 240, fn. 21.)

- "[T]here is at least one exception to the rule that damages for the decedent's predeath pain and suffering are not recoverable in a survivor action. Such damages are expressly recoverable in a survivor action under the Elder Abuse Act if certain conditions are met." (Quiroz, supra, 140 Cal.App.4th at p. 1265.)

3921. Wrongful Death (Death of an Adult)

If you decide that [name of plaintiff] has proved [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] claim against [name of defendant] for the death of [name of decedent], you also must decide how much money will reasonably compensate [name of plaintiff] for the death of [name of decedent]. This compensation is called "damages."

[Name of plaintiff] does not have to prove the exact amount of these damages. However, you must not speculate or guess in awarding damages.

The damages claimed by [name of plaintiff] fall into two categories called economic damages and noneconomic damages. You will be asked to state the two categories of damages separately on the verdict form.

[Name of plaintiff] claims the following economic damages:

1. The financial support, if any, that [name of decedent] would have contributed to the family during either the life expectancy that [name of decedent] had before [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] death or the life expectancy of [name of plaintiff], whichever is shorter;

2. The loss of gifts or benefits that [name of plaintiff] would have expected to receive from [name of decedent];

3. Funeral and burial expenses; and

4. The reasonable value of household services that [name of decedent] would have provided.

Your award of any future economic damages must be reduced to present cash value.

[Name of plaintiff] also claims the following noneconomic damages:

1. The loss of [name of decedent]'s love, companionship, comfort, care, assistance, protection, affection, society, moral support[; [and]/.]

[2. The loss of the enjoyment of sexual relations[; [and]/.]]

No fixed standard exists for deciding the amount of noneconomic damages. You must use your judgment to decide a reasonable amount based on the evidence and your common sense.

[For these noneconomic damages, determine the amount in current dollars paid at the time of judgment that will compensate [name of plaintiff] for those damages. This amount of noneconomic damages should not be further reduced to present cash value because that reduction should only be performed with respect to future economic damages.]

In determining [name of plaintiff]'s loss, do not consider:

1. [Name of plaintiff]'s grief, sorrow, or mental anguish;

2. [Name of decedent]'s pain and suffering; or

3. The poverty or wealth of [name of plaintiff].

In deciding a person's life expectancy, you may consider, among other factors, the average life expectancy of a person of that age, as well as that person's health, habits, activities, lifestyle, and occupation. According to [insert source of information], the average life expectancy of a [insert number]-year-old [male/female] is [insert number] years, and the average life expectancy of a [insert number]-year-old [male/female] is [insert number] years. This published information is evidence of how long a person is likely to live but is not conclusive. Some people live longer and others die sooner.

[In computing these damages, consider the losses suffered by all plaintiffs and return a verdict of a single amount for all plaintiffs. I will divide the amount [among/between] the plaintiffs.]

New September 2003; Revised December 2005, February 2007, April 2008, December 2009, June 2011, December 2013, May 2020

Directions for Use

If the decedent recovered damages for lost earning capacity in ~~his or her~~the decedent's lifetime, an heir's recovery for lost financial support (economic damages item 1) is to be measured by the decedent's physical condition at the time of death. There is no similar limitation on recovery for loss of consortium (noneconomic damages item 1). (Boeken v. Philip Morris USA Inc. (2013) 217 Cal.App.4th 992, 997−1000 [159 Cal.Rptr.3d 195]; see Blackwell v. American Film Co. (1922) 189 Cal. 689, 694 [209 P. 999].)

One of the life-expectancy subjects in the second sentence of the second-to-last paragraph should be the decedent, and the other should be the plaintiff. This definition is intended to apply to the element of damages pertaining to the financial support that the decedent would have provided to the plaintiff.

Use of the life tables in Vital Statistics of the United States, published by the National Center for Health Statistics, is recommended. (See Life Expectancy Table—Male and Life Expectancy Table—Female, following the Damages series.) The first column shows the age interval between the two exact ages indicated. For example, 50–51 means the one-year interval between the fiftieth and fifty-first birthdays.

For an instruction, worksheets, and tables for use in reducing future economic damages to present value, see CACI No. 3904B, Use of Present-Value Tables.

The paragraph concerning not reducing noneconomic damages to present cash value is bracketed because the law is not completely clear. It has been held that all damages, pecuniary and nonpecuniary, must be reduced to present value. (See Fox v. Pacific Southwest Airlines (1982) 133 Cal.App.3d 565, 569 [184 Cal.Rptr. 87]; cf. Restat 2d of Torts, § 913A [future pecuniary losses must be reduced to present value].) The view of the court in Fox was that damages for lost value of society, comfort, care, protection and companionship must be monetarily quantified, and thus become pecuniary and subject to reduction to present value. However, the California Supreme Court subsequently held that with regard to future pain and suffering, the amount that the jury is to award should already encompass the idea of today's dollars for tomorrow's loss (See Salgado v. County of L.A. (1998) 19 Cal.4th 629, 646–647 [80 Cal.Rptr.2d 46, 967 P.2d 585]), so there is no further reduction to present value. (See CACI No. 3904A, Present Cash Value, and CACI No. 3904B, Use of Present-Value Tables.) While it seems probable that Salgado should apply to wrongful death actions, no court has expressly so held.

Assuming that Salgado applies to wrongful death, this paragraph is important to ensure that the jury does not apply any tables and worksheets provided to reduce future economic damages to present value (see CACI No. 3904B) to the noneconomic damages also. Note that because only future economic damages are to be reduced to present value, the jury must find separate amounts for economic and noneconomic damages and for past and present economic damages. (See CACI No. VF-3905, Damages for Wrongful Death (Death of an Adult).)

3940. Punitive Damages—Individual Defendant—Trial Not Bifurcated

If you decide that [name of defendant]'s conduct caused [name of plaintiff] harm, you must decide whether that conduct justifies an award of punitive damages. The purposes of punitive damages are to punish a wrongdoer for the conduct that harmed the plaintiff and to discourage similar conduct in the future.

You may award punitive damages only if [name of plaintiff] proves by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] engaged in that conduct with malice, oppression, or fraud.

"Malice" means that [name of defendant] acted with intent to cause injury or that [name of defendant]'s conduct was despicable and was done with a willful and knowing disregard of the rights or safety of another. A person acts with knowing disregard when ~~he or she~~the person is aware of the probable dangerous consequences of ~~his or her~~the person's conduct and deliberately fails to avoid those consequences.

"Oppression" means that [name of defendant]'s conduct was despicable and subjected [name of plaintiff] to cruel and unjust hardship in knowing disregard of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] rights.

"Despicable conduct" is conduct that is so vile, base, or contemptible that it would be looked down on and despised by reasonable people.

"Fraud" means that [name of defendant] intentionally misrepresented or concealed a material fact and did so intending to harm [name of plaintiff].

There is no fixed formula for determining the amount of punitive damages, and you are not required to award any punitive damages. If you decide to award punitive damages, you should consider all of the following factors in determining the amount:

(a) How reprehensible was [name of defendant]'s conduct? In deciding how reprehensible [name of defendant]'s conduct was, you may consider, among other factors:

1. Whether the conduct caused physical harm;

2. Whether [name of defendant] disregarded the health or safety of others;

3. Whether [name of plaintiff] was financially weak or vulnerable and [name of defendant] knew [name of plaintiff] was financially weak or vulnerable and took advantage of [him/her/nonbinary pronoun/it];

4. Whether [name of defendant]'s conduct involved a pattern or practice; and

5. Whether [name of defendant] acted with trickery or deceit.

(b) Is there a reasonable relationship between the amount of punitive damages and

[name of plaintiff]'s harm [or between the amount of punitive damages and potential harm to [name of plaintiff] that [name of defendant] knew was likely to occur because of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] conduct]?

(c) In view of [name of defendant]'s financial condition, what amount is necessary to punish [him/her/nonbinary pronoun/it] and discourage future wrongful conduct? You may not increase the punitive award above an amount that is otherwise appropriate merely because [name of defendant] has substantial financial resources. [Any award you impose may not exceed [name of defendant]'s ability to pay.]

[Punitive damages may not be used to punish [name of defendant] for the impact of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] alleged misconduct on persons other than [name of plaintiff].]

Directions for Use

This instruction is intended to apply to individual persons only. When the plaintiff is seeking punitive damages against corporate defendants, use CACI No. 3943, Punitive Damages Against Employer or Principal for Conduct of a Specific Agent or Employee—Trial Not Bifurcated, or CACI No. 3945, Punitive Damages—Entity Defendant—Trial Not Bifurcated. When plaintiff is seeking punitive damages against both an individual person and a corporate defendant, use CACI No. 3947, Punitive Damages—Individual and Entity Defendants—Trial Not Bifurcated.

For an instruction explaining "clear and convincing evidence," see CACI No. 201, Highly Probable—Clear and Convincing Proof.

Read the bracketed language at the end of the first sentence of factor (b) only if there is evidence that the conduct of defendant that allegedly gives rise to liability and punitive damages either caused or foreseeably threatened to cause harm to plaintiff that would not be included in an award of compensatory damages. (Simon v. San Paolo U.S. Holding Co., Inc. (2005) 35 Cal.4th 1159 [29 Cal.Rptr.3d 379, 113 P.3d 63].) The bracketed phrase concerning "potential harm" might be appropriate, for example, if damages actually caused by the defendant's acts are not recoverable because they are barred by statute (id. at p. 1176, citing Neal v. Farmers Ins. Exchange (1978) 21 Cal.3d 910, 929 [148 Cal.Rptr. 389, 582 P.2d 980] [in a bad faith insurance case, plaintiff died before judgment, precluding her estate's recovery of emotional distress damages]), or if the harm caused by defendant's acts could have been great, but by chance only slight harm was inflicted. (Simon, supra, 35 Cal.4th at p. 1177, citing TXO Production Corp. v. Alliance Resources Corp. (1993) 509 U.S. 443, 459 [113 S.Ct. 2711, 125 L.Ed.2d 366] [considering the hypothetical of a person wildly firing a gun into a crowd but by chance only damaging a pair of glasses].) The bracketed phrase should not be given where an award of compensatory damages is the "true measure" of the harm or potential harm caused by defendant's wrongful acts. (Simon, supra, 35 Cal.4th at pp. 1178–1179 [rejecting consideration for purposes of assessing punitive damages of the plaintiff's loss of the benefit of the bargain if the jury had found that there was no binding contract].)

Read the optional final sentence of factor (c) only if the defendant has presented relevant evidence regarding that issue.

Read the optional final sentence if there is a possibility that in arriving at an amount of punitive damages, the jury might consider harm that the defendant's conduct may have caused to nonparties. (See Philip Morris USA v. Williams (2007) 549 U.S. 346, 353–354 [127 S.Ct. 1057, 166 L.Ed.2d 940].) Harm to others may be relevant to determining reprehensibility based on factors (a)(2) (disregard of health or safety of others) and (a)(4) (pattern or practice). (See State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 419 [123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585].)

"A jury must be instructed ... that it may not use evidence of out-of-state conduct to punish a defendant for action that was lawful in the jurisdiction where it occurred." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at p. 422.) An instruction on this point should be included within this instruction if appropriate to the facts.

In an appropriate case, the jury may be instructed that a false promise or a suggestion of a fact known to be false may constitute a misrepresentation as the word "misrepresentation" is used in the instruction's definition of "fraud."

Courts have stated that "[p]unitive damages previously imposed for the same conduct are relevant in determining the amount of punitive damages required to sufficiently punish and deter. The likelihood of future punitive damage awards may also be considered, although it is entitled to considerably less weight." (Stevens v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1996) 49 Cal.App.4th 1645, 1661 [57 Cal.Rptr.2d 525], internal citations omitted.) The court in Stevens suggested that the following instruction be given if evidence of other punitive damage awards is introduced into evidence:

> If you determine that a defendant has already been assessed with punitive damages based on the same conduct for which punitive damages are requested in this case, you may consider whether punitive damages awarded in other cases have sufficiently punished and made an example of the defendant. You must not use the amount of punitive damages awarded in other cases to determine the amount of the punitive damage award in this case, except to the extent you determine that a lesser award, or no award at all, is justified in light of the penalties already imposed. (Stevens, supra, 49 Cal.App.4th at p. 1663, fn. 7.)

But even after establishing a case where punitive damages are permissible, he is never entitled to them. The granting or withholding of the award of punitive damages is wholly within the control of the jury, and may not legally be influenced by any direction of the court that in any case a plaintiff is entitled to them. Upon the clearest proof of malice in fact, it is still the exclusive province of the jury to say whether or not punitive damages shall be awarded. A plaintiff is entitled to such damages only after the jury, in the exercise of its untrammeled discretion, has made the award.' " (*Brewer v. - "In light of our holding that evidence of a defendant's financial condition is essential to support an award of punitive damages, Evidence Code section 500 mandates that the plaintiff bear the burden of proof on the issue. A plaintiff seeking punitive damages is not seeking a mere declaration by the jury that he is entitled to punitive damages in the abstract. The plaintiff is seeking an award of real money in a specific amount to be set by the jury. Because the award, whatever its amount, cannot be sustained absent evidence of the defendant's financial condition, such evidence is 'essential to the claim for relief.' " (*Adams v. - "While 'there is no rigid formula and other factors may be dispositive especially when net worth is manipulated and fails to reflect actual wealth,' net worth is often described as 'the critical determinant of financial condition.' [¶] A plaintiff seeking punitive damages must provide a balanced overview of the defendant's financial condition; a selective presentation of financial condition evidence will not survive scrutiny." (Farmers & Merchants Trust Co. v. Vanetik (2019) 33 Cal.App.5th 638, 648 [245 Cal.Rptr.3d 608], internal citation omitted.)

- "[N]et worth is not the only measure of a defendant's wealth for punitive damages purposes that is recognized by the California courts. 'Indeed, it is likely that blind adherence to any one standard [of determining wealth] could sometimes result in awards which neither deter nor punish or which deter or punish too much.' " (Bankhead v. ArvinMeritor, Inc. (2012) 205 Cal.App.4th 68, 79 [139 Cal.Rptr.3d 849].)

- "[T]he 'net' concept of the net worth metric remains critical. 'In most cases, evidence of earnings or profit alone are not sufficient "without examining the liabilities side of the balance sheet." - "[W]e are afforded guidance by certain established principles, all of which are grounded in the purpose and function of punitive damages. One factor is the particular nature of the defendant's acts in light of the whole record; clearly, different acts may be of varying degrees of reprehensibility, and the more reprehensible the act, the greater the appropriate punishment, assuming all other factors are equal. Another relevant yardstick is the amount of compensatory damages awarded; in general, even an act of considerable reprehensibility will not be seen to justify a proportionally high amount of punitive damages if the actual harm suffered thereby is small. Also to be considered is the wealth of the particular defendant; obviously, the function of deterrence will not be served if the wealth of the defendant allows him to absorb the award with little or no discomfort. By the same token, of course, the function of punitive damages is not served by an award which, in light of the defendant's wealth and the gravity of the particular act, exceeds the level necessary to properly punish and deter." (Neal, supra, 21 Cal.3d at p. 928, internal citations and footnote omitted.)

- "[T]he Constitution's Due Process Clause forbids a State to use a punitive damages award to punish a defendant for injury that it inflicts upon nonparties or those whom they directly represent, i.e., injury that it inflicts upon those who are, essentially, strangers to the litigation." (Philip Morris USA, supra, 549 U.S. at p. 353.)

- "Evidence of actual harm to nonparties can help to show that the conduct that harmed the plaintiff also posed a substantial risk of harm to the general public, and so was particularly reprehensible—although counsel may argue in a particular case that conduct resulting in no harm to others nonetheless posed a grave risk to the public, or the converse. Yet for the reasons given above, a jury may not go further than this and use a punitive damages verdict to punish a defendant directly on account of harms it is alleged to have visited on nonparties." (Philip Morris USA, supra, 549 U.S. at p. 355.)

- " 'Due process does not permit courts, in the calculation of punitive damages, to adjudicate the merits of other parties' hypothetical claims against a defendant under the guise of the reprehensibility analysis … . Punishment on these bases creates the possibility of multiple punitive damages awards for the same conduct … .' This does not mean, however, that the defendant's similar wrongful conduct toward others should not be considered in determining the amount of punitive damages." (Bullock v. Philip Morris USA, Inc. (2011) 198 Cal.App.4th 543, 560 [131 Cal.Rptr.3d 382].)

- "Though due process does not permit courts or juries, in the calculation of punitive damages, to adjudicate the merits of other parties' hypothetical claims against a defendant under the guise of the reprehensibility analysis, this does not mean that the defendant's similar wrongful conduct toward others should not be considered in determining the amount of punitive damages. … '[T]o consider the defendant's entire course of conduct in setting or reviewing a punitive damages award, even in an individual plaintiff's lawsuit, is not to punish the defendant for its conduct toward others. An enhanced punishment for recidivism does not directly punish the earlier offense; it is, rather, " ' "a stiffened penalty for the last crime, which is considered to be an aggravated offense because a repetitive one." ' " … By placing the defendant's conduct on one occasion into the context of a business practice or policy, an individual plaintiff can demonstrate that the conduct toward him or her was more blameworthy and warrants a stronger penalty to deter continued or repeated conduct of the same nature.' " (Izell v. Union Carbide Corp. (2014) 231 Cal.App.4th 962, 986, fn. 10 [180 Cal.Rptr.3d 382], internal citations omitted.)

- "[A] specific instruction encompassing both the permitted and prohibited uses of evidence of harm caused to others would be appropriate in the new trial if requested by the parties. We believe that an instruction on these issues should clearly distinguish between the permitted and prohibited uses of such evidence and thus make clear to the jury the purposes for which it can and cannot consider that evidence. A jury may consider evidence of harm caused to others for the purpose of determining the degree of reprehensibility of a defendant's conduct toward the plaintiff in deciding the amount of punitive damages, but it may not consider that evidence for the purpose of punishing the defendant directly for harm caused to others. In our view, Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (Aug. 2007 rev.) CACI Nos. 3940, 3942, 3943, 3945, 3947, and 3949 could convey this distinction better by stating more explicitly that evidence of harm caused to others may be considered for the one purpose but not for the other, and by providing that explanation together with the reprehensibility factors rather than in connection with the reasonable relationship issue." (Bullock v. Philip Morris USA, Inc. (2008) 159 Cal.App.4th 655, 695, fn. 21 [71 Cal.Rptr.3d 775], internal citation omitted.)

- " '[T]he most important indicium of the reasonableness of a punitive damages award is the degree of reprehensibility of the defendant's conduct.' We have instructed courts to determine the reprehensibility of a defendant by considering whether: the harm caused was physical as opposed to economic; the tortious conduct evinced an indifference to or a reckless disregard of the health or safety of others; the target of the conduct had financial vulnerability; the conduct involved repeated actions or was an isolated incident; and the harm was the result of intentional malice, trickery, or deceit, or mere accident. The existence of any one of these factors weighing in favor of a plaintiff may not be sufficient to sustain a punitive damages award; and the absence of all of them renders any award suspect." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at p. 419, internal citation omitted.)

- "[I]n a case involving physical harm, the physical or physiological vulnerability of the target of the defendant's conduct is an appropriate factor to consider in determining the degree of reprehensibility, particularly if the defendant deliberately exploited that vulnerability." (Bullock, supra, 198 Cal.App.4th at p. 562, internal citation omitted.)

- "[W]e have been reluctant to identify concrete constitutional limits on the ratio between harm, or potential harm, to the plaintiff and the punitive damages award. We decline again to impose a bright-line ratio which a punitive damages award cannot exceed. Our jurisprudence and the principles it has now established demonstrate, however, that, in practice, few awards exceeding a single-digit ratio between punitive and compensatory damages, to a significant degree, will satisfy due process. … [A]n award of more than four times the amount of compensatory damages might be close to the line of constitutional impropriety. … While these ratios are not binding, they are instructive. They demonstrate what should be obvious: Single-digit multipliers are more likely to comport with due process, while still achieving the State's goals of deterrence and retribution, than awards with ratios in range of 500 to 1 … ." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at pp. 424–425, internal citation omitted.)

- "Nonetheless, because there are no rigid benchmarks that a punitive damages award may not surpass, ratios greater than those we have previously upheld may comport with due process where 'a particularly egregious act has resulted in only a small amount of economic damages.' The converse is also true, however. When compensatory damages are substantial, then a lesser ratio, perhaps only equal to compensatory damages, can reach the outermost limit of the due process guarantee. The precise award in any case, of course, must be based upon the facts and circumstances of the defendant's conduct and the harm to the plaintiff." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at p. 425, internal citation omitted.)

- "In determining whether a punitive damages award is unconstitutionally excessive, Brandt fees may be included in the calculation of the ratio of punitive to compensatory damages, regardless of whether the fees are awarded by the trier of fact as part of its verdict or are determined by the trial court after the verdict has been rendered." (Nickerson v. Stonebridge Life Ins. Co. (2016) 63 Cal.4th 363, 368 [203 Cal.Rptr.3d 23, 371 P.3d 242].)

- "The decision to award punitive damages is exclusively the function of the trier of fact. So too is the amount of any punitive damage award. The relevant considerations are the nature of the defendant's conduct, the defendant's wealth, and the plaintiff's actual damages." (Gagnon v. Continental Casualty Co. (1989) 211 Cal.App.3d 1598, 1602 [260 Cal.Rptr. 305], internal citations omitted.)

- "The wealth of a defendant cannot justify an otherwise unconstitutional punitive damages award." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at p. 427, internal citation omitted.)

- "[I]n some cases, the defendant's financial condition may combine with high reprehensibility and a low compensatory award to justify an extraordinary ratio between compensatory and punitive damages. [Citation.]" (Nickerson v. Stonebridge Life Ins. Co. (Nickerson II) (2016) 5 Cal.App.5th 1, 26 [209 Cal.Rptr.3d 690].)

- "In light of our discussion, we conclude that even where, as here, punitive but not compensatory damages are available to the plaintiff, the defendant is entitled to an instruction that punitive damages must bear a reasonable relation to the injury, harm, or damage actually suffered by the plaintiff and proved at trial. Consequently, the trial court erred in failing to so instruct the jury." (Gagnon, supra, 211 Cal.App.3d at p. 1605.)

- "Under the statute, 'malice does not require actual intent to harm. [Citation.] Conscious disregard for the safety of another may be sufficient where the defendant is aware of the probable dangerous consequences of his or her conduct and he or she willfully fails to avoid such consequences. [Citation.] Malice may be proved either expressly through direct evidence or by implication through indirect evidence from which the jury draws inferences. [Citation.]' " (Pfeifer v. John Crane, Inc. (2013) 220 Cal.App.4th 1270, 1299 [164 Cal.Rptr.3d 112].)

- "Used in its ordinary sense, the adjective 'despicable' is a powerful term that refers to circumstances that are 'base,' 'vile,' or 'contemptible.' As amended to include this word, the statute plainly indicates that absent an intent to injure the plaintiff, 'malice' requires more than a 'willful and conscious' disregard of the plaintiffs' interests. The additional component of 'despicable conduct' must be found." (College Hospital, Inc., supra, 8 Cal.4th at p. 725, internal citations omitted.)

- "We conclude that the rule ... that an award of exemplary damages must be accompanied by an award of compensatory damages [or its equivalent] is still sound. That rule cannot be deemed satisfied where the jury has made an express determination not to award compensatory damages." (Cheung v. Daley (1995) 35 Cal.App.4th 1673, 1677 [42 Cal.Rptr.2d 164], footnote omitted.)

- "With the focus on the plaintiff's injury rather than the amount of compensatory damages, the ['reasonable relation'] rule can be applied even in cases where only equitable relief is obtained or where nominal damages are awarded or, as here, where compensatory damages are unavailable." (Gagnon, supra, 211 Cal.App.3d at p. 1605.)

- "The high court in TXO [TXO Production Corp., supra] and BMW [BMW of North America, Inc. v. Gore (1996) 517 U.S. 559 [116 S.Ct. 1589, 134 L.Ed.2d 809]] has refined the disparity analysis to take into account the potential loss to plaintiffs, as where a scheme worthy of punitive damages does not fully succeed. In such cases, the proper ratio would be the ratio of punitive damages to the potential harm to plaintiff." (Sierra Club Found. v. Graham (1999) 72 Cal.App.4th 1135, 1162, fn. 15 [85 Cal.Rptr.2d 726], original italics.)

3941. Punitive Damages—Individual Defendant—Bifurcated Trial (First Phase)

If you decide that [name of defendant]'s conduct caused [name of plaintiff] harm, you must decide whether that conduct justifies an award of punitive damages. At this time, you must decide whether [name of plaintiff] has proved by clear and convincing evidence that [name of defendant] engaged in that conduct with malice, oppression, or fraud. The amount of punitive damages, if any, will be decided later.

"Malice" means that [name of defendant] acted with intent to cause injury or that [name of defendant]'s conduct was despicable and was done with a willful and knowing disregard of the rights or safety of another. A person acts with knowing disregard when ~~he or she~~the person is aware of the probable dangerous consequences of ~~his or her~~the person's conduct and deliberately fails to avoid those consequences.

"Oppression" means that [name of defendant]'s conduct was despicable and subjected [name of plaintiff] to cruel and unjust hardship in knowing disregard of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] rights.

"Despicable conduct" is conduct that is so vile, base, or contemptible that it would be looked down on and despised by reasonable people.

"Fraud" means that [name of defendant] intentionally misrepresented or concealed a material fact and did so intending to harm [name of plaintiff].

3943. Punitive Damages Against Employer or Principal for Conduct of a Specific Agent or Employee—Trial Not Bifurcated

If you decide that [name of employee/agent]'s conduct caused [name of plaintiff] harm, you must decide whether that conduct justifies an award of punitive damages against [name of defendant] for [name of employee/agent]'s conduct. The purposes of punitive damages are to punish a wrongdoer for the conduct that harmed the plaintiff and to discourage similar conduct in the future.

You may award punitive damages against [name of defendant] for [name of employee/agent]'s conduct only if [name of plaintiff] proves by clear and convincing evidence that [name of employee/agent] engaged in that conduct with malice, oppression, or fraud.

"Malice" means that [name of employee/agent] acted with intent to cause injury or that [name of employee/agent]'s conduct was despicable and was done with a willful and knowing disregard of the rights or safety of another. A person acts with knowing disregard when ~~he or she~~the person is aware of the probable dangerous consequences of ~~his or her~~the person's conduct and deliberately fails to avoid those consequences.

"Oppression" means that [name of employee/agent]'s conduct was despicable and subjected [name of plaintiff] to cruel and unjust hardship in knowing disregard of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] rights.

"Despicable conduct" is conduct that is so vile, base, or contemptible that it would be looked down on and despised by reasonable people.

"Fraud" means that [name of employee/agent] intentionally misrepresented or concealed a material fact and did so intending to harm [name of plaintiff].

[Name of plaintiff] must also prove [one of] the following by clear and convincing evidence:

1. [That [name of employee/agent] was an officer, a director, or a managing agent of [name of defendant], who was acting on behalf of [name of defendant]; [or]]

2. [That an officer, a director, or a managing agent of [name of defendant] had advance knowledge of the unfitness of [name of employee/agent] and employed [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] with a knowing disregard of the rights or safety of others; [or]]

3. [That an officer, a director, or a managing agent of [name of defendant] authorized [name of employee/agent]'s conduct; [or]]

4. [That an officer, a director, or a managing agent of [name of defendant] knew of [name of employee/agent]'s wrongful conduct and adopted or approved the conduct after it occurred.]

An employee is a "managing agent" if ~~he or she~~the employee exercises substantial independent authority and judgment in ~~his or her~~ corporate decisionmaking such that ~~his or her~~the employee's decisions ultimately determine corporate policy.

There is no fixed formula for determining the amount of punitive damages, and you are not required to award any punitive damages. If you decide to award punitive damages, you should consider all of the following factors in determining the amount:

(a) How reprehensible was [name of defendant]'s conduct? In deciding how reprehensible [name of defendant]'s conduct was, you may consider, among other factors:

1. Whether the conduct caused physical harm;

2. Whether [name of defendant] disregarded the health or safety of others;

3. Whether [name of plaintiff] was financially weak or vulnerable and [name of defendant] knew [name of plaintiff] was financially weak or vulnerable and took advantage of [him/her/nonbinary pronoun/it];

4. Whether [name of defendant]'s conduct involved a pattern or practice; and

5. Whether [name of defendant] acted with trickery or deceit.

(b) Is there a reasonable relationship between the amount of punitive damages and [name of plaintiff]'s harm [or between the amount of punitive damages and potential harm to [name of plaintiff] that [name of defendant] knew was likely to occur because of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] conduct]?

(c) In view of [name of defendant]'s financial condition, what amount is necessary to punish [him/her/nonbinary pronoun/it] and discourage future wrongful conduct? You may not increase the punitive award above an amount that is otherwise appropriate merely because [name of defendant] has substantial financial resources. [Any award you impose may not exceed [name of defendant]'s ability to pay.]

[Punitive damages may not be used to punish [name of defendant] for the impact of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] alleged misconduct on persons other than [name of plaintiff].]

Directions for Use

This instruction is intended for use when the plaintiff is seeking to hold only an employer or principal liable for punitive damages based on the conduct of a specific employee or agent. When the plaintiff is seeking punitive damages from both the employer/principal and the employee/agent, use CACI No. 3947, Punitive Damages—Individual and Entity Defendants—Trial Not Bifurcated. When punitive damages are sought against a corporation or other entity for the conduct of its directors, officers, or managing agents, use CACI No. 3945, Punitive Damages—Entity Defendant—Trial Not Bifurcated.

For an instruction explaining "clear and convincing evidence," see CACI No. 201, Highly Probable—Clear and Convincing Proof.

Read the bracketed language at the end of the first sentence of factor (b) only if there is evidence that the conduct of defendant that allegedly gives rise to liability and punitive damages either caused or foreseeably threatened to cause harm to plaintiff that would not be included in an award of compensatory damages. (Simon v. San Paolo U.S. Holding Co., Inc. (2005) 35 Cal.4th 1159 [29 Cal.Rptr.3d 379, 113 P.3d 63].) The bracketed phrase concerning "potential harm" might be appropriate, for example, if damages actually caused by the defendant's acts are not recoverable because they are barred by statute (id. at p. 1176, citing Neal v. Farmers Ins. Exchange (1978) 21 Cal.3d 910, 929 [148 Cal.Rptr. 389, 582 P.2d 980] [in a bad faith insurance case, plaintiff died before judgment, precluding her estate's recovery of emotional distress damages]), or if the harm caused by defendant's acts could have been great, but by chance only slight harm was inflicted. (Simon, supra, 35 Cal.4th at p. 1177, citing TXO Production Corp. v. Alliance Resources Corp. (1993) 509 U.S. 443, 459 [113 S.Ct. 2711, 125 L.Ed.2d 366] [considering the hypothetical of a person wildly firing a gun into a crowd but by chance only damaging a pair of glasses].) The bracketed phrase should not be given if an award of compensatory damages is the "true measure" of the harm or potential harm caused by defendant's wrongful acts. (Simon, supra, 35 Cal.4th at pp. 1178–1179 [rejecting consideration for purposes of assessing punitive damages of the plaintiff's loss of the benefit of the bargain if the jury had found that there was no binding contract].)

Read the optional final sentence of factor (c) only if the defendant has presented relevant evidence regarding that issue.

Read the optional final sentence if there is a possibility that in arriving at an amount of punitive damages, the jury might consider harm that the defendant's conduct may have caused to nonparties. (See Philip Morris USA v. Williams (2007) 549 U.S. 346, 353–354 [127 S.Ct. 1057, 166 L.Ed.2d 940].) Harm to others may be relevant to determining reprehensibility based on factors (a)(2) (disregard of health or safety of others) and (a)(4) (pattern or practice). (See State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 419 [123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585].)

If any of the alternative grounds for seeking punitive damages are inapplicable to the facts of the case, they may be omitted.

"A jury must be instructed ... that it may not use evidence of out-of-state conduct to punish a defendant for action that was lawful in the jurisdiction where it occurred." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at p. 422.) An instruction on this point should be included within this instruction if appropriate to the facts.

In an appropriate case, the jury may be instructed that a false promise or a suggestion of a fact known to be false may constitute a misrepresentation as the word "misrepresentation" is used in the instruction's definition of "fraud."

See CACI No. 3940, Punitive Damages—Individual Defendant—Trial Not Bifurcated, for additional

sources and authority.

Courts have stated that "[p]unitive damages previously imposed for the same conduct are relevant in determining the amount of punitive damages required to sufficiently punish and deter. The likelihood of future punitive damage awards may also be considered, although it is entitled to considerably less weight." (Stevens v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1996) 49 Cal.App.4th 1645, 1661 [57 Cal.Rptr.2d 525], internal citations omitted.) The court in Stevens suggested that the following instruction be given if evidence of other punitive damage awards is introduced into evidence:

> If you determine that a defendant has already been assessed with punitive damages based on the same conduct for which punitive damages are requested in this case, you may consider whether punitive damages awarded in other cases have sufficiently punished and made an example of the defendant. You must not use the amount of punitive damages awarded in other cases to determine the amount of the punitive damage award in this case, except to the extent you determine that a lesser award, or no award at all, is justified in light of the penalties already imposed. (Stevens, supra, 49 Cal.App.4th at p. 1663, fn. 7.)

- "[E]vidence of ratification of [agent's] actions by Hamilton, and any other findings made under Civil Code section 3294, subdivision (b), must be made by clear and convincing evidence." (Barton v. Alexander Hamilton Life Ins. Co. of America (2003) 110 Cal.App.4th 1640, 1644 [3 Cal.Rptr.3d 258].)

- "Subdivision (b) is not a model of clarity, but in light of California's history of employer liability for punitive damages and of the Legislature's reasons for enacting subdivision (b), we have no doubt that it does no more than codify and refine existing law. Subdivision (b) thus authorizes the imposition of punitive damages on an employer in three situations: (1) when an employee was guilty of oppression, fraud or malice, and the employer with advance knowledge of the unfitness of the employee employed him or her with a conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others, (2) when an employee was guilty of oppression, fraud or malice, and the employer authorized or ratified the wrongful conduct, or (3) when the employer was itself guilty of the oppression, fraud or malice." (Weeks v. Baker & McKenzie (1998) 63 Cal.App.4th 1128, 1151 [74 Cal.Rptr.2d 510].)

- " 'California has traditionally allowed punitive damages to be assessed against an employer (or principal) for the acts of an employee (or agent) only where the circumstances indicate that the employer himself was guilty of fraud, oppression, or malice. Thus, even before section 3294, subdivision (b) was added to the Civil Code in 1980, the courts required evidence that the employer authorized or ratified a malicious act, personally committed such an act, or wrongfully hired or retained an unfit employee.' The 'additional' burden on a plaintiff seeking punitive damages from an employer is to show not only that an employee acted with oppression, fraud or malice, but that the employer engaged in conduct defined in subdivision (b)." (Weeks, supra, 63 Cal.App.4th at p. 1154, internal citation omitted.)

- "Civil Code section 3294, subdivision (b) does not authorize an award of punitive damages against an employer for the employee's wrongful conduct. It authorizes an award of punitive damages against an employer for the employer's own wrongful conduct. Liability under subdivision (b) is vicarious only to the extent that the employer is liable for the actions of its officer, director or managing agent in hiring or controlling the offending employee, in ratifying the offense or in acting with oppression, fraud or malice. It is not vicarious in the sense that the employer is liable for the wrongful conduct of the offending employee." (Weeks, supra, 63 Cal.App.4th at pp. 1154–1155.)

- "An award of punitive damages is not supported by a verdict based on breach of contract, even where the defendant's conduct in breaching the contract was wilful, fraudulent, or malicious. Even in those cases in which a separate tort action is alleged, if there is 'but one verdict based upon contract' a punitive damage award is improper." (Myers Building Industries, Ltd. v. Interface Technology, Inc. (1993) 13 Cal.App.4th 949, 960 [17 Cal.Rptr.2d 242], internal citations omitted.)

- " '[T]he most important indicium of the reasonableness of a punitive damages award is the degree of reprehensibility of the defendant's conduct.' We have instructed courts to determine the reprehensibility of a defendant by considering whether: the harm caused was physical as opposed to economic; the tortious conduct evinced an indifference to or a reckless disregard of the health or safety of others; the target of the conduct had financial vulnerability; the conduct involved repeated actions or was an isolated incident; and the harm was the result of intentional malice, trickery, or deceit, or mere accident. The existence of any one of these factors weighing in favor of a plaintiff may not be sufficient to sustain a punitive damages award; and the absence of all of them renders any award suspect." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at p. 419, internal citation omitted.)

- "[I]n a case involving physical harm, the physical or physiological vulnerability of the target of the defendant's conduct is an appropriate factor to consider in determining the degree of reprehensibility, particularly if the defendant deliberately exploited that vulnerability." (Bullock v. Philip Morris USA, Inc. (2011) 198 Cal.App.4th 543, 562 [131 Cal.Rptr.3d 382], internal citation omitted.)

- "[W]e have been reluctant to identify concrete constitutional limits on the ratio between harm, or potential harm, to the plaintiff and the punitive damages award. We decline again to impose a bright-line ratio which a punitive damages award cannot exceed. Our jurisprudence and the principles it has now established demonstrate, however, that, in practice, few awards exceeding a single-digit ratio between punitive and compensatory damages, to a significant degree, will satisfy due process. … [A]n award of more than four times the amount of compensatory damages might be close to the line of constitutional impropriety. … While these ratios are not binding, they are instructive. They demonstrate what should be obvious: Single-digit multipliers are more likely to comport with due process, while still achieving the State's goals of deterrence and retribution, than awards with ratios in range of 500 to 1 … ." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at pp. 424–425, internal citation omitted.)

- "Nonetheless, because there are no rigid benchmarks that a punitive damages award may not surpass, ratios greater than those we have previously upheld may comport with due process where 'a particularly egregious act has resulted in only a small amount of economic damages.' The converse is also true, however. When compensatory damages are substantial, then a lesser ratio, perhaps only equal to compensatory damages, can reach the outermost limit of the due process guarantee. The precise award in any case, of course, must be based upon the facts and circumstances of the defendant's conduct and the harm to the plaintiff." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at p. 425, internal citation omitted.)

- "In determining whether a punitive damages award is unconstitutionally excessive, Brandt fees may be included in the calculation of the ratio of punitive to compensatory damages, regardless of whether the fees are awarded by the trier of fact as part of its verdict or are determined by the trial court after the verdict has been rendered." (Nickerson v. Stonebridge Life Ins. Co. (2016) 63 Cal.4th 363, 368 [203 Cal.Rptr.3d 23, 371 P.3d 242].)

- "[T]he Constitution's Due Process Clause forbids a State to use a punitive damages award to punish a defendant for injury that it inflicts upon nonparties or those whom they directly represent, i.e., injury that it inflicts upon those who are, essentially, strangers to the litigation." (Philip Morris USA, supra, 549 U.S. at p. 353.)

- "Evidence of actual harm to nonparties can help to show that the conduct that harmed the plaintiff also posed a substantial risk of harm to the general public, and so was particularly reprehensible -- although counsel may argue in a particular case that conduct resulting in no harm to others nonetheless posed a grave risk to the public, or the converse. Yet for the reasons given above, a jury may not go further than this and use a punitive damages verdict to punish a defendant directly on account of harms it is alleged to have visited on nonparties." (Philip Morris USA, supra, 549 U.S. at p. 355.)

- " 'Due process does not permit courts, in the calculation of punitive damages, to adjudicate the merits of other parties' hypothetical claims against a defendant under the guise of the reprehensibility analysis … . Punishment on these bases creates the possibility of multiple punitive damages awards for the same conduct … .' This does not mean, however, that the defendant's similar wrongful conduct toward others should not be considered in determining the amount of punitive damages." (Bullock, supra, 198 Cal.App.4th at p. 560.)

- "Though due process does not permit courts or juries, in the calculation of punitive damages, to adjudicate the merits of other parties' hypothetical claims against a defendant under the guise of the reprehensibility analysis, this does not mean that the defendant's similar wrongful conduct toward others should not be considered in determining the amount of punitive damages. … '[T]o consider the defendant's entire course of conduct in setting or reviewing a punitive damages award, even in an individual plaintiff's lawsuit, is not to punish the defendant for its conduct toward others. An enhanced punishment for recidivism does not directly punish the earlier offense; it is, rather, " ' "a stiffened penalty for the last crime, which is considered to be an aggravated offense because a repetitive one." ' " … By placing the defendant's conduct on one occasion into the context of a business practice or policy, an individual plaintiff can demonstrate that the conduct toward him or her was more blameworthy and warrants a stronger penalty to deter continued or repeated conduct of the same nature.' " (Izell v. Union Carbide Corp. (2014) 231 Cal.App.4th 962, 986, fn. 10 [180 Cal.Rptr.3d 382], internal citations omitted.)

- "[A] specific instruction encompassing both the permitted and prohibited uses of evidence of harm

caused to others would be appropriate in the new trial if requested by the parties. We believe that an instruction on these issues should clearly distinguish between the permitted and prohibited uses of such evidence and thus make clear to the jury the purposes for which it can and cannot consider that evidence. A jury may consider evidence of harm caused to others for the purpose of determining the degree of reprehensibility of a defendant's conduct toward the plaintiff in deciding the amount of punitive damages, but it may not consider that evidence for the purpose of punishing the defendant directly for harm caused to others. In our view, Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (Aug. 2007 rev.) CACI Nos. 3940, 3942, 3943, 3945, 3947, and 3949 could convey this distinction better by stating more explicitly that evidence of harm caused to others may be considered for the one purpose but not for the other, and by providing that explanation together with the reprehensibility factors rather than in connection with the reasonable relationship issue." (Bullock v. Philip Morris USA, Inc. (2008) 159 Cal.App.4th 655, 695, fn. 21 [71 Cal.Rptr.3d 775], internal citation omitted.)

- "In light of our holding that evidence of a defendant's financial condition is essential to support an award of punitive damages, Evidence Code section 500 mandates that the plaintiff bear the burden of proof on the issue. A plaintiff seeking punitive damages is not seeking a mere declaration by the jury that he is entitled to punitive damages in the abstract. The plaintiff is seeking an award of real money in a specific amount to be set by the jury. Because the award, whatever its amount, cannot be sustained absent evidence of the defendant's financial condition, such evidence is 'essential to the claim for relief.' " (Adams v. Murakami (1991) 54 Cal.3d 105, 119 [284 Cal.Rptr. 318, 813 P.2d 1348], internal citation omitted.)

- "A defendant is in the best position to know his or her financial condition, and cannot avoid a punitive damage award by failing to cooperate with discovery orders. [¶] A number of cases have held that noncompliance with a court order to disclose financial condition precludes a defendant from challenging the sufficiency of the evidence of a punitive damages award on appeal." (Fernandes v. Singh (2017) 16 Cal.App.5th 932, 942 [224 Cal.Rptr.3d 751].)

- "[T]he purpose of punitive damages is not served by financially destroying a defendant. The purpose is to deter, not to destroy." (Adams, supra, 54 Cal.3d at p. 112.)

- "[A] punitive damages award is excessive if it is disproportionate to the defendant's ability to pay." (Adams, supra, 54 Cal.3d at p. 112, internal citations omitted.)

- "It has been recognized that punitive damages awards generally are not permitted to exceed 10 percent of the defendant's net worth." (Weeks v. Baker & McKenzie (1998) 63 Cal.App.4th 1128, 1166 [74 Cal.Rptr.2d 510].)

- "While 'there is no rigid formula and other factors may be dispositive especially when net worth is manipulated and fails to reflect actual wealth,' net worth is often described as 'the critical determinant of financial condition.' [¶] A plaintiff seeking punitive damages must provide a balanced overview of the defendant's financial condition; a selective presentation of financial condition evidence will not survive scrutiny." (Farmers & Merchants Trust Co. v. Vanetik (2019) 33 Cal.App.5th 638, 648 [245 Cal.Rptr.3d 608], internal citation omitted.)

- "[N]et worth is not the only measure of a defendant's wealth for punitive damages purposes that is recognized by the California courts. 'Indeed, it is likely that blind adherence to any one standard [of determining wealth] could sometimes result in awards which neither deter nor punish or which deter or punish too much.' " (Bankhead v. ArvinMeritor, Inc. (2012) 205 Cal.App.4th 68, 79 [139 Cal.Rptr.3d 849].)

- "[T]he 'net' concept of the net worth metric remains critical. 'In most cases, evidence of earnings or profit alone are not sufficient "without examining the liabilities side of the balance sheet." [Citations.]' " (Soto v. BorgWarner Morse TEC Inc. (2015) 239 Cal.App.4th 165, 194 [191 Cal.Rptr.3d 263], internal citations omitted.)

- "The decision to award punitive damages is exclusively the function of the trier of fact. So too is the amount of any punitive damage award. The relevant considerations are the nature of the defendant's conduct, the defendant's wealth, and the plaintiff's actual damages." (Gagnon v. Continental Casualty Co. (1989) 211 Cal.App.3d 1598, 1602 [260 Cal.Rptr. 305], internal citations omitted.)

- "[P]unitive damages are not assessed against employers on a pure respondeat superior basis. Some evidence of fault by the employer itself is also required." (College Hospital, Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 8 Cal.4th 704, 724, fn. 11 [34 Cal.Rptr.2d 898, 882 P.2d 894].)

- "Subdivision (b) ... governs awards of punitive damages against employers, and permits an award for the conduct described there without an additional finding that the employer engaged in oppression, fraud or malice." (Weeks, supra, 63 Cal.App.4th at p. 1137.)

- "Section 3294 is no longer silent on who may be responsible for imputing punitive damages to a corporate employer. For corporate punitive damages liability, section 3294, subdivision (b), requires that the wrongful act giving rise to the exemplary damages be committed by an 'officer, director, or managing agent.' " (White v. Ultramar, Inc. (1999) 21 Cal.4th 563, 572 [88 Cal.Rptr.2d 19, 981 P.2d 944].)

- "[I]n performing, ratifying, or approving the malicious conduct, the agent must be acting as the organization's representative, not in some other capacity." (College Hospital, Inc., supra, 8 Cal.4th at p. 723.)

- The concept of "managing agent" "assumes that such individual was acting in a corporate or employment capacity when the conduct giving rise to the punitive damages claim against the employer occurred." (College Hospital, Inc., supra, 8 Cal.4th at p. 723.)

- "No purpose would be served by punishing the employer for an employee's conduct that is wholly unrelated to its business or to the employee's duties therein." (College Hospital, Inc., supra, 8 Cal.4th at pp. 723–724.)

- "[T]he determination of whether certain employees are managing agents ' "does not necessarily hinge on their 'level' in the corporate hierarchy. Rather, the critical inquiry is the degree of discretion the employees possess in making decisions … ." ' " (Powerhouse Motorsports Group, Inc. v. Yamaha Motor Corp., U.S.A. (2013) 221 Cal.App.4th 867, 886 [164 Cal.Rptr.3d 811].)

- "Although it is generally true, … that an employee's hierarchy in a corporation is not necessarily determinative of his or her status as a managing agent of a corporation, evidence showing an employee's hierarchy and job duties, responsibilities, and authority may be sufficient, absent conclusive proof to the contrary, to support a reasonable inference by a trier of fact that the employee is a managing agent of a corporation." (Davis v. Kiewit Pacific Co. (2013) 220 Cal.App.4th 358, 370 [162 Cal.Rptr.3d 805].)

- "[W]e conclude the Legislature intended the term 'managing agent' to include only those corporate employees who exercise substantial independent authority and judgment in their corporate decisionmaking so that their decisions ultimately determine corporate policy. The scope of a corporate employee's discretion and authority under our test is therefore a question of fact for decision on a case-by-case basis." (White, supra, 21 Cal.4th at pp. 566–567.)

- "In order to demonstrate that an employee is a true managing agent under section 3294, subdivision (b), a plaintiff seeking punitive damages would have to show that the employee exercised substantial discretionary authority over significant aspects of a corporation's business." (White, supra, 21 Cal.4th at p. 577.)

- " '[C]orporate policy' is the general principles which guide a corporation, or rules intended to be followed consistently over time in corporate operations. A 'managing agent' is one with substantial authority over decisions that set these general principles and rules." (Cruz v. Homebase (2000) 83 Cal.App.4th 160, 167–168 [99 Cal.Rptr.2d 435].)

- "The key inquiry thus concerns the employee's authority to change or establish corporate policy. The fact that an employee has a supervisory position with the power to terminate employees under his or her control does not, by itself, render the employee a managing agent. Nor does the fact that an employee supervises a large number of employees necessarily establish that status." (CRST, Inc. v. Superior Court (2017) 11 Cal.App.5th 1255, 1273 [218 Cal.Rptr.3d 664].)

- " '[R]atification' is the '[c]onfirmation and acceptance of a previous act.' A corporation cannot confirm and accept that which it does not actually know about." (Cruz, supra, 83 Cal.App.4th at p. 168, internal citations omitted.)

- "For purposes of determining an employer's liability for punitive damages, ratification generally occurs where, under the particular circumstances, the employer demonstrates an intent to adopt or approve oppressive, fraudulent, or malicious behavior by an employee in the performance of his job duties." (College Hospital, Inc., supra, 8 Cal.4th at p. 726.)

- "Corporate ratification in the punitive damages context requires actual knowledge of the conduct and its outrageous nature." (College Hospital, Inc., supra, 8 Cal.4th at p. 726.)

- "The high court in TXO [TXO Production Corp., supra] and BMW [BMW of North America, Inc. v. Gore (1996) 517 U.S. 559 [116 S.Ct. 1589, 134 L.Ed.2d 809]] has refined the disparity analysis to take into account the potential loss to plaintiffs, as where a scheme worthy of punitive damages does not fully succeed. In such cases, the proper ratio would be the ratio of punitive damages to the potential harm to plaintiff." (Sierra Club Found. v. Graham (1999) 72 Cal.App.4th 1135, 1162, fn. 15 [85 Cal.Rptr.2d 726], original italics.)

3944. Punitive Damages Against Employer or Principal for Conduct of a Specific Agent or Employee—Bifurcated Trial (First Phase)

If you decide that [name of employee/agent]'s conduct caused [name of plaintiff] harm, you must decide whether that conduct justifies an award of punitive damages against [name of defendant] for [name of employee/agent]'s conduct. At this time, you must decide whether [name of plaintiff] has proved by clear and convincing evidence that [name of employee/agent] engaged in that conduct with malice, oppression, or fraud. The amount of punitive damages, if any, will be decided later.

"Malice" means that [name of employee/agent] acted with intent to cause injury or that [name of employee/agent]'s conduct was despicable and was done with a willful and knowing disregard of the rights or safety of another. A person acts with knowing disregard when ~~he or she~~the person is aware of the probable dangerous consequences of ~~his or her~~the person's conduct and deliberately fails to avoid those consequences.

"Oppression" means that [name of employee/agent]'s conduct was despicable and subjected [name of plaintiff] to cruel and unjust hardship in knowing disregard of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] rights.

"Despicable conduct" is conduct that is so vile, base, or contemptible that it would be looked down on and despised by reasonable people.

"Fraud" means that [name of employee/agent] intentionally misrepresented or concealed a material fact and did so intending to harm [name of plaintiff].

[Name of plaintiff] must also prove [one of] the following by clear and convincing evidence:

1. [That [name of employee/agent] was an officer, a director, or a managing agent of [name of defendant] who was acting on behalf of [name of defendant]; [or]]

2. [That an officer, a director, or a managing agent of [name of defendant] had advance knowledge of the unfitness of [name of employee/agent] and employed [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] with a knowing disregard of the rights or safety of others; [or]]

3. [That an officer, a director, or a managing agent of [name of defendant] authorized [name of employee/agent]'s conduct; [or]]

4. [That an officer, a director, or a managing agent of [name of defendant] knew of [name of employee/agent]'s wrongful conduct and adopted or approved the conduct after it occurred.]

An employee is a "managing agent" if ~~he or she~~the employee exercises substantial independent authority and judgment in ~~his or her~~ corporate decision-making such that ~~his or her~~the employee's decisions ultimately determine corporate policy.

Directions for Use

CACI No. 3942, Punitive Damages—Individual Defendant—Bifurcated Trial (Second Phase) may be used for the second phase of a bifurcated trial.

This instruction is intended for use when the plaintiff is seeking to hold only an employer or principal liable for punitive damages based on the conduct of a specific employee or agent. When the plaintiff is seeking punitive damages from both the employer/principal and the employee/agent, use CACI No. 3948, Punitive Damages—Individual and Corporate Defendants (Corporate Liability Based on Acts of Named Individual)—Bifurcated Trial (First Phase). When punitive damages are sought against a corporation or other entity for the conduct of its directors, officers, and managing agents, use CACI No. 3946, Punitive Damages—Entity Defendant—Bifurcated Trial (First Phase).

If any of the alternative grounds for seeking punitive damages are inapplicable to the facts of the case, they may be omitted.

In an appropriate case, the jury may be instructed that a false promise or a suggestion of a fact known to be false may constitute a misrepresentation as the word "misrepresentation" is used in the instruction's definition of "fraud."

3945. Punitive Damages—Entity Defendant—Trial Not Bifurcated

If you decide that [name of defendant]'s conduct caused [name of plaintiff] harm, you must decide whether that conduct justifies an award of punitive damages. The purposes of punitive damages are to punish a wrongdoer for the conduct that harmed the plaintiff and to discourage similar conduct in the future.

You may award punitive damages against [name of defendant] only if [name of plaintiff] proves that [name of defendant] engaged in that conduct with malice, oppression, or fraud. To do this, [name of plaintiff] must prove [one of] the following by clear and convincing evidence:

1. [That the conduct constituting malice, oppression, or fraud was committed by one or more officers, directors, or managing agents of [name of defendant], who acted on behalf of [name of defendant]; [or]]

2. [That the conduct constituting malice, oppression, or fraud was authorized by one or more officers, directors, or managing agents of [name of defendant]; [or]]

3. [That one or more officers, directors, or managing agents of [name of defendant] knew of the conduct constituting malice, oppression, or fraud and adopted or approved that conduct after it occurred.]

"Malice" means that [name of defendant] acted with intent to cause injury or that [name of defendant]'s conduct was despicable and was done with a willful and knowing disregard of the rights or safety of another. A person acts with knowing disregard when ~~he or she~~the person is aware of the probable dangerous consequences of ~~his or her~~the person's conduct and deliberately fails to avoid those consequences.

"Oppression" means that [name of defendant]'s conduct was despicable and subjected [name of plaintiff] to cruel and unjust hardship in knowing disregard of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] rights.

"Despicable conduct" is conduct that is so vile, base, or contemptible that it would be looked down on and despised by reasonable people.

"Fraud" means that [name of defendant] intentionally misrepresented or concealed a material fact and did so intending to harm [name of plaintiff].

An employee is a "managing agent" if ~~he or she~~the employee exercises substantial independent authority and judgment in ~~his or her~~ corporate decisionmaking such that ~~his or her~~the employee's decisions ultimately determine corporate policy.

There is no fixed formula for determining the amount of punitive damages, and you are not required to award any punitive damages. If you decide to award punitive damages, you should consider all of the following factors in determining the amount:

(a) How reprehensible was [name of defendant]'s conduct? In deciding how reprehensible [name of defendant]'s conduct was, you may consider, among other factors:

1. Whether the conduct caused physical harm;

2. Whether [name of defendant] disregarded the health or safety of others;

3. Whether [name of plaintiff] was financially weak or vulnerable and [name of defendant] knew [name of plaintiff] was financially weak or vulnerable and took advantage of [him/her/nonbinary pronoun/it];

4. Whether [name of defendant]'s conduct involved a pattern or practice; and

5. Whether [name of defendant] acted with trickery or deceit.

(b) Is there a reasonable relationship between the amount of punitive damages and [name of plaintiff]'s harm [or between the amount of punitive damages and potential harm to [name of plaintiff] that [name of defendant] knew was likely to occur because of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] conduct]?

(c) In view of [name of defendant]'s financial condition, what amount is necessary to punish [him/her/nonbinary pronoun/it] and discourage future wrongful conduct? You may not increase the punitive award above an amount that is otherwise appropriate merely because [name of defendant] has substantial financial resources. [Any award you impose may not exceed [name of defendant]'s ability to pay.]

[Punitive damages may not be used to punish [name of defendant] for the impact of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] alleged misconduct on persons other than [name of plaintiff].]

Directions for Use

This instruction is intended for use when the plaintiff is seeking punitive damages against a corporation or other entity for the conduct of its directors, officers, or managing agents. When the plaintiff seeks to hold an employer or principal liable for the conduct of a specific employee or agent, use CACI No. 3943, Punitive Damages Against Employer or Principal for Conduct of a Specific Agent or Employee—Trial Not Bifurcated. When the plaintiff is seeking punitive damages from both the employer/principal and the employee/agent, use CACI No. 3947, Punitive Damages—Individual and Entity Defendants—Trial Not Bifurcated.

Read the bracketed language at the end of the first sentence of factor (b) only if there is evidence that the conduct of defendant that allegedly gives rise to liability and punitive damages either caused or foreseeably threatened to cause harm to plaintiff that would not be included in an award of compensatory damages. (Simon v. San Paolo U.S. Holding Co., Inc. (2005) 35 Cal.4th 1159 [29 Cal.Rptr.3d 379, 113 P.3d 63].) The bracketed phrase concerning "potential harm" might be appropriate, for example, if damages actually caused by the defendant's acts are not recoverable because they are barred by statute (id. at p. 1176, citing Neal v. Farmers Ins. Exchange (1978) 21 Cal.3d 910, 929 [148 Cal.Rptr. 389, 582 P.2d 980] [in a bad faith insurance case, plaintiff died before judgment, precluding her estate's recovery of emotional distress damages]), or if the harm caused by defendant's acts could have been great, but by chance only slight harm was inflicted. (Simon, supra, 35 Cal.4th at p. 1177, citing TXO Production Corp. v. Alliance Resources Corp. (1993) 509 U.S. 443, 459 [113 S.Ct. 2711, 125 L.Ed.2d 366] [considering the hypothetical of a person wildly firing a gun into a crowd but by chance only damaging a pair of glasses].) The bracketed phrase should not be given if an award of compensatory damages is the "true measure" of the harm or potential harm caused by defendant's wrongful acts. (Simon, supra, 35 Cal.4th at pp. 1178–1179 [rejecting consideration for purposes of assessing punitive damages of the plaintiff's loss of the benefit of the bargain if the jury had found that there was no binding contract].)

Read the optional final sentence of factor (c) only if the defendant has presented relevant evidence regarding that issue.

Read the optional final sentence if there is a possibility that in arriving at an amount of punitive damages, the jury might consider harm that the defendant's conduct may have caused to nonparties. (See Philip Morris USA v. Williams (2007) 549 U.S. 346, 353–354 [127 S.Ct. 1057, 166 L.Ed.2d 940].) Harm to others may be relevant to determining reprehensibility based on factors (a)(2) (disregard of health or safety of others) and (a)(4) (pattern or practice). (See State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 419 [123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585].)

If any of the alternative grounds for seeking punitive damages are inapplicable to the facts of the case, they may be omitted.

See CACI No. 3940, Punitive Damages—Individual Defendant—Trial Not Bifurcated, for additional sources and authority.

"A jury must be instructed ... that it may not use evidence of out-of-state conduct to punish a defendant for action that was lawful in the jurisdiction where it occurred." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at p. 422.) An instruction on this point should be included within this instruction if appropriate to the facts.

In an appropriate case, the jury may be instructed that a false promise or a suggestion of a fact known to be false may constitute a misrepresentation as the word "misrepresentation" is used in the instruction's definition of "fraud."

Courts have stated that "[p]unitive damages previously imposed for the same conduct are relevant in determining the amount of punitive damages required to sufficiently punish and deter. The likelihood of future punitive damage awards may also be considered, although it is entitled to considerably less weight." (Stevens v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1996) 49 Cal.App.4th 1645, 1661 [57 Cal.Rptr.2d 525].) The court in Stevens suggested that the following instruction be given if evidence of other punitive damage awards is introduced into evidence:

> If you determine that a defendant has already been assessed with punitive damages based on the same conduct for which punitive damages are requested in this case, you may consider whether punitive damages awarded in other cases have sufficiently punished and made an example of the defendant. You must not use the amount of punitive damages awarded in other cases to determine the amount of the punitive damage award in this case, except to the extent you determine that a lesser award, or no award at all, is justified in light of the penalties already imposed. (Stevens, supra, 49 Cal.App.4th at p. 1663, fn. 7.)

- "An award of punitive damages is not supported by a verdict based on breach of contract, even where the defendant's conduct in breaching the contract was wilful, fraudulent, or malicious. Even in those cases in which a separate tort action is alleged, if there is 'but one verdict based upon contract' a punitive damage award is improper." (Myers Building Industries, Ltd. v. Interface Technology, Inc. (1993) 13 Cal.App.4th 949, 960 [17 Cal.Rptr.2d 242], internal citations omitted.)

- " '[T]he most important indicium of the reasonableness of a punitive damages award is the degree of reprehensibility of the defendant's conduct.' We have instructed courts to determine the reprehensibility of a defendant by considering whether: the harm caused was physical as opposed to economic; the tortious conduct evinced an indifference to or a reckless disregard of the health or safety of others; the target of the conduct had financial vulnerability; the conduct involved repeated actions or was an isolated incident; and the harm was the result of intentional malice, trickery, or deceit, or mere accident. The existence of any one of these factors weighing in favor of a plaintiff may not be sufficient to sustain a punitive damages award; and the absence of all of them renders any award suspect." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at p. 419, internal citation omitted.)

- "[I]n a case involving physical harm, the physical or physiological vulnerability of the target of the defendant's conduct is an appropriate factor to consider in determining the degree of reprehensibility, particularly if the defendant deliberately exploited that vulnerability." (Bullock v. Philip Morris USA, Inc. (2011) 198 Cal.App.4th 543, 562 [131 Cal.Rptr.3d 382], internal citation omitted.)

- "[W]e have been reluctant to identify concrete constitutional limits on the ratio between harm, or potential harm, to the plaintiff and the punitive damages award. We decline again to impose a bright-line ratio which a punitive damages award cannot exceed. Our jurisprudence and the principles it has now established demonstrate, however, that, in practice, few awards exceeding a single-digit ratio between punitive and compensatory damages, to a significant degree, will satisfy due process. … [A]n award of more than four times the amount of compensatory damages might be close to the line of constitutional impropriety. … While these ratios are not binding, they are instructive. They demonstrate what should be obvious: Single-digit multipliers are more likely to comport with due process, while still achieving the State's goals of deterrence and retribution, than awards with ratios in range of 500 to 1 … ." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at pp. 424–425, internal citation omitted.)

- "Nonetheless, because there are no rigid benchmarks that a punitive damages award may not surpass, ratios greater than those we have previously upheld may comport with due process where 'a particularly egregious act has resulted in only a small amount of economic damages.' The converse is also true, however. When compensatory damages are substantial, then a lesser ratio, perhaps only equal to compensatory damages, can reach the outermost limit of the due process guarantee. The precise award in any case, of course, must be based upon the facts and circumstances of the defendant's conduct and the harm to the plaintiff." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at p. 425, internal citation omitted.)

- "In determining whether a punitive damages award is unconstitutionally excessive, Brandt fees may be included in the calculation of the ratio of punitive to compensatory damages, regardless of whether the fees are awarded by the trier of fact as part of its verdict or are determined by the trial court after the verdict has been rendered." (Nickerson v. Stonebridge Life Ins. Co. (2016) 63 Cal.4th 363, 368 [203 Cal.Rptr.3d 23, 371 P.3d 242].)

- "[T]he Constitution's Due Process Clause forbids a State to use a punitive damages award to punish a defendant for injury that it inflicts upon nonparties or those whom they directly represent, i.e., injury that it inflicts upon those who are, essentially, strangers to the litigation." (Philip Morris USA, supra, 549 U.S. at p. 353.)

- "Evidence of actual harm to nonparties can help to show that the conduct that harmed the plaintiff also posed a substantial risk of harm to the general public, and so was particularly reprehensible—although counsel may argue in a particular case that conduct resulting in no harm to others nonetheless posed a grave risk to the public, or the converse. Yet for the reasons given above, a jury may not go further than this and use a punitive damages verdict to punish a defendant directly on account of harms it is alleged to have visited on nonparties." (Philip Morris USA, supra, 549 U.S. at p. 355.)

- " 'Due process does not permit courts, in the calculation of punitive damages, to adjudicate the merits of other parties' hypothetical claims against a defendant under the guise of the reprehensibility analysis … . Punishment on these bases creates the possibility of multiple punitive damages awards for the same conduct … .' This does not mean, however, that the defendant's similar wrongful conduct toward others should not be considered in determining the amount of punitive damages." (Bullock, supra, 198 Cal.App.4th at p. 560.)

- "Though due process does not permit courts or juries, in the calculation of punitive damages, to adjudicate the merits of other parties' hypothetical claims against a defendant under the guise of the reprehensibility analysis, this does not mean that the defendant's similar wrongful conduct toward others should not be considered in determining the amount of punitive damages. … '[T]o consider the defendant's entire course of conduct in setting or reviewing a punitive damages award, even in an individual plaintiff's lawsuit, is not to punish the defendant for its conduct toward others. An enhanced punishment for recidivism does not directly punish the earlier offense; it is, rather, " ' "a stiffened penalty for the last crime, which is considered to be an aggravated offense because a repetitive one." ' " … By placing the defendant's conduct on one occasion into the context of a business practice or policy, an individual plaintiff can demonstrate that the conduct toward him or her was more blameworthy and warrants a stronger penalty to deter continued or repeated conduct of the same nature.' " (Izell v. Union Carbide Corp. (2014) 231 Cal.App.4th 962, 987 [180 Cal.Rptr.3d 382], internal citations omitted.)

- "[A] specific instruction encompassing both the permitted and prohibited uses of evidence of harm caused to others would be appropriate in the new trial if requested by the parties. We believe that an instruction on these issues should clearly distinguish between the permitted and prohibited uses of such evidence and thus make clear to the jury the purposes for which it can and cannot consider that evidence. A jury may consider evidence of harm caused to others for the purpose of determining the degree of reprehensibility of a defendant's conduct toward the plaintiff in deciding the amount of punitive damages, but it may not consider that evidence for the purpose of punishing the defendant directly for harm caused to others. In our view, Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (Aug. 2007 rev.) CACI Nos. 3940, 3942, 3943, 3945, 3947, and 3949 could convey this distinction better by stating more explicitly that evidence of harm caused to others may be considered for the one purpose but not for the other, and by providing that explanation together with the reprehensibility factors rather than in connection with the reasonable relationship issue." (Bullock v. Philip Morris USA, Inc. (2008) 159 Cal.App.4th 655, 695, fn. 21 [71 Cal.Rptr.3d 775], internal citation omitted.)

- "In light of our holding that evidence of a defendant's financial condition is essential to support an award of punitive damages, Evidence Code section 500 mandates that the plaintiff bear the burden of proof on the issue. A plaintiff seeking punitive damages is not seeking a mere declaration by the jury that he is entitled to punitive damages in the abstract. The plaintiff is seeking an award of real money in a specific amount to be set by the jury. Because the award, whatever its amount, cannot be sustained absent evidence of the defendant's financial condition, such evidence is 'essential to the claim for relief.' " (Adams v. Murakami (1991) 54 Cal.3d 105, 119 [284 Cal.Rptr. 318, 813 P.2d 1348], internal citation omitted.)

- "A defendant is in the best position to know his or her financial condition, and cannot avoid a punitive damage award by failing to cooperate with discovery orders. [¶] A number of cases have held that noncompliance with a court order to disclose financial condition precludes a defendant from challenging the sufficiency of the evidence of a punitive damages award on appeal." (Fernandes v. Singh (2017) 16 Cal.App.5th 932, 942 [224 Cal.Rptr.3d 751].)

- "[T]he purpose of punitive damages is not served by financially destroying a defendant. The purpose is to deter, not to destroy." (Adams, supra, 54 Cal.3d at p. 112.)

- "While 'there is no rigid formula and other factors may be dispositive especially when net worth is manipulated and fails to reflect actual wealth,' net worth is often described as 'the critical determinant of financial condition.' [¶] A plaintiff seeking punitive damages must provide a balanced overview of the defendant's financial condition; a selective presentation of financial condition evidence will not survive scrutiny." (Farmers & Merchants Trust Co. v. Vanetik (2019) 33 Cal.App.5th 638, 648 [245 Cal.Rptr.3d 608], internal citation omitted.)

- "[N]et worth is not the only measure of a defendant's wealth for punitive damages purposes that is recognized by the California courts. 'Indeed, it is likely that blind adherence to any one standard [of determining wealth] could sometimes result in awards which neither deter nor punish or which deter or punish too much.' " (Bankhead v. ArvinMeritor, Inc. (2012) 205 Cal.App.4th 68, 79 [139 Cal.Rptr.3d 849].)

- "The key inquiry thus concerns the employee's authority to change or establish corporate policy. The fact that an employee has a supervisory position with the power to terminate employees under his or her control does not, by itself, render the employee a managing agent. Nor does the fact that an employee supervises a large number of employees necessarily establish that status." (CRST, Inc. v. Superior Court (2017) 11 Cal.App.5th 1255, 1273 [218 Cal.Rptr.3d 664].)

3946. Punitive Damages—Entity Defendant—Bifurcated Trial (First Phase)

If you decide that [name of defendant]'s conduct caused [name of plaintiff] harm, you must decide whether that conduct justifies an award of punitive damages. The amount, if any, of punitive damages will be an issue decided later.

At this time, you must decide whether [name of plaintiff] has proved that [name of defendant] engaged in that conduct with malice, oppression, or fraud. To do this, [name of plaintiff] must prove [one of] the following by clear and convincing evidence:

1. [That the conduct constituting malice, oppression, or fraud was committed by one or more officers, directors, or managing agents of [name of defendant] who acted on behalf of [name of defendant]; [or]]

2. [That the conduct constituting malice, oppression, or fraud was authorized by one or more officers, directors, or managing agents of [name of defendant]; [or]]

3. [That one or more officers, directors, or managing agents of [name of defendant] knew of the conduct constituting malice, oppression, or fraud and adopted or approved that conduct after it occurred.]

"Malice" means that [name of defendant] acted with intent to cause injury or that [name of defendant]'s conduct was despicable and was done with a willful and knowing disregard of the rights or safety of another. A person acts with knowing disregard when ~~he or she~~the person is aware of the probable dangerous consequences of ~~his or her~~the person's conduct and deliberately fails to avoid those consequences.

"Oppression" means that [name of defendant]'s conduct was despicable and subjected [name of plaintiff] to cruel and unjust hardship in knowing disregard of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] rights.

"Despicable conduct" is conduct that is so vile, base, or contemptible that it would be looked down on and despised by reasonable people.

"Fraud" means that [name of defendant] intentionally misrepresented or concealed a material fact and did so intending to harm [name of plaintiff].

An employee is a "managing agent" if ~~he or she~~the person exercises substantial independent authority and judgment in ~~his or her~~the person's corporate decision-making such that ~~his or her~~the person's decisions ultimately determine corporate policy.

Directions for Use

CACI No. 3942, Punitive Damages—Individual Defendant—Bifurcated Trial (Second Phase) may be used for the second phase of a bifurcated trial.

This instruction is intended for use when the plaintiff is seeking punitive damages against a corporation or other entity for the conduct of its directors, officers, and managing agents. When the plaintiff is seeking to hold an employer or principal liable for the conduct of a specific employee or agent, use CACI No. 3944, Punitive Damages Against Employer or Principal For Conduct of a Specific Agent or Employee—Bifurcated Trial (First Phase). When the plaintiff is seeking punitive damages from both the employer/principal and the employee/agent, use CACI No. 3948, Punitive Damages—Individual and Corporate Defendants (Corporate Liability Based on Acts of Named Individual)—Bifurcated Trial (First Phase).

If any of the alternative grounds for seeking punitive damages are inapplicable to the facts of the case, they may be omitted.

In an appropriate case, the jury may be instructed that a false promise or a suggestion of a fact known to be false may constitute a misrepresentation as the word "misrepresentation" is used in the instruction's definition of "fraud."

3947. Punitive Damages—Individual and Entity Defendants—Trial Not Bifurcated

If you decide that [name of individual defendant]'s or [name of entity defendant]'s conduct caused [name of plaintiff] harm, you must decide whether that conduct justifies an award of punitive damages. The purposes of punitive damages are to punish a wrongdoer for the conduct that harmed the plaintiff and to discourage similar conduct in the future.

You may award punitive damages against [name of individual defendant] only if [name of plaintiff] proves by clear and convincing evidence that [name of individual defendant] engaged in that conduct with malice, oppression, or fraud.

You may award punitive damages against [name of entity defendant] only if [name of plaintiff] proves that [name of entity defendant] acted with malice, oppression, or fraud. To do this, [name of plaintiff] must prove [one of] the following by clear and convincing evidence:

1. [That the malice, oppression, or fraud was conduct of one or more officers, directors, or managing agents of [name of entity defendant], who acted on behalf of [name of entity defendant]; [or]]

2. [That an officer, a director, or a managing agent of [name of entity defendant] had advance knowledge of the unfitness of [name of individual defendant] and employed [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] with a knowing disregard of the rights or safety of others; [or]]

3. [That the conduct constituting malice, oppression, or fraud was authorized by one or more officers, directors, or managing agents of [name of entity defendant]; [or]]

4. [That one or more officers, directors, or managing agents of [name of entity defendant] knew of the conduct constituting malice, oppression, or fraud and adopted or approved that conduct after it occurred.]

"Malice" means that a defendant acted with intent to cause injury or that a defendant's conduct was despicable and was done with a willful and knowing disregard of the rights or safety of another. A defendant acts with knowing disregard when the defendant is aware of the probable dangerous consequences of his, her, or its conduct and deliberately fails to avoid those consequences.

"Oppression" means that a defendant's conduct was despicable and subjected [name of plaintiff] to cruel and unjust hardship in knowing disregard of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] rights.

"Despicable conduct" is conduct that is so vile, base, or contemptible that it would be looked down on and despised by reasonable people.

"Fraud" means that a defendant intentionally misrepresented or concealed a material fact and did so intending to harm [name of plaintiff].

An employee is a "managing agent" if ~~he or she~~the employee exercises substantial independent authority and judgment in ~~his or her~~ corporate decisionmaking such that ~~his or her~~the employee's decisions ultimately determine corporate policy.

There is no fixed formula for determining the amount of punitive damages, and you are not required to award any punitive damages. If you decide to award punitive damages, you should consider all of the following factors separately for each defendant in determining the amount:

(a) How reprehensible was that defendant's conduct? In deciding how reprehensible a defendant's conduct was, you may consider, among other factors:

1. Whether the conduct caused physical harm;

2. Whether the defendant disregarded the health or safety of others;

3. Whether [name of plaintiff] was financially weak or vulnerable and the defendant knew [name of plaintiff] was financially weak or vulnerable and took advantage of [him/her/nonbinary pronoun];

4. Whether the defendant's conduct involved a pattern or practice; and

5. Whether the defendant acted with trickery or deceit.

(b) Is there a reasonable relationship between the amount of punitive damages and [name of plaintiff]'s harm [or between the amount of punitive damages and potential harm to [name of plaintiff] that the defendant knew was likely to occur because of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] conduct]?

(c) In view of that defendant's financial condition, what amount is necessary to punish [him/her/nonbinary pronoun/it] and discourage future wrongful conduct? You may not increase the punitive award above an amount that is otherwise appropriate merely because a defendant has substantial financial resources. [Any award you impose may not exceed that defendant's ability to pay.]

[Punitive damages may not be used to punish a defendant for the impact of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun/its] alleged misconduct on persons other than [name of plaintiff].]

New September 2003; Revised April 2004, October 2004, December 2005, June 2006, April 2007, August 2007, October 2008, May 2020

Directions for Use

This instruction is intended to apply if punitive damages are sought against both an individual person and a corporate defendant. When punitive damages are sought only against corporate defendants, use CACI No. 3943, Punitive Damages Against Employer or Principal for Conduct of a Specific Agent or Employee—Trial Not Bifurcated, or CACI No. 3945, Punitive Damages—Entity Defendant—Trial Not Bifurcated. When punitive damages are sought against an individual defendant, use CACI No. 3940, Punitive Damages—Individual Defendant—Trial Not Bifurcated.

For an instruction explaining "clear and convincing evidence," see CACI No. 201, Highly Probable—Clear and Convincing Proof.

Read the bracketed language at the end of the first sentence of factor (b) only if there is evidence that the conduct of defendant that allegedly gives rise to liability and punitive damages either caused or foreseeably threatened to cause harm to plaintiff that would not be included in an award of compensatory damages. (Simon v. San Paolo U.S. Holding Co., Inc. (2005) 35 Cal.4th 1159 [29 Cal.Rptr.3d 379, 113 P.3d 63].) The bracketed phrase concerning "potential harm" might be appropriate, for example, if damages actually caused by the defendant's acts are not recoverable because they are barred by statute (id. at p. 1176, citing Neal v. Farmers Ins. Exchange (1978) 21 Cal.3d 910, 929 [148 Cal.Rptr. 389, 582 P.2d 980] [in a bad faith insurance case, plaintiff died before judgment, precluding her estate's recovery of emotional distress damages]), or if the harm caused by defendant's acts could have been great, but by chance only slight harm was inflicted. (Simon, supra, 35 Cal.4th at p. 1177, citing TXO Production Corp. v. Alliance Resources Corp. (1993) 509 U.S. 443, 459 [113 S.Ct. 2711, 125 L.Ed.2d 366] [considering the hypothetical of a person wildly firing a gun into a crowd but by chance only damaging a pair of glasses].) The bracketed phrase should not be given if an award of compensatory damages is the "true measure" of the harm or potential harm caused by defendant's wrongful acts. (Simon, supra, 35 Cal.4th at pp. 1178–1179 [rejecting consideration for purposes of assessing punitive damages of the plaintiff's loss of the benefit of the bargain if the jury had found that there was no binding contract].)

Read the optional final sentence of factor (c) only if the defendant has presented relevant evidence regarding that issue.

Read the optional final sentence if there is a possibility that in arriving at an amount of punitive damages, the jury might consider harm that the defendant's conduct may have caused to nonparties. (See Philip Morris USA v. Williams (2007) 549 U.S. 346, 353–354 [127 S.Ct. 1057, 166 L.Ed.2d 940].) Harm to others may be relevant to determining reprehensibility based on factors (a)(2) (disregard of health or safety of others) and (a)(4) (pattern or practice). (See State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. v. Campbell (2003) 538 U.S. 408, 419 [123 S.Ct. 1513, 155 L.Ed.2d 585].)

If any of the alternative grounds for seeking punitive damages are inapplicable to the facts of the case, they may be omitted.

See CACI No. 3940, Punitive Damages—Individual Defendant—Trial Not Bifurcated, for additional sources and authority.

"A jury must be instructed ... that it may not use evidence of out-of-state conduct to punish a defendant for action that was lawful in the jurisdiction where it occurred." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at p. 422.) An instruction on this point should be included within this instruction if appropriate to the facts.

In an appropriate case, the jury may be instructed that a false promise or a suggestion of a fact known to be false may constitute a misrepresentation as the word "misrepresentation" is used in the instruction's definition of "fraud."

Courts have stated that "[p]unitive damages previously imposed for the same conduct are relevant in determining the amount of punitive damages required to sufficiently punish and deter. The likelihood of future punitive damage awards may also be considered, although it is entitled to considerably less weight." (Stevens v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. (1996) 49 Cal.App.4th 1645, 1661 [57 Cal.Rptr.2d 525], internal citations omitted.) The court in Stevens suggested that the following instruction be given if evidence of other punitive damage awards is introduced into evidence:

> If you determine that a defendant has already been assessed with punitive damages based on the same conduct for which punitive damages are requested in this case, you may consider whether punitive damages awarded in other cases have sufficiently punished and made an example of the defendant. You must not use the amount of punitive damages awarded in other cases to determine the amount of the punitive damage award in this case, except to the extent you determine that a lesser award, or no award at all, is justified in light of the penalties already imposed. (Stevens, supra, 49 Cal.App.4th at p. 1663, fn. 7.)

- "[E]vidence of ratification of [agent's] actions by Hamilton, and any other findings made under Civil Code section 3294, subdivision (b), must be made by clear and convincing evidence." (Barton v. Alexander Hamilton Life Ins. Co. of America (2003) 110 Cal.App.4th 1640, 1644 [3 Cal.Rptr.3d 258].)

- "Subdivision (b) is not a model of clarity, but in light of California's history of employer liability for punitive damages and of the Legislature's reasons for enacting subdivision (b), we have no doubt that it does no more than codify and refine existing law. Subdivision (b) thus authorizes the imposition of punitive damages on an employer in three situations: (1) when an employee was guilty of oppression, fraud or malice, and the employer with advance knowledge of the unfitness of the employee employed him or her with a conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others, (2) when an employee was guilty of oppression, fraud or malice, and the employer authorized or ratified the wrongful conduct, or (3) when the employer was itself guilty of the oppression, fraud or malice." (Weeks v. Baker & McKenzie (1998) 63 Cal.App.4th 1128, 1151 [74 Cal.Rptr.2d 510].)

- " 'California has traditionally allowed punitive damages to be assessed against an employer (or principal) for the acts of an employee (or agent) only where the circumstances indicate that the employer himself was guilty of fraud, oppression, or malice. Thus, even before section 3294, subdivision (b) was added to the Civil Code in 1980, the courts required evidence that the employer authorized or ratified a malicious act, personally committed such an act, or wrongfully hired or retained an unfit employee.' The 'additional' burden on a plaintiff seeking punitive damages from an employer is to show not only that an employee acted with oppression, fraud or malice, but that the employer engaged in conduct defined in subdivision (b)." (Weeks, supra, 63 Cal.App.4th at p. 1154, internal citation omitted.)

- "Civil Code section 3294, subdivision (b) does not authorize an award of punitive damages against an employer for the employee's wrongful conduct. It authorizes an award of punitive damages against an employer for the employer's own wrongful conduct. Liability under subdivision (b) is vicarious only to the extent that the employer is liable for the actions of its officer, director or managing agent in hiring or controlling the offending employee, in ratifying the offense or in acting with oppression, fraud or malice. It is not vicarious in the sense that the employer is liable for the wrongful conduct of the offending employee." (Weeks, supra, 63 Cal.App.4th at pp. 1154–1155.)

- " '[T]he most important indicium of the reasonableness of a punitive damages award is the degree of reprehensibility of the defendant's conduct.' We have instructed courts to determine the reprehensibility of a defendant by considering whether: the harm caused was physical as opposed to economic; the tortious conduct evinced an indifference to or a reckless disregard of the health or safety of others; the target of the conduct had financial vulnerability; the conduct involved repeated actions or was an isolated incident; and the harm was the result of intentional malice, trickery, or deceit, or mere accident. The existence of any one of these factors weighing in favor of a plaintiff may not be sufficient to sustain a punitive damages award; and the absence of all of them renders any award suspect." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at p. 419, internal citation omitted.)
- "[I]n a case involving physical harm, the physical or physiological vulnerability of the target of the defendant's conduct is an appropriate factor to consider in determining the degree of reprehensibility, particularly if the defendant deliberately exploited that vulnerability." (Bullock v. Philip Morris USA, Inc. (2011) 198 Cal.App.4th 543, 562 [131 Cal.Rptr.3d 382], internal citation omitted.)

- "[W]e have been reluctant to identify concrete constitutional limits on the ratio between harm, or potential harm, to the plaintiff and the punitive damages award. We decline again to impose a bright-line ratio which a punitive damages award cannot exceed. Our jurisprudence and the principles it has now established demonstrate, however, that, in practice, few awards exceeding a single-digit ratio between punitive and compensatory damages, to a significant degree, will satisfy due process. … [A]n award of more than four times the amount of compensatory damages might be close to the line of constitutional impropriety. … While these ratios are not binding, they are instructive. They demonstrate what should be obvious: Single-digit multipliers are more likely to comport with due process, while still achieving the State's goals of deterrence and retribution, than awards with ratios in range of 500 to 1 … ." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at pp. 424–425, internal citation omitted.)

- "Nonetheless, because there are no rigid benchmarks that a punitive damages award may not surpass, ratios greater than those we have previously upheld may comport with due process where 'a particularly egregious act has resulted in only a small amount of economic damages.' The converse is also true, however. When compensatory damages are substantial, then a lesser ratio, perhaps only equal to compensatory damages, can reach the outermost limit of the due process guarantee. The precise award in any case, of course, must be based upon the facts and circumstances of the defendant's conduct and the harm to the plaintiff." (State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., supra, 538 U.S. at p. 425, internal citation omitted.)

- "In determining whether a punitive damages award is unconstitutionally excessive, Brandt fees may be included in the calculation of the ratio of punitive to compensatory damages, regardless of whether the fees are awarded by the trier of fact as part of its verdict or are determined by the trial court after the verdict has been rendered." (Nickerson v. Stonebridge Life Ins. Co. (2016) 63 Cal.4th 363, 368 [203 Cal.Rptr.3d 23, 371 P.3d 242].)

- "[T]he Constitution's Due Process Clause forbids a State to use a punitive damages award to punish a defendant for injury that it inflicts upon nonparties or those whom they directly represent, i.e., injury that it inflicts upon those who are, essentially, strangers to the litigation." (Philip Morris USA, supra, 549 U.S. at p. 353.)

- "Evidence of actual harm to nonparties can help to show that the conduct that harmed the plaintiff also posed a substantial risk of harm to the general public, and so was particularly reprehensible—although counsel may argue in a particular case that conduct resulting in no harm to others nonetheless posed a grave risk to the public, or the converse. Yet for the reasons given above, a jury may not go further than this and use a punitive damages verdict to punish a defendant directly on account of harms it is alleged to have visited on nonparties." (Philip Morris USA, supra, 549 U.S. at p. 355.)

- " 'Due process does not permit courts, in the calculation of punitive damages, to adjudicate the merits of other parties' hypothetical claims against a defendant under the guise of the reprehensibility analysis … . Punishment on these bases creates the possibility of multiple punitive damages awards for the same conduct … .' This does not mean, however, that the defendant's similar wrongful conduct toward others should not be considered in determining the amount of punitive damages." (Bullock, supra, 198 Cal.App.4th at p. 560.)

- "Though due process does not permit courts or juries, in the calculation of punitive damages, to adjudicate the merits of other parties' hypothetical claims against a defendant under the guise of the reprehensibility analysis, this does not mean that the defendant's similar wrongful conduct toward others should not be considered in determining the amount of punitive damages. … '[T]o consider the defendant's entire course of conduct in setting or reviewing a punitive damages award, even in an individual plaintiff's lawsuit, is not to punish the defendant for its conduct toward others. An enhanced punishment for recidivism does not directly punish the earlier offense; it is, rather, " ' "a stiffened penalty for the last crime, which is considered to be an aggravated offense because a repetitive one." ' " … By placing the defendant's conduct on one occasion into the context of a business practice or policy, an individual plaintiff can demonstrate that the conduct toward him or her was more blameworthy and warrants a stronger penalty to deter continued or repeated conduct of the same nature.' " (Izell v. Union Carbide Corp. (2014) 231 Cal.App.4th 962, 986, fn. 10 [180 Cal.Rptr.3d 382], internal citations omitted.)

- "[A] specific instruction encompassing both the permitted and prohibited uses of evidence of harm caused to others would be appropriate in the new trial if requested by the parties. We believe that an instruction on these issues should clearly distinguish between the permitted and prohibited uses of such evidence and thus make clear to the jury the purposes for which it can and cannot consider that evidence. A jury may consider evidence of harm caused to others for the purpose of determining the degree of reprehensibility of a defendant's conduct toward the plaintiff in deciding the amount of punitive damages, but it may not consider that evidence for the purpose of punishing the defendant directly for harm caused to others. In our view, Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (Aug. 2007 rev.) CACI Nos. 3940, 3942, 3943, 3945, 3947, and 3949 could convey this distinction better by stating more explicitly that evidence of harm caused to others may be considered for the one purpose but not for the other, and by providing that explanation together with the reprehensibility factors rather than in connection with the reasonable relationship issue." (Bullock v. Philip Morris USA, Inc. (2008) 159 Cal.App.4th 655, 695, fn. 21 [71 Cal.Rptr.3d 775], internal citation omitted.)

- "In light of our holding that evidence of a defendant's financial condition is essential to support an award of punitive damages, Evidence Code section 500 mandates that the plaintiff bear the burden of proof on the issue. A plaintiff seeking punitive damages is not seeking a mere declaration by the jury that he is entitled to punitive damages in the abstract. The plaintiff is seeking an award of real money in a specific amount to be set by the jury. Because the award, whatever its amount, cannot be sustained absent evidence of the defendant's financial condition, such evidence is 'essential to the claim for relief.' " (Adams v. Murakami (1991) 54 Cal.3d 105, 119 [284 Cal.Rptr. 318, 813 P.2d 1348], internal citation omitted.)

- "A defendant is in the best position to know his or her financial condition, and cannot avoid a punitive damage award by failing to cooperate with discovery orders. [¶] A number of cases have held that noncompliance with a court order to disclose financial condition precludes a defendant from challenging the sufficiency of the evidence of a punitive damages award on appeal." - "While 'there is no rigid formula and other factors may be dispositive especially when net worth is manipulated and fails to reflect actual wealth,' net worth is often described as 'the critical determinant of financial condition.' [¶] A plaintiff seeking punitive damages must provide a balanced overview of the defendant's financial condition; a selective presentation of financial condition evidence will not survive scrutiny." - "[N]et worth is not the only measure of a defendant's wealth for punitive damages purposes that is recognized by the California courts. 'Indeed, it is likely that blind adherence to any one standard [of determining wealth] could sometimes result in awards which neither deter nor punish or which deter or punish too much.' - "Although it is generally true … that an employee's hierarchy in a corporation is not necessarily determinative of his or her status as a managing agent of a corporation, evidence showing an employee's hierarchy and job duties, responsibilities, and authority may be sufficient, absent conclusive proof to the contrary, to support a reasonable inference by a trier of fact that the employee is a managing agent of a corporation." - "The key inquiry thus concerns the employee's authority to change or establish corporate policy. The fact that an employee has a supervisory position with the power to terminate employees under his or her control does not, by itself, render the employee a managing agent. 3948. Punitive Damages—Individual and Corporate Defendants (Corporate Liability Based on Acts of Named Individual)—Bifurcated Trial (First Phase)

If you decide that [name of individual defendant]'s conduct caused [name of plaintiff] harm, you must decide whether that conduct justifies an award of punitive damages against [name of individual defendant] and, if so, against [name of corporate defendant]. The amount, if any, of punitive damages will be an issue decided later.

You may award punitive damages against [name of individual defendant] only if [name of plaintiff] proves by clear and convincing evidence that [name of individual defendant] engaged in that conduct with malice, oppression, or fraud.

"Malice" means that a defendant acted with intent to cause injury or that a defendant's conduct was despicable and was done with a willful and knowing disregard of the rights or safety of another. A defendant acts with knowing disregard when the defendant is aware of the probable dangerous consequences of his, her, or its conduct and deliberately fails to avoid those consequences.

"Oppression" means that a defendant's conduct was despicable and subjected [name of plaintiff] to cruel and unjust hardship in knowing disregard of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] rights.

"Despicable conduct" is conduct that is so vile, base, or contemptible that it would be looked down on and despised by reasonable people.

"Fraud" means that a defendant intentionally misrepresented or concealed a material fact and did so intending to harm [name of plaintiff].

You may also award punitive damages against [name of corporate defendant] based on [name of individual]'s conduct if [name of plaintiff] proves [one of] the following by clear and convincing evidence:

1. [That [name of individual defendant] was an officer, a director, or a managing agent of [name of corporate defendant] who was acting on behalf of [name of corporate defendant] at the time of the conduct constituting malice, oppression, or fraud; [or]]

2. [That an officer, a director, or a managing agent of [name of corporate defendant] had advance knowledge of the unfitness of [name of individual defendant] and employed [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] with a knowing disregard of the rights or safety of others; [or]]

3. [That [name of individual defendant]'s conduct constituting malice, oppression, or fraud was authorized by an officer, a director, or a managing agent of [name of corporate defendant]; [or]]

4. [That an officer, a director, or a managing agent of [name of corporate defendant]

knew of [*name of individual defendant]'s conduct constituting malice, oppression, or fraud and adopted or approved that conduct after it occurred.]

An employee is a "managing agent" if ~~he or she~~the employee exercises substantial independent authority and judgment in ~~his or her~~corporate decision-making such that ~~his or her~~the employee's decisions ultimately determine corporate policy.

Directions for Use

Use CACI No. 3949, Punitive Damages—Individual and Corporate Defendants (Corporate Liability Based on Acts of Named Individual)—Bifurcated Trial (Second Phase), for the second phase of a bifurcated trial.

This instruction is intended to apply to cases where punitive damages are sought against both an individual person and a corporate defendant. When damages are sought only against a corporate defendant, use CACI No. 3944, Punitive Damages Against Employer or Principal for Conduct of a Specific Agent or Employee—Bifurcated Trial (First Phase), or CACI No. 3946, Punitive Damages—Entity Defendant—Bifurcated Trial (First Phase). When damages are sought against individual defendants, use CACI No. 3941, Punitive Damages--Individual Defendant—Bifurcated Trial (First Phase).

For an instruction explaining "clear and convincing evidence," see CACI No. 201, Highly Probable—Clear and Convincing Proof.

If any of the alternative grounds for seeking punitive damages are inapplicable to the facts of the case, they may be omitted.

See CACI No. 3940, Punitive Damages—Individual Defendant—Trial Not Bifurcated, for additional sources and authority.

In an appropriate case, the jury may be instructed that a false promise or a suggestion of a fact known to be false may constitute a misrepresentation as the word "misrepresentation" is used in the instruction's definition of "fraud."

4002. "Gravely Disabled" Explained

The term "gravely disabled" means that a person is presently unable to provide for ~~his or her~~the person's basic needs for food, clothing, or shelter because of [a mental health disorder/impairment by chronic alcoholism]. [The term "gravely disabled" does not include persons with intellectual disabilities by reason of the disability alone.]

[[Insert one or more of the following:] [psychosis/bizarre or eccentric behavior/delusions/hallucinations/[insert other]] [is/are] not enough, by [itself/themselves], to find that [name of respondent] is gravely disabled. [He/She/Nonbinary pronoun] must be unable to provide for the basic needs of food, clothing, or shelter because of [a mental disorder/impairment by chronic alcoholism].]

[If you find [*name of respondent] will not take [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] prescribed medication without supervision and that a mental disorder makes [him/her/nonbinary pronoun] unable to provide for [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] basic needs for food, clothing, or shelter without such medication, then you may conclude [name of respondent] is presently gravely disabled.

In determining whether [*name of respondent] is presently gravely disabled, you may consider evidence that [he/she/nonbinary pronoun] did not take prescribed medication in the past. You may also consider evidence of [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] lack of insight into [his/her/nonbinary pronoun] mental condition.]

In considering whether [*name of respondent] is presently gravely disabled, you may not consider the likelihood of future deterioration or relapse of a condition.

Directions for Use

This instruction provides the definition of "gravely disabled" from Welfare and Institutions Code section 5008(h)(1)(A), which will be the applicable standard in most cases. The instruction applies to both adults and minors. (Conservatorship of M.B. (2018) 27 Cal.App.5th 98, 107 [237 Cal.Rptr.3d 775].)

Read the bracketed sentence at the end of the first paragraph if appropriate to the facts of the case. There is a second standard in Welfare and Institutions Code section 5008(h)(1)(B) involving a finding of mental incompetence under Penal Code section 1370. A different instruction will be required if this standard is alleged.

The last paragraph regarding the likelihood of future deterioration may not apply if the respondent has no insight into ~~his or her~~the respondent's mental disorder. (Conservatorship of Walker (1989) 206 Cal.App.3d 1572, 1576–1577 [254 Cal.Rptr. 552].)

If there is evidence concerning the availability of third parties that are willing to provide assistance to the proposed conservatee, see CACI No. 4007, Third Party Assistance.

The term 'gravely disabled' is sufficiently precise to exclude unusual or nonconformist lifestyles. It connotes an inability or refusal on the part of the proposed conservatee to care for basic personal needs of food, clothing and shelter." " (Conservatorship of Jesse G., supra, 248 Cal.App.4th at p. 460.)

- "While [third person] may not have shown that he could manage appellant's mental health symptoms as adeptly as would a person professionally trained to care for someone with a mental disorder, that is not the standard. As appellant states, '[t]he question in a LPS conservatorship case where the proposed conservatee asserts a third party assistance claim is not whether the third party will be able to manage the person's mental health symptoms completely. Rather, the dispositive question is whether the person is able to provide the proposed conservatee with food, clothing, and shelter on a regular basis." (Conservatorship of Neal (1987) 190 Cal.App.3d 685, 689 [235 Cal.Rptr. 577].)

- "A perceived likelihood of future relapse, without more, is not enough to justify establishing a conservatorship. This definition applies 'only to the initial 72 hours of mental health evaluation and treatment provided to a minor. … Evaluation and treatment of a minor beyond the initial 72 hours shall be pursuant to the … [LPS Act].' (§ 5585.20.) Accordingly, we must apply the definition found in the LPS Act, and determine whether there was substantial evidence Minor suffered from a mental disorder as a result of which she 'would be unable to provide for [her] basic personal needs' if she had to so provide." 4105. Duties of Stockbroker—Speculative Securities

Stockbrokers who trade in speculative securities and advise clients have a fiduciary duty to those clients:

1. To make sure that the client understands the investment risks in light of ~~his or her~~the client's financial situation;

2. To inform the client that speculative investments are not suitable if the stockbroker believes that the client is unable to bear the financial risks involved; and

3. Not to solicit the client's purchase of speculative securities that the stockbroker considers to be beyond the client's risk threshold.

If these duties are met and the client still insists on purchasing speculative securities, the stockbroker may advise the client about various speculative securities and purchase speculative securities that the client selects.

- "[T]he stockbroker has a fiduciary duty (1) to ascertain that the investor understands the investment risks in the light of his or her actual financial situation; (2) to inform the customer that no speculative investments are suitable if the customer persists in wanting to engage in such speculative transactions without the stockbroker's being persuaded that the customer is able to bear the financial risks involved; and (3) to refrain completely from soliciting the customer's purchase of any speculative securities which the stockbroker considers to be beyond the customer's risk threshold. As long as these duties are met, if the customer nevertheless insists on purchasing speculative securities, the stockbroker is not barred from advising the customer about various speculative securities and purchasing for the customer those securities which the customer selects." - "A stockbroker's fiduciary duty requires more than merely carrying out the stated objectives of the customer; at least where there is evidence, as there certainly was here, that the stockbroker's recommendations were invariably followed, the stockbroker must 'determine the customer's actual financial situation and needs.' If it would be improper and unsuitable to carry out the speculative objectives expressed by the customer, there is a further obligation on the part of the stockbroker 'to make this known to [the customer], and [to] refrain from acting except upon [the customer's] express orders.' Under such circumstances, although the stockbroker can advise the customer about the speculative options available, he or she should not solicit the customer's purchase of any such speculative securities that would be beyond the customer's 'risk threshold.' 4107. Duty of Disclosure by Real Estate Broker to Client

As a fiduciary, a real estate broker must disclose to ~~his or her~~the broker's client all material information that the broker knows or could reasonably obtain regarding the property or relating to the transaction.

The facts that a broker must learn, and the advice and counsel required of the broker, depend on the facts of the transaction, the knowledge and experience of the client, the questions asked by the client, the nature of the property, and the terms of sale. ~~The b~~Brokers must place ~~himself or herself~~ themselves in the position of their clients and consider the type of information required for the client to make a well-informed decision.

[A real estate broker cannot accept information received from another person, such as the seller, as being true, and transmit it to ~~his or her~~the broker's client without either verifying the information or disclosing to the client that the information has not been verified.]

Directions for Use

This instruction may be read after CACI No. 4101, Failure to Use Reasonable Care—Essential Factual Elements, if a real estate broker's duty of disclosure to the broker's own client is at issue. While a broker's fiduciary duty to the client arises from the relationship and not from contract (William L. Lyon & Associates, Inc. v. Superior Court (2012) 204 Cal.App.4th 1294, 1312 [139 Cal.Rptr.3d 670]), the scope of the duty may be limited by contract. (See Carleton v. Tortosa (1993) 14 Cal.App.4th 745, 750−751 [17 Cal.Rptr.2d 734] [broker-client agreement may relieve broker of any duty to provide tax advice].) Any contractual limitations may be added to the second paragraph regarding what facts a broker must learn.

The agent's duty to disclose material information to the principal includes the duty to disclose reasonably obtainable material information. [¶] . . . [¶] The facts that a broker must learn, and the advice and counsel required of the broker, depend on the facts of each transaction, the knowledge and the experience of the principal, the questions asked by the principal, and the nature of the property and the terms of

[Name of defendant], as the real estate [broker/salesperson] for [name of seller], must conduct a reasonably competent and diligent visual inspection of the property offered for sale. Before the sale, [name of defendant] must then disclose to [name of plaintiff], the buyer, all facts that materially affect the value or desirability of the property that the investigation revealed or should have revealed.

1. That [name of defendant] was [name of seller]'s real estate [broker/salesperson];

2. That [name of defendant] acted on [name of seller]'s behalf for purposes of [insert description of transaction, e.g., "selling a residential property"];

6. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

Directions for Use

Give this instruction if the seller's real estate broker or salesperson did not conduct a visual inspection of the property and make disclosures to the buyer as required by Civil Code section 2079(a). Although we agree that that statute sets forth some of the duties of a real estate broker, it is not the only source of a broker's duties. 'Real estate brokers are subject to two sets of duties: those imposed by regulatory statutes, and those arising from the general law of agency.' " (Ryan v. Real Estate of the Pacific, Inc. (2019) 32 Cal.App.5th 637, 646 [244 Cal.Rptr.3d 129].)

4109. Duty of Disclosure by Seller's Real Estate Broker to Buyer

A real estate broker for the seller of property must disclose to the buyer all facts known to the broker regarding the property or relating to the transaction that materially affect the value or desirability of the property. A broker must disclose these facts if ~~he or she~~the broker knows or should know that the buyer is not aware of them and cannot reasonably be expected to discover them through diligent attention and observation. The broker does not, however, have to disclose facts that the buyer already knows or could have learned with diligent attention and observation.

Directions for Use

This instruction should be read after CACI No. 400, Negligence—Essential Factual Elements, if a seller's real estate broker's breach of duty of disclosure to the buyer is at issue. A broker's failure to disclose known material facts to the buyer may constitute a breach of duty for purposes of a claim for negligence. Causation and damages must still be proved. This instruction may also be used with instructions in the Fraud and Deceit series (CACI No. 1900 et seq.) for a cause of action for misrepresentation or concealment. (See Holmes v. Summer (2010) 188 Cal.App.4th 1510, 1528 [116 Cal.Rptr.3d 419].)

5. That [name of plaintiff] was harmed; and

6. That [name of defendant]'s conduct was a substantial factor in causing [name of plaintiff]'s harm.

New November 2017; Revised May 2020

Directions for Use

Give this instruction for a claim of constructive fraud under Civil Code section 1573. Under the statute, constructive fraud is a particular kind of breach of fiduciary duty in which the defendant has misled the plaintiff to the plaintiff's prejudice or detriment. Constructive fraud differs from actual fraud (see CACI Nos. 1900−1903 on different claims involving actual fraud) in that no fraudulent intent is required. (Civ. Code, § 1573(1).) Thus, if one who is under a fiduciary duty to provide complete and accurate information to the plaintiff fails to do so and the plaintiff is misled to ~~his or her~~the plaintiff's prejudice, there is a claim for constructive fraud despite the lack of any intent to mislead or deceive.

In element 4, choose the first option if it was the defendant's failure to disclose information that misled the plaintiff. Choose the second option if the defendant provided information to the plaintiff, but the plaintiff was misled because the information was inaccurate or incomplete.

In a fiduciary relationship, there is a rebuttable presumption of reasonable reliance. The defendant bears the burden of rebutting the presumption by proving by substantial evidence that the plaintiff could not have reasonably relied on the misleading information or omission. (Edmunds v. Valley Circle Estates (1993) 16 Cal.App.4th 1290, 1301–1302 [20 Cal.Rptr.2d 701].)

There are cases that set forth the elements of constructive fraud as "(1) a fiduciary or confidential relationship; (2) nondisclosure (breach of fiduciary duty); (3) intent to deceive, and (4) reliance and resulting injury (causation)." (See, e.g., Younan v. Equifax Inc. (1980) 111 Cal.App.3d 498, 516 fn. 14 [169 Cal.Rptr. 478]; see also Prakashpalan v. Engstrom, Lipscomb & Lack (2014) 223 Cal.App.4th 1105, 1131 [167 Cal.Rptr.3d 832].) However, these elements conflict with the statute in at least two ways. First, the statute clearly states that no fraudulent intent (or intent to deceive) is required. Second, the statute is not limited to nondisclosure; it extends to information that is disclosed, but misleading.

For discussion of the statute of limitations for constructive fraud, see CACI No. 4120, Affirmative Defense—Statute of Limitations.

- "A fiduciary must tell its principal of all information it possesses that is material to the principal's interests. A fiduciary's failure to share material information with the principal is constructive fraud, a term of art obviating actual fraudulent intent." (Michel v. Moore & Associates, Inc. (2007) 156 Cal.App.4th 756, 762 [67 Cal.Rptr.3d 797], internal citations omitted.)

- "In its generic sense, constructive fraud comprises all acts, omissions and concealments involving a breach of legal or equitable duty, trust, or confidence, and resulting in damages to another. [Citations.] Constructive fraud exists in cases in which conduct, although not actually fraudulent, ought to be so treated—that is, in which such conduct is a constructive or quasi fraud, having all the actual consequences and all the legal effects of actual fraud." (Prakashpalan, supra, 223 Cal.App.4th at p. 1131.)

- "The failure of the fiduciary to disclose a material fact to his principal which might affect the fiduciary's motives or the principal's decision, which is known (or should be known) to the fiduciary, may constitute constructive fraud. Also, a careless misstatement may constitute constructive fraud even though there is no fraudulent intent." (Assilzadeh v. Cal. Fed. Bank (2000) 82 Cal.App.4th 399, 415 [98 Cal.Rptr.2d 176].)

- "[A] representation in the context of a trust or fiduciary relationship creates a rebuttable presumption of reasonable reliance subject to being overcome by substantial evidence to the contrary." (Edmunds, supra, 16 Cal.App.4th at p. 1302.)

- "This rebuttable presumption implements the long recognized public policy of imposing fiduciary duties upon partners in their relationship to one another. Indeed, this policy is lodged in the statutory and case law of this state. It is more than the simple shifting of the burden of proof to facilitate the determination of a particular action. Consequently, [defendant] had the burden of proving by substantial evidence that [plaintiff] did not rely on the alleged false statement." (Edmunds, supra, 16 Cal.App.4th at p. 1302.)

- "Confidential and fiduciary relations are in law, synonymous and may be said to exist whenever trust and confidence is reposed by one person in another." (Barrett v. Bank of Am. (1986) 183

New August 2007; Revised June 2010, May 2020

Directions for Use

This instruction is based solely on Civil Code section 1942.5(a), which has the 180-day limitation. The remedies provided by this statute are in addition to any other remedies provided by statutory or decisional law. (Civ. Code, § 1942.5(j).) Thus, there are two parallel and independent sources for the doctrine of retaliatory eviction: the statute and the common law. (Barela v. Superior Court (1981) 30 Cal.3d 244, 251 [178 Cal.Rptr. 618, 636 P.2d 582].) Whether the common law provides additional protection against retaliation beyond the 180-day period has not been decided. (See Glaser v. Meyers (1982) 137 Cal.App.3d 770, 776 [187 Cal.Rptr. 242] [statute not a limit in tort action for wrongful eviction; availability of the common law retaliatory eviction defense, unlike that authorized by section 1942.5, is apparently not subject to time limitations].)

Include element 1 only if the landlord's asserted ground for eviction is something other than nonpayment of rent. If nonpayment is the ground, the landlord has the burden to prove that the tenant is in default. (See CACI No. 4302, Termination for Failure to Pay Rent—Essential Factual Elements.)

If element 1 is included, there may be additional issues of fact that the jury must resolve in order to decide whether the tenant is in default in the payment of rent. If necessary, instruct that the tenant is not in default if ~~he or she~~the tenant has exercised any legally protected right not to pay the contractual amount of rent, such as a habitability defense, a "repair and deduct" remedy, or a rent increase that is alleged to be retaliatory.

For element 3, select the appropriate date or event that triggered the 180-day period within which a landlord may not file an unlawful detainer. (Civ. Code, § 1942.5(a).)

Include the last paragraph if the landlord alleges that there was also a lawful cause for the eviction (see Civ. Code, § 1942.5(f) [landlord may proceed "for any lawful cause"]), and that this cause was both asserted in good faith and set forth in the notice terminating the tenancy. (See Civ. Code, § 1942.5(g); Drouet v. Superior Court (2003) 31 Cal.4th 583, 595–596 [3 Cal.Rptr.3d 205, 73 P.3d 1185] [landlord asserting lawful cause under 1942.5(f) must also establish good faith under 1942.5(g), but need not establish total absence of retaliatory motive].)

- Lawful Acts Permitted; No Tenant Waiver. Civil Code section 1942.5(f).
- Landlord's Good Faith Acts. Civil Code section 1942.5(g).
- "The defense of 'retaliatory eviction' has been firmly ensconced in this state's statutory law and judicial decisions for many years. 'It is settled that a landlord may be precluded from evicting a tenant in retaliation for certain kinds of lawful activities of the tenant. As a landlord has no right to possession when he seeks it for such an invalid reason, a tenant may raise the defense of retaliatory eviction in an unlawful detainer proceeding.' The retaliatory eviction doctrine is founded on the premise that '[a] landlord may normally evict a tenant for any reason or for no reason at all, but he may not evict for an improper reason … .' " (Barela, supra, 30 Cal.3d at p. 249, internal citations omitted.)

- "Thus, California has two parallel and independent sources for the doctrine of retaliatory eviction. This court must decide whether petitioner raised a legally cognizable defense of retaliatory eviction under the statutory scheme and/or the common law doctrine." (Barela, supra, 30 Cal.3d at p. 251.)

- "Retaliatory eviction occurs, as Witkin observes, '[When] a landlord exercises his legal right to terminate a residential tenancy in an authorized manner, but with the motive of retaliating against a tenant who is not in default but has exercised his legal right to obtain compliance with requirements of habitability.' It is recognized as an affirmative defense in California; and as appellant correctly argues, it extends beyond warranties of habitability into the area of First Amendment rights." (Four Seas Inv. Corp. v. International Hotel Tenants' Assn. (1978) 81 Cal.App.3d 604, 610 [146 Cal.Rptr. 531], internal citations omitted.)

- "If a tenant factually establishes the retaliatory motive of his landlord in instituting a rent increase and/or eviction action, such proof should bar eviction. Of course, we do not imply that a tenant who proves a retaliatory purpose is entitled to remain in possession in perpetuity. … 'If this illegal purpose is dissipated, the landlord can, in the absence of legislation or a binding contract, evict his tenants or raise their rents for economic or other legitimate reasons, or even for no reason at all.' - "[T]he proper way to construe the statute when a landlord seeks to evict a tenant under the Ellis Act, and the tenant answers by invoking the retaliatory eviction defense under section 1942.5, is to hold that the landlord may nonetheless prevail by asserting a good faith--i.e., a bona fide--intent to withdraw the property from the rental market. If the tenant controverts the landlord's good faith, the landlord must establish the existence of the bona fide intent at a trial or hearing by a preponderance of the evidence." (Drouet supra, 31 Cal.4th at p. 596.)

- "Only when the landlord has been unable to establish a bona fide intent need the fact finder proceed to determine whether the eviction is for the purpose of retaliating against the tenant under subdivision (a) or (c) of section 1942.5." (Drouet, supra, 31 Cal.4th at p. 600.)

- "Drouet's interpretation 'give[s] effect to the plain language of [Civil Code section 1942.5], including [former] subdivisions (d) and (e), which permit a landlord to go out of business and evict the tenants—even if the landlord has a retaliatory motive—so long as the landlord also has the bona fide intent to go out of business. … If, on the other hand, the landlord cannot establish a bona fide intent to go out of business, the tenants may rely on [former] subdivisions (a) and (c) to resist the eviction.' " (Coyne v. De Leo (2018) 26 Cal.App.5th 801, 806 [237 Cal.Rptr.3d 359], original italics.)

- "[T]he cause of action for retaliation recognized by section 1942.5 applies to tenants of a mobilehome park. … 'By their terms, subdivisions (c) and (f) of section 1942.5 give a right of action to any lessee who has been subjected to an act of unlawful retaliation. Thus, on its face the statute provides protection to mobilehome park tenants who own their own dwellings and merely rent space from their landlord.' " (Banuelos v. LA Investment, LLC (2013) 219 Cal.App.4th 323, 330 [161 Cal.Rptr.3d 772].)

- "[T]he Legislature intended to create a cause of action for retaliatory eviction that is not barred by the litigation privilege. If the litigation privilege trumped a suit for retaliatory eviction under section 1942.5 the privilege would " 'effectively immunize conduct that the [statute] prohibits' " [citation], thereby encouraging, rather than suppressing, " 'the mischief at which it was directed. [Citation.]' " ' " (Winslett v. 1811 27th Avenue LLC (2018) 26 Cal.App.5th 239, 254 [237 Cal.Rptr.3d 25].)

New August 2007; Revised May 2020

Directions for Use

Throughout the instruction, insert either the defendant's protected status under the Unruh Act (see Civ. Code, § 51) or other characteristic on the basis of which the defendant alleges that ~~he or she~~the defendant has been arbitrarily discriminated against. (See Marina Point, Ltd. v. Wolfson (1982) 30 Cal.3d 721, 725–726 [180 Cal.Rptr. 496, 640 P.2d 115] [excluding all tenants with children is arbitrary illegal discrimination].)

In element 1, select the appropriate language based on whether the defendant (1) is a member of the protected class, (2) is perceived as a member of the protected class, (3) is associated with someone who is a member of the protected class, or (4) is associated with someone who is perceived as a member of the protected class.

In element 2, include the bracketed language regarding perception if the defendant is not actually a member of the protected class, but the allegation is that the plaintiff believes that the defendant is a member.

Directions for Use

This instruction is a tenant's affirmative defense alleging that ~~he or she~~the tenant is being evicted because ~~he or she~~the tenant was the victim of domestic violence, sexual assault, stalking, human trafficking, or elder or dependent adult abuse. (See Code Civ. Proc., § 1161.3.) If the tenant establishes the elements of the defense, the landlord may attempt to establish a statutory exception that would allow the eviction. The last part of the instruction sets forth the exception.

All protected statuses are defined by statute. (See Civ. Code, § 1708.7 [stalking]; Code Civ. Proc., § 1219 [sexual assault]; Fam. Code, § 6211 [domestic violence]; Pen. Code, § 236.1 [human trafficking]; Welf. & Inst. Code, § 15610.07 [abuse of elder or dependent adult].) Consider an additional instruction defining the protected status to make the meaning clear to the jury.

The acts of domestic violence, sexual assault, stalking, human trafficking, or elder or dependent adult abuse must be documented in a court order, law enforcement report, or tenant and qualified third-party statement (element 2). (Code Civ. Proc., § 1161.3(a)(1)(C), (D).) A "qualified third party" is a health practitioner, domestic violence counselor, a sexual assault counselor, or a human trafficking caseworker. (Code Civ. Proc., § 1161.3(d)(3).)

Under the exception the tenant may be evicted if the landlord reasonably believes that the presence of the perpetrator poses a physical threat to other tenants, guests, invitees, or licensees, or to a tenant's right to quiet possession pursuant to section 1927 of the Civil Code. (Code Civ. Proc., § 1161.3(b)(1)(B).) In the second option for element 1 of the landlord's response, this group has been expressed as "other persons with a right to be on the property." If more specificity is required, use the appropriate words from the statute.

The tenant must prove that the perpetrator is not a tenant of the same "dwelling unit" (see Code Civ. Proc., § 1161.3(a)(2)), which is expressed in element 3 as "living unit." Presumably, the legislative intent is to permit the perpetrator to be evicted notwithstanding that the victim will be evicted also. The term "dwelling unit" is not defined. In a multi-unit building, the policies underlying the statute would support defining "dwelling unit" to include a single unit or apartment, but not the entire building. Otherwise, the victim could be evicted if the perpetrator lives in the same building but not the same apartment.

[Name of plaintiff] claims that [he/she/*nonbinary pronoun/*it] is entitled to statutory damages in addition to actual damages. To recover statutory damages, [name of plaintiff] must prove that [name of defendant] acted with malice.

A tenant acts with malice if ~~he or she~~the tenant willfully continues to occupy the property with knowledge that ~~he or she~~the tenant no longer has the right to do so.

You must determine how much, if any, statutory damages should be awarded, up to a maximum of $600. You should not award any statutory damages if you find that [name of defendant] had a good-faith and a reasonable belief in [his/her/*nonbinary pronoun/*its] right to continue to occupy the premises.

5003. Witnesses

A witness is a person who has knowledge related to this case. You will have to decide whether you believe each witness and how important each witness's testimony is to the case. You may believe all, part, or none of a witness's testimony.

In deciding whether to believe a witness's testimony, you may consider, among other factors, the following:

(a) How well did the witness see, hear, or otherwise sense what ~~he or she~~the witness described in court?

(b) How well did the witness remember and describe what happened?

(c) How did the witness look, act, and speak while testifying?

(d) Did the witness have any reason to say something that was not true? For example, did the witness show any bias or prejudice or have a personal relationship with any of the parties involved in the case or have a personal stake in how this case is decided?

(e) What was the witness's attitude toward this case or about giving testimony?

Sometimes a witness may say something that is not consistent with something else ~~he or she~~the witness said. Sometimes different witnesses will give different versions of what happened. People often forget things or make mistakes in what they remember. Also, two people may see the same event but remember it differently. You may consider these differences, but do not decide that testimony is untrue just because it differs from other testimony.

However, if you decide that a witness did not tell the truth about something important, you may choose not to believe anything that witness said. On the other hand, if you think the witness did not tell the truth about some things but told the truth about others, you may accept the part you think is true and ignore the rest.

Do not make any decision simply because there were more witnesses on one side than on the other. If you believe it is true, the testimony of a single witness is enough to prove a fact.

You must not be biased against any witness because of ~~his or her~~the witness's disability, gender, race, religion, ethnicity, sexual orientation, age, national origin, [or] socioeconomic status[, or [insert any other impermissible form of bias]].

Directions for Use

This instruction may be given as either an introductory instruction before trial (see CACI No. 107) or as a concluding instruction.

The advisory committee recommends that this instruction be read to the jury before reading instructions on the substantive law.

In the last paragraph, the court may delete inapplicable categories of potential jury bias.

- The willfully false witness instruction was formerly codified at Code of Civil Procedure section 2061. This statute was repealed in 1965 to avoid giving undue emphasis to this rule compared to other common-law rules. Refusal to give an instruction on this point is not error: "It should certainly not be deemed of vital importance to tell the ordinary man of the world that he should distrust the statements of a witness whom he believes to be a liar." - Standard 10.20(a)(2) of the Standards for Judicial Administration provides: "In all courtroom proceedings, refrain from engaging in conduct and prohibit others from engaging in conduct that exhibits bias, including but not limited to bias based on disability, gender, race, religion, ethnicity, and sexual orientation, whether that bias is directed toward counsel, court personnel, witnesses, parties, jurors, or any other participants."
- Canon 3(b)(5) of the Code of Judicial Ethics provides: "A judge shall perform judicial duties without bias or prejudice. A judge shall not, in the performance of judicial duties, engage in speech, gestures, or other conduct that would reasonably be perceived as (1) bias or prejudice, including but not limited to bias or prejudice based on race, sex, religion, national origin, disability, age, sexual orientation, or socioeconomic status, or (2) sexual harassment." Canon 3(b)(6) requires the judge to impose these standards on attorneys also.

New April 2004; Revised April 2009, May 2020

Directions for Use

If this instruction is used, the advisory committee recommends that it be read to the jury before reading instructions on the substantive law.

The CACI instructions require the use of party names rather than party-status words like "plaintiff" and "defendant." In multiparty cases, it is important to name only the parties in each instruction to whom the instruction applies. For example, an instruction on loss of consortium (see CACI No. 3920) will not apply to all plaintiffs. Instructions on vicarious liability (see CACI No. 3700 et seq.) will not apply to all defendants. Unless all or nearly all of the instructions will apply to all of the parties, give the first option for the last paragraph.

Sources and Authority

"We realize, of course, that multiple defendants are involved and that each defendant is entitled to instructions on, and separate consideration of, every defense available and applicable to it. The purpose of this rule is to insure that the jury will distinguish and evaluate the separate facts relevant to each defendant." (*Campbell v. Executive Summary and Origin

Based on the recommendations of the Work Group on the Prevention of Discrimination and Harassment, and with input from other Judicial Council advisory bodies, the CJER Advisory Committee proposes to amend rule 10.469 of the California Rules of Court to make education on unconscious bias, as well as the prevention of discrimination and harassment, mandatory for judicial officers.

Background

Mandatory training for the prevention of sexual harassment has existed in California since 2005 when Assembly Bill 1825 mandated that all organizations with 50 or more employees must provide two hours of sexual harassment training and education to supervisory employees every two years. In January 2019, in response to the nationwide #MeToo movement, legislators passed AB 1343 which mandated sexual harassment training to non-supervisory employees every two years for employers with five employees or more, in addition to the training for supervisors already mandated by AB 1825.

In October 2018, the Chief Justice appointed the Work Group for the Prevention of Discrimination and Harassment (Work Group) to examine these related issues and further support the judicial branch's commitment to a workplace free of harassment and discrimination. The Work Group examined research and discussed potential areas for improvement relating to harassment, discrimination, retaliation, and inappropriate workplace conduct based on a protected classification. The Work Group ultimately proposed recommendations to the JudicialCouncil, including, among others, recommendation 2(A)(1) that asked the council to direct the CJER Advisory Committee (CJERAC) to consult with other advisory bodies in considering modifications to the California Rules of Court to achieve the Work Group objectives. On July 19, 2019, the Judicial Council adopted the recommendations of the Work Group. The specific language of that recommendation is below.

Work Group Recommendation 2(A)(1)[1]
Consistent with the requirements of California Government Code sections 68088 and 11135, and the California Rules of Court, rules 10.461 et seq., the Work Group recommends that the Center for Judicial Education and Research Advisory Committee , in consultation with the administrative presiding justices, appellate court clerk/executive officers, trial court presiding judges, and trial court executive officers, under the oversight of the Rules and Projects Committee, engage in the rulemaking process regarding education for judicial officers on the prevention of harassment, discrimination, retaliation, and inappropriate workplace conduct based on a protected classification.

Current Education Rule Structure
The education rules for judicial officers are separated by court level. The Supreme Court and appellate court justices are covered by rule 10.461. Superior court judges and subordinate judicial officers ("SJOs") are covered by rules 10.462. Both rules discuss content-based and hours-based education recommendations for justices and judges.

Rule 10.469 applies to all categories of judicial officers and has a specific section that discusses education recommendations in the areas of access and fairness.

The Proposal

The CJER Advisory Committee proposes to change the wording of rule 10.469 under access and fairness education to mandatory rather than recommended, based on the recommendations of the Work Group. Specifically, the CJER Advisory Committee proposes adding a subsection to rule 10.469 (e) that reads:

[1] Judicial Council of Cal., Work Group for the Prevention of Discrimination and Harassment, Rep., Judicial Branch Administration: Prevention of Discrimination, Harassment, Retaliation, and Inappropriate Workplace Conduct Based on a Protected Classification (June 12, 2019), recommendations 2(A)(1)), pp. 2–3 and 7–8: https://jcc.legistar.com/View.ashx?M=F&ID=7336325&GUID=6B7E4EDA-1AEF-457E-8045-CA0439798302

Each justice, judge, and subordinate judicial officer must participate in education on unconscious bias, as well as the prevention of harassment, discrimination, retaliation, and inappropriate workplace conduct. This education must be taken at least once every three-year continuing education period as determined by rule 10.461(c)(1) and 10.462(d)(1).

Alternatives Considered

The Work Group considered alternatives before recommending that the California Rules of Court be amended to make discrimination and harassment training a mandatory requirement. Following the council's adoption of the Work Group's recommendations, the CJER Advisory Committee consulted with the Advisory Committee on Providing Access and Fairness, the Appellate Advisory Committee, the Administrative Presiding Justices Advisory Committee, the Trial Court Presiding Judges Advisory Committee, the Court Executives Advisory Committee, the appellate clerk/executive officers and the California Judges Association about the language of the proposed amendment. The amendment as proposed herein reflects input by those bodies, and includes a suggestion from the Administrative Presiding Justices Advisory Committee to specify unconscious bias education as well as education on the prevention of harassment and discrimination.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

The education offered by the Center for Judicial Education and Research already includes training in unconscious bias and the prevention of harassment; the new requirements will lead to some expansion in those areas, as well as in the areas of prevention of discrimination, retaliation, and inappropriate workplace conduct. Education that fulfills this new requirement can also be provided by approved providers in addition to CJER. The major costs to the judicial branch associated with implementation of the amended rule are associated with the development of expanded education content in these areas.

There should be no direct fiscal and operational impacts for any other entity, including time spent by individual judicial officers on education. Although this proposal would add additional content requirements, the overall required number of education hours would not change; there should be no increase in time spent or related education costs to individual judicial officers or, by extension, to their courts. There are no additional negative impacts associated with justice partners, attorneys, self-represented litigants or the courts, although these entities may perceive benefits from working with judicial officers with more training in these areas.

The relatively minor implementation costs would be outweighed by the enormous benefits of educating judicial officers about these important issues.

Request for Specific Comments

In addition to comments on the proposal as a whole, the advisory committee is interested in comments on the following:

- Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose?

The advisory committee also seeks comments from courts on the following cost and implementation matters:

- Would the proposal provide cost savings? If so, please quantify.
- What would the implementation requirements be for courts—for example, revising processes and procedures (please describe)?
- Would 3 months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation?
- How well would this proposal work in courts of different sizes?

Executive Summary

The Civil and Small Claims Advisory Committee recommends revising the Judicial Council unlawful detainer complaint and answer forms to reflect recent changes to landlord-tenant law enacted by Assembly Bill 1482 (Stats. 2020, ch. 597), the Tenant Protection Act of 2019. This new law adds several sections to the Civil Code—one to place restrictions on terminations of tenancies (Civ. Code, § 1946.2) and two relating to caps on rent increases over a 12-month period (Civ. Code, §§ 1947.12, 1947.13). The new laws went into effect January 1, 2020, and will remain in effect until January 1, 2030.

Recommendation

The Civil and Small Claims Advisory Committee recommends that the Judicial Council, effective September 1, 2020, revise Complaint—Unlawful Detainer (form UD-100) and Answer—Unlawful Detainer (form UD-105) to include new and revised items reflecting the provisions in the Tenant Protection Act requiring, for certain tenancies, just cause for evictions, additional notices in advance of eviction for certain reasons, and a cap on rental increases. The committee also recommends revising an item in form UD-100 relating to venue for unlawful detainer cases generally.

The revised forms are attached at pages 9–15.

Relevant Previous Council Action

The unlawful detainer (UD) complaint form was last revised 15 years ago to incorporate amendments to Code of Civil Procedure section 1166 requiring that a copy of the rental agreement, if available; a copy of the notice of termination of tenancy; and a proof of service of that notice be attached to an unlawful detainer complaint. The UD answer form has been revised several times in recent years to include new affirmative defenses that the Legislature has mandated be added to the form.

Analysis/Rationale

Although neither Complaint—Unlawful Detainer (form UD-100) nor Answer—Unlawful Detainer (form UD-105) is a mandatory form, both are used frequently for several reasons: the requirements of what must be in a residential UD complaint are very detailed and technical; the expedited nature of the process requires that the pleadings be created quickly; and many defendants, as well as an increasing number of plaintiffs, are self-represented. For these reasons, although landlords with tenancies subject to the provisions of the new law can create their own pleadings to reflect the new requirements, and tenants can add any applicable new affirmative defenses as an "other" affirmative defense on the current form, the committee is recommending that the forms be revised so that they can be used by all parties in residential UD actions, regardless of whether a tenancy at issue is subject to the new law.

Complaint—Unlawful Detainer (form UD-100)

New section 1946.2[1] places additional requirements on landlords relating to terminations of certain tenancies, several of which are now part of the prima facie UD case for those tenancies:

- Landlords may only terminate tenants who have been in residence for 12 months or longer with just cause, which must be stated in the notice terminating the tenancy. (§ 1946.2(a).)

- If the just cause is a curable lease violation (other than for payment of rent), the landlord must issue two notices rather than the traditional single notice to quit: an initial notice including an opportunity to cure under Code of Civil Procedure section 1161, paragraph 3, and if that period passes without a cure, a second notice for termination. (§ 1946.2(c).)

- When no-fault just cause applies, the landlord must provide relocation assistance in the form of either a credit for the last month's rent or a direct payment to the tenant in that amount. (§ 1946.2(d)(1).) If the landlord does not comply with this section, the notice of termination is void. If the landlord complies, but the tenant fails to vacate after expiration of the notice to terminate, the amount of relocation paid or credited to the tenant is recoverable as damages in the UD action. (§ 1946.2(d).)

The revised Complaint—Unlawful Detainer (form UD-100) includes two new items to reflect the requirements described above.

- Item 7 specifies whether the tenancy at issue in the complaint is subject to the new law. The new law applies only when tenants have been in the property for certain periods of time (see § 1946.2(a)(1) and (2)), and many properties are exempt (see § 1946.2(e)). If the assertion is that the tenancy is exempt from the new law (that is, checks item 7a in the form), the plaintiff must state which specific part of the law that assertion is based on.

- Item 8, to be completed only if the property is subject to the new law, attests to the just cause for the termination and identifies whether it was at-fault or no-fault just cause. If the latter, the plaintiff must identify which form of the required relocation assistance was paid and the amount paid. Item 8c allows the plaintiff to claim the relocation assistance as damages.[2]

Item 9 (which is in current Complaint—Unlawful Detainer as item 7) has also been revised. This item addresses the service of notices of termination: the plaintiff must identify which type of notice was given from a list provided, state the date the period in the notice ended, assert that the facts in the notice are true, and provide that a copy of the notice is attached. This item has been revised to reflect the new provisions regarding the notice required for at-fault evictions based on curable violations of the lease or rental agreement. (§ 1946.2(c).) That section requires that when the termination is based on "a curable lease violation," a landlord must serve two three-day notices:

(1) A three-day notice under Code of Civil Procedure section 1161, paragraph 3 (requiring a three-day notice that includes the options of either curing the violation of certain covenants and conditions in the lease or giving up possession of the property); and

(2) If the asserted violations are not cured within that first three-day period, a three-day notice to terminate, this time without the option to cure.

Item 9 has been revised to attempt to reflect this double-notice provision.[3] The list of potential notices now includes a "3-day notice to quit under Civil Code, § 1946.2(c)," which also requires

[2] A new item has also been added to item 19 to include recovery of the relocation assistance in the prayer at the end of the complaint.

[3] The committee recognizes that the language of the statute requires, essentially, two notices to quit in these circumstances: the notice to cure or quit under the Code Civil Procedure that is expressly incorporated by reference into § 1946.2(c) and the notice to quit to be provided following that first notice. Although this may not have been the intent of the authors, it is what the statute says. The revisions to the complaint form are intended to allow parties to use it even with this inconsistent language in the statute. The committee may recommend further revisions if the

that the plaintiff state the date when the prior required notice to perform covenants (the first notice that section 1946.2(c) requires be made) was served. (See item 9a6.) In addition, an annotation has been added to the current "3-day notice to perform covenants or quit" (the notice that is regularly used under Code of Civil Procedure section 1161, paragraph 3) stating that it is not to be used if the tenancy at issue is under the Tenant Protection Act. (See item 9a5.)

The instructions in item 9(e) to provide a copy of the termination notice have also been revised to require a copy of both notices when two are required under section 1946.2(c). And the instruction in item 9(f) to complete attachments showing the service of notices not otherwise described in 9 has been expanded to include service of this prior required notice under section 1946.2(c).

In addition to the revisions to reflect the new law, item 3 in the complaint form has been revised to request more information regarding the address of the premises at issue, to make the basis for venue clearer to defendants and courts.

Answer—Unlawful Detainer (form UD-105)

New affirmative defenses have been added to the answer form. It is clear from the language of section 1946.2(a) that lack of just cause in the written termination notice is sufficient to block termination of certain tenancies and can be asserted as an affirmative defense to an unlawful detainer action. A violation of the new rent control provisions in section 1947.12 could also block termination under certain circumstances. The committee is recommending that these and other affirmative defenses arising from violations of the Tenant Protection Act be added to item 3 in the Answer—Unlawful Detainer (form UD-105).

Policy implications

Although the new Tenant Protection Act has significant policy implications, the recommended forms have none on their own. The revised forms reflect the new statutory provisions to assist parties in making and defending unlawful detainer cases—and courts in adjudicating them.

Comments

Nine comments were received; all either agreed with the proposal, agreed if modified, or did not indicate a position. The comments were from the Orange County Bar Association; Superior Courts of Los Angeles, Orange, and San Diego Counties; four legal service organizations, Disability Rights California, Legal Services of Northern California, Public Law Center, and Western Center on Law & Poverty (on behalf of itself and nine other organizations, all listed on the comments chart); and a private attorney (commenting only on the venue provision). A chart with the text of all the comments and the responses to each from the advisory committee is attached at pages 16–42. The more significant comments are described below.

Legislature revises the statute to clarify this provision or an appellate court interprets the law in a way that the proposed form does not reflect.

Multiple complaint forms

The invitation to comment asked for specific comments on whether, in light of the additional requirements added to UD procedures for certain tenancies by the Tenant Protection Act, a separate complaint form should be developed for cases involving tenancies subject to the act. Seven commenters responded to this question (the private attorney and Superior Court of Los Angeles County did not respond). The majority, including all the legal service commenters, disagreed with the idea of multiple complaint forms. Commenters asserted that having to choose between the forms could be confusing to the parties and, if the wrong form is chosen, could lead to unnecessary demurrers or motions and the necessity to file amended complaints, causing delays in what is intended to be an expedited process. Moreover, commenters pointed out that the question of whether the Tenant Protection Act applied might itself be at issue in the lawsuit, and that issue could be difficult to raise if the wrong complaint form were used. The committee agrees with these commenters and does not plan to develop a complaint form specific only to cases under the new law at this time.

The only commenter who asked for two separate complaints did so on the grounds that it might otherwise be confusing for a clerk to know what had to be alleged if a default judgment was requested. The Superior Court of Orange County suggested that, if a separate complaint form was not developed for cases under the Tenant Protection Act, the request for default form be revised to include an item for plaintiffs to note whether the case is subject to the act. That proposal is beyond the scope of the current proposal, but the committee will consider it as time and resources allow.

Allegations of exemption from new law

Several commenters, including the Superior Court of Los Angeles County and the legal service commenters, proposed that item 7a in the complaint, an assertion that the tenancy at issue is not subject to the Tenant Protection Act, include the factual basis for that assertion, with several commenters suggesting that a checklist be included in the form of all potential grounds for exemption in the statute. They asserted that without such information, the tenant will not know the grounds on which the exemption is claimed and may therefore face the burden of having to prove that none of the many potential exemptions apply.

The committee agrees that a bare statement of exemption could place an unfair burden on the tenant and has revised this item in light of the comments received. Because a list of potential grounds for exemptions would be extensive and detailed, and would make an already complex form even more complicated and difficult to follow, the committee has added instead a requirement that the plaintiff claiming an exemption identify the specific subpart of the statute being relied on. This requirement should provide a defendant with sufficient information to counter the claim, if appropriate.

Allegations of just cause for eviction

Item 8 includes allegations as to whether the tenancy was terminated for at-fault or no-fault just cause. (The distinction is important because if the latter, then the landlord is required to have provided relocation assistance at the time the notice of termination was provided.) Several commenters asserted that this item should also require the plaintiff to state the factual basis for the termination, to support the allegation of just cause. The committee considered the comments but declined to modify this item. The statutory requirement is not merely that the landlord have just cause to evict, but that the just cause be stated in the written notice to terminate the tenancy. (§ 1946.2(a).) The written notice must be attached to the UD complaint[4] and show whether the required just cause was stated. Including an opportunity in item 8 to plead some basis for just cause that is different from what is in the notice of termination would not provide useful information and could lead to confusion.

Allegations of notice under section 1946.2(c)

As noted above, the committee found the new double-notice requirement for certain terminations under section 1946.2(c)[5] ambiguous, at best, because both notices that the landlord is required to serve on the tenant with a curable lease violation may require that the tenant has three days to quit the property. The first notice—the notice to be made under Code of Civil Procedure section 1161, para. 3[6]—must, under that statute, provide an option to cure the violations or give up possession of the property at the end of the three days if the violations are not cured. The second notice, to be given only if the violations are not cured with the first three-day period, is to require the tenant to give up the property in three days, but at the end of a different three-day period.

Legal service commenters assert that the first notice required under that code section is "a notice to cure only" (Western Center for Law and Poverty) and that the notice provisions in item 9 of the complaint are confusing in not making this clear. Although the committee does not agree that the first notice required by § 1946.2(c) is anything other than what is expressly referenced in that statute—i.e., a notice under section 1161 of the Code of Civil Procedure—the committee has further revised the notice listed in item 9a(6) to clarify that any notice terminating a tenancy subject to the Tenant Protection Act that involves a curable lease violation must involve two notices, with a notice to perform covenants served before the three-day notice to terminate. Additionally, item 9a(5), for a three-day notice to perform covenant or quit (without any additional notice to quit) has now been annotated to note that it should not be checked if the property is subject to the Tenant Protection Act (so that notices for curable violations under the

> Before an owner of residential real property issues a notice to terminate a tenancy for just cause that is a curable lease violation, the owner shall first give notice of the violation to the tenant with an opportunity to cure the violation pursuant to paragraph (3) of Section 1161 of the Code of Civil Procedure. If the violation is not cured within the time period set forth in the notice, a three-day notice to quit without an opportunity to cure may thereafter be served to terminate the tenancy.

> When he or she continues in possession, in person or by subtenant, after a neglect or failure to perform other conditions or covenants of the lease or agreement under which the property is held, including any covenant not to assign or sublet, than the one for the payment of rent, and three days' notice, . . . in writing, requiring the performance of such conditions or covenants, or the possession of the property, shall have been served upon him or her. [emphasis added] act must be addressed by item 9(a)(6)). With these modifications, along with clarification of the language in 9e noting that copies of both notices are required for a termination subject to section 1946.2(c), the committee believes that the form allows plaintiffs to allege that they have met the requirements of section 1946.2(c). As noted above, should the Legislature or a Court of Appeal clarify the meaning of that section, the committee will revisit this part of the complaint to see if further revisions are appropriate.

Allegations of other notices under the Tenant Protection Act

The legal service commenters request that several notice requirements in the Tenant Protection Act beyond those in section 1946.2(c) also be added to the UD complaint form. They assert that a complaint should require that the landlord allege compliance with each of these provisions and attach the required notices. The committee considered each notice identified in the comments and concluded that they were not part of a prima facie UD case and did not need to be added to the complaint form. The individual notices identified are either facts to be considered in determining whether a specific type of just cause existed (§ 1946.2(b)(2)(A)(ii)) or a specific exemption applied (§ 1946.2(e)(8)(B)), or are general notices of a tenant's rights under the act (§ 1946.2(f)). While failure to comply with all statutory requirements relating to a tenancy may be an affirmative defense in a UD case, allegations that the plaintiff has complied with each are not elements of a prima facie case for a UD complaint.

More detailed affirmative defenses

All the legal service commenters requested that more detailed affirmative defenses be included on the form than the single general affirmative defense for violations of the Tenant Protection Act that was included in the answer form circulated for comment. They assert that more detailed allegations are needed in order for self-represented tenants to be able to understand the available affirmative defenses. The committee agrees and has modified item 3h on form UD-105 to include more specific affirmative defenses relating to lack of compliance with the new law.

Alternatives considered

The advisory committee considered not recommending any revisions to the forms, in light of their optional nature, but decided against that option because the forms are so often used by self-represented parties who would, without them, find navigating the technicalities of unlawful detainer litigation very difficult.

As noted above, the committee considered creating a separate UD complaint form to be used for unlawful detainers either for all tenancies subject to this new law or for those subject to the double-notice requirements under section 1946.2(c). The committee concluded that such a form would not necessarily address the issues raised by the double-notice provision and, as confirmed by commenters, was likely to make UD litigation even more complicated.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

The enactment of the Tenant Protection Act, which went into effect January 1, 2020, has resulted in courts having to update internal procedures and case management systems and train judicial officers, self-help center staff, and court staff on the new law, including case processing staff who process clerk default judgments. This proposal to revise the forms may result in courts having to update and order additional local form packets.

1.	Disability Rights California By Lucia Choi Staff Attorney	NI	Disability Rights California (DRC), the protection and advocacy system for the State of California, submits this letter in response to the Judicial Council's invitation to comment on the proposed revisions to the unlawful detainer complaint and answer forms (UD-100 and UD-105, respectively). Disability Rights California (DRC), the largest disability rights group in the country, represents Californians with disabilities in matters that further their rights and access to justice. In that broad spectrum of work, DRC represents tenants in securing safe and affordable housing. Our housing advocacy includes promoting affordable, accessible, and equitable housing development, protecting tenants' rights, including defending unlawful detainer actions, and preventing displacement of marginalized communities. These projects allow our organization to assess the impact of the Judicial Council's proposed changes to its forms, especially the impact on tenants with disabilities. I. Request for Specific Comments The Judicial Council has asked for specific comments on item 9 of the revised complaint form, and whether the proposed changes appropriately reflect the double notice requirements outlined in Civil Code § 1946.2(c). The Judicial Council has also considered creating a new complaint form to be used for tenancies subject to the double notice. As an initial matter, we support and join in the comments submitted by Western Center on Law and Poverty in response to these comments. We also offer some additional suggestions. A. The proposed revisions to item 9 in the revised complaint form do not appropriately reflect the two-step notice requirements outlined in Civil Code § 1946.2(c). Civil Code § 1946.2(c) requires that landlords, before issuing a notice to terminate a tenancy for just cause that is a curable material lease violation, first give notice of the violation to the tenant with an opportunity to cure the violation pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure	The committee appreciates the comments. The committee notes the agreement with the comments from the Western Center on Law and Poverty. The committee has revised item 9 in light of these suggestions from multiple commenters. The committee has attempted to clarify that for terminations under § 1946.2(c) the landlord must provide two notices: a notice under paragraph 3 of Code of Civ. Proc. §1161

	Commenter	Position	Comment	Committee Response
			§ 1161(3). Item 9's proposed language makes it unclear whether the landlord is required to provide an opportunity to cure. Rather, the current language appears to require the landlord serve two sequential notices to quit. The Tenant Protection Act requires that for covered units, first a 3-day notice to cure and then, if the violation has not been cured, a 3-day notice to quit, to be served. The form should be revised accordingly.	(which is, according to that statute, a notice to perform covenants or return possession within three days of the notice) and, if the violation of covenants is not cured within the three days, a notice to quit. Because this provision in the statue is internally inconsistent (essentially requiring two notices to quit, one with the right to cure as an alternative and one without), it has been difficult for the committee to revise the form to reflect the statute as clearly as it would normally like. The committee will further revise the form should the statute be clarified.
			B. The Judicial Council should not develop a separate complaint form. The Judicial Council has proposed an alternative to revising item 9 in the revised complaint form. The alternative proposed is a new complaint form for units covered under the Act. This new form will cause additional confusion among litigants and may cause plaintiffs to file the wrong form. Plaintiffs would either have to dismiss their original complaint and refile, or amend the existing complaint. In either case, the refiling or amendment would cause confusion for self-represented tenants, who are mostly unaware of the requirement to answer to amended, or even refiled, complaints. This can lead to tenants waiving important legal defenses or worse, default judgments.	The committee agrees and will not develop a second complaint form at this time.
			II. Additional Comments While the Judicial Council has raised specific questions for comment, we respectfully provide the following comments on other sections of the proposed forms.

	Commenter	Position	Comment	Committee Response
			A. Item 7 of the Complaint should require the plaintiff to specify the applicable exemption to the Tenant Protection Act. Currently, Item 7 of the Complaint requires that the plaintiff specify whether or not the tenancy is subject to the Tenant Protection Act. If the plaintiff checks the box claiming that the tenancy is not subject to the Act, the form should also require that the plaintiff provide a basis for claiming the tenancy is not covered. The form could have a checklist of the exemptions, or a blank field requiring the plaintiff to state the exemption. Without a checklist or blank field, the complaint form does not give the defendant any information about the basis for the plaintiff's asserted exemption from the Act. This basic information makes it possible for the defendants to respond to, and for the court to evaluate, the claimed exemption. Failure to require the basis for exemption on the form will lead to confusion, inefficiency, and wrongful terminations of tenancy. B. Item 8 of the Complaint should require the plaintiff to specify the basis for the termination of tenancy. Currently, Item 8 of the Complaint requires that the plaintiff specify whether the tenancy was terminated for "at-fault" reasons or "no fault" reasons under the Tenant Protection Act. However, the form does not require that the plaintiff state a specific basis for the termination that are outlined in the Act. Again, the Tenant Protection Act includes a list of "at fault" and "no fault" just cause bases for termination of tenancy that should be listed on the form. Or, the form could provide a blank field that the plaintiff can fill in with their stated cause for termination of the tenancy.	The committee has revised the form to require a landlord who asserts that the tenancy at issue is not subject to the Tenant Protection Act to identify the specific subpart of the act the landlord is relying on. This should provide defendants with sufficient information to know whether to agree with or deny the allegation. The committee has considered but declines to accept this suggestion. Section 1946.2 provides that, for all tenancies covered by the Tenant Protection Act, a landlord" shall not terminate the tenancy without just cause which shall be stated in the written notice." That written notice must be attached to all UD complaints for residential property (Code. Civ. Proc. § 1166(d)(2) and item 9e on form UD-100). Therefore, adding an item on the form for asserting just cause is irrelevant—the landlord can only rely on just cause stated in the written notice of termination—and could lead to unnecessary confusion in the litigation.

	Commenter	Position	Comment	Committee Response
			C. Item 9 of the Complaint should include claims of service of other notice requirements of the Tenant Protection Act. Section 9 of the Complaint form has been revised to specifically allow the plaintiff to allege service of the prior notice to cure under section 1946.2(c); however, it does not provide a space for the landlord to allege compliance with other notice requirements of the Tenant Protection Act. For example, after July 1, 2020, evictions based on owner/family member move-ins, are only permitted when a tenant has agreed, in writing, to specific lease language. Civil Code § 1946.2(b)(2)(A)(ii). Similarly, a landlord who claims an exemption from the Act must have provided the tenant a notice of exemption using specific language. Civil Code § 1946.2(g)(8)(B). Finally, the landlord must provide tenants with notice of their rights under the Act pursuant to Civil Code § 1946.2(f). The complaint should require that the landlord allege compliance with each of these provisions and attach the required notices.	The committee has considered but declines to accept this suggestion. The notices mentioned here are not part of the prima facie case for and unlawful detainer action. The first is part of a specific basis for "just cause" (§ 1946.2(b)(2)(A)), and will either be contained in the rental agreement to the complaint or not. The second is part of the basis for one type of exemption from the act (§ 1946.2(g)(8)), and the tenant will know if that exemption is being alleged by the plaintiff based on the allegations now required to be made to item 7 in form UD-100. The third is a general notice of rights under the act that the landlord must give to all tenants either as an addendum to the rental agreement or, for tenancies commenced before July 1, 2020, as a written notice signed by the tenant. (§ 1946.2 (f). There is no provision in the act that a termination would be void if this notice is not provided. To the extent that a landlord must comply with all statutory requirements to obtain a judgment of unlawful detainer, failure to provide such notice would, at most, be an affirmative defense.
			D. Item 3(h) of the Answer should include specific allegations of the plaintiff's violation of the Tenant Protection Act. The proposed Answer form includes only a general provision for the tenant to allege noncompliance with the Tenant Protection Act, and it	The committee agrees that more specific affirmative defense allegations will be is unclear what "demand for provision" refers to. This general language should be modified to read "Plaintiff's demand for possession violates the Tenant Protection Act, Civil Code section 1946.2 or 1947.12 because…" and then list specific allegations that include checked boxes. Some examples that can be included are:	helpful to the parties. The Answer (form UD-105) has been further modified in light of these comments.

			• Plaintiff has raised the rent more than the amount allowed by the Tenant Protection Act, Civil Code section 1946.12;	The committee notes that there is no provision in section 1946.12 that would void a termination on the grounds that rent was raised beyond the authorized amount. However, an affirmative defense has been added for failure to pay that amount above the amount lawful under the act.
			• Plaintiff fails to state a just cause for termination of tenancy;	A modified version of this affirmative defense has been included in the form.
			• Plaintiff failed to provide a notice of rights as required by the Tenant Protection Act, Civil Code section 1946.2 or 1947.12;	This affirmative defense has not been expressly been included, but can be made in the general affirmative defense for violations of the act added at item 3h(5).
			• Plaintiff failed to provide an opportunity to cure any alleged violations of the lease;	A modified version of this affirmative defense has been included in the form.
			• Plaintiff failed to comply with the relocation assistance requirements of the Tenant Protection Act, Civil Code section 1946.2(d). These more specific statements of affirmative defenses will assist unrepresented tenants in identifying which defense is appropriate to allege for their tenancy.	This affirmative defense has been added.

	Commenter	Position	Comment	Committee Response
			E. References to "Item 3m" or "Attachment 3m" in the Answer create confusion and should be clearly distinguished. The proposed Answer form contains several references to either "Item 3m" or "Attachment 3m." (See specifically items 3(h), 3(l), and 3(m) of the proposed Answer form.) Currently, the self- help centers in the courthouses assisting self-represented landlords and tenants use an attachment created by different legal service agencies. This 7-to-8-page attachment was originally referred to as "Attachment 3k," then subsequently changed to "Attachment 3l" when the Judicial Council last updated its Answer form on September 1, 2019. This attachment includes many detailed affirmative defenses that help the court assess the defendant's specific claims. For example, the attachment provides details of specific habitability conditions that exist on the premises and whether there is a substandard order from a government agency in place. It appears that the Judicial Council may be again changing the name of this attachment from "Attachment 3l" to "Attachment 3m." However, the current references to "3m," are confusing because it's unclear whether the form is referring to paragraph 3, subsection m of the Judicial Council form itself or to the attachment created by legal service agencies. It seems that the form may be differentiating the two by referring to one as "Item 3m," and the other as "Attachment 3m." However, most self-represented litigants will not be able to distinguish the two. The form should clarify so as to prevent confusion for self-represented tenants, especially when they are receiving services from self-help centers.	Item 3m on form UD-105 is for facts supporting the affirmative defenses checked on the form (see corrected instructions at item 3; it was item 3*l* before the new affirmative defense was added). If the statement of facts is too lengthy to fit on the form at item 3m, a party may attach a document to the form containing these fact (usually using form MC-025, a blank form that may be used as an attachment to any Judicial Council form). This attachment is to be titled "Attachment 3m" so that the court knows that it is information related to that item on the form. None of the references in the form are intended to be to documents created by particular legal service agencies. The language on the form has been modified in light of this comment, to explain that the attachment is to be used when more room is needed to provide information.

			urban communities as well as smaller and more rural communities. We provide legal services in a variety of issues, including housing, health care, public benefits, and education, but housing is the number one issue for our clients year after year. Every year we provide assistance to thousands of tenants throughout our 23 county service area, many of whom are facing eviction. We provide advice and counsel to tenants who are defendants in unlawful detainers and also represent tenants in unlawful detainers. As just one example, our Yolo County office has a Shriver Project grant, in which we assist in pro per or represent in about 225 unlawful detainers each year. LSNC makes the following comments on the proposed changes to the forms out of our experience responding to complaints and preparing answers. In addition, we support and agree with the comments submitted by Madeline Howard with the Western Center on Law and Poverty. I. There Should Not Be Two Complaint Forms. The Judicial Council should not develop two Complaint forms as this will add confusion for both Plaintiffs and Defendants when trying to determine which Complaint is relevant and whether the correct form was used. Further, it is important that Plaintiffs allege whether AB 1482 applies or not for any unlawful detainer as this will be an initial issue to determine if the termination notice is valid and if the reason for the termination is lawful. If there is a Complaint for tenancies not covered by AB 1482 and this form is used in a case in which a Defendant asserts AB 1482 does apply, it may result in significant confusion and delay of the case as there will not be sufficient allegations as to why AB 1482 does not apply. II. The Complaint Form Should be Revised.	The committee notes the agreement with the comments from the Western Center on Law and Poverty. The committee agrees and will not develop a second complaint form at this time.

	Commenter	Position	Comment	Committee Response
			A. Plaintiffs who claim they are exempt from the Tenant Protection Act of 2019 should be required to plead the reason they are exempt in Item 7. Paragraph 7 of the proposed Complaint should be revised to include specific allegations as to why the tenancy is or is not subject to the Tenant Protection Act of 2019. In an unlawful detainer action, notice to the tenant that they must quit is a prerequisite to filing the Complaint. Strict compliance with the statutory notice requirements is a prerequisite to invoking the summary unlawful detainer procedure. (Lamey v. Masciotra (1969) 273 Cal.App.2d.709; Baugh v. Consumer Associates, Ltd. (1966) 241 Cal.App.2d. 672.) The notice is also a requirement of the complaint because the plaintiff must attach to the complaint "a copy of the notice or notices of termination served on the defendant upon which the complaint is based." (Cal. Code of Civ. Proc.§ 1166(d)(l)(A).) When a plaintiff fails to comply with the notice requirements, the complaint fails to support a cause of action in unlawful detainer and the court lacks both personal and subject matter jurisdiction. (Kwok v. Bergren (1982) 130 Cal. App.3d 596, 599-600). For tenancies covered by the Tenant Protection Act, a Plaintiff will only be able to comply with these pleading requirements if they allege whether the tenancy is or is not subject to the Act. The Tenant Protection Act of 2019 applies to many California tenancies but not all. For example, the just cause protections do not apply when a tenant has not been in property for a certain period of time (see§ 1946.2(a)(l) and (2) and some properties are exempt (see§ 1946.2(e).) The current proposed Complaint does not provide a defendant with any information as to why the Plaintiff may allege the tenancy is exempt from the Act and should be revised to include this information. We believe this change is important because it will provide a statement of the facts necessary in order to provide	This item has been modified in light of suggestions received, to require identification of the statutory basis for a landlord alleging that the premises are not subject to the TPA. See committee response above to the comment on this item by Disability Rights Advocates.

	Commenter	Position	Comment	Committee Response
			defendants with enough information to prepare their case. If the Plaintiff is not required to plead the reason that the Tenant Protection Act does not apply to the tenancy, then the burden is effectively put on the Defendant to guess the grounds that Plaintiff asserts exempts them from the requirements and protections of the Tenant Protection Act. One way the form can be revised is to change Item 7a to read: • The tenancy is not subject to the Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (Civil Code § 1946.2) because (1) The property is exempt under Civil Code, § 1946.2(e) because (or provide a list of the exemptions and Plaintiff checks the appropriate one) (2) Because the property is exempt because of the length of the tenancy (Civil Code § 1946.2(a)(l) and (2)). B. Item 9 is confusing and should be revised. Item 9f is extremely confusing. Since plaintiffs are already required to plead that they served a prior required notice under§ 1946.2(c) in Item 9a(6), it is unnecessarily confusing to also have them check box f. Therefore, we suggest that Item 9f be left as it was and instead add below Item 9a(6) "(Check item 1Oc and attach a statement providing the information required by items 9a-e and 10 for the prior notice.)" We also strongly agree with Western Center on Law and Poverty's comments that Item 9 in the proposed form does not correctly address the two-step notice provision under section 1946.2(c), and that the proposed form should be revised to make clear the first notice is a notice to cure (not a notice to cure or quit).	The committee has considered this comment but declines to modify its recommendation on this item. The committee concluded that adding that further information to item 9(a)(6) would make item 9a too confusing. Item 9(a) and 9(e) have been modified in light of suggestions received. See committee response above to the comment on this item by Disability Rights Advocates.

	Commenter	Position	Comment	Committee Response
			We also agree with Western Center on Law and Poverty's comments that the proposed Complaint should be revised to include a place for a Plaintiff to allege compliance with other notice requirements, such as those in sections 1946.2(b)(2(A)(ii), 1946.2(t) and 1946.2(g)(8)(B). For example, on the current answer form, items (3)(j) and (3)(k) summarize defenses tenants may use rather than solely providing citations. III. The Answer Form Should be Revised to Include More Detailed Allegations Regarding the Tenant Protection Act. The proposed Answer form should be revised to include more specific allegations as to why Defendant alleges Plaintiff has not complied with the Tenant Protection Act. This is especially important to ensure that unrepresented Defendants may successfully asset their defenses. As an initial matter, we note that "Plaintiffs demand for provision ... " in Item 3h should be changed to "Plaintiffs demand for possession ... " Currently, numerous tenants are unrepresented by attorneys during the unlawful detainer process. However, a hugely disproportional amount of landlords retain attorneys to evict their tenants. Taking Notice, (Feb. 24, 2015) UCLA Luskin School of Public Affairs, Pg. 8-9. It is our organization's experience that while tenants are very likely to represent themselves, they are also more likely to be unfamiliar with the judicial system or tenant protections compared to housing law attorneys that landlords retain. The effect is that many tenants placed in a situation of losing their homes are unequipped with assistance or knowledge to win unlawful detainer cases.	The committee considered this suggestion but declines to follow it. See committee response above to the comment on these further notices by Disability Rights Advocates. This error has been corrected.

	Commenter	Position	Comment	Committee Response
			Item (3)(h) on the proposed answer form offers a glimpse of protections that may be applicable to tenants by alluding to " ... the Tenant Protections Act." However, tenants are unlikely to be aware of the specific protections the Act provides and therefore unlikely to choose that as their defense on the Answer form. The Answer should allow the defendant to allege why the Plaintiff as not complied with the Act. For example, one way this can be accomplished is to revise the Answer to include check boxes that state: "Plaintiffs demand for possession violates the Tenant Protection Act, Civil Code section 1946.2 or 1947.12 for the following reasons (check all that apply):" • Plaintiff unlawfully raised rent by more than the amount allowed by the Tenant Protection Act, Civil Code section 1946.12 • Plaintiff fails to state just cause for the termination of tenancy • Plaintiff alleges the termination of tenancy is for a no-fault reason, but did not provide relocation assistance as required by the Tenant Protection Act, Civil Code section 1946.2(d) • Plaintiff failed to provide a notice of rights as required by the Tenant Protection Act, Civil Code section 1946.2 or 1947.12 • Plaintiffs alleged cause for the termination is not just cause under the Tenant Protection Act, Civil Code section 1946.2(b) The Judicial Council should provide a summary of defenses available to tenants under the Act in the Answer form, just as it has with other defenses.	The Answer (form UD-105) has been further modified in light of the suggestions to include more specific affirmative defenses. See committee response above to Disability Rights Advocates' comment on this point to see responses as to each individual affirmative defense suggested.
3.	Mark W. Lomax Attorney Pasadena, CA	AM	This is a proposal to revise form UD-100. In an action subject to C.C.P. section 396a, including an unlawful detainer, the plaintiff or the plaintiff's attorney must state in a verified complaint (or in an affidavit filed and served with the complaint): (1) that the action is an unlawful detainer; and (2) facts showing the action has been commenced in the proper superior court and the proper court	The committee believes that the facts currently to be alleged in the complaint at item 3, the address of the premises at issue, are sufficient to comply with the requirement that a plaintiff plead "facts showing that the action has been location. (C.C.P. §396a(a).) The proper court and court location for trial of an unlawful detainer are prescribed by C.C.P. section 392. The current version of the optional form Complaint-Unlawful Detainer, form UD-100, contains no allegations regarding venue. Since the form does not comply with section 396a, the Judicial Council should use the revisions required by SB 1482 as an opportunity to revise form UD-100 so that it complies with section 396a. The form should be revised to add a provision for the plaintiff to state that the superior court of the county where the case is being filed is the proper court because the real property, or some part of it, is situated in the county, and that the court location where the case is being filed is the proper location because it is the nearest or most accessible location to the property where the court tries unlawful detainer proceedings. I previously notified the council of the need to revise form UD-100 by letter dated Dec. 10, 2013.	commenced" in the proper court. However, in light of this comment, the committee has further amended item 3.

4.	Orange County Bar Association by Scott B. Garner, President Newport Beach, California	A	1. "Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose?" The OCBA believes it appropriately addresses the stated purpose. 2. "Do the proposed revisions to [the relevant portion of] the revised complaint form appropriately reflect the double notice requirements[.]?" They do. It might be helpful to annotate Section 9.e. of the form to require that copies of both notices be provided if the "double notice" box in 9.a(6) is checked. 3. "Should a separate complaint form be developed, either for cases involving the double -notice provisions or for all cases subject to the just cause termination provisions of Civil Code section 1946.2?" No. Multiple complaint forms will likely cause confusion among landlords who will try to proceed based on the wrong form. If that happens, the UD process—which is designed to be efficient—will be delayed	The committee appreciates the comment. Item 9(e) has been modified to make it clearer that when section 1946.2(s) applies (the double notice requirement) that both notices must be provided. The committee agrees and will not be developing a second complaint form at this time.

5.	Public Law Center by Leigh E.Ferrin Director of Litigation and Pro Bono Santa Ana, California	AM	Public Law Center (PLC) is a 501(c)(3) not-for-profit organization that provides free civil legal services to low-income individuals and families across Orange County. The civil legal services that we provide include consumer, family, immigration, housing, veterans, community organizations, and health law. PLC appreciates the opportunity to comment on Invitation W20-03, the revision of the unlawful detainer complaint and answer forms (UD-100 and UD-105). UD-100 Notice Requirements We believe that the forms do not adequately represent the changes in the law, particularly under the new California Civil Code section 1946.2. Section 9 of the form incorrectly implies that the landlord must provide two almost identical notices to cure and to quit. However, the two step notice provision instead provides for two different notices, one to cure, and then, if the tenant does not cure, then a second notice to quit. California Civil Code section 1946.2(c) refers to California Code of Civil Procedure section 1161(3) for an explanation of what a landlord must do to cure a material breach of the lease: "(c) Before an owner of residential real property issues a notice to terminate a tenancy for just cause that is a curable lease violation, the owner shall first give notice of the violation to the tenant with an opportunity to cure the violation pursuant to paragraph (3) of Section 1161 of the Code of Civil Procedure. If the violation is not cured within the time period set forth in the notice, a three-day notice to quit without an opportunity to cure may thereafter be served to terminate the tenancy."	The committee appreciates the comments. Item 9a and 9e have been revised in light of suggestions received. See committee response above to the comment by Disability Rights Advocates on the issue of two notices under § 1946.2(c).

			PLC proposes that Form UD-100 section 9 be revised to clarify that two of the same notices are not required, but that one notice to cure and a second notice to quit are the requirements under the new law.
			Tenancy not Covered by the Act When preparing a complaint for unlawful detainer, under the Tenant Protection Act (TPA), a landlord must specify when a tenancy is not covered by the TPA. The council has proposed a checkbox option in Section 7 Form UD-100. Because a checkbox does not provide much information on which a tenant and/or his or her advocate can make a determination about the appropriateness of the claim, PLC proposes that if a landlord checks the box alleging that the tenancy is not covered by the TPA, that the landlord should also be required to provide a basis for the claim. The TPA was drafted with a list of specific exemptions that a landlord could claim as reasons why the tenancy is not covered. PLC proposes that those specific exemptions be made into a checkbox list that is included in section 7. Then, if a landlord checks the box stating that the tenancy is not covered by the TPA, the landlord would also be required to check one of the boxes that support the claimed exemption. PLC believes that requiring the additional information will inform not just tenants and their advocates, but also the court which will be reviewing the complaint for compliance, since courts have found that strict compliance with statutes governing the eviction procedures in California is required. (Kwok v. Bergren (1982) 130 Cal.App.3d 597, 599-600.)	Item 7 has been revised in light of suggestions received. See committee response above to the comment by Disability Rights Advocates on item 7.
			Basis for Termination of the Tenancy PLC proposes that Section 8 on Form UD-100 be revised to require the landlord to state a specific basis for termination of the tenancy. The TPA has set forth a specific list of "at fault" and "no fault" bases for termination of tenancy. These bases could form a checkbox list to be included in Section 8 to ensure that all parties and the court have a	The committee considered this comment but declined to follow the suggestion. 			clear understanding of why the landlord is justified in terminating the tenancy. In combination with the revision of Section 7 of Form UD-100, PLC also proposes that the following language be included with Secton 9(a)(4): "Only complete if Plaintiff has checked the box in Section 7(a)." This minor revision will clarify the information required, and will help the courts, defendants and counsel better understand why Section 9(a)(4) is checked or left blank, based on the answer provided in Section 7(a). Additional Miscellaneous Provisions Additionally, under Section 9, we appreciate that the judicial council revised the form so that the plaintiff may specifically allege service of the initial notice under California Civil Code Section 1946.2(c). However, we propose that there also should be space for a landlord to allege compliance with the other notice requirements contained in the TPA. For example, after July 1, 2020, a tenant must have agreed in writing to specific language in the lease if a landlord later attempts to evict the tenant so that the landlord or a close family member of the landlord may move in to the premises. Cal. Civ. Code §1946.2(b)(2)(A)(ii). Similarly, for a single family home to be exempt from the protections of the TPA, the tenant must have been provided a notice of exemption using specific language. Cal. Civ. Code §1946.2(g)(8)(B). Finally, tenants must be provided with notice of their rights [at the time of signing the lease? Or when?] under the TPA pursuant to Cal. Civ. Code §1946.2(f). Each of these requirements must be met before a landlord may move forward with an unlawful detainer action. To ensure compliance, the judicial council could amend Form UD-100 to reflect these requirements, either in Section 9, or in a newly created section or sections. UD-105 In Section 3(h) of Form UD-105, PLC proposes that the Judicial Council provide either more space, or even a checklist option (with	The committee considered this comment but declined to follow the suggestion. 			an "other" at the end) allowing the defendant/tenant to specify what the alleged violations of the TPA are. Because such a significant number of defendants/tenants are representing themselves in eviction defense cases, it is particularly important to ensure that the pleadings are thorough and clear. This will not only allow for the most accurate information to be available during the litigation, but will also ensure all parties feel they had access to a fair and just judicial system. PLC believes that the general provision for the tenant to allege noncompliance with the TPA is insufficient. In many cases, it will be in the tenant's best interest to be able to allege specific violations of the TPA, for the landlord's and the court's benefit. Rather than include the statement "demand for provision," PLC proposes that Section [3m] instead state "Plaintiff's demand for possession violates the Tenant Protection Act, Cal. Civ. Code Section 1946.2 or 1947.12. The form can then instruct the defendant to briefly state in section 3m the facts supporting the allegation that the plaintiff/landlord violated the TPA. If simply providing space for the defendant/tenant to allege violations of the TPA is not desirable (and we could see how this could be a problem), PLC proposes a checklist along the following lines: • Plaintiff has raised the rent more than the amount allowed by the Tenant Protection Act, Civil Code section 1946.12. • Plaintiff fails to state a just cause for termination of tenancy. • Plaintiff failed to provide a notice of rights as required by the Tenant Protection Act, Civil Code section 1946.2 or 1947.12. • Plaintiff failed to comply with the relocation assistance requirements of the Tenant Protection Act, Civil Code section 1946.2(d). These more specific statements of affirmative defenses will assist unrepresented tenants in identifying which defense is appropriate to allege for their tenancy. PLC believes strongly that there should only be one form for both the UD-100 and the UD-105. Once additional versions of forms are	suggestions to include more specific affirmative defenses. See committee response above to Disability Rights Advocates' comment on this point to see responses as to each individual affirmative defense suggested.

			added, it becomes very confusing for self-represented litigants to determine the appropriate form(s) to complete and submit for filing. PLC also believes that the "double" notice requirements are not so complicated as to require a separate form entirely. As clarified above, when properly expressed, the "double" notice requirements are not in fact duplicative; rather they are two separate requirements to ensure the landlord is providing the appropriate notice.	The committee agrees, and will not be developing additional complaint forms at this time.
6.	Superior Court of Los Angeles County By Bryan Borys Director of Research and Data Management	AM	Recommended modifications to Form UD 100: (3) Amend this paragraph to add a requirement that the plaintiff specify which city limits (or unincorporated county) is the location of the property. Add subparagraphs as follows: [check box] The property is within the city limits of [name city] or [check box] The property is within the unincorporated limits of [name county] State the approximate year the property was constructed: It is often important to know where the property is located to properly apply local ordinances that must be consulted to address pre-trial motions as well as mediations and settlement conferences. The plaintiff should be able to provide this information. (6) Delete paragraph 6 f. (2) and combine f. (1) into f. Other than not having possession of the lease, there is no reason for the plaintiff not to attach the lease. A lease is a contract and California law requires that a contract be attached to a complaint or that the material terms of the contract be pleaded. The form does not allow the latter approach and it is not practical in a form pleading. It is also our experience that the lease is often omitted to avoid highlighting defects in plaintiff's cause of action and in some cases to allow the plaintiff to produce the lease later in the litigation (if it prevails and there is an attorney fee clause) or to withhold it from a prevailing tenant who may not have a copy to prevent the tenant from recovering fees.	 The form has been modified to reflect this suggestion. The committee considered this comment but declines to implement this suggestion. Statute expressly provides that plaintiff in an unlawful detainer action does not have to attach a copy of the rental agreement when the action is based solely on the failure to pay rent. Code Civ. Proc. § 1166(d).

			(8) Plaintiffs should be allowed to also plead their satisfaction of local ordinance relocation requirements. Add 8 b 3 as follows: (3). [check box] provided a payment satisfying local ordinance requirements. Identify the ordinance and state all facts:	The committee considered this comment but declines to accept the suggestion. Item 8 applies only to premises and tenancies subject to the statewide TPA, so landlord with premises subject to local rent or eviction ordinances would not complete it. Currently item 16 is for facts pertinent to local ordinances. As time and resources permit, the committee will consider whether that item can be amended in a way that would be useful across the state.
			(15) If there is a written agreement between the parties providing for attorney fees (and if it is not in the lease already attached) the agreement should be attached. This paragraph should be amended to require the agreement to be attached. If the agreement is not available or if it is not in writing it is not enforceable.	The committee considered this comment but declines to accept the suggestion. Such attachment is not required in complaints for other situations in which attorneys fees are claimed.
			(16) The last line of this paragraph should be modified to add a check box at the front to require the plaintiff to affirmatively assert that it has met all of the requirements of the applicable ordinances and the	The committee declines this suggestion. No. Would require 6 months for CMS changes and staff training.	The committee notes that the TPA is already in effect, so the committee is recommending that these optional pleading forms be implemented as soon as council process permits.
7.	Superior Court of Orange County Civil and Appellate Division Management and Analyst Team	NI	• Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose? Although the proposal does address the stated purpose of the revised forms, it does not provide clear guidance on the double notice requirement. • Does the proposed revisions to item 9 in the revised complaint form appropriately reflect the double notice requirements in new Civil Code section 1946.2(c)? The double notice does present challenges and additional guidance would be helpful. For example, the language references the word notice in the singular. But it is highly possible that a court user would check both box 9.a.(1) and 9.a.(6). Also, it is not clear what date court users would need to write in 9.b(1). Then as noted, 9.e. states "If two notices are required…" adding to the confusion. Any further clarification or guidance that can be provided would be helpful.	The committee appreciates the comments. As discussed in the committee response above to the Disability Rights Advocates comment on the notice issue under § 1946.2(c), the statute itself is internally inconsistent, making it difficult for the committee to provide as clear guidance on this issue as it would hope to do. See above. The committee has further modified item 9a, 9b, and 9e in light of comments received. See committee response above to comment of Disability Rights Advocates comment on the issue of notice under section 1946.2(c).

			• Should a separate complaint form be developed, either for cases involving the double-notice provisions or for all cases subject to the just cause termination provisions of Civil Code section 1946.2? A new complaint form may be the best way to clarify the confusion noted above. So, if clarity cannot be achieved in a single form, then a separate form should be considered when CC §1946.2 applies. • What would the implementation requirements be for courts—for example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), changing docket codes in case management systems, or modifying case management systems? This will impact court staff as it will require training of case processing staff who process clerk default judgments for unlawful detainer cases. The approximate level of effort is estimated at 16 hours FTE by a Program Coordinator Specialist over approximately one month to revise procedures, approve through workflow, train staff and implement. • Would 3 months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation? Yes, that should be sufficient time.	The committee has concluded that a second complaint form just for TPA covered tenancies should not be developed, primarily because whether a unit or tenancy is subject to the TPA requirements may be one of the issues in dispute in an unlawful detainer. In addition, if the wrong form is inadvertently chosen, a party may have to amend or face a demurrer, etc., causing unnecessary work for both parties and courts. The committee appreciates the court's responses.

			Do the proposed revisions to item 9 in the revised complaint form appropriately reflect the double notice requirements in new Civil Code section 1946.2(c)? Yes. Should a separate complaint form be developed, either for cases involving the double - notice provisions or for all cases subject to the just cause termination provisions of Civil Code section 1946.2? Yes, a separate complaint for cases involving the double - notice provisions or for all cases subject to the just cause termination provisions of Civil Code section 1946.2 would be preferred. There is a concern with the increased amount of time needed by staff to review the complaint when processing a default. Having a separate form would alleviate this concern. However, if the Judicial Council is not inclined to create an additional UD Complaint form, in the alternative, we would request that CIV-100 be amended to include the following checkbox: □ The complaint filed is subject to the Tenant Protection Act of 2019 (Civil Code §1946.2). What would the implementation requirements be for courts—for example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), changing docket codes in case management systems, or modifying case management systems? Updating internal procedures and case management system, training affected staff, updating and ordering local forms packets. Would 3 months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation?	The committee agrees, but in light of other comments received has further modified item 9. The committee has concluded that a second complaint form just for TPA covered tenancies should not be developed, primarily because whether a unit or tenancy is subject to the TPA requirements may be one of the issues in dispute in an unlawful detainer. In addition, if the wrong form is inadvertently chosen, a party may have to amend or face a demurrer, etc., causing unnecessary work for both parties and courts. This language should not be interpreted to require two sequential notices to quit but, rather, one notice to cure and a subsequent notice to quit. Civil Code section 1946.2, the just cause portion of the Act, begins with "Notwithstanding any other law…", and then goes on to describe the requirement for just cause, the allowable just cause reasons for eviction, and the relevant notice requirements. The statute is clear that for covered units, a notice to cure and additional notice to quit are required before there is a valid cause of action. The reference is intended to spell out that a tenant should be given the opportunity to cure that is provided for in 1161(3): "(c) Before an owner of residential real property issues a notice to terminate a tenancy for just cause that is a curable lease violation, the owner shall first give notice of the violation to the tenant with an opportunity to cure the violation pursuant to paragraph (3) of Section 1161 of the Code of Civil Procedure. If the violation is not cured within the time period set forth in the notice, a three-day notice to quit without an opportunity to cure may thereafter be served to terminate the tenancy." Requiring that sequential notices to quit be listed in the complaint does not conform to the law and will cause confusion among tenants and landlords, thwarting the intention of the Act. The first notice required by Civil Code § 1946.2(c) is a notice to cure only. The form should be revised accordingly. III. The forms should be revised to add clarity regarding compliance with the Tenant Protection Act A. Revisions to the proposed Complaint form The proposed forms should be revised to include more specific allegations regarding compliance or non-compliance with the Tenant Protection Act. Specifically, complaint checkbox 7 for "tenancy not covered" should include a space or checkbox for the landlord to provide a basis for alleging the tenancy is not covered. The Tenant Protection Act has a specific list of exemptions which could be converted into a checklist, or the form could include a blank field for the plaintiff to reference the exemption. As currently structured, the complaint form does not give the defendant any information about the basis for the landlord's asserted exemption from the Act. This will make it difficult for the defendant to include information relevant to any claimed exemption in the responsive pleading. Including this basic information in the complaint will also assist the court in evaluating application of the Tenant Protection Act. Similarly, check box 8 on the Complaint should state a specific basis for termination. Again, the Tenant Protection Act includes a list of "at fault" and "no fault" just cause bases for termination of tenancy which could be converted into a check list. Section 9 of the Complaint form has been revised to specifically allow the plaintiff to allege service of the prior notice under	The committee agrees and will not be developing a second complaint form at this time. 			section 1946.2(c), however it does not provide a space for the landlord to allege compliance with other notice requirements of the Tenant Protection Act. For example, after July 1, 2020, for owners to evict a tenant in order to move into the unit or have a close family member move in, the tenant must have agreed in writing to specific lease language. §1946.2(b)(2)(A)(ii). Similarly, for a single family home to be exempt from the protections of the Act, the tenant must have been provided a notice of exemption using specific language. §1946.2(g)(8)(B). Finally, tenants must be provided with notice of their rights under the Act pursuant to section 1946.2(f). The complaint should require that the landlord allege compliance with each of these provisions and attach the required notices. B. Revisions to the proposed Answer form The proposed Answer form includes only a general provision for the tenant to allege non-compliance with the Tenant Protection Act, and it is unclear what "demand for provision" refers to. This general language should be modified to read "Plaintiff's demand for possession violates the Tenant Protection Act, Civil Code section 1946.2 or 1947.12. (briefly state in item 3m the facts showing violation of the statute.)" The Answer form should also allow the tenant to specifically allege a type of violation of the Act. For example, the Answer should include check boxes that state: • Plaintiff has raised the rent more than the amount allowed by the Tenant Protection Act, Civil Code section 1946.12; • Plaintiff fails to state a just cause for termination of tenancy; • Plaintiff failed to provide a notice of rights as required by the Tenant Protection Act, Civil Code section 1946.2 or 1947.12; • Plaintiff failed to comply with the relocation assistance requirements of the Tenant Protection Act, Civil Code section 1946.2(d).	suggestion. Executive Summary

The Civil and Small Claims Advisory Committee proposes a new form for Judicial Council adoption, Confidential Information Form Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 367.3 (form SH-001). This mandatory form implements Assembly Bill 800 (Stats. 2019, ch. 439), which provides that a party who is participating in the Safe at Home program (an address confidentiality program run by the Secretary of State) may appear pseudonymously in a civil action, and that the true name of the party as well as any other identifying characteristics are to be kept confidential by the court and other parties in the case. The new form allows pseudonymous parties to provide their true names to the courts and the other parties to the action, and to attest to the party's active participation in the Safe at Home confidential address program. The form also allows all parties to such a case to list any identifying characteristics that have been redacted from a pleading or other document filed with the court.

Recommendation

The Civil and Small Claims Advisory Committee recommends that the Judicial Council adopt Confidential Information Form Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 367.3 (form SH-001), effective September 1, 2020.

The new form is attached at pages 7–8.

Relevant Previous Council Action

This is a new legislative requirement and as such, the Judicial Council has not taken any previous action on this matter.

Analysis/Rationale

The Safe at Home address confidentiality program administered by the Secretary of State is intended to protect the privacy and safety of individuals who have been subject to domestic violence, sexual assault, stalking, human trafficking, or elder or dependent abuse. (Gov. Code, § 6205.) It provides participants with the ability to maintain a confidential mailing address in order to shield their location from abusers. Assembly Bill 800[1] adds section 367.3 to the Code of Civil Procedure, effective January 1, 2020, providing that a party who is an active participant in the Safe at Home address confidentiality program (defined as a "protected party") may appear in a civil action under a pseudonym (Jane Doe, John Doe, or Doe) and may exclude or redact—from all documents the party files—any identifying characteristics, including name, addresses (physical or online), age, or marital status. (See full list at Code Civ. Proc., § 367.3(a).)

Under the new law, a protected party who files pseudonymously must file with the court and serve all other parties to the proceeding with a confidential information form that includes the protected party's true name and other identifying characteristics that have been redacted from the document. The court must keep the information, including the protected party's true name, confidential. (§ 367.3(b)(1).)

Once a party to a proceeding has been served with this confidential information form, that party and that party's attorneys must use the protected party's pseudonym in all pleadings and other documents filed or served in the action, and must redact or exclude any identifying characteristics of the protected party from any documents filed in the case, serving and filing with such redacted documents a confidential information form containing the factual information. (§ 367.3(b)(2).)

Form SH-001 would implement section 367.3's confidential information form requirement. The form is to be served and filed by a party who is an active participant in the Safe at Home program and who decides to proceed in a civil action pseudonymously. The form is to inform the court and the other parties of the protected party's true name and of any other identifying characteristics (such as address) that have been redacted (or blacked out) from any document filed with the court. There is a declaration included on the form in which a protected party must assert the required active participation in the Safe at Home program and agree to provide evidence of that participation if required by the court. Participants in the program who want to proceed in a civil action using a pseudonym must file and serve SH-001 every time they file a document under a Doe name.

The form will also provide notice to the other parties in the case that the protected party is invoking this new law to keep all identifying characteristics, including a name, an address, and other contact information, confidential, and it will inform the court of the true name of the protected party filing a document using a Doe name. Finally, the form allows all parties to such a case to list any identifying characteristics that have been redacted from a pleading or other document filed with the court, as required by section 367.3(b)(1).

Policy implications

The policy implication of proceeding under a pseudonym and redacting identifying information arises from the legislation, not from the proposed form, because the legislation requires that a protected person's true name and other identifying characteristics be excluded or redacted. The law requires a confidential information form to be filed with the court and served upon all other parties to the proceeding. The law took effect January 1, 2020, so the committee has proposed a September 1, 2020 effective date for the new form.

Comments

This proposal was circulated for public comment from December 11, 2019, to February 11, 2020, as part of the winter public comment cycle. The committee received comments from eight entities including three courts, the Superior Courts of San Diego, Los Angeles, and Orange Counties, with two divisions of the Orange County court commenting separately; the Public Law Center; and the Orange County Bar Association. The committee also received informal comments, reported orally to staff, from the Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee. The commenters that answered the questions posed in the proposal all indicated that the proposal appropriately addressed the stated purpose. The committee considered all comments; discussed below are the primary issues raised by the comments. A chart with the full text of the comments received and the committee's responses is attached at pages 9–23.

Form prefix

The proposed form circulated for public comment with prefix MC (standing for Miscellaneous), but at the suggestion of several commenters, the committee concluded that a new form category should be assigned: SH (standing for Safe at Home). The SH prefix is intended to make the form easier for Safe at Home participants to locate, and in addition to convenience, the committee favored creating a new form category because the committee anticipates developing new forms relating to motions to seal and redact for protected parties to use after an action has commenced.

Establishing active participation in the Safe at Home program

Overwhelmingly, the commenters agreed that a person's declaration under penalty of perjury that the person is an active participant in the Safe at Home program was sufficient to establish eligibility for confidentiality.[2] One commenter suggested that some proof should be required because individuals may be terminated from the program, and another commenter offered that filers could bring their identification cards with them at the time they are filing the form.

The proposed form retains use of a declaration to avoid delays that would arise from requiring a filer to establish proof of active participation at the time of filing. The committee considered the alternative of including a requirement in this form, or by rule of court, that a party must establish this active participation before being allowed to file pseudonymously. However, because there is no express provision in the new law requiring a protected party to establish active participation in the program before filing pseudonymously, and because the time involved in establishing such proof in advance of filing a complaint might impact statute of limitations or discovery deadlines, the committee decided not to mandate proof of participation prior to filing, but to instead include a declaration under penalty of perjury in the new form asserting active participation in the program. The declarant also is asked to agree to provide proof of active participation if required to do so by the court. Based on informal input from the Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee, the committee revised the form to ask the declarant to provide their program participant number (ID), if available, which may assist the Secretary of State in directing mail to a protected party at their confidential substitute address.

Multiple pseudonymous parties

The committee revised item 3 on the form in response to comments from the Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee that the form should take into consideration the potential for multiple participants in the Safe at Home program appearing in an action and choosing to proceed under pseudonyms. The committee agreed but concluded that each participant in the program would have to file a confidential information form. As revised, item 3 seeks the same information as the draft that was circulated for comment with one addition. The information sought has been reordered to ask first for the true name of the party, then the party type, and then the pseudonym used: Jane Doe, John Doe, or Doe. If multiple parties are proceeding under pseudonyms, the form now solicits an identifying number for the Doe name (e.g., Jane Doe #2).

Form as a cover sheet for filings by pseudonymous parties

To ensure that filings by parties proceeding pseudonymously under section 367.3 are properly handled by courts, the committee changed instruction 2 on page 2 and added a parenthetical instruction to item 3 that tells parties to complete the form each time a party using a pseudonym files a document. This change was suggested in part by the Superior Court of Los Angeles County, because the instruction had stated that the form must be filed the "first time" the pseudonym is used. However, the third sentence stated that the form must be submitted with each document that has been redacted. The committee initially conceived of the form being used the first time a party appears to declare an intention to proceed pseudonymously and then only if a document contains redactions. Based on the comments received, the committee determined that the form should be used as a cover sheet for filings by Doe parties, which may be helpful to courts in processing pseudonymous filings. The Joint Rules Subcommittee (JRS) of the Trial Court Presiding Judges Advisory Committee (TCPJAC) and the Court Executives Advisory Committee (CEAC) advised that there are courts that have case management systems that may not able to create pseudonym case types or case categories. Until the superior courts have a uniform system in place for managing pseudonymous filings under section 367.3, the committee decided to err on the side of caution and to treat form SH-001 as a cover sheet for any document filed by a pseudonymous party. When used by parties who are not proceeding under a pseudonym, however, the form is required only when information has been redacted from a document.

[2] The new law provides that "protected persons" may file pseudonymously and defines a protected person as "a person who is an active participant in the address confidentiality program created pursuant to Chapter 3.1 (commencing with Section 6205) of Division 7 of Title 1 of the Government Code." (§ 367.3(a)(3).)

The committee notes that the statute requires the Judicial Council to adopt or revise, as appropriate, rules and forms, and expressly contemplates a confidential information form. The committee decided that the proposed new form for proceeding under a pseudonym and identifying all redacted confidential information would be useful. The committee also considered whether any changes to rules or the creation of additional forms were needed at this time.

As noted above, this new law allows not only plaintiffs, but all parties, including defendants and respondents, to proceed pseudonymously and to avail themselves of the confidentiality provisions of section 367.3. However, there is nothing in the new statute that addresses what is to be done with a publicly filed complaint or petition that already has a party's true name and other identifying information in it. The statute requires parties going forward to use a designated pseudonym and to keep identifying information confidential, but it does not require any party to withdraw or amend pleadings already on file that contain a protected party's true name. Courts are also not authorized to redact or change the register of action or the original pleading in any way based on the filing of a confidential information form.

Ultimately, the committee concluded that a protected party could obtain the desired confidentiality of information in prior-filed documents and court records, so long as that party takes further steps. In addition to allowing pseudonymous filing, the statute allows the court, upon motion of the protected party, to seal all or part of a record, under the California Rules of Court regarding sealing (rules 2.550 and 2.551). (See § 367.3(b)(4).) Under this provision, a pseudonymous defendant, for example, could move to have the original complaint containing the defendant's true name and potentially other identifying characteristics sealed, lodging with the motion a redacted copy of the complaint which could be placed in the public record in place of the original. A sealing order may include the sealing not only of the original complaint but of any other information in court records (including the register of action) found to be confidential. (See Cal. Rules of Court, rule 2.551(e)(2).)

The committee included in the instructions on the new form a warning to pseudonymous parties that the requirement that the other side use the pseudonym and redact or exclude other identifying characteristics is prospective only. (See form SH-001, at Instruction 3.) The instruction also notes that if the protected party wants to protect the name and identifiers in a publicly filed document, a motion to seal will be necessary. The committee will consider in the next rule-making and forms cycle new forms for use by protected parties who want to seal and/or redact records that are already on file with identifying information included in them.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

A confidential information form is expressly required in AB 800. As a result of the enactment of that law, clerks, judicial officers, and court legal services and self-help offices will require training on the new pseudonymous filing process permitted for participants in the Safe at Home program, and on the level of confidentiality to be accorded to certain information relating to such parties. New training materials and internal procedures will need to be developed.

Several commenters indicated that the confidentiality requirements of the law could affect the courts' case management systems. JRS stated that while some court systems were equipped to handle pseudonymous filings, other courts had expressed concern about their systems' ability to create a pseudonym type and to manage such filings. The committee is aware of these potential operational impacts. They are the result of the new law, rather than the proposed form. The new form is intended to assist both the parties and the courts in complying with the law's confidentiality procedures, but the form cannot resolve the operational concerns raised by some courts.

INSTRUCTIONS

(Note: This form may be used only in cases in which one or more parties is enrolled in the Safe at Home program and using a pseudonym under Code of Civil Procedure section 367.3.)

1. The Safe at Home program is an address confidentiality program run by the Secretary of State. Parties who are active participants in that program may use a pseudonym (Jane Doe, John Doe, or Doe) in place of the party's true name in a civil action. (Plaintiffs or petitioners who do this must state on the front of the complaint "ACTION BASED ON CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 367.3.") Pseudonymous parties may also exclude or redact (black out) other identifying characteristics (defined below) from all pleadings and documents they file, and instead provide that information confidentially to the court and other parties using this form. (See Code Civ. Proc., § 367.3(b)(1).) In such cases, papers filed by other parties in the case also must be worded so as to protect the name or other identifying characteristics of the Doe party from public revelation, or have that information redacted (blacked out on the document). Any intentional violations of this law are subject to sanctions. (See Code Civ. Proc., § 367.3(b)(2).)
2. This form must be served and filed each time a party uses a pseudonym (a Doe name) in place of that party's name in a court document, with items 2 and 3 completed to provide the court and other parties with the Doe party's true name, and item 4 completed if there are other identifying characteristics redacted or blacked out from the document. A party using a pseudonym must also sign and date the declaration above, confirming active participation in the Safe at Home program. All parties and other persons must also serve and file this form any time they file a document in a case with identifying characteristics redacted or blacked out. Counsel for a party filing under a pseudonym may use the pseudonym for the name of the represented party in the attorney or party information box at the top of this form and any documents filed later.
3. Warning to pseudonymous (Doe) party: If a pseudonymous party initially files using a Doe name after another party has already filed something with the court (for example, if the pseudonymous party is a defendant, respondent, or objector), the statute does not automatically require that first party or the court to redact the true name or other identifying characteristics from documents or records already in the public files. A pseudonymous party who wants to restrict access to the party's name or other identifying characteristics in a document that has already been filed must make a motion (request) that the court seal the record or part of it under rules 2.550 and 2.551 of the California Rules of Court. (See Code Civ. Proc., § 367.3(b)(3).)
4. Warning to recipient of this form: A party who is served with this form is subject to Code of Civil Procedure section 367.3 and required to keep the information on the form, including the pseudonymous (Doe) party's true name, confidential. In addition, a party served with this form is required to use the Doe party's pseudonym in all pleadings and documents in the case from that point forward, to redact (black out) any other identifying characteristics from any pleading or document filed with the court after that point, and to use this form to provide to the court and other parties any information that has been redacted. A completed form SH-001 must be served and filed together with any redacted document.
5. "Identifying characteristics" that the party using the pseudonym may and all other parties must redact include name or any part thereof, address or any part thereof, city or unincorporated area of residence, age, marital status, relationship to any other party, race or ethnic background, telephone number, email address, social media profiles, online identifiers, contact information, or any other information from which that party's identity can be discerned, including images of the party using a pseudonym. (Code Civ. Proc., § 367.3(a)(1).) (See Code Civ. Proc., § 367.3(a)(2) for a list of "online identifiers.")

Civil Practice and Procedure: Confidential Information Form Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 367.3 (Adopt form SH-001)

1.	Joint Rules Subcommittee (JRS) Trial Court Presiding Judges Advisory Committee (TCPJAC), and the Court Executive Advisory Committee (CEAC)	A	The JRS notes the following impact to court operations: • Impact on existing automated systems (e.g., case management system, accounting system, technology infrastructure or security equipment, Jury Plus/ACS, etc.) • Requires development of local rules and/or forms. • Results in additional training, which requires the commitment of staff time and court resources. • Other major fiscal or operational impacts The JRS notes that the proposal is required to conform to a change of law. In order to determine the possible impact on existing case management systems, the JRS team sent a questionnaire to the CEO listserv asking the following questions. Nine courts responded to the survey and the impact comment is based on those responses. 1. For civil cases can your case management systems create a "party" type or category that specifies that the person is filing under a pseudonym authorized under CCP 367.3? • 6 of the courts that responded believe that their case management systems (CMS) would be able to create a party type or category that could be used as a pseudonym. The courts indicating that they could create a pseudonym party type or category had both new and old CMS's. Three courts indicated they could not do the fundamental requirement of CCP 367.3 by creating a pseudonym type in their CMS. Two	The committee appreciates the comments, and notes the commenter's support for the proposal. The committee thanks the commenter for responding to the question.

			of the courts that were incapable had relatively new CMS's, installed in the last 5 years that would require reconfiguration to comply with CCP 367.3. 2. For civil cases, can your case management system insert an CCP 367.3 required pseudonym on all future filings? • Four courts believe their current CMS can insert a pseudonym into future civil filings. 3. For civil cases, can your case management system change a defendant or respondent's name to a pseudonym after the case is underway? • Six courts indicated that their current CMS could change a party's name to pseudonym after the case was already underway. 4. For civil cases, can your case management system create a confidential location within the case management system for the true name, address of the party and other identifier information for the person who requested the benefit of CCP 367.3 ? • Five courts indicated that their current CMS could create a confidential location for the true name and other information or party requesting a pseudonym. 5. For civil cases, if your case management system can create a CCP 367.3 pseudonym, would it be possible for the case management system to cross reference a person with a CCP 367.3 pseudonym in their civil case filings across all of non-civil case types and filings? • Only one court indicated that their case management system could cross reference the party using a pseudonym with non-civil case	The committee thanks the commenter for responding to the question. 			filings. One court indicated they were not sure if they could cross reference and seven indicated it was not possible. Even though the number responses to the survey are not enough for the findings to be statistically valid, the responses are enlightening to what the potential challenges could be for courts to implement requirements of CCP 367.3. There is the likelihood that a substantial number of courts, possibly up to one third of the courts in the state, could have difficulty with their current case management systems to comply with CCP 367.3. The inability to comply is not limited to only courts with older legacy systems but also with courts that have newer case management systems. Compliance could be possible with reconfiguration of the courts case management system. However, that will take time and the ability to pay for the reconfiguration. It is very likely that the Judicial Council will develop state Rules of Court and forms to be used by parties requesting the use of a pseudonym. However, local courts often need to adapt forms that be to local needs and promulgate local rules. Court staff are familiar with pseudonyms being used in other case types. Training staff regarding the use of case types in civil matters pursuant to CCP 367.3 will be necessary but should not be a major challenge. For courts who have case management systems then are not able to create pseudonym case types or case categories, there will be cost for CMS reconfiguration. These costs may be difficult to estimate, since they can vary with the type of case management system and the technical ability to configure the system.

2.	Orange County Bar Association by Scott B. Garner, President Newport Beach, California	AM	Specific Comments: 1) Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose? Yes. The proposal provides clear information about the purpose of the form, the confidential nature of the form, and for how to fill it out. 2) Should an alternative to the required declaration that the participant is part of the Safe at Home Program be used to ascertain eligibility? No. The declaration seems to be a sufficient way to establish eligibility; requiring proof of status before filing the form could create delays potentially affecting the statute of limitations and/or deter participants at risk from seeking confidentiality. The proposed method requires the participant provide proof of being in the program should the court require it. 3) In a case where a protected party invokes the confidentiality protection after an initial pleading, can a motion to seal under rule 2.551 provide sufficient protection? It seems to offer the best alternative where the information has already been publicly filed, since it allows the participant to request the pleadings containing confidential information be sealed.	The committee appreciates the comments. The committee thanks the commenter for responding to the question. The committee agrees that requiring additional proof would create delays, and has recommended retaining the form's declaration of active participation. The committee agrees that a motion under rule 2.551 is an available option, but is considering in the next rule-making cycle additional forms to assist filers in this process.

			4) Should all Judicial Council forms to be used by participants in the Safe at Home program be maintained in a single category and given the same identifying form prefix? Yes. A uniform prefix (e.g., SH or SAH?) would immediately alert the court and court clerk the basis for the request, and also potentially facilitate finding and filling out the forms for the Safe at Home participants. Two small edits to the form: 1) Page 2 in the Declaration box: The spacing is slightly off between the first and second lines of the declaration; it should be consistent. 2) Page 2 of form, number 2., line 5: "file this form anytime, " should be "file this form any time."	The proposed form will be modified in accordance with this suggestion, as SH-001. The committee thanks the commenter for these edits, and has revised the proposed form accordingly.
3.	Public Law Center by Leigh E. Ferrin Director of Litigation and Pro Bono Santa Ana, California	AM	Public Law Center (PLC) is a 501(c)(3) not-for-profit organization that provides free civil legal services to low-income individuals and families across Orange County. The civil legal services that we provide include consumer, family, immigration, housing, veterans, community organizations, and health law. PLC appreciates the opportunity to comment on Invitation W20-04, the proposal to adopt a new form, MC-130. PLC appreciates the need for this form and applauds the judicial council for proposing it. PLC regularly represents individuals who utilize the Safe at Home	The committee appreciates the comments.

			program and who need to be able to withhold their information for their safety. During this representation we sometimes see these requests to withhold information declined, and we believe that the introduction of form MC-130 will be instrumental in making this a more regular practice.
			PLC believes that the declaration provided for on the form should be sufficient for proof of participation in Safe at Home. If the Court or others feel that there is a high likelihood of abuse of this process, especially since it is a form that can be used throughout the court system, then PLC would support exploring the burden it would put in litigants to have to attach proof of participation in the Safe at Home program. PLC would suggest that before implementing requiring a specific type of proof, advocates or proponents consult with representatives of the Safe at Home program and survivor advocates to determine how burdensome it is to obtain the proposed required evidence.	The committee agrees, and has recommended retaining the form's declaration of active participation.
			We agree that a motion to seal under rule 2.551 would be sufficient, but that such a motion should include an order also amending the Register of Actions. When we do see the requests to invoke the confidentiality protection, we often see it done moving forward, but not on the register of actions itself.	The committee is considering a proposal in the next rule-making cycle that addresses the register of actions.
			We support the creation of a form motion to seal specifically for parties who are responding to previously filed cases and need the	The committee is considering this proposal in the next rule-making cycle.

			confidentiality provisions to be retroactive. The accompanying order can then clearly specify that the order covers the prior documents, but also the register of actions. PLC also believes one option might be an optional attachment to the proposed MC-130, so that the motion to seal could be filed at the same time as the MC-130 form, thereby streamlining the process for the filer and for the court. This will also make it easier for defendants and other responsive participants to understand the need for multiple filings to completely seal a record. PLC strongly encourages the Judicial Council to create its own form category for these particular forms. They are sufficiently important and would benefit from a separate identification rather than "Miscellaneous."	The proposed form will be modified in accordance with this suggestion, as SH-001.
4.	Superior Court of Los Angeles County By Bryan Borys Director of Research and Data Management	AM	We recommend a change in the name of the form to make it clearer for self-represented litigants. Suggestion is "Confidential Information Form for Use of a Pseudonym under Code of Civil Procedure Section 367.3." Page 1, #4-For consistency to other references throughout the form, we recommend using "blacked out" instead of "blanked-out." Page 1, #4-For clarity to litigants, we recommend including underneath "redacted information," a line that reads "See Paragraph 5 under the instructions on page 2, for a list of items that may be redacted."	The committee appreciates the comments. The committee declined to recommend changing the form's name as suggested because the form is to be used when other identifying information, as defined in the statute, has been redacted. The use of a pseudonym is just one use of the form. The committee has revised the form to make these terms consistent. The committee has revised the form to include an instruction to this effect in the Information Redacted box.

			Page 2, Instruction 2, It is unclear as it appears that it has contradictory statements. The first sentence states that the form must be filed the "first time" the pseudonym is used, however, the third sentence states that the form must be submitted with each document that has been redacted. We recommend replacing "first time" with "each time."	The committee has revised the form to require that it be filed each time a document if filed by a party using a pseudonym. The committee has proposed revisions to item 3 and instruction 2 that should clarify that the form is required every time a document is filed by a party using a pseudonym and each time a document with redacted content is filed by any party.
			In addition to comments on the proposal as a whole, the advisory committee is interested in comments on the following:
			• Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose? Yes	The committee thanks the commenter for responding to the question.
			• The proposed form includes a declaration by the protected party to establish, at least initially, a party's status as an active participant of the Safe at Home program. Should an alternative procedure should be used and, if so, what would that alternative be? No alternative procedure is needed.	The committee thanks the commenter for responding to the question.
			• In a case where a protected party invokes the confidentiality protection of section 367.3 after an initial pleading has been filed by another party, can a motion to seal under rule 2.551 provide sufficient protection of the protected party's confidential information, or should an	The committee agrees that a motion under rule 2.551 is an available option, but is considering recommending in the next rule-making cycle additional forms to assist filers in this process.

			alternative be considered? If an alternative is appropriate, describe what that should be. A motion to seal under CRC 2.551 is sufficient.
			• Should all Judicial Council forms to be used only by participants in the Safe at Home program be maintained in a single category and given the same identifying form prefix? JC forms used only by Safe at Home participants should be maintained in a single category and be given the same identifying prefix.	The proposed form will be modified in accordance with this suggestion, as SH-001.
			The advisory committee also seeks comments from courts on the following cost and implementation matters:
			• What would the implementation requirements be for courts—for example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), changing docket codes in case management systems, or modifying case management systems? CMS configuration may be needed to address new/revised forms and sealing. Training for staff approximately 8 hours.	The committee thanks the commenter for responding to the question.
			• Would three months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation?	The committee thanks the commenter for responding to the question.

			No. Training will likely be needed for clerical and courtroom staff if current procedures are revised. Implementation will likely take six months if configuration is not needed and at least 6 months if both are needed.
5.	Superior Court of Oange County Family Law and Juvenile Court by Fen-Ru Chen Administrative Analyst	NI	Request for Specific Comments • Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose? Yes. • The proposed form includes a declaration by the protected party to establish, at least initially, a party's status as an active participant of the Safe at Home program. Should an alternative procedure be used, and, if so, what would that alternative be? Recommend to require the applicant to bring to court the Identification Card that is given to active members of the program as the alternative procedure to be used. • In a case where a protected party invokes the confidentiality protection of section 367.3 after an initial pleading has been filed by another party, can a motion to seal under rule 2.551 provide sufficient protection of the protected party's confidential information, or should an alternative be considered? If an alternative is appropriate, describe what that should be. Yes.	The committee appreciates the comments. The committee thanks the commenter for responding to the question. The committee agrees that bringing an identification card to court may be one way to establish participation in the program, but doing so may not be adequate to establish active participation. (According to the Secretary of State, a party's participation in the program could be terminated before the expiration date on the card.) For this reason, the committee has declined to require filers to bring the card with them at the time of filing this form. The committee is considering the treatment of past filings and the Safe at Home program in the next rule-making and forms cycle.

			Rule 2.551 does not address the past filings. To prevent the disclosure by the pre-existing filings, recommend to have an expediated process for the previous filings once the request is granted. • Should all Judicial Council forms to be used only by participants in the Safe at Home program be maintained in a single category and given the same identifying form prefix? Yes, it would be beneficial for the participants to find the forms. • What would the implementation requirements be for courts—for example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), changing docket codes in case management systems, or modifying case management systems? Implementation would require staff training, procedure revision, and updates to the case management system. • Would three (3) months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation: Yes.	The proposed form will be modified in accordance with this suggestion, as SH-001. The committee thanks the commenter for responding to the question. 			The proposal appropriately addresses the stated purpose. Creating this new form will help the public as well as the court identify cases that require special handling under this new law. The proposed form includes a declaration by the protected party to establish, as least initially, a party's status as an active participant in the Safe at Home program. Should an alternative procedure be used, and, if so, what would that alternative be? The declaration is signed under penalty and perjury, which is a standard way for holding parties accountable and should be sufficient. The court can always inquire further as to active participation, either on its own motion or if brought by the opposing party. In a case where a protected party invoked confidentiality protection of section 367.3 after an initial pleading has been file by another party, can a motion to seal under rule 2.551 provide sufficient protection of the protected party's confidential information, or should an alternative be considered? If an alternative is appropriate, describe what that should be. If the request comes in after an initial pleading, a motion to seal is sufficient; however, the motion should be expedited, via ex parte. The court can then decide based on proof of participation provided or other representations made regarding participation. In order to address the protection of the requesting party, the motion to seal should be heard fairly quickly. Courts may handle such	The committee has recommended retaining the form's declaration of active participation. . The committee is considering this suggestion in the next rule-making cycle.

			motions differently; however, it should be the party's responsibility to bring it to the court's attention in order to expedite hearing the motion.
			Should all Judicial Council forms to be used only by participants in the Safe at Home program be maintained in a single category and given the same identifying form prefix? Creating a single category and identifying prefix would be helpful for participants in the Safe at Home program to understand specifically what forms are to be used and in what legal actions.	The proposed form will be modified in accordance with this suggestion, as SH-001.
			What would the implementation requirements be for courts—for example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), changing docket codes in case management systems, or modifying case management systems? Implementation of this new form would have minimal impact. A similar process related to other confidential information forms is already in place. Training would not be needed, drafting and posting a new procedure would be enough. The approximate level of effort is estimated at 2 hours FTE by a Program Coordinator Specialist over approximately two weeks to revise procedures, approve through workflow and post.	The committee thanks the commenter for responding to the question.
			Would three months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation? Yes, three months would be sufficient.	The committee thanks the commenter for responding to the question.

			How well would this proposal work in courts of different sizes? Larger courts may be impacted with more of these filings, but workload is estimated to be low.	The committee thanks the commenter for responding to the question.

Executive Summary

The Civil and Small Claims Advisory Committee proposes that the Judicial Council revise four enforcement of judgment forms and approve four new forms to implement the provisions of Senate Bill 616, which recently amended several laws regarding exemptions to enforcement of civil money judgments. The amendments have two primary purposes: extending the time for making and opposing claims of exemption, and creating a new automatic exemption for deposit accounts. The amendments also create a new automatic exemption for Federal Emergency Management Agency funds provided to a judgment debtor, as well as a "hardship exemption" for deposit accounts.

Recommendation

The Civil and Small Claims Advisory Committee recommends that the Judicial Council, effective September 1, 2020:

1. Approve Ex Parte Application for Order on Deposit Account Exemption (form EJ-157), Instructions for Ex Parte Application for Order on Deposit Account Exemption (form EJ-157-INFO), Declaration Regarding Notice and Service for Ex Parte Application for Order on Deposit Account Exemption (form EJ-158), and Order on Application for Designation of Deposit Account Exemption (form EJ-159) to implement the new ex parte process established in section 704.220(e) of the Code of Civil Procedure.

2. Revise Writ of Execution (form EJ-130), Notice of Levy (form EJ-150), Exemptions From the Enforcement of Judgments (form EJ-155), and Current Dollar Amounts of Exemptions From Enforcement of Judgments (form EJ-156) to reflect new provisions enacted in Senate Bill 616 and modify existing statutory citations as appropriate, and to authorize the committee to correct the amount of the automatic exemption for deposit accounts, set by the California Consumer Price Index for All Consumers, on form EJ-156 before the form's effective date.

The new and revised forms are attached at pages 16–32.

Relevant Previous Council Action

The Judicial Council first approved Writ of Execution (form EJ-130) in January 1978 and the form has been revised several times since then, most recently in 2018. Notice of Levy (form EJ-150) was most recently revised in 2014. Exemptions From the Enforcement of Judgments (form EJ-155) was adopted in 1983 to implement Code of Civil Procedure[1] section 681.030(c), which requires that the council prepare a form listing each state and federal exemption from enforcement of a money judgment against a natural person, and was most recently revised in 2018. Current Dollar Amounts of Exemptions From Enforcement of Judgments (form EJ-156) is revised by the council at three-year internals pursuant to section 703.150(d) and (e) to adjust the dollar amounts of several exemptions provided in sections 703.140(b) (for cases under title 11 of the United States Code) and 704.010 et seq. (for other cases) to reflect changes in the California Consumer Price Index for All Consumers (CCPI).[2] Form EJ-156 was recently revised effective April 1, 2019, but must be revised again at this time to include the dollar amount of the new automatic deposit account exemption created by section 704.220.[3]

[1] All statutory references herein are to the Code of Civil Procedure unless otherwise noted.

[2] In 2004, the Judicial Council authorized the Administrative Office of the Courts to prepare a list of the amounts of certain exemptions from enforcement of judgments and to periodically update the list as required by statute. Pursuant to this authorization, a list entitled Current Dollar Amounts of Exemptions From Enforcement of Judgments was prepared and posted on the California Courts website in April 2004. The list contained the dollar amounts of exemptions effective as of April 1, 2004, and indicated that further adjustments would be made every three years. As statutorily mandated, the exemption amounts on the list were adjusted in 2007, 2010, 2013, 2016, and 2019. The council, rather than the Administrative Director, began approving the revisions to the form in 2013.

[3] As discussed further below, unlike the other amounts listed on form EJ-156 which are to be adjusted triennially, the amount of the new automatic exemption for a deposit account under section 704.220(a) is to be adjusted annually effective July 1 by the Department of Social Services pursuant to Welfare and Institutions Code section 11453 to reflect the minimum basic standard of adequate care for a family of four as established by section 11452. Thus, going forward, form EJ-156 will need to be revised annually to reflect changes in the amount of the automatic exemption due to changes in the CCPI.

Analysis/Rationale

The Civil and Small Claims Advisory Committee recommends the following proposed revisions to existing forms and the adoption of new forms to implement the provisions of Senate Bill 616.[4]

Change in time frame for making or opposing claims of exemption (revised form EJ-150)

SB 616 amends section 703.520(a) of the Code of Civil Procedure, effective September 1, 2020, to provide that a judgment debtor may make a claim of exemption by filing it with the levying officer within 15 days after the date the notice of levy has been served, or within 20 days if service is by mail. (Under current law, the time frame is within 10 days or 15 days if service is by mail.) This section has also been amended to provide that the date of filing is either (1) the date the levying officer receives the claim; or (2) the postmark date, if the claim was given a tracking number and mailed by the U.S. Postal Service or another common carrier. The proposed Notice of Levy (form EJ-150) has been revised to reflect these changes.[5]

New exemptions to enforcement of civil money judgments

SB 616 creates two new automatic exemptions: section 704.220 creates an automatic exemption for deposit accounts generally, and section 704.230 creates an automatic exemption for money provided to the judgment debtor by the Federal Emergency Management Agency. The statute directs the council to adopt or revise forms to implement the new provisions regarding the automatic exemption for deposit accounts.[6] SB 616 also creates a "hardship exemption" for money in a judgment debtor's deposit account that is not otherwise exempt "to the extent necessary for the support of the judgment debtor and the spouse and dependents of the judgment debtor."[7]

Existence and amount of new exemptions (revised forms EJ-155 and EJ-156)

The Judicial Council is required to maintain a list of the state and federal exemptions from enforcement of a money judgment, with citations to the relevant statute and information on how to find the amount of the exemptions.[8] This list is set out in Exemptions From the Enforcement of Judgments (form EJ-155). The committee proposes revising form EJ-155 to reflect the new laws by adding "Deposit Accounts (generally)" and "Deposit Accounts (hardship)" with appropriate citations under the existing category for deposit accounts, which has, until now, been limited to specific types of accounts for which exemptions have been available. An item has also been added to this form for the new exemption for money provided to the judgment debtor by the Federal Emergency Management Agency.[9] Form EJ-155 is also being revised, postcirculation, to correct citations for certain federal exemptions that have changed over the years[10] and to add the exemptions for Supplemental Security Income (both generally under the federal code and when held in direct deposit accounts under state law), and for directly deposited public benefits that were inadvertently omitted previously.[11]

[5] See form EJ-150, page 2, item 3 of the "Information for Judgment Debtor" section. Other clarifying changes have been made to item 3 based on public comments received, and these additional changes to form EJ-150 are discussed below. Parallel amendments were made to the statutory provisions relating to the judgment creditor's opposition (if any) to the claim of exemption (see § 703.550), but because information about such opposition is not included on any Judicial Council forms, no revisions are needed to reflect those statutory changes.

The dollar amounts of certain exemptions are set out in Current Dollar Amounts of Exemptions From Enforcement of Judgments (form EJ-156). By statute, the Judicial Council is responsible for adjusting the dollar amounts of these exemptions in April of every third year based on changes in the CCPI and for publishing the revised amounts.[12] Although the new automatic deposit account exemption will, by the terms of the statute, be adjusted annually by the Department of Social Services,[13] rather than triennially by the council, the committee proposes adding the amount of the new automatic deposit account exemption to form EJ-156, along with an explanation that this exemption amount will be adjusted annually. The current amount of the exemption is $1,724.[14] However, changes to the CCPI are scheduled to be made effective July 2020, before proposed revised form EJ-156 becomes final in September. These changes will likely affect the current dollar amount of the automatic exemption for deposit accounts currently included on proposed revised form EJ-156. The Civil and Small Claims Advisory Committee therefore requests that the council authorize the committee to correct the amount of this exemption on form EJ-156 as needed for consistency with section 704.220(a) after council [9] This is the only proposed form revision relating to new section 704.230.

[10] For example, Lighthouse Keepers Widows Benefits are now titled Lighthouse Keepers Surviving Spouses Benefits, and the code citations for exemptions for Veterans Benefits, Veterans Medal of Honor Benefits, and Railroad Retirement Benefits have all been revised.

[11] There has also been one item deleted from the form, a reference to Code of Civil Procedure section 704.210, which simply states that property that is not subject to enforcement of judgment is exempt without making a claim. That section does not itself provide for an exemption, and thus need not be on this list.

[12] § 703.150; see also form EJ-156.

[13] The amount of the new deposit account exemption is not stated as a dollar amount, but defined in section 704.220(a) as:

> an amount equal to or less than the minimum basic standard of adequate care for a family of four for Region 1, established by Section 11452 of the Welfare and Institutions Code and as annually adjusted by the State Department of Social Services pursuant to Section 11453 of the Welfare and Institutions Code.

Welfare and Institutions Code section 11453 provides that the amounts in section 11452 are to be adjusted annually, effective July 1, by the Department of Social Services.

[14] See Dept. of Social Services, All County Letter No. 19-47 (issued May 15, 2019), available at http://www.cdss.ca.gov/Portals/9/ACL/2019/19-47.pdf?ver=2019-05-15-133708-453.

approval and before the form is published and distributed to the public. Form EJ-156 will need to be revised annually after that point.

A new footnote has also been added to form EJ-156, stating that although the new automatic exemption does not preclude or reduce any other exemption applicable to deposit accounts, if the exemption amount for the deposit account applicable under other automatic exemptions—such as those applicable for direct deposit of social security benefits or public benefits—is greater under the other exemptions, then those apply instead of this one.[15]

Exceptions to the deposit account exemption (revised form EJ-130)

Although the new deposit account exemption is automatic and does not require a party to make a claim for the exemption to be applied by a financial institution, the exemption does not apply in all cases. Enforcement of judgments for wages owed, child or spousal support, or liability to the state government are not subject to the exemption.[16] In order to ensure that financial institutions are aware of whether a levy is based on a judgment to which this exemption does or does not apply, the new law amends section 699.520 to mandate that the content of a writ of execution now include information as to whether the underlying judgment is for wages owed or child or spousal support.[17]

This information has been added to the revised Writ of Execution (form EJ-130; see the instruction following item 5 and new item 22). The instruction is on the front of the form (the complete item could not fit there) so that it will be seen when a party completing the form would otherwise only complete the first page.

Notice of Levy (form EJ-150)

Senate Bill 616 expressly requires that a levy against a deposit account include a written description of the requirements of new section 704.220.[18] The information provided on the back of the revised Notice of Levy (form EJ-150) has been expanded to include this information, as follows:

- Information for Judgment Debtor—New item 2 notes that there are automatic exemptions that financial institutions should apply to a deposit account before providing funds to a levying officer, and directs the reader below for more information.
- Information for Person Other Than Judgment Debtor—New item 2 provides a similar advisement to those who have received the levy, stating that financial institutions are

[17] The new law does not mandate that the writ of execution include whether the underlying action is based on a state claim. Because the state has a separate set of levy forms that, by their use, will indicate to the financial institution that the underlying judgment is for liability to the state, identifying whether the exemption applies to such judgments should not be a problem.

required to apply applicable exemptions to deposit accounts. Item 3 also now specifies that a Memorandum of Garnishee must be completed within 10 days.

- Information About Deposit Accounts—This section has been added to:
    - Describe the new automatic exemption and list the exceptions thereto, noting that no claim is required (§ 704.220(a));
    - Note that if there are other applicable automatic exemptions, the larger of the exemptions should be applied (§ 704.220(b)) and give examples of such other exemptions; and
    - Advise both judgment debtor and judgment creditor that if they want to designate to which of multiple accounts the automatic exemption should apply, they should file an ex parte application with the court, as provided in section 704.220(e). It also advises that they do so promptly, because nothing in the new section requires the financial institution to delay in determining to which of multiple accounts to apply the exemption.

In addition, an item identical to new item 22 on the Writ of Execution (form EJ-130) has also been added to form EJ-150 (see new item 2), to communicate clearly to the financial institution that receives the levy whether the judgment is excepted from the automatic exemption for deposit accounts.

New ex parte application process (new forms EJ-157, EJ-157-INFO, EJ-158, and EJ-159)
Senate Bill 616 adds provisions for determining to which deposit account the new automatic exemption should be applied in situations where a judgment debtor has more than one deposit account. Subparagraph (e)(2) of section 704.220 addresses the situation where a judgment debtor has multiple accounts at a single financial institution, while subparagraph (e)(3) addresses the situation where a judgment debtor has multiple accounts at two or more financial institutions. If the former (multiple accounts in a single institution), either party may apply for a determination as to how and to which account the exemption should be applied. If the latter (multiple accounts in multiple financial institutions), the judgment creditor must, and the judgment debtor may, apply for a determination as to how and to which account the exemption should be applied. If no order is served on a financial institution designating the specific account, each institution is to apply the exemption.

The statute provides that the parties may obtain a determination by filing "an ex parte application . . . for a hearing to establish how and to which account the exemption should be applied." This language is somewhat unclear because generally a party either (1) makes an ex parte application for an order and no hearing is held, or (2) moves for an order with a noticed hearing date. The committee understands the statute to create a new process allowing either a hearing on shortened time or a true ex parte order, with no further hearing, if the circumstances warrant (i.e., the applicant can show irreparable harm to the property being levied if immediate action is not taken).[19] The committee recommends new forms to implement this new process, and the proposed forms reflect its understanding of the process.

Form EJ-157

The proposed Ex Parte Application for Order on Deposit Account Exemption (form EJ-157) is to be signed under penalty of perjury, and includes the following:

- Check boxes at the top to indicate whether the application is being made for an ex parte order or for a hearing on shortened time at which the court can make the requested designation;
- A pointer to the new information sheet (form EJ-157-INFO), noting that it describes the notice requirements;
- A statement explaining why the party is making the application;
- Identification of the writ of execution and notice of levy that the application pertains to, and instructions to attach copies or provide an explanation as to why a copy is not attached;
- Designation of how and to which account(s) the applicant is requesting that the exemption be applied; and
- The factual basis for the request that an order be issued without any further hearing, if there is such a request.

Form EJ-157-INFO

Because the committee expects self-represented parties to be among those making the applications, a detailed Instructions for Ex Parte Application for Order on Deposit Account Exemption (form EJ-157-INFO) has been created along with the new proposed forms. The instructions are intended to help a party understand the requirements of an ex parte application, in general, as well as the new application, in particular. The party is directed to check with the court regarding scheduling of ex parte applications and any applicable local rules, and to review the statewide rules of court relating to ex parte applications—particularly rules 3.1203 through 3.1207 governing notice, service, and appearance. The rules are also summarized in the instructions. The instruction sheet also includes a warning that a judgment debtor applicant should act promptly, because nothing in the new law instructs a financial institution to defer complying with a notice of levy to await a court order.

Form EJ-158

Because the requirements of notice and service of ex parte applications are complex, the proposal includes a Declaration Regarding Notice and Service for Ex Parte Application for Order on Deposit Account Exemption (form EJ-158). This form is based on a similar Judicial Council form declaration regarding notice and service of ex parte applications in family law cases (form FL-303). It contains all of the content required for notice and service in compliance with rules 3.1203 and 3.1204.

[19] The applicant need not show irreparable harm or immediate danger to file the application because the new statute expressly allows for an ex parte application. (See Cal. Rules of Court, rule 3.1202(c).) But because the new statute provides for a hearing on the application, a factual showing is necessary if a party is seeking to avoid the hearing.

Form EJ-159

The proposed new forms also include an Order on Application for Designation of Deposit Account Exemption (form EJ-159) designed to be used by the court for several alternative rulings:

- To deny the application;
- To set a hearing on shortened time, with an item for setting the hearing, plus items for time for service and time for filing any opposition;
- To rule on the application ex parte without a further hearing; or
- To rule on the application after the hearing.

Each type of ruling is a separate item (see items 3, 4, 5, and 6), with a check box to indicate which ruling the court is making. If the court were making a substantive ruling (checking item 5 or 6), the court would then proceed to items 7 (findings) and 8 (designating the account or accounts to which the exemption is to apply).

Policy implications

Because the proposal is intended only to implement new section 704.220 by developing new forms, as mandated in that law, and revise existing enforcement of judgment forms to reflect the amendments to other statutes made in SB 616, no policy implications relating to this proposal were raised during the comment period or related committee discussions.

Comments

The proposal was circulated for public comment between December 13, 2019, and February 11, 2020, as part of the regular winter comment cycle, and the committee received nine comments. Five commenters agreed with the proposal if modified, including one individual,[20] two professional organizations (Orange County Bar Association (OCBA) and Public Law Center (PLC)), one court (Superior Court of San Diego County), and one internal body (Trial Court Presiding Judges Advisory Committee/Court Executives Advisory Committee Joint Rules Subcommittee (JRS)). Four commenters did not indicate a position on the proposal but provided substantive comments, including two divisions of a superior court (Superior Court of Orange County's Family Law and Juvenile Court and Civil and Appellate Division Management and Analyst Team), a professional organization (California Association of Judgment Professionals (CAJP)), and a group of professional organizations commenting collectively (East Bay Community Law Center, Bet Tzedek, Public Counsel, and UCI Law (EBCLC)). A chart with the full text of the comments received and the committee's responses is attached at pages 33–79. The main comments and the committee's responses thereto are discussed below.

Writ of Execution (form EJ-130)

Comments relating to the proposed revisions to form EJ-130 primarily addressed minor formatting and word change suggestions intended to improve the consistency and clarity of the form, and the committee agreed with most of these suggestions. In particular, based on public comment, the committee further revised form EJ-130 to (1) conform the format and wording of the caption to other similar forms; (2) change the reference in the caption from "Plaintiff:" and "Defendant:" to "Plaintiff/Petitioner:" and "Defendant/Respondent:" on this and all of the revised and new forms to account for family law and other types of cases; (3) correct typographical issues relating to statutory citations (item 19b) and update cross-references to other items (item 24c, 25a(4), 25b, 25e); and (4) add a text box in item 22c.

However, some suggestions relating to form EJ-130 were not incorporated. For example, CAJP suggested that new items be inserted after items 4 and 22 to reference additional names on an "affidavit of identity," and that item 24c be condensed into a single sentence and require the use of an attachment. The committee decided not to implement these more substantive suggested revisions to form EJ-130 at this time, though it may consider them in the future.

As above, several of the comments relating to the proposed revisions to form EJ-150 were directed to minor formatting and word change suggestions intended to improve the consistency and clarity of the form, and the committee incorporated many of these suggestions. In particular, the committee further revised form EJ-150 based on public comment to: (1) conform the format and wording of the caption to other similar forms, (2) add a text box in item 2, (3) remove the term "(defendant)" from item 3 of the "Information About Deposit Accounts" section on page 2, and (4) make other minor suggested word changes throughout.

However, the committee declined to incorporate other suggested revisions to form EJ-150. For example, on page 1, CAJP suggested that item 1b be modified to refer to a new "Attachment 1b" but the committee declined to implement this suggestion because it would be more than a technical change and could require a request for further public comment, though it may be considered in the future. The committee also declined to implement suggestions that items 3 and 4 on page 1, and items 2 and 3 of the "Information About Deposit Accounts" section on page 2, be revised to include specific statutory references, as this level of statutory specificity is not typical on a form of this type.

EBCLC made some specific suggestions to the "Information for Judgment Debtor" section on page two of form EJ-150 intended to make the form less confusing for debtors. The committee agreed with the suggestion that the new item in this section—circulated for comment as item 3, referencing the new automatic exemptions that financial institutions are to apply—be moved above existing item 2, and that various word changes be made to existing item 2.

However, the committee concluded that the new item in the "Information for Judgment Debtors" section does not require the additional further revision suggested by EBCLC. The suggested language appears to be similar but more verbose than the language of the item as circulated for comment, and may also be duplicative of the new "Information About Deposit Accounts" section at the bottom of the page.

Moreover, PLC suggested adding an item addressing the newly created "hardship exemption" of section 704.225 to the "Information About Deposit Accounts" section at the bottom of form EJ-150, page 2, such as: "A debtor may also claim that the funds in a deposit account are exempt from levy because such levy would cause the debtor a hardship under § 704.225." The committee decided not to add this item because nonautomatic exemptions such as this one are already addressed in the "Information for Judgment Debtor" section above.

Exemptions From The Enforcement of Judgments (form EJ-155)

There were very few comments specific to the revisions to form EJ-155. The committee incorporated a suggestion to revise the fourth sentence to refer to a claim of exemption form received "with the Notice of Levy" packet, rather than "from the levying officer," to reduce any confusion about where one may obtain a claim of exemption form. The committee also incorporated suggestions that the new "hardship exemption" created by section 704.225 also be listed under "Deposit Accounts."

Current Dollar Amounts of Exemptions From Enforcement of Judgments (form EJ-156)

There were very few comments specific to the revisions to form EJ-156. The committee agreed with a suggestion to add the following phrase to the first sentence of page 1: "for cases under Title 11 of the U.S. Code (i.e., Bankruptcy)" for clarity, and revised the sentence accordingly. In response to a comment from CAJP, the committee also revised the second sentence of page 2 to provide further specificity about how the amount of the automatic deposit account exemption is calculated by adding: "pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code, § 11453 to reflect the minimum basic standard of adequate care for a family of four as established by § 11452.*"

However, the committee decided not to further revise form EJ-156 to include a reference to the "hardship exemption" of section 704.225, as suggested by two commenters. This form is the published list of exemptions in the article beginning with section 704.010 that have dollar amounts that are adjusted every three years.[21] Because the hardship exemption does not have a set dollar amount, it would be inappropriate to include it on form EJ-156.

Ex Parte Application for Order on Deposit Account Exemption (form EJ-157)

Comments relating to proposed new form EJ-157 were directed primarily to minor formatting and word change suggestions intended to improve the consistency and clarity of the form, and the committee accepted most of these suggestions. Among others, the committee agreed with suggestions to (1) conform the format and wording of the caption to other similar forms; (2) change the reference in the caption from "Plaintiff:" and "Defendant:" to "Plaintiff/Petitioner:"

and "Defendant/Respondent:"; (3) remove parenthetical references to "plaintiff" and "defendant" in item 1, as those terms are inapplicable in some cases; (4) update a cross-reference in item 4; (5) remove the unnecessary space in the "Declaration by Applicant" section; and (6) add the word "original" to judgment creditor under the signature line.

Additionally, the committee gave significant consideration to comments by PLC and EBCLC that some debtors may not have copies of the Writ of Execution and Notice of Levy, and thus form EJ-157 should only require that a copy of these documents be attached "if possible" or "if available," and a litigant's best efforts to obtain these documents should be sufficient. While the committee is sympathetic to this possibility, copies of these documents may very likely be necessary for a court to fully and fairly evaluate the ex parte application, and presumably most litigants have or will be able to obtain copies. Therefore, the committee declined to revise the proposed new form to eliminate the request that the Writ of Execution and Notice of Levy be attached, as suggested, but instead modified the form to allow for a litigant to provide an explanation as to why the writ or notice of levy is not attached.

Additionally, OCBA commented that the fact that the automatic deposit account exemption is per debtor and not per account should be stated more clearly on the face of form EJ-157 itself. The committee declined to further revise the form as suggested because item 1 of the instructions for this form, form EJ-157-INFO, explicitly states that the exemption "is per judgment debtor, and not per account."

Instructions for Ex Parte Application for Order on Deposit Account Exemption (form EJ-157-INFO)

The only comments specific to proposed new form EJ-157-INFO relate to items 1 and 2. The suggestions for item 2 are clarifying word changes with which the committee agrees.

The committee also considered several more substantive comments relating to item 1 of form EJ-157-INFO. As circulated for comment, item 1 stated:

> 1. Applicable Law. Code of Civil Procedure section 704.220 provides that financial institutions must apply an automatic exemption when served a Notice of Levy on a judgment debtor's deposit account, if the underlying judgment is not based on wages owed or child or spousal support. The exemption (the amount of which can be found on form EJ-156) is per judgment debtor, not per account. If the judgment debtor has multiple deposit accounts, either the judgment debtor or judgment creditor may make an ex parte application to a court for an order designating how and to which deposit account the automatic exemption is to be applied. (See Code Civ. Proc., § 704.220(e).)

The Public Law Center suggested that item 1 be revised to reflect that a financial institution must automatically withhold the exempted amount, but without a specific order from the court the financial institution will choose which account to protect. EBCLC similarly suggested that item 1 be split into separate sentences, with a new item that reads: "If you have only one bank account, your bank will automatically exempt the amount protected under the law. If you have more than one bank account, use this form to ask the court to tell your bank how to apply the exemption. If you do not, you will still receive the exemption but your bank will decide to which account(s) it applies." And JRS proposed that a sentence be added to the end of item 1 to read: "The judgment creditor must make this application if there are multiple deposit accounts at different institutions."

Additionally, both before this proposal was circulated and in connection with the public comments, the committee considered whether it is appropriate for the new ex parte application and order to allow for the automatic exemption for deposit accounts created by section 704.220 to be allocated among multiple accounts at either a single or multiple financial institutions. The statute is somewhat confusing as to exactly what kind of order a judgment debtor with multiple accounts may obtain. While it is clear that either party may obtain an order determining to which account the exemption should apply,[22] it is less clear whether a judgment debtor may obtain an order that the exemption be spread among multiple accounts at either a single or multiple financial institutions. The legislative history on this issue is contradictory,[23] but section 704.220(e) specifically states that "the exemption applies per debtor, not per account" and courts are to determine "how and to which account the exemption should be applied" (italics added).

In light of this lack of clarity, the Invitation to Comment on this proposal specifically asked for input on this issue, and commenters expressed differing opinions based on varying understandings of the new statute. For example, the Superior Court of San Diego County and PLC commented that allocation across multiple accounts should be allowed, with PLC noting that there could be reasons why a debtor would want to maintain a certain minimum balance in a particular account (for example, to avoid bank fees) and the debtor should be able to apply to have the exemption allocated across accounts to protect minimum balances. In contrast, the Orange County Bar Association opined that allocation might be permissible for multiple accounts at a single financial institution, but not for multiple accounts across multiple institutions. Orange County's Civil and Appellate Division Management and Analyst Team commented that allocation across accounts could create confusion, and JRS indicated that it is not necessary or a good idea to allow for allocation among multiple accounts at multiple banks, and it would make more sense to have the bank make the election since the exemption is automatic and the bank knows the relevant account balances.

Having carefully considered the unclear statutory language, contradictory legislative history, and public comments supporting varying understanding of the new law, the committee concluded that the statute should be understood as allowing for the automatic deposit account exemption to be allocated among multiple accounts at either a single or multiple financial institutions. The committee ultimately determined that the best way to implement the new law is to allow courts to decide whether to allocate the automatic exemption among multiple accounts as part of the ex parte process, and the forms proposed by the committee therefore allow for designation of the exemption to be spread among accounts or applied to a single account.

[22] § 704.220(e)(2)–(3).

[23] An Assembly Floor Analysis dated September 6, 2019, summarizes the bill as, among other things, providing a procedure for seeking a court order allocating the exemption among multiple accounts. On the other hand, a Senate Floor Analysis dated September 10, 2019, states on page 3 that the new law "limits the automatic exemption to one bank account per debtor." Both reports are available at http://leginfo.legislature.ca.gov/faces/billAnalysisClient.xhtml?bill_id=201920200SB616.

To clarify applicable law and implement the spirit of the public comments seeking further specificity, the committee has revised item 1 of form EJ-157-INFO to read:

> 1. Applicable Law. Code of Civil Procedure section 704.220 provides that financial institutions must apply an automatic exemption when served a Notice of Levy on a judgment debtor's deposit account, if the underlying judgment is not based on wages owed or child or spousal support. The exemption (amount found of which can be found on form EJ-156) is per judgment debtor, not per account. The exemption is automatically applied; the judgment debtor does not need to take any action for the exempted amount to be protected.
> 2. Multiple Accounts.
> - If the judgment debtor has multiple deposit accounts at a single bank, either the judgment debtor or judgment creditor may make an ex parte application for an order designating how and to which account the exemption applies. The bank must automatically withhold the exempted amount, but without a specific court order it will choose to which account the exemption applies. (Code Civ. Proc. § 704.220(e)(2).)
> - If the judgment debtor has multiple deposit accounts at multiple financial institutions, the judgment creditor must and the judgment debtor may make this application. (Code Civ. Proc. § 704.220(e)(3).)

Declaration Regarding Notice and Service for Ex Parte Application for Order on Deposit Account Exemption (form EJ-158)

The only comments relating specifically to proposed new form EJ-158 were directed to minor formatting and word change suggestions intended to improve the consistency and clarity of the form, and the committee implemented these suggested revisions. In particular, the committee agreed with suggestions to (1) conform the format and wording of the caption to other similar forms; (2) change the reference in the caption from "Plaintiff:" and "Defendant:" to "Plaintiff/Petitioner:" and "Defendant/Respondent:"; and (3) include reference to the "original" judgment creditor, "assignee of record," and "assignee of record's attorney."

Order on Application for Designation of Deposit Account Exemption (form EJ-159)

The only comments relating specifically to form EJ-159 were directed to minor formatting and word change suggestions intended to improve the consistency and clarity of the form, and the committee agreed with these suggestions. In particular, the committee agreed with suggestions to

(1) conform the format and wording of the caption to other similar forms; (2) change the reference in the caption from "Plaintiff:" and "Defendant:" to "Plaintiff/Petitioner:" and "Defendant/Respondent:"; (3) include reference to the "original" judgment creditor, "assignee of record," and "assignee of record's attorney"; and (4) fix a typographical error in item 3c.

Alternatives considered

Because, as of September 1, 2020, current forms EJ-130, EJ-150, EJ-155, and EJ-156 would be out of compliance with law if not revised, the committee did not consider the alternative of not revising those forms. In addition, because the new statute expressly mandates the council to revise or adopt forms to implement the provisions in new section 704.220, the committee did not consider not developing the new proposed forms. The committee did, however, consider alternatives while developing the new forms.

In addition to those issues discussed above in connection with the public comments, the committee considered whether it would be helpful or appropriate to add an optional request for stay of enforcement of judgment while the application for designation of which deposit account to apply the exemption to is pending. The invitation to comment specifically requested input on this issue, and comments were received both in favor of and against an optional request for a stay of enforcement of judgment. For example, OCBA, the Superior Court of Orange County Family Law and Juvenile Court, and the Superior Court of Orange County Civil and Appellate Division Management and Analyst Team each commented that a process that would allow for a stay of enforcement would be helpful while the ex parte application is proceeding.

In contrast, the Superior Court of San Diego County commented that adding an optional stay of enforcement of judgment to the new ex parte application and/or order forms would not be helpful or appropriate. JRS commented that a stay of enforcement of the judgment is not authorized by statute, and CAJP pointed out that such a revision is not necessary because new form EJ-159 already has a spot for "other rulings" and this would seem to encompass a stay or a temporary injunction or restraining order when a court deems it appropriate. As another alternative, PLC suggested that form EJ-160 could be revised to add a section similar to that in the claim of exemption form: this would notify the levying officer, financial institution, and creditor that the debtor is seeking a court determination as to which account the exemption should apply.[24]

After considering the comments received on the issue, the committee decided for multiple reasons not to further revise the forms to include items addressing a potential stay of enforcement of judgment while the application is pending. First, as indicated in the comments, nothing in the new statute authorizes a stay of enforcement: no provision requires the bank to delay providing funds to the levying officer to allow for the filing of the ex parte application, nor the financial institution (or levying officer) to be given notice of an application or to take any action (or delay taking any action) if such notice is provided. Second, the exemption is to be applied automatically, meaning that a judgment debtor should still have the exempted funds in a deposit account without a stay, even if the funds are not in the specific account that the judgment debtor prefers. If the judgment debtor has deposit accounts at multiple financial institutions, the exempted amount will remain in each account unless the judgment creditor obtains an order under section 704.220(e)(3) that the exemption be applied to a particular account. Third, if a case warrants a stay of enforcement of judgment or similar type of relief, new order form EJ-159 has a place for a court to make "other rulings" that could serve this purpose by allowing for a stay or something similar in appropriate cases.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

Because SB 616 establishes new enforcement of judgment exemptions and creates a new ex parte application process for the deposit account exemption, the change in law will likely require additional training for clerks, judicial officers, and court legal services and self-help offices on the new and revised forms. In its comments, the Superior Court of San Diego County noted that internal procedures and case management systems would need to be updated and staff would need to be trained, but that three months from approval to effective date would be sufficient if final versions of the forms are provided 30 days in advance to give courts time to update procedures, configure local packets, and order printed stock.

The Superior Court of Orange County Civil and Appellate Division Management and Analyst Team similarly noted that new procedures would need to be developed or revised, staff trained, systems updated and tested, and estimated that this would require approximately 40 FTE hours by two employees over the course of approximately three months. JRS likewise commented that some training would be required, and workload would be increased for judicial and nonjudicial staff (and that sheriffs acting as levying officers might also be impacted). It appears from these comments that the potential implementation requirements, while not insignificant, do not present a barrier to adoption of the proposal.

NOTICE TO PERSON SERVED

WRIT OF EXECUTION OR SALE. Your rights and duties are indicated on the accompanying Notice of Levy (form EJ-150).

WRIT OF POSSESSION OF PERSONAL PROPERTY. If the levying officer is not able to take custody of the property, the levying officer will demand that you turn over the property. If custody is not obtained following demand, the judgment may be enforced as a money judgment for the value of the property specified in the judgment or in a supplemental order.

WRIT OF POSSESSION OF REAL PROPERTY. If the premises are not vacated within five days after the date of service on the occupant or, if service is by posting, within five days after service on you, the levying officer will remove the occupants from the real property and place the judgment creditor in possession of the property. Except for a mobile home, personal property remaining on the premises will be sold or otherwise disposed of in accordance with CCP 1174 unless you or the owner of the property pays the judgment creditor the reasonable cost of storage and takes possession of the personal property not later than 15 days after the time the judgment creditor takes possession of the premises.

EXCEPTION IF RENTAL HOUSING UNIT WAS FORECLOSED. If the residential property that you are renting was sold in a foreclosure, you have additional time before you must vacate the premises. If you have a lease for a fixed term, such as for a year, you may remain in the property until the term is up. If you have a periodic lease or tenancy, such as from month-to-month, you may remain in the property for 90 days after receiving a notice to quit. A blank form Claim of Right to Possession and Notice of Hearing (form CP10) accompanies this writ. You may claim your right to remain on the property by filling it out and giving it to the sheriff or levying officer.

EXCEPTION IF YOU WERE NOT SERVED WITH A FORM CALLED PREJUDGMENT CLAIM OF RIGHT TO POSSESSION. If you were not named in the judgment for possession and you occupied the premises on the date on which the unlawful detainer case was filed, you may object to the enforcement of the judgment against you. You must complete the form Claim of Right to Possession and Notice of Hearing (form CP10) and give it to the sheriff or levying officer. A blank form accompanies this writ. You have this right whether or not the property you are renting was sold in a foreclosure.

NOTICE OF LEVY
(Enforcement of Judgment)

Code of Civil Procedure, § 699.540
www.courts.ca.gov

SHORT TITLE:	LEVYING OFFICER FILE NO.:	COURT CASE NO.:

–INFORMATION FOR JUDGMENT DEBTOR–

1. The levying officer is required to take custody of the property described in item 1 in your possession or under your control.
2. There are automatic exemptions that financial institutions should apply to a deposit account before providing funds to the levying officer. See below for more information.
3. You may claim any available exemption for your property. A list of exemptions can be found on form EJ-155. If you wish to claim an exemption for personal property, you must do so within 15 days after this notice was delivered to you or 20 days after this notice was mailed to you by filing a claim of exemption and one copy with the levying officer as provided in section 703.520 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The date of filing is calculated as the date the claim is received by the levying officer, or the date of the postmark if the claim is mailed and assigned a tracking number by the U.S. Postal Service or another common carrier. If you do not claim an exemption, you may lose it and the property is subject to enforcement of a money judgment. If you wish to seek the advice of an attorney, you should do so immediately so that a claim of exemption can be filed on time.
4. You are not entitled to claim an exemption for property that is levied upon under a judgment for sale of property. This property is described in the accompanying writ of sale. You may, however, claim available exemptions for property levied upon to satisfy damages or costs awarded in such a judgment.
5. You may obtain the release of your property by paying the amount of a money judgment with interest and costs remaining unpaid.
6. If your property is levied upon under a writ of execution or to satisfy damages and costs under a writ of possession or sale, the property may be sold at an execution sale, perhaps at a price substantially below its value. Notice of sale will be given to you. Notice of sale of real property (other than a leasehold estate with an unexpired term of less than two years) may not be given until at least 120 days after this notice is served on you. This grace period is intended to give you an opportunity to settle with the judgment creditor, to obtain a satisfactory buyer for the property, or to encourage other potential buyers to attend the execution sale.
7. All sales at an execution sale are final; there is no right of redemption.

– INFORMATION FOR PERSON OTHER THAN JUDGMENT DEBTOR –

1. If the property levied upon is in your possession or under your control and you do not claim the right to possession or a security interest, you must deliver the property to the levying officer. If you do not deny an obligation levied upon or do not claim a priority over the judgment creditor's lien, you must pay to the levying officer the amount that is due and payable and that becomes due and payable during the period of the execution lien, which lasts two years from the date of issuance of the writ of execution. You must execute and deliver any documents needed to transfer the property.
2. If you are a financial institution, you are required to apply applicable exemptions to deposit accounts. See below.
3. You must complete the accompanying Memorandum of Garnishee within 10 days.
4. If you claim ownership or the right to possession of real or personal property levied upon or if you claim a security interest in or lien on personal property levied upon, you may make a third-party claim and obtain the release of the property under sections 720.010–720.800 of the Code of Civil Procedure.
5. Make checks payable to the levying officer shown on page 1.

– INFORMATION ABOUT DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS –

1. If the levy is not to satisfy a judgment for wages owed, child or spousal support, or liability to the state government, financial institutions must automatically exempt money in a deposit account up to a certain dollar amount, under section 704.220 of the Code of Civil Procedure, with no claim of exemption required. See form EJ-156 for the exemption amount.
2. Other automatic exemptions may apply to deposit accounts, such as exemptions for directly deposited social security or public benefits under section 704.080. (See form EJ-156 for the exemption amounts.) Generally, the financial institution should apply the larger set of exemptions that apply to an account. See section 704.220(b).
3. If a judgment debtor has multiple accounts in one or more financial institutions, either the judgment creditor or judgment debtor may file an application in the superior court identified on the front of this form for an order as to which account the exemption should apply. (See section 704.220(e).) To get such an order, file an Ex Parte Application for Order on Deposit Account Exemption (form EJ-157) as soon as possible. (See EJ-157-INFO for instructions.) If the judgment debtor has more than one account in a financial institution, that institution may decide how and to which account to apply the exemption, unless it is served with a court order directing how to apply the exemption.

EXEMPTIONS FROM THE ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS

The following is a list of assets that may be exempt from levy in enforcing a judgment.

Exemptions are found in the United States Code (USC) and in the California codes, primarily the Code of Civil Procedure (CCP).

Because of periodic changes in the law, the list may not include all exemptions that apply in your case. The exemptions may not apply in full or under all circumstances. Some are not available after a certain period of time. You or your attorney should read the statutes.

If you believe the assets that are being levied on are exempt, file the claim of exemption form that you received with the Notice of Levy packet.

AMOUNT OF EXEMPTIONS: For the exemption amount, please refer to the code section listed below for each type of property. The current amounts of certain exemptions are listed in Current Dollar Amounts of Exemptions From Enforcement of Judgments (form EJ-156). The amounts of some of the exemptions are amended every three years and become effective immediately on April 1 under the provisions of Code of Civil Procedure section 703.150.

CURRENT DOLLAR AMOUNTS OF EXEMPTIONS FROM ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS
Code of Civil Procedure sections 703.140(b) and 704.010 et seq.

EXEMPTIONS UNDER SECTION 703.140(b)

The following lists the current dollar amounts of exemptions from enforcement of judgment under Code of Civil Procedure section 703.140(b) used in a case under title 11 of the United States Code (bankruptcy).

These amounts are effective April 1, 2019. Unless otherwise provided by statute after that date, they will be adjusted at each three-year interval, ending on March 31. The amount of the adjustment to the prior amounts is based on the change in the annual California Consumer Price Index for All Urban Consumers for the most recent three-year period ending on the preceding December 31, with each adjusted amount rounded to the nearest $25. (See Code Civ. Proc., § 703.150(d).)

Code Civ. Proc., § 703.140(b)	Type of Property	Amount of Exemption
(1)	The debtor's aggregate interest in real property or personal property that the debtor or a dependent of the debtor uses as a residence, or in a cooperative that owns property that the debtor or a dependent of the debtor uses as a residence,	$ 29,275
(2)	The debtor's interest in one or more motor vehicles	$ 5,850
(3)	The debtor's interest in household furnishings, household goods, wearing apparel, appliances, books, animals, crops, or musical instruments, that are held primarily for the personal, family, or household use of the debtor or a dependent of the debtor (value is of any particular item)	$ 725
(4)	The debtor's aggregate interest in jewelry held primarily for the personal, family, or household use of the debtor or a dependent of the debtor	$ 1,750
(5)	The debtor's aggregate interest, plus any unused amount of the exemption provided under paragraph (1), in any property	$ 1,550
(6)	The debtor's aggregate interest in any implements, professional books, or tools of the trade of the debtor or the trade of a dependent of the debtor	$ 8,725
(8)	The debtor's aggregate interest in any accrued dividend or interest under, or loan value of, any unmatured life insurance contract owned by the debtor under which the insured is the debtor or an individual of whom the debtor is a dependent	$ 15,650
(11)(D)	The debtor's right to receive, or property traceable to, a payment on account of personal bodily injury of the debtor or an individual of whom the debtor is a dependent	$ 29,275

CURRENT DOLLAR AMOUNTS OF EXEMPTIONS FROM ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS
Code of Civil Procedure sections 703.140(b) and 704.010 et seq.

EXEMPTIONS UNDER SECTION 704.010 et seq.

The following lists the current dollar amounts of exemptions from enforcement of judgment under title 9, division 2, chapter 4, article 3 (commencing with section 704.010) of the Code of Civil Procedure.

The amount of the automatic exemption for a deposit account under section 704.220(a) is effective September 1, 2020, and unless otherwise provided by statute after that date, will be adjusted annually effective July 1 by the Department of Social Services under Welf. & Inst. Code, § 11453 to reflect the minimum basic standard of care for a family of four as established by § 11452.*

The other amounts are all effective April 1, 2019. Unless otherwise provided by statute after that date, they will be adjusted at each three-year interval, ending on March 31. The amount of the adjustment to the prior amounts is based on the change in the annual California Consumer Price Index for All Urban Consumers for the most recent three-year period ending on the preceding December 31, with each adjusted amount rounded to the nearest $25. (See Code Civ. Proc., § 703.150(d).)

Code Civ. Proc. Section	Type of Property	Amount of Exemption
704.010	Motor vehicle (any combination of aggregate equity, proceeds of execution sale, and proceeds of insurance or other indemnification for loss, damage, or destruction)	$ 3,325
704.030	Material to be applied to repair or maintenance of residence	$ 3,500
704.040	Jewelry, heirlooms, art	$ 8,725
704.060	Personal property used in debtor's or debtor's spouse's trade, business, or profession (amount of exemption for commercial motor vehicle not to exceed $4,850)	$ 8,725
704.060	Personal property used in debtor's and spouse's common trade, business, or profession (amount of exemption for commercial motor vehicle not to exceed $9,700)	$ 17,450
704.220	Deposit account, generally (exemption without claim; amount per judgment debtor, section 704.220(a),(e))[1]	$ 1,724*
704.080	Deposit account with direct payment of social security or public benefits (exemption without claim, section 704.080(b))[2]
	• Public benefits, one depositor is designated payee	$ 1,750
	• Social security benefits, one depositor is designated payee	$ 3,500
	• Public benefits, two or more depositors are designated payees[3]	$ 2,600
	• Social security benefits, two or more depositors are designated payees[3]	$ 5,250
704.090	Inmate trust account	$ 1,750
	Inmate trust account (restitution fine or order)	$ 325[4]
704.100	Aggregate loan value of unmatured life insurance policies	$ 13,975

1 This exemption does not preclude or reduce other exemptions for deposit accounts. However, if the exemption amount for the deposit account applicable under other automatic exemptions—such as those applicable for direct deposit of social security benefits or public benefits—is greater under the other exemptions, then those apply instead of this one. (Code Civ. Proc., § 704.220(b).)

2 The amount of a deposit account with direct deposited funds that exceeds exemption amounts shown is also exempt to the extent it consists of payments of public benefits or social security benefits. (Code Civ. Proc., § 704.080(c).)

3 If only one joint payee is a beneficiary of the payment, the exemption is in the amount available to a single designated payee. (Code Civ. Proc., § 704.080(b)(3) and (4).)

4 This amount is not subject to adjustments under Code Civ. Proc., § 703.150.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR EX PARTE APPLICATION FOR ORDER ON DEPOSIT ACCOUNT EXEMPTION

1. Applicable Law. Code of Civil Procedure section 704.220 provides that financial institutions must apply an automatic exemption when served a Notice of Levy on a judgment debtor's deposit account, if the underlying judgment is not based on wages owed or child or spousal support. The exemption (the amount of which can be found on form EJ-156) is per judgment debtor, not per account. The exemption is automatically applied; the judgment debtor does not need to take any action for the exempted amount to be protected.
2. Multiple Accounts.
   - If the judgment debtor has multiple deposit accounts at a single bank, either the judgment debtor or judgment creditor may make an ex parte application for an order designating how and to which account the exemption applies. The bank must automatically withhold the exempted amount, but without a specific court order it will choose to which account the exemption applies. (Code Civ. Proc., § 704.220(e)(2).)
   - If the judgment debtor has multiple deposit accounts at multiple financial institutions, the judgment creditor must and the judgment debtor may make this application. (Code Civ. Proc., § 704.220(e)(3).)
3. A judgment debtor or judgment creditor applying for an order to designate a specific account or how to allocate the exemption among multiple accounts should do so as soon as receiving a notice of a levy or memorandum of garnishment as applicable, because the financial institution is required to act promptly in sending funds to the levying officer.
4. Rules for Making the Application. The ex parte application must be filed in the court in which the judgment was issued. The applicant must check with that court for local rules and timing as to when and where the applicant is to appear at court to have the court consider the ex parte application. The applicant must follow the rules relating to ex parte applications that are set out in California Rules of Court, rules 3.1203–3.1207, which describe the following requirements:

   Notice of the application. Notice of the ex parte application must generally be given to the other party in the case. Notice may be in person or by phone, fax, overnight mail, or email (if permitted in the case already). The party must be informed by 10:00 a.m. the day before the ex parte application is to be considered by the court, unless there is a good reason such notice could not or should not be given. How the notice was given, or why it was not, must be described in the declaration regarding notice and service (form EJ-158).

   Service of papers. Copies of the application and all related papers must be given to the other party as soon as reasonable and before the court appearance, if possible. (How this was done or why it was not must also be described in form EJ-158.)

   Appearance at court. The applicant must be available at the time the court is considering the application, either in person at the courthouse or by telephone. (If by phone, the applicant must inform the court and the other parties in advance, and must comply with California Rules of Court, rule 3.670(d), which requires that the application papers must be filed by 10:00 a.m. two court days before the application is to be considered.)
5. Forms to Complete. Before the time the court is scheduled to consider the application, the applicant must complete and file the following forms with the court:
   - Ex Parte Application for Order on Deposit Account Exemption (form EJ-157);
   - Declaration Regarding Notice and Service for Ex Parte Application for Order on Deposit Account Exemption (form EJ-158);
   - Order on Application for Designation of Deposit Account Exemption (form EJ-159) (complete caption and item 1 only).

   Take note of the following when completing form EJ-157:
   - The contents of the application must be provided under penalty of perjury.
   - If the applicant has good cause for why the court should act immediately, with no further hearing or briefing, the box under the title of form EJ-157 stating "Without hearing" should be checked and item 6b completed to explain why. Otherwise the box under the title for "Hearing on shortened time" and item 6a should be checked.
   - Copies of the Writ of Execution (form EJ-130) and any Notice of Levy (EJ-150) that have been issued to a financial institution must be attached to the application form.
   - Item 5 must include the specific account or accounts to which the court is being asked to order that the exemption apply. If the judgment debtor is asking that the exemption be allocated among multiple accounts, the total amount allocated may not be more than the total amount of the deposit account exemption. (See form EJ-156 for the amount.)
6. Filing With the Court. The completed forms should be filed with the court clerk. There will be a filing fee unless the party is eligible for a fee waiver. (If a party cannot afford the fee and has not already received a fee waiver, the party may file a Request to Waive Court Fees (form FW-001) with the other forms.) Take extra copies of all the forms to the court so the clerk can give back a stamped copy.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR EX PARTE APPLICATION FOR ORDER ON DEPOSIT ACCOUNT EXEMPTION

7. What to Do With Order. The court may rule on the application immediately if a delay could result in loss to a deposit account subject to exemption or enforcement, or may order that a hearing be held to consider the application and any opposition.
   - Once an order is issued by the court on form EJ-159, the applicant should serve the order on all other parties in the case as soon as possible. If the order sets a hearing date, it must be served by the date in item 4b on the order.
   - If the order sets a hearing date, the applicant should appear at the hearing either in person or by phone (if by phone, notice must be given in advance to the court and other side).
   - If the order designates the deposit account or accounts to which the exemption applies, without any further hearing, the applicant should serve the financial institution and levying officer as well as the other parties. Once an order has been issued by the court, the applicant should serve the order on all other parties in the case as soon as possible.

			• Form EJ-159, paragraph 1 The designations are not accurate, because although the judgment debtor is usually the defendant, and the judgment creditor is usually the plaintiff, this is not always the case. A defendant may be awarded costs and/or attorney fees as part of a defense verdict, and thus, the defendant may be the judgment creditor.	The committee appreciates this suggestion and has modified the forms to remove parenthetical references to the judgment debtor as "defendant" and judgment creditor as "plaintiff" on the forms as referenced in this comment.
			2. Form EJ-159, paragraph 3c has a typo - "section 104.220" should be "section 704.220".	The committee appreciates this correction and has modified the proposal accordingly.
			3. Add "single" in front of "financial institution" Form EJ-150, page 2, paragraph 3, last sentence (Information About Deposit Accounts).	The committee declines to incorporate this suggestion because it understands section 704.220 to allow for allocation of the exemption across accounts at multiple financial institutions.
			4. Remove the "" after $1,724 on page 2 of Form EJ-156.	The committee declines to incorporate this suggestion because the "" relates back to note at the top of the page that ends with a "*".

			b. It is not a good idea to allow an optional request to stay enforcement of the judgment. Such would provide the judgment debtor with more relief than the statute entitles. A stay of enforcement of the "judgment," would prevent the judgment creditor from being able to attach non-deposit account assets or conduct post judgment discovery, including a judgment debtor exam. c. It is not necessary or a good idea for the application and order to allow the exemption to be allocated among multiple accounts at a single financial institution. EJ-150, paragraph 3, indicates "If the judgment debtor has more than one account in a [single] financial institution, that institution may decide how and to which account to apply the exemption ..." It makes more sense to have the financial institution make the election since the exemption is automatic, and the financial institution possesses sufficient info regarding the judgment debtor's account balances to determine if funds exist in any accounts in excess of the automatic exemption. The statute provides for an automatic exemption of a set amount; it does not allow the judgment debtor to limit the judgment creditor's ability to	The committee appreciates this comment on whether the forms should provide for an optional request for stay of enforcement of judgment. Having considered all of the comments on this issue, the committee concluded that the forms should not be further revised to include an optional request for a stay because this is beyond what the statute provides for and the form order allows for "other rulings" which may encompass similar relief where appropriate. The committee appreciates this comment disfavoring allocation across multiple accounts at a single financial institution. The committee has considered all of the comments on this issue, unclear statutory language, contradictory legislative history, and potential policy implications of various interpretations. 3.	Orange County Bar Association by Scott B. Garner, President Newport Beach, California	AM	The Orange County Bar Association believes the proposed forms appropriately address the stated purpose of implementing S.B.616 provided that the forms are further modified to conform to all provisions of S.B.616 after further comparisons to S.B.616. For instance, the provisions creating CCP §704.220(e)(1) specifically state that the "automatic exemption" (now at $1,724) applies "per debtor" and not "per account"; however only the proposed Form EJ-157-INFO sets forth this limitation and it is no where stated on Form EJ-157 itself which will cause confusion among judicial officers, clerks, debtors, and creditors. In addition, the new CCP §704.220(e)(3) states that if a judgment debtor holds deposit accounts in multiple accounts at two or more financial institutions then the "judgment creditor shall" file an ex parte application in the superior court for a "hearing" to establish "how and to which account the exemption should be applied"; however the proposed new forms (especially EJ-157, EJ-157-INFO, and EJ-159) do not ever	The committee has considered this comment and concluded that direction on form EJ-157 to read the instructions before filing, coupled with the explicit statement on EJ-157-INFO item 1 that the exemption is per debtor and not per account, should provide sufficient explanation of this portion of the law. The committee has considered this comment and modified the proposal to make clearer that the indicate that (1) the judgment creditor is required by statute to make the ex parte request if there are multiple deposit accounts at different institutions, (2) the ex parte request is to request a hearing not to obtain an ex parte determination (apparently), and (3) the hearing is for the purpose of determining "how and to which account the exemption should be applied" (not which "accounts" as provided as an option under EJ-159; applying the exemption to multiple accounts contradicts CCP §704.220(a),(e)(3), although the legislative history is confusing and unclear as noted by the Judicial Council). For the reasons stated above, it is not appropriate for the Ex Parte Application & Order to allow for the exemption to be allocated among multiple accounts among multiple institutions, but it may be so authorized for multiple accounts at a single institution. Compare CCP §704.220(e)(1) with (e)(2) and with (e)(3) – what did the legislature intend by these contradictory provisions? Regarding the request for comments concerning adding a request for stay of enforcement as part of the new ex parte application form, we believe the optional request would be appropriate and helpful to all parties, including the levying officers, the financial institutions, the court, and the litigants. This is a troublesome series of new statutes since they create "automatic	judgment creditor must make the application if there are multiple accounts. The civil legal services that we provide include consumer, family, immigration, housing, veterans, community organizations, and health law. PLC appreciates the opportunity to comment on Invitation W20-05 which is the modification of forms EJ-130, EJ-150, EJ-155 and EJ-156. PLC worked on SB 616 over the past few years and is grateful to the Judicial Council for its efforts in complying with the new law. PLC believes that the new protections will have a significant impact on its low-income clients who are often left with little to nothing when their bank account is cleaned out by a debt buyer or debt collector. It is important to note that SB 616 provides for an automatic exemption under Cal. Code Civ. Proc. Section 704.220(e)(3), and therefore it is important to clarify in the forms that debtors only need to file an ex parte application in certain limited circumstances. While EJ-157-INFO states clearly that financial institutions must apply an automatic exemption in Section 1, it might make sense to bold that and leave it	The committee notes the commenter's support for the proposal if modified and recognizes the work of this organization; no response is required. 			as Section 1, and then either separate the following text into a separate paragraph, or add a section that has the next two sentences in it about when an ex parte application would be needed. PLC would propose the following: 1. Automatic Exemption: Code of Civil Procedure section 704.220 provides that financial institutions must apply an automatic exemption when served a Notice of Levy on a judgment debtor's deposit account, if the underlying judgment is not based on wages owed or child or spousal support. 2. The exemption (the amount of which can be found on form EJ-156) is per judgment debtor, not per account. If the judgment debtor has multiple deposit accounts, either the judgment debtor or judgment creditor may make an ex parte application to a court for an order designating how and to which deposit account the automatic exemption is to be applied. (See Code of Civ. Proc. §704.220(e).) 3. A judgment debtor (defendant) applying for an order to designate a specific account or how to allocate the exemption among multiple accounts should do as soon as receiving a notice of a levy, because the financial institution is required to act promptly in sending funds to the levying officer.	this and similar suggestions to provide further specificity and clarity about the new law and the debtor and creditor's respective rights and obligations with respect to the automatic deposit account exemption.

			PLC appreciates the judicial council expressing the urgency of acting to protect particular account(s) if the debtor so wishes. While PLC does not want to further complicate or confuse the issue, PLC also believes that certain language may be more confusing if not clarified. PLC proposes that the language be changed to reflect that the financial institution is required to automatically withhold the exempted amount, but that without a specific order from the court, the financial institution will choose which account to protect. The financial institution is not required to wait for a court order, so the debtor should submit the ex parte application and a claim of exemption to notify the bank that action is being taken. Rather than a stay of enforcement, PLC proposes adding a section to Form EJ-160 that is the same as a debtor submitting a claim of exemption to the levying officer, that notifies the levying officer, the financial institution and the creditor, that the debtor is seeking a determination from the court as to which account(s) the exemption should apply. That way the bank will not turn money over to the levying officer until further instruction is received. It would be a relatively minor fix, but the debtor would then have a mechanism by which he or she could notify the levying officer, the creditor and the financial institution that a court process was occurring, similar to what happens when a claim of exemption is	The committee appreciates this comment on whether the forms should provide for an optional request for stay of enforcement of judgment, and has considered the suggestion that Form EJ-160 instead be revised to provide notice to the levying officer, financial institution and creditor that the debtor is seeking a judicial determination. However, this suggestion is beyond the scope of the proposal and does not appear to be authorized by the new statute.

			submitted to the levying officer and the creditor submits its opposition. In all situations, PLC encourages the Judicial Council to refer to a judgment debtor "submitting" the claim of exemption form to the levying officer, rather than using the word "filing." Judgment debtors, especially those who are representing themselves and/or who primarily speak a language other than English, are often confused by the term "filing," which implies filing with the court. Using the word "submit" or "submitting" or something similar, better removes that presumption that the forms should be filed with the Court. Hardship Exemption One very important piece of SB 616 is the hardship exemption which now applies to bank accounts. A debtor, upon receiving notice of a bank levy, may submit a claim of exemption to the levying officer stating that it would cause the debtor a hardship if his or her bank account were to be levied. The debtor will need to provide a supporting financial statement, just like in the case of claims of exemption to wage garnishment based on hardship, but very clearly is allowed to make the argument. On EJ-150, on the Information Sheet, An additional paragraph should be added under the third section, "Information About Deposit Accounts," that states that a debtor may also claim that the funds in a deposit account are exempt from levy	The committee appreciates this suggestion and will take it into account in its future work. The committee appreciates this comment relating to the hardship exemption established by section 704.225, and has modified EJ-155 to include this additional exemption in the list under "Deposit Accounts." However, the committee declines to add a paragraph to EJ-150 page 2 "Information About Deposit Accounts" because the "Information for Judgment Debtors" section above informs debtors of the existence of non-automatic exemptions such as the new hardship exemption and an additional paragraph would be repetitive.

			because such a levy would cause the debtor a hardship under Section 704.225. On EJ-155, the list of applicable exemptions, the line reading "Deposit Accounts (generally) ….. CCP §704.220" should also include CCP §704.225. Additionally, on EJ-156, a section should be added under the current section for 704.220 that reads: 704.225 Deposit account, upon debtor's claim of exemption for hardship $5 and have the footnote 5 state: No specific exemption amount; based on debtor's claim of exemption for hardship. Because Form EJ-155 is often not attached to the notice that the debtor receives, PLC suggests specifically citing to the form in which the exemptions can be found, either EJ-155 and/or EJ-156. Ex Parte Application Writ of Execution and Notice of Levy In our experience, the majority of debtors receive notice of the levy from the bank directly, which usually provides some type of letter on the bank's own letterhead notifying the debtor that their bank account is or will be frozen as a result of a levy. Sometimes the bank attaches a copy of the instructions it received from the local levying officer and sometimes the	The committee appreciates this comment relating to the hardship exemption established by section 704.225, and has modified EJ-155 to include this additional exemption in the list under "Deposit Accounts." The committee has considered this suggestion, but because form EJ-156 is a list of the "current dollar amounts" of various exemptions that are revised on a triennial schedule, whereas the hardship exemption is not a set dollar amount, the committee believes its inclusion would be misplaced on this form. The committee appreciates this suggestion and has modified form EJ-150 page 2 to include a specific reference to form EJ-155 (a reference to form EJ-156 is already included). The committee appreciates this comment indicating that some debtors may not have copies of the Writ of Execution and Notice of Levy and a litigant's best efforts to obtain these documents should be sufficient for form EJ-157. While the committee is sympathetic to this possibility,

			bank does not attach a copy. Either way, the debtor almost never receives a copy of the writ of execution and notice of levy itself. Requiring the debtor to attach those documents will lead to many ex parte applications being denied as a result. PLC suggests that the language instead state that the debtor make their best efforts to obtain copies of the writ of execution and notice of levy so that they may be attached to the ex parte, but making clear that an ex parte cannot be denied solely because a debtor failed to attach such copies. In many cases, those documents are in the plaintiff's/creditor's possession and in the court's possession, and the debtor is the party least able to access the documents.	copies of these documents may be necessary for a court to fully and fairly evaluate the ex parte application. Therefore, the committee declined to revise the proposed new form to eliminate the request that the Writ of Execution and Notice of Levy be attached, but instead modified the form to allow for a litigant to provide an explanation as to why the Writ or Notice of Levy is not attached.
			Procedural Questions PLC agrees with the judicial council's interpretation that either the debtor or the creditor may request a hearing on shortened notice (or, in certain circumstances request an order without a hearing) for the court to determine how and to which accounts the exemption applies. PLC proposes that the preference be for a hearing on shortened notice, since this process results in the loss of property and many of these will be filed by self-represented litigants who may need the opportunity to be heard.	The committee appreciates this comment relating to the ex parte hearing process. As noted, though the statute is somewhat unclear, the committee has determined that it allows for either an order shortening time for a hearing on the application or an ex parte order without a hearing where appropriate. The forms themselves do not indicate a "preference," and it will be up to the court in each individual case to determine whether it is appropriate to rule without a hearing.
			PLC also proposes that a court may determine that an exemption be applied across accounts, or	The committee has considered this comment favoring allocation of the automatic deposit

The committee has considered all of the comments on this issue, unclear statutory language, contradictory legislative history, and potential policy implications of various interpretations. As co-sponsors of SB-616 or members of a co-sponsoring organization, we are intimately familiar with the purposes of these important changes to the law; and we support your efforts to bring the forms into compliance with the new legislation. The legislation and forms are a critical step towards protecting low-income Californians. The proposed forms convey most of the new information, and we appreciate the painstaking efforts the Judicial Council has clearly already put into these forms. However, in some instances, the proposed forms misstate the law, exclude crucial exemptions, or are unnecessarily confusing. Our work with low-income residents convinces us that our clients and other vulnerable people across California will be best protected if the proposed forms are revised to better reflect the wording and intent of SB-616. Below, we specify the various issues we identified with theproposed forms and recommend alternative language where appropriate. A. Proposed Form EJ-157-INFO Should Be	The committee appreciates the commenters' support for the proposal if modified.

			Revised to Clarify That Under Certain Circumstances, the Financial Institutions Will Automatically Apply the Exemption SB-616 was implemented in order to help remove the great burdens debtors face when their accounts are levied. Unfortunately, we believe that proposed form EJ-157-INFO may mislead debtors into believing that, in all circumstances, they must file an ex parte application in order to prevent their financial institution from levying their bank account. Specifically, EJ-157-INFO, paragraph 2, states that when a judgment debtor applies for an order to specify how to designate a specific account or how to allocate the exemption amount multiple accounts, the debtor should apply an ex parte application as soon as possible because the financial institution is required to act promptly in sending funds to the levying officer. This can be confusing for the debtor because it implies that the bank is not required to automatically apply the exemption absent a court order. The debtor only needs to file an ex parte application if the debtor wants to designate to which account the bank account(s) the bank should apply the exemption when the debtor has multiple accounts in the same institution. We recognize the great difficulty in creating forms that are both easily comprehensible,	The committee has considered this comment and modified EJ-157-INFO to incorporate the spirit of this and similar suggestions to provide further specificity and clarity about the new law and the debtor's and creditor's respective rights and obligations with respect to the automatic deposit account exemption.

			while also distinguishing the complicated details that are not necessarily easy to convey on a form. However, we feel it is very important that this distinction clear to the debtor. In order to achieve an accurate recitation of the law, we propose that the following language replace paragraph 2 of EJ-157-INFO: 1. Automatic exemption: California Code of Civil Procedure section 7040.220 provides that financial institutions must apply automatic exemption when served a notice of levy on a judgment debtor's deposit account, if the underlying judgment is not based on wages owed or child or spousal support. 2. If you only have one bank account, your bank will automatically exempt the amount protected under the law. If you have more than one bank account, use this form to ask the court to tell your bank how to apply the exemption. If you do not, you will still receive the exemption but your financial institution will decide to which account(s) it applies. B. Proposed Forms Fail to Acknowledge 704.225's Hardship Exemption and Effective Date Although SB-616 only directs the Judicial Council to amend or adopt forms necessary to implement CCP § 704.220, it is important that the new forms properly convey debtors' full range of exemptions, especially those contained within SB-616. Unfortunately the proposed forms do not mention newly created exemption CCP § 704.225, the "hardship exemption." This exemption is already in effect, as it became law on January 1, 2020. It allows a judgment debtor to exempt money in their deposit account "to the extent necessary for the support of the judgment debtor and the spouse and dependents of the judgment debtor." This gives debtors the opportunity to exempt even more money in their deposit account than the current automatic exemption amount authorized by 704.220. Essentially, the hardship exemptions allows a debtor the opportunity to argue that, even though the money in their deposit account is not otherwise exempt from collection, due to the debtor's actual financial needs to support themselves and their dependents, the court should exempt that money needed for support from collection. This new section is not mentioned on any of the updated forms. It is imperative that all Judicial Council forms are properly updated to reflect the stand-alone hardship exemption for deposit accounts. In order to achieve this, we propose the following amendments: 1. EJ-155, "Exemptions from the EJ-156, "Current Dollar Amounts of Exemptions from Enforcement of Judgments," should be revised to include, on page 2, "704.225 Money in a Judgment Debtor's Deposit Account that is not otherwise exempt, but is needed for the support of the judgment debtor and the spouse and dependents of the judgment debtor." Since this amount varies dependent on the debtor, it might be prudent to include an asterisk for the dollar amount, which varies according to each debtor's particular situation. C. Proposed Forms EJ-150 and EJ-157 Fail to Properly Implement SB-616 and Contain Confusing and Misleading Statements As previously stated, SB-616 directs the Judicial Council to amend and adopt forms necessary to implement CCP § 704.220. Due to the tremendous impact that the automatic deposit account exemption is going to have on debtors; as well as the procedural changes that financial institutions will have to understand in order to carry out the mission of SB-616, it is	The committee appreciates this comment relating to the hardship exemption established by section 704.225, and has modified EJ-155 to include this additional exemption in the list under "Deposit Accounts." The committee has considered this suggestion, but because form EJ-156 is a list of the "current dollar amounts" of various exemptions that are revised on a triennial schedule, whereas the hardship exemption is not a set dollar amount, the committee believes its inclusion would be misplaced on form EJ-156.

			imperative that the forms properly convey the law in a clear and easy to understand fashion. Unfortunately, beyond the suggestions made above, proposed EJ-150 and EJ-157 contain numerous misstatements of the law and often utilize unnecessarily confusing and ambiguous language. As a result, we propose the modifications outlined below. i. Changes Needed to Comply with Statutory Language In order to make proposed EJ-150 comply with the law, the following changes must be made: 1. On page 2, under "Information For Judgment Debtor": a. Paragraph 2 states "…assigned a tracking number by the US Postal Service." Unlike the language in the form, the relevant statute, CCP § 703.520, does not limit the carrier to the US Postal Service. Instead, the statute states: "assigned a tracking number by the United States Postal Service or another common carrier…" Moreover, individuals filling out the form may have easier access to a common carrier that is not the US Postal Service. Thus, the form should be changed to state "…assigned a tracking number by the US Postal Service or	The committee appreciates this suggestion and has modified the proposal accordingly.

			other common carrier." In order to make proposed EJ-157 comply with the law, the following changes should be made: 1. On page 1, paragraphs 3 and 4, the form directs the movant to attach a copy of the Writ of Execution and Notice of Levy that is at issue. Unfortunately, many debtors do not end up receiving copies of the Writ of Execution and/or Notice of Levy. In some cases, debtors file exemption documents based on incomplete secondhand information they obtained from their bank because they never received a copy of the Writ and/or Notice. The statute does not require the movant to attach the Writ or Notice to the ex parte application. Thus, this requirement is an unnecessary requirement that may lead to debtors not exercising their exemption rights simply because they do not have copies of the documents. We recognize it would be very difficult for a court to issue an order on an ex parte application without being able to review copies of the Writ and Notice, and that it is definitely preferable that these documents are attached to the ex parte application. Thus, we suggest that paragraph 3 of the proposed form be revised to state: "(Attach a copy, if available.) And that paragraph 4 be revised to state: "(identify and attach a copy of each notice, if available):"	The committee appreciates this comment indicating that some debtors may not have copies of the Writ of Execution and Notice of Levy and the suggestion that copies should only be required "if available." While the committee is sympathetic to this possibility, copies of these documents may be necessary for a court to fully and fairly evaluate the ex parte application. Therefore, the committee declines to revise the proposed new form to eliminate the request to attach the Writ of Execution and Notice of Levy, but instead modified the form to allow for a litigant to provide an explanation as to why the Writ or Notice of Levy is not attached.

			ii. Changes Suggested to Make Forms More User Friendly and Understandable In order to make EJ-150 less confusing, the following changes should be made: 1. On page 2, under "Information For Judgment Debtor": a. Paragraph 2 and 3 should be switched so it's clear that a debtor does not need to file a claim of exemption to receive the automatic protections of SB- 616.	The committee appreciates this suggestion and has modified the proposal accordingly.
			b. Paragraph 2 states "A list of exemptions is attached." Most debtors obtain Judicial Council forms electronically, where a list of exemptions is not attached. Instead of this language, the form should be revised to cite to the form that contains the list of exemptions. Specifically, the second sentence should read: "A list of exemptions ~~is attached~~ can be found on form EJ- 155."	The committee appreciates this suggestion and has modified the proposal accordingly.
			c. Paragraph 2 states "…by filing a claim of exemption and one copy with levying officer as provided…" This should be corrected to read: "…by filing a claim of exemption and one copy of the claim with the levying officer…"	The committee appreciates this suggestion and has modified the proposal accordingly.
			d. Paragraph 3 states, "There are automatic exemptions that financial institutions should apply to a deposit account before providing funds to the levying officer." Proposed language: "This notice does not mean that all of the money in your bank	The committee has considered this comment and suggested modified language, but determined that the existing language is equally clear and more succinct.

			account will be levied and paid to the creditor. There are legal protections that exempt (protect) your money up to a certain dollar amount. See below for more information about money in deposit accounts." 2. On page 2, under "Information About Deposit Accounts": a. Paragraph 1 states that "there is an automatic exemption for money in a deposit account…" Since SB-616 is a new law, and financial institutions will be utilizing these forms while navigating their new legal responsibilities, it is important that financial institutions are aware that they are the entities that will be effectively applying the automatic exemption. Therefore, we suggest the sentence be reworded to state: "If the levy is not to satisfy a judgment for wages owed, child or spousal support, or liability to the state government, ~~there is an automatic exemption for~~ financial institutions must automatically exempt money in a deposit account up to a certain dollar amount, under section 704.220 of the Code of Civil Procedure, with no claim of exemption required." b. Paragraph 1 instructs financial institutions to reference form EJ-156 for the exemption amount, but does not explain where. EJ-156 is two pages of lists, which can be daunting. In order to make clearer where financial institutions should refer for information about required exemption	The committee appreciates this suggestion and has modified the proposal accordingly. 			amounts, the instructions should be rewritten to read "See form EJ-156, Code Civ. Proc. Section 704.220, for the exemption amount." c. Paragraph 2 can similarly be rewritten to provide more specific instructions to readers: "(See form EJ-156, Code Civ. Proc. Section 704.080, for the exemption amounts.)" D. Procedural Question We agree with the Judicial Council's interpretation that either the debtor or the creditor may request a hearing on shortened notice (or, in certain circumstances request an order without a hearing) for the court to determine how and to which accounts the exemption applies. We propose that the preference be for a hearing on shortened notice, since this process results in the loss of property and many of these will be filed by self-represented litigants who may need the opportunity to be heard. Given the expansion of protections for low-income Californians and the difference these new protections will make in their lives, it is critical that those who stand to benefit are correctly and adequately informed of their rights. Revising forms to reflect the statutory meaning and creating new forms to make accessing those rights easier is critical to the law's success. In conclusion, we wish to reiterate our	statutory specificity would be atypical and the reference to the form itself should provide sufficient explanation. The committee has considered this suggestion, but declines to further revise the form to include specific statutory references, as this level of statutory specificity would be atypical and the reference to the form itself should provide sufficient explanation. The committee appreciates this comment relating to the ex parte hearing process. As noted, though the statute is somewhat unclear, the committee has determined that it allows for either an order shortening time for a hearing on the application or an ex parte order without a hearing where appropriate. The forms themselves do not indicate a "preference," and it will be up to the court in each individual case to determine whether it is appropriate to rule without a hearing. The committee appreciates the commenter's perspective on the impact SB 616 may have on various stakeholders; no further response required.

We have no idea yet of the full impact this poorly written law will have upon all those involved with judgment enforcement, including the courts, the clerks and the sheriffs. I could go on and on about what a mess this is going to cause because the law put the requirements for compliance on the financial institutions, which now have a huge added burden to processing levies. 			Judgment Creditors will have no way of knowing if the financial institutions have properly complied or not. The new law makes no provisions for whether the financial institution is suppose to freeze the money for any length of time or whether the financial institution will simply not freeze the automatically exempt amount of $1,724.00 and allow the judgment debtor full access to said money after the levy. If the judgment debtor has multiple accounts at the same financial institution and the financial institution happens to apply the $1,724.00 exemption to EACH account, the judgment debtor may be able to liquidate all the funds before the judgment creditor has a chance to do anything. I can see a future where the judgment creditors will go into court ex parte, no notice and get the order BEFORE doing the levy and then serving the order about allotment of the funds WITH the Notice of Levy to assure the judgment debtor doesn't abscond with the funds once they know about the levy. What a mess!! Anyway, here are my suggestions and comments regarding the Invitation to Comment: Specifically, you asked for comments regarding a stay of enforcement. A "Stay of Enforcement" would benefit and be requested for only by the judgment debtor whereas a "Temporary Injunction or Restraining Order" would benefit and be requested by the judgment creditor to prevent the financial	The committee appreciates this comment on whether the forms should provide for an optional request for stay of enforcement of judgment, and the suggestion that the existing space for "other rulings" on the form order may be sufficient . 			institution from allowing the debtor to remove funds from the deposit account until the court makes an order about the exemption. If either party goes into court quickly, the court is able to make whatever ruling is necessary to protect either side. Your new EJ-159 Order already has a spot for "Other Rulings" in item 9 where the court can order stay of enforcement or temporarily restrain the financial institution or whatever else is required. I, personally, have gone into court ex-parte on many occasions over the years to obtain an order from the court for whatever I needed to accomplish my goal. It is impossible to know all the fallout of this new law until it starts being applied and used. The pitfalls are many and only time will tell how this law will twist and turn the multiple accounts scenario. Suggestions for the Writ of Execution, EJ-130 form: 1) In the caption on page 1 on top of the EJ-130, I suggest changing the wording of "Plaintiff :" to "Plaintiff/Petitioner :" and changing "Defendant :" to "Defendant/Respondent :", so it is clear for Family Law and Probate cases. I then suggest adding a check box below the area for the debtor(s) name and address indicating below each "Includes additional names pursuant to an affidavit of identity". This itemization area is rarely used. If you opt not to make this change, please change the second check box for item 24c to read "on Attachment 24c" rather than "Attachment 23c", since you changed that item's number. This will aid judgment creditors when filling out this form to figure out in what capacity a person is required to be served by statute. 14) On page 2, item 2 under 'Information for Judgment Debtor', I suggest a slight revision to the language, as follows: "A list of exemptions is ~~attached~~ enclosed" "The date of filing is calculated as the date ~~it~~ the claim is received by the levying officer, or the date of the postmark if the claim is mailed and assigned a tracking number by the ~~US~~ U.S. Postal Service." 15) On page 2, item 3 under 'Information for Person Other Than Judgment Debtor', I suggest a slight revision to the language, as follows: "You must complete the accompanying Memorandum of Garnishee within 10 days (CCP 701.030(a))" 16)On page 2, item 5 under 'Information for Person Other Than Judgment Debtor', I suggest a slight revision to the language, as follows: " Make checks payable to the levying officer	specific statutory references, as this level of statutory specificity would be atypical. The statute does not use the word "defendant" and said word is inaccurately used here. A "defendant" is an adverse party in a civil action [CCP §308]. After judgment is entered, the party against whom the judgment is rendered is the "judgment debtor" to the judgment [CCP §680.250], irrespective of whether said party was the Plaintiff or the Defendant in the action or proceeding. Referring to the judgment debtor as "defendant" could be confusing when a judgment is rendered against the Plaintiff, which happens routinely.	The committee appreciates this suggestion and has modified the proposal accordingly.

			Suggestions for the Exemptions From the Enforcement of Judgments EJ-155 form: 1) On page 1, in the fourth paragraph, I suggest a slight revision to the language, as follows: " If you believe the assets that are being levied on are exempt, file the claim of exemption form that your received ~~from the levying officer~~ with the Notice of Levy packet. Registered Process Server also serve levy packets under CCP §699.080 and are required to serve the judgment debtor with all the documents listed in CCP §700.010, therefore, the claim of exemption form may be received from an RPS. If this form says to use the claim of exemption form "from the levying officer", the judgment debtors may call the levying officers to obtain a form from them, which is unnecessary. 2) On page 1, at the lower left where you are adding "Deposit Accounts (generally)", I would like to suggest alternatively you use "Deposit Accounts (minimum only)" or	The committee appreciates this suggestion and has modified the proposal accordingly. 			What would the implementation requirements be for courts—for example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), changing docket codes in case management systems, or modifying case management systems? New and revised procedures reflecting the new section would be required. The new forms would need to be posted and distributed. Information would need to be shared with court staff and judicial officers. New filings would need to be added and tested in the case management system. Case processing staff and courtroom clerks would need to be trained. Executive Summary and Origin

The California Supreme Court recently held that courts that do not provide official court reporters must upon request make court reporters or other means to create a verbatim record available to parties entitled to a waiver of fees. (Jameson v. Desta (2018) 5 Cal.5th 594.) The Civil and Small Claims Advisory Committee proposes a new court reporter request form, a revised fee waiver information form, and amendments to California Rules of Court, rule 2.956, to help fee waiver recipients avail themselves of rights recognized in Jameson. The proposal would also revise that rule to reflect recent changes to Government Code section 68086.

Background

Jameson v. Desta (2018) 5 Cal.5th 594 (Jameson) involved a plaintiff who had been granted a fee waiver under Government Code section 68631. Such a litigant is entitled to a waiver of court fees for the attendance of an official court reporter at a court proceeding (Gov. Code, § 68086(b).) In Jameson, however, the plaintiff was not provided a court reporter at his civil trial because the Superior Court of San Diego County, as a result of a reduction in its budget, had adopted a policy under which no official court reporters were provided at most civil trials, even for persons who qualified for a fee waiver. Under the policy, a party could hire and pay for a private court reporter. (Jameson, at p. 598.) It was undisputed that if an official court reporter had been made available for the trial in this case, the plaintiff would have been entitled to the court reporter's attendance at the trial without the payment of a fee. (Id. at p. 600.) The Supreme Court concluded that the superior court policy was inconsistent with prior in forma pauperis judicial decisions and with the public policy of facilitating equal access to the courts. (Id. at p. 599.) It stated:

> [I]n order to satisfy the principles underlying California's in forma pauperis doctrine and embodied in the legislative public policy set forth in [Government Code] section 68630, subdivision (a), when a superior court adopts a general policy under which official court reporters are not made available in civil cases but parties who can afford to pay for a private court reporter are permitted to do so, the superior court must include in its policy an exception for fee waiver recipients that assures such litigants the availability of a verbatim record of the trial court proceedings, which under current statutes would require the presence of an official court reporter.

The Supreme Court concluded that a superior court must generally make available to fee waiver recipients an official court reporter or other valid means to create an official verbatim record, for purposes of appeal, upon request. (Jameson, supra, 5 Cal.5th 594 at p. 599.)

Last year, the Judicial Council, at the recommendation of the Civil and Small Claims Advisory Committee, approved revisions to several fee waiver forms and to rule 2.956[1] so that they would reflect the Jameson holding. At the time the recommendation was made, the advisory committee noted that it would this year recommend a statewide form that could be used by a fee waiver recipient to ask for a court reporter.

Also at that time, the council received comments from several legal service organizations asserting that the recommendation did not go far enough and asking that the council make further rules. The commenters proposed, among other things, that courts should be required to provide court reporters automatically at any hearing in which a fee waiver recipient is a party, with no request required. The council directed the committee to consider the suggestions made by the commenters, and the committee is currently doing so.

While the committee believes that the suggestions to require a court reporter in all courtrooms where a fee waiver recipient appears, without any request, expand the holding of Jameson, it is an expansion that could be approved as a matter of policy by the council. Therefore, the committee is attempting to gather information about what resources might be required and the possibility and practicability of providing court reporters for all hearings and proceedings not otherwise being electronically recorded, if a fee waiver recipient is appearing. The information is particularly important in light of the shortage of court reporters across the state. The committee will report back to the council when it has completed more work in this area.

In the meantime, the advisory committee proposes moving forward with the planned statewide court reporter request form and with further revisions to an information sheet provided to fee waiver applicants. In addition, the committee is circulating proposed statewide rules for the process of requesting a court reporter.

The Proposal

Rule 2.956

Rule 2.956 was originally adopted to implement the mandate in Government Code section 68086 that the council adopt rules to ensure that:

- The parties are given adequate and timely notice of the availability of an official court reporter (rule 2.956(b));
- If no official court reporter is available, a party is authorized to arrange for a certified shorthand reporter to serve as a court reporter pro tem at that party's expense (rule 2.956(c)); and
- None of the other fees in the statute are to be charged if the party arranges for and pays for the court reporter pro tem (rule 2.956(d)).

Last year, at this committee's recommendation, the council revised subdivision (c) of the rule to reflect the Jameson holding, by dividing it into two parts. The rule now provides that in the instance where there is no official court reporter at a hearing or trial in a civil case, a party could either (1) arrange for one at the party's expense; or (2) if a fee waiver recipient, ask the court to provide one. The rule also notes that the request should be made in compliance with local rules.

Amendments Relating to Fee Waiver Recipients

Statewide process. Commenters urged the council that, if a request is to be required to ensure the presence of a court reporter, then there should be a statewide process for doing so, in order to provide consistency across the state. They asserted that this would simplify the process for fee waiver recipients, who are frequently self-represented, and for the legal service agencies and self-help centers who provide information to those parties. The proposed amendments to rule 2.956 prescribe such a process, identifying a form that should be used to request a court reporter and setting out a timeline: 10 days before the proceeding for which court reporter is wanted, or, if the proceeding is set on a shorter time frame, as soon as practicable. (See proposed rule 2.956(c)(2)(A) and (B).) The proposed rule also provides that once a request for a court reporter for a trial is made, it does not have to be repeated if the trial is continued to a later date. (See proposed rule 2.956(c)(2)(C).) In addition, because the commenters asserted that, as drafted, the rule may be unclear as to whether the court would not only provide a court reporter for a fee waiver recipient who asked for one, but do so at no charge to that party, a statement to that effect has been added. (See proposed rule 2.956(c)(2)(D).)

Court mandate. Commenters also asserted that if the rule is to require that a fee recipient has to request a court reporter, then it should also mandate that, under Jameson, the request must be granted. They asserted that, as it currently stands, rule 2.956(c) leaves the decision up to the court. As written, the rule is focused on the party's action. As to the court's action, the rule (and this committee) assumes that the court will follow the law under Jameson. However, in light of the concerns raised, such a mandate has been included in the proposed amendments. (See proposed rule 2.956(c)(2).)[2]

Amendments Relating to Other Parties

Assembly Bill 2664 recently amended Government Code section 68086(d)—the provision requiring the council to adopt certain rules regarding court reporters—effective January 1, 2019. The amendments to the rule proposed here would incorporate the change in the Government Code.

The primary amendment of the statute was to provide that, if an official court reporter is not available and a party arranges for the presence of a certified shorthand reporter in the courtroom, the court shall appoint that reporter as the pro tem court reporter unless there is good cause shown for the court to refuse to appoint the appointment. The rule has been amended to reflect this mandate. (See proposed rule 2.956(c)(1).)

New and Revised Forms

The proposed Request for Court Reporter by Party With a Fee Waiver (form FW-020) is based on several current local court forms. It contains instructions at the top, including a statement of the timeline for filing included in the proposed rule of court, and a request for a court reporter at the bottom. It also asks the party to confirm that the party has received a fee waiver in the case.

In light of the concerns raised by the commenters last year that fee waiver recipients would not know to ask for a court reporter and that they might not understand that the court reporter would be free if requested, the committee is also proposing the addition of a new paragraph to the end of the Information Sheet on Waiver of Superior Court Fees and Costs (form FW-001-INFO) to provide more information to all fee waiver recipients about requesting court reporters. In addition, a cross-reference to the new request form has been added to item 1 on the first page of the form, to the item for court reporter fees in the list of waived fees.[3]

[2] In light of the changes to the rule to add provisions arising from the Jameson decision, the beginning of the rule has also been amended to reflect that it no longer is based solely on Government Code section 68086.

[3] The committee would like specific comments on this revision, specifically as to whether the cross-reference to this form may make the information sheet confusing. The committee notes that similar cross-references are not provided for other items for which a fee waiver recipient may have to make a request, such as telephonic appearance fees or sheriff's fees to give notice.

Alternatives Considered

The committee considered not recommending statewide rules and forms for the process of requesting a court reporter, instead leaving it to each court to develop its own process, to allow the courts more flexibility, particularly in light of the severe shortage of court reporters in many areas. However, advisory members from legal service organizations pointed out that without such statewide procedures, it could be difficult for fee waiver recipients to determine how to request a court reporter. The committee concluded it should develop the rules and forms to aid self-represented parties in particular, and to circulate those rules for further comments.

The committee considered but did not include in the request form a statement contained on several of the local court forms currently in use, that a party to the action who is not a fee waiver recipient will be responsible for a proportionate share of the cost of the court reporter's attendance at the hearing. While this statement is correct for long cause matters (see Gov. Code, § 68068(a)(2)), the committee concluded that it is not information that needs to be included on a form being filed by the fee waiver recipient.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

The holding in Jameson v. Desta, mandating that courts provide a court reporter for civil hearings for a fee waiver recipient who requests one if no electronic recording is available, has had a significant fiscal and operational impact on courts. This proposal, to provide a statewide form and a timeline for making such requests, is an attempt to aid parties, self-help centers, and legal advisors by providing a consistent process across the state for requesting court reporters. The new form and rules will require training of court personnel, although the proposed 10-day notice period for the request appears to be consistent which what is being used by many courts already.

Request for Specific Comments

In addition to comments on the proposal as a whole, the advisory committee is interested in comments on the following:

- Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose of providing a consistent process for fee waiver recipients?
- On form FW-001-INFO, is it helpful to add a cross-reference to the new court reporter request form (proposed form FW-020) among the list of waived fees, or does the addition make the list more confusing? (See footnote 3.)

The advisory committee also seeks comments from courts on the following cost and implementation matters:

- Would the proposal provide cost savings? If so, please quantify.
- What would the implementation requirements be for courts—for example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), changing docket codes in case management systems, or modifying case management systems?
- Would 3 months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation?
- How well would this proposal work in courts of different sizes?

(c) Party may procure reporter or request reporter if granted fee waiver

If the services of an official court reporter are not available for a hearing or trial in a civil case, a party may:

(1) Arrange for the presence of a certified shorthand reporter to serve as an official pro tempore reporter, whom the court must appoint unless there is good cause shown to refuse to do so. It is that party's responsibility to pay the reporter's fee for attendance at the proceedings, but the expense may be recoverable as part of the costs, as provided by law; or

(2) If the party has been granted a fee waiver, ~~In compliance with any local court rules,~~ request that the court provide an official reporter for attendance at the proceedings, whom the court must provide if the party has been granted a fee waiver and if the court is not electronically recording the hearing or trial.

(A) The request should be made by filing a Request for Court Reporter by Party with a Fee Waiver (form FW-020).

(B) The party should file the request 10 calendar days before the proceeding for which a court reporter is desired, or as soon as practicable if the proceeding is set with less than 10-days' notice.

(C) If the party has requested a court reporter for a trial, that request remains in effect if the trial is continued to a later date.

(D) The court reporter's attendance is to be provided at no fee or cost to the fee waiver recipient.

INFORMATION SHEET ON WAIVER OF SUPERIOR COURT FEES AND COSTS

If you have been sued or if you wish to sue someone, if you are filing or have received a family law petition, or if you are asking the court to appoint a guardian for a minor or a conservator for an adult or are an appointed guardian or conservator, and if you (or your ward or conservatee) cannot afford to pay court fees and costs, you may not have to pay them in order to go to court. If you (or your ward or conservatee) are getting public benefits, are a low-income person, or do not have enough income to pay for your (or his or her) household's basic needs and your court fees, you may ask the court to waive all or part of those fees.

1. To make a request to the court to waive your fees in superior court, complete the Request to Waive Court Fees (form FW-001) or, if you are petitioning for the appointment of a guardian or conservator or are an appointed guardian or conservator, complete the Request to Waive Court Fees (Ward or Conservatee) (form FW-001-GC). If you qualify, the court will waive all or part of its fees for the following:

   - Filing papers in superior court (other than for an appeal in a case with a value of over $25,000)
   - Making and certifying copies
   - Giving notice and certificates
   - Sheriff's fee to give notice
   - Sending papers to another court department
   - Court fee for telephone hearing
   - Reporter's fee for attendance at hearing or trial, if the court is not electronically recording the proceeding and you request that the court provide an official reporter (see form FW-020)
   - Assessment for court investigations under Probate Code section 1513, 1826, or 1851
   - Preparing, certifying, copying, and sending the clerk's transcript on appeal
   - Holding in trust the deposit for a reporter's transcript on appeal under rule 8.833 or 8.834
   - Making a transcript or copy of an official electronic recording under rule 8.835

2. You may ask the court to waive other court fees during your case in superior court as well. To do that, complete a Request to Waive Additional Court Fees (Superior Court) (form FW-002) or Request to Waive Additional Court Fees (Superior Court) (Ward or Conservatee) (form FW-002-GC). The court will consider waiving fees for items such as the following, or other court services you need for your case:

   - Jury fees and expenses
   - Fees for court-appointed experts
   - Other necessary court fees
   - Fees for a peace officer to testify in court
   - Court-appointed interpreter fees for a witness

3. If you want the Appellate Division of the Superior Court or the Court of Appeal to review an order or judgment against you and you want the court fees waived, ask for and follow the instructions on Information Sheet on Waiver of Appellate Court Fees (Supreme Court, Court of Appeal, Appellate Division) (form APP-015/FW-015-INFO).

IMPORTANT INFORMATION!

- You are signing your request under penalty of perjury. Answer truthfully, accurately, and completely.
- The court may ask you for information and evidence. You may be ordered to go to court to answer questions about your ability, or the ability of your ward or conservatee, to pay court fees and costs and to provide proof of eligibility. Any initial fee waiver you or your ward or conservatee are granted may be ended if you do not go to court when asked. You or your ward's or conservatee's estate may be ordered to repay amounts that were waived if the court finds you were not eligible for the fee waiver.
- Public benefits programs listed on the application form. In item 5 on the Request to Waive Court Fees (item 8 of the Request to Waive Court Fees (Ward or Conservatee)), there is a list of programs from which you (or your ward or conservatee) may be receiving benefits, listed by the abbreviations they are commonly known by. The full names of those programs can be found in Government Code section 68632(a), and are also listed here:
  - Medi-Cal
  - Food Stamps—California Food Assistance Program, CalFresh Program, or SNAP
  - SSP—State Supplemental Payment
  - Supp. Sec. Inc.—Supplemental Security Income (not Social Security)
  - County Relief/Gen. Assist.—County Relief, General Relief (GR), or General Assistance (GA)

- IHSS—In-Home Supportive Services
- CalWORKs—California Work Opportunity and Responsibility to Kids Act
- Tribal TANF—Tribal Temporary Assistance for Needy Families
- CAPI—Cash Assistance Program for Aged, Blind, or Disabled Legal Immigrants

• If you receive a fee waiver, you must tell the court if there is a change in your finances, or the finances of your ward or conservatee. You must tell the court within five days if those finances improve or if you, or your ward or conservatee, become able to pay court fees or costs during this case. (File Notice to Court of Improved Financial Situation or Settlement (form FW-010) or Notice to Court of Improved Financial Situation or Settlement (Ward or Conservatee) (form FW-010-GC) with the court.) You may be ordered to repay any amounts that were waived after your eligibility, or the eligibility of your ward or conservatee, came to an end.

• If you receive a judgment or support order in a family law matter: You may be ordered to pay all or part of your waived fees and costs if the court finds your circumstances have changed so that you can afford to pay. You will have the opportunity to ask the court for a hearing if the court makes such a decision.

• If you win your case in the trial court: In most circumstances the other side will be ordered to pay your waived fees and costs to the court. The court will not enter a satisfaction of judgment until the court is paid. (This does not apply in unlawful detainer cases. Special rules apply in family law cases and in guardianships and conservatorships. (Gov. Code, § 68637(d), (e); Cal. Rules of Court, rule 7.5.).

• If you settle your civil case for $10,000 or more: Any trial court-waived fees and costs must first be paid to the court out of the settlement. The court will have a lien on the settlement in the amount of the waived fees and costs. The court may refuse to dismiss the case until the lien is satisfied. A request to dismiss the case (use form CIV-110) must have a declaration under penalty of perjury that the waived fees and costs have been paid. Special rules apply to family law cases.

• The court can collect fees and costs due the court. If waived fees and costs are ordered paid to the trial court, or if you fail to make the payments over time, the court can start collection proceedings and add a $25 fee plus any additional costs of collection to the other fees and costs owed to the court.

• The fee waiver ends. The fee waiver expires 60 days after the judgment, dismissal, or other final disposition of the case or earlier if a court finds that you or your ward or conservatee are not eligible for a fee waiver. If the case is a guardianship or conservatorship proceeding, see California Rules of Court, rule 7.5(k) for information on the final disposition of that matter.

• If you are in jail or state prison: Prisoners may be required to pay the full cost of the filing fee in the trial court but may be allowed to do so over time. See Government Code section 68635.

• If you want a record made of your court hearing or trial: If you receive a fee waiver and if the court is not electronically recording the proceeding, you may ask the court to have an official court reporter attend your hearing or trial at no cost to you so there can be a record of the proceeding. You should use form FW-020 to make the request, which you should file at least 10 calendar days before a scheduled court date, or as soon as you can if the court date is set with less than 10-days' notice.

The fee for the court reporter being at your hearing will be waived (there will be no cost to you), but note that having a court reporter does not guarantee the right to get a free transcript.

INSTRUCTIONS

If you have been granted a waiver of court fees and costs, you may use this form to request the services of an official court reporter for a hearing or trial for which a court reporter is not normally available and for which electronic recording is not provided.

- You must make a request 10 calendar days before any court date for which you want a reporter. If the court date is scheduled with less than 10-days notice, you should file the request as soon as you can.
- If you do not file the request on time, the court may be unable to provide a court reporter on the date requested and may have to reschedule the hearing or trial.
- There will be no fee to you for the court reporter being at the hearing.
- Note:* Having a court reporter may not guarantee the right to get a transcript.

  If you are eligible, the court will try to schedule a court reporter for the court proceeding but cannot guarantee that one will be available at that time.

Executive Summary and Origin

Assembly Bill 800 provides that a party who is participating in the Safe at Home program (an address confidentiality program run by the Secretary of State) may appear pseudonymously in a civil action, and that the true name of the party and any other identifying characteristics are to be kept confidential by the court and other parties in the case. The Civil and Small Claims Advisory Committee proposes new forms to be used by pseudonymous parties to (1) move the court to seal previously filed documents that disclose that party's name or other identifying characteristics; (2) apply to the court ex parte to hear such a motion on shortened time; and (3) provide comprehensive instructions to self-represented litigants as to how to complete, file, and serve these forms.

Background

The Safe at Home address confidentiality program administered by the Secretary of State is intended to protect the privacy and safety of individuals who have been subjected to domestic violence, sexual assault, stalking, human trafficking, or elder or dependent abuse. (Gov. Code, § 6205.) It permits victims to maintain a confidential mailing address in order to shield their location from abusers. AB 800[1] added section 367.3 to the Code of Civil Procedure, effective January 1, 2020, providing that a party who is an active participant in the Safe at Home address confidentiality program (defined in the bill as a "protected person") may appear in a civil action under a pseudonym (Jane Doe, John Doe, or Doe) and may exclude or redact from all documents filed in court any identifying characteristics, including name, addresses (physical or online), age, or marital status. (Code Civ. Proc., § 367.3(a).)

Under the new law, a protected person who decides to appear pseudonymously must file with the court and serve on all other parties a "confidential information form" specifying the protected person's true name and identifying characteristics that have been excluded or redacted from a document filed in court and using the protected person's pseudonym. The court and the other parties must thereafter keep this information confidential by redacting or omitting it from documents filed in the case and using the protected person's pseudonym. (Code Civ. Proc., § 367.3(b)(1)–(2).) The Judicial Council is required to adopt rules and forms, as appropriate, to implement the new statute. (Code Civ. Proc., § 367.3(e).) The committee therefore circulated for public comment from December 13, 2019, through February 11, 2020, proposed Confidential Information Form Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 367.3 (form SH-001). The committee anticipates that the council will adopt a version of that form, effective September 1, 2020.

The Confidential Information Form does not provide confidentiality for documents that have already been filed in court. Specifically, a protected person who wishes to appear pseudonymously in a civil matter that has already begun faces a potential problem that a similarly situated plaintiff[2] does not. Before the defendant or other party in a civil action has appeared or has had any opportunity to advise the court of the party's desire to proceed pseudonymously under the new law, the plaintiff will likely have publicly disclosed the defendant's (or other party's) identifying information in a complaint, petition, or other paper filed in court. With the current proposal, the committee seeks to address the potential need to seal previously filed documents that disclose a protected person's identifying characteristics.

Code of Civil Procedure section 367.3, does not address the potential need for a protected person to request confidentiality for documents previously filed by another party. The new law, however, expressly provides that any protected person may file a motion to seal all or part of a record in accordance with rules 2.550 and 2.551 of the California Rules of Court. (Code Civ. Proc., § 367.3(b)(4).) The committee has concluded that the provision authorizing the court to seal records may be used to retroactively seal the name and identifying characteristics of a protected party that have been included in court files accessible to the public.

The Proposal

The Civil and Small Claims Advisory Committee is proposing seven new forms that would enable a defendant or any other party who is an active participant in the Safe at Home program to (1) move the court to seal previously filed court records that disclose the true name and/or other identifying characteristics of a protected person and (2) seek shortened time for a hearing on such a motion.

The committee anticipates that many of those likely to take advantage of the pseudonymous filing provisions of the Safe at Home program under Code of Civil Procedure section 367.3 will be self-represented litigants. In the committee's view, without forms and instructions, these parties would likely find it confusing and difficult to avail themselves of the protections of the Safe at Home program. In response to a question in the invitation to comment circulated for proposed Confidential Information Form, the committee received comments suggesting that the Judicial Council should approve forms for both (1) a motion to retroactively seal previously filed documents that disclose identifying characteristics and (2) an ex parte application to shorten time to hear the retroactive sealing motion. The committee believes that such forms will facilitate a protected person's effort to obtain the protections of Code of Civil Procedure section 367.3 by asking the court, on shortened time, to remove that person's name and other identifying characteristics from the public record.

The committee proposes two sets of new forms and a related instructional form, as follows:

- Forms to move the court to retroactively seal previously filed documents:
    - Motion to Place Documents Under Seal Under Address Confidentiality Program (Safe at Home) (form SH-020)
    - Declaration in Support of Motion to Place Documents Under Seal Under Address Confidentiality Program (Safe at Home) (form SH-022)
    - Order on Motion to Place Documents Under Seal Under Address Confidentiality Program (Safe at Home) (form SH-025)

- Forms to apply to the court for shortened time for a hearing on the retroactive sealing motion:
    - Ex Parte Application for Order Shortening Time for Hearing on Motion to Place Documents Under Seal Under Address Confidentiality Program (Safe at Home) (form SH-030)
    - Declaration Regarding Notice and Service of Ex Parte Application for Order Shortening Time for Hearing on Motion to Place Documents Under Seal Under Address Confidentiality Program (Safe at Home) (form SH-022)
    - Order on Ex Parte Application for Order Shortening Time for Hearing on Motion to Place Documents Under Seal Under Address Confidentiality Program (Safe at Home) (form SH-035).

- Instructions on the retroactive sealing motion and the ex parte application to shorten time (Instructions for Motion to Place Documents Under Seal Under Address Confidentiality Program (Safe at Home) (form SH-020-INFO))

Because the protection of the new law may be invoked in all civil cases, the committee intends that a protected party in any type of civil case be able to use the proposed forms. For this reason, the forms list the types of parties as "plaintiff/petitioner" and "defendant/respondent/objector" in the captions and in items asking for a party's identity.[3]

The forms are discussed below.

Motion forms to retroactively seal previously filed documents (SH-020, SH-022, SH-025)

A protected party's filing of the proposed Confidential Information Form alone will not shield a protected person from disclosure of identifying information in previously filed documents. Code of Civil Procedure section 367.3 expressly authorizes a protected person to file a motion to seal all or part of a record already in the public file (see Code Civ. Proc., § 367.3(b)(4).). The proposed motion forms are intended to facilitate a protected person's motion to retroactively seal documents.

A protected person in a civil matter—typically (but not always) a defendant—would serve and file the proposed new motion form and related papers[4] to ask the court to seal, and to maintain as confidential, previously filed documents that disclose the protected person's true name and identifying characteristics. Such documents might include a complaint or petition, a summons, a civil cover sheet, a proof of service, etc. The documents to be retroactively sealed would be listed on the motion form (which includes a checklist of the most likely types).

The protected person would also prepare, serve, and lodge with the court redacted versions of the previously filed documents that the party is requesting be sealed. If the motion to retroactively seal is granted, the court clerk could then substitute the redacted versions for the originals of those documents in the public file and place those original documents under seal.

Proposed forms are primarily for defendants but also for plaintiffs

Although the new forms—the motion form (form SH-020) and the supporting declaration form (form SH-022)—would likely be used primarily by defendants seeking to seal documents previously filed by plaintiffs/petitioners, plaintiffs/petitioners may also have occasion to move a court to seal previously filed documents. Such would be the case if, for example, plaintiffs/petitioners join the Safe at Home program and become protected persons only after filing a complaint or petition. The new forms accommodate the possibility that the party filing them may be a plaintiff, petitioner, or other party as well as a defendant or respondent.

[3] The committee is seeking specific comments on whether the proposed forms should be revised so that a protected party in any type of civil case is aware that the party may use the forms.

[4] The committee is proposing the motion and supporting declaration forms as mandatory forms to ensure that protected persons, many of whom may be self-represented, meet all the procedural requirements of a motion to seal under California Rules of Court, rules 2.550 and 2.551. The committee is seeking specific comments on whether these forms should be mandatory or optional.

Status as an active participant constitutes "specific facts" sufficient to support the motion
Rule 2.550 of the California Rules of Court requires that the court "specifically state the facts" that support its findings to place a document under seal. (Cal. Rules of Court, rule 2.550(e).) The committee concluded that the applicant's status as an active participant in the Safe at Home program under Code of Civil Procedure section 367.3, itself, constitutes the "specific facts" supporting the motion necessary to retroactively seal documents.

The new forms allow for a request to change the public register of actions to replace true name with pseudonym
The new motion form (form SH-020) and corresponding order form (form SH-025) both prompt the moving party and the court, respectively, to request or order that the public register of actions be changed to replace the pseudonymous party's true name with a pseudonym. The order form further prompts the court to indicate that previously filed documents have retroactively been placed under seal.

Ex parte* application forms to shorten time to hear motion to retroactively place documents under seal (SH-030, SH-032, SH-035)
Unless the moving party applies for an ex parte order shortening time to hear the motion to retroactively place documents under seal, the hearing on the sealing request could take place months after the motion to seal is filed. During that period, the protected person's identifying characteristics would be a matter of public record.

The committee proposes forms that would facilitate a protected person's request to shorten time on the hearing for the sealing motion. These ex parte application forms track California Rules of Court, rules 3.1203–3.1207 (rules governing ex parte applications). The court's ex parte order (assuming it is granted and an expedited hearing is set) could serve as notice of the hearing on the retroactive sealing motion (form SH-020). The applicant would need only to arrange to have the ex parte order served on the other parties.[5]

Instructions for Motion to Place Documents Under Seal Under Address Confidentiality Program (Safe at Home)* (form SH-020-INFO)
The instructions provide detailed guidance on how a protected person should complete, serve, and file both an ex parte application shortening time and the underlying motion to seal previously filed documents. The instructions are stated in plain terms so that a self-represented litigant can understand them. A separate sheet of instructions is particularly warranted given that a protected person will need to file two separate sets of forms with the court (the ex parte application forms and the retroactive sealing motion forms).

[5] As with the motion forms, the committee is proposing that the ex parte application forms be adopted as mandatory forms, to ensure that the parties comply with the detailed requirements for ex parte applications stated in California Rules of Court, rules 3.1203–3.1207. The committee is seeking specific comments on whether the forms should be mandatory or optional.

Alternatives Considered

The committee considered but rejected not offering ex parte forms to shorten time. Without such forms, the applicant would have to be instructed on the complexities of how to file an ex parte application to shorten time under the detailed provisions of rules 3.1203–3.1207 of the California Rules of Court. Forms dedicated to this purpose would simplify matters for self-represented applicants in particular, and, presumably, also for courts.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

Because of the Legislature's enactment of the new statute, clerks, judicial officers, and court legal services and self-help offices will require training on the new pseudonymous filing process permitted for participants in the Safe at Home program, and on the level of confidentiality to be accorded to certain information relating to such parties. New training materials and internal procedures will need to be developed. As a result of the new law, courts may have to change computerized case management systems to allow for changing the name of the case in the public register of actions if a party invokes these new provisions after a case has been initiated. This proposal for new forms is intended to assist parties and courts in complying with the new procedures required by statute. Training will also be needed on the use of the forms, particularly if they are adopted as mandatory.

Request for Specific Comments

In addition to comments on the proposal as a whole, the advisory committee is interested in comments on the following:

- Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose?
- Would the proposed forms—and particularly the forms' captions—work satisfactorily in probate and family law cases in which a protected person files under Code of Civil Procedure section 367.3? If not, how should they be revised?
- The forms (other than the order forms) are proposed as mandatory forms. Should they be optional instead and, if so, why?

The advisory committee also seeks comments from courts on the following cost and implementation matters:

- What would the implementation requirements be for courts—for example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), changing docket codes in case management systems, or modifying case management systems?
- Would three months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation?
- How well would this proposal work in courts of different sizes?

INSTRUCTIONS FOR MOTION TO PLACE DOCUMENTS UNDER SEAL UNDER ADDRESS CONFIDENTIALITY PROGRAM (SAFE AT HOME)

(Note: This form may be used only in cases in which one or more parties are enrolled in the Safe at Home program and using a pseudonym under Code of Civil Procedure section 367.3.)

1. Applicable Law. The Safe At Home program is an address confidentiality program run by the Secretary of State. Active participants in that program who are parties in a civil court proceeding (a civil court case) may use a pseudonym (Jane Doe, John Doe, or Doe) in place of the party's true name in the civil court proceeding. Pseudonymous parties (parties using a Doe name in a civil court proceeding) may exclude or redact (black out) their true names and identifying characteristics (defined below) from documents they file in court, as provided in Code of Civil Procedure section 367.3 by using the Confidential Information Form (SH-001) to provide the information to the court confidentially.

2. Purpose of Motion to Seal. The purpose of the Motion to Place Documents Under Seal Under Address Confidentiality Program (Safe at Home) (form SH-020) is to enable a person who is an active participant in the Safe at Home address confidentiality program and who wishes to appear under a pseudonym (a Doe name) in a civil court case, but whose name is already in the case files, to have the person's name and identifying characteristics removed from the public record by sealing documents that have already been filed in that case. If the court grants the motion, documents that were previously filed with the court and that disclose the Safe at Home participant's name and identifying characteristics will be replaced by versions of those documents with that information redacted (blacked out).

   Important: Form SH-020 and related papers are not to be used when a party is filing the party's own documents, because the party can redact the party's name and other information from the documents to be included in the public file and use a Confidential Information Form (form SH-001) to provide the information in confidence to the court and keep it out of the public files. If at the time the pseudonymous party is filing documents, the party wants to have such documents sealed as well (as permitted under the statute), the party must follow the procedures stated in California Rules of Court, rules 2.550 and 2.551. Form SH-020 and related papers are to be used only when a pseudonymous party wants the court to seal documents that were previously filed.

3. What Documents Should Be Sealed. Documents that may have already been filed in court and that are likely to disclose the pseudonymous party's name and identifying characteristics may include any or all of the following:
   - Complaint or petition
   - Summons
   - Civil cover sheet
   - Order or notice from the court
   - Proof of service

   "Identifying characteristics" that the party using the pseudonym may keep confidential include, but are not limited to, name or any part thereof, address or any part thereof, city or unincorporated area of residence, age, marital status, relationship to another party, race or ethnic background, telephone number, email address, social media profiles, online identifiers, contact information, or any other information, including images of the party using a pseudonym, from which that party's identity can be discerned. (Code Civ. Proc., § 367.3(a)(1).) (See Code Civ. Proc., § 367.3(a)(2) for a list of "online identifiers.")

4. How to Ask the Court to Seal the Documents. To ask the court to seal the documents, the pseudonymous party needs to complete the following forms:

   - Confidential Information Form (form SH-001). The pseudonymous party will write on this form the party's true name and any identifying characteristics that the party is redacting (blacking out) on any of the other forms or documents to be filed because the party wishes to keep that information confidential.
   - Motion to Place Documents Under Seal Under Address Confidentiality Program (Safe at Home) (form SH-020). The pseudonymous party should use the pseudonym (Doe name) and should not include any identifying characteristics on this form, including when identifying the plaintiff/petitioner or the defendant/respondent at the top of the form. The party should sign the form using the pseudonym.
   - Declaration in Support of Motion to Place Documents Under Seal Under Address Confidentiality Program (Safe At Home) (form SH-022). The pseudonymous party should use the pseudonym (Doe name) and should not include any identifying characteristics on this form, including when identifying the plaintiff/petitioner or the defendant/respondent at the top of the form. The party should sign the form using the pseudonym.
   - Redacted versions of the documents. The pseudonymous party must create copies of the documents the party wants the court to seal because they disclose identifying characteristics, including the party's true name. On these copies, the party must redact (black out) identifying characteristics, including the party's true name. If the court grants the motion to seal, the redacted versions of the documents submitted by the party will be substituted in the court's file for the original versions of those documents. The original versions of the documents that disclose the party's identifying characteristics will be placed in a confidential location not open to the public.

5. How to Ask the Court to Seal the Documents as Soon as Possible. To remove the name and identifying characteristics from the public record as quickly as possible, the pseudonymous party should ask the court to schedule a hearing sooner than is normally done. To do so, the party should file an Ex Parte Application for Order Shortening Time for Hearing on Motion to Place Documents Under Seal Under Address Confidentiality Program (Safe at Home) (form SH-030) asking the court to set an early date for a hearing on the motion to place the documents under seal. Steps for filing the ex parte application to shorten time are as follows:

- The ex parte application to shorten time must be filed in the court where the case has been filed. The applicant can determine which court this is from the documents that have already been filed in the case.
- The applicant must check with that court for local rules as to when and where the applicant must appear for the court to consider the ex parte application for an order shortening time.
- The applicant must follow the rules relating to ex parte applications that are set out in California Rules of Court, rules 3.1203--3.1207. These rules describe the following requirements:
  - o Notice of the ex parte application to shorten time. The applicant must let the other party or parties in the civil court proceeding know that the applicant is filing an ex parte application to shorten time for a hearing on the Motion to Place Documents Under Seal Under Address Confidentiality Program (Safe at Home) (form SH-020). Notice to the other party or parties may be given in person or by phone, fax, overnight mail, or email (if emailed notice is permitted in the case already). The other party or parties must be informed by 10 a.m. the day before the court is to consider the ex parte application to shorten time, unless there is a good reason such notice could not or should not be given.
  - o Service of papers. Copies of the ex parte application to shorten time and all related papers must be given to the other party or parties in the civil court proceeding as soon as reasonable, and before the ex parte court appearance, if possible.
  - o Appearance at court. The applicant must appear in court at the time and place that the applicant learned from the court's local rules is when and where the court hears ex parte applications.

6. Forms to Complete for Ex Parte Application. Before the time the court is scheduled to hear the ex parte application to shorten time, the pseudonymous party must complete and file the following forms with the court:

- Ex Parte Application for Order Shortening Time for Hearing on Motion to Place Documents Under Seal Under Address Confidentiality Program (Safe at Home) (form SH-030).
- Declaration Regarding Notice and Service of Ex Parte Application for Order Shortening Time for Hearing on Motion to Place Documents Under Seal Under Address Confidentiality Program (Safe at Home) (form SH-032).

Wherever the forms ask for the pseudonymous party's name, the party should use the pseudonym (Doe name) and should not include any identifying characteristics---including the party's true name. If the pseudonymous party is not represented by an attorney, the party should sign the forms using the pseudonym.

7. Filing With the Court. The completed ex parte application forms should be filed with the court clerk. When filing the ex parte application forms, the applicant may (but is not required to) attach the completed forms requesting sealing of documents (listed in instruction 4) to the ex parte documents described in instruction 6. (The court will not file the forms requesting sealing until after the court has scheduled a hearing on the motion to seal (form SH-020).)

There will be a filing fee unless the party is eligible for a fee waiver. (If the party cannot afford the fee and has not already received a fee waiver, the party may file a Request to Waive Court Fees (form FW-001) with the other forms.)

The applicant should take the original of each of the forms to be filed to the court clerk, along with two extra copies of each form. The clerk will file the original forms and will stamp and give back the copies.

8. What to Do After Court Makes an Order. When the court decides on the applicant's ex parte application to shorten time for a hearing on the motion to place previously filed documents under seal (form SH-030 and related papers), the court will usually make a written order.

- If the court's order sets a hearing date. If the parties to the case are present at the ex parte application hearing, the order and copies of all the documents for the motion to place documents under seal (forms SH-020, SH-022, and SH-025) may be given to them at that time. If some or all parties are not present at the ex parte hearing, the applicant must arrange for another person to serve (deliver to) the absent parties a copy of the court's written order and the papers listed in instruction 4. The person serving the documents must be over 18 years old and cannot be a party to the court proceeding. The person serving the documents must fill out and sign a proof of service, which may be done using the form Proof of Service---Civil (form POS-040). The proof of service must be filed in court, typically by the applicant.

- If the court's order does not set a hearing date. The court's order may not set a hearing date on the motion to seal documents (form SH-020 and related papers). If this is the case, the pseudonymous party will have to ask the court clerk's office for a date, time and location on the court's regular law and motion hearing calendar for a hearing on the motion to place documents under seal (form SH-020). The pseudonymous party will also need to prepare a notice of hearing in accordance with California Rules of Court, rule 3.1110, and arrange to have someone serve the notice of hearing on the other parties in the case, along with the other documents listed in instruction 4. Finally, the pseudonymous party will need to arrange for someone else to serve these documents on (deliver them to) the other parties. The person serving the documents must be over 18 years old and cannot be a party to the court proceeding. The person serving the documents must fill out and sign a proof of service, which may be done using the form Proof of Service---Civil (form POS-040). The proof of service must be filed in court, typically by the pseudonymous party.

- On the date the court sets for the hearing on the motion to place documents under seal (form SH-020), the pseudonymous party should appear at the hearing either in person or by phone (if by phone, notice must be given in advance to the court and the other side).

- Once the court makes an order on the motion to place documents under seal (form SH-025 or an order prepared by the court), the pseudonymous party should arrange for someone to serve the other parties with this order as soon as possible.

- If the court determines that the pseudonymous party is not an active participant in the Safe at Home program and denies the motion to place documents under seal, then those documents and the name of the party who made the motion to place documents under seal will be available in the public record.

Executive Summary and Origin

This proposal from the Civil and Small Claims Advisory Committee would provide for a pilot project to apply new discovery provisions for unlimited civil cases. The pilot project would be optional for courts and voluntary for parties appearing in participating courts. The proposal is based on the recommendations of the Commission on the Future of California's Court System to streamline the discovery process in order to lessen the cost of litigation and therefore provide greater access to justice for civil litigants.

Background

The Commission on the Future of California's Court System: Report to the Chief Justice (Futures Commission report), issued in May 2017, included recommendations relating to civil cases. The Civil and Small Claims Advisory Committee has been directed to develop, with input from stakeholders, recommendations to the Judicial Council to implement the recommendations in the report that existing civil procedures be amended to reduce litigation costs by streamlining the discovery process and facilitating the early exchange of information.[1] The advisory committee previously circulated a more extensive legislative proposal that it believed would further the recommendations of the Futures Commission by changing the discovery process for most civil parties across the state but, in light of comments received, decided an optional pilot project is a better first step.

The Proposal

The streamlined discovery pilot project would be available in any county in which the court agrees to take part. Currently, the leadership of the Superior Courts of Santa Clara and San Bernardino Counties have indicated their willingness to take part in the pilot project, and other courts are welcome to, also. The court would establish the pilot project by local rule or standing order, with approval of the council, subject to the statewide rules for the project.[2]

Under the proposed rules, a court in the pilot project would provide information about the project to plaintiffs in all unlimited general civil filings[3] by providing them with the proposed Streamlined Discovery Pilot Project Information Sheet (form CIV-200-INFO) and [Proposed] Consent Order for Streamlined Discovery Pilot Project (form CIV-200-INFO), and the plaintiffs would be required to serve copies of those forms on defendants.[4] If parties in a case agree to participate in the program, discovery in that case will be stayed until an initial round of disclosures is completed.[5] Unless the parties stipulate to a different schedule, plaintiffs are to make their initial disclosures (including production of documents) within 30 days after either the filing of the proposed consent order or the filing of a responsive pleading by the defendant, whichever is later. Defendants are to make their disclosures (also including production of documents) within 45 days after the plaintiff's disclosure.[6] Failure to provide information in the disclosures could serve as a basis for evidentiary or issue preclusion sanctions.

In addition, following the initial disclosures, participants in the pilot will be limited, to the 35 specially prepared interrogatories and requests for admission currently permitted by statute, with any further interrogatories or requests permitted only if agreed to or by court order on a showing of good cause.[7] In other words, a "good cause" declaration

[3] "General civil case" means all civil cases except probate, guardianship, conservatorship, juvenile, and family law proceedings; small claims proceedings; unlawful detainer proceedings; petitions to prevent civil harassment, elder abuse, and workplace violence; petitions for name change; election contest petitions; and petitions for relief from late claims. (Cal. Rules of Court, rule 1.6.)

[4] See proposed rule. 3.1031. A court interested in the pilot project has suggested that all parties be required to meet and confer at the beginning of the litigation to consider whether to take part in the pilot project. Specific comments are being requested on this suggestion.

[5] See proposed rule 3.1034(a).

[6] See proposed rule 3.1033.

[7] See proposed rule 3.1034(b). A court interested in the pilot has suggested that the rules also limit the number of document requests. The statutes currently place no limit on this type of request, so a specific limit would need to be developed. Specific comments are requested on this proposal.

would be insufficient by itself to allow for additional discovery. Parties will also be able to request supplementation of the disclosures during the litigation.[8]

Because the program is voluntary, parties may ask that a case be removed from the pilot project at any time, either by stipulation of all the parties or by noticed motion to the court.[9]

Under this proposal, participating courts will provide incentives to parties to join the pilot project by providing the parties with informal discovery conferences when requested, giving them preference in hearing dates on noticed discovery motions if needed,[10] and setting earlier trial dates if requested by all parties.[11] Specific comments are being requested here as to other potential incentives that could be provided.

Courts will be responsible for keeping track of the cases in the pilot project, to ensure that the council can evaluate the effect of the project.[12]

Alternatives Considered

As noted above, the advisory committee considered the alternative of proposing legislation that would have mandated changes to the civil discovery process similar to the ones proposed here in many general civil cases across the state. In light of concerns raised by commenters, the committee decided instead to recommend a voluntary pilot project so that the results could be evaluated before proposing statewide changes.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

Because the proposal focuses on discovery between the parties, the primary impact will be on litigants and their counsel. Participating courts will be holding more informal discovery conferences, which may be a change for the court, but the committee expects that, in the long run, the proposal will lessen the amount of court appearances required for discovery motions. Participating courts will also need to track information about cases involved in the pilot project and report it to the Judicial Council.

Request for Specific Comments

In addition to comments on the proposal as a whole, the advisory committee is interested in comments on the following:

- Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose?
- Should all parties in general civil matters in courts participating in the pilot project be required to meet and confer over whether to take part in the project? If so, when should the deadline for that meeting and conference be: within 30 days of service of the complaint, within 30 days of service of the first responsive pleading, or some other date?
- Should the pilot project include a limitation on the number of demands for inspection, copying, etc. under Code of Civil Procedure section 2031, et seq. that a party can make without showing good cause for more? If so, what should that number be?
- What incentives, in addition to those in the proposal, could be provided by courts to encourage participation in the pilot project?

The advisory committee also seeks comments from courts on the following cost and implementation matters:

- Would the proposal provide cost savings? If so, please quantify.
- What would the implementation requirements be for courts—for example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), changing docket codes in case management systems, or modifying case management systems?
- Would three months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation?
- How well would this proposal work in courts of different sizes?

California Rules of Court, rules 3.1030–3.1039 would be adopted, effective January 1, 2021, as follows:

Chapter 3. Streamlined Discovery Pilot Project

Rule 3.1030. Authorization for pilot project

(a) Authorization

With the approval of the Judicial Council, a superior court may, through June 30, 2025, establish by local rule or standing order a pilot project to permit streamlined discovery in unlimited general civil cases to be conducted under the rules in this chapter.

(b) Participation by court

To obtain approval of the Judicial Council to conduct a streamlined discovery pilot project under these rules, a court must inform the council of its intent to do so and agree to comply with the rules in this chapter.

Rule 3.1031. Information to parties about streamlined discovery pilot project

(a) Court-provided information package for plaintiffs

Any court taking part in the streamlined discovery pilot project must, at the time the complaint is filed in any unlimited general civil case, make available to a plaintiff the Streamlined Discovery Pilot Project Information Sheet (form CIV-200-INFO) and a blank [Proposed] Consent Order for Streamlined Discovery Pilot Project (form CIV-200), which the parties may use to agree to join the pilot project.

(b) Availability of information on court website

A court may make the streamlined discovery pilot project forms available on its website, as long as paper copies are also made available at the clerk's office.

(c) Information package served to defendants by plaintiff

In all unlimited general civil cases filed in a court participating in the pilot project, the plaintiff must serve a copy of the Streamlined Discovery Pilot Project Information Sheet (form CIV-200-INFO) and a blank [Proposed] Consent Order for Streamlined Discovery Pilot Project (form CIV-200) on each defendant, together with the complaint or as soon thereafter as practicable.

Rule 3.1032. Agreement of Parties

Parties who agree to take part in the streamlined discovery pilot project must file a [Proposed] Consent Order for Streamlined Discovery Pilot Project (form CIV-200) signed by all parties to the action stating that all parties agree to serve on all other parties an initial disclosure, with information and documents as provided in this chapter, and agree to be subject to and comply with the rules in this chapter.

Rule 3.1033. Initial Disclosures

(a) Timing

(1) Timing. Except when otherwise agreed to in the proposed consent order or subject to (2), plaintiff must serve that party's initial disclosure within 30 days after the filing of the stipulation or a responsive pleading by defendant, whichever is later. Defendant must serve that party's initial disclosure within 45 days after plaintiff's disclosure was served on defendant.

(2) Continuances. At any time before the service of the disclosures, parties may stipulate to continue the date for disclosures for up to 120 days for the purpose of conducting settlement discussions or mediation. Further continuance may be obtained by motion to the court with a showing of good cause or requested at an informal discovery conference, case management conference, or trial setting conference.

(b) Content

The initial disclosure must include the following information and attachments:

(1) The name and, if known, address and telephone number of each individual likely to have discoverable information that the disclosing party may use to support its claims or defenses—along with the subjects of that information—unless the use would be solely for impeachment.

(2) For inspection or copying, all documents, electronically stored information, and tangible things that the disclosing party has in its possession, custody, or control and may use to support its claims or defenses, unless the use would be solely for impeachment.

(3) For inspection and copying, any insurance agreement under which an insurance business may be liable to satisfy all or part of a possible judgment in the action or to indemnify or reimburse for payments made to satisfy the judgment.

(4) In a personal injury case, the name and address of each physician, dentist, or other health care provider who treated plaintiff, and the dates of treatment, as well as a copy of all medical records, bills, and evidence of payment.

(5) A description of the types of damages claimed and, if known, a statement of economic damages incurred.

(c) Signatures

Each initial disclosure must be signed by an attorney of record in the attorney's own name or by the party personally. By signing, an attorney or party certifies that to the best of the person's knowledge, information, and belief, formed after a reasonable inquiry, the disclosure is complete as to the information then known or, if it cannot by reasonable effort be complete, explaining why.

(d) Preservation of evidence

Parties must not destroy and must preserve all items that are identified or that fall within the categories identified in the initial disclosure until the case has been completed.

Rule 3.1034. Other Discovery

(a) Initial stay of discovery

Once the parties have agreed to take part in the streamlined discovery pilot project, all further discovery is stayed until the time for initial disclosures has passed and the party propounding discovery has completed and served the required disclosure.

(b) Limits on written discovery requests

Any party seeking to propound more interrogatories or requests for admission than allowed as a matter of right under the Code of Civil Procedure may do so only by stipulation; agreement of the parties at an informal discovery conference, case management conference, or trial setting conference; or order of the court on a showing of good cause on a noticed motion.

(c) Supplemental disclosures

Twice before the initial trial date and once after the initial trial date has been continued, a party may propound a request for a supplemental disclosure to elicit any later-acquired information bearing on a previously made disclosure, subject to the time limits on discovery.

Rule 3.1035. Failure to Disclose

A party or attorney who willfully fails to comply with initial or supplemental disclosure requirements may be subject to the sanctions for misuse of the discovery process—including monetary, issue, and evidentiary sanctions—as provided in Code of Civil Procedure section 2023.030.

Rule 3.1036. Discovery Disputes

(a) Informal conference

On request of a party taking part in a streamlined discovery pilot project, the court will conduct an informal discovery conference to address any discovery matters in dispute between the parties.

(b) Noticed motion

If a discovery matter is not resolved at the informal conference and a party files a noticed motion to resolve the issue, the case will be given preference over other general civil cases for purposes of setting the hearing date.

Rule 3.1037. Trial Setting

If requested by all parties, a case in the streamlined discovery pilot project will be given preference over other general civil cases for purpose of setting a trial date.

Rule 3.1038. Withdrawal From Pilot Project

Any party may request that a case be removed from the streamlined discovery pilot project, either by stipulation of all parties or by a showing of good cause on a noticed motion.

Rule 3.1039. Tracking Cases in Pilot Project

A court taking part in the streamlined discovery pilot project must track all cases in the pilot—by case number, party names, and length of time to disposition—to aid the Judicial Council in evaluating the effectiveness of the pilots.

JUDICIAL OFFICER

STREAMLINED DISCOVERY PILOT PROJECT
INFORMATION SHEET

1. Pilot Project. The Judicial Council of California has authorized a streamlined discovery pilot project in certain courts throughout the state, including the one this case has been filed in. The goal of the pilot project is to decrease litigation costs in civil cases through streamlining civil discovery, leading to greater access to the courts. This streamlining is to be accomplished by bilateral early disclosures of factual information supporting claims or defenses, identity of known witnesses, and production of key documents; limiting written discovery unless good cause is shown for more; and having discovery disputes handled, at least initially, through informal discovery conferences. Participation in the program is voluntary.

2. Deciding whether to take part. When an unlimited civil case is filed in a court taking part in the streamlined discovery pilot project, the plaintiff is to serve this information sheet and [Proposed] Consent Order for Streamlined Discovery Pilot Project (form CIV-200) on all parties in the case with the complaint, or as soon as practicable. The parties should read through this sheet and the applicable rules (California Rules of Court, rules 3.1030–3.1039) and consider whether their case would benefit from being part of the pilot project and its more streamlined discovery procedures. The project is not intended to be used for cases with self-represented parties.

   To encourage participation in the pilot project, participating courts agree to provide informal discovery conferences at the request of any participating party for any discovery disputes that should arise. If a formal noticed motion is required after such a conference, the court will give preference to the parties in setting a date for that hearing. (See rule 3.1036.) In addition, if the parties all agree, the case will be given preference over other general civil cases in trial setting. (See rule 3.1037.)

3. Initial Disclosures and Discovery. Agreeing to participate in the streamlined discovery pilot project means agreeing to comply with the rules relating to discovery set out in Cal. Rules of Court, rules 3.1033 through 3.1036. These include the following provisions:

   a. The parties are to make initial disclosures of information at the beginning of the case, without any request from the other side. What is required is set out in rule 3.1033(b) and includes:

      - The identity of each individual likely to have discoverable information, along with the subject of that information;
      - All documents, electronically stored information, and tangible things that the disclosing party has and may use to support its claims or defenses;
      - Any insurance agreement that may be available to satisfy all or part of a possible judgment in the action or to indemnify or reimburse for payments made to satisfy the judgment; and
      - In a personal injury case, the identity of all treating health care providers, dates of treatment, and copies of all medical records and bills.

      The information provided is to be based on a reasonable inquiry and be complete as to the information then known to the disclosing party.

   b. Under the timeline in the rules, plaintiff is to serve the initial disclosure first, within 30 days after the filing of either the proposed consent order or the defendant's responsive pleading, whichever is later; defendant is to serve that party's initial disclosure within 45 days thereafter. However, the parties can agree to their own timeline, as long as they include it in the proposed consent order. (Rule 3.1033(a))

   c. Parties must preserve any items that are identified in, or are within categories that are identified in, the initial disclosures. (Rule 3.1033(d).)

   d. Other discovery cannot begin until after the time for the initial disclosures is completed. The number of interrogatories or requests for admission that a party may put forward is limited to the number allowed as a matter of right within the Code of Civil Procedure, unless the party seeing to ask more either obtains the agreement of the other parties (either in a stipulation or at an informal discovery conference, case management conference, or trial setting conference) or obtains an order of the court on a showing of good cause. (Rule 3.1034(a)–(b).)

   e. A party can ask another party to supplement the disclosure with any later acquired information twice before the initial trial date, and once more if the initial trial date is continued. (Rule 3.1034(c).)

   f. A party or attorney who willfully fails to comply with the disclosure requirements may be subject to the sanctions for misuse of the discovery process set out in Code of Civil Procedure section 2020.030, including monetary, issue, and evidentiary sanctions. (Rule 3.1035.)

Executive Summary

The Criminal Law Advisory Committee recommends amending California Rules of Court, rule 4.130, to reflect recent legislative changes by deleting an advisory committee comment stating that expert reports are publicly accessible court documents, and replacing outdated terminology to describe mental health disorders.

Recommendation

The Criminal Law Advisory Committee recommends that the Judicial Council amend rule 4.130 of the California Rules of Court, effective September 1, 2020, to:

1. Delete the advisory committee comment that states "[t]he expert reports, unless sealed under rule 2.550, are publicly accessible court documents"; and

2. Replace references to a "mental disorder" with "mental health disorder."

The text of the amended rule is attached at pages 3–4.

Relevant Previous Council Action

Rule 4.130 was adopted effective January 1, 2007. It was most recently amended, effective January 1, 2020, to incorporate changes resulting from Assembly Bill 1810 (Stats. 2018, ch. 34), a bill that significantly altered the statutory landscape for mental competency proceedings.

Analysis/Rationale

Effective January 1, 2020, new Penal Code section 1369.5 states that documents submitted to a court in a mental competency proceeding are "presumptively confidential, unless otherwise provided by law." The advisory committee comment that states "[t]he expert reports, unless sealed under rule 2.550, are publicly accessible court documents" conflicts with this new law.

Also effective January 1, 2020, Assembly Bill 46 (Stats. 2019, ch. 9) amended, in relevant part, Penal Code section 1367 to replace references to "mental disorder" with "mental health disorder." The bill's intent was to replace outdated terminology used to describe mental health conditions and individuals with mental health conditions. (Sen. Rules Com., Off. of Sen. Floor Analyses, 2d reading analysis of Sen. Bill No. 46 (2019—2020 Reg. Sess.), June 5, 2019, p. 1.)

Policy implications

This proposal has no major policy implications. It aligns with the Judicial Council's policy to keep rules consistent with related statutes.

Comments

This proposal did not circulate for public comment because the proposed changes are minor and unlikely to create controversy, and therefore may be adopted without circulation. (See Cal. Rules of Court, rule 10.22(d)(2).)

Alternatives considered

The committee discussed whether to add a provision to the rule addressing the presumptive confidentiality of documents submitted in a mental competency proceeding but decided that such a provision was unnecessary because Penal Code section 1369.5 clearly addresses the issue.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

No fiscal or operational impacts are anticipated as a result of amending rule 4.130. Fiscal and operational impacts to court procedures are a result of the legislative changes.

(a)–(c) * * *

(d) Examination of defendant after initiation of mental competency proceedings

(1) * * *

(2) Any court-appointed experts must examine the defendant and advise the court on the defendant's competency to stand trial. Experts' reports are to be submitted to the court, counsel for the defendant, and the prosecution. The report must include the following:

(A) A brief statement of the examiner's training and previous experience as it relates to examining the competence of a criminal defendant to stand trial and preparing a resulting report;

(B) A summary of the examination conducted by the examiner on the defendant, including a summary of the defendant's mental status, a diagnosis under the most recent version of the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders, if possible, of the defendant's current mental health disorder or disorders, and a statement as to whether symptoms of the mental health disorder or disorders which motivated the defendant's behavior would respond to mental health treatment;

(C) A detailed analysis of the competence of the defendant to stand trial using California's current legal standard, including the defendant's ability or inability to understand the nature of the criminal proceedings or assist counsel in the conduct of a defense in a rational manner as a result of a mental health disorder;

Executive Summary and Origin

The Criminal Law Advisory Committee recommends revising optional criminal forms used to petition for dismissals and reductions of convictions and request sealing of arrest records to reflect statutory changes allowing for automatic record relief.

Background

Proposition 64, effective November 9, 2016, includes resentencing and dismissal provisions that permit persons previously convicted of designated marijuana-related offenses to obtain a reduced conviction or sentence, if they would have received the benefits of the law had it been in effect when the crime was committed. To implement Prop. 64, the Judicial Council approved forms to be used to petition the court for relief and make the appropriate orders under Health and Safety Code section 11361.8 (Link A).

Assembly Bill 1793 (Stats. 2018, ch. 993) (Link B) added section 11361.9 to the Health and Safety Code (Link C), which removed the burden of seeking relief for marijuana-related convictions from a defendant-petitioner and made it the responsibility of government agencies. Section 11361.9 requires the state Department of Justice to identify past convictions potentially eligible for relief under Health and Safety Code section 11361.8 and notify the relevant prosecuting agency, which may or may not challenge granting relief based on ineligibility or a perceived public safety risk. If a court grants relief, it must notify the state Department of Justice, which must update the defendant's criminal information accordingly.

Assembly Bill 1076 (Stats. 2019, ch. 578) (Link D) added sections 851.93 (Link E) and 1203.425 to the Penal Code (Link F), requiring the state Department of Justice to review statewide criminal history records to identify persons who are eligible to have their arrest or criminal conviction records withheld from disclosure without requiring a petition or motion. This new law generally prohibits courts from disclosing information concerning an arrest or conviction dismissed under these new statutes and other existing conviction dismissal statutes. These provisions are subject to a budget appropriation, and if funded would go into effect on January 1, 2021.[1]

A trailer bill to push back the effective date of key provisions of Penal Code sections 851.93 and 1203.425 to August 1, 2022, is pending (Link G). If the trailer bill passes, the committee intends to withdraw the proposal and re-circulate it for public comment closer to the new effective date.

The Proposal

The Judicial Council has petition-based criminal record cleaning forms that would be unnecessary for persons granted automatic record relief. This proposal would update the following criminal forms to notify petitioners that their arrest or conviction may have already been granted automatic record relief, as well as revise the forms to avoid the use of gendered pronouns.

- Petition/Application (Health and Safety Code, § 11361.8) Adult Crimes (form CR-400): Add a notice that the conviction may have already been automatically dismissed or redesignated, explain how to find out if automatic relief was granted, revise items 2 and 4 to avoid the use of gendered pronouns, and make minor technical amendments.

- Petition for Dismissal (form CR-180): Add a notice that the state Department of Justice may have already granted automatic relief under Penal Code section 1203.425 and that a petition for dismissal under Penal Code sections 1203.4 or 1203.4a may be unnecessary if automatic relief has been granted, explain how to find out if automatic relief was granted, and revise items 4 and 7 to avoid the use of gendered pronouns.

- Order for Dismissal (form CR-181): Add a statement that, except as provided in Penal Code section 1203.425(d), if relief is granted under Penal Code sections 1203.4, 1203.4a, 1203.41, or 1203.42, the court will not disclose information concerning a conviction granted relief to any person or entity, in any format, except to the person whose conviction was granted relief or a criminal justice agency, revise item 9 to avoid the use of gendered pronouns, and make minor technical amendments.

[1] As of March 2020, the Governor's proposed budget includes an appropriation to the Department of Justice for automatic record relief purposes.

- Petition to Seal Arrest and Related Records (Pen. Code, § 851.91)* (form CR-409) and information sheet (CR-409-INFO): Add a notice that an arrest may qualify for automatic arrest record relief under Penal Code section 851.93 and that a petition to seal is unnecessary if automatic relief has been granted, explain how to find out if automatic relief was granted, and make minor technical amendments.

Alternatives Considered

Because the form revisions are necessitated by statutory changes, the committee did not consider any alternatives.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

Expected costs are limited to training, possible case management system updates, and the production of new forms. No other implementation requirements or operational impacts are expected.

Request for Specific Comments

In addition to comments on the proposal as a whole, the advisory committee is interested in comments on the following:

- Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose?

The advisory committee also seeks comments from courts on the following cost and implementation matters:

- Would the proposal provide cost savings? If so, please quantify.
- What would the implementation requirements be for courts—for example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), changing docket codes in case management systems, or modifying case management systems?
- Would three months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation?
- How well would this proposal work in courts of different sizes?

6. If the order is granted under the provisions of Penal Code section 1203.49, the Department of Justice is hereby notified that the petitioner was a victim of human trafficking when he or she committed the crime and notified of the relief ordered.

7. If this order is granted under the provisions of Penal Code section 1203.4, 1203.41, or 1203.42,

   a. the petitioner is required to disclose the above conviction in response to any direct question contained in any questionnaire or application for public office, or for licensure by any state or local agency, or for contracting with the California State Lottery Commission; and

   b. dismissal of the conviction does not automatically relieve the petitioner from the requirement to register as a sex offender. (See, e.g., Pen. Code, § 290.5.)

8. If the order is granted under the provisions of Penal Code section 1203.4, 1203.4a, 1203.41, 1203.42, or 1203.49, the petitioner is released from all penalties and disabilities resulting from the offense except as provided in Penal Code sections 29800 and 29900 (formerly sections 12021 and 12021.1) and Vehicle Code section 13555. In any subsequent prosecution of the petitioner for any other offense, the prior conviction may be pleaded and proved and shall have the same effect as if probation had not been granted or the accusation or information dismissed. The dismissal does not permit a person to own, possess, or have in petitioner's control a firearm if prevented by Penal Code sections 29800 or 29900 (formerly sections 12021 and 12021.1). Dismissal of a conviction does not permit a person prohibited from holding public office as a result of that conviction to hold public office.

9. In addition, as required by Penal Code section 299(f), relief under Penal Code sections 17(b), 17(d)(2), 1203.4, 1203.4a, 1203.41, 1203.42, or 1203.49 does not release petitioner from the separate administrative duty to provide specimens, samples, or print impressions under the DNA and Forensic Identification Database and Data Bank Act (Pen. Code, § 295 et seq.) if petitioner was found guilty by a trier of fact, not guilty by reason of insanity, or pled no contest to a qualifying offense as defined in Penal Code section 296(a).

10. The basis for an order of dismissal granted under the provisions of Penal Code section 1203.43 is the invalidity of defendant's prior plea due to misinformation in former Penal Code section 1000.4 regarding the actual consequences of making a plea and successful completion of a deferred entry of judgment program.

11. Except as provided in Penal Code section 1203.425(d), if this order is granted under Penal Code section 1203.4, 1203.4a, 1203.41, or 1203.42, the court shall not disclose information concerning a conviction granted relief to any person or entity, in any format, except to the person whose conviction was granted relief or to a criminal justice agency.

CR-409-INFO Information on How to File a Petition to Seal Arrest and Related Records Under Penal Code Section 851.91

This information sheet does not cover all of the questions that may arise in a case. Do not deliver this information sheet to the court clerk.

What is a petition to seal arrest and related records?

The petition is a request to the court to seal arrest and related records under Penal Code section 851.91. A separate petition must be filed for each arrest for which sealing is requested.

What information do I include in the petition?

Read the petition carefully and fill out all parts of the petition. The court may deny the petition based on incomplete information.

How will the court make its decision?

To have the arrest sealed as a matter of right, the court will determine whether the arrest did not result in a conviction (Pen. Code, § 851.91(a)(1)). The court will NOT seal the arrest as a matter of right if (1) you may still be charged with any of the offenses upon which the arrest was based; (2) the arrest or case was filed for murder or any other offense for which there is no statute of limitations (except if you have been acquitted or found factually innocent), or (3) you intentionally evaded law enforcement efforts to prosecute the arrest, including by engaging in identity fraud. (Pen. Code, § 851.91(a)(2).)

To have the arrest sealed in the interests of justice (Pen. Code, § 851.91(c)(2)(B)), you must describe how sealing the arrest is in the interests of justice through a personal statement from you and/or statements from others.

What do I do with the petition once I fill it out?

If a criminal case was filed based on the arrest you want to have sealed, take or mail this petition to the clerk's office in the court where the case was filed.

If no criminal case was filed or charged against you, take or mail this petition to the clerk's office in the court that handles criminal matters for the city or county where the arrest happened. If you don't know which court this is, you may want to contact a court in the county to ask. The clerk will give you a court date for the hearing, which should be at least 15 days from the date you file the petition. It is a good idea to take or mail an extra copy to the clerk and ask the clerk to stamp it to show that the original has been filed.

Must anyone else get the petition?

A copy of the petition must be served (delivered by hand or by mail) on the prosecutor of the city or county where the arrest happened and the law enforcement agency that made the arrest at least 15 days before the hearing on the petition. After you have served the petition on the prosecutor and the law enforcement agency, you will need to file a "proof of service" with the court.

What happens if the court grants my petition (request)?

If the court grants the petition, it will send a copy of the order to law enforcement and the California Department of Justice to update the arrest record, noting that the arrest is sealed. Records that are sealed under the court's order will not be disclosed except to you or a criminal justice agency (which includes courts, peace officers, prosecuting attorneys, city attorneys pursuing specific actions, defense attorneys, probation officers, parole officers, and correctional officers). Criminal history providers may disclose information to other criminal history providers. For more information, see Penal Code section 851.92.

Are translations of the petition available?

Translations of the petition are available in Spanish, Chinese, Vietnamese, and Korean at the California Courts website at www.courts.ca.gov/forms.htm.

Are there other ways to seal or limit arrest records?

Yes. Arrests that happened on or after January 1, 2021, may qualify for automatic arrest record relief if they meet certain conditions and are an arrest (1) for a misdemeanor, (2) for a felony punishable by imprisonment in county jail, or (3) for which the defendant successfully completed diversion. (Pen. Code, § 851.93.) A petition to seal is unnecessary if automatic relief has been granted. To find out if automatic relief was granted, request the petitioner's Record of Arrest and Prosecution (RAP) sheet from the Department of Justice. You may also request the court to deem an arrest a detention under Penal Code section 849.5, request a determination of factual innocence under section 851.8, receive an acquittal and a determination of factual innocence under section 851.85, have your conviction set aside based on a determination of factual innocence under section 851.86, and request relief after completion of a prefiling diversion program under section 851.87.

INVITATION TO COMMENT

SPR20-11

Title Criminal Procedure: Felony Waiver and Plea Form	Action Requested Review and submit comments by June 9, 2020
Proposed Rules, Forms, Standards, or Statutes Revise form CR-101	Proposed Effective Date January 1, 2021
Proposed by Criminal Law Advisory Committee Hon. J. Richard Couzens, Chair	Contact Sarah Fleischer-Ihn, 415-865-7702 Sarah.Fleischer-Ihn@jud.ca.gov

Executive Summary and Origin

The Criminal Law Advisory Committee proposes revisions to Plea Form, With Explanations and Waiver of Rights—Felony (form CR-101) to conform to multiple statutory changes that have added or changed relevant sentencing requirements and advisements.

Background

The Judicial Council approved for optional use Plea Form, With Explanations and Waiver of Rights—Felony (form CR-101), effective January 1, 2007, to promote increased uniformity in felony plea waiver forms used throughout the state. The form was substantially revised in 2012 in response to criminal justice realignment legislation, and was most recently revised effective January 1, 2020. The form is designed to include all necessary waivers, a notice of the direct consequences of a plea, and common advisements. Several recent bills added or changed relevant sentencing requirements and information:

- Senate Bill 1210 (Stats. 2012, ch. 762) (see Link A) amended Penal Code section 1202.45 (see Link B) to include revocation restitution fines for postrelease community supervision and mandatory supervision. The prior version of the statute addressed parole and probation revocation restitution fines only.

- Former sections 3051 and 3201 of the Welfare and Institutions Code permitted the sentencing court to order, after making certain finding, the confinement of a defendant to a narcotic detention, treatment, and rehabilitation facility. Senate Bill 1021 (Stats. 2012, ch. 41) (see Link C) prohibited new confinements as of July 1, 2012, made these two statutes inoperative as of April 1, 2014, and repealed them as of January 1, 2015.

- Previously, the sentencing court was required to impose a one-year enhancement of a prison term for each prior separate prison term or county jail felony term, except under specified circumstances. Senate Bill 136 (Stats. 2019, ch. 590) (see Link D) amended Penal Code section 667.5(b) (see Link E) so that the additional one-year term is imposed solely for each prior separate prison term served for a conviction of a sexually violent offense.

- Former Health and Safety Code section 11590 required certain defendants to register as narcotics offenders with a local law enforcement agency. Assembly Bill 1261 (Stats. 2019, ch. 580) (see Link F) repealed this statute as of January 1, 2020.

The committee also recommends revising the form to avoid the use of gendered pronouns.

The Proposal

The committee proposes the following revisions to form CR-101:

- Delete the advisement on narcotics addiction confinement (item 2d on page 2 of the current form);
- Revise the advisement on parole revocation and probation revocation restitution fines to include references to postrelease community supervision and mandatory supervision revocation restitution fines (item 2f on page 2 on the proposed form);
- Delete the reference to being sentenced to a narcotics treatment facility (item 3b on page 3 of the current form);
- Delete the option to require registration as a narcotics offender (item 3d(3) on page 3 of the current form);
- Revise the advisement on sentencing enhancements for prior prison terms or county jail sentences under Penal Code section 1170(h)(5) to state that a sentencing enhancement is imposed solely for each prior separate state prison term served for a conviction of a sexually violent offense (item 3g on page 3); and
- Revise the court's findings (items 1 and 4 on page 7) to avoid the use of gendered pronouns.

The revisions are proposed to delete outdated provisions, conform the form to statutory changes in sentencing, and avoid the use of gendered pronouns.

Alternatives Considered

Given the recent revision of the form, the committee discussed postponing further revisions, but decided to move forward in order to delete outdated provisions and conform the form to statutory changes. The committee also discussed whether to amend the form based on the upcoming change in sex offender registration from lifetime to tiered based largely on the offense, under

Senate Bill 384 (Stats. 2017, ch. 541). After discussion, the committee decided that the existing advisement of lifetime registration was still appropriate since the registration requirement is not terminated as a matter of right, and instead requires the defendant-petitioner to initiate, and the court to grant, a request for termination

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

As an optional form, expected costs are limited to training, possible case management system updates, and the production of new forms. No other implementation requirements or operational impacts are expected.

Request for Specific Comments

In addition to comments on the proposal as a whole, the advisory committee is interested in comments on the following:

- Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose?

The advisory committee also seeks comments from courts on the following cost and implementation matters:

- Would the proposal provide cost savings? If so, please quantify.
- What would the implementation requirements be for courts—for example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), changing docket codes in case management systems, or modifying case management systems?
- Would three months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation?
- How well would this proposal work in courts of different sizes?

CR-101 [Rev. Jan. 1, 2021]

PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA v. Defendant(s):	CASE NUMBER:

INITIALS

2. c. Split Sentence (1170(h)(5)(B)): years and days in the county jail and years and days on mandatory supervision under conditions set by the court. I understand that if I violate any of the terms or conditions of mandatory supervision, I may be remanded into custody for the entire unserved portion of the sentence. ☐

d. Open Plea

1. ☐ I understand the maximum and minimum sentences for the charges and allegations stated on page 1. No one has made any other promises to me about what sentence the court may order. ☐
2. ☐ I understand that I am not eligible for probation.
3. ☐ I understand that I will not be granted probation unless the court finds at the time of sentencing that this is an unusual case where the interests of justice would be best served by granting probation.

e. Restitution, Statutory Fees, and Assessments

I understand that the court will order me to pay the following amounts (if an amount is not yet known, "TBD" for "to be determined" is entered next to the $); I must prepare financial disclosure statements to assist the court in determining my ability to pay; and refusal or failure to prepare the required financial disclosure statements may be used against me at sentencing: ☐

1. ☐ $ to the Victim Restitution Fund
2. ☐ $ restitution to actual victims
3. ☐ $ restitution to the State of California, Victims of Crime Fund
4. ☐ $ court operations assessment
5. ☐ $ court facilities assessment
6. ☐ $ base fine plus any applicable penalties, assessments, and surcharges
7. ☐ $ other (specify):
8. ☐ $ other (specify):
9. ☐ An (additional) amount to be determined by the court at sentencing or such other hearing as the court may set.

f. Fines for Revocation of Parole, Postrelease Community Supervision, Mandatory Supervision, or Probation ☐

I understand that if I am sentenced to state prison, the court will impose a parole revocation fine or a postrelease community supervision revocation fine, which will be collected only if my parole or postrelease community supervision is later revoked. I also understand that if I am granted probation or mandatory supervision, the court will impose a probation revocation fine or mandatory supervision revocation fine, which will be collected only if my probation or mandatory supervision is later revoked.

g. Dismissal of Other Counts ☐

I understand that as part of the plea agreement bargain, the following counts will be dismissed after sentencing:

I understand and agree that the sentencing judge may consider facts underlying dismissed counts to determine restitution and to sentence me on the counts to which I am entering a plea. ☐

h. Other Terms *(specify): ☐

3. CONSEQUENCES OF MY PLEA INITIALS

a. No Contest ("Nolo Contendere") Plea ☐

I understand that a no contest plea is the same as pleading guilty and that if I plead no contest, I will be convicted and my no contest plea could be used against me in a civil case.

PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA v. Defendant(s):	CASE NUMBER:

INITIALS

b. Parole and Postrelease Community Supervision ☐
I understand that if I am sentenced to state prison
(1) I will be placed on parole or postrelease community supervision for up to years after my release.
(2) If I abscond or the court tolls my supervision, the total time of parole or postrelease community supervision can be extended.
(3) If I violate any of the terms or conditions of my parole, I can be sentenced to county jail for up to 180 days for each violation, or returned to state prison for up to one year, up to a maximum of years. If I violate any of the terms or conditions of postrelease community supervision, I can be sentenced to county jail for up to 180 days for each violation, for up to a maximum of 3 years.

c. Effect of Conviction on Other Cases ☐
I understand that a conviction in this case may constitute a violation of any other current grant of parole, mandatory supervision, postrelease community supervision, or probation in any other case and that I may receive additional punishment as a result of that violation.

d. Registration ☐
I understand that I will be required to register with the local police agency or sheriff's department in the city or county in which I reside as

(1) ☐ an arson offender (3) ☐ a sex offender (this registration is a lifelong requirement)
(2) ☐ a gang member (4) ☐ other (specify):

and that if I fail to register or to keep my registration current for any reason, new felony criminal charges may be filed against me.

e. Prints and DNA Samples ☐
I understand that I must provide biological samples and prints for identification purposes—including buccal (mouth) swab samples, right thumb prints, palm prints of each hand, and blood specimens or other biological samples required by law—and that failure to do so constitutes a new criminal offense.

f. Serious or Violent Felony ☐
(1) ☐ I understand that by pleading guilty or no contest to a serious or violent felony ("strike"), the penalty for any future felony conviction will be increased as a result of my convicion in this case, depending on the number of strikes I have, up to a mandatory prison sentence of double the term otherwise provided or a term of at least 25 years to life.
(2) ☐ I understand that if I am convicted of a violent felony, jail or prison conduct/work-time credit I may accrue will not exceed 15%.
(3) ☐ I understand that if I am admitting a prior strike conviction, prison work-time credit that I may accrue will not exceed 20% of the total term of imprisonment.
(4) ☐ I understand that if I am convicted of murder or a third felony conviction of certain offenses, I am ineligible to receive work-time credits. Count is such an offense.

g. Prior Prison Term for Sexually Violent Offense ☐
I understand that if I am sentenced to serve a state prison term for this sexually violent offense, as defined in Welfare and Institutions Code section 6600(b), the penalty for any future felony conviction may be increased as a result of my incarceration in this case.

h. Driver's License and Vehicle Forfeiture ☐
I understand that my privilege to drive a motor vehicle may be revoked or suspended by the court or the California Department of Motor Vehicles, and my vehicle may be ordered forfeited if it was involved in the offense.

3. i. Immigration Consequences
I understand that if I am not a citizen of the United States, my plea of guilty or no contest may result in my deportation, exclusion from admission to the United States, or denial of naturalization pursuant to the laws of the United States. ☐

j. Firearms
I understand that federal and state laws prohibit a convicted felon from possessing firearms or ammunition for life. ☐

k. Other Consequences (specify): ☐

4. RIGHT TO AN ATTORNEY
I understand that I have the right to an attorney of my choice to represent me throughout the proceedings. If I cannot afford to hire an attorney, the court will appoint one to represent me. ☐

I hereby give up my right to be represented by an attorney. ☐

5. OTHER CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS
I understand that I am entitled to each of the following rights as to the charges listed in item 1 (on page 1):

a. Right to a Jury Trial ☐
I understand that I have a right to a speedy and public jury trial. At the trial, I would be presumed to be innocent, and I could not be convicted unless, after hearing all of the evidence, 12 impartial jurors chosen from the community were unanimously convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that I am guilty. I have a right, through my counsel, to participate in jury selection.

b. Right to a Court Trial ☐
I understand that, as an alternative to a jury trial, if the prosecutor agrees, I may give up a jury trial and have a court trial in which the judge alone, without a jury, hears the evidence. I still could not be convicted unless, after hearing all of the evidence, the judge was convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that I am guilty.

c. Right to Confront and Cross-Examine Witnesses ☐
I understand that I have the right to confront and cross-examine all witnesses testifying against me. This means that the prosecution must produce the witnesses in court, they must testify under oath in my presence, and my attorney may question them.

d. Right to Remain Silent and Not to Incriminate Myself ☐
I understand that I have the right to remain silent, and my silence cannot be considered as evidence against me. I understand that I also have the right not to incriminate myself, and I cannot be forced to testify.

e. Right to Produce Evidence and to Present a Defense ☐
I understand that I have a right to present evidence and to have the court issue subpoenas to bring to court all witnesses and evidence favorable to me, at no cost to me. I also have the right to testify on my own behalf.

6. BEFORE THE PLEA

a. Discussion With My Attorney ☐

Before entering this plea, I have had a full opportunity to discuss the following with my attorney:

(1) The facts of my case;
(2) The elements of the charged offenses, prior convictions, enhancements, and special allegations;
(3) Any defenses that I may have;
(4) My constitutional and statutory rights and waiver of those rights;
(5) The consequences of this plea, including the immigration consequences; and
(6) Anything else I think is important to my case.

6. b. Questions
I have no further questions of the court or of my attorney with regard to my plea and admissions in this case, any of the rights, or anything else on this form. ☐

c. Stipulation to Commissioner
I understand that I have the right to have a judge take my plea and sentence me. I give up this right and agree to have a commmissioner, sitting as a temporary judge, take my plea and sentence me. ☐

d. Medications or Controlled Substances
I am not taking any medication that affects my ability to understand this form and the consequences of my plea, have not recently consumed any alcohol or drugs, and am not suffering from any medical condition, except for the following: ☐

e. Court Approval of Plea Agreement
I understand that the plea agreement in item 2 (on pages 1 and 2) is based on the facts before the court. I understand that if the court approves this plea agreement the approval of the court is not binding, and that the court may withdraw its approval of the plea agreement upon further consideration of the matter. I understand that if the court withdraws its approval of this plea agreement I will be allowed to withdraw my plea. (Pen. Code, § 1192.5.) ☐

7. STATUTORY RIGHT TO A PRELIMINARY HEARING
I understand that before I have a trial, the law gives me the right to a speedy preliminary hearing at which the prosecution would produce evidence and the court must find reasonable cause to believe I committed the crimes with which I have been charged. I understand that I have all of the above constitutional rights at the preliminary hearing, except for the right to a jury trial. ☐

I give up my right to a preliminary hearing and the constitutional rights listed in item 5 (on page 4).

8. WAIVER OF CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS
I give up, for each of the charges and allegations listed in item 1 (on page 1), my right to a jury trial, my right to a court trial, my right to confront and cross-examine witnesses, my right to remain silent and not to incriminate myself, and my right to produce evidence and to present a defense, including my right to testify on my own behalf. I understand that I am, in fact, incriminating myself with my plea. ☐

9. THE PLEA ☐
I freely and voluntarily plead ☐ GUILTY ☐ NO CONTEST to the charges listed in item 1 (on page 1) and admit the allegations listed in item 1 (on page 1), understanding that this plea and admission will lead to the penalties listed in item 2 (on pages 1 and 2).

a. I offer my plea of guilty or no contest freely and voluntarily and with full understanding of everything in this form. No one has made any threats; used any force against me, my family, or my loved ones; or made any promises to me, except as listed in this form, in order to convince me to plead guilty or no contest. ☐

b. I understand that the court is required to find a factual basis for my plea to make sure that I am entering a plea to the proper offenses under the facts of the case.

I offer to the court the following as the basis for my plea of guilty or no contest and any admissions:

(1) I understand that the court may consider the following as proof of the factual basis for my plea: ☐

(a) ☐ Preliminary hearing transcript
(b) ☐ Police report
(c) ☐ Probation report
(d) ☐ Welfare investigator's declaration
(e) ☐ Court documents regarding any alleged prior offenses
(f) ☐ Other (specify):
(g) ☐ (Specify facts):

INITIALS

9. b. (2) I am pleading guilty or no contest to take advantage of a plea agreement (my attorney will stipulate to a factual basis for the plea). (People v. West (1970) 3 Cal.3d 595.) ☐

10. AFTER THE PLEA

a. Surrender
I understand that the court is allowing me to surrender at a later date to begin serving time in custody. ☐

I agree that if I fail to appear on the date set for surrender or sentencing without a legal excuse, my plea will become an "open plea" to the court, I will not be allowed to withdraw my plea, and I may be sentenced up to the maximum allowed by law. ☐

b. Sentencing Court
I understand that I have the right to be sentenced by the same judge or commissioner who takes my plea. I give up that right and agree that any judge or commissioner may sentence me. ☐

c. Sentencing Date
I understand that I have the right to be sentenced within 20 court days. I give up that right and agree to be sentenced at a later date. ☐

11. MANDATORY WARNING ☐
I understand that if I am charged with violating Vehicle Code section 23103, as specified in Vehicle Code section 23103.5, or Vehicle Code sections 23152 or 23153, the following warning applies:

You are hereby advised that being under the influence of alcohol or drugs, or both, impairs your ability to safely operate a motor vehicle. Therefore, it is extremely dangerous to human life to drive while under the influence of alcohol or drugs, or both. If you continue to drive while under the influence of alcohol or drugs, or both, and as a result of that driving someone is killed, you can be charged with murder.

DEFENDANT'S STATEMENT

I have read or have had read to me this form and have initialed each of the items that applies to my case. If I have an attorney, I have discussed each item with my attorney. By putting my initials next to the items in this form, I am indicating that I understand and agree with what is stated in each item that I have initialed. The nature of the charges, possible defenses, and effects of any prior convictions, enhancements, and special allegations have been explained to me. I understand each of the rights outlined above, and I give up each of them to enter my plea.

The court, having reviewed this form (and any addenda), and having orally examined the defendant, finds as follows:

1. The initialed items in this form have been read to the defendant, and the defendant understands each of them.
2. The defendant understands the nature of the crimes and allegations listed in item 1 (on page 1) and the consequences of the plea and any admissions.
3. The defendant understands the constitutional and statutory rights associated with this plea and expressly, knowingly, and intelligently waives these rights.
4. The defendant's plea, admissions, and waiver of rights are made freely and voluntarily.
5. A factual basis exists for the plea and admissions, or the defendant is pleading pursuant to a plea bargain under People v. West.

The court accepts the defendant's plea, admissions, and waiver of rights, and the defendant is hereby convicted based thereon.

It is ordered that this document be filed with the court's records of this case and that the defendant's plea, admissions, and waiver of rights be accepted and entered in the minutes of this court.

INVITATION TO COMMENT

SPR20-12

Title Criminal Procedure: Multicounty Incarceration and Supervision	Action Requested Review and submit comments by June 9, 2020
Proposed Rules, Forms, Standards, or Statutes Amend Cal. Rules of Court, rule 4.452	Proposed Effective Date January 1, 2021
Proposed by Criminal Law Advisory Committee Hon. J. Richard Couzens, Chair	Contact Sarah Fleischer-Ihn, 415-865-7702 Sarah.Fleischer-Ihn@jud.ca.gov

Executive Summary and Origin

The Criminal Law Advisory Committee recommends amending California Rules of Court, rule 4.452, to (1) clarify that certain provisions apply only to sentences under Penal Code section 1170(h), (2) add procedures for when a subsequent court sentences a defendant to state prison when the prior sentence was under section 1170(h), and (3) clarify that subsequent courts may not increase the custody or mandatory supervision portion of the sentence imposed by the previous court. The amendments were suggested by a prosecutor and a committee member.

Background

Senate Bill 670 (Stats. 2017, ch. 287) (see Link A) amended Penal Code section 1170(h) (see Link B), effective January 1, 2018, requiring courts to determine the county or counties of incarceration and supervision for defendants when imposing judgments concurrent with or consecutive to another judgment or judgments previously imposed under section 1170(h) in another county or counties. SB 670 also amended section 1170.3 (see Link C), requiring the Judicial Council to adopt rules of court providing criteria for trial judges to consider at the time of sentencing when determining the county or counties of incarceration and supervision. Accordingly, the Criminal Law Advisory Committee proposed amendments to rule 4.452 to guide the second or subsequent court when determining the county or counties of supervision. The amendments were approved by the Judicial Council, effective July 1, 2019.

The Proposal

This proposal would amend rule 4.452 to further instruct courts on multiple county sentencing by adding the following:

- Clarification that (a)(4), which states that the second or subsequent court has the discretion to specify whether the previous sentence is to be served in custody or on mandatory supervision, applies only if the previously imposed sentences and the current sentence being imposed by the second or subsequent court are under section 1170(h).

- Procedures for when a subsequent court sentences a defendant to state prison when the prior sentence was under section 1170(h), including a referral to the original sentencing court for potential resentencing on any case sentenced under section 1170(h). The referral to the previous court is required because the defendant is entitled to a violation hearing on the section 1170(h) sentence; the subsequent court may not summarily revoke the remaining mandatory supervision and impose a prison term.

- Clarification that subsequent courts may not increase the custody or mandatory supervision portion of the sentence imposed by the previous court.

- Technical, nonsubstantive amendments.

Alternatives Considered

The committee considered a suggestion to add procedures for multicounty sentences involving mandatory supervision under section 1170(h), where the principal term of the prior sentence becomes a consecutive subordinate term as a result of what the second or subsequent court does in the sentencing of the current case. In these circumstances, the length of the prior term is reduced by operation of law rather than by exercise of discretion by the second or subsequent court, and the routine judicial response is for the prior court to restructure the earlier sentence. The committee did not think it was necessary to further clarify this procedure in the rule.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

The recommended amendments clarify procedures on multiple county sentencing. No additional fiscal and operational impacts are anticipated as a result of amending rule 4.452.

Request for Specific Comments

In addition to comments on the proposal as a whole, the advisory committee is interested in comments on the following:

- Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose?

The advisory committee also seeks comments from courts on the following cost and implementation matters:

- Would the proposal provide cost savings? If so, please quantify.
- What would the implementation requirements be for courts—for example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), changing docket codes in case management systems, or modifying case management systems?
- Would three months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation?
- How well would this proposal work in courts of different sizes?

Rule 4.452 of the California Rules of Court would be amended, effective January 1, 2021, to read:

Rule 4.452. Determinate sentence consecutive to prior determinate sentence

~~(a)~~ If a determinate sentence is imposed under section 1170.1(a) consecutive to one or more determinate sentences imposed previously in the same court or in other courts, the court in the current case must pronounce a single aggregate term, as defined in section 1170.1(a), stating the result of combining the previous and current sentences. In those situations:

(1) The sentences on all determinately sentenced counts in all the cases on which a sentence was or is being imposed must be combined as though they were all counts in the current case.

(2) The ~~judge~~ court in the current case must make a new determination of which count, in the combined cases, represents the principal term, as defined in section 1170.1(a). The principal term is the term with the greatest punishment imposed including conduct enhancements. If two terms of imprisonment have the same punishment, either term may be selected as the principal term.

(3) Discretionary decisions of ~~the judges~~ courts in previous cases may not be changed by the ~~judge~~ court in the current case. Such decisions include the decision to impose one of the three authorized terms of imprisonment referred to in section 1170(b), making counts in prior cases concurrent with or consecutive to each other, or the decision that circumstances in mitigation or in the furtherance of justice justified striking the punishment for an enhancement. However, if a previously designated principal term becomes a subordinate term after the resentencing, the subordinate term will be limited to one-third the middle base term as provided in section 1170.1(a).

(4) If all previously imposed sentences and the current sentence being imposed by the second or subsequent court are under section 1170(h), ~~T~~the second or subsequent ~~judge~~ court has the discretion to specify whether a previous sentence is to be served in custody or on mandatory supervision and the terms of such supervision, but may not, without express consent of the defendant, modify the sentence on the earlier sentenced charges in any manner that will (i) increase the total length of the sentence imposed by the previous court; (ii) increase the total length of the ~~actual~~ custody ~~time~~ portion of the sentence imposed by the previous court; (iii) increase the total length of the mandatory supervision portion of the sentence imposed by the previous court; or (iv) impose additional, more onerous, or more restrictive conditions of release for any previously imposed period of mandatory supervision.

(5) If the second or subsequent court imposes a sentence to state prison because the defendant is ineligible for sentencing under section 1170(h), the jurisdiction of the second or subsequent court to impose a prison sentence applies solely to the current case. The defendant must be returned to the original sentencing court for potential resentencing on any previous case or cases sentenced under section 1170(h). The original sentencing court must convert all remaining custody and mandatory supervision time imposed in the previous case to state prison custody time and must determine whether its sentence is concurrent with or consecutive to the state prison term imposed by the second or subsequent court and incorporate that sentence into a single aggregate term as required by this rule. Number (4) does not apply —and the consent of the defendant is not required—for this conversion and resentencing.

~~(5)~~(6) In cases in which a sentence is imposed under the provisions of section 1170(h) and the sentence has been imposed by courts in two or more counties, the second or subsequent court must determine the county or counties of incarceration or supervision, including the order of service of such incarceration or supervision. To the extent reasonably possible, the period of mandatory supervision must be served in one county and after completion of any period of incarceration. In accordance with rule 4.472, the second or subsequent court must calculate the defendant's remaining custody and supervision time.

~~(6)~~(7) In making the determination under ~~subdivision (a)(5)~~ (6), the court must exercise its discretion after consideration of the following factors:

(A)-(H)

~~(7)~~(8) If after the court's determination in accordance with ~~subdivision (a)(5)~~ (6) the defendant is ordered to serve only a custody term without supervision in another county, the defendant must be transported at such time and under such circumstances as the court directs to the county where the custody term is to be served. The defendant must be transported with an abstract of the court's judgment as required by section 1213(a), or other suitable documentation showing the term imposed by the court and any custody credits against the sentence. The court may order the custody term to be served in another county without also transferring jurisdiction of the case in accordance with rule 4.530.

~~(8)~~(9) If after the court's determination in accordance with ~~subdivision (a)(5)~~(6) the defendant is ordered to serve a period of supervision in another county, whether with or without a term of custody, the matter must be transferred for the period of supervision in accordance with provisions of rule 4.530(f), (g), and (h).

Advisory Committee Comment

The restrictions of ~~subdivision~~ (3) do not apply to circumstances where a previously imposed base term is made a consecutive term on resentencing. If the ~~judge~~ court selects a consecutive sentence structure, and since there can be only one principal term in the final aggregate sentence, if a previously imposed full base term becomes a subordinate consecutive term, the new consecutive term normally will become one-third the middle term by operation of law (section 1170.1(a)).

Executive Summary and Origin

The Criminal Law Advisory Committee recommends revising the criminal forms implementing ignition interlock device requirements to conform to statutory changes, increase clarity and usability, and make nonsubstantive technical changes.

Background

In 1993, the Judicial Council adopted six forms to assist courts with ordering and monitoring ignition interlock devices ("IID") in criminal cases. The forms were based on Vehicle Code sections 23575 and 23576. The forms were last amended over 10 years ago and do not reflect subsequent statutory changes.

Historically, Vehicle Code section 23575 outlined the court's role in ordering and monitoring ignition interlock devices for persons convicted of driving under the influence[1] or driving on a suspended or revoked license.[2] Section 23575 previously made installation of IIDs optional for persons convicted of driving under the influence and mandatory for persons convicted of driving on a suspended or revoked license.

Under Senate Bill 1046 (Stats. 2016, ch. 783), section 23575 was amended, effective January 1, 2019, to January 1, 2026, deleting the subdivision applying to driving under the influence but maintaining the subdivision on driving on a suspended or revoked license. The bill added a separate code section,[3] effective January 1, 2019, to January 1, 2026, establishing a statewide pilot program mandating installation of IIDs for persons convicted of driving under the influence. Under this statute, courts are required to notify persons convicted of driving under the influence of the requirement to install an IID, but the Department of Motor Vehicles largely monitors installation and maintenance. Under SB 1046, the former version of section 23575 would go back into effect on January 1, 2026. This would again make IID installation for driving under the influence optional and revert monitoring duties back to the court.

[1] Veh. Code, §§ 23152, 23153.
[2] Veh. Code, § 14601.2.

The proposed changes to the IID forms comply with both the current version of section 23575 and the version set to go into effect on January 1, 2026. However, because the forms are based on section 23575, they currently only apply to suspended/revoked license referrals, not driving under the influence referrals. There is no Judicial Council form ordering IIDs for driving under the influence convictions under the pilot program.

The forms are currently identified as "ID" forms.[4] The Rules Committee previously recommended shifting the forms to the criminal category, identified with the "CR" designation, which is reflected in the recommended changes.

The Proposal

This proposal would revise the ignition interlock forms to conform to statutory changes, increase clarity and usability, and make nonsubstantive technical changes through the following:

Order to Install Ignition Interlock Device (form ID-100)

- Renumber as CR-221;
- State that the defendant may return a copy of the Department of Motor Vehicles' installation verification form in lieu of the Judicial Council's installation verification form, in order to streamline the process;
- Include technical, nonsubstantive changes, including adding a field for defendant's email address and fax number, and adding "State" to the address fields; and
- Conform to the requirements of Vehicle Code sections 23575 and 23576:
    - Require the installed device to be certified;
    - Delete the statement that the order does not reinstate the defendant's driving privilege, and replace with a statement that the order does not allow the defendant to drive without a valid driver's license;
    - Revise the requirement that installation must be within 30 days from the date of conviction, and allow the court to indicate a date instead;
    - Delete the requirement for the defendant to return the completed installation verification form to probation;
    - Revise the requirement that the defendant return a completed installation

[3] Veh. Code, § 23575.3 (Link C).
[4] E.g., forms ID-100 and ID-110.

verification form no later than 30 days from the date of conviction, and allow the court to indicate a date instead;
    - Clarify the duty to take the vehicle to the installer to recalibrate or monitor the device once every 60 days or as otherwise specified;
    - Delete the requirement that the defendant must make payments to the installer and must adhere to the payment plan for installation; and
    - Clarify that the duty to inform an employer applies to motor vehicles owned by the employer and driven by the defendant.

- Delete the statement that failure to comply with any court order is a violation of the order, as unnecessarily broad;
- Delete the statement that failure to maintain current license and registration on any vehicle owned by the defendant is a violation of the order, since it is duplicative of language on page 1; and
- Conform to the requirements of Vehicle Code sections 23575 and 23576:
    - Revise the statement that failure to have a device installed within 30 days of the order date is a violation of the order, to instead state that failure to have ignition interlock devices installed as ordered is a violation of the order;
    - Revise the statement that failure to return the installation verification form is a violation of the order, to instead require proof of installation;
    - Delete the statement that defaulting on a payment plan, absent a showing of good cause, is a violation of the order;
    - Create a separate section notifying the defendant of misdemeanor conduct;
    - Add that operating a vehicle not equipped with a functioning device is a misdemeanor;
    - Update language notifying the defendant that tampering with a device is a misdemeanor;
    - Delete sections on the defendant's rights as to a medical exemption and petitioning the court on whether continued restrictions are necessary; and
    - Delete the requirement that the defendant contact an installer within 48 hours of the order.

Ignition Interlock Installation Verification (form ID-110)

- Renumber as CR-222;
- Delete that the declaration by the installer is under penalty of perjury, as the statute does not require a sworn statement;
- Delete the requirement for the original form to be sent to the court, and add a line directing the defendant to return a completed and signed form to the court;
- Delete the line stating "Distribution: Court, Manufacturer or Manufacturer's Agent, Defendant, Probation Department," and;
- Include technical, nonsubstantive changes, including adding a field for defendant's email address and fax number, and adding "State" to the address fields.

Ignition Interlock Calibration Verification and Tamper Report (form ID-120)

- Renumber as CR-223;
- Convert this form to a calibration verification form, and move the tamper report provisions to Ignition Interlock Noncompliance Report (form ID-130);
- Delete that the declaration by installer is under penalty of perjury, as the statute does not require a sworn statement;
- Update the notice section to the defendant regarding missed appointments and payments;
- Delete the line stating "Distribution: Court, Manufacturer or Manufacturer's Agent, Defendant, Probation Department," and
- Include technical, nonsubstantive changes, including adding a field for defendant's email address and fax number, and adding "State" to the address fields.

Ignition Interlock Noncompliance Report (form ID-130)

- Renumber as CR-224;
- Include the tamper report provision currently in form ID-120;
- Include statement for installer to indicate that defendant failed to comply with a requirement for the maintenance or calibration of the device on three or more occasions, as required by Vehicle Code section 23575;
- Include statement for installer to indicate signs of removal, attempt to bypass, attempt to remove, or tampering as required by Vehicle Code section 23575;
- Delete that the declaration by installer is under penalty of perjury, as the statute does not require a sworn statement; and
- Include technical, nonsubstantive changes, including reformatting, adding a field for defendant's email address and fax number, and adding "State" to the address fields.

Ignition Interlock Removal and Modification to Probation Order (form ID-140):

- Renumber as CR-225; and
- Include technical, nonsubstantive changes, including adding a field for defendant's email address and fax number, and adding "State" to the address fields.

Notice to Employers of Ignition Interlock Restriction (form ID-150):

- Renumber as CR-226;
- Include technical, nonsubstantive changes, including adding a field for defendant's email address and fax number, and adding "State" to the address fields; and
- Conform to Vehicle Code section 23576:
    - Specify that a person may operate a vehicle without a functioning, certified-approved device if certain conditions are met; and
    - Add that if a business entity is totally or partially owned or controlled by the defendant, then the defendant is not eligible under Vehicle Code section 23576 to drive a vehicle without an ignition interlock device installed.

Alternatives Considered

The committee conducted an informal survey of courts to determine usage of the forms. A moderate number of courts responded that they used the forms, so the committee decided to move forward with the proposed changes.

Three forms—Ignition Interlock Installation Verification (form ID-110/CR-222), Ignition Interlock Calibration Verification (form ID-120/CR-223), and Ignition Interlock Noncompliance Report (form ID-130/CR-224)—require the installer to sign a declaration under penalty of perjury. Vehicle Code section 23575 does not require a sworn statement by an installer, but it does require the court to monitor the installation and maintenance of a functioning, certified ignition interlock device restriction ordered under the section. Because the section does not require a sworn statement, the committee discussed amending the declaration to state that the information provided is true and correct. A committee member expressed concern that not requiring a sworn statement would limit the court's ability to properly monitor the IID requirement as required by statute, as the court would have limited recourse for a falsified document. The committee decided to amend the declaration at this time and seek additional public comment on the issue.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

Expected costs are limited to training, possible case management system updates, and the production of new forms. No other implementation requirements or operational impacts are expected.

Request for Specific Comments

In addition to comments on the proposal as a whole, the advisory committee is interested in comments on the following:

- Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose?
- Is it sufficient for an IID installer to declare that information provided is true and correct, rather than under penalty of perjury? Does this limit the court's ability to properly monitor the IID installation and maintenance as required by statute?

The advisory committee also seeks comments from courts on the following cost and implementation matters:

- Would the proposal provide cost savings? If so, please quantify.
- What would the implementation requirements be for courts—for example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), changing docket codes in case management systems, or modifying case management systems?
- Would three months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation?
- How well would this proposal work in courts of different sizes?

ORDER TO INSTALL IGNITION INTERLOCK DEVICE
(Ignition Interlock Device)

Vehicle Code, §§ 23575, 23576
www.courts.ca.gov

ORDER TO INSTALL IGNITION INTERLOCK DEVICE	CASE NUMBER:

What is a violation of this order?

1. Failure to have ignition interlock devices installed as ordered.
2. Failure to show proof of installation to the court within the time limit specified in this order.
3. Failure to comply three or more times with any requirement for the maintenance or calibration of the ignition interlock devices.
4. If defendant has a valid driver's license, driving any vehicle without an ignition interlock device except as provided below and except for employer-owned vehicles required to be operated within the course and scope of employment. A motor vehicle owned by a business entity that is all or partly owned or controlled by defendant is not a motor vehicle owned by an employer subject to the exemption.

What will happen if you violate this order?

Under Vehicle Code section 23575, if a defendant fails to comply with this court order the court must notify the Department of Motor Vehicles.

Violation of the following is a midemeanor and can be punished by imprisonment in the county jail and/or a fine:

1. Failure to notify any person who rents, leases, or loans a motor vehicle to defendant of the restriction imposed by this order.
2. Requesting or soliciting any person to blow into an ignition interlock device or to start a motor vehicle equipped with the device for the purpose of providing defendant with an operable motor vehicle.
3. Operating a vehicle not equipped with a functioning ignition interlock device.
4. Removing, bypassing, or tampering with an ignition interlock device.

Defendant: Call the ignition interlock device installer and arrange for the installation of the device(s). The court will provide you with a list of manufacturers certified by the Department of Motor Vehicles. Contact a certified manufacturer to locate an installer.

Executive Summary and Origin

The Criminal Law Advisory Committee recommends adopting a new rule of court establishing procedures for resentencing recommendations under Penal Code section 1170(d)(1) (see Link A).

Background

California law allows felony resentencing by the court within 120 days of commitment to state prison, or at any time, on recommendation by the Secretary of the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation (CDCR), the CDCR's Board of Parole Hearings, a county correctional administrator, or the district attorney. (Pen. Code, § 1170(d)(1).) Assembly Bill 1812 (Stats. 2018, ch. 36) (see Link B) recently added the following language regarding factors that a court could consider when reviewing a resentencing recommendation:

> The court resentencing under this paragraph may reduce a defendant's term of imprisonment and modify the judgment, including a judgment entered after a plea agreement, if it is in the interest of justice. The court may consider postconviction factors, including, but not limited to, the inmate's disciplinary record and record of rehabilitation while incarcerated, evidence that reflects whether age, time served, and diminished physical condition, if any, have reduced the inmate's risk for future violence, and evidence that reflects that circumstances have changed since the inmate's original sentencing so that the inmate's continued incarceration is no longer in the interest of justice.

(Pen. Code, § 1170(d)(1).)

CDCR created the Recall and Resentencing Recommendation Program to identify and recommend felony resentencing in prison cases under section 1170(d)(1). As of December 31, 2019, CDCR made 1,310 resentencing recommendations to courts in 46 counties based on either a defendant's exceptional conduct, a law enforcement agency referral, sentencing discrepancies based on case law, or changes in the law. Currently, recommendations based on changes in the law are for gun enhancements under Penal Code sections 12022.5(c) and 12022.53(h) (Sen. Bill 620 (Stats. 2017, ch. 682)); prior serious felony enhancements under Penal Code section 667(a)(1) (Sen. Bill 1393 (Stats. 2018, ch. 1013)); and controlled substance enhancements under Health and Safety Code section 11370.2 (Sen. Bill 180 (Stats. 2017, ch. 677)). Overall, courts have responded to 838 of these 1,310 requests, resulting in 383 reductions. Emergency regulations were recently issued on qualifying criteria and procedures. (See Link C.) The emergency regulations state the CDCR's internal screening criteria for each category of recommendations.

The Proposal

Based on the increase in section 1170(d)(1) resentencing recommendations from CDCR, the committee recommends adoption of a new rule of court setting the following procedures for resentencing recommendations. The committee believes that the rule will assist courts by clarifying how resentencing recommendations should be handled.

- Require the recommendation to go before the original sentencing judge who entered judgment of conviction in the case, and require the presiding judge or the presiding judge's designee to assign a judge if the original sentencing judge is unavailable;
- Provide for an initial review by the court to determine the basis of the recommendation, and, for recommendations based on equitable considerations, appoint counsel for the defendant if the court sets a status conference or hearing;
- Provide for courts to summarily deny a recommendation, including notification of the parties and an opportunity to request a status conference or hearing if either disagrees with the court's proposed summary disposition;
- Provide for a court's tentative response, including notification of the parties and an opportunity to object and set the matter for a status conference or hearing;
- Provide guidelines on status conferences, including a provision on the purpose of a status conference, that the defendant need not be present, and, if all parties agree on a new sentence, allowing the court to resentence the defendant in the defendant's absence with a knowing and intelligent waiver of the right to be present;
- Provide guidelines on hearings, including a provision that the defendant's presence may be waived, factors the court may consider at the hearing, and procedures the court must follow if it changes the sentence; and

- State that a supplemental probation report is not required for resentencing unless ordered by the court.

Alternatives Considered

A committee workgroup discussed in depth what factors should trigger appointment of counsel by the court. A workgroup member was concerned that CDCR was not providing courts with sufficient information. On review of CDCR's emergency regulations, recommendation letters, and cumulative case summaries, the workgroup recommended appointment of counsel for defendants whose recommendations are based on equitable considerations, such as changes in sentencing laws and exceptional conduct, and where the court does not summarily deny the recommendation and instead sets a status conference or hearing. The committee agreed with the recommendation. The workgroup has suggested to CDCR that the recommendation letters going to the courts clearly state the basis for the recommendation (e.g., exceptional conduct, change in sentencing law).

The committee discussed whether the rule should direct courts, at hearing, to consider whether consecutive sentences could have been imposed and whether the original sentence was the result of a negotiated disposition where charges or cases were dismissed. Some members thought that including these factors in the rule would give them undue emphasis, especially since they were not reflected in the statute and were perhaps contrary to the statutory language stating "the court resentencing under this paragraph may reduce a defendant's term of imprisonment and modify the judgment, including a judgment entered after a plea agreement, if it is in the interest of justice." Other members thought they were highly relevant factors. Ultimately, the committee decided to include a provision in the rule that the court may consider any factors that were present at the original sentencing, including but not limited to whether consecutive sentences could have been imposed, and the terms of a negotiated plea, including whether charges or cases were dismissed. The committee also included a provision stating that the court must not deny a resentencing recommendation solely because the original sentence resulted from a negotiated plea.

The committee agreed that a defendant has a right to be personally present at resentencing but expressed concern that requiring a defendant to be personally present could cause a loss of housing and programming opportunities because of the defendant's removal from state prison to be transported to and from court. To address the issue, the committee initially discussed including a provision recommending issuance of a removal order that would minimally interfere with a defendant's housing and programming in state prison. However, CDCR does not have a process to minimize the impact of temporarily removing a defendant for resentencing, so the committee decided not to reference a specialized removal order in the rule.

The committee then discussed creating a mechanism in the rule for a defendant to waive the right to be personally present for resentencing in writing but expressed concern about possible statutory conflicts. Penal Code section 977(b)(1) states that a defendant's written waiver of personal presence must be executed in open court, and Penal Code section 1193(a) provides, in relevant part, that a defendant may waive the right to be present for judgment in a felony conviction in open court and on the record, or in a notarized writing. However, the Supreme Court has upheld out-of-court written waivers for voir dire and a hearing to relieve defense counsel in a capital case because they substantially complied with section 977.[1] Under this reasoning, an out-of-court written waiver that substantially complies with statutory requirements may be sufficient, and accordingly, the committee decided to include a provision allowing a defendant to submit a written waiver of the right to be personally present with language adapted from sections 977(b)(2) and 1193(a). Further, the committee is tracking pending legislation allowing for an out-of-court written waiver for felony judgments, which would provide a clear statutory basis for a defendant to file a written waiver of the right to be present. The committee considered not addressing the issue of waiving personal presence but decided to include a waiver provision in the draft rule, recognizing that it likely will be a point of interest to commenters.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

This proposal may result in greater costs to the courts because it sets up formal procedures for handling resentencing recommendations. However, the proposed procedures provide a measure of clarity to courts receiving these recommendations.

Request for Specific Comments

In addition to comments on the proposal as a whole, the advisory committee is interested in comments on the following:

- Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose?
- Should the rule address a defendant's ability to waive the defendant's physical presence at resentencing?

The advisory committee also seeks comments from courts on the following cost and implementation matters:

- Would the proposal provide cost savings? If so, please quantify.
- What would the implementation requirements be for courts—for example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), changing docket codes in case management systems, or modifying case management systems?
- Would three months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation?
- How well would this proposal work in courts of different sizes?

Rule 4.520 of the California Rules of Court would be adopted, effective January 1, 2021, to read:

Rule 4.520. Recommendations to recall a sentence and resentence a defendant under Penal Code section 1170(d)(1)

(a) Application

This rule applies to recommendations under Penal Code section 1170(d)(1) by the Secretary of the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation or the Board of Parole Hearings in the case of state prison inmates, the county correctional administrator in the case of county jail inmates, or the district attorney of the county in which the defendant was sentenced, to recall a previously imposed sentence and resentence a defendant.

(b) Definitions

(1) Equitable considerations include eliminating the disparity of sentences and promoting uniformity of sentencing.

(2) A clerical error is one made in recording the judgment. It can be made by a clerk, counsel, or the court.

(c) Original sentencing judge

(1) A recommendation to recall a sentence and resentence a defendant must go before the original sentencing judge who entered judgment of conviction in the case.

(2) If the original sentencing judge is unavailable, the presiding judge or the presiding judge's designee must assign a judge.

(d) Initial review

(1) The court must conduct an initial review of the request to recall a sentence and resentence a defendant to determine if the recommendation is based on:

(A) An unauthorized sentence;

(B) Clerical error; or

(C) Equitable considerations.

(2) The court must consider specific facts related to equitable considerations specified in the recommendation for resentencing.

(3) When based on equitable considerations, the court must appoint counsel for the defendant if the court sets a status conference or hearing.

(e) Summary disposition

(1) The court may summarily deny a recommendation to recall a sentence and resentence the defendant if it finds that the basis for the recommendation is facially incorrect, or the court may decline to exercise its discretion to recall a sentence and resentence the defendant if the recommendation fails to state sufficient facts warranting resentencing.

(2) If the court intends to summarily deny a recommendation to recall a sentence and resentence the defendant, the court must notify the prosecuting agency and defense counsel of record of such intention and its reasons.

(3) The prosecuting agency or defense counsel may request a status conference or hearing if either disagrees with the court's proposed summary disposition of the recommendation. The matter must be set for a status conference following an objection to the court's proposed summary disposition.

(4) If no party requests a status conference or hearing within 10 court days, the summary disposition of the recommendation to recall a sentence and resentence the defendant must be noted on a minute order.

(5) The court must send copies of a minute order reflecting a summary disposition to the facility where the defendant is housed, the recommending agency, the prosecuting agency, and defense counsel of record.

(f) Tentative response for recommendations based on factors other than equitable considerations

(1) If the recommendation is based on factors other than equitable considerations, the court may prepare a tentative response and send it to the prosecuting agency and defense counsel of record for comment within 10 court days.

(A) If no objection is received, the court must send its response to the recommending agency, with an amended abstract of judgment if the defendant is in state prison and the court corrects the sentence.

(B) If there is an objection, the matter must be set for a status conference or hearing.

(g) Status conference

(1) The purpose of the status conference is to determine whether a hearing should be scheduled on the recommendation to recall the defendant's sentence.

(2) The defendant need not be present for the status conference.

(3) If the parties agree on a new sentence at the status conference, the court may recall the sentence and resentence an absent defendant if the defendant provides a written waiver of the right to be present in accordance with the requirements for a written waiver listed in (g)(4), if defense counsel is present at the sentencing, and if the court approves of the defendant's absence. The defendant may also appear for resentencing through a videoconference system without a written waiver.

(4) The written waiver must substantially state the following:

(A) The defendant has been advised of the right to be personally present for sentencing;

(B) The defendant waives the right to be personally present for sentencing;

(C) The defendant requests the court to sentence the defendant in absentia; and

(D) The defendant agrees that the defendant's interests are represented by the presence of the defendant's attorney the same as if the defendant were personally present.

(5) If there is no resolution at the status conference, the court must set a contested hearing.

(h) Hearing and resentencing

(1) The defendant's presence at the hearing and resentencing may be waived if there is a written waiver of the right to be personally present in accordance with the requirements for a written waiver listed in (g)(4). If the defendant's presence is waived, defense counsel must be present on behalf of the defendant.

(2) The defendant may appear at the hearing and resentencing through a videoconference system without a written waiver.

(3) A court resentencing under Penal Code section 1170(d)(1) must apply the sentencing rules in the California Rules of Court so as to eliminate disparity of sentences and to promote uniformity of sentencing.

(4) The court may consider any factors that were present at the original sentencing, including:

(A) Whether consecutive sentences could have been imposed; and

(B) The terms of a negotiated plea, including whether charges or cases were dismissed. The court must not deny a resentencing recommendation solely because the original sentence resulted from a negotiated plea.

(5) Under Penal Code section 1170(d)(1), the court may consider postconviction factors, including:

(A) The defendant's disciplinary record and record of rehabilitation while incarcerated;

(B) Evidence that reflects whether age, time served, and diminished physical condition, if any, have reduced the defendant's risk for future violence; and

(C) Evidence that reflects that circumstances have changed since the defendant's original sentencing so that the defendant's continued incarceration is no longer in the interest of justice.

(6) After the hearing, if the court determines that no change in the sentence is to be made, it must issue an order stating the reasons for the determination and enter the order in the minutes. A copy of the minute order must be sent to the recommending agency.

(7) If the court finds it necessary to correct an unauthorized sentence or clerical error, it must issue an order vacating the sentence, state the reasons for doing so, and indicate the correct sentence. The court must state its reasons either orally on the record or in a written order.

(8) If the court decides to exercise its discretion to recall a sentence and resentence a defendant for equitable reasons, it must state the reasons for doing so, and indicate the new sentence. The court must state its reasons either orally on the record or in a written order.

(9) If the court corrects a sentence or recalls a sentence and resentences the defendant, and the defendant is in state prison, an amended abstract of judgment must be sent by the court to the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation.

(i) Probation report

(1) A supplemental probation report is not required for resentencing, but a report must be prepared if ordered by the court based on the request of either party or on the court's own motion.

Executive Summary and Origin

The Criminal Law Advisory Committee recommends amending California Rules of Court, rule 4.530, to state that only the receiving court may certify records from a case and to allow for electronic transmission of a certified copy of the court file. The amendments were suggested by a judicial administrator.

Background

Certifying records

A judicial administrator stated that there was a lack of clarity around whether the transferring or receiving court may certify records from a case, when, for example, a district attorney requests a certified copy of conviction documents. Under Penal Code section 1203.9(b), the receiving court has entire jurisdiction over the case once the transfer is ordered. Hence, the committee recommends amending the rule to clarify that only the receiving court may certify records in the case.

Modernizing the rule to account for electronic case management systems

The rule's requirement for a court to transfer the original file does not fully account for electronic case management systems, where no original paper file exists. The committee recommends amending the rule to account for these systems.

The Proposal

This proposal would amend rule 4.530 by adding subdivisions stating that:

- On transfer, only the receiving court may certify copies from the court file; and that
- A certified copy of the entire court file may be electronically transmitted if an original court file does not exist, and if the receiving court receives a certified copy of the entire court file from the transferring court, it must be deemed an original file.

The amendments would clarify appropriate roles between transferring and receiving courts in certifying transferred case records and accommodate modernized court practices due to electronic case management systems.

Alternatives Considered

The committee agreed that the two proposed changes added clarity to the administration of probation transfers and considered no alternatives.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

No fiscal or operational impacts are anticipated as a result of amending rule 4.530.

Request for Specific Comments

In addition to comments on the proposal as a whole, the advisory committee is interested in comments on the following:

- Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose?

The advisory committee also seeks comments from courts on the following cost and implementation matters:

- Would the proposal provide cost savings? If so, please quantify.
- What would the implementation requirements be for courts—for example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), changing docket codes in case management systems, or modifying case management systems?
- Would three months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation?
- How well would this proposal work in courts of different sizes?

Executive Summary and Origin

The Criminal Law Advisory Committee recommends four new mandatory forms and an optional information sheet to be used to petition the court for termination of sex offender registration, acknowledge receipt of a petition by the appropriate law enforcement agencies and district attorney's offices, indicate a district attorney's response to the petition, and make appropriate court orders. The state Department of Justice requested the Judicial Council's assistance with forms to implement relevant parts of the Sex Offender Registration Act (Sen. Bill 384; Stats. 2017, ch. 541).

Background

Under the Sex Offender Registration Act, effective January 1, 2021, sex offender registration will convert from a lifetime requirement to a tier-based registration system with a minimum registration time period of 10 years, 20 years, or lifetime, largely depending on the registrable offense. The state Department of Justice will designate a tier for all current registrants and will notify the registering law enforcement agency. Starting July 1, 2021, registrants may petition the court in the county of registration to terminate the registration requirement if the registrant has been registered for the minimum required time and meets other criteria. The district attorney may request a hearing if they believe the person does not meet the requirements or if community safety would be enhanced by the person's continued registration. Penal Code section 290.5, effective July 1, 2021, outlines the procedure and requirements for the petition process.

The Proposal

The committee proposes adoption of the following four mandatory forms and approval of an information sheet.

Petition to Terminate Sex Offender Registration (form CR-415) allows petitioner or counsel to:

- Indicate that petitioner has met the requirements for termination under Penal Code section 290.5(a)(2), including proof of current registration; that petitioner has no pending charges that could extend the time to complete the registration requirements of petitioner's tier or change petitioner's status; and that petitioner is not in custody and not on parole, probation, postconviction supervised release, or any other form of supervised release;
- Identify petitioner's tier designation and indicate whether petitioner has registered for the minimum number of years for that tier designation as required under Penal Code section 290(e);
- If applicable, indicate whether petitioner has met the exceptions requirements outlined in Penal Code section 290.5(b)[1];
- Provide information on any previously filed and denied petitions so the served parties and the court are aware of any time restrictions on filing a subsequent petition under Penal Code section 290.5(a)(4), (b)(2)—(3); and
- State the agencies that the petition was served on and the method of service, to indicate compliance with the service requirements of Penal Code section 290.5(a)(2).

The petition also prompts the petitioner to read the information sheet before using the form, states that the petitioner must continue to register as a sex offender unless and until a court terminates the registration requirement, and prompts the petitioner to provide Acknowledgment of Receipt by Law Enforcement/District Attorney (form CR-416) to each law enforcement agency and district attorney served with a copy of the petition.

Information on Filing a Petition to Terminate Sex Offender Registration (form CR-415-INFO). This information sheet provides background on eligibility for relief, tier designation, tolling of the registration period, exception categories, and the petition process.

[1] This subdivision includes specified exceptions to tier two's 20-year registration requirement and tier three's lifetime registration requirement. Tier two contains an exception that permits a minimum 10-year registration requirement for specified offenses involving a minor victim, 14 to 17 years of age, that occurred when the offender was under 21. The state Department of Justice has indicated that it will not separately designate tier two registrants in this exception category. There is also an exception for registrants who have been designated as tier three due to an above-average risk level on the sex offender risk-assessment instrument, which permits them to petition for termination after a minimum 20-year registration period. The state Department of Justice has indicated that it will separately designate persons in tier three based on a risk-level assessment. The court's role is to determine whether community safety would be enhanced by requiring continued registration and, if the court denies the request based on community safety concerns, the time period after which the person can file another petition.

Acknowledgment of Receipt by Law Enforcement/District Attorney (form CR-416) allows law enforcement and the district attorney to acknowledge to the court receipt of the petitioner's Petition to Terminate Sex Offender Registration (form CR-415) and petitioner's proof of current registration. Under Penal Code section 290.5(a)(2), receipt of the petition triggers law enforcement's eligibility review, the first of many steps in the termination process.

Response by District Attorney to Petition to Terminate Sex Offender Registration (form CR-417) allows the district attorney to:

- State that there is no objection to the petition; or
- Request a hearing based on a community safety argument (Pen. Code § 290.5(a)(2)); or
- Recommend that the court deny the petition based on petitioner's ineligibility.

Order on Petition to Terminate Sex Offender Registration (form CR-418) allows the court to take one or more of the following actions:

- Grant the request to terminate sex offender registration under Penal Code section 290 et seq;
- Summarily deny the request based on petitioner's ineligibility;
- Deny the request after hearing based on a finding that community safety would be significantly enhanced by petitioner's continued registration (Pen. Code, § 290.5(a)(2));
- Indicate that its findings after hearing are either stated on the record or set forth in writing in the order; and
- Indicate the time period after which the petitioner may file another petition (Pen. Code, § 290.5(a)(4), (b)(2)—(3)).

The committee recommends an effective date of July 1, 2021, for the proposed forms since the termination petition process goes into effect on that date.

Alternatives Considered

Mandatory forms

The committee discussed whether to recommend mandatory or optional forms. Under Government Code section 68511, designating a form as mandatory prohibits courts from creating an alternative local form. The committee is recommending mandatory forms to promote uniformity throughout the state, especially since a significant number of petitions may involve petitioners with different counties of registration and conviction.

Procedure

Besides registering for the minimum number of years for their tier, petitioners in tiers one and two must also provide proof of current registration and cannot have pending charges, be in custody, or be on supervision. These requirements are not specified for petitioners in the exceptions categories for tiers two and three under Penal Code section 290.5(b), which permit a shortened registration time period if the petitioner meets specified criteria. The committee recommends that the petition include these requirements for petitioners in the tiers two and three exceptions categories, noting that it is reasonable to have those subject to exceptions comply with similar prerequisites to relief as petitioners in tiers one and two.

Law enforcement response form

The committee discussed whether to develop a form for law enforcement to use in their response to the courts and the district attorney regarding a petitioner's eligibility, noting that many courts prefer consistency across forms. The state Department of Justice indicated that the California Sex and Arson Registry would likely develop a response document for optional use by agencies that could be automatically populated to assist in determining eligibility. Because this option seemed preferable to a Judicial Council form, the committee decided not to develop a law enforcement response form.

Service and receipt of petition and proof of current registration

Receipt of the petition triggers law enforcement's eligibility review, the first of many steps in the termination process. The committee discussed the importance to the court in tracking that both law enforcement and the district attorney received the petition and proof of current registration. The committee considered developing a form for proof of service of the petition and proof of current registration, but concluded that a proof of service form was insufficient to confirm whether the petition and proof of current registration were actually received by law enforcement and the district attorney. The committee ultimately decided to develop a separate acknowledgement of receipt form for law enforcement and the district attorney to confirm receipt of the petition, similar to the acknowledgment requirement for a mailed civil summons and complaint under Code of Civil Procedure section 415.30.

District attorney or prosecuting agency

Penal Code section 290.5 references the role of the district attorney in the registration termination process. The committee discussed whether the forms should use a broader term, such as prosecuting agency, since city attorney's offices in some jurisdictions charge and prosecute registrable offenses and may be involved in responding to a petition. The committee decided to follow the statutory language and uses the term district attorney in the forms.

Juvenile adjudications

The committee discussed whether to develop forms that included requests to terminate registration based on juvenile adjudications. The Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee is tracking the issue and may develop separate forms to be used for those instances.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

It is anticipated that the volume of petitions for termination under Penal Code section 290.5 will be significant. Courts will have to process and act on the requests for termination by setting and conducting hearings and issuing written orders. The proposed forms are intended to mitigate workload burdens by streamlining some of this process and providing greater thoroughness and consistency in the presentation of the relevant information. Expected costs include training, case management system updates, and the production of new forms.

Request for Specific Comments

In addition to comments on the proposal as a whole, the advisory committee is interested in comments on the following:

- Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose?
- Are the forms and information sheet written in a way that would be understandable to most self-represented court users?

The advisory committee also seeks comments from courts on the following cost and implementation matters:

- Would the proposal provide cost savings? If so, please quantify.
- What would the implementation requirements be for courts—for example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), changing docket codes in case management systems, or modifying case management systems?
- Would 9 months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation?
- How well would this proposal work in courts of different sizes?

CR-415-INFO Information on Filing a Petition to Terminate Sex Offender Registration

1 General Information

- Do not file this information sheet with your petition.
- You must continue to register as a sex offender unless and until a court grants your request to terminate the registration requirement.
- You may be required to register as a sex offender in another jurisdiction even if your requirement to register in California is terminated.
- This information sheet is for registration based on convictions in adult criminal court. It does not address registration based on juvenile adjudications.

2 Am I eligible for relief under Penal Code section 290.5?

You may be eligible to petition for relief under Penal Code section 290.5 if:

- You are required to register as a sex offender as a result of a California state court conviction;
- Your "tier assignment" has been determined by the Department of Justice;
- You have been assessed as being within Tier 1 or Tier 2; or
- You have been assessed as being within Tier 3 based solely on your assessed level of relative risk.

3 Which tier am I? How is my tier determined?

- Your tier is based on your conviction, risk assessment scores, and other factors. The Department of Justice will determine tier placement for all current registrants and will notify the law enforcement agency where they register. Your minimum required registration period begins on the date you were released from incarceration, placement, or commitment upon being convicted of a registrable offense.
- The period "tolls" during any subsequent period of incarceration, placement, or commitment, except that arrests not resulting in conviction, adjudication, or revocation of probation or parole do not toll the required registration period.

- Any misdemeanor conviction for failure to register extends the minimum time period by one year. Any felony conviction for failure to register extends the minimum time period by three years.
- If there have been no tolling or extensions of the minimum registration period, you are eligible to petition for relief after you have registered for the following minimum time periods:

If you are...	You must have registered for at least...
Tier 1 (Adult)	10 years
Tier 2 (Adult)	20 years
Tier 2 (10-Year Registration Exception)	10 years
Tier 3 - Based on Risk Level	20 years

4 Are there any other requirements besides registering for my tier's minimum time period?

If you are assessed as coming within Tier 1 or Tier 2, you are only eligible to petition for relief on reaching the end of the minimum registration period, and only if all of the following are true:

- You are not the subject of pending criminal charges;
- You are not in custody; and
- You are not on parole, probation, post conviction supervised release, or any other form of supervised release.

If you are assessed as coming within Tier 3 solely based on your assessed relative risk level, you are only eligible to petition for relief at the end of the minimum period of registration if all of the above factors and all of the following are true:

- You were not convicted of a new offense requiring sex offender registration since your release from custody following your conviction for the offense originally giving rise to your duty to register; and
- You were not convicted of a new offense listed in Penal Code section 667.5(c) ("violent felony") since your release from custody following your conviction for the offense originally giving rise to your duty to register.

5 If I have been designated as being in Tier 2 (Adult), how do I know if I qualify for the Tier 2 10-year registration exception?

For adult registrants, a small number of Tier 2 offenses qualify for a 10-year registration period, instead of 20 years. Your designation letter or proof of current registration will not tell you whether you qualify. You may qualify if you have registered for 10 years and all of the following apply:

- The offense involved only one victim, between the ages of 14 and 17;
- You were under 21 years of age at the time of the offense;
- The offense is not listed in Penal Code section 667.5(c), violent felonies, with the exception of Penal Code section 288(a), lewd or lascivious act, or in Penal Code section 236.1, false imprisonment and human trafficking;
- You were not convicted of a new offense requiring sex offender registration since your release from custody following your conviction for the offense originally giving rise to your duty to register; and
- You were not convicted of a new offense described in Penal Code section 667.5(c) since your release from custody upon conviction for the offense originally giving rise to your duty to register.

6 At the end of my minimum period of registration, where and how do I file my petition with the court?

- Beginning July 1, 2021, you can file your petition and proof that you are current with your registration in the superior court in the county where you register. If you register with more than one law enforcement agency (for example, campus registration or additional residence address), you must file the petition in the county of your primary residence.
- Make a copy of the petition, proof of current registration, and copies of Acknowledgment of Receipt by Law Enforcement/District Attorney (form CR-416) for each law enforcement agency and district attorney's office you (or someone on your behalf) must serve.
- Contact the court clerk or check the court's website to see if any local rules exist regarding filing and/or service of the petition.
- File the petition by:
  - taking it to the court clerk in person;
  - mailing the petition to the court; or
  - depending on the court's local rules and practices, filing the petition electronically.

7 Who else gets a copy of the petition, and how?

You or someone on your behalf must deliver a copy of the petition and the proof that you are current with your registration on:

- The law enforcement agency with which you currently register; and
- The district attorney in the county in which you currently register.

If your registrable offense is from a different county than the one you register in, the petition and the proof of current registration must be delivered to the law enforcement agency and the district attorney of the county of conviction of the registrable offense.

Example: If you were convicted of a registrable offense in Los Angeles County but register in Orange County, you or someone else on your behalf must serve law enforcement and the district attorney in both counties.

Contact every agency that must be served to check if there is a specific person or mailing address that should receive the petition. If the agencies do not get a copy, they will not be able to provide the information the court needs to consider your request, and the court may deny the request or put it over until it receives this information.

There are three main ways to serve the petition:

- Personal service: You may serve the petition or ask someone else to do it. Go in person to hand-deliver the petition and proof of current registration to a representative of the law enforcement agency and district attorney's office during business hours. This is the most reliable form of service.
- Service by mail: Place copies of the petition and the proof of current registration in a stamped, sealed envelope addressed to the law enforcement agency and district attorney's office. Put first-class postage on the envelope and mail it by depositing the envelope with the U.S. Postal Service or at an office or business mail drop where the mail is picked up every day and deposited with the U.S. Postal Service.
- Electronic service: Contact the law enforcement agency and district attorney's office to check if they accept electronic service. If so, the court may require proof of consent and proof of electronic service. You can use Consent to Electronic Service and Notice of Electronic Notification Address (form EFS-005-CV) and Proof of Electronic Service (form EFS-050), available at www.courts.ca.gov/forms.

Your petition may be denied if all law enforcement agencies and district attorney's offices required to be served are not served.

8 Time frame for court's decision

The court will not make a decision until it hears from the law enforcement agency and the prosecuting agency. This may take four months or longer. The court may grant your request, deny your request, or set the request for a hearing if one is requested by the prosecuting agency.

9 Hearing

The prosecuting agency may request a hearing if it does not believe you have registered for the minimum time period required or if it believes that you should continue registering for community safety. At the hearing, the court will make its decision about whether you should continue registering for community safety by reviewing the facts of your case and your conduct since the conviction.

10 Subsequent petition

If the court denies your request, it will let you know how much time must pass before you can make the request again. This depends in part on your tier.

- Tier 1 and 2 (Adult): at least one year from date of denial, but not to exceed five years, based on facts presented at the hearing
- Tier 2 (10-year registration exception): at least one year from date of denial
- Tier 3 (based on risk level): at least three years from date of denial

Executive Summary and Origin

The Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee proposes the adoption of a new rule of court and revisions to a chapter title in title 5 of the California Rules of Court, in addition to amendments to adoption forms, to implement Assembly Bill 677 (Choi; Stats. 2019, ch. 805) regarding intercountry adoptions. The committee also proposes amendments to adoption forms and the approval of a new, optional form to implement Assembly Bill 1373 (Patterson; Stats. 2019, ch. 192) regarding stepparent adoptions in cases of gestational surrogacy. Both bills became effective January 1, 2020.

Background

Intercountry adoptions

During federal fiscal year 2018, the U.S. Department of State adoptions statistics indicated that 269 children were adopted from foreign countries and brought to California to live with their adoptive families.[1] Of these 269 adoptions, 244 had their adoptions finalized in the foreign country and 25 entered the United States with the intention of finalizing their adoption in this country.[2] With the enactment of the Child Citizenship Act of 2000,[3] the federal government authorized automatic U.S. citizenship for adoptees in certain cases of intercountry adoption, depending on the child's country of origin and age at adoption, whether the adoption was finalized in the child's country of origin, and the visa the child used to enter the United States. If a child does not acquire automatic U.S. citizenship pursuant to the Child Citizenship Act, the federal government requires readoption under state law for purposes of pursuing U.S. citizenship. Prior to the enactment of AB 677, California law mandated readoption under state law for children whose adoption was finalized abroad only when required by the Department of State for U.S. citizenship purposes.[4]

As of January 1, 2020, when an adoption has been finalized in a foreign country, California adoptive parents are required under Family Code section 8919 to file a request for adoption under state law within the earlier of 60 days from the child's entry to the United States or by the child's 16th birthday. Parents are also required to provide a copy of the petition to each adoption agency that provided services to the parents. If the adoptive parents fail to timely file the request for adoption or provide copies to the adoption agency or agencies who provided the adoption services, the adoption agency must, within 90 days of the entry of the child to the United States, initiate the filing with the court and provide a "file-marked copy" of the petition to the adoptive parent and any other adoption agency that provided adoption services, within five business days of filing. The purpose of AB 677 is to ensure that U.S. citizenship is pursued and obtained for children whose adoptions are finalized abroad and to protect adopted children against human trafficking.

Adoptions required in certain cases of gestational surrogacy

The current "stepparent adoption" process contemplates two possible scenarios. The first scenario is the traditional definition of stepparent adoption—when a person marries or enters into a registered domestic partnership with the legal parent of a child after the child is born and seeks to become a legal parent of the child. This process requires a home study and is contained in Family Code sections 9000 through 9007. The second scenario arising under stepparent adoption is a process to confirm parentage when the "stepparent" or person seeking the adoption was married to or in a registered domestic partnership with the birth parent when the child was born. The process allowing for confirmation of parentage was enacted with the Modern Family Act of 2014 (Assem. Bill 2344 (Ammiano); Stats. 2014, ch. 636) and is contained in Family Code section 9000.5. Confirmation of parentage does not require a home study.

[4] Readoption under California law was and is still required when a child enters the United States prior to finalization of the adoption, is placed with a California adoptive family, and the adoption is finalized in this state. (Fam. Code, § 8911.)

California law also contemplates two types of gestational surrogates: "traditional" surrogates, in which the surrogate's own egg is inseminated with the sperm of the intended parent; and "gestational carriers," who are implanted with a fertilized embryo and do not contribute any genetic material to the child. (Fam. Code, § 7960(f)). Under legislation enacted in 2016 (Assem. Bill 2349 (Chiu); Stats. 2016, ch. 385), intended parents who have entered into a surrogacy agreement with a gestational carrier who resides outside the state of California are authorized to pursue a pre-birth order of parentage and may file an action in California to establish parentage of the child under the Uniform Parentage Act, as enacted in California. (Fam. Code, §§ 7600–7730.) However, some states still prohibit a parent with no genetic ties to the child from establishing parentage under that state's version of the Uniform Parentage Act and require the parent to pursue adoption in order to be listed on the child's birth certificate.

The purpose of AB 1373 was to expand the process allowing intended parents to "confirm parentage" in those cases in which all of the following apply:

- The intended parents reside in California;
- The intended parents together entered into a surrogacy agreement with a gestational carrier residing out of state;
- The child's birth was registered in another state;
- The laws of that other state allowed for only one of the two intended parents to be listed on the child's birth certificate;
- The intended parents were married or in a registered domestic partnership when the child was born and remain in that union; and
- The parent who was not able to establish parentage in another state now seeks to adopt the child in order to be listed on the child's birth certificate.

Gender identification questions

California's Gender Recognition Act (Sen. Bill 179, Stats. 2017, ch. 853) contains findings and declarations regarding the fundamentally personal nature of gender identification and the need for options on state-issued identification documents to ensure that gender is accurately reflected. In addition to streamlining processes for name change and gender recognition, the act establishes nonbinary as a new option for gender recognition, making California one of only five states in the nation and the District of Columbia to recognize a third gender category.

As requested by the Judicial Council's Rules Committee, the Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee indicated on its annual agenda that it would "revise all gendered terms or gender identity questions to conform to legislative changes providing for nonbinary gender identity as those forms are subject to revision for any other purpose including implementation of statutory changes."[5]

[5] Judicial Council of Cal., Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee, Annual Agenda—2020 (approved Oct. 28, 2019), www.courts.ca.gov/documents/famjuv-annual.pdf.

Best practices for the identification and removal or revision of gender identification questions on Judicial Council forms dictate that the gender identification questions should be asked only when necessary to effectuate the purpose of the form, which includes a statutory requirement to ascertain sex or gender. If it is determined that the question is required, it may need to be revised in order to be legally compliant, use clear and respectful language, and elicit data that satisfies the needs of the form consumer.

The current Adoption Request (form ADOPT-200) contains a field in item 4b in which the form user can check a box next to "Boy" or "Girl." There are five Family Code provisions applicable to adoptions—intercountry, stepparent, agency, and independent adoptions—which require that the petition state the sex of the child.[6] Therefore, this item has been reformulated to "Sex of this child" and to include all three gender categories, as follows:

b. Sex of this child ___ Female ___ Male ___ Nonbinary

Indian Child Welfare Act content and questions

In 2016, the federal government finalized comprehensive regulations and issued updated guidelines to implement the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA).[7] In 2017, the Attorney General's ICWA Compliance Task Force made recommendations on the implementation of ICWA in California,[8] and in 2018, state legislative changes impacted the ICWA provisions contained in the Welfare and Institutions Code.[9] It was determined that in some areas, federal guidelines were inconsistent with existing California law and practice, thus necessitating a recent proposal to update title 5 of the California Rules of Court and a variety of ICWA and juvenile law forms, which went into effect on January 1, 2020. Specifically, the proposal clarified the application of the standards "reason to believe" and "reason to know" whether a child is an Indian child, and the requirement to conduct additional inquiry.

The current form ADOPT-200 asks whether the child "may have Indian ancestry." Because this question is part of the required inquiry, but is not the sole determinant as to whether additional inquiry is required and whether there is reason to know that a child is an Indian child, this section is proposed to be amended to come into compliance with current federal regulations.

The Proposal

The committee proposes the following:

1. Revise the title of chapter 3 in division 2 of title 5 of the California Rules of Court to allow for the inclusion of additional rules of court related to intercountry adoptions.

2. Adopt rule 5.493 setting forth the responsibilities of adoptive parents, adoption agencies, and the courts with regard to the filing of a request for adoption under California law of a child whose adoption was finalized in another country.

3. Revise How to Adopt a Child in California (form ADOPT-050-INFO) to include new statutory requirements for intercountry adoptions and the use of stepparent confirmation of parentage in certain situations of gestational surrogacy.

4. Revise Adoption Request (form ADOPT-200), Adoption Agreement (form ADOPT-210), and Adoption Order (form ADOPT-215) to include new statutory requirements for intercountry adoptions and the use of stepparent confirmation of parentage in certain situations of gestational surrogacy. Both the gender identification question and the item addressing responsibilities under ICWA on form ADOPT-200 are proposed for revision.

5. Approve Declaration Confirming Parentage in Stepparent Adoption: Gestational Surrogacy (form ADOPT-206), which is a slightly modified version of Declaration Confirming Parentage in Stepparent Adoption (form ADOPT-205), an optional attachment used to confirm parentage.

Each of these proposed revisions and the proposed new rule and form are detailed below.

Revision to chapter title

The committee proposes to change the title of chapter 3 in division 2 of title 5 from "Adoptions under the Hague Adoption Convention" to "Intercountry Adoptions." All existing rules of court addressing adoptions under the rules of the convention would remain as is, but the more general title for this section will allow for the inclusion of new rule 5.493 related to intercountry adoptions.

Rule 5.493

The committee proposes to add new rule 5.493, which sets forth the requirements contained in Family Code sections 8912 and 8919 with respect to the readoption of children born in foreign countries whose adoptions were finalized abroad. Specifically, the proposed rule contains the new statutory requirement to request adoption under California law of a child whose adoption was finalized in a foreign country, the responsibility of agencies to initiate a petition when a parent fails to make a timely request, and the responsibilities of courts to notify the Department of Social Services at their Sacramento office upon the filing of a petition for adoption.

Form ADOPT-050-INFO, How to Adopt a Child in California

The information sheet for adoptions is proposed to be amended to accommodate changes in the law from both bills and the changes to ICWA implementation language. Form ADOPT-050-INFO is an information sheet that provides instructions on the various forms required to be filled out in order to adopt a child in California and includes information regarding stepparent adoptions; confirmation of parentage; adoption of an Indian child; independent, agency, and intercountry adoptions; and open adoptions.

The proposed substantive amendments to this form are as follows:

- Change "In California there are several kinds of adoption. This form includes instructions for:" to "In California there are several kinds of adoption. This information sheet provides steps for the following types:"

- Under "General Information on Adoptions," change the adoption categories to "Independent or agency adoptions in the United States," "Intercountry adoptions," "Stepparent/domestic partner adoptions," and "Stepparent/domestic partner confirmation of parentage." Add the sentence "Page 4 also has information about open adoptions and special requirements for the adoption of Indian children."

- Under "Stepparent/Domestic Partner Adoptions," change the first question to "If you wish to adopt the child of your spouse or domestic partner, you may be eligible for a stepparent adoption. There are two types of stepparent adoptions. Answer these questions to figure out which process is right for you."

    - Combine the existing two questions into one: "Was the adopting parent in a union with the child's legal parent at the time the child was born and is the adopting parent still in a union with the legal parent?"

    - Add a question: "Did the adopting parent's spouse or partner give birth to the child or did the adopting parent enter into a gestational surrogacy agreement as an intended parent with the legal parent of the child?"

- Insert horizontal dashed lines and the statement "Additional Forms for Stepparent Adoption to Confirm Parentage" to clarify the two processes.

- Add a reference to new proposed form ADOPT-206, a description indicating when this optional form applies, and a reference to the application of the parentage confirmation process to certain types of gestational surrogacy.

- Change the section title "Independent, Agency, or International Adoptions" to "Independent or Agency Adoptions in the United States."

- Add new section "Intercountry Adoptions." This section incorporates the changes to the law enacted by AB 677 on intercountry adoptions.

- Add new section "Inquiry and Notice Under the Indian Child Welfare Act" along with detailed requirements pursuant to recent federal regulatory and state legislative changes.

- Change the section title "Adopting an Indian Child" to "Adoption of an Indian Child."

- Under the section title "'Open' Adoption," change the text to "If you want your child to have contact with their birth family, use Contact After Adoption Agreement (form ADOPT-310) to describe the kind of contact the birth family will have with your child. Fill out this form and bring it to your hearing."

The proposed plain language amendments to this form are:

- Delete "(page X)" after each type of adoption covered in the INFO sheet.

- Consolidate the definition of "union" into a single sentence, shrink font and remove italics.

- Change icons next to questions.

- Remove Yes/No options after the questions.

- Remove periods after each numbered action item.

- Under "Adoption of an Indian Child," change the text to "If you are adopting an Indian child, fill out and bring to court the following additional forms."

The additional language proposed here would add two pages to this form, making it a four-page information sheet.

Adoption Request (form ADOPT-200)

All items: Bold headings for all items, rename some for consistency and remove punctuation marks like periods and colons. Changed font of headings to Arial throughout. In some cases, change Yes/No questions to statements with a check box to indicate that the statement applies to the adoption request. The caption was amended to include additional code provisions contemplated in the form.

Item 1

- Change "Your name(s) (adopting parent(s))" to the heading "Adopting parent(s)" to reduce the number of parentheses and italics and because the item asks for more than names.
- Add "Name" to items 1a and 1b.

Item 2

- Add heading "County of filing." Change "I/We filed this Adoption Request in this court because it is in the county (check all that apply):" to "This Adoption Request is filed in this court because (check all that apply)."
- Reword each option by removing "where" from the beginning and adding "in this county."
- Move the Hearing Date box directly under the Case Number box to allow all item 3 options to display on the same page.

Item 3

- Indent the joinder questions under the "Agency" option, allowing the form user to select only one type of adoption.
- Under the "Intercountry" option, move "This adoption may be subject to the Hague Adoption Convention (form ADOPT-216 must be filed with this request)" to renumbered item 13, "Intercountry adoption questions," and add the joinder options.
- Change the "Stepparent" option to "Stepparent adoption." Convert the text under that item to an option that reads "Stepparent adoption to confirm parentage." Replace the instruction text with "See form ADOPT-050-INFO to determine whether you are eligible for the stepparent adoption to confirm parentage process."

Item 4

- In item 4b, delete the options "Boy" and "Girl" and substitute "Sex" followed by the options "Female," "Male," and "Nonbinary." This makes the form language consistent with the Gender Recognition Act of 2017 (SB 179), while remaining in compliance with various adoption statutes requiring the collection of information on "sex" on the petition.
- Add new item 4h to collect information from former item 13 regarding the conception of the child through assisted reproduction.
- Add new item 4i, "The child is a dependent of the court," and add juvenile case number and county fields. Former item 7 would be deleted.

Item 5

- Convert the instruction into a heading.

Item 6

- Move former item 9 regarding birth parents to item 6.
- Add the heading "Birth parents."
- Combine questions, with a single line for parents' names.

Item 7

- Add the heading "Legal guardian."
- Change the instruction to "If yes, attach Letters of Guardianship and fill out below)," remove italics, and place on the same line as the Yes/No question.
- Put items 7a through 7c in two columns.

Item 8

- Add the heading "Inquiry and notice under the Indian Child Welfare Act."
- Reword the questions and information relative to inquiry and notice under ICWA based on recent statutory changes to title 5 of the California Rules of Court and Welfare and Institutions Code.

Item 9

- Add new heading "Adoption of an Indian child" (this mirrors the same heading on form ADOPT-050-INFO).
- Add item 9a allowing the form user to indicate that this is an adoption of an Indian child and instructing the user to fill out two additional forms.
- Add item 9b (formerly item 10c) allowing the user to indicate that this is a tribal customary adoption.

Item 10

- Add new heading "Agency adoption questions" to signal that only those who are pursuing an agency adoption need to answer the questions.
- Move former item 10c to item 9, "Adoption of an Indian child."
- Move former item 10d to item 13, "Intercountry adoption questions."

Item 11

- Add new heading "Independent adoption questions" and retain items 11a through 11d.

Item 12

- Add new heading "Stepparent adoption and confirmation of parentage questions."
- Amend item 12c to state "The adopting parent married or entered into a registered domestic partnership with the legal parent" instead of referring to "the adopting parents."
- Amend item 12d to add a check box to indicate whether proposed new form ADOPT-206 is attached.
- Add item 12f to account for the possibility of adding a third parent without termination of either existing parent's rights, using the stepparent adoption process.

Item 13

- Add new heading "Intercountry adoption questions."
- Add item 13a (former item 3) containing the statement regarding the Hague Adoption Convention.
- Add item 13b (former item 10d) but change to "This is an adoption conducted under the requirements of the Hague Adoption Convention and the child has already moved with the adopting parent(s) to another Hague Convention member country or will be moving at the conclusion of this adoption." The Yes/No options will be removed from this question, so it will only be checked when applicable.
- Pursuant to AB 667, add item 13c to ask the date the child entered the United States and provide a cross-reference to form ADOPT-050-INFO for a list of documents to attach to the adoption request for an intercountry adoption finalized in another country.

Item 15: Add new heading "Consent for adoption."

Item 17: Add new heading "Requests to court."

Item 18: Change "he or she must sign here" to "the lawyer must sign here."

Adoption Agreement (form ADOPT-210)

This form is typically signed in front of a judge at the hearing. Minor changes to items 1 and 2 were made to conform to plain language changes in form ADOPT-200. The caption was amended to include additional code provisions contemplated in the form.

Item 1

- Change "Your name(s) (adopting parent(s))" to the heading "Adopting parent(s)" to reduce the number of parentheses and italics and because the item asks for more than names.
- Add "Name" to items 1a and 1b.

Item 2

- Add the heading "Information about the child."
- Correct the typo in the instruction heading so that it reads "Signing this form."
- Change the third bulleted item to add "or established parentage over a child born through gestational surrogacy."

Adoption Order (form ADOPT-215)

This form requires only minor amendments to align with legislative changes.

Item 1

- Change "Your name(s) (adopting parent(s))" to the heading "Adopting parent(s)" to reduce the number of parentheses and italics and because the item asks for more than names.
- Add "Name" to items 1a and 1b.

Item 2: Add the heading "Information about the child."

Item 4

- In the final check box, change the instruction to read "Check this box only if this is an adoption confirming parentage of a parent who was married to or in a state-registered domestic partnership with the legal parent at the time the child was born)."

Item 12: Delete the term "independent" to allow for the possibility of a traditional stepparent adoption involving an additional parent, pursuant to this option on form ADOPT-200 (new item 12f).

Declaration Confirming Parentage in Stepparent Adoption: Gestational Surrogacy (form ADOPT-206)

This proposed new form is an adaptation of existing form ADOPT-205, which is designed for optional use in a stepparent parentage confirmation process. The title includes the term "Gestational Surrogacy" to indicate that the form may be used in a case in which AB 1373 would apply. The rest of the form was modified by removing the term "birth parent" and replacing it with "parent who established parentage through a gestational surrogacy process" or, in some contexts, "legal parent." In item 4, the words "outside the state of California" were added to the statement about the child's birth. Because this is a different application of the confirmation of parentage process and the terms are long and unwieldy, the committee proposes this separate optional attachment for these very specific cases.

Alternatives Considered

One alternative would have been to fully examine and reconsider the contents and organization of form ADOPT-200, which encompasses most of the various avenues for adopting a child in California, including independent, agency, intercountry, and stepparent adoptions. Creating separate form sets for intercountry adoptions or stepparent adoptions to confirm parentage may serve to clarify all of the various processes. Ultimately, the committee determined that the overall number of intercountry adoptions statewide each year did not justify the staff and committee time that would have been required to undertake a complete overhaul of these forms. Likewise, for the forms that are impacted by the legislation adding a new category of stepparent adoptions, a very narrow group of adoptive parents are impacted by the changes, so it was determined that for this proposal, the most important task is to ensure compliance of the forms and the process with current law, and the most efficient way to do this is through minor amendments to the existing forms.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

Court personnel may need training to understand their responsibilities when an international adoption agency initiates an adoption request under the new law. Courts that maintain paper versions of the forms will incur the costs of replacing old forms with the revised forms. Because there are amendments to forms ADOPT-210 and ADOPT-215, both of which have been translated into Spanish, the Judicial Council will incur costs in updating these translated versions should the forms ultimately be amended by the Judicial Council.

Request for Specific Comments

In addition to comments on the proposal as a whole, the advisory committee is interested in comments on the following:

- Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose?
- Do the rule and forms accurately reflect the processes established in legislation?

The advisory committee also seeks comments from courts on the following cost and implementation matters:

- Would the proposal provide cost savings? If so, please quantify.
- What would the implementation requirements be for courts—for example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), changing docket codes in case management systems, or modifying case management systems?
- Would three months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation?
- How well would this proposal work in courts of different sizes?

Rule 5.493 of the California Rules of Court would be adopted, effective January 1, 2021, to read:

Title 5. Family and Juvenile Rules

Division 2. Rules Applicable in Family and Juvenile Proceedings

Chapter 3. ~~Adoptions under the Hague Adoption Convention~~ Intercountry Adoptions

Rules 5.490–5.492 * * *

Rule 5.493. Requirement to request adoption under California law of a child born in a foreign country when the adoption is finalized in the foreign country (Fam. Code, §§ 8912, 8919)

(a) Responsibility to file request

(1) A resident of California who has finalized an intercountry adoption in a foreign country must:

(A) File a request to readopt the child in California within the earlier of 60 days from the adoptee's entry into the United States or the adoptee's 16th birthday; and

(B) Provide a copy of the adoption request to each adoption agency that provided the adoption services to the adoptive parent.

(2) If the adopting parent fails to timely file a request to readopt the child under California law, the adoption agency that facilitated the adoption must:

(A) File the request within 90 days of the child's entry into the United States; and

(B) Provide a file-marked copy of the request to the adoptive parent and to any other adoption agency that provided services to the adoptive parent within five business days of filing.

(3) If an adoption agency files a request in accordance with (2), the adoptive parent or parents will be liable to the adoption agency for all costs and fees incurred as a result of good faith actions taken by the adoption agency to fulfill the requirement set forth in this rule.

(b) Contents of request

(1) A request to adopt under California law a child born in a foreign country whose adoption was finalized in a foreign country must include all of the following:

(A) A certified or otherwise official copy of the foreign decree, order, or certification of adoption that reflects finalization of the adoption in the foreign country;

(B) A certified or otherwise official copy of the child's foreign birth certificate;

(C) A certified translation of all documents described in this subdivision that are not written in English;

(C) Proof that the child was granted lawful entry into the United States as an immediate relative of the adoptive parent or parents;

(D) A report from at least one postplacement home visit by an intercountry adoption agency or a contractor of that agency licensed to provide intercountry adoption services in the state of California; and

(E) A copy of the home student report previously completed for the international finalized adoption by an adoption agency authorized to provide intercountry adoption services, in accordance with Family Code section 8900.

(2) If an adoption agency initiates a request in accordance with (a)(2), the filing must consist of the following:

(A) A signed cover sheet containing the name, date of birth, and date of entry to California of the child, the names and address of adoptive parents, and the name and contact information for the adoption agency;

(B) Blank copies of all forms required to initiate the request for adoption under California law; and

(C) Any document required in (b)(1) that is in the possession of the adoption agency.

(c) Clerk's notice of request and order

(1) When a request for adoption under California law of a child whose adoption was finalized in a foreign country is filed, the court clerk must immediately notify the California Department of Social Services in Sacramento in writing of the pendency of the proceeding and of any subsequent action taken.

(2) If a request for adoption under California law is initiated under (a)(2), the clerk of the court must file-stamp the request to allow the adoption agency to fulfill its obligations under (a)(2)(B).

(3) Within 10 business days of an order granting a request for adoption under California law, the clerk of the court must submit to the State Registrar the order granting the request.

General Information on Adoptions

Seek legal advice about your family's options before beginning any adoption. Every family is different and adoption may not be necessary for some families. Visit the California Court's Online Self-Help Center adoption page to get copies of adoption forms, look for organizations that provide legal help with adoptions, and learn how to complete the adoption process on your own if you do not have a lawyer: www.courts.ca.gov/selfhelp-adoption.htm. You can also get copies of adoption forms at your local court clerk's office.

In California there are several kinds of adoption. This information sheet provides steps for the following types:

- Independent or agency adoptions in the United States
- Intercountry adoptions
- Stepparent/domestic partner adoptions
- Stepparent/domestic partner confirmation of parentage

Page 4 also has information about open adoptions and special requirements for the adoption of Indian (Native American) children.

Stepparent/Domestic Partner Adoptions

If you wish to adopt the child of your spouse or domestic partner, you may be eligible for a stepparent adoption. There are two types of stepparent adoptions. Answer these questions to figure out which process is right for you:

→ Was the adopting parent in a union with the child's legal parent at the time the child was born and is the adopting parent still in a union with the legal parent? (A "union" means a marriage, a California registered domestic partnership, or a registered domestic partnership or civil union from another state that is legally equivalent to a marriage.)

→ Did the adopting parent's spouse or partner give birth to the child or did the adopting parent enter into a gestational surrogacy agreement as an intended parent with the legal parent of the child?

If you answered "No" to either question, complete items 1 through 4 below for a stepparent/domestic partner adoption.
If you answered "Yes" to both questions, complete items 1 and 2, only, for a stepparent adoption to confirm parentage.

1 Fill out court forms

☐ ADOPT-200	Adoption Request	This tells the judge about you and the child you are adopting.
☐ ADOPT-210	Adoption Agreement	This tells the judge that you and the child, if over 12, agree to the adoption. Fill it out, but do not sign it until the judge asks you to sign it.
☐ ADOPT-215	Adoption Order	The judge signs this form if your adoption is approved.
☐ ICWA-010(A)	Indian Child Inquiry Attachment	This lets the judge know that you have asked whether the child may have Indian ancestry.
☐ ICWA-020	Parental Notification of Indian Status	This shows that the child's parents have been asked about Indian ancestry.

Additional Forms for Stepparent Adoption to Confirm Parentage

☐ ADOPT-205 (or an equivalent declaration)	Declaration Confirming Parentage in Stepparent Adoption	This tells the court how you conceived your child and whether there are any other parents. Only use this if you are seeking a stepparent adoption to confirm parentage. See above for more information on this type of adoption. Both the birth parent and the adopting parent must complete a separate declaration.
-OR-
☐ ADOPT-206 (or an equivalent declaration)	Declaration Confirming Parentage in Stepparent Adoption: Gestational Surrogacy	This tells the court how you conceived your child and whether there are any other parents. Only use this if you are seeking a stepparent adoption to confirm parentage when you have used a gestational carrier, the child was born outside of California, and the state where the child was born only allowed one intended parent to be named a legal parent on the child's birth certificate.

2 Take your forms to court

Take the completed forms to the court clerk in the county where you live. The court will charge a filing fee. Or take the forms to your lawyer or adoption agency, if you are using one.

3 The social worker writes a report

In most adoptions, a social worker writes a report. This report gives important information to the judge about the adopting parents and the child. The social worker will ask you questions. You may have to fill out forms. You may be required to pay a fee for this report. The social worker will file the report with the court and send you a copy. When you get the report, ask the clerk for a date for your adoption hearing.

4 Go to court on the date of your hearing

Bring:

☐ The child you are adopting ☐ Form ADOPT-210 ☐ Form ADOPT-215
☐ A camera, if you want a photo of you and your child with the judge (optional) ☐ Friends/relatives (optional)

Independent or Agency Adoptions in the United States

If this is an independent or agency adoption in the United States, complete items 1 through 4 below.

Note: The rights of the existing parents usually terminate with adoptions. In an independent adoption, if the existing and adopting parents agree, the rights of the existing parent(s) do not have to be terminated.

1 Fill out court forms

☐ ADOPT-200	Adoption Request	This tells the judge about you and the child you are adopting.
☐ ADOPT-210	Adoption Agreement	This tells the judge that you and the child, if over 12, agree to the adoption. Fill it out, but do not sign it until the judge asks you to sign it.
☐ ADOPT-215	Adoption Order	The judge signs this form if your adoption is approved.
☐ ADOPT-230	Adoption Expenses	This lets the judge know what payments were made that relate to the child you are adopting.
☐ ICWA-010(A)	Indian Child Inquiry Attachment	This lets the judge know that you have asked whether the child may have Indian ancestry.
☐ ICWA-020	Parental Notification of Indian Status	This proves that the child's parents have been asked about Indian ancestry.

2 Take your forms to court

Take the completed forms to the court clerk in the county where you live. The court will charge a filing fee. Or take the forms to your lawyer or adoption agency, if you are using one.

3 The social worker writes a report

In most adoptions, a social worker writes a report. This report gives important information to the judge about the adopting parents and the child. The social worker will ask you questions. You may have to fill out forms. You may be required to pay a fee for this report. The social worker will file the report with the court and send you a copy. When you get the report, ask the clerk for a date for your adoption hearing.

4 Go to court on the date of your hearing

Bring: ☐ The child you are adopting ☐ Form ADOPT-210 ☐ Form ADOPT-215 ☐ Form ADOPT-230
☐ A camera, if you want a photo of you and your child with the judge (optional) ☐ Friends/relatives (optional)

Intercountry Adoptions

If this is an intercountry (international) adoption, complete items 1 through 4 below.
Note: You must follow this process to adopt your child under California law, even if the adoption was previously finalized in a foreign country. If the child's adoption was finalized in a foreign country, you must file the Adoption Request within the earlier of 60 days of the child's arrival to the United States, or the child's 16th birthday.

1 Fill out court forms

☐ ADOPT-200	Adoption Request	This tells the judge about you and the child you are adopting.
☐ ADOPT-210	Adoption Agreement	This tells the judge that you and the child, if over 12, agree to the adoption. Fill it out, but do not sign it until the judge asks you to sign it.
☐ ADOPT-215	Adoption Order	The judge signs this form if your adoption is approved.
☐ ADOPT-230	Adoption Expenses	This lets the judge know what payments were made that relate to the child you are adopting.
☐ ICWA-010(A)	Indian Child Inquiry Attachment	This lets the judge know that you have asked whether the child may have Indian ancestry.
☐ ICWA-020	Parental Notification of Indian Status	This proves that the child's parents have been asked about Indian ancestry.

2 Postadoption or postplacement visits and reports

If the child's adoption was finalized in a foreign country, there will be at least one postadoption visit provided by the international adoption agency. The report of this visit must be submitted to the court as described below. If the child was born in a foreign country and placed with a California family for adoption in this state, the adoption agency must provide postplacement supervision with up to four visits. These reports are also provided to the court.

3 Attach documentation

If the child's adoption was finalized in a foreign country, you must attach the following documents to your Adoption Request:

- ☐ A certified or otherwise official copy of the foreign decree, order, or certification of adoption that reflects finalization of the adoption in the foreign country
- ☐ A certified or otherwise official copy of the child's foreign birth certificate
- ☐ A certified translation of all required documents that are not written in English
- ☐ Proof that the child was granted lawful entry into the United States as an immediate relative of the adoptive parent or parents
- ☐ A report from at least one postplacement home visit by an intercountry adoption agency or a contractor of that agency licensed to provide intercountry adoption services in the State of California
- ☐ A copy of the home study report previously completed for the international finalized adoption by an adoption agency authorized to provide intercountry adoption services, in accordance with Family Code section 8900

4 Take your forms to court

Take the completed forms and any required documents to the court clerk in the county where you live. The court will charge a filing fee. Or take the forms to your lawyer or adoption agency, if you are using one.

5 Provide a copy of the forms and documents

If the child's adoption was finalized in a foreign country, provide a copy of the forms and documentation you filed with the court to any adoption agency that provided services to you for your international adoption.

6 Go to court on the date of your hearing

Bring: ☐ The child you are adopting ☐ Form ADOPT-210 ☐ Form ADOPT-215 ☐ Form ADOPT-230
☐ A camera, if you want a photo of you and your child with the judge (optional) ☐ Friends/relatives (optional)

Inquiry and Notice Under the Indian Child Welfare Act

- ☐ The adopting parent(s) must ask specific questions of the child and other people in the child's life in order to determine whether the child may be an Indian child. They must make the inquiry required under law and attach Indian Child Inquiry Attachment (ICWA-010(A)) to their Adoption Request. For more information about the duty of inquiry, see form ICWA-005-INFO.
- ☐ The adopting parent(s) must attach a completed version of Parental Notification of Indian Status (form ICWA-020) OR make a good faith attempt to provide the form to the parents, Indian custodian, or guardian of the child and inform them that they are required to complete and submit the form to the court.
- ☐ If there is reason to believe that the child is or may be an Indian child, additional inquiry is required. For more information about the duty of inquiry, see form ICWA-005-INFO.
- ☐ If, after additional inquiry, there is reason to know that the child is an Indian child, notice must be provided of the adoption request to the child's tribe or tribes, parents, Indian custodian, and the Bureau of Indian Affairs, using Notice of Child Custody Proceeding for Indian Child (form ICWA-030). This form must be served by registered or certified mail, with return receipt requested.
- ☐ If it is determined that the child is an Indian child or this is a tribal customary adoption, see Adoption of an Indian Child, below.

Adoption of an Indian Child

If you are adopting an Indian child, fill out and bring to court the following additional forms:

- ☐ Adoption of Indian Child, form ADOPT-220
- ☐ Parent of Indian Child Agrees to End Parental Rights, form ADOPT-225

If you are adopting through a tribal customary adoption:

- ☐ Attach a copy of the tribal customary adoption order to Adoption Request, form ADOPT-200
- ☐ Attach a copy of the tribal customary adoption order to Adoption Order, form ADOPT-215

"Open" Adoption

If you want your child to have contact with their birth family, use Contact After Adoption Agreement (form ADOPT-310) to describe the kind of contact the birth family will have with your child. Fill out this form and bring it to your hearing.

Declaration Confirming Parentage in Stepparent Adoption: Gestational Surrogacy

This optional form may be attached to the form ADOPT-200 if the adopting parent was married to or in a state-registered domestic partnership with the parent who established parentage through a gestational surrogacy process. You may instead attach a declaration in another format containing substantially the same information. The legal parent through surrogacy and the adopting parent must complete separate declarations.

1 I (write your name) _____ declare as follows:

2 Relationship between the legal parent and the adopting parent seeking to confirm parentage (check one):

a. ☐ I am the parent of a child born through a gestational surrogacy process. Only my parentage was established through the Uniform Parentage Act or another proceeding related to the surrogacy. Before the birth of the child, I married or entered into a state-registered domestic partnership (including a domestic partnership or civil union from out-of-state that is legally equivalent to a marriage) with the adopting parent who is seeking to confirm parentage, *(name)*_____ , and we remain in that union.

b. ☐ I am the adopting parent seeking to confirm parentage. I married or entered into a state-registered domestic partnership with the parent whose parentage has been established for a child born through a gestational surrogacy process, *(name)*_____ , and we remain in that union.

3 We were married/registered as domestic partners on (date you entered into your earliest union) _____, before our child was born. A copy of our marriage certificate, registered domestic partner certificate, or certificate of out-of-state domestic partnership or civil union is attached.

4 Our child (name of child to be adopted) _____ was born on (date) _____ outside of the state of California. A copy of our child's birth certificate is attached.

5 ☐ Our child was conceived through assisted reproduction in compliance with Family Code section 7613 as described below. (Describe how your child was conceived and whether you used a known or unknown donor. A letter from your sperm bank or a written donor agreement verifying conception by assisted reproduction should be attached. If you used a known donor without a sperm bank or written donor agreement, you should seek legal advice before submitting this form.)

Executive Summary and Origin

The Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee proposes changes to one standard of judicial administration and one form relating to supervised visitation providers to comply with the statutory changes to Family Code section 3200.5, enacted by Assembly Bill 1165 (Bauer-Kahan; Stats. 2019, ch. 823).

Background

Family Code section 3200 was adopted in 1996 to provide specific guidelines for the Judicial Council in developing standards concerning supervised visitation providers in contested child custody cases in family court. In response, effective January 1, 1998, the Judicial Council adopted standard 5.20 of the California Standards of Judicial Administration. In 2012, the Legislature enacted Family Code section 3200.5, which incorporated much of the language in standard 5.20, but elevated many of the suggested best practices provisions of standard 5.20 to mandatory requirements in section 3200.5. The legislation requires that any standards for supervised visitation providers adopted by the Judicial Council conform to sections 3200 and 3200.5.

The most recent changes to Family Code section 3200.5 create additional requirements for professional supervised visitation providers. Effective January 1, 2021, in addition to current requirements, a professional supervised visitation provider must:

- Complete a Live Scan criminal background check before providing supervised visitation services;
- Register as a TrustLine provider;[1]
- Complete a minimum of 12 hours of classroom instruction in the subjects listed in the statute;
- Complete training on conflicts of interest, including the acceptance of gifts;
- Complete a minimum of 3 hours of training on the screening, monitoring, and termination of visitation; 3 hours on the developmental needs of children; 3 hours on issues relating to substance abuse, child abuse, sexual abuse, and domestic violence; and 1 hour on basic knowledge of family law;
- Complete training relating to child abuse reporting laws through an online training course required for mandated reporters provided by the state Department of Social Services; and
- Sign the Declaration of Supervised Visitation Provider (form FL-324) to declare that the professional provider meets the training and qualifications, and sign a separate, updated form FL-324 each time the provider submits a report to the court.

According to the author of AB 1165:

> The combination of the enhanced requirements will help ensure that paid visitation monitors are adequately trained to look for warning signs, to understand whether and how they can intervene or report problems, when they might need to terminate a visitation in the interest of child safety, and ensure that these monitors pose no risks to children.[2]

The Proposal

Amendments to Standard 5.20

Standard 5.20 would be amended to conform to the amendments to Family Code section 3200.5. Specifically, the standard would be amended as follows:

- Subdivision (b) (Definitions) would be amended to include the definition of "TrustLine provider." This subdivision would also be reorganized to include all terms that are defined in other subdivisions of the standard, including "nonprofessional provider" in (d) and "professional provider" in (e).

[1] TrustLine was created by the California Legislature in 1987. It is a state registry of in-home child care providers, tutors, in-home counselors, and child care staff at ancillary child care centers who have passed a background screening. For more information, visit www.trustline.org. Under the Health and Safety Code, a person will be prohibited from being a professional supervised visitation provider if that person he or she is either denied TrustLine registration by the Department of Social Services or the person's TrustLine registration is revoked.

- Subdivision (e) (Qualifications of professional providers) would be changed to require that a professional provider complete a Live Scan criminal background check before providing supervised visitation services. Other changes would be as follows:
  - Subdivision (e)(11) would be changed to require a professional provider to register as a TrustLine provider;
  - Subdivision (e)(11)(A) and (B) would be added to specify that a person is ineligible to be a professional provider if the state Department of Social Services denies or revokes that person's TrustLine registration;
  - Subdivision (e)(13) would be amended to require the professional provider to sign and submit to the court a Declaration of Supervised Visitation Provider (form FL-324); and
  - Subdivision (e)(14) would be added to specify that the professional provider must sign a separate, updated form FL-324 each time the provider submits a report to the court;
- Subdivision (f) (Training for providers) would be amended as follows:
  - The title of this subdivision would be changed to "Training for professional providers" because the majority of training requirements in this subdivision pertain only to professional providers under Family Code section 3200.5;
  - Subdivision (f)(1), which does not discuss required training for professional providers but recommends that courts provide informational materials to all providers, would be moved to the end of the standard and relettered as (r);
  - Subdivision (f)(2) would be relettered as (f)(1) and amended to require that, before providing services, a professional provider must complete 24 hours of training, including at least 12 hours of classroom instruction in the subjects listed in (f)(1)(A) through (K);
  - Subdivision (f)(1)(H) would clarify that training on conflicts of interest include the acceptance of gifts;
  - Subdivision (f)(2) would be added to provide that at least 3 hours of the 24 hours required must be on the screening, monitoring, and termination of visitation; 3 hours must be on the developmental needs of children; 3 hours must be on issues relating to substance abuse, child abuse, sexual abuse, and domestic violence; and 1 hour must be on basic knowledge of family law;
  - Subdivision (f)(3) would be added to require a professional provider to complete training relating to child abuse reporting laws through an online training course required for mandated reporters that is provided by the state Department of Social Services; and

In addition, subdivision (r) (Informational materials and procedures) would be added and would contain the language moved from existing (f)(1). It would also include a new subdivision (r)(2) that, by January 1, 2022, each court should develop local rules that establish procedures for processing and maintaining form FL-324, along with the professional provider's original report required by (j)(3) of standard 5.20.

The proposed new language in (r)(2) would address issues that courts, statewide providers, and grantee programs have raised to Judicial Council staff. They seek guidance about form FL-324; specifically, what the provider and the court should do with the form now that Family Code section 3200.5 requires that the provider "shall sign a separate, updated form each time the professional provider submits a report to the court."

Because these issues concern internal local court procedures, it would not be appropriate to include a specific process in the standard. Instead, the committee proposes that courts adopt, by January 1, 2022, a local rule for processing and maintaining the form and report.

Revisions to form FL-324

Declaration of Supervised Visitation Provider (form FL-324) would be revised as required to reflect the amendments to Family Code section 3200.5. Specifically, the following revisions would be made to the form:

- Item 2 would include new check boxes for the provider to indicate completion of a Live Scan criminal background check and registration as a TrustLine provider; and
- The form would be changed from optional to mandatory use because it is specifically identified in Family Code section 3200.5 as the form needed to comply with the statute.

The form would also be revised to include technical and organizational changes. For example, references to "Plaintiff" and "Defendant" in the header would be deleted to conform form FL-324 to others in the FL series. In addition, to limit the form to one page, the language in items 1, 2, and 3 would be modified to avoid redundancy while maintaining the substantive meaning of those items.

Alternatives Considered

The committee proposes changes described in this report to conform standard 5.20 and form FL-324 to the specific statutory mandates of Family Code section 3200.5 No other alternatives were considered.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

The legislative mandate would result in additional costs to professional supervised visitation providers for one-time fees to complete a Live Scan background check and register with TrustLine. For Live Scan, there is a fee required to be paid to the state Department of Justice for the criminal history record checks. Other fees may vary, including fees to cover the Live Scan operator's cost for rolling the fingerprint images.[3] Currently, the fee payable to the Department of Social Services for TrustLine registration is $124.

In addition, the requirement for classroom training could result in increased costs for professional providers' training. However, this is mandated by law, and there is a strong interest in maintaining a pool of professional providers who are adequately trained and skilled in providing family court-ordered supervised visitation and exchange services.

The impact to the courts includes costs to accept and review updated form FL-324 submitted by professional providers of supervised visitation. This step, however, is legislatively mandated to inform the court and the parties that the provider was qualified and met the training requirements to make the report at the time it was submitted to the court.

Request for Specific Comments

In addition to comments on the proposal as a whole, the advisory committee is interested in comments on the following:

- Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose?

The advisory committee also seeks comments from courts on the following cost and implementation matters:

- Would the proposal provide cost savings? If so, please quantify.
- What would the implementation requirements be for courts—for example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), changing docket codes in case management systems, or modifying case management systems?
- Would 3 months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation?
- How well would this proposal work in courts of different sizes?
- Should the standard be amended to require courts to have a local rule to handle form FL-324? Is there an alternative that your court would suggest?

Standard 5.20 of the California Standards of Judicial Administration would be amended, effective January 1, 2021, to read:

Standard 5.20. Uniform standards of practice for providers of supervised visitation

(a) * * *

(b) Definitions

~~Family Code section 3200 defines the term "provider" as including any individual or supervised visitation center that monitors visitation. Supervised visitation is contact between a noncustodial party and one or more children in the presence of a neutral third person.~~

(1) A "nonprofessional provider" is any person who is not paid for providing supervised visitation services.

(2) A "professional provider" is any person who is paid for providing supervised visitation services, or an independent contractor, employee, intern, or volunteer operating independently or through a supervised visitation center or agency.

(3) A "provider" is defined by Family Code section 3200 as including any individual or supervised visitation center that monitors visitation.

(4) "Supervised visitation" is contact between a noncustodial party and one or more children in the presence of a neutral third person.

(5) "TrustLine provider." For purposes of this rule, a "TrustLine provider" is a professional supervised visitation provider who is registered on "TrustLine," a database that is administered by the California Department of Social Services.

(c) * * *

(d) Qualifications of nonprofessional providers

~~A "nonprofessional provider" is any person who is not paid for providing supervised visitation services.~~ Unless otherwise ordered by the court or stipulated by the parties, the nonprofessional provider must:

(1)–(2) * * *

(e) Qualifications of professional providers

~~A "professional provider" is any person paid for providing supervised visitation services, or an independent contractor, employee, intern, or volunteer operating independently or through a supervised visitation center or agency.~~ The professional provider must:

(1)–(9) * * *

(10) ~~Meet the training requirements stated in (f); and~~ Complete a Live Scan criminal background check, at the expense of the provider or the supervised visitation center or agency, before providing visitation services;

(11) ~~Sign a declaration or Declaration of Supervised Visitation Provider (form FL-324) stating that all requirements to be a professional provider have been met.~~ Be registered as a TrustLine provider under chapter 3.35 (commencing with section 1596.60) of division 2 of the Health and Safety Code. Notwithstanding any other law, a person is ineligible to be a professional provider if the state Department of Social Services either:

(A) Denies that person's TrustLine registration under Health and Safety Code sections 1596.605 or 1596.607; or

(B) Revokes that person's TrustLine registration under Health and Safety Code section 1596.608;

(12) Meet the training requirements listed in (f);

(13) Sign a Declaration of Supervised Visitation Provider (form FL-324) stating that all requirements to be a professional provider have been met; and

(14) Sign a separate, updated form FL-324 each time the professional provider submits a report to the court.

(f) Training for professional providers

~~(1) Each court is encouraged to make available to all providers informational materials about the role of a provider, the terms and conditions of supervised visitation, and the legal responsibilities and obligations of a provider under this standard.~~

~~(2)~~(1) ~~In addition,~~ Before providing services, professional providers must ~~receive~~ complete 24 hours of training, including at least 12 hours of classroom instruction in the following subjects:

(A)–(G) * * *

(H) Conflicts of interest, including the acceptance of gifts;

(I)–(K) * * *

(2) Of the 24 hours of training required in (1), the training must include at least:

(A) Three hours on the screening, monitoring, and termination of visitation;

(B) Three hours on the developmental needs of children;

(C) Three hours on issues relating to substance abuse, child abuse, sexual abuse, and domestic violence; and

(D) One hour on basic knowledge of family law.

(3) On or after January 1, 2021, to complete the required training in child abuse reporting laws under (1)(B), a professional provider must complete an online training required for mandated reporters that is provided by the state Department of Social Services. This mandatory online training is not intended to increase the total of 24 hours of training required in (1).

(g)–(q) * * *

(r) Informational materials and procedures

(1) Each court is encouraged to make available to all providers informational materials about the role of a provider, the terms and conditions of supervised visitation, and the legal responsibilities and obligations of a provider under this standard.

(2) By January 1, 2022, each court must develop local rules that establish procedures for processing and maintaining form FL-324, along with the professional provider's original report required by (j)(3) of this standard.

Executive Summary and Origin

The Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee proposes revising two optional forms (FL-157, FL-343) and approving one new optional form (FL-349) relating to spousal support, as well as revising one optional form (FL-345) relating to property division in family law cases.

Form FL-157 would be revised to reflect the changes made to Family Code section 4320 by Assembly Bill 929 (Rubio; Stats. 2018, ch. 938). The proposed changes to form FL-343 respond to suggestions made specifically about this form by the court in In re the Marriage of Craig and Cynthia Martin. Proposed new form FL-349 responds to the needs of judicial officers who are required to make findings under Family Code section 4320 when issuing or modifying a judgment for spousal or partner support. Proposed revisions to form FL-345 respond to requests made by judicial officers to simplify a specific item relating to the assignment of debts in a judgment.

The Proposal

Spousal or Partner Support Declaration Attachment (form FL-157)

This optional form helps a party seeking a judgment for spousal or partner support comply with the factors that the courts must consider before issuing a judgment under Family Code section 4320. The form includes each statutory factor that the court must consider in ordering support and provides space for the party to write facts that address each factor.

The committee proposes revising this form to include the amendments to Family Code section 4320 enacted by AB 929. That bill amended section 4320(i) by describing the types of documented evidence of domestic violence that a party may submit for the court to consider before issuing a judgment for support. Specifically, the documented evidence of domestic violence under section 4320 can include but is not limited to (1) a plea of nolo contendere (no contest), (2) emotional distress resulting from domestic violence perpetrated against the supported party by the supporting party, (3) any history of violence against the supporting party by the supported party, (4) issuance of a protective order after a hearing under Family Code section 6340, and (5) a finding by the court during the pendency of a divorce, separation, or child custody proceeding that the spouse or domestic partner has committed domestic violence.

To conform to the changes to Family Code section 4320 enacted by AB 929, a new item titled "Family Code section 4320(i)" would be added to form FL-157 as item 13 and include the kind of "documented evidence of any history of domestic violence … between the parties" that is listed in the statute.

The committee also proposes a minor change to match the form's title in the footer with the correct title. The title in the footer appears as "Spousal or Partnership Support Declaration Attachment." The word "Partnership" in the footer would be changed to "Partner."

Spousal, Partner, or Family Support Order Attachment (form FL-343)

The committee proposes extensive changes to form FL-343, including a major reorganization that would expand the form from two to three pages.[1] As noted below, the major substantive changes proposed to the form relate to the termination of support and findings that the court must make under Family Code section 4320 before ordering support.

Termination of support

This form can be used by the court to make temporary orders and judgments for spousal or domestic partner support. The committee proposes several changes to this form.

The first change would be to make revisions that are consistent with the opinion of the Court of Appeal in In re Marriage of Craig and Cynthia Martin (2019) 32 Cal.App.5th 1195. In that case, the court urged the Judicial Council and local courts to change the language in their forms relating to Family Code section 4337.

Section 4337 provides that "[e]xcept as otherwise agreed by the parties in writing, the obligation of a party under an order for the support of the other party terminates upon the death of either party or the remarriage of the other party."

[1] Generally, when more extensive changes are proposed to Judicial Council forms, to ensure that the form is easy read, proposed changes are not highlighted. To better analyze the proposed changes, commenters may want to review the current form FL-334 at courts.ca.gov/documents/fl343.pdf.

Form FL-343 currently includes a check box at item 6b to incorporate the language of section 4337. Item 6b provides that "[s]upport must be paid by check, money order, or cash. The support payor's obligation to pay support will terminate on the death of either party, remarriage, or registration of a new domestic partnership of the support payee."

Because section 4337 applies by operation of law, the court stated that a party should not have to check a box (affirmatively "opt-in") to have section 4337 apply to the party's case. Instead, the court stated that:

> …logic suggests that the parties should affirmatively opt-out of the statutory requirement in order to waive section 4337's application. We urge the Judicial Council of California and the local courts to revise their forms so that the parties must specifically check a box to waive section 4337's application.

In response, the committee proposes striking the current language in item 6b and reorganizing the text under a new heading. In the revised form, items 6a and 6b would be added, as follows:

6. Termination (end) of support
   a. By law, unless the parties otherwise agree in writing, the support payor's obligation to pay support will end on the death of either party, remarriage, or registration of a new domestic partnership of the support payee.

   b. □ Parties' agreement
      (1) □ The parties agree that the support payor's obligation to pay support will not end as described in a, but will continue on the death or either party, remarriage, or registration of a new domestic partnership of the supported party.
      (2) □ The parties agree that the support payor's obligation to pay support will end on (specify):

Findings on Family Code section 4320 factors

The second substantive change to the form would be to include a new item 3d for the court to indicate that its findings under Family Code section 4320 are either specified on the form itself, included in a numbered attachment, or specified in proposed new form FL-349, which would be attached to form FL-343.

The proposed changes to form FL-343 relating to section 4320 factors (along with proposed new form FL-349 [described below] would help judicial officers comply with their obligations before issuing or modifying an order for spousal or domestic partner support. Whereas Family Code section 4320 states that the court must "consider" each factor, case law provides that courts must make findings.

For example, the court in In re Marriage of Geraci (2006) 144 Cal.App.4th 1278 stated that "the trial judge must both recognize and apply each applicable statutory factor in setting spousal support. … Failure to do so is reversible error."

More recently, in In re Marriage of Shimkus (2016) 244 Cal.App.4th 1262, the court held that before terminating spousal support based on the changed circumstances, the trial court was required to issue a statement of decision and make findings on all of the statutory factors for ordering spousal support, since the court determined that obligor's counsel had made a request for findings.

Reorganization of form

The committee also proposes reorganizing the content of the items under more specific subject headings, breaking content up under the specific heading to make it easier to read and understand, and adding a third page to allow more space for the court to make its orders or the parties to write their agreement.

Property Order Attachment to Judgment* (form FL-345)

From time to time, committee staff receive suggestions to improve rules of court and Judicial Council forms from court professionals outside the regular invitation to comment cycle. These suggestions are recorded and considered for inclusion with other relevant proposals.

Staff received requests from judicial officers to change language in form FL-345, at item 2, Division of community property debts, relating to the assignment of debts in a judgment. Rather than circulating the form in its own invitation to comment, the committee proposes including it with forms FL-157 and FL-343 because, like those forms, FL-345 also relates to orders issued in a judgment.

Judicial officers requested that the following underlined sentences in item 2f be stricken from the form because they are not court orders:

> Each party will be solely responsible for paying the debts assigned to him or her and will hold the other harmless from those debts. The parties understand that the creditors are not bound by this judgment. If a creditor seeks payment from the party who is not listed as responsible for the debt, that party can file a motion to seek reimbursement from the defaulting party.

In response to the comment, the first sentence of 2f would be incorporated into another item on the form. However, the committee would appreciate comments about whether the form should still include language in the above section to inform the parties about how a creditor is not bound by the judgment, but that the person who has to pay the debt can go back to court and seek an order for reimbursement.

Findings re Spousal or Partner Support Under Family Code Section 4320—Attachment* (form FL-349)

As previously described, this new form would respond to the request of judicial officers who need to make findings before issuing or modifying a judgment for spousal or domestic partner support.

The five-page form would serve as an attachment to Findings and Order After Hearing (form FL-340), Restraining Order After Hearing (form DV-130), Judgment (form FL-180), the parties' written agreement, or another document specified by the party. The form itself would organize all Family Code section 4320 factors under the following headings: "Preliminary Findings," "Findings Regarding the Supported Party," "Findings Regarding the Supporting Party," "Documented Evidence of Domestic Violence and Criminal Convictions," and "Findings on Other Factors."

Alternatives Considered

Form FL-343

The committee considered different ways to revise the form before proposing the specific language to respond to the suggestions from the court in In re the Marriage of Craig and Cynthia Martin. Because of the clear direction from the court, the committee did not consider delaying the proposed changes to a future cycle.

The committee also considered removing references to "family support" from the form because of the changes made to the Internal Revenue Code with the enactment of the Tax Cuts and Jobs Act (TCJA) of 2018.[2] For federal tax purposes, family support used to be treated like spousal support (taxable as income to the recipient and tax deductible to the payor). After December 31, 2018, initial orders for spousal support are no longer taxable as income to the recipient and tax deductible to the payor for federal purposes. Modifications of spousal support, however, would maintain pre-TCJA tax treatment, unless the parties otherwise expressly agree in writing.

Although the federal tax laws changed relating to spousal and family support, state law did not change. California Revenue and Taxation Code was not amended to reflect the new federal tax treatment of spousal support. Thus, spousal support (or domestic partner support) and family support will continue to be taxable as income to the recipient and tax deductible to the payor for state tax purposes after December 31, 2018. So, despite the change to the federal tax laws, the committee decided to maintain references on the form to "family support" because the form could still be used by a party seeking an initial order for family support for state tax purposes. Similarly, it might be used to modify support orders. The committee seeks comments on whether this form continues to be used for family support.

[2] The Tax Cuts and Jobs Act (Pub.L. No. 115-97 (Dec. 22, 2017) 131 Stat. 2054) amended the spousal support provisions of the Internal Revenue Code (IRC) by repealing the income tax deduction to the person who pays spousal support under a divorce or separation instrument. In addition, the new law repeals the corresponding inclusion of spousal support in the gross income of the recipient. These amendments apply to (1) any divorce or separation instrument executed after December 31, 2018, and (2) any modification of a divorce or separation instrument that expressly provides that the amendments made by this section of the IRC apply to such modifications.

Forms FL-157, and FL-345

The committee considered proposing changes to these optional forms in a later cycle, but believed it was appropriate to combine them with the proposed changes to FL-343.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

The committee anticipates that this proposal will result in minor costs incurred by the courts to revise the form, train staff, and create new codes for case management programs. Those costs would likely be outweighed by the time saved by the court in obtaining the information necessary to make appropriate orders and findings.

Request for Specific Comments

In addition to comments on the proposal as a whole, the advisory committee is interested in comments on the following:

- Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose?
- Should references to "family support" be removed from form FL-343?
- Questions about form FL-345:
  (1) Should the information on the current form FL-345 (underlined below) continue to be included on the form?
  The parties understand that the creditors are not bound by this judgment. If a creditor seeks payment from the party who is not listed as responsible for the debt, that party can file a motion to seek reimbursement from the defaulting party.
  (2) If it should be included, please provide suggestions on the best way to convey the information.

The advisory committee also seeks comments from courts on the following cost and implementation matters:

- Would the proposal provide cost savings? If so, please quantify.
- What would the implementation requirements be for courts—for example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), changing docket codes in case management systems, or modifying case management systems?
- Would three months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation?
- How well would this proposal work in courts of different sizes?

Executive Summary and Origin

The Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee proposes amending one rule of court and adopting a new mandatory form to comply with recent statutory changes to Family Code section 3118. The recent amendments enacted by Assembly Bill 1179 (Rubio; Stats. 2019, ch. 127) create new requirements for the confidential written report that is filed with the court and served on the parties following a child custody evaluation, assessment, or investigation in which the court has determined that there is a serious allegation of child sexual abuse or an allegation of child abuse in any other circumstance.

Background

In contested proceedings in family court involving child custody or visitation rights, a judicial officer may appoint a court-connected or private evaluator under Family Code section 3111 to provide recommendations to the court if the judicial officer determines the appointment is in the best interests of the child. Under section 3118, in cases involving serious allegations of child sexual abuse, the court must appoint an evaluator to conduct an evaluation, investigation, or assessment. For serious allegations of child abuse that arise in a proceeding for child custody and visitation rights, the court is not required to, but may appoint an evaluator or investigator to conduct an evaluation, investigation, or assessment under section 3118.

Section 3118(b)(5) and (6)(A)–(H) lists the minimum information that the evaluator or investigator must cover in the confidential written report. They are summarized as follows:

1. A written statement explaining why a forensic examination is not needed if the evaluator did not request a forensic medical examination of the child;
2. Documentation of material interviews of the child, parents, and other witnesses;
3. A summary of any law enforcement investigator's investigation;
4. Relevant background material, including, but not limited to a summary of written reports from any therapist treating the child for suspected child sexual abuse;
5. The written recommendations of the evaluator or investigator about the therapeutic needs of the child and how to ensure the child's safety;
6. A summary of other child abuse investigations, if any, and disposition and any relevant dependency court orders or findings;
7. Any information from a child protective agency or law enforcement agency about the presence of domestic violence or substance abuse in the family;
8. If any family members are known to be eligible for assistance from the Victims of Crime Program due to child abuse or domestic violence; and
9. Any other information believed to be helpful for the court in determining what is in the best interests of the child.

Effective January 1, 2021, subdivision (b)(6) requires that the report on the above topics be made on a form adopted by the Judicial Council. To comply with the legislation, the Judicial Council must adopt one new form and amend rule 5.220 as described in the following section.

The Proposal

Rule 5.220

Rule 5.220 would be reorganized to differentiate the requirements for confidential evaluation reports written to comply with Family Code section 3111 and those that must comply with Family Code section 3118. Specifically, the rule would include a new subdivision (g) titled Confidential written report; requirements, in which (g)(1) would list the requirements for section 3111 reports and (g)(2) would list the requirements for section 3118 reports. Subdivision (g)(2) would reference the name and number of the proposed new Judicial Council form FL-329 among other requirements. In addition, because both new subdivisions would include the language in current subdivision (i) relating to another required form, subdivision (i) would be deleted to avoid redundancy in the rule.

Other technical changes would include relettering affected subdivisions in the rule and updating (b) by deleting the reference to section 2032 in the Code of Civil Procedure and updating it to section 2032.010.

Confidential Child Custody Evaluation Report (form FL-329)

This form would comply with section 3118 by serving as the standardized template for all information necessary to provide a full and complete analysis of the allegations raised in the proceeding. The proposed new mandatory form would include the previously listed categories of information (subdivisions (b)(6)(A)–(H)) at items 3–7 and 9–11. In addition, the form would include the required contents of an evaluation specified in rule 5.220, at items 8 and 12.

Alternatives Considered

Because section 3118(i) requires the Judicial Council to adopt a mandatory form on or before January 1, 2021, the committee did not consider any alternative methods to implement the statutory mandate. The committee did consider whether form FL-329 should be drafted as a mandatory form for child custody evaluations, assessments, or investigations conducted under Family Code section 3111 as well as section 3118. The committee, however, concluded that this would be beyond the scope of legislation, as AB 1179 did not amend Family Code section 3111. Absent clear direction from the Legislature, the committee proposes a mandatory form that would apply only to reports drafted in response to a section 3118 evaluation, assessment, or report.

The committee did consider whether to propose revisions to two additional forms*: Notice Regarding Confidentiality of Child Custody Evaluation Report* (form FL-328) and Child Custody Evaluation Information Sheet (form FL-329-INFO), as the forms include information about the child custody evaluation process. However, because both forms refer to the child custody evaluation report in very general terms, the committee decided that revisions to the forms were not essential to comply with the legislative mandate.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

The impact to the courts includes costs to copy the new and revised forms, as well as the cost to educate court-connected child custody evaluators on the new procedures for completing a child custody evaluation, investigation, or assessment. However, these costs would be outweighed by the benefit of producing reports that satisfy the requirements of Family Code section 3118.

Request for Specific Comments

In addition to comments on the proposal as a whole, the advisory committee is interested in comments on the following:

- Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose?

The advisory committee also seeks comments from courts on the following cost and implementation matters:

- Would the proposal provide cost savings? If so, please quantify.
- What would the implementation requirements be for courts? For example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), changing docket codes in case management systems, or modifying case management systems.
- Would 3 months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation?
- How well would this proposal work in courts of different sizes?

Rule 5.220 of the California Rules of Court would be amended, effective January 1, 2021, to read:

Rule 5.220. Court-ordered child custody evaluations

(a) Authority

This rule of court is adopted under Family Code sections 211 and 3117.

(b) Purpose

Courts order child custody evaluations, investigations, and assessments to assist them in determining the health, safety, welfare, and best interests of children with regard to disputed custody and visitation issues. This rule governs both court-connected and private child custody evaluators appointed under Family Code section 3111, Family Code section 3118, Evidence Code section 730, or ~~Code of Civil Procedure section 2032.~~ chapter 15 (commencing with section 2032.010) of title 4, part 4 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

(c)–(d) * * *

(e) Scope of evaluations

All evaluations must include:

(1)–(2) * * *

~~(3) A written or oral presentation of findings that is consistent with Family Code section 3111, Family Code section 3118, or Evidence Code section 730. In any presentation of findings, the evaluator must:~~

~~(A) Summarize the data-gathering procedures, information sources, and time spent, and present all relevant information, including information that does not support the conclusions reached;~~

~~(B) Describe any limitations in the evaluation that result from unobtainable information, failure of a party to cooperate, or the circumstances of particular interviews;~~

~~(C) Only make a custody or visitation recommendation for a party who has been evaluated. This requirement does not preclude the evaluator from making an interim recommendation that is in the best interest of the child; and~~

~~(D) Provide clear, detailed recommendations that are consistent with the health, safety, welfare, and best interest of the child if making any recommendations to the court regarding a parenting plan.~~

(f) Presentation of findings

All evaluations must include a written or oral presentation of findings that is consistent with Family Code section 3111, Family Code section 3118, or Evidence Code section 730. In any presentation of findings, the evaluator must:

(1) Summarize the data-gathering procedures, information sources, and time spent, and present all relevant information, including information that does not support the conclusions reached.

(2) Describe any limitations in the evaluation that result from unobtainable information, failure of a party to cooperate, or the circumstances of particular interviews.

(3) Only make a custody or visitation recommendation for a party who has been evaluated. This requirement does not preclude the evaluator from making an interim recommendation that is in the best interests of the child.

(4) Provide clear, detailed recommendations that are consistent with the health, safety, welfare, and best interests of the child if making any recommendations to the court regarding a parenting plan.

(g) Confidential written report; requirements

(1) Family Code section 3111 evaluations. An evaluator appointed under Family Code section 3111 must:

(A) File and serve a report on the parties or their attorneys as required by Family Code section 3111.

(B) Attach a Notice Regarding Confidentiality of Child Custody Evaluation Report (form FL-328) as the first page of the child custody evaluation report when a court-ordered child custody evaluation report is filed with the clerk of the court and served on the parties or their attorneys, and any counsel appointed for the child, to inform them of the confidential nature of the report and the potential consequences for the unwarranted disclosure of the report.

(2) Family Code section 3118 evaluations. An evaluator appointed to conduct a child custody evaluation, investigation, or assessment based on (1) serious allegations of child sexual abuse; or (2) allegations of child abuse under Family Code section 3118 must:

(A) Provide a full and complete analysis of the allegations raised in the proceeding and address the health, safety, welfare, and best interests of the child.

(B) Comply with (A) by filing and serving Confidential Child Custody Evaluation Report (form FL-329) on the parties or their attorneys as required by section 3118.

(C) Attach Notice Regarding Confidentiality of Child Custody Evaluation Report (form FL-328) as the first page of the child custody evaluation report in (B) to inform the parties or their attorneys of the confidential nature of the report and the potential consequences for the unwarranted disclosure of the report.

~~(i) Service of the evaluation report~~

~~A Notice Regarding Confidentiality of Child Custody Evaluation Report (form FL-328) must be attached as the first page of the child custody evaluation report when a court-ordered child custody evaluation report is filed with the clerk of the court and served on the parties or their attorneys, and any counsel appointed for the child, to inform them of the confidential nature of the report and the potential consequences for the unwarranted disclosure of the report.~~

Executive Summary

The Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee recommends adopting one rule of the California Rules of Court and amending four rules, approving two forms, adopting one form, and revising four forms, to conform to recent statutory changes regarding children for whom the juvenile court has approved requests for prescription of psychotropic medications, which were enacted by Senate Bill 377 (McGuire; Stats. 2019, ch. 547).

Recommendation

The Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee recommends that the Judicial Council, effective September 1, 2020:

1. Amend rule 5.640 of the California Rules of Court to add three new forms (discussed below) to the list of the documents the applicant must provide the child's attorney when providing notice of the request for psychotropic medication, and to add "Indian custodian" whenever there is a reference to "parent or legal guardian."

2. Adopt rule 5.642 to provide the requirements for processing the forms, including providing the forms to the child and child's attorney, signing the authorization form, and sending the authorization form to the California Department of Social Services (CDSS).

3. Amend rules 5.706 and 5.708 to require the social worker to provide before the hearing a blank copy of Withdrawal of Release of Information to Medical Board of California (form JV-229) to the child if the child has signed Position on Release of Information to Medical Board of California (form JV-228) if it is the last hearing before the child turns 18 years of age or if the social worker is recommending termination of juvenile court jurisdiction.

4. Amend rule 5.810 to require the probation officer to provide before the hearing a blank copy of Withdrawal of Release of Information to Medical Board of California (form JV-229) to the child if the child has signed Position on Release of Information to Medical Board of California (form JV-228) if it is the last hearing before the child turns 18 years of age or if the social worker is recommending termination of juvenile court jurisdiction.

5. Approve Position on Release of Information to Medical Board of California (form JV-228) for the child or child's attorney to indicate whether the child authorizes CDSS to release the child's identification information to the Medical Board of California (the board) so it can ascertain whether there is excessive prescribing of psychotropic medication.

6. Approve Background on Release of Information to Medical Board of California (form JV-228-INFO) to give to the child and child's attorney to explain why form JV-228 is being provided, what information may be revealed to the board, the confidentiality of the information revealed to the board, and a description of the process to withdraw any authorization.

7. Adopt Withdrawal of Release of Information to Medical Board of California (form JV-229) as a mandatory form for the child or child's attorney to use to withdraw any authorization to release information to the board.

8. Revise Proof of Notice on Application (form JV-221) to include the three additional documents that must be served on the child and child's attorney by the applicant.

9. Revise Order on Application for Psychotropic Medication (form JV-223) to add a new item for the court to indicate whether the authorization is for three or more concurrent psychotropic medications for 90 days or more and, if so, order the applicant to provide the child and the child's attorney blank copies of Position on Release of Information to Medical Board of California (form JV-228), Background on Release of Information to Medical Board of California (form JV-228-INFO), and Withdrawal of Release of Information to Medical Board of California (form JV-229).

10. Revise County Report on Psychotropic Medication (form JV-224) to add an item for the social worker or probation officer to indicate whether the court order is for three or more concurrent psychotropic medications for 90 days or longer. If so, the item would ask whether form JV-228 has been filed with the court.

11. Revise Confidential Information (form JV-287) to amend the instructions to indicate the form can be used with form JV-228, that the form must be kept under seal in the court file, and that only the court, the agency, and the child's attorney can look at the information.

The text of the new and amended rules is attached at pages 11–17. The new and revised forms are attached at pages 18–32.

Relevant Previous Council Action

As mandated by Senate Bill 543 (Bowen; Stats. 1999, ch. 552), effective January 1, 2001, the Judicial Council adopted a California Rule of Court and two Judicial Council forms regarding administration of psychotropic medications to children under the jurisdiction of the juvenile court. This initial proposal included rule 1432.5, Application for Order for Psychotropic Medication—Juvenile (form JV-220), and Opposition to Application for Order for Psychotropic Medication—Juvenile (form JV-220A). Clarifying changes were made to the rule and forms effective January 1, 2003, January 1, 2005, and July 1, 2005.

Effective January 1, 2007, rule 1432.5 was renumbered as rule 5.640, as part a comprehensive reorganization and renumbering to improve the format and usability of the California Rules of Court. Effective January 1, 2008, the Judicial Council amended rule 5.640, revised form JV-220, revoked form JV-220A, and adopted forms JV-219-INFO, JV-220(A), JV-221, JV-222, and JV-223 to improve the statewide procedure used to seek authorization for administering psychotropic medication to children in out-of-home placements.

Effective January 1, 2014, the council amended rule 5.640 and revised three related forms: JV-219-INFO, Information About Psychotropic Medication Forms; JV-221, Proof of Notice: Application for Psychotropic Medication; and JV-222, Opposition to Application Regarding Psychotropic Medication to (1) clarify the time frame for filing an opposition to an application for the juvenile court to authorize the administration of psychotropic medication for a child, (2) clarify appropriate methods of service and notice protocols, and (3) add notice requirements for an Indian child's tribe if psychotropic medication is being sought for an Indian child.

Effective July 1, 2016, the council amended rule 5.640; approved two related forms, Child's Opinion About the Medicine (form JV-218) and Statement About Medicine Prescribed (form JV-219); adopted two related forms, Physician's Request to Continue Medication—Attachment (form JV-220(B)) and County Report on Psychotropic Medication (form JV-224); revised five related forms, Application for Psychotropic Medication (form JV-220), Physician's Statement—Attachment (form JV-220(A)), Proof of Notice of Application (form JV-221), Input on Application for Psychotropic Medication (form JV-222), and Order on Application for Psychotropic Medication (form JV-223); and revised and renumbered one related form, Guide to Psychotropic Medications Forms (form JV-217-INFO) to implement the mandates of Senate Bill 238 (Mitchell; Stats. 2015, ch. 534) which required the Judicial Council to develop rules and forms to (1) ensure that the child and his or her caregiver and Court Appointed Special Advocate volunteer (CASA), if any, have an opportunity to provide input on the medications being prescribed; (2) ensure that information regarding an assessment of the child's overall mental health and treatment plan, as well as information regarding the rationale for the proposed medication are provided to the court; (3) address how to proceed if information, otherwise required to be included in a request for authorization, is not included in the request; (4) include a process for periodic oversight by the court of orders regarding the administration of psychotropic medication; and (5) mandate that the child welfare agency, probation department, or other person or entity who submitted the request for authorization of psychotropic medication provide a copy of the court order approving or denying the request to the child's caregiver.

Most recently, effective January 1, 2018, based on the suggestions received from stakeholders and others about how the forms were functioning, the Judicial Council made several clarifying changes to the rule and forms in a "clean-up" proposal. The council again amended rule 5.640; approved Order Delegating Judicial Authority Over Psychotropic Medication (form JV-216) as a new optional form to document the court's findings and order when the court orders that a parent is authorized to approve or deny the administration of psychotropic medication; and again revised forms JV-217-INFO, JV-219, JV-220, JV-220(A), JV-220(B), JV-221, JV-222, JV-223, and JV-224.

Analysis/Rationale

As indicated in the legislative history for SB 377, in 1999, the Legislature passed Senate Bill 543 (Bowen; Stats. 1999, ch. 552) to provide that only a juvenile court judicial officer has the authority to make orders regarding the administration of psychotropic medications for children in foster care and that the juvenile court may issue a specific order delegating this authority to a parent if the parent poses no danger to the child and has the capacity to authorize psychotropic medications. This legislation was passed in response to concerns that foster children were being subjected to excessive use of psychotropic medication, and that judicial oversight was needed to reduce the risk of unnecessary medication. The Judicial Council was required to adopt rules of court to implement the new requirement. Accordingly, rule 5.640 of the California Rules of Court was adopted and specified the process for juvenile courts to follow in authorizing the administration of psychotropic medications; it also permits courts to adopt local rules to further refine the approval process.

In 2004, the provisions of SB 543 were amended by Assembly Bill 2502 (Keene; Stats. 2004, ch. 329) to require a judicial officer to approve or deny, in writing, a request for authorization to administer psychotropic medication, or set the matter for hearing, within seven days. This amendment was intended to ensure timely consideration of requests for authorization to administer psychotropic medication to dependent children.

In 2015, Senate Bill 238 (Monning; Stats. 2015, ch. 534) further amended these provisions to, among other things, require the rules of court and corresponding forms to address specified concerns. These concerns included ensuring that the dependent or ward and the dependent's or ward's caregiver (or court-appointed special advocate, if any) are allowed an opportunity to provide input on the medications being prescribed, and that guidance be provided to the court on how to evaluate the request for authorization. The bill also required the rules of court and forms to include a process for periodic oversight by the court of orders regarding the administration of psychotropic medications.

In 2017, Senate Bill 1174 (McGuire; Stats. 2017, ch. 840), required the Department of Health Care Services (DHCS) and the California Department of Social Services (CDSS) to provide data, pursuant to a specified data-sharing agreement, to the Medical Board of California regarding Medi-Cal physicians and their prescribing patterns of psychotropic medications and related services for dependents or wards of the court, and provided that personal identifiers were to be removed from the data before providing it. That bill also required the board to contract with a psychiatrist who has expertise and specializes in pediatric care for the purpose of reviewing the data provided to the board to ensure the appropriate standard of care was being met.

The board's expert reviewing the data provided by CDSS flagged 86 patients who fit the description of being on three or more psychotropic medications for 90 days or more.[1] In order to assess if the psychotropic medications were prescribed appropriately and consistent with the standard of care, the board must review the patient's medical record. Under existing law, the board is required to obtain authorization to contact the individual before it can even ask for authorization to review the patient's medical record. Through administrative efforts with CDSS, the board received authorization to contact five individuals and was only able to get three authorizations for release of a patient's medical record. This resulted in the board only being able to investigate 3 of the 86 cases originally identified.[2]

Senate Bill 377 is intended to allow the board to get the information it needs to investigate more cases of potential overprescription of psychotropic medication. The bill revises Welfare and Institutions Code sections 369.5 and 739.5 regarding psychotropic medication prescriptions, and requires the Judicial Council to develop a form to include a request for authorization by the child or child's attorney for CDSS to release the child's identification information to the board so it can ascertain whether there is excessive prescribing of psychotropic medication.

[1] Welfare and Institutions Code section 14028 requires CDSS to share with the board data for all foster children who are or have been on three or more psychotropic medications for 90 days or more.

Policy implications

The committee considered how to best implement SB 377, which required the development of a Judicial Council form with specified stakeholders.

The proposed forms and rules of court are intended to allow the board to get the information it needs to investigate more cases of potential overprescription of psychotropic medication. The proposal should result in the board reviewing more cases to determine whether there is excessive prescribing of psychotropic medication to foster youth.

Comments

This proposal circulated for comment as part of the winter 2020 invitation-to-comment cycle from December 11, 2019, to February 12, 2020, to the standard mailing list for family and juvenile law proposals. Included on the list were appellate presiding justices, appellate court administrators, trial court presiding judges, trial court executive officers, judges, court administrators and clerks, attorneys, family law facilitators and self-help center staff, legal services attorneys, social workers, probation officers, CASA programs, and other juvenile and family law professionals. Senate Bill 377 also required the Judicial Council to develop the form in consultation with CDSS, the Medical Board of California, the County Welfare Directors Association, the Chief Probation Officers of California, and groups representing foster children, dependency counsel, and children's advocates. Ten organizations provided comment: one agreed with the proposal, seven agreed with the proposal if modified, no commenters opposed the proposal, and two did not indicate a position. A chart with the full text of the comments received and the committee's responses is attached at pages 33–68.

The committee sought specific comment on whether the authorization to release information should last until it is withdrawn or whether there was an appropriate time for it to expire. The commenters did not overwhelmingly agree on any time frame. One thought it should last until withdrawn, several thought it should last one year, one thought it should be resigned every six months, since the orders are made that often, and one commentator, CDSS, agreed with the proposed three-year time frame that circulated for public comment.

The committee considered several time limits on the duration of the authorization. Since the board is looking at prescribing practices of physicians, the board may need to obtain information on children in past data sets. A short time limit, for example a one-year limit, on the authorization would only address data recently submitted to the board. One issue the board seeks to address, however, is its inability to obtain information on children that may have been in foster care several years ago. The board is looking at prescription patterns and as such, is not only requesting the identifying information for children in the most recent data set, but also for children prescribed medication by that same doctor for what could be years ago. Additionally, a short time frame would increase workload for the department, the child's attorney, the court clerk, and CDSS. The committee concluded that the authorization should remain valid until it is withdrawn. The committee has amended the rules and forms to indicate this. The rules have also been amended to require the social worker or probation officer to provide the youth a blank copy of Withdrawal of Release of Information to Medical Board of California (form JV-229) when it is the last hearing before the child turns 18 years of age, or if the recommendation is to terminate juvenile court jurisdiction. This approach will decrease workload for both court clerks and CDSS since the authorization form will not need to be repeatedly filed and sent to CDSS.

CDSS, one of the stakeholders that SB 377 mandated the council to consult with, in response to the rule requiring the court clerk to send the JV-228 to CDSS at the address indicated on the form, commented:

> The CDSS has significant concerns that this proposed provision imposes a requirement that does not exist in statute for the CDSS to be the repository of these documents, without any analysis of the costs and burdens that would be triggered by the creation of a separate system at the state level to receive and maintain the JV-228 forms. The CDSS does not typically receive individual case documents from the JV-220 process or maintain individual case files or records for child welfare services or probation cases. Such recordkeeping is done at the local level by the appropriate county child welfare services agency or county probation department overseeing the child's case. The CDSS therefore recommends striking paragraph (2) of subdivision (c) of the proposed Rule of Court 5.642 to remove CDSS as the point of delivery and repository for the JV-228 forms. Instead, the CDSS recommends that Rule 5.642 require either the clerk of the court to mail a copy of the filed JV-228 form to the respective county child welfare services agency or probation department, so it may be included in the child's existing individual case file, or alternatively, that the proposed rule require the child's attorney to provide a copy of form JV-228 to the county child welfare services agency or probation attorney upon filing the form with the juvenile court. Should the Medical Board of California request a further review of a dependent's/ward's medical record, the CDSS can simply contact the necessary county agency to determine if there is a JV-228 form on file.

The suggestion of maintaining the JV-228 form in the social worker or probation officer's file, however, does not address one of the main problems the board is having, which is obtaining the identifying information of children whose cases have been closed.

CDSS further commented:

> The CDSS respectfully notes that this proposed Rule of Court creates a new responsibility and imposes a direct duty on an agency of the executive branch that is not prescribed by statute. The CDSS has significant concerns that this provision creating a new responsibility for an agency of the executive branch that is not a party to juvenile court proceedings may be beyond the constitutional authority of the Judicial Council to "adopt rules for court administration, practice, and procedure, and perform other functions prescribed by statute," as set forth in subdivision (d) of Section 6, Article VI of the California Constitution. Senate Bill 377, which added sections 369.5(a)(2)(D) and 739.5 (a)(2)(D) to the Welfare and Institutions Code, does not specify an expansion of this authority nor authorize the direct imposition of a new duty upon CDSS via the Rules of Court.

Senate Bill 377 imposed the unique requirement on the Judicial Council that it create a form for use by the California Department of Social Services to authorize that agency to release the identifying information of youth or nonminor dependents whose prescriptions for psychotropc medications the board would like to investigate. As indicated in the legislative history, the current process has resulted in only 3 of 86 children reviewed by the board. The bill, and the mandated form, are intended to assist CDSS to perform its statutorily mandated information sharing with the board so that the board can perform its statutorily mandated review of the child's medical records to decide if there are any violations of the law or excessive prescribing of psychotropic medications. As the process is currently performed, the board is unable to meet its statutory obligations because it is not getting the necessary information releases from CDSS. This is a unique use of a Judicial Council form, but it is mandated by statute. Additionally, the fact that a rule goes beyond what is contained in a statute does not make it inconsistent with the statute.[3] Unless the circumstances show otherwise, it should be presumed that the Legislature simply chose not to establish specific procedures in that area and that the council is free to do so.[4] SB 377 requires the Judicial Council to develop a form to include a request for authorization by the child or child's attorney for CDSS to release the child's identification information to the Medical Board of California, so it can ascertain whether there is excessive prescribing of medication. Establishing basic procedures for how that form is provided to the child and maintained for a future request by the Medical Board of California is within the Judicial Council's rule-making authority.

One commentator, a large court, suggested amending rule 5.640 to add "Indian custodian" wherever there is a reference to "parent or legal guardian." The committee agrees with this suggestion and recommends amending rule 5.640. The Indian Child Welfare Act defines an "Indian custodian" as "any Indian person who has legal custody of an Indian child under tribal law or custom or under State law or to whom temporary physical care, custody, and control has been transferred by the parent of such child."[5] Federal and state law provide the Indian custodian with the same rights and protections as a parent.[6]

Three commentators thought the authorization form should expire when the child turns 18 years old. As discussed above, the committee concluded that the authorization should remain valid until it is withdrawn. The committee recommends, however, that the council amend three rules to require the social worker or probation officer to provide the child with a blank copy of Withdrawal of Release of Information to Medical Board of California (form JV-229) when it is the last hearing before the child turns 18 years of age, so the child and their attorney can determine whether they want the authorization to continue.

As circulated for public comment, the proposed rules allowed the child to withdraw authorization by a written letter to CDSS or the filing of form JV-229. CDSS commented it was concerned about permitting a letter to be sent to the CDSS. Permitting a letter, it wrote, especially without any requirements on how to communicate withdrawal of authority, will result in confusion and lack of uniformity. CDSS therefore requested removing the option of sending a letter to the CDSS. The committee agrees with the concerns of CDSS, has removed the option of sending the letter to CDSS, and is recommending that the council adopt JV-229 as a mandatory form.

One commentator proposed modifications to ensure the Welfare and Institutions Code section 827 process applied to the child's juvenile court case file.[7] The committee agrees that it could be possible that the board may seek information from the juvenile court case file, and if so, the protections and procedures in section 827 should apply. The committee recommends including in proposed rule 5.642 and on form JV-228 statements that the authorization is for the release of medical records only, not an authorization for the release of the juvenile court case file as described by section 827.

Alternatives considered

The committee considered requiring that the court provide a blank authorization form and Information Sheet to the child and the child's attorney when the court ordered three or more psychotropic medications for 90 days or longer. This process, however, would not result in the receipt of these forms immediately when the order was made. Since most orders for psychotropic medications are made ex parte without attorneys present, the forms would likely not be provided to the court until the next status review hearing, which could be months from when the order was made. There also would be no reminder to the court that the documents needed to be provided.

The committee concluded that having the applicant (typically the social worker or probation officer) provide the forms when providing notice of the application was a better approach. The applicant is already required under rule 5.640 to provide five documents to the child's attorney when notice is given. The committee concluded that it was most efficient to add three more potential documents to the notice at the beginning of the request for psychotropic medications. The committee also concluded that it was more efficient since the social workers and probation officers have a better understanding of the forms and when they are needed than a courtroom clerk.

The committee considered having CDSS notify the court when the board is requesting the identifying information of a child; however, this approach would not be helpful for prescriptions made several years ago, as the child's case would likely be closed. That approach would only address data recently submitted to the board, but one issue the board seeks to address is its inability to obtain information on children that may have been in foster care several years ago. The board is looking at prescription patterns and as such, is not only requesting the identifying information for children in the most recent data set, but also for children prescribed medication by that same doctor for what could be years ago.

The committee also considered creating a form that could be sent to CDSS without filing it with the court. However, the committee concluded that the form could easily be lost or misplaced if it was not kept in the child's court file. Filing the form also allows the court the ability to review the file to determine if the form has been filled out.

The committee considered several time limits on the duration of the authorization. See discussion above in the Comments section of this report.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

The proposal includes an added requirement that notice to the child's attorney include blank copies of Position on Release of Information to Medical Board of California (form JV-228), Background on Release of Information to Medical Board of California (form JV-228-INFO), and Withdrawal of Release of Information to Medical Board of California (form JV-229). Providing notice with three additional documents will likely result in minimal implementation costs and a slight increase in workload for the person or persons providing notice to the parties and attorneys. The proposal also includes an added requirement that the court clerk send the filed copy of Position on Release of Information to Medical Board of California (form JV-228) to CDSS. This will likely result in minimal implementation costs and a slight increase in workload for the court clerk. In implementing the revised forms, courts will incur standard reproduction costs.

The proposal includes a requirement that CDSS receive and maintain any signed copies of form JV-228, in the event the board requests identifying information of a child, nonminor dependent, or former dependent or ward, for the purposes of further evaluating possible excessive prescribing of psychotropic medication. This will result in an unknown increase in workload for CDSS staff to maintain these forms and any signed withdrawals of authorization. However, this requirement is consistent with the legislative intent of increasing the number of cases the board reviews to ascertain whether there is excessive prescribing of psychotropic medication.

(12) The court may grant the application without a hearing or may set the matter for hearing at the court's discretion. If the court sets the matter for a hearing, the clerk of the court must provide notice of the date, time, and location of the hearing to the parents, ~~or~~ legal guardians, or Indian custodian, their attorneys of record, the dependent child if 12 years of age or older, a ward of the juvenile court of any age, the child's attorney of record, the child's current caregiver, the child's social worker or probation officer, the social worker's or probation officer's attorney of record, the child's Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act guardian ad litem, the child's Court Appointed Special Advocate, if any, and the Indian child's tribe at least two court days before the hearing. Notice must be provided to the child's probation officer and the district attorney, if the child is a ward of the juvenile court.

(e) Delegation of authority (§ 369.5, 739.5)

If a child is removed from the custody of his or her parent, ~~or~~ legal guardian, or Indian custodian, the court may order that the parent, legal guardian, or Indian custodian is authorized to approve or deny the administration of psychotropic medication. The order must be based on the findings in section 369.5 or section 739.5, which must be included in the order. The court may use Order Delegating Judicial Authority Over Psychotropic Medication (form JV-216) to document the findings and order.

(f) * * *

(g) Progress review

(1)–(5) * * *

(6) The child, caregiver, parents, ~~or~~ legal guardians, or Indian custodian, and Court Appointed Special Advocate, if any, may provide input at the progress review as stated in (c)(2).

Rule 5.642. Authorization to release psychotropic medication prescription information to Medical Board of California

(a) Providing authorization forms

Whenever there is an Application for Psychotropic Medication (form JV-220) filed with the court under rule 5.640, the applicant must review the Physician's Statement—Attachment (form JV-220(A)) or Physician's Request to Continue Medication—Attachment (form JV-220(B)) to determine if the request would result in the child being prescribed three or more concurrent psychotropic medications for 90 days or more, as described in section 14028. If the request would result in the child being prescribed three or more psychotropic medications for 90 days or more, the applicant must provide blank copies of Position on Release of Information to Medical Board of California (form JV-228), Background on Release of Information to Medical Board of California (form JV-228-INFO), and Withdrawal of Release of Information to Medical Board of California (form JV-229) to the child and the child's attorney.

(b) Signing authorization form

(1) Form JV-228 may be signed by either the child, nonminor dependent, or the attorney, with the informed consent of the child if the child is found by the court to be of sufficient age and maturity to consent. Sufficient age and maturity to consent must be presumed, subject to rebuttal by clear and convincing evidence, if the child is 12 years of age or over. If the child does not want to sign form JV-228, the child's attorney may not sign it. The child's attorney may sign form JV-228 with the approval of a child 12 years of age or older, if the child is under 12 years of age, or if the court finds the child not to be of sufficient age and maturity to consent.

(2) The authorization is for the release of medical records only. It is not an authorization for the release of juvenile court case files as described in section 827.

(c) Filing and sending authorization form

(1) The child's attorney must review form JV-228 with the child and file it with the superior court.

(2) Within three court days of filing, the clerk of the superior court must send form JV-228 to the California Department of Social Services at the address indicated on the form.

(d) Withdrawal of authorization

At any time, the child, nonminor dependent, or attorney may withdraw the authorization to release information to the Medical Board of California.

(1) Withdrawal may be made by filing Withdrawal of Release of Information to Medical Board of California (form JV-229) or by written letter to the California Department of Social Services.

(2) The child, nonminor dependent, or attorney may sign (as specified in (b)) form JV-229.

(3) Within three court days of filing, the clerk of the superior court must send form JV-229 to the California Department of Social Services at the address indicated on the form.

(e) Notice of release of information to medical board

If the California Department of Social Services releases identifying information to the Medical Board of California, the California Department of Social Services must notify the child, nonminor dependent, or former dependent or ward, at the last known address. The California Department of Social Services must also notify the child's, nonminor dependent's, or former dependent's or ward's attorney, including in cases when jurisdiction has been terminated.

Rule 5.706. Family maintenance review hearings (§ 364)

(a) * * *

(b) Release of Information to the Medical Board of California

If the child has signed Position on Release of Information to Medical Board of California (form JV-228), the social worker must provide the child with a blank copy of Withdrawal of Release of Information to Medical Board of California (form JV-229) before the hearing if it is the last hearing before the child turns 18 years of age or if the social worker is recommending termination of juvenile court jurisdiction.

JV-228-INFO Background on Release of Information to Medical Board of California

1 Why you are receiving forms JV-228 and JV-229

You have been prescribed three or more psychotropic medications at the same time for 90 days or longer. The Medical Board of California ("board") will look into the care your doctor provided to you and may need more information to determine if the doctor properly prescribed medication for you.

California law requires the board to review medical doctors prescribing psychotropic medication to youth in foster care. As part of this review, the California Department of Health Care Services (DHCS) and the California Department of Social Services (CDSS) provide prescribing and other data to the board under a unique number assigned to you, but with no personal identifying information. This means that the board does not know your name or other personal information about you, and does not know how to contact you.

After renewing the data provided by DHCS and CDSS, a medical expert may decide that prescribing practices by one or more doctors involved in your care should be examined more closely. To look into the quality of medical care you were provided, the board may ask you for your name and contact information, so board staff can contact you to get further details about your care and get your permission to review your medical records. You do not need to respond to contacts from the board, even if you agreed to the release of your information. The decision to respond to the board is up to you.

The board encourages you to authorize this review, because it is important to ensure doctors are appropriately prescribing medications to youth in foster care.

2 Information that may be made known

The medical board may also request that you give your permission to DHCS and CDSS to connect your name to the prescribing and other data that was provided to the board under a unique number. This means the medical board will know:

- Your name and that you are or were in foster care;
- Your contact information;
- What psychotropic medications you were prescribed;
- How much of each medication you were prescribed;
- The start and stop dates for each medication;
- Who prescribed them to you; and
- Your age and weight at the time you were prescribed these medications.

This information may help the board evaluate the quality of care you received from your doctors.

You may also allow the board to see your medical records if the board needs them to decide whether the doctor broke the law or prescribed too much psychotropic medication to you.

You do not have to release any information to the board, and you may choose not to share your information with the board. Further, if you do not release your information, there will be no impact on or changes to the services, treatment, or care you receive from the government.

3 Confidentiality of information

Please be aware that all of the state agencies involved are committed to protecting your privacy. The medical board is required by law to keep all information used in their investigations confidential.

4 Withdrawal of authorization

You can change your mind and withdraw your authorization to give information to the medical board at any time. You can do this by signing, or having your attorney sign, Withdrawal of Release of Information to Medical Board of California (form JV-229) and your attorney will file it with the court.

1.	California Academy of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry By: Priscilla Quiroz		On behalf of the nearly 1,000 members of the California Academy of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry (CALACAP), I write to you today to provide comments on the Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee proposal W20-07. First, we recommend replacing 'excessive prescribing' throughout the bill with 'prescribing without appropriate clinical indication'. In 2016, SB 1174 (McGuire) indicates excessive prescribing as 3 or more psychotropics for more than 90 days, which seems very concrete and does not consider that different patients have different clinical needs. In practice, there are few kids who need more than 3 medications for longer than 90 days for clinically appreciate indications. We hope that replacing 'excessive prescribing' may have more meaning when there are looking for clinically inappropriate prescribing and not just 3 or more medication for 90 days. CALACAP also recommends an online database for JV-220. Although this is not directly related to SB 377 (McGuire), we believe having this database would help the impact on the system by this legislation. We'd like to raise the concern that if a youth's 3 medications prescribed for over 90 days was approved by a Juvenile Court for Behavioral Health Services (JCBHS) child psychiatrist (or	This bill has been signed by the governor and codified. The Judicial Council cannot change the language used in the statute. The committee has tracked the language in the statute that CDSS must provide the information to the board as required by statute. The committee appreciates this comment, and while an online database for tracking the JV-220 forms may be a good idea, it is outside the scope of this proposal and the rule making authority of the council. The Medical Board of California would review the child or youth's medical records before making a determination regarding the prescribing doctor. It is not a review of the JV-220(A) or JV-similar program) and the records reveal information that leads to finding the practice not acceptable to the MBC reviewer, this could potentially put the JCBHS reviewer at risk for the initial approval based on just a review of the JV-220(A) or (B). Another concern is if a youth (or their lawyer) requests information regarding the result of the MBC review which finds that the prescribing physician's practice did not meet the standard of care, the youth could sue the prescribing physician for negligence. CALACAP would like to let the committee know that we were strongly opposed to SB 1174 when it was introduced, and we have major concerns with SB 377. Strengthening the current arbitrary law may lead to reluctance among child psychiatrists to work with this population. There is already a significant shortage of child psychiatrist serving this population, and given the already complex nature of treating them, SB 1174 and SB 377 create further barriers to serving these children. Additionally, SB 1174 was meant to authorize investigation of the treatment only of dependents of the foster care system. SB 377, on the other hand, authorizes the investigation of both wards and dependents of the court. SB 377, therefore, attempts to expand the original scope of SB 1174 and	220(B). The committee recommends including in proposed rule 5.642 and on form JV-228 statements that the authorization is for the release of medical records only, not an authorization for the release of the juvenile court case file as described by section 827. The Medical Board of California is required to review the data and medical records to determine if the appropriate standard of care was met. The results of this determination are outside the scope of this proposal and the rule-making authority of the Judicial Council. See response above.

This would clarify that this review applies in cases where new psychotropic medication, in addition to continuing medication that was previously authorized, will result in the child being prescribed three or more concurrent psychotropic medications for 90 days or more. Rule of Court 5.642(c)(2) Within three days of filing, the clerk of the superior court must send form JV-228 to the California Department of Social Services at the address indicated on the form. Comment #2: The CDSS has significant concerns that this proposed provision imposes a requirement that does not exist in statute for the CDSS to be the repository of these documents, without any analysis of the costs and burdens that would be triggered by the creation of a separate system at the state level to receive and maintain the JV-228 forms. The CDSS does not typically receive individual case documents from the JV-220 process or maintain individual case files or records for child welfare services or probation cases. Such recordkeeping is done at the local level by the appropriate county child welfare services agency or county probation department overseeing the child's case. The CDSS therefore recommends striking paragraph (2) of subdivision (c) of the proposed Rule of	The committee appreciates this comment, however the suggestion of maintaining the JV-228 form in the social worker or probation officer's file does not address one of the main problems the board is having, which is obtaining the identifying information of children whose cases have been closed. 			Court 5.642 to remove CDSS as the point of delivery and repository for the JV-228 forms. Instead, the CDSS recommends that Rule 5.642 require either the clerk of the court to mail a copy of the filed JV-228 form to the respective county child welfare services agency or probation department, so it may be included in the child's existing individual case file, or alternatively, that the proposed rule require the child's attorney to provide a copy of form JV-228 to the county child welfare services agency or probation attorney upon filing the form with the juvenile court . Should the Medical Board of California request a further review of a dependent's/ward's medical record, the CDSS can simply contact the necessary county agency to determine if there is a JV-228 form on file. Additionally, CDSS recommends that the proposed language "within three days of filing" be clarified to read "within three court days of filing". Specifying "court days" is consistent with existing language in rule 5.640. Rule of Court 5.642(d)(1)(2) Withdrawal of authorization. Additionally, the fact that a rule goes beyond what is contained in a statute does not make it inconsistent with the statute.[2] Unless the circumstances show otherwise, it should be presumed that the Legislature simply chose not to establish specific procedures in that area and that the council is free to do so.[3] SB 377 requires the Judicial Council to develop a form to include a request for authorization by the child or child's attorney for CDSS to release the child's identification information to the Medical Board of California, so it can ascertain whether there is excessive prescribing of medication. Establishing basic procedures for how that form is provided to the child and maintained for a future request by the Medical Board is within the Judicial Council's rule-making authority. The child or child's attorney may sign (as specified in (b)) form JV-229 or send a letter to the California Department of Social Services. Comment #3: Subdivision (d)(1)(2) does not contain a mechanism for the JV-229 form to be transmitted anywhere upon being filed with the court. The CDSS recommends that the proposed rule include a requirement that the JV-229 form be transmitted to the county child welfare services agency or probation department by either the clerk of the court or the child's attorney filing the form, in order for the document to be maintained in the child's individual case file. The CDSS is concerned about permitting a letter to be sent to the CDSS. Permitting a letter, especially without any requirements on how to communicate withdrawal of authority, will result in confusion and lack of uniformity. The CDSS therefore recommends removing the option of sending a letter to the CDSS. The CDSS suggests that the rule prescribe the same process for transmitting the JV-229 Withdrawal of Information Release to Medical Board of California form to the county agency as will be prescribed for the JV-228 Position on Release of	The committee has amended this rule to indicate that Withdrawal of Information Release to Medical Board of California (form JV- 229) be filed with the court and sent by the clerk to CDSS. As such, the CDSS reiterates the recommendation that either the clerk of the superior court or the child's attorney be designated as the responsible party to send the forms to the respective county child welfare or probation agency for inclusion in the child's case file. The California Department of Social Services must also notify the child's, nonminor dependent's, or former dependent's or ward's attorney, including in cases when jurisdiction has been terminated. Comment #4: The CDSS respectfully notes that this proposed Rule of Court creates a new responsibility and imposes a direct duty on an agency of the executive branch that is not prescribed by statute. The CDSS has significant concerns that this provision creating a new responsibility for an agency of the executive branch that is not a party to juvenile court proceedings may be beyond the constitutional authority of the Judicial Council to "adopt rules	Senate Bill 377 imposed the unique requirement on the Judicial Council that it create a form for use by the California Department of Social Services to authorize that agency to release the identifying information of youth or nonminor dependents whom the Medical Board of California would like to investigate prescriptions of psychotropic medications. 				Medical Board is within the Judicial Council's rule-making authority.
			The CDSS respectfully requests the removal of subdivision (e) of the proposed Rule of Court 5.642 in its entirety, and recommends an alternative approach of including on page two of the proposed JV-228 form a ninth item allowing the child and/or their attorney to check a box that indicates: "As a condition of my authorization, I request notification at my last known address if the Medical Board of California seeks release of my identifying information or my medical records to determine if there are any potential violations of the law or excessive prescribing of psychotropic medications." The CDSS supports the idea that a child, youth, and/or their attorney should be notified if the Medical Board of California seeks release of their identity and psychotropic medication information. The CDSS is committed to continuing to partner with the Medical Board of California, local agencies, and other relevant stakeholders to develop the best process for notifying the child, including any former dependents/wards, in an appropriate, effective, and trauma-informed manner. Comments to Amended Rules of Court, rule 5.640. Comment #5: The CDSS recommends including in the noticing requirements that a blank copy of Withdrawal of Information Release to Medical Board of California (form JV-229) must also be included in the notice to the child's attorney of record. Additionally, the CDSS recommends Rule 5.640(f) be clarified to state that blank copies of these forms must be provided if the Application for Psychotropic Medication (form JV-220) will result in the child or youth being prescribed three or more concurrent psychotropic medications for 90 days or longer. This will clarify that this requirement applies in cases where new psychotropic medication, in addition to continuing medication that was previously authorized, will result in the child being prescribed three or more concurrent psychotropic medications for 90 days or more. "	The suggested approach of the authorization becoming invalid when the child exits foster care or reaches 18 years of age does not address one of the main problems the board is having, which is obtaining the identifying information of children whose cases have been closed. There is no reason for differentiating between current and former foster youth. The legislative intent is that all foster youth should be given an opportunity to authorize the board to access their medical information if there is alleged to have been inappropriate prescribing of psychotropic medication.[7] The committee concluded that the authorization should remain valid until it is withdrawn. The committee has amended the rules and forms to indicate this. The rules have also been amended to require the social worker or probation officer to provide the youth a blank copy of Withdrawal of Information Release to Medical Board of California (form JV-229) when it is the last hearing before the child turns 18 years of age, or if the recommendation is

			The CDSS believes that the proposed three-year timeframe is generally appropriate for the authorization to remain valid. However, once a child exits care to reunification, adoption, or legal guardianship, the child will have a biological parent, adoptive parent, or legal guardian who may make medical decisions on behalf of the child, including whether to release the child's medical information. Additionally, once a child reaches the age of majority, they may also independently authorize the release of their own medical information. Therefore, the CDSS believes it is appropriate for the JV-228 authorization to expire in these instances.	See response above.

This will offer the most current information on the child or youth's medical history.	issue the Board seeks to address, however, is its inability to obtain information on children that may have been in foster care several years ago. The Board is looking at prescription patterns and, as such, is not only requesting the identifying information for children in the most recent data set, but also for children prescribed medication by that same doctor for what could be years ago. Additionally, a short time frame would increase workload for the department, the child's attorney, the court clerk and CDSS. The committee concluded that the authorization should remain valid until it is withdrawn. The committee has amended the rules and forms to indicate this. The rules have also been amended to require the social worker or probation officer to provide the youth a blank copy of Withdrawal of Information Release to Medical Board of California (form JV-229) when it is the last hearing before the child turns 18 years of age, or if the recommendation is to terminate juvenile court jurisdiction. This approach will decrease workload for both court clerks and CDSS since the authorization form will not need to be repeatedly filed and sent to CDSS.
			In addition, it's unclear why the background document bases authorization on previous prescribing patterns since the request for authorization happens at the time the JV-223 is filed. The review after authorization to release medical records by the child or child's attorney should not exceed three to six months and it appears that the proposed timeframe is beyond	The Board is looking at prescribing practices of physicians and may need to obtain information on children in past data sets. 			the scope and intent of the legislation. The review process must be contemporaneous to determine the practitioners reasoning for prescription. It would be unreasonable to review medical records for three years to then request a practitioner to provide reasoning and to articulate their initial clinical judgment based on the child or youth's unique circumstances that occurred several years prior. Unintended consequences of this legislation could create a two-tiered system of treatment for foster youth versus those children and youth who have not been removed from their homes. The increased oversight could unintentionally cause practitioners to become less able to use their best clinical judgement if they believe it might lead to an unjust and unfair review. The appropriate forms and any potential investigation must account for unique situations that the child or youth may be subject to, such as presumptive transfer (AB 1299). Currently, the provisions related to presumptive transfer are still being developed and the processes related to timely notification which includes the appropriate transfer of medical history and records, is often inconsistent and/or incomplete. Circumstances such as this must be taken into consideration upon a review by the Medical Board of California and should be included in the appropriate form.	The Medical Board of California is required to review the data and medical records to determine if the appropriate standard of care was met. The results of this determination are outside the scope of this proposal and the rule-making authority of the Judicial Council. SB 377 requires the Judicial Council to develop a form to include a request for authorization by the child or child's attorney for CDSS to release the child's identification information to the Medical Board of California, so it can ascertain whether there is excessive prescribing of medication. The committee chose to make that form as straightforward as possible. Developing procedures for presumptive transfer cases is outside the scope of this proposal. The Judicial Council implemented policies and procedures for presumptive transfer through California Rules of

			Other unique circumstances and needs of the child must be taken into consideration for foster youth, especially those children and youth who may be placed in Short-Term Residential Therapeutic Programs (STRTPs), who have chaotic internal needs due to traumatic experiences, leading to the removal from home and do not have a sense of stability or appropriate behavioral support. Circumstances such as this, from a psychiatric perspective, could increase the child and youth's need for psychotropic medications in order to keep them safe. In the absence of decent and stable placement options, the expectation that a child or youth must deal with complex psychiatric symptoms on their own should be taken into consideration related to the review of medical records.	See response above. Developing a procedure for what the Medical Board of California must take into consideration is outside the scope of this proposal.

			Regarding item number W20-07, this change would create three (3) new psychotropic medication forms – the JV-228, JV-228-INFO, and JV-229 -- in order to allow CDSS to authorize the Medical Board of California to ascertain whether there is excessive prescribing of psychotropic medication. This would create a moderate workload impact for the PMA desk clerks, who would then have to send out these additional notice forms in addition to the JV-217, JV-217 INFO, JV-218, JV-219 forms they send out now to clients. In addition, this change would revise the existing JV-223 and JV-224 forms in order to add an item to indicate whether or not a youth is on 3 or more psych meds for 90 days or longer. Our PMA policy would need to be updated to reference these new forms.	The committee appreciates this comment and is aware that providing additional forms will create a small workload impact to those already providing notice.
			Although we're not necessarily opposed to these changes, we're aware that Judge Nash/Office of Child Protection would like for the Judicial Council to also update the JV-220(A) Physician's Statement in order to require prescribing physicians list the specific lab tests that were performed prior to the prescription. Currently, the form only has checkboxes (#14 a and b) for "All essential laboratory tests were performed" or "All essential laboratory tests were not performed (explain what laboratory	The committee appreciates this comment, however the JV-220(A) form was not a part of this proposal. 			tests were not done and why)." However, there are some limitations with this question as currently written. First, there is no definition of what "essential" means, so there is wide variety in practice among physicians. Also, about half of PMA requests do not have any lab tests done, which is a safety issue for youth. DMH has indicated that getting the lab results is often very difficult, so they are considering creating their own form to be faxed to prescribing physicians inquiring about the specific lab tests ordered for each youth, the date they were ordered, whether results have come back, and what those results were. The biggest challenge historically is that providers very often fail to respond to these requests absent a court order. PHNs will do what they can to get these results from physicians, but without a mandate or court order, they may not be too successful. As a result, the Office of Child Protection has requested that the Judicial Council update the JV-220(A) form for doctors to indicate which lab tests were performed rather than merely having a yes/no checkbox.

This proposal says that the Applicant (which is DCFS) has to give notice of the Release to minors (over 12) and minor's counsel. There would be reduced workload for court staff if child protective services is required to notice to minor's attorney. Executive Summary

The Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee recommends amending California Rules of Court, rule 5.649 (Right to make educational or developmental-services decisions); revising Order Designating Educational Rights Holder (form JV-535) and its attachment (form JV-535(A)); and approving Information on Educational Rights Holders (form JV-535-INFO) to clarify requirements, alleviate confusion, and provide more guidance on service of process.

Recommendation

The committee recommends that the Judicial Council, effective September 1, 2020:

1. Amend rule 5.649 of the California Rules of Court to clarify the filing requirements following a hearing designating an educational rights holder; specify requirements for service of process after the hearing; and update references to "parent and guardian" to include the educational rights of an Indian custodian, in compliance with Welfare and Institutions Code section 361.

2. Revise Order Designating Educational Rights Holder (form JV-535) to bring key information to the front page, to include more information about the various parties, to better identify confidential names and addresses, and to provide space for the appointment of more than one educational rights holder.

3. Revise Attachment to Order Designating Educational Rights Holder (form JV-535(A)) to include room for the names of all parties and others who need to be served if applicable; include an educational rights holder service of process check box that designates the required parties and others that need service if applicable and appropriate; add the Child's Statewide Student Identifier (SSID) to better track the child or youth through any school changes; and make the form mandatory rather than optional.

4. Approve Information on Educational Rights Holders (form JV-535-INFO) to provide key information about educational rights holders, including what an educational rights holder is; what is required of an educational rights holder; what happens at each hearing when there is an educational rights holder; who needs to be served with forms JV-535 and JV-535(A); and how a parent, guardian, or Indian custodian can appeal a court's limiting or modifying of educational rights.

The text of the amended rule is attached at pages 5–7. The new and revised forms are attached at pages 8–14.

Relevant Previous Council Action

Forms JV-535 and JV-535(A) were last revised effective January 1, 2014, to conform to legislation that amended many sections of the Welfare and Institutions Code, the Education Code, and the Government Code to promote access to education and developmental and other legally mandated services for children and nonminors who are the subject of juvenile court proceedings and to ensure that all children and nonminors in foster care are able to maintain connections to relatives and other adults important to them. The Judicial Council also adopted rule 5.649, effective January 1, 2014.

Analysis/Rationale

Education is an issue at every juvenile court hearing and must be addressed in agency reports. Courts need complete information to address educational needs. Child welfare and probation agencies are required to provide a comprehensive report on a child's or youth's educational progress and recommendations on how to meet any educational or developmental-services needs at each hearing. The initial report is recorded on Your Child's Health and Education (form JV-225) and is updated at every hearing in the social worker's or probation officer's report.

The default educational and/or developmental-services rights holder is the parent(s), guardian(s), or Indian custodian(s) of the child or youth. But if the court limits or modifies the decisionmaking rights of a parent, guardian, or Indian custodian, it must appoint an educational rights holder (ERH) for the child or youth. That order is recorded on form JV-535, as are any subsequent orders that limit, restore, or modify education rights, or where there is a need to update contact or other information, in any juvenile proceeding. Other information about the child's school, social worker or probation officer, foster youth educational liaison, and general findings and orders regarding educational decisions can be recorded on form JV-535(A). Rule 5.649 applies to these juvenile hearings and to the use of the two forms.

There have been multiple requests by rule and form users to clarify the rule and improve the forms. The committee received several comments about and requests for improvements to rule 5.649 and forms JV-535 and JV-535(A) during the comment period from court clerks, attorneys, judges, and others, primarily expressing confusion about what the rule requires, claiming inadequate guidance on service requirements, and complaining of a lack of clarity and insufficient information on the forms. This proposal includes amendments to rule 5.649; revisions to forms JV-535 and JV-535(A); and the adoption of a new form JV-535-INFO.

These recommendations are responsive to identified concerns or problems, and are otherwise helpful in advancing Judicial Council goals and objectives. They will provide more clarity and ease of use for the forms and will clarify that the rule does not require a new JV-535 to be filed at every hearing unless the court has limited, modified, or restored educational rights, or there have been changes to contact or other information. It will clarify a confusing rule and will make the forms more user friendly so that key information about the child and other interested parties will be more readily accessible to assist the court, the parties, and their attorneys.

Policy implications

The recommended amended rule of court, revised forms, and new INFO form should result in a more uniform practice across the state regarding the process involved in the appointment of educational rights holders.

Comments

This proposal circulated for comment as part of the winter 2020 invitation-to-comment cycle from December 11, 2019, to February 12, 2020, to the standard mailing list for family and juvenile law proposals. Included on the list were appellate presiding justices, appellate court administrators, trial court presiding judges, trial court executive officers, judges, court administrators and clerks, attorneys, family law facilitators and self-help center staff, legal services attorneys, social workers, probation officers, CASA programs, and other juvenile and family law professionals. Thirteen organizations and individuals provided comment: six agreed with the proposal, six agreed with the proposal if modified, and one commenter did not specify a position, but offered suggested modifications. No commenters opposed the proposal. The committee found some of the comments very helpful and incorporated them into the recommendations. Specifically, the following suggestions from commenters were incorporated into the recommendations:

- The inclusion in JV-535-INFO of e-service in compliance with rule 5.523 as an option for service of process when both the court and county authorize e-service in a jurisdiction;

- Amending rule 5.649 to include a section on service of process;
- Making form JV-535(A) a mandatory form;
- Including the Statewide Student Identifier (SSID) on form JV-535(A) to be able to better track the child or youth through school changes;
- Adding "Indian Custodian" to "parent or guardian" to bring the form into compliance with Welfare and Institutions Code § 361;
- The replacement of "juvenile justice" for "delinquency" wherever it occurs;
- The inclusion on form JV-535-INFO of information on who would benefit/should be given the JV-535-INFO form.

A chart with the full text of the comments received and the committee's responses is attached at pages 15–48.

The committee sought specific comment on whether the proposed new form JV-535-INFO would be helpful in clarifying the educational rights holder process. Those who responded were uniformly enthusiastic about the desire for such a form. In addition, the committee sought specific comment on whether the check box for service of process would be helpful, and again those who responded to the question were enthusiastic.

Alternatives considered

The committee considered waiting for legislative or other changes to propel this proposal, but the comments from the field were compelling and the committee felt that it was a matter of some urgency to clarify the rule, make the forms more user friendly, and develop form JV-535-INFO to address confusion in the field about the educational rights holder process.

The proposal that circulated for comment did not differ significantly, other than is noted above in the Comments section, from the recommendation presented in this report.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

The committee does not anticipate any significant costs associated with implementation of this recommendation. The commenters who addressed the committee's question about cost savings indicated that there would be some minor savings because of the committee's clarification that form JV-535 does not have to be filed and served at each hearing unless there has been a change in the status of the educational rights holder or there has been a change in contact or other information in either form JV-535 or JV-535(A).

Rule 5.649 of the California Rules of Court is amended, effective September 1, 2020, to read:

Rule 5.649. Right to make educational or developmental-services decisions

The court must identify the educational rights holder for the child ~~on form JV-535~~ at each hearing in a juvenile dependency or ~~delinquency~~ juvenile justice proceeding. At any hearing, where the court limits, restores, or modifies educational rights, or where there are updates to any contact or other information, in any juvenile proceeding, the findings and orders must be documented on form JV-535. Unless ~~his or her~~ the rights of the parent, guardian, or Indian custodian ~~rights~~ have been limited by the court under this rule, the parent, ~~or~~ guardian, or Indian custodian holds the educational and developmental-services decisionmaking rights for the ~~his or her~~ child. In addition, a nonminor or nonminor dependent youth holds the rights to make educational and developmental-services decisions for ~~himself or herself~~ the youth and should be identified on form JV-535, unless rule 5.650(b) applies.

(a) Order (§§ 361, 366, 366.27, 366.3, 726, 727.2; 20 U.S.C. § 1415; 34 C.F.R. § 300.300)

At the dispositional hearing and each subsequent review or permanency hearing, the court must determine whether the rights of a parent, ~~or~~ guardian, or Indian custodian to make educational or developmental-services decisions for the child should be limited.

If necessary to protect a child who is adjudged a dependent or ward of the court under section 300, 601, or 602, the court may limit the rights of a parent~~'s,~~ ~~or~~ guardian~~'s~~, or Indian custodian ~~rights~~ to make educational or developmental-services decisions for the child by making appropriate, specific orders on Order Designating Educational Rights Holder (form JV-535).

(b) Temporary order (§ 319)

At the initial hearing on a petition filed under section 325 or at any time before a child is adjudged a dependent or the petition is dismissed, the court may, on making the findings required by section 319(g)(1), use form JV-535 to temporarily limit the rights of a parent~~'s,~~ ~~or~~ guardian~~'s~~, or Indian custodian ~~rights~~ to make educational or developmental-services decisions for the child. An order made under section 319(g) expires on dismissal of the petition, but in no circumstances later than the conclusion of the hearing held under section 361.

If the court does temporarily limit the rights of a parent~~'s,~~ ~~or~~ guardian~~'s~~, or Indian custodian ~~rights~~ to make educational or developmental-services decisions, the court must, at the dispositional hearing, reconsider the need to limit those rights and must identify the authorized educational rights holder on form JV-535.

(c) No delay of initial assessment

The child's initial assessment to determine any need for special education or developmental services need not be delayed to obtain parental or guardian consent or for the appointment of an educational rights holder if one or more of the following circumstances is met:

(1) The court has limited, even temporarily, the educational or developmental-services decisionmaking rights of the parent, ~~or~~ guardian, or Indian custodian, and consent for an initial assessment has been given by an individual appointed by the court to represent the child;

(2) The local educational agency or regional center, after reasonable efforts, cannot locate the parent, ~~or~~ guardian, or Indian custodian; or

(3) Parental rights have been terminated or the guardianship has been set aside.

(d) Judicial determination

If the court determines that the child is in need of any assessments, evaluations, or services—including special education, mental health, developmental, and other related services—the court must direct an appropriate person to take the necessary steps to request those assessments, evaluations, or services.

(e) Filing of order

Following the dispositional hearing and each statutory review hearing, the party that has requested a modification, limitation, or restoration of educational or developmental-services decisionmaking rights must complete form JV-535 and any required attachments to reflect the court's orders and submit the completed form within five court days for the court's review and signature. ~~If no request is made, the child's or youth's attorney must complete and file the form.~~ If there has been no request for modification, limitation, or restoration of educational or developmental-services decisionmaking rights, or there are no required updates to contact or other information, there is no need to file a new form JV-535. If a new form JV-535 is filed, the most recent Attachment to Order Designating Educational Rights Holder (form JV-535(A)) must be attached. The court may instead direct the appropriate party to attach a new ~~Attachment to Order Designating Educational Rights Holder (~~form JV-535(A)~~)~~ to document the court's findings and orders.

(f) Service of Process

After each hearing where a party has requested a modification, limitation, or restoration of educational or developmental-services decisionmaking rights, the court clerk must serve the most current forms JV-535 and JV-535(A) on each applicable party.

JV-535-INFO Information on Educational Rights Holders

1 What Is an Educational Rights Holder?

An educational rights holder is the adult identified or appointed by the court to make educational or developmental-services decisions for a child or youth who has a case in the juvenile court. It can be a parent, guardian, or Indian custodian of the child or youth. But if the court limits decisionmaking rights and appoints an educational rights holder other than the parent, guardian, or Indian custodian, that person acts as the child's or youth's parent, spokesperson, decision maker, and "authorized representative" for all matters related to education and/or developmental-services needs. That person has the right to access the child's or youth's educational and developmental-services records and information to the same extent permitted by the law for a parent.

2 What Is Required of an Educational Rights Holder?

The person who is appointed as the educational rights holder for a child or youth has rights and duties that are imposed by the court. The appointed educational rights holder:

- Will be authorized to have access to the child's or youth's educational and/or developmental-services records and information to the extent permitted by the law.
- May authorize the release of educational and/or developmental-services records to the child's attorney or CASA volunteer to the extent permitted by the law.
- Must comply with all applicable state and federal confidentiality laws and may share information only to the extent necessary to further the interests of the child or youth.
- Must meet with the child or youth; investigate the child's or youth's educational and/or developmental-services needs and whether those needs are being met; and, before each scheduled review hearing, provide information and recommendations to the social worker or probation officer or make written recommendations to the court or attend the review hearing, and participate in any part of the hearing that concerns the child's education or development, or do all of these. The educational and/or developmental-services rights holder may submit written recommendations on Educational Rights Holder Statement (form JV-537) or in any other suitable format. To the greatest extent possible, the educational rights and/or developmental-services holder must consult and collaborate with the school district's educational liaison or regional center service coordinator, or other educators and case managers as applicable, to gather information needed to meet the needs and protect the rights of the child or youth.

3 At Each Hearing...

At each hearing in a dependency or juvenile justice proceeding, the court is required to identify the educational rights holders for the child or youth. At the dispositional hearing, the social worker or probation officer will have interviewed the parent, guardian, or Indian custodian and have had them fill out and return Your Child's Health and Education (form JV-225) and have filed it with the court. At that hearing the court, using the information available, will appoint an educational rights holder if necessary in an order that will be made on Order Designating Educational Rights Holder (form JV-535). That order will be signed by the judge and filed with the court along with form JV-535 (A), which contains general information and the court's other findings and orders related to the child's or youth's health and education. At each subsequent hearing those original JV-535 and JV-535(A) forms will remain in effect until there is a need to limit, restore, or modify educational or developmental-services rights, or where there is a need to update any contact or other information on form JV-535; or when there are changes in the general information or subsequent findings and orders on form JV-535(A). The most recently updated forms JV-535 and JV-535(A) should be combined and presented at each subsequent hearing.

4 Who Needs to Be Served the Original and Updated Forms JV-535 and JV-535(A)?

The first form JV-535 or any subsequent form JV-535 with new information, along with the most recently updated JV-535(A), must be served by the clerk of the court on the following:

- The child (if 10 years old or older);
- The attorney for the child or youth;
- The social worker or probation officer;
- The Indian child's tribe (if applicable);

- The local foster youth educational liaison;
- The county office of education foster youth services coordinator;
- The regional center service coordinator (if applicable); and
- The educational rights holder or surrogate parent.

The clerk may also serve the form on:

- The parent or guardian (unless the information is deemed confidential, parental rights have been terminated, or the child has reached 18 years of age and reunification services have been terminated);
- To the CASA volunteer (if applicable); and, if requested,
- To any other person entitled to notice under Welfare and Institutions Code section 293.

Service must be in person or by first-class mail no later than five court days after the order is signed. If both the county and the court authorize electronic service in a jurisdiction, then electronic service may also be used in compliance with California Rules of Court, rule 5.523.

5 If You Want to Appeal a Decision by the Court to Limit or Modify Educational Rights

If you are a parent, guardian, or Indian custodian, and the juvenile court limited or modified your educational or developmental-services rights at a hearing, you have the right to appeal that decision. To appeal, your attorney must fill out and file Notice of Appeal—Juvenile (form JV-800) within 60 days of the date of the decision. Before filing the Notice of Appeal, the order that the judge signed limiting or modifying your educational rights (form JV-535) must be attached to it, along with the most recently updated form JV-535(A). The appeal should be filed in the clerk's office at the court where the decision was made.

This form JV-535-INFO should be made available to court staff, attorneys of record, social workers, probation officers, parents, guardians, Indian custodians, and other educational rights holders, and to anyone with questions about educational rights holders.

1.	Rosanna Anderson, Education Liaison San Mateo County Office of Education	AM	Regarding the need to update the JV-535 at each hearing. I was a child welfare social worker and now work at the County Office of Education - Foster Youth Services Coordinating Program (FYSCP). It has been my experience that when JV535s are not completed at each hearing, they are forgotten. Due to frequent changes in social workers or because social workers have so much on their plates, Educational Rights Holders (ERH) fall by the wayside. We had many foster youth whose parents, who were not involved in the case at all, holding educational rights, or previous foster parents (some from more than two placements ago) still holding educational rights. If not prompted to think about it at each hearing, the issue is forgotten. There are also cases of a school district having a JV535 from a couple of years ago and not knowing a new ERH had been appointed as a new JV535 had not been provided. Due to these circumstances, when I jointed the FYSCP, we began to urge social workers to complete a JV535 at each hearing in order to ensure: 1) the ERH was continuously evaluated for appropriateness AND 2) if the school/district was using a JV535 from a year ago, they would know there was a more current one. It would be helpful to understand for which peoples notice is mandatory vs. optional. The JV-535-INFO would be helpful.	The committee acknowledges this concern and has addressed it in the proposed amended California Rules of Court rule 5.649, which requires: "At any hearing where the court limits, restores, or modifies educational rights, or where there are updates to any contact or other information, in any juvenile proceeding, the findings and orders must be documented on form JV-535." It also clarifies that any new JV-535 must be attached to the most recent form JV-535(A). The committee also acknowledges that service of the most current JV-535 and JV-535(A) on all applicable parties is critical. For that reason, the committee has further amended Rule 5.649 to add subsection (f) Service of Process, which requires the court clerk to serve the most current JV-535 and JV-535(A) on each applicable party after each hearing where a party has requested a modification, limitation or restoration of educational or developmental-services decision making rights. The committee will be providing a service checkbox on form JV-535(A) No response required.

2.	Renzo Bernales, Education Programs Consultant, California Department of Education	A	Consider adding the youth's statewide student identifier (SSID) to the form. These are provided once a youth enrolls as a student in California public schools. It makes it easier to follow the youth and determine which schools were attended and the districts in which the student has been enrolled. In addition, consider adding information as to the educational responsibilities, such as attending IEP meetings, the education rights holder will need to meet.	The committee agrees with this suggestion and is recommending that the statewide student identifier (SSID) be added to section 1 (General information about the child) on the JV-535(A) form, as altered in response to comments, for adoption. The proposed JV-535-INFO form that the committee is recommending for approval includes a section on "What is Required of an Educational Rights Holder?"
3.	Del Norte County Office of Education by Patti Rommel, Foster Youth Services Coordinator	A	As the Del Norte County Office of Education Foster Youth Services Coordinator, I have requested that I be served with copies of the JV-535, per Rules of the Court. The Court's response was that I needed to request these from the child's attorney. I believe have a checkbox with the list of mandatory service versus optional service would be very useful and would clarify for the courts who are to be served with the form. Thank you	The committee agrees with this suggestion and has incorporated it, with minor alterations, into the amended form JV-535(A) that it is recommending for adoption.

Right to make educational or developmental-services decisions The court must identify the educational rights holder for the child on form JV-535 at each hearing in a dependency or delinquency proceeding. At the first hearing, and at any subsequent any hearing where the court limits, restores, or modifies educational rights, or where there are updates to any contact or other information, in any juvenile proceeding, the findings and orders must be documented on form JV-535. Unless his or her rights have been limited by the court under this rule, the parent or guardian holds the educational and developmental-services decisionmaking rights for his or her child. 			JV-535(A)) to document the court's findings and orders. Basis of proposed modifications: In the second sentence of rule 5.649, the comma after "first hearing" may suggest that the modifier ("where the court limits, restores, or modifies educational rights") applies only to a "subsequent" hearing. More importantly, for purposes of the rule there is no distinction between a first hearing and subsequent hearing. We believe this sentence could be stated more clearly by simply referring to "any" hearing.	The committee agrees with this suggestion and will modify the language using "any" hearing.
			In rule 5.649(e), we suggest moving the proposed new language (with some modifications) to the first sentence of the subdivision. We recommend changing "request for modification" to "modification" as the need for a new or updated form is dependent on requisite changes, not whether a request was made (e.g. contact information changes happen independent of requests or orders).	The committee does not recommend this suggested reorganization of Rule 5.649 because it may cause confusion. If a modification, limitation, or restoration of educational rights has been requested and the court denies it; that is a new order and would require the filing and service of a new JV-535, along with the most recent JV-535(A)
			We recommend changing "or" to "and" before "there are no required updates to contact or other information" to avoid potential grammatical ambiguity about the use of "or" in the sentence and clarify that if contact or other information is changed	The committee does not recommend this proposed change because it believes that the use of "or" does clarify that the new form JV-535 must be filed for either contingency.

			without any other change, an updated JV-535 must be filed. With respect to the second sentence of our proposed modification, while it is true that the question of the need to file the JV-535 initially presents itself at the dispositional hearing, there is no difference in the treatment of the question before the court between the dispositional or subsequent hearings, aside from when a "new" as opposed to "updated" JV-535 is filed. We therefore suggest streamlining the language to simply refer to "any" hearing. We also suggest clarifying the language to state explicitly that a new or updated JV-535 is only required when a request has been granted. We believe "unless ordered otherwise" should be added to preserve the judge's general discretion in such matters, and is especially appropriate for a situation where "contact or other information" has changed. Notably in the latter situation where no request was made, the petitioner would typically be the default party to file the new or updated form(s). JV-535-INFO: Question (1) We suggest modifying the second sentence to read as follows: It can be is usually a parent or guardian of the child or youth.	The committee agrees with the suggestion to modify the rule to reference any hearing, but does not agree with a new JV-535 only being needed when a request is granted. If the request has not been granted, that would requires a new JV-535 to be filed to record the most current decision by the court, even if that decision is to leave things as they were. The committee does not recommend this suggestion, but has modified the language for clarity.

			Question (2) Since the parent or guardian may be the default educational rights holder, and no "appointment" is required, to increase clarity FLEXCOM suggests that the first sentence be modified to read as follows: Whether a parent or guardian or another person is appointed as the educational rights holder Whoever holds the educational rights for a child or youth, that person has rights and duties that are imposed by the court. The final phrase of the 4th bullet point refers to the hearing that concerns the child's education or development "or all of these." FLEXCOM was not clear on the intent and thought this might be intended to refer to education or development "services."	The committee does not recommend this suggestion, but has modified the language for clarity.
			Question (4) The introduction to the last series of bullet points should be modified to read: The clerk may also serve the form to on.	The committee agrees with this suggestion and has made the change.

			the pleasure of the court and in the best interests of the minor. Therefore, we suggest modifying the first sentence to read: If you are a parent or guardian and the court limited or modified educational rights at a juvenile court hearing, you have the right to appeal that decision. JV-535 We recommend eliminating (and renumbering accordingly) (1) of both 1. a. and 1. b. because it implies that a form must be filed even if the court does not disturb the educational rights held by a parent.	The committee agrees with the suggested modification and has incorporated it into the proposal. The committee does not recommend this suggestion.
5.	Jason Gutierrez, Coordinator II, Los Angeles County Office of Education	A	My one comment or change I would like to bring up is in regards to our LGBTQ+ youth who do not identify as "his or her" I am not sure what the legalities are with this, but for the sake of changing forms again, maybe this can be explored. Also, is there a way that a box can be checked off by the child welfare agency representative, that states all information provided to the court is current and true to the best of my knowledge, on this day...I ask this because many times what is written in CWS/CMS is not always accurate and when it comes to data sharing with our Educational Passport System (EPS) by ensuring a caseworker has entered current information,	The committee appreciates that the commenter brought this to its attention as it is currently working on removing gendered language from forms and rules and replacing it with gender neutral terms. It will remove all references to “his or her” and replace the references with “child or youth”. The committee does not recommend this suggestion because it is not always filled out by the social worker.

			would assist with identification and clean data. I know this may not be able to be a mandate due to the differing agencies, but even if a comment/reminder is on the form to submit current information and entered into your county agencies data information system. I think this form will be more effective if approved. So many times over the most important information is not listed, thus creating issues for staff.	No response required.
6.	Los Angeles Department of Children and Family Services by Alyssa Skolnick, Deputy County Counsel	A	It would be extremely helpful to the CSW and Dependency court to add check boxes and include date and manner of service (in-person or 1st class mail).	The committee agrees with this suggestion and has incorporated it, with minor alterations, into the amended form JV-535(A) that it is recommending for adoption.
7.	Wendy Lowinger, Attorney	A	A really important addition would be for the clerk/ or whomever sends out the signed filed copies, to EMAIL all the parties who need to be notified. For instance, in San Francisco, where I usually end up doing the 535 and 535a's as minor's counsel, I email the "received" orders out as soon as I get them, most people use email now!	The committee agrees with this suggestion, to the extent that both the particular court and county have agreed to e-service, and the committee has incorporated it as a service option, where applicable, into the JV-535-INFO form that it is recommending for adoption.
8.	San Francisco Education Rights Working Group by Alicia Parks	AM	In general, the JV-535 should be one comprehensive form and there should not be a separate JV-535(A) form. 			535 would include additional information for schools and other providers to let them know the purpose of the form, ie. this JV-535 form is used for children who are the subjects of juvenile petitions. The parent(s)/legal guardian(s) may retain rights to make decisions; their rights may be limited and/or another individual may be named together with the parent/legal guardian to make educational decisions. The schools and school districts should know that the ERH is entitled to all information re: the child's education and should be making decisions. The schools should know when the ERH makes decisions and when the caregiver does (this is complicated but important). Rule 5.649: This rule should require a JV-535 in all cases, even if the child's parent/legal guardian retains rights to make educational decisions. This will make clear to schools and school districts who has the right to make educational decisions for each child. Neither the current Rule nor the proposed Rule makes clear whether the JV-535 is required when parents retain their rights. Ideally, there would be an age for which an ERH is required (ie. children age 3 and older) while Developmental Rights Holders are needed beginning at birth.	the various parties and institutions involved in the case and the court's ongoing findings and orders regarding the case. Both forms are to be served together on the parties and institutions involved in the case, including the school district foster youth educational liaison. Because requiring that a JV-535 be used in every case, even if the educational rights holder is the parent, guardian, or Indian custodian, would impose important substantive changes to the proposal, the committee believes public comment should be sought before it could be considered for adoption. The committee will consider this suggestion during another rules cycle. 				consider this suggestion during another rules cycle.
			The proposal modifies the existing Rule's requirement that a JV-535 be prepared and filed at each hearing to require the form only when there is a change. The San Francisco Education Rights Working Group recommends that the current Rule be maintained. We acknowledge that preparing a form for each hearing is cumbersome however, it is in fact best practice. If the proposed Rule is put into effect, schools and Districts will not know whether a form is up to date or is stale. By requiring a JV-535 at each hearing, schools, districts and all involved will know that the JV-535 should be dated within the past 6-8 months.	The committee prefers, based on the number of supportive comments submitted, to limit the need for new JV-535 forms to be filed to hearings where there is a change in ERH or there is new contact or other information. At all other hearings the most current JV-535 and JV535(A) will be in effect.
			JV-535 Info §2: The second bullet point states that the Education Rights Holder may authorize the release of records to the child's attorney and/or CASA. However, these individuals have independent statutory rights and court authorization to receive these records. The Education Rights Holder should not have within his/her power the authority to grant or withhold the release of these records.	The committee does not recommend a change to this language, which does not address the rights of the child's attorney or CASA volunteer to access the records, but just addresses the ERH's authority to authorize the access in the same way that a parent could authorize access.

			ERH should consult with education and developmental providers, eg. educators and case managers and not exclusively with the liaison.
			§3: This section discusses the JV-535(A): As discussed within the JV-535 and 535(A) sections, only one comprehensive form should exist. Having both forms is confusing and duplicative if they are both used. The JV-535(A) includes essential information that will be missing if the JV-535(A) is not mandatory in a particular jurisdiction or is not used.	As noted above, the committee discussed the idea of combining forms JV-535 and JV-535(A) into one form and does not recommend that approach based on the fact that information in each of the different forms is for different purposes: the JV-535 is an Order Designating the Educational Rights Holder, while the JV-535(A) is for General Information about the various parties and institutions involved in the case and the court's ongoing findings and orders regarding the case. Both forms are to be served together on the parties and institutions involved in the case, including the school district foster youth educational liaison.
			JV-535 ¶¶1 and 2: This form would make more sense if paragraphs 1 and 2 were reversed so that the Educational Rights Holder were listed in ¶1. Re: ¶1 as presented: a and b:	The committee specifically chose this order of placement because of requests from judicial officers who wanted to know first at the hearing whether the child's parent, guardian, or Indian custodian was the educational rights holder or had been limited in any way.
			Why list parents #1 and #2? Who is the first vs. second parent of a child? Is there a way to have a third ERH?	The revised JV-535 form has check boxes to add an attachment with additional Educational Rights Holders.

	Commenter	Position	Comment	Committee Response
			¶3c. This would make more sense if it read, "A different educational rights holder from the one identified by the court in the most recently filed JV-535".	The committee prefers the wording in the proposal, and does not recommend this suggestion.
			¶8. The Education Rights Holder may authorize the release of records to the child's attorney and/or CASA. However, these individuals have independent statutory rights and court authorization to receive these records. The Education Rights Holder should not have within his/her power the authority to grant or withhold the release of these records.	As noted above, the committee does not recommend a change to this language, which does not address the rights of the child's attorney or CASA volunteer to access the records, but just addresses the ERH's authority to authorize the access in the same way that a parent could authorize access.
			¶10. The ERH should consult with education and developmental providers, eg. educators and case managers and not exclusively with the liaison.	As noted above, the committee expanded the language in the JV-535-INFO
			¶11. The child's school should be included in the list of entities to be served with the Order.	There is not a statutory requirement to serve the child's school and thus the committee declines to add this requirement.
			JV-535(A)
			This should not be an independent Optional form. See above. There should be one JV-535 form so that all of the needed information is provided and there is not duplicative information on the JV-535 and JV-535(A).	As noted above, the committee declines to make this a combined form, but is proposing to make JV-535(A) a mandatory form.

			Why include the child's Indian tribe on this portion of the form? Why is this relevant here? The Tribe should be included in the list of entities to be served. If this is to be included and both the JV-535(A) and the birthdate are kept then, the tribe should be listed separately from the child's birthdate.	The child's tribe is identifying information about the child and the committee is retaining it in this portion of the form on a separate line from the birthdate.
			¶¶2 and 3. It's very confusing to separate out the county office of education from the school district and liaisons vs. FYS coordinators. The school districts for both the residence (county from which the child is a dependent) and the school district where the child attends should both be included.	The committee has determined that all of the information on the proposed form is useful, but that adding a school district that is not serving the child currently might be confusing, thus the committee does not recommend this suggestion.
			¶8. This does not appear to be an appropriate order. This is not the standard for limiting a parent or guardian's rights to make educational decisions. The recipient of the JV-535 is not entitled to know why the court has named the ERH that it has. The purpose of this form should be to inform the school, district, etc. of who makes decisions.	The committee has determined that these findings are legally accurate and appropriate to support the appointment of the ERH. .
			¶¶10-11. If an 18 year old is not conserved, what is the authority for limiting that young adult's rights to make decisions regarding his or her own education? I don't think that there is and therefore, this section should be that the young adult and/or court has authorized	The committee has determined that a nonminor who has not been conserved may consent to the continuing assistance of an ERH when the court finds it is in the nonminor's best interest. 			_____ to make decisions in place of or together with the young adult. ¶¶14-15. These should be combined. If the answer to 14 is yes then, check the appropriate boxes listed in 15. ¶¶19 and 21. It would make more sense for these two paragraphs to be reversed. ¶22. If the rule is changed so that a new JV-535 is not required at each hearing, this paragraph does not seem appropriate. This question should be answered at each hearing and not only once to sit on a form that is not modified. Again, the Working Group recommends that a comprehensive JV-535 be prepared for each hearing.	The committee does not recommend this suggestion. The committee does not recommend this suggestion. As explained above, the committee does not recommend this change in procedure.
9.	San Francisco Unified School District Foster Youth Services, by Shira Andron, Foster Youth Services Coordinating Program Coordinator	AM	As a Local Education Agency and County Office of Education, I would recommend making the JV 535A mandatory or at least includes Section 1-7 in the JV 535. Schools and districts will not receive the order from the court clerk if not listed there, so it is important there be a way that the clerk know who to serve the order to.	The committee's proposed form JV 535-INFO already clarifies in §4 that the most current forms JV 535 and JV 535(A) must always be filed and served together. In addition, the revised Rule 5.649 also requires that they be filed together. The committee agrees that the form JV-535(A) should be mandatory.
10.	Superior Court of California, County of Los Angeles by Bryan Borys, Senior Advisor	AM	Updates on forms are necessary. Having the Proof of Service or Certificate of Mailing as part of the form would be helpful for the judicial assistant to fill out and send notice.	The committee agrees with this suggestion for edits to the JV-535(A) form and is recommending JV-535(A), as altered in part by this comment and others, for adoption.

			If notice to parents or guardians is not a MUST how can you hold them to the 60 day appeal deadline from the time the orders were made? If the parental rights are terminated then not an issue. But if there is not TPR then parents and legal guardians should be noticed. Appeal rights should be included. JV 535 has a notice option that says due to confidentiality of the placement of the child, the information should not be sent to parents or guardians. How does this adequately allow parents or guardians the right to file an appeal? Notice requirements should be clarified as it affects the parent/guardians and youth 18 years old rights to file an appeal.	The committee notes that whenever a court limits or modifies a parent's educational rights, the parent will receive a copy of the order and will have an opportunity to appeal. The Notice box in JV-535 is for use when disclosure of information in the form would create a safety risk. See response to comment directly above.
11.	Superior Court of California, County of Orange Juvenile Court and Family Law Division by Fen-Ru Chen		Rules 5.649 It is recommended to amended sentence to read, "At the first hearing, and any subsequent hearing where the court limits, restores, or modifies educational rights; or where there are updates to any contact or other information for an educational rights holder in a juvenile proceeding, the findings and orders must be documented on form JV-535. Revision will clarify when a JV-535 must be filed.	The committee does not recommend this proposed change because limiting it to information about the educational rights holder would not be as inclusive of all the updates to any contacts or other information that is intended to trigger the use of a new form JV-535.

Executive Summary and Origin

The Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee recommends amending three California Rules of Court, adopting three forms, and revising one form to conform to Assembly Bill 718's statutory mandate that child welfare agencies begin the process of providing key information, documents, and services to youth in foster care beginning at age 16, rather than at the end of juvenile court jurisdiction. (Eggman; Stats. 2019, ch. 438).

Background

Before the passage of Assembly Bill 718, the law only required the provision of certain information, documents, and services to a youth in foster care 18 years of age or older prior to termination of juvenile court jurisdiction over that youth.[1] A county welfare department is also required, at the hearing before a dependent turns 18 years old, and at every review hearing thereafter until the court terminates jurisdiction, to submit a report describing efforts toward providing certain documents and information to the youth.[2] Assembly Bill 718 seeks to increase the access that youth in foster care have to various information, documents, and services—and to broaden those items to include financial literacy resources—as they transition to adulthood and greater levels of independence, acknowledging the need that some youth may have for such materials and supports before they turn 18 years old, and between turning 18 and exiting foster care.

According to the bill's author, "While many positives have come from the extension of benefits for youth involved in the foster care system, one result of the implementation of AB 12 (2010) has been that many youth do not receive important documents, such as their social security card, driver's license, and birth certificate, until well past the period when they need these documents to navigate employment, housing, higher education or financial aid applications. [This bill] would provide youth with important documentation and support when it is needed, which will give them a better opportunity to achieve their goals and be independent."[3]

Rule 5.502 would be amended to define the term "youth" as a person who is at least 14 years of age and not yet 21 years of age.

Rules 5.740 and 5.810

Rules 5.740 and 5.810 would be amended to add a requirement that the social worker or probation officer provide the youth with the documents required by section 391 and would indicate which form (discussed below) must be used to record the information, documents, and services that were provided to the youth.

Forms

The three new forms discussed below would all have the same instructions on the form directing the youth to review the boxes checked by the social worker or probation officer and sign their initials on the lines after the item if they have indeed received the information, document, or service described in that item. This mirrors the current JV-365 form and process for provision of information, documents, and services when the court is terminating jurisdiction over a nonminor.[4]

First Review Hearing After Youth Turns 16 Years of Age—Information, Documents, and Services (form JV-361)

This would be a new mandatory form for the social worker or probation officer to complete to specify which information, documents, and services have been provided to the youth at the first review hearing after the youth turns 16 years old.

Review Hearing for Youth Approaching 18 Years of Age—Information, Documents, and Services (form JV-362)
This would be a new mandatory form for the social worker or probation officer to complete to indicate which information, documents, and services have been provided to the youth at the last review hearing before the youth turns 18 years old.

Review Hearing for Youth 18 Years of Age or Older—Information, Documents, and Services (form JV-363)
This would be a new mandatory form for the social worker or probation officer to complete to indicate which information, documents, and services have been provided to the youth at each review hearing after the youth turns 18 years old.

Termination of Juvenile Court Jurisdiction—Nonminor (form JV-365)
This is an existing mandatory form for the social worker or probation officer to complete to indicate which information, documents, and services have been provided to the youth as the juvenile court terminates its jurisdiction. As indicated above, the instructions on the form direct the youth to review the boxes checked by the social worker or probation officer and sign their initials on the lines after the item if they have indeed received the information, document, or service described in that item.

This form would be revised to add the new requirement in AB 718 that the youth be provided with written information notifying the youth of any financial literacy programs or other available resources to help the youth obtain financial literacy skills.[5] It would also be revised to clarify the new requirement that information be in writing notifying a youth who was formerly in foster care and is granted a preference for student assistant or internship programs with state agencies. Further, several revisions would be made to the form removing the phrase "his or her" so that the form is gender neutral.

Alternatives Considered

The committee considered not defining "youth" in rule 5.502. However, the committee has had repeated and lengthy discussions over whether to use the term "child" or "minor." The current rules all use "child," but the statutes use "minor." The committees note that throughout the juvenile court rules and forms there is a consistent practice of using "child," and this term is clearly defined in rule 5.502.[6] Use of the term "child" is a reminder to all in the system that juvenile offenders are developmentally distinct from adults; "minor" is not defined in rule 5.502. In a proposal circulated for public comment in spring 2019 that addressed the needs of older children as this proposal does, the committee sought specific comment on whether the rules should use the term "child" or "minor." While many commentators suggested that the term "youth" is preferred by older children who do not like to be referred to as a child, the committee concluded that since "youth" is not defined in the rules of court and any definition of the term

[5] As indicated in AB 718, financial literacy programs include, but is not limited to, banking, credit card debt, student loan debt, credit scores, credit history, and personal savings. § 391(a)(1)(G) & (c)(5) would be an important substantive change to the proposal, public comment should be sought before the council defines the term. The committee is now circulating a definition of "youth" for public comment. In addition to creating a respectful term for older children, this term is important in juvenile justice court since many 18–21-year olds are before that court and do not meet the definition of child.

The committee considered using 15 as the beginning age of the definition of youth, since that is the age the United Nations, for statistical purposes, uses as the beginning age of its definition.[7] However, under the California statutory scheme, the case plan must include a written description of the programs and services that will help the child to prepare for the transition from care to successful adulthood beginning at age 14.[8] For that reason, and because the dependency court needs to make a finding regarding the services needed to assist the child or nonminor dependent to make the transition from foster care to successful adulthood beginning at age 14,[9] the committee concluded that the term should be defined as " a person who is at least 14 years of age and not yet 21 years of age." Fourteen is also the minimum age when a minor can obtain a permit to work.[10] If a definition of youth is ultimately adopted by the Judicial Council, rules and forms can be updated in future proposals, as appropriate, when those rules and forms need to be updated due to new statutory mandates.

Assembly Bill 718 governs review hearings in the dependency court, but not in the delinquency court. The committee considered limiting this proposal to youth in foster care under the dependency jurisdiction of the court, and not including those youth who are in foster care under the delinquency jurisdiction of the court. This, however, would result in youth in foster care in the delinquency system receiving different treatment than youth in foster care in the dependency system. Rule 5.555(c)(1)(J) requires that the probation officer's report for a hearing where the court is considering terminating jurisdiction include verification that the nonminor was provided with the information, documents, and services as required under section 391(e). Probation officers throughout the state are providing the required information, documents, and services to nonminors when the court terminates jurisdiction, and are using and filing Termination of Juvenile Court Jurisdiction—Nonminor (form JV-365). While AB 718 governs review hearings in the dependency court and not in the delinquency court, the legislative history is very clear that the bill is intended to help youth who exit foster care successfully prepare for their transition to independence.[11] It is both fair and logical that this proposal help all youth in foster care successfully prepare for their transition to independence.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

The proposal includes an added requirement that social workers and probation officers provide certain information, documents, and services to youth in foster care earlier in the case than is the current practice. This will increase workload but is required for social workers by recent statutory amendments. As discussed above, the committee concluded that this benefit should also be provided to youth in foster care under the delinquency jurisdiction of the court and thus the proposal includes a slight increase in workload for probation officers. In implementing the new and revised forms, courts will incur standard reproduction costs.

Request for Specific Comments

In addition to comments on the proposal as a whole, the advisory committee is interested in comments on the following:

- Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose?
- Should the rules of court define "youth" and, if so, is the proposed definition of "a person who is at least 14 years of age and not yet 21 years of age" an appropriate definition?

The advisory committee also seeks comments from courts on the following cost and implementation matters:

- Would the proposal provide cost savings? If so, please quantify.
- What would the implementation requirements be for courts? For example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), changing docket codes in case management systems, or modifying case management systems.
- Would 3 months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation?
- How well would this proposal work in courts of different sizes?

Executive Summary and Origin

To implement recent legislation creating a new disposition hearing for nonminors, the Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee proposes the Judicial Council adopt a new rule to the California Rules of Court, amend two rules, and adopt three new Judicial Council forms. The statutory amendments created a process to address a class of youth who were found to be within the jurisdiction of the juvenile court due to abuse or neglect as a child but reached the age of majority before a disposition hearing could be held, and thus ensure their eligibility for extended foster care. This proposal would create a uniform procedure for these nonminor disposition hearings through a new rule of court, two forms for the court's findings and orders, and a form for the youth to provide the required informed consent to proceed with the nonminor disposition hearing.

Background

Assembly Bill 748 (Gibson; Stats. 2019, ch. 682)[1] addresses those situations in which a juvenile court takes jurisdiction of a child who is fast approaching the age of majority. It ensures that these youth will not be excluded from extended foster care because a disposition hearing could not be held prior to their 18th birthday. The legislation seeks to eliminate administrative barriers to ensure that a limited number of youth in certain narrow situations are able to enter or reenter extended foster care.[2] The legislation was partially in response to In re David B. (2017) 12 Cal.App.5th 633, in which an appellate court "reluctantly" agreed that the trial court's denial of dependency jurisdiction for a wheelchair-bound diabetic youth just before he turned 18 prevented the appellate court from reversing the decision.[3]

[1] The full text of this statute is available at https://leginfo.legislature.ca.gov/faces/billTextClient.xhtml?bill_id=201920200AB748.

The legislation creates a procedure for a new version of a disposition proceeding, specifically tailored for young adults. Under section 358(d), to hold a disposition hearing for a nonminor, the nonminor must have been found to be a minor described by section 300 at a hearing pursuant to section 355 prior to turning 18 and must have remained continuously detained pursuant to section 319(c).[4] In addition, the nonminor must provide "informed consent" for the disposition proceeding. If these conditions are met, the court is required to hold a disposition hearing and determine by clear and convincing evidence if one of the conditions of section 361(c) existed immediately prior to the youth turning 18. If the court makes this finding, the youth meets the legal definition of a nonminor dependent (NMD) under section 11400(v) and is eligible for extended foster care. If the court does not make this finding, or the youth does not give informed consent, section 358(d)(5)(A) requires that dependency or general jurisdiction not be retained.

The Proposal

The legislation requires the Judicial Council to adopt implementing rules and forms as necessary on or before July 1, 2020.[5] This proposal will seek to provide a unified approach to these nonminor disposition hearings. It blends together many important concepts related to extended foster care and calls for a hybrid type of hearing, one which must respect the nonminor's status as an adult and their legal decision-making authority while also fulfilling the functions of a dependency disposition hearing which typically involve a child.

The committee proposes adoption of a new rule of court to implement the requirements of section 358(d), and minor amendments to two rules related to jurisdictional hearings and the setting of the disposition hearing. The committee also proposes adoption of three mandatory forms.

The following actions are proposed:

- Adopt rule 5.697, entitled "Disposition Hearing for a Nonminor";
- Amend rules 5.682 and 5.684 on uncontested and contested jurisdiction hearings to clarify that the setting of a nonminor disposition hearing is required when the child will turn 18 prior to the holding of the disposition hearing; and
- Adopt three Judicial Council forms, Findings and Orders after Nonminor Disposition Hearing (form JV-461), Dispositional Attachment: Nonminor Dependent (JV-461(A)) and Nonminor's Informed Consent to Hold Disposition Hearing (form JV-463);

New rule and rule amendments

Rule 5.697. Disposition Hearing for a Nonminor

The rule addresses several issues that the court would address at a disposition hearing for a child and combines these with the required reporting and findings and orders for a nonminor dependent status review hearing. It creates a procedure for providing informed consent to the nonminor disposition hearing, by requiring the completion and filing of the proposed mandatory form JV-463 10 days prior to the scheduled hearing, which sets out the information that nonminor must be aware of before giving consent. It also states the findings a court is required to make if a nonminor does not consent, before dismissing jurisdiction. In addition, the rule lists required contents for a social worker report or social study to be considered if the disposition hearing is held.

There were three prominent issues that the committee considered in drafting the rule:

Title IV-E Case Review

Disposition hearings in California are treated as case reviews for title IV-E[6] purposes to ensure that California law meets the title IV-E timeline requirements that a review hearing be held within six months of the date of entry into foster care. A similar approach may be needed for the nonminor disposition hearing. If the nonminor disposition hearing did not address the title IV-E case review requirements, a case review six months after the date of the nonminor disposition hearing would not be timely for title IV-E because it would not be held six months from the date of entry into foster.[7]

To ensure that title IV-E timelines are maintained, the committee has elected to develop rules that treat the nonminor disposition hearing as a title IV-E case review as well. The committee is mindful, however, of the fact that more time may be needed to meet the requirements of section 358(d) and the requirements of section 366.31, which include the findings required by title IV-E. The committee therefore elected to give the court the option to make the findings and orders required for an NMD status review as part of the disposition order or hold a separate NMD status review within 60 days of the disposition hearing. The committee is seeking specific comment on this issue from commenters.

[6] See 42 U.S.C. § 675.

[7] 42 U.S.C. § 675(5)(B).

Parent Participation

The committee also considered whether the nonminor's parent or guardian should be allowed to participate in the hearing. Section 358(d) is silent as to what right a parent or guardian has to participate in the nonminor disposition hearing. For NMD status review hearings, section 295(b) and rule 5.903 require notice to parents only if the parent is receiving family reunification services pursuant to section 361.6, otherwise, they may only participate in the hearing if they are invited by the NMD.[8]

When their child becomes an adult, parents no longer have a liberty interest in the custody of their adult offspring, as no one has legal custody of an adult. Parents therefore do not have the same liberty interest at stake in a nonminor disposition hearing as in a disposition hearing for a child, where the court can consider removing a child from parental custody. However, the finding under section 361(c) at a nonminor disposition hearing may have implications for parents in collateral proceedings by, for example, being disclosed by a social worker in a future petition or disclosed in a future application for a foster license. There is then some deprivation for the parent, triggering a possible due process right.

The committee proposes that the rule clarify that a parent or guardian may participate in the hearing for the limited purpose of the court's consideration of a finding of detriment under section 361(c). The committee is seeking specific comment on this issue from commenters.

Informed Consent

The committee also addressed how "informed consent" from the nonminor must be provided. The rule requires that informed consent be provided at least 10 days before the hearing date. To ensure that the nonminor is "informed," the proposed rule requires that the youth be informed by their social worker about extended foster care in the same way that a minor approaching the age of majority is informed about extended foster care under section 366.31(a).[9] In addition, the rule proposes that the court ensure the nonminor has had an opportunity to confer with his or her attorney on providing consent for the disposition hearing. The proposed form JV-463 has the nonminor sign confirming that they have been informed of each of these points and provides additional information on the second page about the nonminor disposition hearing and extended foster care.

[8] Section 317(d) also specifies that "in the case of a nonminor dependent, as described in subdivision (v) of Section 11400, no representation by counsel shall by provided for a parent, unless the parent is receiving court-ordered family reunification services."

[9] That is, that the nonminor understands the potential benefits of continued dependency, has been informed of his or her right to seek termination of dependency jurisdiction pursuant to section 391 if the court establishes dependency, and has been informed of his or her right to have dependency reinstated pursuant to subdivision (e) of section 388 if the court establishes dependency.

If the court finds that the nonminor is not competent to give informed consent, the rule requires that the court appoint a guardian ad litem to decide whether to consent on behalf of the nonminor. Under section 317(e), a guardian ad litem is required to be appointed for a nonminor dependent when the nonminor dependent is not competent to direct counsel. The committee believes a similar approach is needed for a determination on informed consent for a youth approaching a nonminor disposition hearing who does not have the capacity to give informed consent. The committee is seeking specific comment from commenters on how to approach these situations.

Rules 5.682 and 5.684, jurisdiction

Rules 5.682 and 5.684, related to uncontested and contested jurisdiction hearings respectively, are updated to address the setting of the nonminor disposition hearing by adding the following language: "the court must proceed to a disposition hearing under rule 5.690, or rule 5.697 if the child will turn 18 years old prior to the holding of the disposition hearing."

New and revised forms

The committee proposes that three new Judicial Council forms be adopted to (1) provide for the court's findings and orders after the nonminor disposition hearing, and (2) provide a form for the youth to provide his or her informed consent.

Findings and Orders After Nonminor Disposition Hearing (form JV-461)

A new mandatory form is proposed to provide for the court's findings and orders after a nonminor disposition hearing. The form includes the findings and orders discussed above. It also can be used by the court to dismiss jurisdiction if either the nonminor does not provide informed consent or if the court does not find one of the conditions of section 361(c) existed immediately prior to the nonminor turning 18.

Dispositional Attachment: Nonminor Dependent (form JV-461(A))

This form will be used to complete the findings and orders if the court does declare dependency. It includes the findings and orders required at nonminor dependent status review hearing and required title IV-E findings and orders. This form would only be used if the nonminor provides informed consent and the court found one of the conditions of section 361(c) existed immediately prior to the nonminor turning 18.

Nonminor's Informed Consent to Hold Disposition Hearing (form JV-463)

This mandatory form would be used to verify the youth's informed consent or lack thereof. The form requires the youth verify that the requirements mentioned above to be informed about extended foster care have been met and gives the youth (or guardian ad litem) the option to consent to the hearing or not. The youth's attorney is also required to sign the form, declaring they have discussed the implications of setting a nonminor disposition hearing with their client. The form also provides information intended for the youth explaining the nonminor dependent hearing and extended foster care on the second page.

Alternatives Considered

The committee never considered not proposing rules and forms changes because the legislation requires the Judicial Council to adopt implementing rules and forms.

The committee did consider various options in the construction of rule 5.697 as described above. The committee considered whether a parent or guardian had a due process right to participate in the nonminor disposition hearing when they no longer have a liberty interest in the right to custody of the child. Some committee members believed there was no due process right, but the committee as a whole elected to proceed with a rule that gives a parent the right to participate in the hearing on the issue of whether a condition in section 361(c) existed immediately before the nonminor turned 18. The committee also considered whether the nonminor disposition hearing should include a title IV-E case review, or whether more time should be given to complete the requirements of the case review and require the setting of a case review hearing under section 366.31 within sixty days of the hearing. The committee elected to give the court the option to proceed with the case review at the nonminor disposition hearing or hold a case review within 60 days.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

The committee anticipates that there will be additional costs to courts when a hearing under the rule is held, but this is the result of the implementation of Assembly Bill 748 rather than the proposal. A uniform procedure for these hearings as proposed can benefit judicial economy and provide cost saving for courts and litigants. Courts will be able to save time using the procedure created in this proposal as opposed to having to create their own procedures for these hearings.

Request for Specific Comments

In addition to comments on the proposal as a whole, the advisory committee is interested in comments on the following:

- Does the proposal adequately address the stated purpose?
- Should rule 5.697 permit a parent or guardian to participate in the nonminor disposition hearing as a party with standing limited to the court's determination of whether clear and convincing evidence of the conditions described in section 361(c) existed immediately prior to the nonminor turning 18 years of age?
- Does the rule appropriately address nonminors who do not have capacity to give informed consent by requiring that the court appoint a guardian ad litem to make a decision on behalf of the nonminor whether or not to give informed consent?
- Should the rule provide that the nonminor disposition hearing must meet the requirements for a title IV-E case review, or should the rule instead require that a nonminor dependent status review hearing be held within 60 days? Or should courts be giving the option to choose between conducting the title IV-E case review at the nonminor disposition hearing or holding a nonminor dependent status review hearing within 60 days, as set out in the proposed rule?

The advisory committees also seek comments from courts on the following cost and implementation matters:

- Would the proposal provide cost savings? If so, please quantify.
- What would the implementation requirements be for courts—for example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), changing docket codes in case management systems, or modifying case management systems?
- Would three months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation?

Rule 5.697 of the California Rules of Court would be adopted, and rules 5.682 and 5.684 would be amended, effective January 1, 2021, to read:

Rule 5.682. Commencement of jurisdiction hearing–advisement of trial rights; admission, no contest, submission

(a)–(e) * * *

(f) Disposition

After accepting an admission, plea of no contest, or submission, the court must proceed to a disposition hearing under rule 5.690 or rule 5.697 if the child will turn 18 years old prior to the holding of the disposition hearing.

Rule 5.684. Contested hearing on petition

(a)–(e) * * *

(f) Disposition and continuance pending disposition hearing (§§ 356, 358)

After making the findings in (e), the court must proceed to a disposition hearing under rule 5.690 or rule 5.697 if the child will turn 18 years old prior to the holding of the disposition hearing. The court may continue the disposition hearing as provided in section 358.

(g) * * *

Rule 5.697. Disposition Hearing for a Nonminor (Welf. & Inst. Code, §§ 224.1, 295, 303, 358, 358.1, 361, 366.31, 390, 391)

(a) Purpose

This rule provides the procedures that must be followed when a disposition hearing for a nonminor is set under Welfare and Institution Code section 358, subdivision (d).

(b) Notice of hearing (§ 295)

(1) The social worker must serve written notice of the hearing in the manner provided in section 295 to all persons required to receive notice under section 295, including the nonminor's parent or guardian.

(2) The social worker must serve a copy of the Nonminor's Informed Consent to Hold Disposition Hearing (form JV-463) with the notice to the child or nonminor.

(c) Informed Consent (§§ 317, 358)

(1) The court must ensure that the nonminor understands the potential benefits of continued dependency, has been informed of his or her right to seek termination of dependency jurisdiction pursuant to section 391 if the court establishes dependency, and that the nonminor has been informed of his or her right to have dependency reinstated pursuant to subdivision (e) of section 388 if the court establishes dependency.

(2) The nonminor must give informed consent to the disposition hearing by completing and signing Nonminor's Informed Consent to Hold Disposition Hearing (form JV-463) and filing it with the court at least 10 days before the scheduled disposition hearing.

(3) If the nonminor is not competent to direct counsel and give informed consent, the court must appoint a guardian ad litem to make a determination on informed consent on the nonminor's behalf.

(d) Conduct of the hearing (§§ 295, 303, 358, 361)

(1) The hearing may be attended, as appropriate, by participants invited by the nonminor in addition to those entitled to notice under (b).

(2) The nonminor may appear by telephone as provided in rule 5.900.

(3) If the nonminor or the nonminor's guardian ad litem does not provide informed consent, the court must vacate the temporary orders made under section 319 and dependency or general jurisdiction must not be retained. Before dismissing jurisdiction, the court must make the following findings:

A. That notice was given as required by law;

B. That, unless a guardian ad litem has been appointed for the nonminor, the nonminor has had an opportunity to confer with his or her attorney on providing consent for a disposition hearing;

C. That, unless a guardian ad litem has been appointed for the nonminor, the nonminor has been informed of the potential benefits of continued dependency, has been informed of his or her right to seek termination of dependency jurisdiction pursuant to section 391 if the court establishes dependency, and that the nonminor has been informed of his or her right to have dependency reinstated pursuant to subdivision (e) of section 388 if the court establishes dependency; and

D. That, if the reason for the nonminor not giving informed consent is because the social worker cannot locate the nonminor, the court must find that after reasonable and documented efforts the nonminor cannot be located.

(4) If the nonminor or the nonminor's guardian ad litem does provide informed consent, the court must proceed to a disposition hearing consistent with this rule and section 358(d). The parent or guardian of the nonminor may participate as a party in the disposition hearing, receive the social study and other evidence submitted for the hearing, and present evidence. The parent's participation is limited to addressing the court's consideration of whether one of the conditions of section 361(c) existed immediately prior to the nonminor attaining 18 years of age.

(e) Social Study (§§ 358, 358.1)

The petitioner must prepare a social study of the nonminor if the court proceeds to a disposition hearing. The social study must include a discussion of all matters relevant to disposition and a recommendation for disposition.

(1) The petitioner's social study must include information regarding:

(A) Whether one of the conditions of section 361(c) existed immediately prior to the youth attaining 18 years of age.

(B) Reasonable efforts made to prevent or eliminate the need for removal.

(C) A plan for achieving legal permanence or successful adulthood if reunification is not being considered.

(D) If reunification services are being considered:

(i) A plan for reuniting the nonminor with the family, including a plan of visitation. The plan should be developed in collaboration with the nonminor, the parents or legal guardian, and the child and family team;

(ii) Whether the nonminor and parent or guardian were actively involved in the development of the case plan;

(iii) The extent of progress the parent or guardian have made toward alleviating or mitigating the cause necessitating placement in foster care;

(iv) Whether the nonminor dependent and parent, parents, or guardian are in agreement with the continuation of reunification services;

(v) Whether continued reunification services are in the best interest of the nonminor dependent; and

(vi) Whether there is a substantial probability that the nonminor dependent will be able to safely reside in the home of the parent or guardian by the next review hearing date.

(E) The social worker's efforts to comply with rule 5.637, including but not limited to:

(i) The number of relatives identified and the relationship of each to the nonminor;

(ii) The number and relationship of those relatives described by item (i) who were located and notified;

(iii) The number and relationship of those relatives described by item (ii) who are interested in ongoing contact with the nonminor;

(iv) The number and relationship of those relatives described by item (ii) who are interested in providing placement for the nonminor; and

(v) If it is known or there is reason to know the nonminor is an Indian child, efforts to locate extended family members as defined in section 224.1, and evidence that all individuals contacted have been provided with information about the option of obtaining approval for placement through the tribe's license or approval procedure.

(F) If siblings are not placed together, an explanation of why they have not been placed together in the same home, what efforts are being made to place the siblings together, or why making those efforts would be contrary to the safety and well-being of any of the siblings.

(G) How and when the Transitional Independent Living Case Plan was developed, including the nature and the extent of the nonminor's participation in its development, and, for the nonminor who has elected to have the Indian Child Welfare Act continue to apply, the extent of consultation with the tribal representative.

(H) The nonminor's plans to remain under juvenile court jurisdiction including the criteria in section 11403(b) that he or she meets.

(I) The efforts made by the social worker or probation officer to help the nonminor meet the criteria in section 11403(b).

(J) The efforts made by the social worker to comply with the nonminor's Transitional Independent Living Case Plan, including efforts to finalize the permanent plan and prepare him or her for successful adulthood.

(K) The continuing necessity for the nonminor's placement and the facts supporting the conclusion reached.

(L) The appropriateness of the nonminor's current foster care placement.

(M) Progress made by the nonminor toward meeting the Transitional Independent Living Case Plan goals and the need for any modifications to assist the nonminor in attaining the goals.

(N) Verification that the nonminor was provided with the information, documents, and services as required under section 391(e).

(2) The petitioner must submit the social study and copies of it to the court clerk at least 48 hours before the disposition hearing is set to begin, and the clerk must make the copies available to the parties and attorneys. A continuance within statutory time limits must be granted on the request of a party who has not been furnished a copy of the social study in accordance with this rule.

(f) Case Plan and Transitional Independent Living Case Plan (§§ 11401, 16501.1)

(1) Whenever child welfare services are provided, the social worker must prepare a case plan consistent with section 16501.1 and the requirements of rule 5.690(c).

(2) The nonminor's Transitional Independent Living Case Plan must be submitted with the social worker's report prepared for the hearing at least 48 hours before the hearing, and must include:

(A) The individualized plan for the nonminor to satisfy one or more of the criteria in section 11403(b) and the nonminor's anticipated placement as specified in section 11402; and

(B) The nonminor's alternate plan for his or her transition to independence, including housing, education, employment, and a support system in the event the nonminor does not remain under juvenile court jurisdiction.

(g) Evidence considered (§§ 358, 360)

At a hearing held under this rule, the court must receive in evidence and consider the following:

(1) The social study described in subdivision (d), the report of any CASA volunteer, and any relevant evidence offered by the petitioner, the nonminor, or the parent or guardian. The court may require production of other relevant evidence on its own motion. In the order of disposition, the court must state that the social study and the study or evaluation by the CASA volunteer, if any, have been read and considered by the court.

(2) The case plan if applicable, and the Transitional Independent Living Case plan.

(h) Findings and orders (§§ 358, 358.1, 361, 390)

After the nonminor provides informed consent, the court must consider the safety of the nonminor, determine if notice was given as required by law and, determine if by clear and convincing evidence one of the conditions of section 361(c) existed immediately prior to the youth attaining 18 years of age.

(1) If the court does not find by clear and convincing evidence that one of the conditions of section 361(c) existed immediately prior to the youth attaining 18 years of age, the court must vacate the temporary orders made under section 319 and dismiss dependency jurisdiction.

(2) If the court does find by clear and convincing evidence that one of the conditions of section 361(c) existed immediately prior to the youth attaining 18 years of age, it must declare dependency, and:

(A) Order the continuation of juvenile court jurisdiction, and set a nonminor dependent review hearing under rule 5.903 within 60 days or six months, or

(B) Set a hearing to consider termination of juvenile court jurisdiction over the nonminor dependent under rule 5.555 within 30 days if the nonminor dependent chooses not to remain in foster care.

(3) If the court makes the finding in (2), the court must consider the safety of the nonminor dependent, and the following findings and orders must be made and included in the written court documentation of the hearing, with the exception of those findings and orders stated in (C) that may be made instead at a nonminor dependent status review hearing pursuant to section 366.31 and rule 5.903 to be held within 60 days:

(A) Findings

(i) Whether reasonable efforts to prevent or eliminate the need for removal have been made;

(ii) Whether the social worker has exercised due diligence in conducting the required investigation to identify, locate, and notify the nonminor dependent's relatives consistent with section 309(e); and

(iii) Whether a nonminor who is an Indian child chooses to have the Indian Child Welfare Act apply to him or her as a nonminor dependent.

(B) Orders

(i) That placement and care is vested with the placing agency.

(ii) That the county agency comply with rule 5.481 if there was no inquiry or determination of whether the nonminor dependent was an Indian child prior to the nonminor dependent's 18th birthday, and the nonminor dependent requests an Indian Child Welfare Act determination.

(iii) The court may order family reunification services pursuant section 361.6 for the nonminor and the parent or legal guardian. The continuation of the court-ordered reunification services must not exceed the timeframes as set forth in section 361.5.

(C) The following findings and orders must be considered either at the nonminor disposition hearing held pursuant to this rule and section 358(d), or at a nonminor dependent status review hearing pursuant to rule 5.903 and section 366.31 held within 60 days of the nonminor disposition hearing:

(i) The findings contained in rule 5.903(e)(1)(A)–(P);

(ii) The orders contained in rule 5.903(e)(2)(A)(i) and (ii);

(iii) For a nonminor dependent whose case plan is court-ordered family reunification services, a determination of the following:

a. The extent of the agency's compliance with the case plan in making reasonable efforts or, in the case of an Indian child, active efforts, as described in section 361.7, to create a safe home of the parent or guardian for the nonminor dependent to reside in or to complete whatever steps are necessary to finalize the permanent placement of the nonminor dependent; and

b. The extent of progress the parents or legal guardians have made toward alleviating or mitigating the causes necessitating placement in foster care.

What is a Nonminor Disposition Hearing?

To the youth: This page provides information on your right to agree or not to agree to holding a disposition hearing after you turn 18 years old. When you turn 18, you are legally an adult and you have the decision making authority of an adult. This form will explain what a disposition hearing is, your rights as an adult, and extended foster care or "AB 12."

1 What is a nonminor disposition hearing?

A nonminor disposition hearing is a special hearing for a youth who became involved in the dependency court right around the time they turn 18 years old. It happens when the court take jurisdiction of someone as a child, but doesn't have the disposition hearing until after that child turns 18 years old. The disposition hearing therefore takes place when the youth is an adult.

2 What is a disposition hearing?

The disposition hearing occurs after the court takes jurisdiction of a child. The jurisdiction hearing determines whether the court should be involved in the child's life, and the disposition hearing determines what should happen to the child after the court has become involved. The court decides things such as: whether it is safe to live in the parent's or guardian's home; who the youth should live with; and what the plan will be to make the parent's or guardian's home safe.

3 What rights do I have as an adult?

When you turn 18 years old, you have all the legal decision making rights of an adult. This means that you decide things like where you live, whether you consent to medical care, where you go to school, and if your dependency case will remain open. A parent or social worker no longer make these decisions for you.

4 How is a nonminor disposition hearing different from a regular disposition hearing?

First, before the nonminor disposition hearing can be held, you have to agree to have the hearing. Also, unlike a disposition hearing for a child, the court does not decide if the youth should live with their parent or guardian. The court cannot tell an adult where to live or not live. However, while you can decide where you live, if you intend to participate in AB 12, you need to work with your social worker on where you will live and you must be in an approved placement.

5 How do I agree to the nonminor disposition hearing?

You will need to provide "informed consent." To do this, work with your attorney and submit this form JV-463, the Nonminor's Informed Consent to Hold Disposition Hearing. This form must be filed with the court 10 days before the disposition hearing.

6 What happens if I agree to the nonminor disposition hearing?

If you are 18 years old, and you agree to proceed with the nonminor disposition hearing, the court will hold the hearing to determine if you were in danger in the home of your parent or guardian immediately before you turned 18 years old. This finding must be made for you to be eligible for AB 12. If the court does not make this finding, the case will be dismissed. The court will consider evidence including the social worker's report and may hear testimony to make this decision.

7 What happens if I don't agree to the disposition hearing?

When you are an adult, the law gives you the right to decide if you want to have a nonminor disposition hearing. If you do not agree, the court will dismiss your case. Your social worker, your attorney, and the court will no longer be formally involved in your life. You will not eligible for AB 12.

It is important to remember that the decision to proceed with your case after you turn 18 years old belongs to you. A major factor in your decision may be whether you want to participate in AB 12. You should discuss this decision with your attorney and your social worker.

Executive Summary and Origin

The Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee proposes adopting one new rule of court, revising two existing forms, and approving three new optional forms to assist courts with the implementation of recently enacted statutory provisions concerning the sealing of juvenile records and access to those records by prosecuting attorneys. The proposal would ensure that all forms accurately reflect the current state of the law on fees for sealing petitions, and would create procedures and forms for courts to consider requests for access to sealed records under recently enacted laws concerning prosecutorial duties to disclose favorable information to defendants.

Background

In 2014, the Legislature enacted Welfare and Institutions Code section 786[1] to require the sealing and dismissal of specified juvenile petitions when a child has satisfactorily completed probation. In that legislation and several subsequent bills, the Legislature has sought to provide access to those records for a variety of purposes. In 2018, Assembly Bill 2952 (Stone; Stats. 2018, ch. 1002) enacted an additional provision allowing access to the record by a prosecuting attorney when the attorney has reason to believe that the record may contain favorable or exculpatory information that must be disclosed to a defendant in a criminal case. These changes require that the court notify the person whose records have been sealed that the prosecutor's request is being considered so that the person may have an opportunity to respond to the request. It further requires the court to review the records and make a specific order with regard to access that protects the confidentiality of the person whose records are being accessed. In 2019 the Judicial Council updated its information forms to reflect this change, and a question on the invitation to comment regarding the need for rules and forms to implement this requirement. The majority of commenters suggested that rules and forms would be of value to the courts in carrying out this duty.

In 2019, the Legislature amended other statutes on the sealing of juvenile records to allow prosecuting attorneys to request that the juvenile courts provide access to sealed records to fulfill their duties to provide favorable or exculpatory information to a criminal defendant. These provisions are modeled on a recent change to section 781 enacted by Senate Bill 312 (Skinner; Stats. 2017, ch. 679), and like that provision, do not require any notice to the person whose records are being accessed. However, the provision in section 781 is notably narrower than the others in that it only applies to files concerning 707(b) offenses adjudicated for those 14 years of age or older.

In 2015, the Legislature enacted legislation providing that fees for the investigation relating to sealing or a fee to file the petition could only be charged to nonindigent petitioners who were 26 years of age or older. Legislation[2] enacted last year eliminates the authority to charge fees for sealing to any petitioners.

The Proposal

The committee proposes adoption of a new rule of court and approval of three new optional forms to implement the provisions for prosecuting attorneys to request access to sealed files. In addition, the committee proposes revising existing forms to reflect statutory changes that provide that no fees can be charged for sealing.

Rule and forms to implement provisions on prosecutor access to sealed records

In order to provide procedural guidance and a mechanism to comply with specific notice and opportunity-to-respond requirements in some cases in which the prosecutor is seeking access to sealed records for the purpose of providing favorable or exculpatory information to a defendant, the committee is proposing that a new rule of court be adopted as well as three new optional forms described in detail below.

Rule 5.860

This proposed rule of court would set forth the requirements for the filing of a request by a prosecuting attorney, as well as very specific filing timelines for cases in which records sealed under section 786 are sought, as those requests must be provided to the person whose records are being sought and that person must have an opportunity to provide a written and/or in-person response to the court. When the records are requested from those files, the rule would require the requester to file a notice and response form along with the request so that the court can provide the required notice, and it would provide the person receiving notice with 15 days to submit a response to the court. It would require the court to set a hearing if an appearance is requested and notify the person whose records were sealed of the hearing date. In all cases except those in which an appearance has been requested, the rule would require the court to make an order on the request within 21 court days of the filing of the request. If a hearing is requested, an order would be required within five court days of the hearing.

Optional forms to implement requirements of rule 5.860

The committee is proposing that the council approve three new optional forms to implement the statutory requirements for prosecuting attorneys to make these requests, and that notice and an opportunity to respond be provided in appropriate cases. Prosecutor Request for Access to Sealed Juvenile Case File (form JV-592) would provide a form petition for the prosecuting attorney to request access from the juvenile court to sealed juvenile case files. It allows the prosecutor to specify which code section the file was sealed under and to set forth the reasons why access is needed. Notice of Prosecutor Request for Access to Sealed Juvenile Case File (form JV-593) could be used to notify a person whose records have been sealed under section 786 and their attorney of record that access is being sought and that there is a right to provide a response to the request to the court in writing and/or in person. Response to Prosecutor Request for Access to Sealed Juvenile Case File (form JV-594) would allow a person who has received notice of the request for access to file a written response for the court's consideration and/or to request an appearance before the court.

Revisions for existing forms to reflect recent statutory changes

The elimination of any authority for courts or probation departments to charge fees for record sealing requests or investigations requires changes to two forms that previously referenced those fees. Form JV-595 (Request to Seal Juvenile Records), item 4, and form JV-595-INFO (How to Ask the Court to Seal Your Records), item 5 in the instructions on page 2, would be revised to eliminate any reference to fees. In addition, form JV-595-INFO would be revised to reflect that a prosecuting attorney may access sealed records if they contain information favorable to a criminal defendant in another case.

Alternatives Considered

The committee considered implementing the recently enacted provisions on access to sealed juvenile records by prosecuting attorneys via a rule of court alone but opted to develop optional forms in order to assist with the notice and response requirements in section 786 that would be onerous for courts to implement without new forms.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

Printing costs may be incurred by courts to provide the revised mandatory information forms. In addition, because the informational forms are available in other languages, there will be costs to translate the revised forms. All of these impacts are a result of legislative changes and are necessary to make the forms legally accurate. The approval of optional forms should make it easier for courts to comply with their existing statutory duties.

Request for Specific Comments

In addition to comments on the proposal as a whole, the advisory committee is interested in comments on the following:

- Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose?
- Are the optional forms useful for complying with the notice and response provisions in section 786?
- Will the approach in this proposal of having a standalone rule and process for Brady access to sealed records improve the administration of these requests, or should this process be incorporated into the procedures for seeking access to juvenile records under section 827 and rule 5.552?
- Should the rule and or form address the narrow application of the statutory provision in section 781 to 707(b) offenses adjudicated for those 14 or over, or should it apply in any case in which a prosecutor might seek access to comply with Brady obligations?

The advisory committee also seeks comments from courts on the following cost and implementation matters:

- Would the proposal provide cost savings? If so, please quantify.
- What would the implementation requirements be for courts—for example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), changing docket codes in case management systems, or modifying case management systems?
- Would 4 months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation?
- How well would this proposal work in courts of different sizes?

Rule 5.860 of the California Rules of Court would be adopted, effective January 1, 2021, to read:

Rule 5.860. Prosecuting Attorney Request to Access Sealed Juvenile Case Files

(a) Applicability

This rule applies when a prosecuting attorney is seeking to access, inspect, or utilize a record that has been sealed by the court under Penal Code section 851.7 or sections 781, 786, or 793 and the attorney has reason to believe that access to the record is necessary to meet the attorney's statutory or constitutional obligation to disclose favorable or exculpatory evidence to a defendant in a criminal case.

(b) Contents of the request

Any request filed with the juvenile court under this rule must include the prosecutor's rationale for believing that access to the information in the record may be necessary to meet the disclosure obligation and the date by which the records are needed. The date must allow for sufficient time to meet reasonable given the notice and hearing requirements of this rule. Form JV-592, Prosecutor Request for Access to Sealed Juvenile Case File, may be used for this purpose.

(c) Notice and opportunity to respond for persons with records sealed under section 786

(1) Notice requirements when records were sealed under section 786

(A) When the request concerns a file sealed under section 786, the request must include a form for the court to notify the person whose records are to be accessed as well as that person's attorney of record, and a form for those individuals to respond in writing or to request an appearance before the juvenile court. Forms JV-593, Notice of Prosecutor Request for Access to Sealed Juvenile Case File, and JV-594, Response to Prosecutor Request for Access to Sealed Juvenile Case File, may be used for this purpose.

(B) The juvenile court must notify the person with the sealed record and that person's attorney of record using the documents prepared by the prosecuting attorney within two court days of the request being filed.

(2) Requirements if a response is filed

(A) If a written response is filed no more than 15 days after the date the notice was issued and no appearance has been requested, the clerk of the court must provide that response to the juvenile court for its consideration as it reviews the prosecuting attorney's request.

(B) If a response is filed no more than 15 days after the date the notice was issued and an appearance is requested, the clerk of the court must set a hearing and provide notice of the hearing to the person with the sealed record, the attorney of record for that person, and the prosecuting attorney who filed the request.

(d) Juvenile court review and order

The court must review the case file and records that have been referenced by the prosecuting attorney's request as well as any response provided as set forth in subdivision (c)(2). The court must approve the request if it determines that access to a specific sealed record or portion of a sealed record is necessary to enable the prosecuting attorney to comply with the disclosure obligation. If the court approves the request, it must state on the record appropriate limits on the access, inspection, and utilization of the sealed record information in order to protect the confidentiality of the person whose sealed record is at issue. The court must make its order within 21 court days of when the request is filed, unless an appearance has been requested under subdivision (c)(2), in which case the court must act within five court days of the date set for the appearance.

JV-595 Request to Seal Juvenile Records

Probation stamps date here when form is received.

DRAFT
Not approved by the Judicial Council

This form can be used to petition the juvenile court to seal your juvenile records. More information about sealing is available on form JV-595-INFO, How to Ask the Court to Seal Your Records.

Submit this form to the probation department in the last county where you were on juvenile probation or, if you were not on probation, in any county where you had contact with law enforcement or probation that did not result in a court case. Once the probation department receives the completed form, it will have 90 days to file a record-sealing petition with the court for you, or 180 days if you include agencies outside of this county.

Fill in court name and street address:

Superior Court of California, County of

I understand that after I file this document the probation department will have 90 days to conduct an investigation and file a record-sealing petition for me with the juvenile court. I also understand that some records may not be eligible for sealing. I am aware that form JV-595-INFO, How to Ask the Court to Seal Your Records, provides more information on this process.

Your name: _____

Case Number:

Note: When you file this form with the probation department, it will research your case history and attach a list of contacts and addresses of all agencies that it knows have records of the case(s) and contacts(s) you listed on page 1. If you have had contacts with law enforcement or another agency with a record of your offense and that entity may not have been reported to the probation department, please list it below, or that record may not be sealed. If your case was transferred from one county to another, your records in both counties will be sealed. If you have a probation record in more than one county and that record was not transferred, you may ask the court to seal that record as well. If the court does not seal that record, it will inform you that you need to file this form in that county. Contacts not included on this form may not be sealed. The court may seal only those records listed on the petition.

5 Include all contacts (with addresses) you had, before your 18th birthday, with the agencies below that might not be part of your probation records:

JV-595-INFO How to Ask the Court to Seal Your Records

If you were arrested or subject to a court proceeding or had contact with the juvenile justice system when you were under 18, there may be records kept by courts, police, schools, or other public agencies about what you did. If the court makes those records private (sealed), it could be easier for you to:

- Find a job.
- Get a driver's license.
- Get a loan.
- Rent an apartment.
- Go to college.

If the court sealed your records when probation was terminated, you do not need to ask for them to be sealed.

There are now three ways that records may be sealed in California. As of January 1, 2015, courts are required to seal records in certain cases when the court finds that probation (formal, or informal) is satisfactorily completed or if your case was otherwise dismissed after the petition was filed. If the court sealed all of your records at the end of your case, you should have received a copy of the sealing order, and you do not need to ask the court to seal the records in that sealing order.

For more information about when the court seals your records at the completion of probation, see form JV-596-INFO.

If probation sealed your diversion records for satisfactory completion, you may wish to ask the court to seal any remaining records of your behavior.

As of January 1, 2018, if you participate in a diversion program or other supervision program instead of going to court, and the probation department determines that you satisfactorily completed that program, the probation department will seal your probation department records and the records for any program you were required to complete. If the probation department determines that you did not satisfactorily complete the program, it will not seal those records, but will give you a form to tell you why and a form that you can use to tell the court why you think you did satisfactorily complete the program. If the court agrees with you, it will order your probation and program records sealed. Because probation did not seal any arrest records at this time, you may want to ask the court to seal any other records relating to this conduct when you are eligible to ask for record sealing as explained on this form.

If you have more than one juvenile case or contact and/or are unsure if your records were sealed by the court, ask your attorney or probation officer or the juvenile court clerk in the county where you had a case or contact.

Who qualifies to ask the court to seal their juvenile records?

If the court has not already sealed your records, you can ask the court to make that order, if:

- You are at least 18 or it has been at least five years since your case was closed; and
- You have been rehabilitated to the satisfaction of the court.

What if you owe restitution or fines?

The court may seal your records even if you have not paid your full restitution order to the victim.
The court will not consider outstanding fines and court ordered fees when deciding whether to seal your records, but you are still required to pay the restitution, fines, and fees, and your records can be looked at to enforce those orders.

When do you not qualify to seal your records?

- If you were convicted as an adult of an offense involving moral turpitude, such as:
  - A sex or serious drug crime;
  - Murder or other violent crime; or
  - Forgery, welfare fraud, or other crime of dishonesty.
- If, when you were 14 or older, the court found that you committed a sex offense listed in Welfare and Institutions Code section 707(b) for which you must register under Penal Code section 290.008 because you were paroled from the Department of Juvenile facilities.

If you are unsure if you qualify, ask your attorney.

Who can see your sealed records?

- DMV can see your vehicle and traffic records and share them with insurance companies.
- The court may see your records if you are a witness or involved in a defamation case.
- If you apply for benefits as a nonminor dependent, the court may see your records.
- A prosecuting attorney may see your records that were sealed for an offense listed under Welfare and Institutions Code section 707(b) in a later proceeding for the reasons listed in section 781(d).

- If your sealed record was for a 707(b) offense when you were 14 or older, the prosecutor, probation, and the court may unseal your records if you are charged with a later felony.
- You can request the court to unseal your records if you want to have access to them or allow someone else to see them.
- If a prosecutor thinks something in your record would be helpful to the defense of someone who is charged with a crime in another case, the prosecutor can ask the court to provide that information.
- If you want to see your records or allow someone else to see them, you can ask the court to unseal them.

Can employers see your records if they are not sealed?

Juvenile records are not allowed to be disclosed to most employers, and employers are not allowed to ask about or consider your juvenile history in most cases. There are exceptions to this rule if you are applying to be a peace officer or to work in health settings. Also, federal employers may still have access to your juvenile history. You should seek legal advice if you have questions of what an employer can ask about you.

How do you ask to have your records sealed?

1. You must fill out a court form. Form JV-595, Request to Seal Juvenile Records, at www.courts.ca.gov/forms.htm, can be used, or your court may have a local form.
2. When you file your petition, the probation department will compile a list of every law enforcement agency, entity, or person the probation department knows has a record of your case, as well as a list of any prior contacts with law enforcement or probation, and attach it to your petition.
3. If you think there are agencies that might have records on you that were never sent to probation, you need to name those agencies, or the court will not know to seal those records.
   If you are not sure what contacts you might have had with law enforcement, you can get your criminal history record from the Department of Justice. See http://oag.ca.gov/fingerprints/security for more information.
4. Take your completed form to the probation department where you were on probation. (If you were not on probation, take your form to any county probation office where you have a juvenile record.) Note: A small number of counties require you to take your form to the court. More information on each county's specific requirements is available at www.courts.ca.gov/28120.htm.
5. Probation will review your form and submit it to the court within 90 days, or 180 days if you have records in two or more counties.
6. The court will review your petition. The court may decide right away to seal your juvenile records, or the court may order a hearing. If there is a hearing, you will receive a notice in the mail with the date, time, and location of the hearing. If the notice says your hearing is "unopposed" (meaning there is no disagreement with your request), you may choose not to go.
7. If you qualify to have your juvenile records sealed, the court will make an order to seal the eligible records listed on your petition.
   Important!* The court can seal only records it knows about. Make sure you list all records from all counties where you have any records. The court will tell you if it does not seal records from another court that were listed on your petition, and you will need to file a petition in that county to seal those records.
8. If the court grants your request, it will order each agency, entity, or person on your list to seal your records. The court will also order the records destroyed by a certain date. If the sealed records are for a 707(b) offense committed when you were 14 or older, the court will not order those records destroyed.
9. The court will provide you with a copy of its order. Be sure to keep it in a safe place.

What about sex offender registration? (Penal Code, § 290)

If the court seals a record that required you to register as a sex offender, the order will say you do not have to continue to register.

If your records are sealed, do you have to report the offenses in the sealed records on job, school, or other applications?

No. Once your records are sealed, the law treats those offenses as if they did not occur and you do not need to report them. However, the military and some federal agencies may not recognize sealing of records and may be aware of your juvenile justice history, even if your records are sealed. If you want to enlist in the military or apply for a job requiring you to provide information about your juvenile records, seek legal advice about this issue.

Questions?

If you are not sure if you qualify to seal your records or if you have other questions, talk to a lawyer. The court is not allowed to give you legal advice. More information about sealing your records can be found at www.courts.ca.gov/28120.htm.

Executive Summary and Origin

The Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee recommends amending nine rules of court addressing juvenile court proceedings to appoint, terminate, modify, or oversee guardianships and revising two forms used for court orders in those proceedings. The amendments and revisions are required to conform to recent statutory amendments, resolve inconsistencies with existing statutes and rules of court, and make technical corrections.

Background

The juvenile court has authority to appoint a guardian for a child in child welfare or juvenile justice proceedings as specified in sections 360, 366.26, 727.3, and 728 of the Welfare and Institutions Code.[1] After the establishment of a guardianship in a child welfare proceeding, the court generally has discretion to continue dependency jurisdiction over the child or terminate dependency jurisdiction and retain jurisdiction over the child as a ward of the guardianship under section 366.4.[2] Until December 31, 2019, if the court appointed a relative as guardian, section 366.3(a) required the court to terminate its dependency jurisdiction and proceed under section

[1] All subsequent statutory references are to the Welfare and Institutions Code unless otherwise specified.
[2] Welf. & Inst. Code, §§ 360(a), 366.3(a)(3).

366.4 if the child had been placed with the relative for at least six months unless the guardian objected to termination or the court made a finding of exceptional circumstances.

The Proposal

Effective January 1, 2020, Assembly Bill 819 (Stats. 2019, ch. 777, § 18) amended section 366.3(a)(3) to require the juvenile court, on appointment of a relative or nonrelative extended family member as guardian, to dismiss dependency jurisdiction if the guardian's home had been approved for resource family status for at least six months. This amendment requires conforming amendments to rules 5.735 and 5.740 of the California Rules of Court and a revision to form JV-320. In addition, review of the juvenile court rules and forms that apply to juvenile court guardianship proceedings revealed inconsistency with other statutes and rules of court. This proposal addresses these issues by bringing the rules and forms into harmony with the law and each other. Finally, the proposal recommends technical corrections to the rules and forms.

The Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee recommends amending rules 5.510, 5.620, 5.625, 5.695, 5.725, 5.735, 5.740, 5.785, and 5.815 of the California Rules of Court and revising Judicial Council forms JV-320 and JV-418, effective January 1, 2021, as follows:

- Amend rule 5.510(c)(1)(A) to clarify that the juvenile court has exclusive jurisdiction to hear guardianship proceedings after a dependency petition is filed until the petition is dismissed or dependency jurisdiction is terminated (Welf. & Inst. Code, § 304);
- Amend rule 5.620(d) to clarify that the authority to appoint a guardian in a dependency proceeding includes the authority to appoint a guardian at the dispositional hearing in section 360(a) and to correct a cross-reference to rule 5.695 (Id., § 360(a));
- Amend rule 5.620(e) to clarify that it applies specifically to guardianships established under the Probate Code, to simplify the required procedures in line with statute, and to update a reference to the statute governing notice requirements (Id., § 728(a) & (b));
- Amend rule 5.625(b) to clarify that the procedures for appointing a guardian in a juvenile justice proceeding are governed by section 366.26 and that the court has discretion to continue wardship or to terminate wardship and retain jurisdiction over the guardianship (Id., § 728(c)–(e));
- Amend rule 5.625(c) to clarify that it applies specifically to guardianships established under the Probate Code, to simplify the required procedures in line with statute, and to update a reference to the statute governing notice requirements (Id., § 728(a) & (b));
- Amend rule 5.695(a) to incorporate references to section 360(a) and to clarify that the clerk's duty to issue letters of guardianship does not arise until the appointed guardian has signed the required affirmation (Id., § 360(a); Prob. Code, §§ 2300 & 2310);
- Amend rule 5.725(a), which applies expressly both to dependent children and wards of the juvenile court, to add references to statutes governing appointment of a guardian for a ward in juvenile justice proceedings (Welf. & Inst. Code, §§ 366.26, 727.3, 728(c)–(e));

- Amend rule 5.735 to clarify notice requirements in subdivision (b) and incorporate a reference to the requirements in section 366.3, as amended, to paragraph (c)(4), which addresses the court's discretion to retain or terminate dependency jurisdiction (Id., §§ 366.26, 366.3);
- Amend rule 5.740(a)(4) to specify the limits on the court's discretion to retain or terminate dependency jurisdiction added by AB 819's amendments to section 366.3 (Id., § 366.3);[3]
- Amend rule 5.785 to make a technical correction;
- Amend rule 5.815 to clarify that the procedures for appointment of a guardian in a juvenile justice proceeding are supplied by section 366.26, which governs a hearing to select a permanent plan, including appointment of a guardian, in a child welfare proceeding; specify the methods for the probation officer, the child's attorney, and the court to recommend, request, or consider appointing a guardian for a ward, replace text that duplicates statute with references to the appropriate code sections, (Id., §§ 366.26, 727.3, 728(c)–(e));
- Revise Orders Under Welfare and Institutions Code Sections 366.24, 366.26, 737.3, 727.31 (form JV-320) to add references to additional governing code sections and rules of court, clarify the instructions to courts or attorneys completing the form, replace or remove gender-specific terms when appropriate, clarify the standards for determining that the child is likely to be adopted, clarify in item 15 that the appointment of a guardian is not effective until letters of guardianship have been signed and issued, add instructions clarifying that the court must terminate its dependency jurisdiction if it appoints a relative or nonrelative extended family member as guardian and the guardian's home has been approved for six months as required by AB 819's amendment of section 366.3(a)(3), delete item 22 because it duplicates item 4b, renumber items 23–27 as items 22–26, and make technical corrections. (Id., §§ 366.26, 366.3, 727.3, 727.31, 728(c)–(e)); and
- Revise Dispositional Attachment: Appointment of Guardian (form JV-418) to accommodate appointment of a guardian for a child who is not adjudged a dependent as authorized by section 360(a), to clarify that the court is required to have read and considered the report and assessment completed under section 361.5(g) before appointing a guardian under section 360(a), to specify that the appointment of a guardian is not effective until letters of guardianship have been signed and issued, and to make technical revisions. (Id., §§ 360(a).)

The proposed amendments and revisions are urgently needed so the rules of court will conform with statutory requirements. They will also promote efficient proceedings when guardianship is considered as an option for a child under the juvenile court's child welfare or juvenile justice jurisdiction by clarifying the procedures for appointing a guardian in juvenile court.

[3] Additional amendments to rule 5.740 are proposed in Judicial Council of Cal., Invitation to Comment, Juvenile Law: Information, Documents, and Services for Youth 16 Years of Age and Older (Feb. 21, 2020).

Alternatives Considered

The committee considered limiting its recommendation to the amendments and revisions required by AB 819, but determined that the additional recommended rule amendments and form revisions were needed to conform to statute and resolve uncertainty about the procedures for juvenile court guardianship proceedings.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

The committee does not anticipate that the proposal will have significant fiscal or operational impacts on the judicial branch, justice partners, attorneys, self-represented litigants, or others. The proposal may require courts to alter their minute order templates or local forms. Some of these changes would be required by the statutory amendments regardless of the proposal. Other elements of the proposal are intended to clarify procedures; these clarifications should promote more efficient court operations.

Request for Specific Comments

In addition to comments on the proposal as a whole, the advisory committee is interested in receiving comments on the following:

- Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose?

The advisory committee also seeks comments from courts on the following cost and implementation matters:

- Would the proposal provide cost savings? If so, please quantify.
- What would the implementation requirements be for courts—for example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), changing docket codes in case management systems, or modifying case management systems?
- Would three months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation?
- How well would this proposal work in courts of different sizes?

The juvenile court maintains jurisdiction over the guardianship, and petitions to terminate or modify such guardianships must be heard in juvenile court under rule 5.740(c).

(e) Termination or modification of previously established probate guardianships (§ 728)

At any time after the filing of a petition under section 300 and until the petition is dismissed or dependency is terminated, the court may terminate or modify a guardianship of the person previously established ~~by the juvenile court or the probate court~~ under the Probate Code.

~~If~~ The social worker may recommends to the court~~, by filing Juvenile Dependency Petition (Version One) (form JV-100) and Request to Change Court Order (form JV-180),~~ in a report accompanying an initial or supplemental petition, that an existing probate guardianship be modified or terminated~~, the court must order the~~ ~~appropriate county agency to file the recommended motion~~. The guardian or the child's attorney may also file a motion to modify or terminate an existing probate guardianship.

(1) The hearing on the petition or motion may be held simultaneously with any regularly scheduled hearing regarding the child. ~~Notice~~ The notice requirements ~~under~~ in ~~Probate Code~~ section ~~1511~~ 294 apply.

(b) Appointment of a ~~legal~~ guardian of the person (§§ 727.3, 728)

At any time during wardship of a person under 18 years of age, the court may appoint a guardian of the person~~, or may terminate or modify a previously established guardianship,~~ of the ward in accordance with the requirements in section 366.26 and rule 5.815.

(1) On appointment of a guardian, the court may continue wardship and conditions of probation or may terminate wardship.

(2) The juvenile court retains jurisdiction over the guardianship. All proceedings to modify or terminate the guardianship must be held in juvenile court.

(c) Termination or modification of previously established probate guardianships (§ 728)

At any time after the filing of a petition under section 601 or 602 and until the petition is dismissed or wardship is terminated, the court may terminate or modify a guardianship of the person previously established under the Probate Code. The probation officer may recommend to the court in an initial or supplemental petition that an existing probate guardianship be modified or terminated. The guardian or the child's attorney may also file a motion to modify or terminate the guardianship.

(1) The hearing on the petition or motion may be held simultaneously with any regularly scheduled hearing regarding the child. The notice requirements in section 294 apply.

(2) If the court terminates or modifies a previously established probate guardianship, the court must provide notice of the order to the probate court that made the original appointment. The clerk of the probate court must file the notice in the probate file and send a copy of the notice to all parties of record identified in that file.

Rule 5.695. Findings and orders of the court—disposition

(a) Orders of the court (§§ 245.5, 358, 360, 361, 361.2, 390)

At the disposition hearing, the court may:

(1)–(2) * * *

(3) If the requirements of section 360(a) are met, appoint a legal guardian for the child without declaring dependency and order the clerk, as soon as the guardian has signed the required affirmation, to issue letters of guardianship, which are not subject to the confidential protections of juvenile court documents ~~as described~~ in section 827;

(4) If the requirements of section 360(a) are met, declare dependency, ~~and~~ appoint a legal guardian for the child, ~~if the requirements of section 360(a) are met~~ and order the clerk, as soon as the guardian has signed the required affirmation, to issue letters of guardianship, which are not subject to the confidential protections of juvenile court documents ~~as described~~ in section 827;

Rule 5.735. Legal guardianship

(a) Proceedings in juvenile court (§§ 360, 366.26~~(d)~~)

The proceedings for the appointment of a legal guardian for a dependent child must be held in the juvenile court. The request for appointment of a guardian must be included in the social study report prepared by the county welfare department or in the assessment prepared for the hearing under section 366.26. Neither a separate petition nor a separate hearing is required.

(b) Notice; hearing

Unless the court proceeds under section 360(a) at disposition, notice ~~for the guardianship~~ of the hearing at which the court considers appointing a guardian must be given under section 294, and the hearing must be conducted under the procedures in section 366.26.

(c) Findings and orders

(1) If the court finds that legal guardianship is the appropriate permanent plan, the court must appoint the guardian and order the clerk, as soon as the guardian has signed the required affirmation, to issue letters of guardianship, which will not be subject to the confidentiality protections ~~described~~ in section 827.

(2)–(3) * * *

(4) ~~On appointment of a guardian under section 366.26,~~ Subject to the requirements in section 366.3(a)(3) with respect to relatives or nonrelative extended family members, the court may retain dependency jurisdiction or terminate dependency on appointment of a guardian under section 360 or 366.26.

(d) * * *

Rule 5.740. Hearings subsequent to a permanent plan (§§ 366.26, 366.3, 16501.1)

(a) Review hearings—adoption and guardianship

Following an order for termination of parental rights or, in the case of tribal customary adoption, modification of parental rights, or a plan for the establishment of a guardianship under section 366.26, the court must retain jurisdiction and conduct review hearings at least every 6 months to ensure the expeditious completion of the adoption or guardianship.

(1)–(3) * * *

(4) ~~When legal~~ After a guardianship is ~~granted~~ established, the court may continue dependency jurisdiction ~~if it is in the best interest of the child,~~ or ~~the court~~ may terminate dependency jurisdiction and retain jurisdiction over the child as a ward of the guardianship under section 366.4. The court must terminate dependency jurisdiction if it appoints a relative or nonrelative extended family member as the child's guardian and the other requirements in section 366.3(a)(3) apply.

(a)–(b) * * *

(c) Case plan

(1)–(2) * * *

(3) For a child 12 years of age or older and in a permanent placement, the court must consider the case plan and must find as follows:

(A) The child was given the opportunity to review the case plan, sign it, and receive a copy; or

(B) The child was not given the opportunity to review the case plan, sign it, and receive a copy. If the court makes such a finding, the court must order the probation officer to give the child the opportunity to review the case plan, sign it, and receive a copy, unless the court finds that the child was unable, unavailable, or unwilling to participate.

(4)–(5) * * *

Rule 5.815. ~~Appointment of legal guardians for wards of the juvenile court; modification or termination of guardianship~~ Legal guardianship—wards

(a) Proceedings in juvenile court (§ 728(c)–(d))

Proceedings for the appointment of a legal guardian for a child who is a ward of the juvenile court ~~under section 725(b)~~ may be held in the juvenile court~~.~~ under the procedures specified in section 366.26.

(b) Recommendation for guardianship (§§ 706.5, 706.6, 728(c))

On the recommendation of the probation officer supervising the child in the social study and case plan required by sections 706.5(c)–(d) and 706.6(n), the motion of the child's attorney ~~representing the child~~ under section 778, or the court's ~~own motion and order~~ determination under section 727.3 that a legal guardianship ~~should be appointed~~ is the appropriate permanent plan for the child, the court must set a hearing to consider the establishment of a legal guardianship and must order the probation officer to prepare ~~an~~ a report and assessment that includes:

(1) ~~A review of the existing relationship between the child and the proposed guardian;~~ All the elements required in the assessment prepared under sections 361.5(g), 366.21(i), 366.22(c), and 366.25(b), as required by section 366.26(d); and

~~(2) A summary of the child's medical, developmental, educational, mental, and emotional status;~~

~~(3) A social history of the proposed guardian, including a screening for criminal records and any prior referrals for child abuse or neglect;~~

~~(4) An assessment of the ability of the proposed guardian to meet the child's needs and the proposed guardian's understanding of the legal and financial rights and responsibilities of guardianship; and~~

~~(5)~~(2) A statement confirming that the proposed guardian has been provided with a copy of ~~Guardianship Pamphlet~~ Becoming a Child's Guardian in Juvenile Court (form JV-350-INFO) or ~~Guardianship Pamphlet (Spanish)~~ La función de un tutor nombrado por la corte de menores (form ~~JV-350S~~ JV-350-INFO S).

(c) ~~Forms~~ Recommendation

~~The probation officer or child's attorney may use Juvenile Wardship Petition (form JV-600) and Petition to Modify Previous Orders—Change of Circumstances (form JV-740) to request that a guardianship hearing be set.~~ The probation officer's recommendation or request for appointment of a guardian may be included in the social study report and case plan submitted under sections 706.5 and 706.6. Neither a separate petition nor a separate hearing is required.

(d) Notice (§ 728(c))

The clerk must provide notice of the hearing to the child, the child's parents, and other individuals as required by section 294.

(e) Conduct of hearing (§ 728(d))

The proceedings for appointment of a guardian must be conducted according to the requirements of section 366.26—except for subdivision (j)—and rule 5.735. The court must read and consider the assessment prepared by the probation officer and any other relevant evidence. The preparer of the assessment must be available for examination by the court or any party to the proceedings.

(f) Findings and orders

~~If the court finds that establishment of a legal guardianship is necessary or convenient and consistent with the rehabilitation and protection of the child and with public safety,~~ If the court makes the findings under section 366.26(c)(4)(A), the court must appoint a legal guardian for the child and order the clerk to issue letters of guardianship (Letters of Guardianship (Juvenile) (form JV-330)) as soon as the appointed guardian has signed them.

(1) The court may issue orders regarding visitation and contact between the child and a parent or other relative.

(2) After the appointment of a legal guardian, the court may continue juvenile court wardship and supervision or may terminate wardship.

(g) Modification or termination of ~~the~~ juvenile court guardianship, or appointment of a co-guardian or successor guardian

A petition to terminate a guardianship established by the juvenile court, to appoint a co-guardian or successor guardian, or to modify or supplement orders regarding the guardianship must be filed and heard in juvenile court. The procedures described in rule 5.570 must be followed, and ~~Juvenile Wardship Petition (form JV-600) and Petition to Modify Previous Orders—Change of Circumstances (form JV-740)~~ Request to Change Court Order (form JV-180) must be used. The hearing on the ~~motion~~ petition may be held ~~simultaneously~~ concurrently with any regularly scheduled hearing regarding the child.

Executive Summary and Origin

The Probate and Mental Health Advisory Committee recommends amending six rules of court and revising eight forms used in proceedings to approve the compromise of a claim or action or the disposition of proceeds of a judgment for a minor or person with a disability. The proposed amendments and revisions are needed (1) to clarify that the petitioner must completely disclose the effect of the compromise on the statutory and contractual lien rights of all parties, insurers, and medical service providers; (2) to clarify that a blocked account for the deposit of the proceeds of the compromise or judgment must be opened in the name of the petitioner in the petitioner's capacity as representative of the minor or person with a disability; (3) to clarify that an adult claimant who has the capacity to consent to orders approving a compromise or disposition and does not have a conservator of the estate must give express consent to those orders; and (4) to make technical and clarifying revisions to the forms' titles, language, and format. These revisions are needed to improve access to the courts, protect the interests of minors and persons with disabilities, and allow prompt and secure distribution of the proceeds of settlements and judgments in favor of minors and persons with disabilities.

Background

Effective January 1, 2002, the Judicial Council adopted rules 7.950–7.954 of the California Rules of Court[1] and forms MC-350, MC-351, MC-355, MC-356, MC-357, and MC-358 for mandatory use in proceedings to approve requests to compromise claims of minors and persons with disabilities and order funds from the proceeds of the compromise or a judgment deposited in blocked accounts. The rules provide detailed guidance for persons seeking approval of so-called minors' compromises and handling funds in blocked accounts. The forms implement a uniform, statewide process to petition for the settlement of claims of minors and persons with disabilities and for dealing with blocked accounts.[2]

Effective January 1, 2005, the Judicial Council revised forms MC-350 and MC-351 to reflect the amendment of sections 3600–3604 and 3610–3612 of the Probate Code[3] and the addition of section 3613 to the code by Assembly Bill 1851 (Stats. 2004, ch. 67). The statutory amendments replaced the term "incompetent person" with "person with a disability," defined that term to include persons with severe physical disabilities specified by federal law, and required that an adult claimant with a disability who nevertheless has capacity to consent to orders issued under sections 3600–3602 and 3610–3611 and does not have a conservator of the estate give express consent to orders issued under those sections.[4]

The Judicial Council also adopted section 40 of the California Standards of Judicial Administration, effective January 1, 2005. Section 40 urged the superior courts, in civil matters requiring approval of trusts to receive the proceeds of settlements or judgments in favor of minors or persons with disabilities under Probate Code section 3600, to develop practices and procedures to provide for determination of the trust issues by the courts' probate divisions. Section 40 was amended and renumbered as standard 7.10 effective January 1, 2007.

Effective January 1, 2010, the Judicial Council adopted rule 7.950.5 and form MC-350EX to provide an expedited process for judicial approval of uncontroversial, low-value compromises or settlements for minors or persons with disabilities.[5] At the same time, the council completely revised form MC-350 and approved form MC-350(A-13b(5)) for optional use.

The Proposal

Since the last substantial revision of the forms addressed in this proposal, courts, judicial officers, attorneys, other stakeholders, and staff have identified three areas requiring substantive revision. In addition, committee members and staff have reviewed the forms and recommend multiple technical revisions, including renaming the forms, updating statutory references, replacing misleading terms and phrases with simpler language, and using terms consistently across the form set.

The Probate and Mental Health Advisory Committee recommends amending rules 7.101, 7.950, 7.950.5, 7.951, 7.952, and 7.955 of the California Rules of Court and revising Judicial Council forms MC-350, MC-350(A-13b(5)), MC-350EX, MC-351, MC-355, MC-356, MC-357, and MC-358, effective January 1, 2021, as follows:

1. Amend rules 7.101, 7.950, and 7.950.5 to reflect the revised titles of forms MC-350 and MC-350EX and make technical changes;
2. Amend rules 7.951 and 7.952 to make technical changes;
3. Amend the references to the State Bar Rules of Professional Conduct in the advisory committee comment to rule 7.955 to conform to the numbering scheme of the new rules;[6]
4. Revise form MC-350 to:
    - Rename the form Petition for Approval of Compromise or Disposition of Judgment Proceeds for Minor or Person With a Disability;
    - Clarify the instructions for use of the form and alert petitioners to the possibility of filing a petition for expedited approval on form MC-350EX;
    - Combine items 1 and 3 to clarify that the petitioner is acting in a representative capacity on behalf of the claimant;
    - Revise item 2 and add item 21 to clarify that an adult claimant with capacity and without a conservator must give express consent to the requested orders and provide an opportunity for such a claimant to give consent;
    - Add language to item 12 to emphasize that petitioners must give the courts complete information about outstanding expenses and liens;
    - Clarify that item 14 addresses both fees and expenses; and
    - Update statutory references, simplify language, and make technical corrections throughout;
5. Revise form MC-350(A-13b(5)) to:
    - Rename the form Attachment to Petition for Approval of Compromise or Disposition of Judgment Proceeds—Additional Medical Service Providers;
    - Renumber the form as MC-350(A-12b(5)) to reflect the renumbering of item 13 on form MC-350 as item 12;
    - Clarify the instructions for using the form; and
    - Update statutory references and make technical corrections;
6. Revise form MC-350EX to:
    - Rename the form Petition for Expedited Approval of Compromise or Disposition of Judgment Proceeds for Minor or Person With a Disability;

[6] The new State Bar Rules of Professional Conduct were approved by the Supreme Court in Order re Request for Approval of Proposed Amendments to the Rules of Professional Conduct of the State Bar of California (admin. order 2018-05-09, issued May 10, 2018, S240991) and took effect November 1, 2018.

- Combine items 1 and 4 to clarify that the petitioner is acting in a representative capacity on behalf of the claimant;
- Revise item 2 and add item 21 to clarify that an adult claimant with capacity and without a conservator must give express consent to the requested orders and provide an opportunity for such a claimant to give consent;
- Revise item 3 to clarify the circumstances in which the form may and must be used;
- Clarify that item 15 addresses both fees and expenses;
- Update statutory references, simplify language, and make technical corrections throughout;

7. Revise form MC-351 to:
   - Rename the form Order Approving Compromise or Disposition of Judgment Proceeds for Minor or Person With a Disability;
   - Revise items 6 and 7 to clarify the orders regarding deposit of funds in a blocked account; and
   - Update statutory references, simplify language, and make technical corrections throughout;
8. Revise form MC-355 to:
   - Rename the form Order to Deposit Funds Into Blocked Account;
   - Specify in item 3 that the blocked account must be opened in the name of the petitioner as the specified representative of the minor or person with a disability; and
   - Update statutory references, simplify language, and make technical corrections throughout;
9. Revise form MC-356 to:
   - Rename the form Acknowledgment of Receipt of Funds and Order to Deposit Funds Into Blocked Account to reflect the dual purpose of the acknowledgment of receipt; and
   - Update statutory references, simplify language, and make technical corrections throughout;
10. Revise form MC-357 to:
    - Rename the form Petition to Withdraw Funds From Blocked Account;
    - Modify the references to parents in item 4 to recognize, in conformity with current law, that multiple parents may have the same gender; and
    - Update statutory references, simplify language, and make technical corrections throughout;
11. Revise form MC-358 to:
    - Clarify the language in item 2 to make it consistent with the terms used across the form set; and
    - Update statutory references, simplify language, and make technical corrections throughout;

Three substantive revisions require further discussion. The first revision responds to requests from courts that have consistently received insufficient information regarding the claimant's medical expenses, especially outstanding expenses and liens against the proceeds of the settlement or judgment held by medical service providers or Medi-Cal. When presented with these incomplete petitions, courts must continue hearings until the petitioner provides all of the required information.

The committee proposes adding language to renumbered item 12 (former item 13) to notify the petitioner more explicitly that the petitioner must completely disclose the effect of the compromise or settlement on the statutory and contractual lien rights of all parties, public and private insurers, and medical service providers. The revisions would also allow the court and the petitioner to ensure that the terms of the proposed compromise, settlement, or disposition or proceeds address all financial interests at stake, thereby reducing delays, and protecting claimants from unexpected demands by Medi-Cal or medical service providers.

Second, the committee also proposes revising renumbered items 6c(2)(a) and 7a on form MC-351 and item 3 on form MC-355 to address difficulties faced by petitioners and attorneys in many counties when they attempt to deposit funds in a representative capacity, as ordered, in a blocked account for a minor or person with a disability. Items 6c(2)(a) and 7a on form MC-351 order the blocked account opened in the name of the petitioner as trustee for the beneficiary. Courts and stakeholders advised the committee that this language is often interpreted narrowly to exclude petitioners, such as guardians of minors' estates, acting in other authorized representative capacities, such as guardian of a minor's estate.

The committee therefore proposes replacing the term "as trustee" with the broader term "in the petitioner's representative capacity." In addition, the current language in item 3 of form MC-355 requires the account to be opened in the name of the claimant or beneficiary. Banks routinely decline to open these accounts in the name of the petitioner, as intended, because of this language. The petitioner or attorney must then seek a clarifying order from the court. This process reduces the balance of the settlement or judgment available to the claimant and delays the availability of that balance. The committee therefore proposes revising item 3 on form MC-355 to direct the account to be opened in the name of the petitioner and adding check boxes to identify the specific representative capacity in which the petitioner is acting.

The proposed revision to item 3 on form MC-355 revealed a third source of confusion on the petitions, forms MC-350 and MC-350EX. Item 3 on form MC-350 and item 4 on form MC-350EX identify the petitioner's legal relationship to the claimant. To emphasize the variety of representative relationships a petitioner might have with a claimant and promote consistency with the proposed specification of the appropriate relationship in item 3 on form MC-355, the committee chose to combine this item with the petitioner's name into item 1 on the petitions.

In the process of combining these items, the committee determined that the notice, stating that an adult claimant who had capacity to consent to the requested orders and did not have a conservator was required to consent, should be moved from the description of the petitioner to item 2 on each form, which describes the claimant. The committee also recommends adding item 21 to forms MC-350 and MC-350EX to provide an opportunity for a qualifying claimant to give express consent to the requested orders.

Finally, the committee recommends deleting from the petition forms the implicit invitation for the minor or person with a disability to file the petition. This item, 3e on form MC-350 and 4e on form MC-350EX, was added, effective January 1, 2005, as further response to the requirement in Probate Code section 3613 that a claimant with sufficient capacity must give express consent to the requested orders.[7] The committee is not aware of circumstances in which a claimant would also be a petitioner in the proceedings covered by these forms. If those circumstances should nevertheless arise, the petitioner could indicate that by checking "Other" relationship and inserting "self" in the adjacent field.

Alternatives Considered

The committee considered not revising the forms in this proposal, but determined that the costs and delays caused by the current forms' lack of clarity required the revisions to improve access to the courts, protect the interests of minors and persons with disabilities, and allow prompt and secure distribution of the proceeds of settlements and judgments in favor of minors and persons with disabilities. The committee also considered changing the category of these forms to reduce the number of forms in the "MC" (miscellaneous) category. The committee decided, however, that relettering these forms would potentially cause confusion because of the extensive use of the forms by self-represented litigants and the correspondence of the initials "MC" to the proceedings in which the forms are used, colloquially referred to as "minor's compromises." The committee has requested specific comment about renumbering the forms.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

The proposal might require courts to input the new form titles into their case management systems. The revisions should not, however, require entry of any new data elements. The substantive revisions to form MC-350 are intended to help courts receive complete and accurate information in the original petition for approval, which will reduce continuances and protect the interests of the minor or person with a disability. The substantive revisions to forms MC-351 and MC-355 will reduce the need for court orders by clarifying to a financial institution that a parent or other person named on these orders may open a blocked account in their representative capacity and deposit funds for a minor or person with a disability without a further court order.

[7] Judicial Council of Cal., Advisory Com. Rep., supra note 5, at p. 2. Although added to the petitions, it was, tellingly, not reflected in an addition to form MC-351, the order in response to the revised petitions.

Request for Specific Comments

In addition to comments on the proposal as a whole, the advisory committee is interested in comments on the following:

- Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose?
- Should the forms be renumbered to move them from the MC form set and place them in a separate form set by themselves or with other forms?
- Are further revisions needed to ensure compliance with the legal requirements for establishing, administering, and accessing special needs trusts on behalf of claimants with disabilities?

The advisory committee also seeks comments from courts on the following cost and implementation matters:

- Would the proposal provide cost savings? If so, please quantify.
- What would the implementation requirements be for courts—for example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), changing docket codes in case management systems, or modifying case management systems?
- Would three months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation?
- How well would this proposal work in courts of different sizes?

Rule 7.952. Attendance at hearing on ~~the~~ petition to approve compromise ~~a~~ of claim

(a) Attendance of ~~the~~ petitioner and claimant

The person petitioning for approval of the ~~compromising~~ compromise of the claim on behalf of the minor or person with a disability and the minor or person with a disability must attend the hearing on the ~~compromise of the claim~~ petition unless the court for good cause dispenses with their personal appearance.

(b) Attendance of ~~the~~ physician and other witnesses

~~At the hearing,~~ The court may require the presence and testimony of witnesses, including the attending or examining physician, at the hearing.

Rule 7.955. Attorney's fees for services to a minor or a person with a disability

(a)–(d) * * *

Advisory Committee Comment

This rule requires the court to approve and allow attorney's fees in an amount that is reasonable under all the facts and circumstances, under Probate Code section 3601. The rule is declaratory of existing law concerning attorney's fees under a contingency fee agreement when the fees must be approved by the court. The facts and circumstances that the court may consider are discussed in a large body of decisional law under section 3601 and under other statutes that require the court to determine reasonable attorney's fees. The factors listed in rule 7.955(b) are modeled in part after those provided in rule ~~4-200~~ 1.5 of the Rules of Professional Conduct of the State Bar of California concerning an unconscionable attorney's fee, but the advisory committee does not intend to suggest or imply that an attorney's fee must be found to be unconscionable under rule ~~4-200~~ 1.5 to be determined to be unreasonable under this rule.

Executive Summary

Current law provides that a minor or minor's legal guardian may ask the court to make certain information regarding the minor confidential in a domestic violence or civil harassment restraining order proceeding. Assembly Bill 925 (Stats. 2019, ch. 294) changes the penalty associated with misuse or disclosure of a minor's confidential information, provides circumstances in which the confidential information may be disclosed, and allows third-party access to the confidential information under limited circumstances. This proposal is urgently needed because AB 925 took effect on January 1, 2020.

Recommendation

The Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee and the Civil and Small Claims Advisory Committee jointly recommend amending rules of court, adopting eight forms (a set of four in the Domestic Violence Prevention series and a set of four in the Civil Harassment Prevention series), and revising several forms, in order to implement the provisions in AB 925. Specifically, the committees recommend that the Judicial Council, effective September 1, 2020:

1. Amend rules 3.1161 (civil harassment) and 5.382 (domestic violence);

2. Adopt Request for Release of Minor's Confidential Information (forms CH-176 and DV-176);

3. Adopt Notice of Request for Release of Minor's Confidential Information (forms CH-177 and DV-177);

4. Adopt Response to Request for Release of Minor's Confidential Information (forms CH-178 and DV-178);

5. Adopt Order on Request for Release of Minor's Confidential Information (forms CH-179 and DV-179);

6. Revise Notice of Court Hearing (forms CH-109 and DV-109);

7. Revise Request to Keep Minor's Information Confidential (forms CH-160 and DV-160);

8. Revise Privacy Protection for a Minor (Person Under 18 Years Old) (forms CH-160-INFO and DV-160-INFO);

9. Revise Order on Request to Keep Minor's Information Confidential (forms CH-165 and DV-165);

10. Revise Notice of Order Protecting Information of Minor (forms CH-170 and DV-170); and

11. Revise Cover Sheet for Confidential Information (forms CH-175 and DV-175).

The text of the amended rules and the new and revised forms are attached at pages 10-83.

Relevant Previous Council Action

The existing rules and forms for requesting confidentiality of minor's information went into effect on January 1, 2019. No changes have been made to those rules and forms since they were adopted. Forms CH 109 and DV 109 were part of the same proposal that adopted the new forms for minor's confidentiality and have not been revised since.

Analysis/Rationale

This proposal is urgently needed to implement AB 925,[1] which took effect on January 1, 2020. AB 925 changed the statutory requirements in civil harassment and domestic violence proceedings in three main ways:

1. Allows court to release confidential information to third parties;

2. Changes the penalty for misuse or unlawful disclosure to a sanction rather than contempt of court and provides for certain exceptions where disclosure is permitted without court order; and

3. Provides that an order for confidentiality made in a civil harassment or domestic violence restraining order proceeding applies to certain civil proceedings.

As most litigants in domestic violence and civil harassment restraining order proceedings are self-represented, the forms proposed here would eliminate the need for parties to create their own pleadings and draft orders. Additionally, the proposed amendments to rules are needed to provide consistency in how these requests and orders are processed.

Court-ordered release of confidential information to third parties

Effective January 1, 2020, the court may allow disclosure of information regarding a minor that has been made confidential, if the disclosure is necessary to effectuate the underlying purpose of the restraining order,[2] or if it is in the best interest of the minor. The court may do so on its own motion or by request of any person. If by request, the person (the minor or minor's legal guardian) who asked the court to make the minor's information confidential must be personally served or by first-class mail with a copy of the request (form CH-176 or DV-176) and must have the opportunity to object to the request.

To implement the above, the committees propose amending rules 3.1161 and 5.382 to describe consistent procedures for this process.

Rules 3.1161 and 5.382

These rules would be amended to:

- Require the person asking the court to release a minor's confidential information to make the request on form CH-176 or DV-176 and to submit to the court a proposed order (form CH-179 or DV-179) along with the request;
- Provide that the court, within 10 days of the filing of form CH-176 or DV-176, provide, by first-class mail, a copy of the request, the blank response form, the notice of request, and a blank cover sheet for confidential information to the person who made the request

[1] AB 925 amends section 6301.5 of the Family Code and section 527.6(v) of the Code of Civil Procedure.

[2] For domestic violence restraining orders, see Family Code section 6220; for civil harassment restraining orders, see Code of Civil Procedure section 527.6(v)(3).

for confidential information. The court must provide notice because the name and address of the person who made the request to keep a minor's information confidential is contained on a confidential form (CH-160 or DV-160) and so may not be available to the person making the request;

- Require that the person (the minor or minor's legal guardian) who asked the court to make the minor's information confidential, if objecting to the request, file the objection on form CH-178 or DV-178 within 20 days from the date of mailing of the notice by the court;
- Allow the court to deny the request for release of minor's confidential information based on the papers;
- Allow the court to schedule a hearing if the minor/legal guardian objects to the request, or to obtain more information regarding the request for release of a minor's confidential information. Any court hearing would be closed and would require at least 10 days' notice to the persons needed at the hearing;
- Require forms containing confidential information be redacted prior to filing in a public file; and
- Provide that the court will provide notice of any order granting or denying a request for release of confidential information if the court's ruling was based on the papers alone (i.e., no court hearing).

New forms CH-176 and DV-176, Request for Release of Minor's Confidential Information
This form would be used by any person who wants access to a minor's information that has been made confidential. In some cases, the person may already know the information (e.g., a minor's name or address) but needs an unredacted copy of a court order that involves the minor, like a restraining order protecting the minor.

New forms CH-177 and DV-177, Notice of Request for Release of Minor's Confidential Information
This mandatory notice form would be completed by the court and mailed to the minor or legal guardian who made the request to keep the minor's information confidential (i.e., the person who filed form CH-160 or DV-160). The court would also mail a copy of the completed form (CH-176 or DV-176), a blank copy of the response form (CH-178 or DV-178), and a blank cover sheet (CH-175 or DV-175).

New forms CH-178 and DV-178, Response to Request for Release of Minor's Confidential Information
This response form would be completed by the person (the minor or minor's legal guardian) who asked the court to make the minor's information confidential. If confidential information is provided on this form, two copies of the form must be provided to the court, along with a copy of the mandatory cover sheet (form CH-175 or DV-175).[3] If the person who made the request for confidentiality does not agree with the request to release minor's confidential information, the response must be filed within 20 days from the time the notice is mailed by the court.

New forms CH-179 and DV-179, Order on Request for Release of Minor's Confidential Information

An order granting, denying, or setting a court hearing would be made on this form. If the court is making an order to release confidential information, a redacted copy would have to be prepared and filed in a public file and the unredacted copy would be filed in a confidential file. As with the Order on Request to Keep Minor's Information Confidential (forms CH-165 and DV-165), if the court issues a denial, only page 1 would be filed and the remaining pages discarded.

Revisions to forms CH-160 and DV-160, CH-165 and DV-165

An additional item would be added to the Request to Keep Minor's Information Confidential (forms CH-160 and DV-160), at item 9, to allow the minor or legal guardian to ask the court to give certain third parties access to unredacted restraining order forms. A parallel item would be included on the Order on Request to Keep Minor's Information Confidential (forms CH-165 and DV-165), at item 10. These revisions reflect the amendments in AB 925 that provide that courts may authorize disclosure of the confidential information to certain individuals or entities as necessary to implement the protective order or if otherwise in the best interest of the child. (See Code Civ. Proc, § 527.6(v)(4), eff. Jan. 1, 2020, and Fam. Code, § 6301.5(d), eff. Jan. 1, 2020.)

Revisions to forms CH-160-INFO and DV-160-INFO

The item "Is there a penalty for disclosing confidential information?" on page 3 would be revised to include an updated warning about misusing information and provide examples of when disclosure of confidential information is allowed by statute. (See the discussion of AB 925's amendments to the sanctions provisions below.) On page 2, an additional section would be added to "Tips for Step 1: Complete the forms" to explain how a person can ask the court to give third-party access to unredacted documents.

Monetary sanctions may be imposed for the misuse or disclosure of minor's confidential information

Effective January 1, 2020, the penalty for misuse or disclosure is a sanction of up to $1,000, and no longer punishable as contempt of court. Prior to imposition of a sanction, the court is required to assess the person's ability to pay. Under limited circumstances, disclosure without a court order is permitted, including any disclosure by a minor who has alleged abuse.[4] [3] This procedure is called for under current rules 3.1161(i) (for civil harassment cases) and 5.382(i) (for domestic violence cases) for the filing of documents with information that the court has ordered be kept confidential.

[4] See Code Civ. Proc., § 527.6(v)(3); Fam. Code, § 6301.5(c).

Consistent with these changes in the law, the committees propose revising forms CH-165 and DV-165, at item 7, to include the following language:

> Warning: Unless authorized by the court or by law, if the information listed below is misused or disclosed to anyone other than law enforcement you may be sanctioned up to $1,000 or face other court penalties. See [code section][5] for the limited situations in which disclosures can be made without a court order.

A substantially identical warning would be included on the Notice of Order Protecting Information of Minor (forms CH-170 and DV-170), at item 4. Forms CH-109 and DV-109, at item 5b, would also be revised to change the penalty from "contempt of court" to "sanction."

Order for confidentiality applies to other cases

Currently, an order making a minor's information confidential applies in any civil proceeding. Effective January 1, 2020, an order for confidentiality would only apply to civil cases between the same parties in the civil harassment or domestic violence restraining order proceedings, and any proceeding initiated under the Family Code if the order for confidentiality was made in a domestic violence restraining order proceeding.[6] The following forms and rules would be revised to reflect this change:

- Rules 3.1161(i) and 5.382(i);
- Forms CH-165 and DV-165 (items 11 and 12, respectively);
- Forms CH-170 and DV-170 (item 3); and
- Forms CH-175 and DV-175 (item 2).

Technical change to rule 5.382 and minor changes to existing forms

A technical change to rule 5.382 is needed to correct the title of a form cited in the rule. In subdivision (e)(2)(D), the title of form DV-160 should read Request to Keep Minor's Information Confidential instead of Request for Domestic Violence Restraining Order.

Some commenters suggested minor changes to language, most of which the committees accepted. Other minor changes to formatting and language were made with the goal of making the forms more user-friendly for self-represented litigants.

Policy implications

No policy implications were identified for this proposal.

Comments

This proposal received nine comments. All commenters stated that the proposal appropriately implements AB 925. Four agreed with the proposal, including the Family Violence Appellate [5] Code Civ. Proc., § 527.6(v)(3) (for civil harassment); Fam. Code, § 6301.5(c)(2) (for domestic violence).

[6] Code Civ. Proc., § 527.6(v)(3)(A); Fam. Code, § 6301.5(c)(1).

Project (FVAP), which sponsored AB 925, three agreed if modified, and two did not indicate a position.

Commenters were the Superior Court of Los Angeles County; the Superior Court of Orange County's Civil and Appellate Divisions; the Superior Court of Orange County's Juvenile and Family Divisions; the Superior Court of San Diego County; FVAP; the Joint Rules Subcommittee (JRS) of the Trial Court Presiding Judges Advisory Committee and the Court Executives Advisory Committee; the Family Law Section of the California Lawyers Association (FLEXCOM); the Orange County Bar Association; and the Public Law Center in Orange County. Most of the comments received were suggestions for improving language and correcting typographical errors. A chart with the full text of the comments received and the committee's responses is attached at pages xx-xx.

The committees sought specific comment on whether item 8a(1) on the current versions of forms CH-160 and DV-160 should be removed as it raises potential due process concerns. This item allows the person requesting confidentiality to request that the name of the minor be made confidential from the restrained party. Six commenters responded to this question: one commenter suggested that the item be removed for the due process concerns cited in the invitation to comment while five commenters suggested keeping the option on the current form. After discussion, the committees agreed with the five commenters that the item should remain on the form and any due process issues addressed by the court on a case-by-case basis.

Based on a comment received, committee members discussed whether, under certain circumstances, the person requesting release of confidential information should be responsible for serving that request on the person who made the request for confidentiality. In the proposed rules, the court would be responsible for service because, in many circumstances, the information of the person who made the request for confidentiality will be confidential. In other words, the person seeking release of confidential information would not have access to the person's name and/or address and, therefore, unable to serve them. One court suggested that courts not be responsible for service in cases where the needed information, like the address, is not made confidential. The committees discussed this issue and believed that creating multiple processes for service in these instances would be confusing and possibly cause additional work that would offset any reduction in workload for the court. The committees did not adopt this suggestion.

The FVAP, sponsor of AB 925, suggested that the order forms include a space for the court to state its reasons for denying a request. While the committees see the value in including this on the form, especially for these types of proceedings where most individuals are representing themselves, the committees did not adopt this suggestion. This addition would be a significant change to the form and would require recirculation of the form for comment, delaying implementation of the form. . The committees will consider this revision in the future.

Alternatives considered

The committees considered including a rule of court that would provide a process for the court to determine a person's ability to pay before imposition of a sanction. The committees rejected this idea because courts are accustomed to making this type of determination and are best suited to decide how to make this determination on a case-by-case basis.

The committees considered not recommending new request, response, and order forms for release of confidential information. The committees decided against this as most litigants in these cases are self-represented and providing forms increases their access to the court system. Also, the committees believe that statewide order forms and processes are necessary in these cases, given the sensitive nature of the information.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

This proposal is required by statute. It will result in costs incurred by courts to train court staff and judicial officers on this new procedure, provide assistance to self-represented litigants in self-help centers, and ensure that filed documents are properly redacted. This proposal is intended to help parties and courts implement these new provisions. In addition, courts will have to update their existing manual and electronic processes.

All court commenters noted that three months would be sufficient time to implement this proposal. However, the Joint Rules Subcommittee suggested that implementation be delayed until January 1, 2021. The committees discussed the possibility of delaying implementation and decided not to delay implementation, as these new forms and processes are already needed. The committees believe that filings for these types of requests will be relatively low, which should give courts some flexibility in implementation.

Title 3. Civil Rules

Division 11. Law and Motion

Chapter 3. Provisional and Injunctive Relief

Article 4. Protective Orders

Rule 3.1161. Request to make minor's information confidential in civil harassment protective order proceedings

(a) Application of rule

This rule applies to requests and orders made under Code of Civil Procedure section 527.6(v) to keep a minor's information confidential in a civil harassment protective order proceeding.

Wherever used in this rule, "legal guardian" means either parent if both parents have legal custody, or the parent or person having legal custody, or the guardian, of a minor.

(b)–(f) * * *

(g) Factors in selecting redaction procedures * * *

(h) ~~Sharing of information about a protected minor~~ Releasing minor's confidential information

(1) ~~Sharing of information with the respondent~~ To respondent

Information about a protected minor must be released to the respondent only as provided in Code of Civil Procedure section 527.6(v)(4)~~(B)~~(A)(ii), limited to information necessary to allow the respondent to respond to the request for the protective order and to comply with the confidentiality order and the protective order.

(2) ~~Sharing of information with law enforcement~~ To law enforcement

Information about a ~~protected~~ minor must be shared with law enforcement ~~only~~ as provided in Code of Civil Procedure section 527.6(v)(4)(A)(i) or by court order.

(3) To other persons

If the court finds it is necessary to prevent harassment or is in the best interest of the minor, the court may release confidential information on the request of any person or entity or on the court's own motion.

(A) Request for release of confidential information

(i) Any person or entity may request the release of confidential information by filing Request for Release of Minor's Confidential Information (form CH-176) and a proposed, Order on Request for Release of Minor's Confidential Information (form CH-179), with the court.

(ii) Within 10 days after filing form CH-176 with the clerk, the clerk must serve, by first-class mail, the following documents on the minor or legal guardian who made the request to keep the minor's information confidential:

a. Cover Sheet for Confidential Information (form CH-175);

b. Request for Release of Minor's Confidential Information (form CH-176);

c. Notice of Request for Release of Minor's Confidential Information (form CH-177);

d. Response to Request for Release of Minor's Confidential Information (form CH-178) (blank copy);

e. Order on Request for Release of Minor's Confidential Information (form CH-179).

(B) Opportunity to object

(i) The person who made the request for confidentiality has the right to object by filing form CH-178 within 20 days from the date of the mailing of form CH-177, or verbally objecting at a hearing, if one is held.

(ii) The person filing a response must serve a copy of the response (form CH-178) on the person requesting release of confidential information. Service must occur before filing the response form with the court unless the response form contains confidential information. If the response form contains confidential information, service must be done as soon as possible after the response form has been redacted.

(iii) If the person who made the request for confidentiality objects to the release of information, the court may set the matter for a closed hearing.

(C) Rulings

The request may be granted or denied in whole or in part without a hearing. Alternatively, the court may set the matter for hearing on at least 10 days' notice to the person who made the request for release of confidential information and the person who made the request for confidential information. Any hearing must be confidential.

(i) Order granting release of confidential information

a. The order (form CH-179) granting the release of confidential information must be prepared in a manner consistent with the procedures outlined in (f).

b. A redacted copy of the order (form CH-179) must be filed in a public file and an unredacted copy of the order must be filed in a confidential file.

c. Service

If the court grants the request for release of information based on the pleadings, the court must mail a copy of form CH-179 to the person who filed form CH-176 and the person who made the request to keep the minor's information confidential. Parties may be served in court if present at the hearing.

(ii) Order denying request to release minor's confidential information

a. The court may deny a request to release confidential information based on the request alone.

b. The order (form CH-179) denying the release of confidential information must be filed in a public file and must not include any confidential information.

c. Service

If the court denies the request for release of information based on the pleadings, the court must mail a copy of form CH-179 to the person who filed form CH-176 and the person who made the request to keep the minor's information confidential. Parties may be served in court if present at the hearing.

(iii) If the court finds that the request to release confidential information is insufficiently specific to meet the requirements under Code of Civil Procedure section 527.6(v)(4)(C), the court may conduct a closed hearing to determine if there are additional facts that would support granting the request. The court may receive any relevant evidence, including testimony from the person requesting the release of a minor's confidential information, the minor, the legal guardian, the person who requested the restraining order, or other competent witness.

(i) Protecting information in subsequent filings and other civil cases

(1) * * *

(2) Other civil case

(A) Information subject to an order of confidentiality issued under Code of Civil Procedure section 527.6(v) must be kept confidential in any other civil case with the same parties.

(B) The minor or person making the request for confidentiality and any person who has been served with a notice of confidentiality must submit a copy of the order of confidentiality (form CH-165) in any other civil case ~~involving~~ with the same parties.

(2) ~~Sharing of information with law enforcement~~ To law enforcement

Information about a ~~protected~~ minor must be shared with law enforcement ~~only~~ as provided in Family Code section 6301.5(d)(1)(A) or by court order.

(3) To other persons

If the court finds it is necessary to prevent abuse within the meaning of Family Code section 6220, or is in the best interest of the minor, the court may release confidential information on the request of any person or entity or on the court's own motion.

(A) Request for release of confidential information

(i) Any person or entity may request the release of confidential information by filing Request for Release of Minor's Confidential Information (form DV-176) and a proposed order, Order on Request for Release of Minor's Confidential Information (form DV-179), with the court.

(ii) Within 10 days after filing form DV-176 with the clerk, the clerk must serve, by first-class mail, the following documents on the minor or legal guardian who made the request to keep the minor's information confidential:

a. Cover Sheet for Confidential Information (form DV-175);

b. Request for Release of Minor's Confidential Information (form DV-176);

c. Notice of Request for Release of Minor's Confidential Information (form DV-177);

d. Response to Request for Release of Minor's Confidential Information (form DV-178) (blank copy);

e. Order on Request for Release of Minor's Confidential Information (form DV-179).

(B) Opportunity to object

(i) The person who made the request for confidentiality has the right to object by filing form DV-178 within 20 days from the date of the mailing of form DV-177, or verbally objecting at a hearing, if one is held.

(ii) The person filing a response must serve a copy of the response (form DV-178) on the person requesting release of confidential information. Service must occur before filing the response form with the court unless the response form contains confidential information. If the response form contains confidential information, service must be done as soon as possible after the response form has been redacted.

(iii) If the person who made the request for confidentiality objects to the release of information, the court may set the matter for a closed hearing.

(C) Rulings

The request may be granted or denied in whole or in part without a hearing. Alternatively, the court may set the matter for hearing on at least 10 days' notice to the person who made the request for release of confidential information and the person who made the request for confidential information. Any hearing must be confidential.

(i) Order granting release of confidential information

a. The order (form DV-179) granting the release of confidential information must be prepared in a manner consistent with the procedures outlined in (f).

b. A redacted copy of the order (form DV-179) must be filed in a public file and an unredacted copy of the order must be filed in a confidential file.

c. Service

If the court grants the request for release of information based on the pleadings, the court must mail a copy of form DV-179 to the person who filed form DV-176 and the person who made the request to keep the minor's information confidential. Parties may be served in court if present at the hearing.

(ii) Order denying request to release minor's confidential information

a. The court may deny a request to release confidential information based on the request alone.

b. The order (form DV-179) denying the release of confidential information must be filed in a public file and must not include any confidential information.

c. Service

If the court denies the request for release of information based on the pleadings, the court must mail a copy of form DV-179 to the person who filed form DV-176 and the person who made the request to keep the minor's information confidential. Parties may be served in court if present at the hearing.

(iii) If the court finds that the request to release confidential information is insufficiently specific to meet the requirements under Family Code section 6301.5(d)(3), the court may conduct a closed hearing to determine if there are additional facts that would support granting the request. The court may receive any relevant evidence, including testimony from the person requesting release of the minor's confidential information, the minor, the legal guardian, the person who requested the restraining order, or other competent witness.

(i) Protecting information in subsequent filings and other civil cases

(1) * * *

(2) Other civil case

(A) Information subject to an order of confidentiality issued under Family Code section 6301.5 must be kept confidential in any family law case and any other civil case with the same parties.

(B) The minor or person making the request for confidentiality and any person who has been served with a notice of confidentiality must submit a copy of the order of confidentiality (form DV-165) in any family law case and any other civil case ~~involving~~ with the same parties.

To the Person in (1):

- The court cannot make the restraining orders after the court hearing unless the person in (2) has been personally given (served) a copy of your request and any temporary orders. To show that the person in (2) has been served, the person who served the forms must fill out a proof of service form. Form CH-200, Proof of Personal Service, may be used.
- For information about service, read form CH-200-INFO, What Is "Proof of Personal Service"?
- If you are unable to serve the person in (2) in time, you may ask for more time to serve the documents. Use form CH-115, Request to Continue Court Hearing and to Reissue Temporary Restraining Order.

To the Person in (2):

- If you want to respond to the request for orders in writing, file form CH-120, Response to Request for Civil Harassment Restraining Orders, and have someone age 18 or older—not you or anyone to be protected—mail it to the person in (1).
- The person who mailed the form must fill out a proof of service form. Form CH-250, Proof of Service of Response by Mail, may be used. File the completed form with the court before the hearing and bring a copy with you to the court hearing.
- Whether or not you respond in writing, go to the hearing if you want the judge to hear from you before making an order. You may tell the judge why you agree or disagree with the orders requested.
- You may bring witnesses and other evidence.
- At the hearing, the judge may make restraining orders against you that could last up to five years and may order you to turn in to law enforcement, or sell to or store with a licensed gun dealer, any firearms that you own or possess.

CH-160 Request to Keep Minor's Information Confidential

CONFIDENTIAL

Clerk stamps date here when form is filed.

DRAFT- Not approved by Judicial Council
April 2, 2020

Fill in court name and street address:

Superior Court of California, County of Court fills in case number when form is filed.

Case Number:

When do I use this form?
Complete this form if you want the court to keep information about a minor in a civil harassment restraining order proceeding confidential and not available to the public or the restrained person. If you only want to keep your home address confidential, you may use a mailing address on your other forms rather than using this form.

What if there is information I don't want the restrained person to have?
You can make this request at item (8) if you want to ask the court to keep information confidential from the restrained person. If the court grants your request to keep certain information confidential from the restrained person, the information will have to be redacted (whited or blacked out) from all forms before the restrained person gets a copy. But be aware that if the court denies your request, the information may be provided to the restrained person.

Who will see this form?
The public will NOT have access to this form.
The restrained person will have access to the entire form unless the court grants the request made in item (8) below.

(1) Parties in This Case

a. Person who requested restraining order (form CH-100, item (1)):
Full Name: _____

b. Person to be restrained (form CH-100, item (2)):
Full Name: _____

(2) Person Making Request for Confidentiality

a. Full Name: _____

b. I am:

(1) ☐ The minor requesting confidentiality.

(2) ☐ The ☐ parent ☐ legal guardian of the minor or minors listed below.

List all the minors that you are making the request for:

Name: _____

Name: _____

Name: _____

Name: _____

☐ Check here if there are additional minors. Attach a sheet of paper and write "Attachment 2b(2)—Additional Minors" for a title.

This is not a Court Order.

Case Number:

3 Contact Information

Address where you can receive mail

This address will be used by the court and the person in 2 to notify you in this case. If you want to keep your home address private, you can use another address like a post office box or another person's address, if you have their permission. If you have a lawyer, give your lawyer's address and contact information.

Address: _____

City: _____ State: _____ Zip: _____

Your contact information (optional)

Telephone: _____ Fax: _____

E-mail address: _____

Lawyer's information (skip if you do not have one)

Name: _____ State Bar No.: _____

4 ☐ Requests for More Than One Minor (ONLY for parents or legal guardians)

I am making this request for two or more minors.

a. ☐ The information I want confidential (as checked in item 5) is the SAME for all minors.

b. ☐ The information I want confidential (as checked in item 5) is NOT the same for all minors.

If you checked 4b, make sure you list all the information you want confidential for each minor in 5. If you need more space in 5, attach a separate piece of paper.

5 Information to Be Kept Confidential From the Public

I want the information checked below to be made confidential and NOT available to the public.

(Check all that apply:)

a. ☐ Minor's name

(Note: If your request is granted, the public will not have access to the minor's name in this case, but law enforcement must be given this information.)

b. ☐ Minor's address

(Note: You do NOT have to make this request if you use a mailing address that does not need to be kept confidential. Use that mailing address on all forms in this case and any other civil case.)

The address I want kept confidential is: _____

This is not a Court Order.

c. ☐ Information relating to the minor

(Note: If information relating to the minor is made confidential by the court, the public will not have access to this information but the restrained person must be given the information that is necessary to comply with the restraining order and to respond to the restraining order request. Also, the court may give permission to release confidential information in this case to other people like the minor's childcare provider or school, or anyone who needs the information to protect the minor's best interest or to prevent harassment.)

Describe all information in the documents that will be filed that you want kept confidential.

You may either (check one):

(1) ☐ Attach a copy of form CH-100 or other document that you are filing. Circle all the information you want kept confidential.

(2) ☐ List the information below, identifying the location of the statements in form CH-100 or other document that you are filing.

Location of Information (for example, form #, page #, paragraph #, line #, attachment #, or exhibit #)	Information to Be Redacted (not viewable by the public)

☐ Check here if there is not enough space for your answer. Put your complete answer on an attached sheet of paper and write "Attachment 5c(2)" for a title.

(a) _____ _____

(b) _____ _____

(c) _____ _____

(d) _____ _____

This is not a Court Order.

6 Reasons for Request

To approve your request in 5, the court must expressly find all of the following:

- The minor's right to privacy overcomes the right of the public access to the information;
- There is a substantial probability that the minor's interest will be prejudiced if the information is not kept confidential;
- The order to keep the information confidential is narrowly tailored; and
- No less restrictive means exist to protect the minor's privacy.

Use these four requirements to help you answer the questions below.

a. Why should the information about the minor provided in item 5 be kept private or confidential?

☐ Check here if there is not enough space for your answer. Put your complete answer on an attached sheet of paper and write "Attachment 6a" for a title.

b. What do you think would happen if the information is NOT made private or confidential?

☐ Check here if there is not enough space for your answer. Put your complete answer on an attached sheet of paper and write "Attachment 6b" for a title.

This is not a Court Order.

(Skip items 7 and 8 if you are not the person requesting the restraining order.)

7 If any portion of the request for confidentiality from the public (item 5) is denied, I want to (check one):

a. ☐ Cancel my request for restraining order
I ask the court NOT to make a decision on my Request for Civil Harassment Restraining Orders (form CH-100). I understand that canceling my request means that I will not receive a restraining order at this time. (Note: You may file a request on the same or different facts at a later date.)

b. ☐ Move forward with my request for restraining order
I ask the court to make a decision on my Request for Civil Harassment Restraining Orders (form CH-100). (Note: Choosing this option means that the information in your completed form CH-100 and other court papers in this case will be available to the public and must be seen by the restrained person.

8 ☐ Information to Be Kept Confidential From the Restrained Person

(Note: The restrained person must be given information necessary to comply with the restraining order and to respond to the restraining order request.)

I do not want the restrained person to have access to some of the information checked in item 5.

a. What information do you want to be confidential and not given to the restrained person?

(1) ☐ Minor's name

(2) ☐ Minor's address

(3) ☐ Other information relating to the minor from item 5 (specify):

☐ Check here if there is not enough space for your answer. Put your complete answer on an attached sheet of paper and write "Attachment 8a(3)" for a title.

b. Why should the information listed in 8a be kept confidential and not given to the restrained person?

c. What do you think would happen if the information listed in 8a is given to the restrained person?

☐ Check here if there is not enough space for your answer. Put your complete answer on an attached sheet of paper and write "Attachment 8" for a title.

This is not a Court Order.

d. If any portion of the request for confidentiality from the restrained person (item 8) is denied, I want to:

(1) ☐ Cancel my request for restraining order
I ask the court NOT to make a decision on my Request for Civil Harassment Restraining Orders (form CH-100). I understand that canceling my request means that I will not receive a restraining order at this time. (Note: You may file a request on the same or different facts at a later date.)

(2) ☐ Move forward with my request for restraining order
I ask the court to make a decision on my Request for Civil Harassment Restraining Orders (form CH-100). (Note: Choosing this option means that all of the information in your completed form CH-100 must be seen by the restrained person.)

9 People I Want to Have Access to Confidential Information

(Note: If you want other people to have unredacted copies of restraining order forms in this case, you should complete this item.)

a. If my request in item 5 is granted, I want to be allowed to give the following people or entities (check all that apply):

(1) ☐ Minor's school and after-school program

(2) ☐ Minor's childcare provider

(3) ☐ Supervised visitation provider

(4) ☐ Other (name): _____

b. copies of documents in this case with the following information (check all that apply):

(1) ☐ Minor's name

(2) ☐ Minor's address

(3) ☐ Information listed in item 5c.

CH-160-INFO Privacy Protection for a Minor (Person Under 18 Years Old) Civil Harassment Prevention

Can I keep information about a minor confidential?

Yes. In a civil harassment restraining order case, you can ask a judge to make information about a minor confidential. Confidential means that the public is unable to see the information, because the information is kept private. This is important because most papers in your court case are available for the public to see. This means anyone can view information on your papers, including information about a minor. If the judge grants your request, the public will not be able to see the minor's information on your paperwork.

Who can make this request?

Several people can make this request, including a minor's parent or legal guardian. Any minor protected by a restraining order can make this request, as well. Also, any person, including a minor, who is the accused person in a case may make this request.

A minor can make this request without the help of an adult. This depends on the minor's age, though. If the minor is 12 years old or younger, the judge may want an adult to help the minor make this request.

For more information on who can make this request, contact your local self-help center or a lawyer.

What information can I ask the judge to make confidential?

A judge can make any information about a minor confidential. That means that you can ask to make confidential the minor's name, address, and any statements about what the minor experienced or witnessed.

If you want to protect the minor's address only, you do not have to make this request. Instead, you can use a different address on your restraining order request, such as a mailing address that is not where the minor lives, a P.O. box, or someone else's address. If you use someone else's address, be sure to get their permission first.

Whatever address you use, make sure you will get your mail regularly. This is important, because the address you use is the address the court and other party will use to send you papers for your case.

Does this request cost money?

That depends on the type of harassment. If the person you want to restrain used or threatened to use violence against you or stalked you, you do not have to pay a filing fee. Otherwise, you must pay a filing fee.

If you cannot afford to pay the filing fee, ask the court clerk how to apply for a fee waiver. You will need to fill out form FW-001.

If the protective order is based on prior acts of violence, a credible threat of violence, or stalking, the sheriff or marshal must serve your order for free. Also, if you are eligible for a fee waiver, you can ask the sheriff or marshal to serve the order for free. If you are not eligible for free service, you must pay the sheriff or marshal to serve the order.

I need an interpreter. How can I get help?

You may use form INT-300 to request an interpreter. Ask court staff for information.

I have a disability. How can I get help?

You may use form MC-410 to request assistance. Contact the disability/ADA coordinator at your local court for more information.

Do I need a lawyer to make this request?

No, but this type of request can be hard to get through on your own. Free help may be available at your local court's self-help center. (See below.)

Where can I find a self-help center?

Find your local court's self-help center at www.courts.ca.gov/selfhelp. Self-help center staff will not act as your lawyer but may be able to give you information to help you decide what to do in your case.

Where can I find other help?

For safety tips or other help, call or visit the following hotlines online:
National Human Trafficking Hotline, 1-888-373-788; TTY: 711; www.humantraffickinghotline.org
National Sexual Assault Hotline, 1-800-656-4673, www.rainn.org
Stalking Hotline, 1-855-484-2846, www.victimconnect.org/statistics/stalking/

What do I have to do to make information about a minor confidential?

You can use these steps as a checklist.

◯ Step 1: Complete the forms.
You will need to complete these forms to make your request:
◯ Form CH-160
◯ Form CH-165 (complete items 1 and 2 only)
You can find these forms online at www.courts.ca.gov/forms.
► See tips to complete the forms.
To request a restraining order, you need to complete different forms. See form CH-100-INFO for a list of forms you need to complete to request a restraining order.

◯ Step 2: Take the forms to your court clerk to file.
Find out which courthouse to take your forms to by calling your local court or searching online at www.courts.ca.gov/find-my-court.htm.

◯ Step 3: Understand the judge's order.
The judge will write your orders on form CH-165.
The judge will grant or deny your request.
► See page 3 for what this means.

◯ Step 4: Give court papers to other parties.
In some cases, you will need to have your server give court papers to the other parties in your case. This process is called service.
► See page 4 for tips to complete service.

Tips for Step 1: Complete the forms.

I only want to protect the minor's address. If you only want to protect the minor's address, you do not have to make this request. See "What information can I ask the judge to make confidential?" on page 1 for more information.

I want to protect more than one minor. Only an adult who is the minors' parent or legal guardian may make a request to protect more than one minor's information.

I want to give the minor's school or others copies of court orders from this case. If the court grants your request to make information regarding a minor confidential, you may want to ask the court for permission to give other people copies of certain documents in your case. You can make this request at item 9 on form CH-160.

My right to cancel my restraining order request: You have the right to cancel your request for a restraining order if the judge does not grant your request to make information confidential. This right only applies if you are asking for a restraining order at the same time as your request to make information confidential. To cancel your request for a restraining order, check the box on form CH-160, item 7a, and item 8d(1), if it applies.

If you cancel your restraining order request, you will not receive a civil harassment restraining order at this time.

If, after canceling your request for a restraining order, you want to ask for a restraining order based on the same facts, you must start the process over. See form CH-100-INFO for more information.

▶Tips for Step 3: Understand the judge's order.

Look at form CH-165 to see what the judge decided.

What if the judge granted my request?

Look closely at form CH-165, items 7 and 8, to see what information the judge made confidential in your case. If the judge granted your request to keep information confidential, the information the judge decided to keep confidential will not be available to the public. The information will be available only to the parties in the case.

At times, the judge may make information confidential from the other party in your case. If this happens, the judge will complete item 8 on form CH-165.

Now, take a close look at item 10 on form CH-165. This tells you who is responsible for redacting the information on your paperwork and the deadline for filing it with the court.

Redacting means to hide (blacken or whiten out) information so it cannot be seen. If the judge makes you responsible for redacting the information, your local self-help center may be able to help you.

What if the judge did not grant (denied) my request?

This means that if you move forward with your case, the minor's information will not be confidential. This is important because anyone can go to your local courthouse and ask to see the documents you filed in this case.

If the judge does not grant your request, you may have other legal options available to you. Visit your local court's self-help center or talk with a lawyer.

▷ What if I asked to cancel my restraining order request?

If you checked box 7a or 8d(1) on form CH-160 and the judge denied your request, the paperwork you turned in with this request will not be available to the public, except for page 1 of form CH-165. This includes form CH-100 and any proposed order forms. The court will either return these forms to you, destroy them, or delete them from its records unless you give the court permission to file the forms.

▷ What if I file documents with the court in the future?

If you file documents with the court in the future, be sure to use form CH-175 as a cover sheet and follow the instructions at the top of the form.

Is there a penalty for disclosing confidential information?

Misusing or giving out confidential information can result in the court ordering you to pay up to $1,000 or other court penalties. You will not be penalized if you:

- Give information to police to help them enforce the judge's orders; or
- If you are the minor who has claimed harassment, violence, or threats of violence.

CH-160-INFO Privacy Protection for a Minor (Person Under 18 Years Old) Civil Harassment Prevention

▶Tips for Step 4: Give court papers to all parties in your case.

In some cases, the judge will order you to serve your court papers. Look at form CH-165 to see what the judge decided.

What did the judge decide in your case?

The judge granted my request to keep some of the minor's information confidential.

Your papers must be served. Follow steps 1–5 below.

The judge denied (did not grant) my request to keep some information confidential. I did not cancel my request for a restraining order. The case is still open.

If this is your situation, forms CH-160 and CH-165 must be served by mail or in person. Follow steps 3–5 below.

The judge denied (did not grant) my request to keep some information confidential. I canceled my request for a restraining order and there is no other issue in this case for a judge to decide on.

Your papers do not need to be served. You may stop here.

◯ Step 1: Find out which papers you need to serve.

The judge will check which papers you need to serve to the other parties in your case on form CH-165, item 13.

◯ Step 2: Find out whether you need to serve the other parties personally or by mail.

The judge will check how you need to serve your court papers to the other parties in your case on form CH-165, item 13.

If the judge checks item 13a, you will need to have your server personally serve (give) your court papers to the other parties in your case.

If the judge checks item 13b, you will need to have your server mail your court papers.

◯ Step 3: Choose a server.

The person who serves your papers is called a server. Your server must be at least 18 years old, not protected by the restraining order, and not involved in your case. You are not allowed to serve your own court papers.

Some situations may be dangerous. Think about people's safety when deciding who you choose to serve your court papers.

A sheriff or marshal will serve your court papers for free. Another option is a process server.

A process server is a business you pay to deliver court papers. To hire a process server, look for "process server" on the internet or in the yellow pages.

◯ Step 4: Have your server give your court papers to all parties

For personal service, give your server your court papers as well as form CH-200.

For service by mail, give your server your court papers as well as form PS-030.

◯ Step 5: File proof with the court.

The court needs proof that your papers were served. After your server completes form CH-200 or form POS-030, take it to the court to file in your case.

If the sheriff or marshal served your papers, they may use another form for proof instead of form CH-200. Make sure a copy is filed with the court and that you get a copy.

For more information, read form CH-200-INFO or ask your local court's self-help center for help.

Judicial Officer

Right to Cancel Hearing: Information for the Person in 1

- If item 4 a(2) or 4 a(3) is checked, the judge has denied some or all of the temporary orders you requested until the court hearing. The judge may make the orders you want after the court hearing. You can keep the hearing date, or you can cancel your request for orders so there is no court hearing.
- If you want to cancel the hearing, use form DV-112, Waiver of Hearing on Denied Request for Temporary Restraining Order. Fill it out and file it with the court as soon as possible. You may file a new request for orders, on the same or different facts, at a later time.
- If you cancel the hearing, do not serve the documents listed in item 6 on the other person.
- If you want to keep the hearing date, you must have all of the documents listed in item 6 served on the other person within the time listed in item 6.
- At the hearing, the judge will consider whether denial of any requested orders will jeopardize your safety and the safety of children for whom you are requesting custody or visitation.
- You must come to the hearing if you want the judge to make restraining orders or continue any orders already made. If you cancel the hearing or do not come to the hearing, any restraining orders made on form DV-110 will end on the date of the hearing.

Case Number:

To the Person in 1 :

- The court cannot make the restraining orders after the court hearing unless the person in 2 has been personally given (served) a copy of your request and any temporary orders. To show that the person in 2 has been served, the person who served the forms must fill out a proof of service form. form DV-200, Proof of Personal Service, may be used.
- For information about service, read form DV-200-INFO, What Is "Proof of Personal Service"?
- If you are unable to serve the person in 2 in time, you may ask for more time to serve the documents. Read form DV-115-INFO, How to Ask for a New Hearing Date.

To the Person in 2 :

- If you want to respond in writing, mail a copy of your completed form DV-120, Response to Request for Domestic Violence Restraining Order, to the person in 1 and file it with the court. You cannot mail form DV-120 yourself. Someone age 18 or older — not you — must do it.
- To show that the person in 1 has been served by mail, the person who mailed the form must fill out a proof of service form. Form DV-250, Proof of Service by Mail, may be used. File the completed form with the court before the hearing and bring a copy with you to the hearing.
- For information about responding to a restraining order and filing your answer, read form DV-120-INFO, How Can I Respond to a Request for Domestic Violence Restraining Order?
- Whether or not you respond in writing, go to the hearing if you want the judge to hear from you before making an order. You may tell the judge why you agree or disagree with the orders requested. You may bring witnesses and other evidence.
- At the hearing, the judge may make restraining orders against you that could last up to five years.
- The judge may also make other orders about your children, child support, spousal support, money, and property and may order you to turn in or sell any firearms that you own or possess.

Request for Accommodations

Assistive listening systems, computer-assisted real-time captioning, or sign language interpreter services are available if you ask at least five days before the hearing. Contact the clerk's office or go to www.courts.ca.gov/forms for Request for Accommodations by Persons with Disabilities and Response (form MC-410). (Civ. Code, § 54.8.)

DV-160 Request to Keep Minor's Information Confidential

CONFIDENTIAL

Clerk stamps date here when form is filed.

Draft- Not approved by Judicial Council 03.26.20

Fill in court name and street address:

Superior Court of California, County of Court fills in case number when form is filed.

Case Number:

When do I use this form?
Complete this form if you want the court to keep information about a minor in a domestic violence restraining order proceeding confidential and not available to the public or the restrained person. If you only want to keep your home address confidential, you may use a mailing address on your other forms rather than using this form.

What if there is information I don't want the restrained person to have?
You can make this request at item (8) if you want to ask the court to keep information confidential from the restrained person. If the court grants your request to keep certain information confidential from the restrained person, the information will have to be redacted (whited or blacked out) from all forms before the restrained person gets a copy. But be aware that if the court denies your request, the information may be provided to the restrained person.

Who will see this form?
The public will NOT have access to this form.
The restrained person will have access to the entire form unless the court grants item (8) on this form.

(1) Parties in This Case

a. Person who requested restraining order (form DV-100, item (1)):
Full Name: _____

b. Person to be restrained (form DV-100, item (2)):
Full Name: _____

(2) Person Making Request for Confidentiality

a. Full Name: _____

b. I am:

(1) ☐ The minor requesting confidentiality.

(2) ☐ The ☐ parent ☐ legal guardian of the minor or minors listed below.

List all the minors that you are making the request for:

Name: _____

Name: _____

Name: _____

Name: _____

☐ Check here if there are additional minors. Attach a sheet of paper and write "Attachment 2b(2)—Additional Minors" for a title.

This is not a Court Order.

3 Contact Information

Address where you can receive mail

This address will be used by the court and the person in 2 to notify you in this case. If you want to keep your home address private, you can use another address like a post office box or another person's address, if you have their permission. If you have a lawyer, give your lawyer's address and contact information.

Address: _____

City: _____ State: _____ Zip: _____

Your contact information (optional)

Telephone: _____ Fax: _____

E-mail address: _____

Lawyer's information (skip if you do not have one)

Name: _____ State Bar No.: _____

4 ☐ Requests for More Than One Minor (only for parents or legal guardians)

I am making this request for two or more minors.

a. ☐ The information I want confidential (as checked in item 5) is the SAME for all minors.

b. ☐ The information I want confidential (as checked in item 5) is NOT the same for all minors.

(If you checked 4b, make sure you list all the information you want confidential for each minor in 5. If you need more space in 5, attach a separate piece of paper.)

5 Information to Be Kept Confidential from the Public

I want the information checked below to be made confidential and NOT available to the public.

(Check all that apply)

a. ☐ Minor's name
(Note: If your request is granted, the public will not have access to the minor's name in this case, but law enforcement must be given this information.)

b. ☐ Minor's address

(Note: You do NOT have to make this request if you use a mailing address that does not need to be kept confidential. Use that mailing address on all forms in this case and any other civil case.)

The address I want kept confidential is: _____

This is not a Court Order.

c. ☐ Information relating to the minor

(Note: If information relating to the minor is made confidential by the court, the public will not have access to this information but the restrained person must be given the information that is necessary to comply with the restraining order and to respond to the restraining order request. Also, the court may give permission to release confidential information in this case to other people like the minor's childcare provider or school, or anyone who needs the information to protect the minor's best interest or to prevent abuse.)

Describe all information in the documents that will be filed that you want kept confidential.

You may either (check one):

(1) ☐ Attach a copy of form DV-100 or other document that you are filing. Circle all the information you want kept confidential.

(2) ☐ List the information below, identifying the location of the statements in form DV-100 or other document that you are filing.

Location of Information (for example, form #, page #, paragraph #, line #, attachment #, or exhibit #)	Information to Be Redacted (not viewable by the public)
(b)
(c)
(d)

☐ Check here if there is not enough space for your answer. Put your complete answer on an attached sheet of paper, and write "Attachment 5c(2)" for a title.

This is not a Court Order.

6 Reasons for Request

To approve your request in 5, the court must expressly find all of the following:

- The minor's right to privacy overcomes the public's right to access the information;
- There is a substantial probability that the minor's interest will be prejudiced if the information is not kept confidential;
- The order to keep the information confidential is narrowly tailored; and
- No less restrictive means exist to protect the minor's privacy.

Use these four requirements to help you answer the questions below.

a. Why should the information about the minor provided in item 5 be kept private or confidential from the public?

☐ Check here if there is not enough space for your answer. Put your complete answer on an attached sheet of paper, and write "Attachment 6a" for a title.

b. What do you think would happen if the information was NOT made private or confidential?

☐ Check here if there is not enough space for your answer. Put your complete answer on an attached sheet of paper, and write "Attachment 6b" for a title.

This is not a Court Order.

Case Number:

(Skip item 7 and 8d if you are not requesting a restraining order at the same time as this request.)

7 If any portion of the request for confidentiality from the public (item 5) is denied, I want to (check one):

a. ☐ Cancel my request for restraining order
I ask the court NOT to make a decision on my Request for Domestic Violence Restraining Order (form DV-100). I understand that cancelling my request means that I will not receive a restraining order at this time. (Note: You may file a request on the same or different facts at a later date.)

b. ☐ Move forward with my request for restraining order
I ask the court to make a decision on my Request for Domestic Violence Restraining Order (form DV-100). (Note: Choosing this option means that all of the information in your completed form DV-100 and other court papers in this case will be available to the public and must be seen by the restrained person.)

8 ☐ Information to Be Kept Confidential from the Restrained Person

(Note: The restrained person must be given information necessary to comply with the restraining order and to respond to the restraining order request.)

I do not want the restrained person to have access to some of the information checked in item 5.

a. What information do you want to be confidential and not given to the restrained person?

(1) ☐ Minor's name

(2) ☐ Minor's address

(3) ☐ Other information relating to the minor from item 5 (specify):

b. Why should the information listed in 8a be kept confidential and not given to the restrained person?

c. What do you think would happen if the information listed in 8a is given to the restrained person?

☐ Check here if there is not enough space for your answer. Put your complete answer on an attached sheet of paper, and write "Attachment 8" for a title.

This is not a Court Order.

d. ☐ If any portion of the request for confidentiality from the restrained person (item 8) is denied, I want to:

(1) ☐ Cancel my request for restraining order
I ask the court NOT to make a decision on my Request for Domestic Violence Restraining Order (form DV-100). I understand that canceling my request means that I will not receive a restraining order at this time. (Note: You may file a request on the same or different facts at a later date.)

(2) ☐ Move forward with my request for restraining order
I ask the court to make a decision on my Request for Domestic Violence Restraining Order (form DV-100). (Note: Choosing this option means that all of the information in your completed form DV-100 and other court papers in this case must be seen by the restrained person.)

9 People I Want To Have Access To Confidential Information

(Note: If you want other people to have unredacted copies of restraining order forms in this case, you should complete this item.)

a. If my request in item 5 is granted, I want to be allowed to give the following people or entities (check all that apply):

(1) ☐ Minor's school and after-school program
(2) ☐ Minor's childcare provider
(3) ☐ Supervised visitation provider
(4) ☐ Other (name of person or entity): _____

b. copies of documents from this case with the following information (check all that apply):

DV-160-INFO Privacy Protection for a Minor (Person Under 18 Years Old) Domestic Violence Prevention

Can I keep information about a minor confidential?

Yes. In a domestic violence restraining order case, you can ask a judge to make information about a minor confidential. Confidential means that the public is unable to see the information, because the information is kept private. This is important because most papers in your court case are available for the public to see. This means anyone can view information on your papers, including information about a minor. If the judge grants your request, the public will not be able to see the minor's information on your paperwork.

Who can make this request?

Several people can make this request, including a minor's parent or legal guardian. Any minor protected by a restraining order can make this request, as well. Also, any person, including a minor, who is the accused person in a case may make this request.

A minor can make this request without the help of an adult. This depends on the minor's age, though. If the minor is 12 years old or younger, the judge may want an adult to help the minor make this request.

For more information on who can make this request, contact your local self-help center or a lawyer.

What information can I ask the judge to make confidential?

A judge can make any information about a minor confidential. That means that you can ask to make confidential the minor's name, address, any statements about the minor's abuse, or any abuse the minor witnessed.

If you want to protect the minor's address only, you do not have to make this request. Instead, you can use a different address on your restraining order request, such as a mailing address that is not where the minor lives, a P.O. box, or someone else's address. If you use someone else's address, be sure to get their permission first.

Whatever address you use, make sure you will get your mail regularly. This is important, because the address you use is the address the court and other party will use to send you papers for your case.

Does this request cost money?

No, this request is free.

I need an interpreter. How can I get help?

You may use form INT-300 to request an interpreter. Ask court staff for information.

I have a disability. How can I get help?

You may use form MC-410 to request assistance. Contact the disability/ADA coordinator at your local court for more information.

Do I need a lawyer to make this request?

No, but this type of request can be hard to get through on your own. Free help may be available at your local court's self-help center. (See below.)

Where can I find a self-help center?

Find your local court's self-help center at www.courts.ca.gov/selfhelp. Self-help center staff will not act as your lawyer but may be able to give you information to help you decide what to do in your case.

Where can I find other help?

The National Domestic Violence Hotline provides free and private safety tips and help in over 100 languages. Call them at 1-800-799-7233; 1-800-787-3224 (TTY); or visit online at www.thehotline.org.

What do I have to do to make information about a minor confidential?

If you're ready to start the process for this request, go to page 2 to see a checklist of steps you need to complete in order to ask the judge to make information about a minor confidential.

DV-160-INFO Privacy Protection for a Minor (Person Under 18 Years Old) Domestic Violence Prevention

What do I have to do to make information about a minor confidential?

You can use these steps as a checklist.

Step 1: Complete the forms.
You will need to complete these forms to make your request:

- ◯ Form DV-160
- ◯ Form DV-165 (complete items 1 and 2 only)

You can find these forms online at www.courts.ca.gov/forms.

► See tips to complete the forms.

To request a restraining order, you need to complete different forms. See form DV-505-INFO for a list of forms you need to complete to request a restraining order.

Step 2: Take the forms to your court clerk to file.
Find out which courthouse to take your forms to by calling your local court or searching online at www.courts.ca.gov/find-my-court.htm.

Step 3: Understand the judge's order.
The judge will write your orders on form DV-165. The judge will grant or deny your request.
► See page 3 for what this means.

Step 4: Give court papers to other parties.
In some cases, you will need to have your server give court papers to the other parties in your case. This process is called service.
► See page 4 for tips to complete service.

Tips for Step 1: Complete the forms

I only want to protect the minor's address. If you only want to protect the minor's address, you do not have to make this request. See "What information can I ask the judge to make confidential?" on page 1 for more information.

I want to protect more than one minor. Only an adult who is the minors' parent or legal guardian may make a request to protect more than one minors' information.

I want to give the minor's school or other people copies of court orders from this case.
If the court grants your request to make information regarding a minor confidential, you may want to ask the court for permission to give other people copies of certain documents in your case. For example, if the minor's name was made confidential and the restraining order protects the minor, you may want the minor's school to have a copy that is unredacted (shows the minor's name). You can make this request at item 9 on form DV-160.

My right to cancel my restraining order request.

You have the right to cancel your request for a restraining order if the judge does not grant your request to make information confidential. This right only applies if you are asking for a restraining order at the same time as your request to make information confidential. To cancel your request for a restraining order, check the box on form DV-160, item 7a, and item 8d(1), if it applies.

If you cancel your request for a restraining order, you will not receive a domestic violence restraining order at this time.

If, after canceling your request for a restraining order, you want to ask for a restraining order based on the same facts, you must start the process over. See form DV-505-INFO for more information.

▶Tips for Step 3: Understand the judge's order.

Look at form DV-165 to see what the judge decided.

What if the judge granted my request?

Look closely at form DV-165, items 7 and 8, to see what information the judge made confidential in your case. If the judge granted your request to keep information confidential, the information the judge decided to keep confidential will not be available to the public. The information will be available only to the parties in the case.

At times, the judge may make information confidential from the other party in your case. If this happens, the judge will complete box 8b on form DV-165.

Now, take a close look at item 9 on form DV-165. This tells you who is responsible for redacting the information on your paperwork and deadline for filing it with the court.

Redacting means to hide (blacken or whiten out) information so it cannot be seen. If the judge makes you responsible for redacting the information, your local self-help center may be able to help you.

What if the judge did not grant (denied) my request?

This means that if you move forward with your case, the minor's information will not be confidential on your paperwork. This is important because anyone can go to your local courthouse and ask to see the documents you filed in this case.

If the judge does not grant your request, you may have other legal options available to you. Visit your local court's self-help center or talk with a lawyer.

▷ What if I asked to cancel my restraining order request?

If you checked box 7a or 8d(1) on form DV-160 and the judge denied your request, the paperwork you turned in with this request will not be available to the public, except for page 1 of form DV-165. This includes form DV-100 and any proposed order forms. The court will either return these forms to you, destroy them, or delete them from its records unless you give the court permission to file the forms.

▷ What if I file documents with the court in the future?

If you file documents with the court in the future, be sure to use form DV-175 as a cover sheet and follow the instructions at the top of the form.

Is there a penalty for disclosing confidential information?

Misusing or giving out confidential information can result in the court ordering you to pay up to $1,000 or other court penalties. You will not be penalized if you:

- Give information to police to help them enforce the judge's orders, or
- If you are the minor who has claimed abuse.

DV-160-INFO Privacy Protection for a Minor (Person Under 18 Years Old) Domestic Violence Prevention

▶Tips for Step 4: Give court papers to all parties in your case.

In some cases, the judge will order you to serve your court papers. Look at form DV-165 to see what the judge decided.

What did the judge decide in your case?

The judge granted my request to keep some of the minor's information confidential.

Your papers must be served. Follow steps 1–5 below.

The judge denied (did not grant) my request to keep some information confidential. I canceled my request for a restraining order and there is no other issue in this case for a judge to decide on.

Your papers do not need to be served. You may stop here.

The judge denied (did not grant) my request to keep some information confidential. The case is still open because there are other issues for a judge to decide on, like divorce or custody.

If this is your situation, forms DV-160 and DV-165 must be served by mail or in person. Follow steps 3–5 below.

◯ Step 1: Find out which papers you need to serve.

The judge will check which papers you need to serve to the other parties in your case on form DV-165, item 13.

◯ Step 2: Find out whether you need to serve the other parties personally or by mail.

The judge will check how you need to serve your court papers to the other parties in your case on form DV-165, item 13.

If the judge checks item 13a, you will need to have your server personally serve (give) your court papers to the other parties in your case.

If the judge checks item 13b, you will need to have your server mail your court papers.

◯ Step 3: Choose a server.

The person who serves your papers is called a server. Your server must be at least 18 years old, not protected by the restraining order, and not involved in your case. You are not allowed to serve your own court papers.

Some situations may be dangerous. Think about people's safety when deciding who you choose to serve your court papers.

A sheriff or marshal will serve your court papers for free. Another option is a process server.

A process server is a business you pay to deliver court papers. To hire a process server, look for "process server" on the internet or in the yellow pages.

◯ Step 4: Have your server give your court papers to all parties.

For personal service, give your server your court papers as well as form DV-200.

For service by mail, give your server your court papers as well as form DV-250.

◯ Step 5: File proof with the court.

The court needs proof that your papers were served. After your server completes form DV-200 or form DV-250, take it to the court to file in your case.

If the sheriff or marshal served your papers, they may use another form for proof instead of form DV-200. Make sure a copy is filed with the court and that you get a copy.

For more information, read form DV-200-INFO or ask your local court's self-help center for help.

DV-176 Request for Release of Minor's Confidential Information

Clerk stamps date here when form is filed.

DRAFT

3.26.20

Not approved by the Judicial Council

Instructions

Who should complete this form?

Use this form if you want to ask the court to give you information about a minor that has been made confidential in a domestic violence restraining order case. After you file this form with the court, the court will provide a copy of this request to the person who made the request to keep the minor's information confidential. That person will have an opportunity to disagree with your request before the court makes a decision on your request.

What do I do if I received a completed copy of this form?

The person in (2) is asking the court for access to information that has been made confidential (see item (3) on page 2 of this form). If you do NOT agree with this request, complete and file form DV-178, Response to Request for Release of Minor's Confidential Information, by the deadline listed on item (4) on form DV-177, Notice of Request for Release of Minor's Confidential Information.

Fill in court name and street address:

	Commenter	Position	Comment	Committee Response
1.	California Lawyers Assocation. Executive Committee of the Family Law Section (FLEXCOM) By Saul Bercovitch, Director of Governmental Affairs	A	FLEXCOM agrees with this proposal. FLEXCOM also responds as follows to the Request for Specific Comments: Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose? Yes. Should a personal asking that the information of a minor be kept confidential be precluded from asking that the name of the minor not be provided to the restrained party? (That is, should item 8a(1) on form DV-160 be removed)? Item 8a(1) is acceptable and should not be removed. Are the forms easy for users to understand? Yes. Do you have any suggestions for improving their usability and readability? No.	The committees thank you for your comments. No response required. The committees agree and recommend keeping this item on CH-160 and DV-160. No response required. No response required.

			cases that raised significant issues of statewide concern for domestic abuse survivors. Our work has, to date, resulted in over 38 published appellate decisions interpreting the Domestic Violence Prevention Act and other California Family Code sections designed to protect survivors of domestic abuse and their children. We also engage in legislative advocacy and were proud to sponsor AB 925, which is implemented by these rule and form proposals. Proposal: Amend Cal. Rules of Court, rules 3.1161 and 5.382; adopt forms CH-176, CH-177, CH-178, CH-179, DV-176, DV-177, DV-178, and DV-179; revise forms CH-160, CH-160-INFO, CH-165, CH-170, CH-175, DV-160, DV-160-INFO, DV-165, DV-170, and DV-175. Purpose: This proposal is needed to implement AB 925,1 which took effect on January 1, 2020. As most litigants in domestic violence and civil harassment restraining order proceedings are self-represented, the forms proposed would eliminate the need for parties to create their own pleadings and draft orders. Additionally, the proposed amendments to rules are needed to provide consistency in how these requests and orders are processed. 1. Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose? Yes, the proposal appropriately addresses the stated purpose. The purpose of AB 925 is to ensure sensitive information about a minor in restraining order matters be kept confidential, while also	1. 			allowing persons necessary to the safety and well-being of abuse survivors access to that information. As the sponsor of the AB 925, FVAP believes the proposal, including the revisions and additions to the court rules and existing forms, as well as the adoption of new forms, meets the statutory purpose and intent of AB 925. Like any new procedure, the process for requesting information be made confidential and for requesting the release of confidential information is complex. However, CH-160-INFO and DV-160-INFO explain the process in a way that self-represented litigants should understand. 2. Should a person asking that the information of a minor be kept confidential be precluded from asking that the name of the minor not be provided to the restrained party? (That is, should item 8a(1) on forms CH-160 and DV-160 be removed? See the discussion in "Alternatives considered," above.) Although rare to occur in practice, it is true that a restrained party may be able to respond to and enforce the civil harassment or domestic violence restraining order without knowing the minor's legal name. This may occur when the restrained party knew the minor only by an alias or assumed name. For this reason, item 8a(1) on forms CH-160 and DV-160 should not be removed. [Fn. 1 925 amends section 6301.5 of the Family Code and section 527.6(v) of the Code of Civil Procedure.]	2. The committees agree that there may be situations where it would be appropriate to make the minor's name confidential from the restrained party. Courts can make this determination on a case-by-case basis. This item will remain on the forms.

			3. Are the forms easy for users to understand? Without information sheets, the forms will be difficult for self-represented litigants to navigate, but when the forms are used in tandem with CH-160-INFO and DV-160-INFO, the process of seeking and opposing the confidentiality and release requests will be easier for self-represented litigants to understand.	3. The committees acknowledge that the law and the processes for this type of request will be especially difficult for self-represented litigants to navigate on their own. The committees hope that the information forms will help self-represented litigants navigate the process and know when and where to get help.
			4. Do you have any suggestions for improving their usability and readability? FVAP encourages the Judicial Council Members to include a line next to 3.a. on forms CH-179 and DV-179, to allow a space for the trial court to state its reasons for denying the release of the minor's confidential information. As proposed, the rules would allow the trial court to make a decision on a request to release the minor's confidential information without a court hearing. If this occurs, the person making the request to release confidential information will not know why their request was denied, thus hindering their ability to obtain a successful outcome with additional release requests in other court proceedings.	4. The committees will consider this suggestion in the future when revisions to these forms are required again. While the committees understand the value of the court stating its reasons for denial, this change was not included in the proposal that went out for public comment. This change would impact the workload of courts and should go out for public comment.

Public Law Center By Leigh E Ferrin, Director of Litigation and Pro Bono Santa Ana, CA 92701 Tel: 714-541-1010 Email:	A	Public Law Center (PLC) is a 501(c)(3) not-for-profit organization that provides free civil legal services to low-income individuals and families across Orange County. The civil legal services that we provide include consumer, family, immigration, housing, veterans, community organizations, and health law. PLC appreciates the opportunity to comment on Invitation W20-09, which is proposing to amend the California Rules of Court and adopt a number of forms that would allow a minor's legal guardian to make certain information confidential in a domestic violence or civil harassment restraining order proceeding. PLC agrees with the proposed forms, and appreciates the thoughtfulness that went into them. For California Rule of Court 3.1161 and 5.382, PLC does have a question about the Court's ability to deny the request for release of minor's information. Does the Court have discretion to deny even if the person who requested confidentiality has not objected to the request?* And if so, is there a certain standard that must be met by either side? We understand that much of this will come out in case law, but it does help to provide a background to litigants when allowing a judge to deny a request based solely on the submitted papers, for instance. And this is also particularly true when one or both	The committees thank you for your comments. Yes, for domestic violence prevention cases the court may release confidential information if the court finds that disclosure is "necessary to effectuate the purpose of this division specified in Section 6220, including implementation of the protective order, or if it is in the best interest of the minor." Fam. Code section 6301.5(c)(2)(A). Similarly, in civil harassment prevention cases the court may release confidential information if "disclosure is necessary to prevent harassment or is in the best interest of the minor." Code of Civ. 			sides may be self-represented, which is so common in domestic violence restraining order actions. (*This comment has been revised to reflect commenter's intended question.)	These standards are described in plain language at item 5 on forms CH-176 and DV-176, Request for Release of Minor's Confidential Information.
			PLC agrees that the name of the minor should not be provided to the restrained party. In some circumstances, the minor and/or his or her guardian may have chosen to change their name for a number of reasons. PLC has encountered clients who have specifically changed their name after leaving an abusive situation, in part for protection and in part for a clean break. PLC has also encountered restrained parties who have continued to seek out information about our clients after a restraining order is in place, and providing the current/updated name could make that an easier option for restrained parties.	The committees agree that there may be situations where it would be appropriate to make the minor's name confidential from the restrained party. Courts can make this determination on a case-by-case basis. This item will remain on the forms.
			PLC appreciates the information sheets that were created and believes they will be very useful for litigants seeking to utilize this protection. PLC believes that the forms are user friendly and does not have any suggestions to change them.	Thank you for your comment.

			caregiver is hired? Please provide guidance in this regard. Regarding the CH-165 Order, the court (at least in orange county) is more inclined to have the court make the redactions when parties are self-represented. We recommend adding a section on the order regarding people who may have access - that the PARTIES are responsible for THOSE copies. For example, the court will continue to make the redacted versions for the court file and the respondent's packet; however, if the court grants the request to allow the school to have access, the party would be responsible for providing the appropriate/applicable copy to the school. This would take some of the responsibility off of the court. For example, if the address is confidential from the respondent, and allegations (5c) are confidential from the school, there would potentially be four+ versions? 1 - Original/Confidential 2 - Redacted Copies 3 - Respondent's Copy 4 - Minor's School 5 - Minor's Childcare Provider	access is desired then “other” could be used to list a specific school or provider. The committees believe that responsibility for redacting the copies for third parties should rest with the same person/entity that is ordered to redact the copies for the court file. Under the rules, the court must consider a number of factors in deciding who should be responsible for redaction. If the court determines that redaction is complicated and that a self-represented litigant does not have the resources to appropriately redact, then the same concerns would likely apply to redaction of copies for third parties.

	Commenter	Position	Comment	Committee Response
			Perhaps, the Request (CH-160) should include a disclosure that the party will be required to provide copies and that the Order (CH-165) include a line item that states that the party is responsible for providing the copies based on item 10b. What would the implementation requirements be for courts—for example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), changing docket codes in case management systems, or modifying case management systems? Procedures would need to be updated to inform court staff on processing these forms. Judicial Officers will need to be informed. Regarding public information, new informational packets will need to be printed when self-represented litigants come to the window and request confidentiality for a minor. Would two months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation? Three to four months would be more reasonable for implementation; however, there may not be a high volume of such requests, which may allow flexibility in implementation. How well would this proposal work in courts of different sizes?	No response required. The committees agree and have included this language.
			9. Item 2. References the incorrect item (9b) twice, it should reference item 8b. Item 2. It is recommended to include the name of the form referenced: form DV-170, Notice of Order Protecting Information of Minor.	9. These changes have been made.
			DV-170 10. Item 1. It is recommended to include DV-130 to the last sentence of this section. To read as follows: Confidential information may be given ONLY to law enforcement to enforce the restraining order (attached form DV-110 or DV-130).	10. The committees have removed the reference to DV-110 and prefers not to reference any form than list the different forms that a restraining order could be issued on.

			14. Item 2. It is recommended to change My Information to Person or Entity Requesting Minor's Confidential Information (to be consistent with order – DV-179)	14. The committees prefer the current heading but have included a checkbox that the applicant would check if they are applying on behalf of an entity.
			15. Item 3 and Item 4 should be switched to be consistent with DV-160 and DV-165.	15. The committees have reformatted this item to make it easier to complete.
			16. Section 3 c. it is recommended to include an option for the requestor to have the ability to attach any forms CIRCLED, if any where attached to DV-165.	16. The committees are concerned that it could lead to inadvertent disclosure of confidential information. For this reason the committees chose not to include this as an option.

			17. Item 5 if the recommendation above to switch Item 3 and Item 4 are approved, the following language will have to reflect item 4: With that in mind, why should the court give you the minor's confidential information you asked for in item 4. For section #5, the request is made on #3 of this form, and the question should read: With that in mind... in item 3?".	17. Based on the reformatting of items 3 and 4, this sentence will now refer to page 2.
			DV-177 18. For item #3, it is recommended to change the wording to "Person this notice was sent to."	18. The committees have changed this item and item 4 to use a second-person point of view (e.g you, your).

You can also find form DV-178 at www.courts.ca. dv-178.pdf. 22. Also, in paragraph 2 of "A blank copy of form DV-178," sentence two should say: If you do not agree with the request to release confidential information, you must complete form DV-178. In the Instructions and Information on Next Steps section: 23. It is recommended that Form DV-176 includes the name of the form: Form DV-176, Request for Release of Minor's Confidential Information. 24. If the recommendations for form DV-176 (above) to switch items 3 and 4 are approved, the last section would have to reference item 4, instead of 3: Take a close look at form DV-176 to see who made the request (item 2) and what confidential information the person is asking the court to release (item 4).	22. 			26. It is recommended that A blank copy form DV-178 section is modified to include the following: If you agree or disagree with the request to release confidential information, you must complete form DV-178 and file it with the court clerk by the deadline listed in item 4 on page 1 of this form DV-177. (Agree is referenced on form DV-178 under Instructions section, under the portion of When to use this form?). DV-178	26. The committees prefer the current language. The instruction on form DV-178 correctly states when the form can be used. The instruction on form DV-177 states when the form must be used (when the person does not agree to the request to release information).
			27. In the "Instructions" section, under the portion of "Who should use this form?" it is recommended to change to: If you are a minor or parent/legal guardian who requested to keep information confidential.	27. This change was made.
			28. In the Instructions section, under What do I need to complete this form? It is recommended to add to the last section: Form DV-175, Cover Sheet for Confidential Information. The committees have revised item 2 to allow the person making the request to indicate if they are appearing on behalf of an entity or business. The committees believe that this change is sufficient to capture when requests are made by entities and not individuals.
			Item 3 a. It is recommended to add "or entity listed": The court denies the request by the person or entity listed in 2 to release minor's confidential information.

Introduction

This proposal recommends adopting one new gun violence restraining order (GVRO) form and revising 18 existing forms. These changes are needed to implement recent amendments in the Penal Code: Assembly Bill 12 allows an officer to file a GVRO in the name of the officer's law enforcement agency and extends the duration of a GVRO to a maximum of five years; Assembly Bill 61 allows an employer, coworker, or school administrator or teacher of a person believed to be dangerous to file a petition requesting a GVRO; and Assembly Bill 1493 authorizes a person who is the subject of a GVRO to submit a form to the court voluntarily relinquishing his or her firearm rights. This memorandum highlights adding an option for nonbinary individuals to forms EPO-002, GV-030, GV-110, and GV-130 for the committee to consider when reviewing this proposal.

Gender neutrality and adding an option for nonbinary individuals pending Department of Justice action

The proposal circulated for public comment from December 13, 2019 to February 11, 2020. Comments were received from a total of 13 commenters. The Civil and Small Claims Advisory Committee members met in person and on the telephone on March 9, 2020, to discuss the comments and make appropriate revisions to the forms. Comment submitted during the public comment period from December 13, 2019 to February 11, 2020 suggested revising the section of the order forms that request description information for the restrained person to change "sex" to "gender" and to add an option for nonbinary individuals. Though the Department of Justice (DOJ), Restraining Order Unit has confirmed that the programming is possible by September 1, 2020, the DOJ has requested additional time to determine official DOJ policy.

Three commenters suggested revising the section of forms GV-030 and GV-130, which ask for descriptive information about the restrained person. The Superior Court of California, County of Los Angeles, and the Joint Rules Subcommittee (JRS) of the Trial Court Presiding Judges Advisory Committee and the Court Executives Advisory Committee suggested either removing the gender options entirely or adding an option for nonbinary individuals. The Giffords Law Center suggested adding a box in the sex category of "Description of Restrained Person" for those who do not identify as male or female to form GV-030. The order forms GV-030 and GV-130 request the sex of the restrained person but only allow an option for male or female. Form GV-100 does not request this information, but one commenter asked whether this information should also be included on this form. Because forms EPO-002 and GV-110 also request the sex of the restrained person, if changes are made to the other order forms, the committee recommends that this form be changed to be consistent.

The proposed changes are consistent with the laws for identity documents in California.[1] The suggestion to remove this item completely from the GVRO forms is not possible because it is a required field in law enforcement databases to assist in identification of the restrained person to enforce the restraining order.

The language on forms EPO-002, item 1, GV-030, under Description of Restrained Person, GV-110, item 2, and GV-130, item 2 is proposed to be revised as follows:

[1] Senate Bill 179 (Atkins; Stats. 2017, ch. 853).

Gender ☐ Male ☐ Female ☐ Nonbinary
or if there is not enough space on the form:
Gender ☐ M ☐ F ☐ X[2]

The DOJ has taken the request to add nonbinary as an option under advisement, and staff is waiting for a policy decision from the executive staff. The materials in your packet contain two versions of forms EPO-002, GV-030, GV-110, and GV-130. Version 1 does not include the revisions to the description of the restrained person, version 2 contains the changes as described below. The committee requests that the Rules and Projects Committee approve both versions of the forms to move forward to the Judicial Council. If the DOJ makes a policy decision before the materials are due to the Judicial Council that allows the gender option to be added to the forms, then version 2 will be recommended to the Judicial Council; if the DOJ does not decide in that time, then version 1 will be recommended to the Judicial Council.

Conclusion

Please consider the issue discussed above in preparation for the Rules and Projects Committee meeting.

The Civil and Small Claims Advisory Committee recommends adopting 1 new gun violence restraining order (GVRO) form and revising 18 existing forms. These changes are needed to implement recent amendments in the Penal Code: Assembly Bill 12,[1] allows an officer to file a GVRO in the name of the officer's law enforcement agency and extends the duration of a GVRO to a maximum of five years; Assembly Bill 61,[2] allows an employer, coworker, or school administrator or teacher of a person believed to be dangerous to file a petition requesting a GVRO; and Assembly Bill 1493,[3] authorizes a person who is the subject of a GVRO to submit a form to the court voluntarily relinquishing his or her firearm rights.

Recommendation

The Civil and Small Claims Advisory Committee recommends that the Judicial Council, effective September 1, 2020:

1. Adopt Consent to Gun Violence Restraining Order and Surrender of Firearms (form GV-125) to implement AB 1493, which amends the Penal Code to allow the subject of a petition to file a form relinquishing his or her firearm rights; and

2. Revise the following forms to implement recent statutory changes legislated in AB 12, AB 61, and AB 1493, and to use gender-neutral terms where appropriate:

    - Gun Violence Emergency Protective Order (form EPO-002)
    - Notice of Court Hearing (form GV-009)
    - Response to Gun Violence Emergency Protective Order (form GV-020)
    - How Can I Respond to a Gun Violence Emergency Protective Order? (form GV-020-INFO)
    - Gun Violence Restraining Order After Hearing on EPO-002 (form GV-030)
    - Petition for Gun Violence Restraining Order (form GV-100)
    - Can a Gun Violence Restraining Order Help Me? (form GV-100-INFO)
    - Notice of Court Hearing (form GV-109)
    - Temporary Gun Violence Restraining Order (form GV-110)
    - Response to Petition for Gun Violence Restraining Order (form GV-120)
    - How Can I Respond to a Petition for a Gun Violence Restraining Order? (form GV-120-INFO)
    - Gun Violence Restraining Order After Hearing (form GV-130)
    - Request to Terminate Gun Violence Restraining Order (form GV-600)
    - Notice of Hearing on Request to Terminate Gun Violence Restraining Order (form GV-610)
    - Response to Request to Terminate Gun Violence Restraining Order (form GV-620)
    - Order on Request to Terminate Gun Violence Restraining Order (form GV-630)
    - Request to Renew Gun Violence Restraining Order (form GV-700)
    - Notice of Hearing on Request to Renew Gun Violence Restraining Order (form GV-710)

The proposed new and revised forms are attached at pages 12–xx.

Relevant Previous Council Action

Gun violence restraining orders were authorized by statute, which was enacted in 2014 and effective January 1, 2016, in response to a mass shooting in Isla Vista, California.[4] The Judicial Council created the majority of the GVRO forms in 2015, effective January 1, 2016, including several of the forms revised in this proposal.[5] The forms that the Judicial Council created in response to SB 1200 (Stats. 2018, ch. 898), which required courts to hold a hearing on an emergency gun violence protective order within 21 days of its issuance, were effective September 1, 2019.[6]

The Judicial Council, effective September 1, 2019, revised 22 GVRO forms to comply with other provisions in SB 1200, which required orders under Penal Code section 18100 et seq. to be referred to as gun violence restraining orders, expanded the definition of ammunition to include a magazine, prohibited a filing fee for GVRO forms and documents, required a law enforcement officer to make a specific request when serving a gun violence restraining order, and provided that parties do not need to pay the sheriff for service of a GVRO.

Analysis/Rationale

Changes to petitioner name to include law enforcement agency

AB 12 (Stats. 2019, ch. 724)[7] authorizes a law enforcement officer to bring a petition for a gun violence restraining order "in the name of the law enforcement agency in which the officer is employed."[8] The purpose of this statutory change is to allow an officer to use the name of the officer's law enforcement agency, rather than the officer's name, when filing a petition so that the law enforcement agency's name appears in the case caption. The individual officer still must sign the form and declare under penalty of perjury that the facts meet the statutory requirements for the restraining order. Item 1 or item 2, as applicable, has been revised on the following forms, to add law enforcement agency as a petitioner in a layout that allows the clerk to easily find and accurately enter the case name using the name of the petitioner, whether an individual or a law enforcement agency: GV-009, GV-030, GV-100, GV-109, GV-110, GV-120, GV-130, GV-600, GV-610, GV-620, GV-630, GV-700, and GV-710.

Bill 12 are enacted and this bill is enacted last, which is the order that the bills were chaptered and enrolled. Assem. Bill 1493 incorporates the changes in Pen. Code, § 18175 from Assem. Bill 12 and Assem. Bill 61.

New categories of petitioners

AB 61 (Stats. 2019, ch. 725) authorizes the following people, in addition to an immediate family member of the subject of the petition, to file a petition for an ex parte, one-year, or renewed GVRO:

> (1) An employer of the subject of the petition.
> (2) A coworker of the subject of the petition, if they had substantial and regular interactions with the subject . . . and have obtained the approval of the employer.
> (3) An employee or teacher of a secondary or postsecondary school that the subject has attended in the last six months, [with] approval of a school administrator or a school administration staff member with a supervisorial role.

(Pen. Code, § 18150.)

Petition for Gun Violence Restraining Order (form GV-100) would be revised to add to item 1a, new categories of petitioners and information or instructions about them: for an employer, the employer's position and name of company; for a coworker who has had substantial and regular interactions with the respondent for at least one year and has obtained permission from his or her employer to file the petition, the name of company; and for an employee or teacher of a secondary or postsecondary school that the respondent has attended in the last six months—and who has obtained approval from a school administrator to file the petition—the name of the school. Form EPO-002 would add to the warning and information section that an "employer, coworker, teacher, or school administrator" may seek a restraining order that lasts between one to five years.

Forms GV-109, GV-110, GV-130, GV-620, GV-700, and GV-710 would be revised to add the additional categories of petitioners and their relationship to the respondent. The information sheets, forms GV-100-INFO and GV-120-INFO would be revised to add the new categories of petitioners. The committee considered adding additional information, but did not go beyond the statutory requirements.

Expanded duration for GVRO and renewal of GVRO

AB 12 (Stats. 2019, ch. 724) changes the duration of a GVRO to "a period of time between one to five years"[9] and changes the renewal of a GVRO from one year to "a duration of between one to five years."[10] It also requires a court, in determining the duration of the GVRO, to consider the length of time that the threat of personal injury is likely to continue and to issue the order based on that determination.[11] Revisions would be made to include the change in duration and, in response to public comment, the revisions mirror the statutory language of "between one to five years."[12] The following forms would be revised to change the existing language that states that the GVRO will last for up to a year: EPO-002, GV-020-INFO, GV-100, GV-100-INFO, GV-110, GV-120, GV-120-INFO, GV-700, and GV-710.

Petition for Gun Violence Restraining Order (form GV-100), item 7, would be revised to allow the petitioner to request a specific number of years, between one and five, for the restraining order to last. And a space would be provided for the petitioner to answer, "Why are you asking for this amount of time?" to provide information for the judge to make an informed decision about the duration of the GVRO in accordance with the statutory requirement that the judge consider the length of time that the person will pose a significant danger of causing personal injury to themselves or another person by possessing a firearm. Also, item 9 would be revised to include that the order will last "between one and five years."

Request for termination of GVRO

AB 12 also allows the restrained person to request a hearing annually to request termination of the GVRO.[13] Revisions consistent with the legislation have been proposed for forms GV-030, GV-130, and GV-600. On Request to Terminate Gun Violence Restraining Order (form GV-600), the instruction "You may make only one request each year that the order is in effect" would be added. And in item 3c, a check box would be added that says, "I have requested the court to terminate the order before, but my request was denied. It has been a year since I made my previous request." The instructions following item 3 would be revised to say that the request to terminate can be made "one time each year" and "one time each year" for any renewal period.

Changes to gender terms

AB 1493 (Stats. 2019, ch. 733) amended the language in Penal Code sections 18115 and 18175 to make it gender neutral. Although doing so is not required by the statute, the Rules and Projects Committee has asked advisory bodies to consider making such changes to Judicial Council forms. The advisory committee proposes to change "he or she" to "person," "himself or herself" to "themself" or "themselves," "his or her" to "their" or "Respondent," and "him or her" to "the officer," or "that person" where they appear on the following forms: GV-020-INFO, GV-030, GV-100, GV-100-INFO, GV-109, GV-110, GV-120, GV-130, and GV-630. On form GV-130, item 6, "No Fee to Serve," "he or she will do it for free" would be revised to "service will be free." Additional changes to the specific section of the forms related to gender of the restrained person is discussed separately below.

Hearing information

In response to a suggestion from a court, a field for the hearing department was added to form EPO-002. With the revision of form EPO-002 to allow the officer to either list the follow-up court date or check the box that a notice of hearing would be sent to the restrained person, forms GV-020 and GV-020-INFO would be revised to reflect that the hearing information may be on form EPO-002.

New type of California Law Enforcement Telecommunication System (CLETS) order for form GV-030

The Department of Justice's California Restraining and Protective Order System (CARPOS) division suggested adding a new GVRO type for form GV-030 to be able to distinguish between emergency protective orders and other types of GVROs in CARPOS. Thus, the footer of the form would be changed from "CLETS-OGV" to "CLETS-HGV."

New form for relinquishment of firearm rights

The committee recommends adopting a new form for relinquishment of firearm rights, rather than revising the existing response form to include relinquishment. A standalone form to relinquish rights and consent to a gun violence restraining order identifies its purpose, providing clarity to the clerk and judicial officer concerning necessary actions, which include removing the hearing from the calendar, entering the GVRO, and entering the relinquishment form promptly into CARPOS.

The proposed new form, Consent to Gun Violence Restraining Order and Surrender of Firearms (form GV-125), has instructions for filing and service, and a reference to the Response to Petition for GVRO (form GV-120) if the respondent wishes to contest the petition. Form GV-125 includes a notice about how and when respondents are required to surrender their guns, ammunition, and magazines. And it includes "Instructions to Clerk," which details how to submit the proposed order to the judicial officer, how to issue a GVRO, the time frame for filing and service, and how to submit the form to CARPOS. Item 3 includes a check box for the respondent to confirm understanding of and agreement with the following:

- The respondent will give up rights to own, possess, or purchase guns, magazines, and ammunition for the time requested in the petition (between one and five years) or, if no time is specified, for one year.
- The respondent will not contest the petition.
- The petitioner can request to renew this order for one to five years.
- The respondent can request to terminate this order only once per year while it is in effect.

Revisions to other forms because of new form GV-125

The advisory committee proposes that forms GV-109, GV-120, and GV-120-INFO be revised to provide information to the respondent about the possibility of relinquishing the respondent's firearm rights and the existence of a form to help the respondent do so.

The advisory committee also proposes that form GV-130 be revised to change the title to Gun Violence Restraining Order After Hearing or Consent to Gun Violence Restraining Order (CLETS-OGV) to acknowledge the new form and the new judicial findings. Form GV-130 would be revised to indicate that a hearing was not held, and to include judicial findings based on the relinquishment form that "Respondent agreed not to have in Respondent's custody or control, own, purchase, possess, or receive a firearm, ammunition, or magazine or attempt to purchase or receive a firearm, ammunition, or magazine until (expiration date): _____." Additional changes would be to add new items specific to notice. Item 8c would be added: "This is an order based on the Respondent's filing a Consent to Gun Violence Restraining Order and Surrender of Firearms (form GV-125). The court will provide notice to all parties" and "Instructions to Clerk" would be added: "This order must be served on all parties by the court, if it is made following the filing of a Consent to Gun Violence Restraining Order and Surrender of Firearms (form GV-125)."

Minor form revisions

The committee proposes other minor form revisions including editing changes on forms GV-020 and GV-120-INFO to fix technical mistakes and formatting.

Policy implications

This proposal revises the GVRO forms to implement legislation that is meant to promote public safety and due process. It also increases judicial efficiency and cooperation between law enforcement and the judiciary.

Comments

The proposal circulated for public comment from December 13, 2019 to February 11, 2020. Comments were received from a total of 13 commenters. The largest number of comments were about changing the name of the new form GV-125, followed by comments suggesting that the demographic information on the petition forms be revised to be gender neutral. There were several commenters who suggested alternate language for some of the forms. Two commenters agreed with the proposal, nine commenters agreed if modified, one commenter, who only commented on the title of form GV-125, did not agree with the proposal, and one commenter did not indicate a position.

Revise the title of form GV-125

Four commenters, two individuals and two advocacy organizations—Brady United and the Giffords Law Center to Prevent Gun Violence—suggested that the title of form GV-125 should be changed from "Relinquishment of Firearm Rights (Gun Violence Prevention)" to "Consent to Gun Violence Restraining Order." The reasons for changing the name of the form are to avoid people misunderstanding the form and to avoid what commenters believe is an unnecessarily broad title. Penal Code section 18175(d)(1) does not require a specific title on the form; it provides "The subject of the petition may file a form with the court relinquishing the subject's firearm rights for the duration specified on the petition or, if not stated in the petition, for one year from the date of the proposed hearing, and stating that the subject is not contesting the petition."

The committee discussed the proposed change to the title and felt that it would be a helpful revision to describe its purpose, but that it needed to be clearer that the restrained person had to relinquish their firearms. The committee determined that "And Surrender of Firearms" should be added to the proposed title to accurately convey the impact of the form. The committee proposes, "Consent to Gun Violence Restraining Order and Surrender of Firearms" for the title of form GV-125. Other forms that refer to form GV-125 by form name would be revised accordingly.

Gender neutrality and adding an option for nonbinary

Three commenters suggested revising the section of forms GV-030 and GV-130, which ask for descriptive information about the restrained person. The Superior Court Los Angeles County, and the Joint Rules Subcommittee (JRS) of the Trial Court Presiding Judges Advisory Committee and the Court Executives Advisory Committee suggested either removing the gender options entirely or adding an option for nonbinary individuals. The Giffords Law Center suggested adding a box in the sex category of "Description of Restrained Person" for those who do not identify as male or female to form GV-030. The order forms GV-030 and GV-130 request the sex of the restrained person but only allow an option for male or female. Form GV-100 does not request this information, but one commenter asked whether this information should also be included on this form. Because form EPO-002 also requests the sex of the restrained person, if changes are made to the other order forms; the committee recommends that this form be changed to be consistent.

The proposed changes are consistent with the laws for identity documents in California.[14] The suggestion to remove this item completely from the GVRO forms is not possible because it is a required field in law enforcement databases to assist in identification of the restrained person to enforce the restraining order.

The language on forms EPO-002, item 1, GV-030 under Description of Restrained Person, GV-100, item 2, and GV-130, item 2, would be revised as follows:

> Gender ☐ Male ☐ Female ☐ Nonbinary
> or if there is not enough space on the form:
> Gender ☐ M ☐ F ☐ X[15]

Law enforcement officer and law enforcement agency as petitioners

The committee drafted the forms with the idea that it is preferable for the officer to file the petition in the name of their law enforcement agency (LEA) because it clearly conveys that it is an agency filing a GVRO, not an individual; it keeps the officer's name out of case indexes and databases as a petitioner, which could be problematic in background checks; it allows the court to search for cases and collect case data by the LEA; and it allows a case to continue seamlessly

[14] Sen. Bill 179 (Atkins; Stats. 2017, ch. 853).

[15] The California Department of Motor Vehicles is using these same gender category codes on California Driver's License and California Identification cards, < https://www.dmv.ca.gov/portal/dmv/detail/dl/gender_id>.

in the name of the LEA when an officer is not employed by that LEA or has a different job assignment.

The Giffords Law Center commented that since a GVRO may be requested in the name of the law enforcement officer or "the name of the law enforcement agency in which the officer is employed,"[16] the forms should allow both options. Newly added Penal Code section 18109(b) states that, "A petition brought by a law enforcement officer may be made in the name of the law enforcement agency in which the officer is employed." The committee originally revised the forms with a line calling for the full name to allow the law enforcement officer (officer) to list either their full name or law enforcement agency (LEA). Staff sent the proposal to a small number of LEAs for their input but did not receive any comments on this issue.

Form EPO-002 requires the officer to declare that there are reasonable grounds for the issuance of an emergency gun violence protective order. It lists the officer's name and LEA, and requires their signature under penalty of perjury. A case is initiated when the LEA transmits form EPO-002 to the court. The documents that are filed subsequently, GV-020 and GV-030, list the "Requesting Agency" as the petitioner.

Form GV-100 lists for the petitioner, "Your full name or name of law enforcement agency." And under the check boxes for more specific information for petitioner, it lists "An officer of a law enforcement agency (A petition may be filed in the name of the law enforcement agency in which the officer is employed. If you listed your full name above, list the name of the law enforcement agency that employs you):" This allows the officer to choose whether to file the petition under the officer's or LEA's name.

The new training requirements for law enforcement in the area of GVROs should help to alleviate any hurdles for law enforcement petitioners by providing instruction on what name to use when initiating a petition. In 2019, the Governor signed GVRO training legislation that requires "each municipal police department and county sheriff's department, the Department of the California Highway Patrol, and the University of California and California State University Police Departments shall, on or before January 1, 2021, develop, adopt, and implement written policies and standards relating to gun violence restraining orders."[17]

Term for restrained person

The Department of Justice commented that in all areas where the forms refer to "Restrained Person" it should be changed to "Respondent." The Giffords Law Center added that the forms could specify that a respondent is a person to be restrained, the first time it shows up on each form. The committee determined that the terms circulated for comment accurately describe the parties and did not make changes based on these comments.

Specific language revisions

Form EPO-002

- Instead of "Permanent order" consider "longer-term order" because it is not a permanent order. The committee understood the reasoning of the commenter and chose to use the language from the statute "Between one to five years."
- Add to the warnings to the restrained person on the front and back, "Law enforcement is required to ask for your firearms." This is necessary to remind law enforcement and to avoid a situation where law enforcement does not ask and the subject retains access to firearms unnecessarily, putting themselves and others at risk. Add on the back, "You must surrender them upon request to law enforcement." The committee added this language.
- Where "searched for" appears, "at the scene" should be added to address existing confusion about whether "searched for" means searching a database or a physical person or location search. The committee added this language.

- Form GV-020
  - In the instructions on the second point, "Fill out this form and take it to the court clerk," change court clerk to "filing clerk" or "the filing window at your local court" to eliminate confusion about where to take the form. The committee does not recommend making this change because they did not believe it necessary to avoid confusion.
- Form GV-100
  - Add name of administrator and employer when they are petitioners. The committee did not make this change because it goes beyond the scope of the law.
- Form GV-100-INFO
  - On page 1, second paragraph, change "You can ask for one if you are connected to the person you think is dangerous as," to "You can ask for one if you regularly have contact with the person you think is dangerous as:" The committee did not revise this language because it is not in line with the statutory requirements.

Alternatives considered

The committee considered creating two additional new forms but, after discussion, opted to revise existing forms. To implement AB 1493, the committee considered amending response form GV-120 and the related information sheet, and it reviewed drafts of revised forms. After consideration, the committee recommends creating a new form, Relinquishment of Firearm Rights (form GV-125). A standalone form to relinquish rights identifies its purpose, providing clarity to the clerk and judicial officer concerning necessary actions—removing the hearing from the calendar, entering the GVRO, sending notice to the petitioner, and entering the relinquishment form into CARPOS. The committee also considered creating a new order form, GVRO on Relinquishment of Firearm Rights, but decided to revise existing order form GV-130. Revising form GV-130 is easier for CARPOS and CLETS programming and enforcement, and using a revised form GV-130 when respondents voluntarily relinquish their firearms rights, as well as when hearings are contested, appears workable.

For the forms that added the new categories of petitioners, especially form GV-100, the committee considered whether to ask who gave the approval for the coworker and the teacher or school administrator to file the GVRO petition,. but decided that requesting that information went beyond what was required by the statute and could be a deterrent to filing.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

Three courts—Superior Courts of Los Angeles, Orange, and San Diego Counties—commented on the implementation process and operational impacts for this proposal. The courts indicated that they would have to update court procedures and case management codes. Training materials would need to be developed and training would be needed for clerical staff, supervisors, legal processing specialists, courtroom clerks, judicial assistants, and judicial officers.

WARNINGS AND INFORMATION

TO THE RESTRAINED PERSON: You are prohibited from owning, possessing, purchasing, receiving, or attempting to purchase or receive a firearm, ammunition, or a magazine. (Pen. Code, § 18125 et seq.) A violation of this order is a misdemeanor punishable by a $1,000 fine or imprisonment for six months or both. (Pen. Code, §§ 19, 18205.) Law enforcement is required to ask for your firearms. You must surrender them on request to law enforcement.

Within 24 hours of receipt of this order, you must turn in all firearms, ammunition, and magazines to a law enforcement agency or sell them to or store them with a licensed firearms dealer until the expiration of this order. (Pen. Code, § 18125 et seq.) A receipt proving surrender, sale, or storage must be filed with the court within 48 hours of receipt of this order, or on the next court business day if the 48-hour period ends on a day when the court is closed. You must also file the receipt with the law enforcement agency that served you with this Order. You may use Proof of Firearms, Ammunition, and Magazines Turned In, Sold, or Stored (form GV-800).

This Gun Violence Emergency Protective Order is effective when made. It will last until the date and time in item 3 on the front. The court will hold a hearing within 21 days to determine if a longer-term order should be issued. If the date and time are not stated in item 4 on the front, you will get a notice with the date and time of the hearing in the mail at the residential address listed on page 1 of this form. If you would like to respond to this order in writing you must use Response to Gun Violence Emergency Protective Order (form GV-020). A family member, employer, coworker, teacher, or school administrator may also seek a gun violence restraining order that lasts from 1 to 5 years from the court.

If you violate this order, you will also be prohibited from having in your custody or control, owning, purchasing, possessing, or receiving, or attempting to purchase or receive, a firearm, ammunition, or magazine for an additional five-year period, to begin on the expiration of the more permanent gun violence restraining order. (Pen. Code, § 18205.)

This protective order must be enforced by all law enforcement officers in the state of California who are aware of it or shown a copy of it. The terms and conditions of this order remain enforceable regardless of the acts or any agreement of the parties; it may be changed only by order of the court.

A LA PERSONA RESTRINGIDA: Tiene prohibido ser dueño de un arma de fuego, municiones o cargadores, o poseer, comprar, recibir, o tratar de comprar o recibir un arma de fuego, municiones o cargadores. (Código Penal, §§ 18125 y siguientes). Una violación de esta orden está sujeta a una multa de $1000 o encarcelamiento de seis meses o ambos. (Código Penal, §§ 19 y 18205.)

Dentro de las 24 horas de recibir esta orden, tiene que entregar sus armas de fuego, municiones y cargadores a una agencia del orden público o venderlos a un comerciante de armas autorizado, o almacenarlos con el mismo hasta el vencimiento de esta orden. (Código Penal, §§ 18125 y siguientes). Se tiene que presentar a la corte una prueba de haberlos entregado, vendido, o almacenado dentro de las 48 horas de recibir esta orden. Se puede usar el formulario GV-800, Prueba de entrega, venta o almacenamiento de armas de fuego, municiones y cargadores, por este propósito.

Esta orden de protección de emergencia de armas de fuego entra en vigencia en el momento en que se emite. Durará hasta la fecha y hora indicadas en el punto 3 de la primera página. Se realizará una audiencia dentro de 21 días para determinar si es necesario emitir una orden que dure por más tiempo. Si la fecha y la hora no se indican en el punto 4 de la primera página, recibirá un aviso con la fecha y la hora de la audiencia por correo a la dirección residencial indicada en la primera página. Si desea responder a esta orden por escrito, tiene que usar el formulario GV-020, Respuesta a la orden de protección de emergencia de armas de fuego. Un miembro de su familia, su empleador, un colega del trabajo, un maestro o profesor, o administrador educativo también puede solicitar al tribunal una orden de restricción más permanente.

Si contraviene esta orden de restricción, se le prohibirá tener en su posesión o control, comprar, poseer o recibir, o tratar de comprar o recibir un arma de fuego, municiones o cargadores por otro periodo de cinco años más, comenzando a partir del vencimiento de la orden de restricción de armas de fuego más permanente. (Código Penal, § 18205.)

Todo agente del orden público del estado de California que tenga conocimiento de la orden o a quien se le muestre una copia de la misma deberá hacer cumplir esta orden de protección. Los términos y condiciones de esta orden se podrán hacer cumplir independientemente de las acciones de las partes; solo la corte podrá cambiar esta orden.

To law enforcement: The Gun Violence Emergency Protective Order must be served on the restrained person by the officer if the restrained person can reasonably be located. Ask the restrained person if he or she has any firearms, ammunition, or magazines in his or her possession or under his or her custody or control. A copy must be filed with the court as soon as practicable after issuance so a hearing can be set, if one was not already scheduled. If the court did not give you a hearing date when issuing the order (to put in item 4 on the front), the court will set a hearing within 21 days and will provide you with notice of the hearing. Also, the officer must have the order entered into the computer database system for protective and restraining orders maintained by the Department of Justice.

The provisions in this temporary Gun Violence Emergency Protective Order do not affect those of any other protective or restraining order in effect, including a criminal protective order. The provisions in another existing protective order remain in effect.

GV-020-INFO How Can I Respond to a Gun Violence Emergency Protective Order?

What is a Gun Violence Emergency Protective Order (form EPO-002)?

It is a court order requested by law enforcement that prohibits someone from having any guns, ammunition, or magazines (any ammunition feeding device). A person who is served with the order must surrender all guns, ammunition, and magazines that person currently owns.

Who can ask for a Gun Violence Emergency Protective Order?

The Gun Violence Emergency Protective Order must have been requested by a law enforcement officer and was issued by a judicial officer based on the statements made under penalty of perjury in the protective order.

I've been served with a Gun Violence Emergency Protective Order (form EPO-002) and a Notice of Court Hearing. What do I do now?

Read the papers served on you very carefully. The Notice of Court Hearing or form EPO-002 tells you when to appear in court and where the court is located. Follow the Gun Violence Emergency Protective Order (form EPO-002) prohibiting you from having any guns, ammunition, or magazines and requiring you to surrender, sell, or store any guns, ammunition, or magazines that you currently own or possess. You must obey the order until the expiration date on the form.

What if I don't obey the emergency protective order?

The police can arrest you. You can go to jail and pay a fine. You may also be prohibited for a longer period of time from having access to firearms and ammunition.

What if I don't want the order to be extended?

If you disagree with the order that has been issued and do not want the court to extend it for a longer time, fill out Response to Gun Violence Emergency Protective Order (form GV-020), before your hearing date. File the form with the court and serve it on the requesting law enforcement agency. You can get the form from legal publishers or on the Internet at www.courts.ca.gov. You also may be able to find it at your local courthouse or county law library.

Will I have to pay a filing fee?

No.

Do I have to serve the other person with a copy of my response?

Yes. Have someone age 18 or older—not you—mail a copy of the completed Response to Gun Violence Emergency Protective Order (form GV-020) to the law enforcement agency that issued the Gun Violence Emergency Protective Order (form EPO-002). (This is called "service by mail.")

The person who serves the form by mail must fill out Proof of Service by Mail (form GV-025). Have the person who did the mailing sign the original form GV-025. Take the completed form back to the court clerk or bring it with you to the hearing.

Should I go to the court hearing?

Yes. You should go to court on the date listed on the Notice of Court Hearing or the Gun Violence Emergency Protective Order (form EPO-002). If you do not go to the hearing, the judge can extend the order against you for a period of time between 1 -5 years without hearing from you.

How Can I Respond to a Gun Violence Emergency Protective Order?

Can I bring a witness to the court hearing?

Yes. You can bring witnesses or documents that support your case to the hearing. But if possible, you should also bring the witnesses' written statements of what they saw or heard. Their statements must be made under penalty of perjury. (You can use Declaration (form MC-030), for this purpose.)

Do I need a lawyer?

Having a lawyer is always a good idea, but it is not required, and you are not entitled to a free, court-appointed attorney. Ask the court clerk about free and low-cost legal services and self-help centers in your county.

How long does the order last?

The Gun Violence Emergency Protective Order (form EPO-002) will last until the expiration date listed on the front of the form in item 3. The court will decide at the hearing whether to issue a gun violence restraining order that can last for a period of time between 1 -5 years.

Will I see the person who asked for the court order at the court hearing?

It's possible the law enforcement officer may appear at the court hearing.

What if I need help to understand English?

When you file your papers, ask your court's clerk or self-help center if your court will provide an interpreter. To request an interpreter, you may use form INT-300. You should also check your local court's website via Find My Court for additional information on how to request an interpreter for a civil matter. If an interpreter is not available for your court date, you should ask someone who is over age 18 to interpret for you.

What if I am deaf or hard of hearing?

Assistive listening systems, computer-assisted real-time captioning, or sign language interpreter services are available if you ask at least five court days before the hearing. Contact the clerk's office or go to www.courts.ca.gov/forms for Request for Accommodations by Persons with Disabilities and Response (form MC-410). (Civ. Code, § 54.8.)

6 Order Prohibiting All Firearms, Ammunition, and Magazines

a. You cannot have in your custody or control, own, purchase, possess, or receive, or attempt to purchase or receive, any firearm or ammunition, including magazines (ammunition feeding devices).

You must:

(1) Surrender all firearms and ammunition, including magazines, in your custody or control or that you possess or own. If a law enforcement officer orders you to surrender all of your firearms and ammunition, including magazines, to the officer, you must do so immediately. If no order to surrender is made by a law enforcement officer, you must surrender all of your firearms and ammunition, including magazines, within 24 hours of being served with this Order. You may do so by:

a. surrendering all of your firearms and ammunition, including magazines, in a safe manner to the local law enforcement agency; or
b. selling all of your firearms and ammunition, including magazines, to a licensed gun dealer; or
c. storing all of your firearms and ammunition, including magazines, with a licensed gun dealer for as long as this Order or any more permanent order granted at the hearing in item 4 is in effect.

(2) Within 48 hours of receiving this Order, file a receipt with the court that proves that your firearms and ammunition have been turned in, sold, or stored. (You may use Proof of Firearms, Ammunition, and Magazines Turned In, Sold, or Stored (form GV-800) for the receipt.) You must also file a copy of the receipt with the law enforcement agency that served you with this order. FAILURE TO FILE THIS RECEIPT IS A VIOLATION OF THIS ORDER.

Warnings and Notices to the Restrained Party

This order is valid until the expiration date and time noted on page 1. If you have not done so already, you must surrender all firearms, ammunition, and magazines that you own or possess in accordance with Section 18120 of the Penal Code. You may not have in your custody or control, own, purchase, possess, or receive, or attempt to purchase or receive, any firearms, ammunition, or magazines while this Order is in effect. Under section 18185, you have the right to request one hearing per year to terminate this Order during its effective period. You may seek the advice of an attorney as to any matter connected with the order.

This is a Court Order.

Violation of this Order is a misdemeanor punishable by a $1,000 fine or imprisonment for six months or both. (Pen. Code, §§ 19, 18205.) If you violate this Order, you will be prohibited from having in your custody or control, owning, purchasing, possessing, or receiving, or attempting to purchase or receive, any firearm, ammunition, or magazine for a period of up to five years. This Order must be enforced by any law enforcement officer in the State of California who is aware of or shown a copy of this Order. The Order remains enforceable regardless of the acts of the parties; it may be terminated only by an order of the court.

Instructions for Law Enforcement

Duties of Officer Serving This Order

The officer who serves this order on the Restrained Person must do the following:

- Ask if the Restrained Person is in possession of any firearms, ammunition, or magazines or has custody or control of any that they have not already turned in.
- Order the Restrained Person to immediately surrender to you all firearms, ammunition, and magazines.
- Issue a receipt to the Restrained Person for all firearms, ammunition, and magazines that have been surrendered.
- Complete a proof of personal service and file it with the court. You may use Form GV-200 for this purpose.
- Within one business day of service, submit the proof of service directly into the California Restraining and Protective Order System (CARPOS), including the serving officer's name and law enforcement agency.

Duties of Agency on Surrender of Firearms, Ammunition, and Magazines

The law enforcement agency that has received surrendered firearms, ammunition, or magazines must do the following:

- Retain the firearms, ammunition, or magazines until the expiration of this Order or of any other gun violence restraining order issued by the court.
- On the expiration of this order or of any later gun violence restraining order issued by the court, return the firearms and ammunition to the Restrained Person as provided by chapter 2 of division 11 of title 4 of the Penal Code (commencing with section 33850). Firearms, ammunition, or magazines that are not claimed are subject to the requirements of section 34000.
- If someone other than the Restrained Person claims title to any of the firearms, ammunition, or magazines surrendered, determine whether that person is the lawful owner. If so, return the firearms, ammunition, and magazines to that person as provided by chapter 2 of division 11 of title 4 of the Penal Code (commencing with section 33850).

Enforcing This Order

The law enforcement officer should determine if the Restrained Person had notice of the order. Consider the Restrained Person "served" (given notice) if:

- The officer sees a copy of the proof of service or confirms that the proof of service is on file;
- The Restrained Person was informed of the order by an officer; or
- Item 7a is checked, the Restrained Person attended the hearing.

This is a Court Order.

Instructions for Law Enforcement

An officer can obtain information about the contents of the order and proof of service in CARPOS. If proof of service on the respondent cannot be verified, the agency must advise the restrained person of the terms of the order and then enforce it (see above: Duties of Officer Serving This Order).

The provisions in this Gun Violence Restraining Order After Hearing on EPO-002 do not affect those of any other protective or restraining order in effect, including a criminal protective order. The provisions in another existing protective order remain in effect.

I request that the court set a hearing in this matter for the purpose of issuing a gun violence restraining order that will last between one and five years.

10 ☐ Temporary Gun Violence Restraining Order

I request that a Temporary Gun Violence Restraining Order (TGV) be issued against the Respondent to last until the hearing. I am presenting Temporary Restraining Order (form GV-110) for the court's signature together with this Petition.

Has the Respondent been told that you were going to court to seek a TGV?

☐ Yes ☐ No (If you answered no, explain why below):

☐ Reasons stated in Attachment 10.

GV-100-INFO Can a Gun Violence Restraining Order Help Me?

These instructions cannot cover all of the questions that may arise in a particular case. If you do not know what to do to protect your rights, you should see a lawyer or a self-help center.

What is a gun violence restraining order?

It is a court order that temporarily prohibits someone from having any guns, ammunition, or magazines (ammunition feeding devices). The person must surrender all guns, ammunition, and magazines that he or she currently owns. The police will come and remove the guns or the person can store them with a licensed gun dealer while the restraining order is in effect. The restrained person also cannot buy any guns, ammunition, or magazines during this time.

Can I get a gun violence restraining order against someone?

You can ask for one if you are connected to the person you think is dangerous as:

1. An immediate family member;
2. An employer;
3. A coworker who has substantial and regular interactions with the person, and has worked with them for at least a year. You must have permission from your employer to ask for this restraining order;
4. An employee or teacher at a school that the person has attended in the last six months, and you have permission from a school administrator or a school administration staff who has a supervisorial role; and/or
5. A law enforcement officer or law enforcement agency.

Immediate family members include:
(1) Your spouse or domestic partner;
(2) Your parents, children, siblings, grandparents, and grandchildren and their spouses, including any stepparent or stepgrandparent;
(3) Your spouse's parents, children (your stepchildren), siblings, grandparents, and grandchildren; and
(4) Any other person who regularly resides in the household, or who, within the last six months, regularly resided in the household.
If you do not have the necessary relationship, advise a law enforcement officer of the situation. The officer may investigate and file the petition if he or she finds that the grounds exist.

Will I have to pay a filing fee to request the order?

No.

Will the order protect me in other ways, such as keeping the person from coming near me?

No, the only order the court can make is to force the person to not have firearms, ammunition, or magazines. If you need personal protection from a family member, you should proceed under the Domestic Violence Prevention Act. See Can a Domestic Violence Restraining Order Help Me? (form DV-500-INFO) for information on how to proceed. For information on other civil restraining orders, please see www.courts.ca.gov/selfhelp-abuse.htm.

What forms do I need to get the order?

You must fill out the following forms:

- Petition for Gun Violence Restraining Order (form GV-100);
- Confidential CLETS Information (form CLETS-001);
- Notice of Court Hearing (form GV-109), items 1 and 2 only; and
- Temporary Gun Violence Restraining Order (form GV-110), items 1 and 2 only.

You may need other local forms. Ask your self-help center or visit your court's website.

Where can I get these forms?

You can get the forms from legal publishers or on the Internet at www.courts.ca.gov. You also may be able to find them at your local courthouse or county law library.

What do I need to do to get the order?

You must go to the superior court in the county where the person to be restrained lives. At the court, ask where you should file your request for a gun violence restraining order. (A self-help center or legal aid association may be able to assist you in filing your request.) Give your forms to the clerk of the court. The clerk will give you a hearing date on the Notice of Court Hearing form.

How soon can I get the order?

You can ask for a Temporary Gun Violence Restraining Order, which will be effective right away if granted. The court may decide whether or not to grant the temporary order based only on the facts that you have stated in your petition. If so, the court will decide within 24 hours whether or not to make the temporary order. Sometimes the court will want to examine you personally under oath. The clerk will tell you whether you should wait to talk to the judge or come back later to find out if the court has signed a temporary order.

If you don't ask for a temporary restraining order, you will have to wait until the hearing, at which the court will decide whether to make an order that will last for a period of time between 1-5 years.

How will the person to be restrained know about the order?

If the court issues a temporary restraining order, someone age 18 or older—not you—must personally "serve" (give) the person to be restrained a copy of the order. The server must then fill out Proof of Personal Service (form GV-200) and give it to you to file with the court. If the person to be restrained attends the hearing, no further proof of service is required. But if they do not attend the hearing, then any order issued at the hearing must also be personally served. For help with service, ask the court clerk for What Is "Proof of Personal Service?" (form GV-200-INFO). Note: A sheriff or marshal can serve the order for free.

Do I need a lawyer?

Having a lawyer is always a good idea, but it is not required and you are not entitled to a free, court-appointed attorney. Ask the court clerk about free and low-cost legal services and self-help centers in your county.

What do I have to prove to get the order?

You will have to convince the judge that the person to be restrained poses a significant danger in the near future of causing personal injury to himself, herself, or another person by having in his or her custody or control, owning, purchasing, possessing, or receiving any firearms, ammunition, or magazines.

You will also have to convince the judge that a gun violence restraining order is needed to prevent personal injury to the person to be restrained or to another person because less restrictive alternatives either have been tried and haven't worked, or are inadequate or inappropriate for the current circumstances.

How can I convince the judge?

You will need to give the judge specific information. You should tell the judge everything that you know about the firearms, ammunition, or magazines that the person to be restrained currently owns, including how many the person owns, the types, and where they are kept.

Then you will need to present facts to show that the person to be restrained is dangerous. This could be information about any threat of violence that the person to be restrained has made, any violent incident in which the person has been involved, or any crime of violence the person has committed. It could also be evidence that the person to be restrained has violated a protective order or abuses controlled substances or alcohol. It could also be evidence of the unlawful and reckless use, display, or brandishing of a firearm or the recent acquisition of a firearm. Or it could be evidence that the person to be restrained has been identified by a mental health provider as someone prohibited from purchasing, possessing or controlling any firearms.

You should include all of this information in your Petition and also be prepared to present it to the judge at the hearing.

GV-100-INFO Can a Gun Violence Restraining Order Help Me?

Do I have to go to court?

Yes. Go to court on the date the clerk gives you.

(1) ☐ GRANTED until the court hearing.
(2) ☐ DENIED until the court hearing. (Specify reasons for denial in b, below.)

Notice of Court Hearing (Gun Violence Prevention) GV-109, Page 1 of 3

Will I see the restrained person at the court hearing?

If the person comes to the hearing, yes. If you are afraid, tell the court officer.

Can I bring someone with me to court?

Yes. You can bring someone to sit with you during the hearing, but that person cannot speak for you in court. Only you or your lawyer (if you have one) can speak for you.

Do I need to bring a witness to the hearing?

Witnesses are not required, but it helps to have more proof than just your word. For example, consider bringing:

- Witnesses
- Written statements from witnesses made under oath
- Photos
- Medical or police reports
- Damaged property
- Threatening letters, emails, or telephone messages

The court may or may not let witnesses speak at the hearing. So, if possible, you should bring their written statements under oath to the hearing. (You can use Declaration (form MC-030) for this purpose.)

How long does the order last?

If the court makes a temporary order, it will last until your hearing date, which must be within 21 days of the date of the temporary order. If at the hearing the court issues a more permanent order, it will last for one to five years. It may be renewed for an additional one to five years.

What if the restrained person does not obey the order?

Call the police. The restrained person can be arrested and charged with a crime.

Can I agree with the restrained person to terminate the order?

No. Once the order is issued, only the judge can change or terminate it. The restrained person would have to file a request with the court to terminate the order.

What if I need help to understand English?

When you file your papers, ask your court's clerk or self-help center if your court will provide an interpreter for you at no cost. If not, you will have to pay a fee for the interpreter. If an interpreter is not available for your court date, you should ask someone who is over age 18 to interpret for you.

What if I am deaf or hard of hearing?

Assistive listening systems, computer-assisted real-time captioning, or sign language interpreter services are available if you ask at least five days before the hearing. Contact the clerk's office or go to www.courts.ca.gov/forms for Request for Accommodations by Persons with Disabilities and Response (Form MC-410). (Civ. Code, § 54.8.)

To the Respondent:

- If you want to oppose the Petition for Gun Violence Restraining Order (form GV-100) in writing, file Response to Petition for Gun Violence Restraining Order (form GV-120) and have someone age 18 or older—not you—mail it to the Petitioner.
- The person who mailed the form must fill out a proof of service form. Proof of Service by Mail (form GV-250), may be used. File the completed form with the court before the hearing and bring a copy with you to the court hearing.
- Whether or not you respond in writing, go to the hearing if you want the judge to hear from you before making an order. You may tell the judge why you agree or disagree with the order requested.
- You may bring witnesses and other evidence.
- At the hearing, the judge may order you to turn in to law enforcement, or sell to or store with, a licensed gun dealer, any firearms, ammunition, or magazines that you own or possess. If issued, the order will last for one year.
- If you do not oppose the petition and are willing to give up your firearm rights, complete and file a Consent to Gun Violence Restraining Order and Surrender of Firearms (form GV-125).

6 Order Prohibiting All Firearms, Ammunition, and Magazines

a. You cannot have in your custody or control, own, purchase, possess, or receive, or attempt to purchase or receive, any firearm or ammunition, including magazines (ammunition feeding devices).

b. The court has received credible information that you own or possess one or more firearms, ammunition, or one or more magazines that have not been surrendered or sold. You must:

(1) Surrender all firearms and ammunition, including magazines, in your custody or control or that you possess or own. If a law enforcement officer orders you to surrender all of your firearms and ammunition, including magazines, to the officer, you must surrender them to the officer. If no order to surrender is made by a law enforcement officer, you must surrender all of your firearms and ammunition, including magazines, within 24 hours of being served with this Order. You may do so by:

a. surrendering all of your firearms and ammunition, including magazines, in a safe manner to the local law enforcement agency; or

b. selling all of your firearms and ammunition, including magazines, to a licensed gun dealer; or

c. storing all of your firearms and ammunition, including magazines, with a licensed gun dealer for as long as this Order or any more permanent order granted at the hearing in item 3 is in effect.

(2) Within 48 hours of receiving this Order, file a receipt with the court that proves that your firearms and ammunition have been turned in, sold, or stored. (You may use Proof of Firearms, Ammunition, and Magazines Turned In, Sold, or Stored (form GV-800) for the receipt.) You must also file a copy of the receipt with the law enforcement agency that served you with this order. FAILURE TO FILE THIS RECEIPT IS A VIOLATION OF THIS ORDER.

Warnings and Notices to the Respondent

To the restrained person: This Order is valid until the expiration date and time noted on page 1. You are required to surrender all firearms, ammunition, and magazines that you own or possess in accordance with section 18120 of the Penal Code and you may not have in your custody or control, own, purchase, possess, or receive, or attempt to purchase or receive, any firearm, ammunition, or magazines while this order is in effect. A hearing will be held on the date and at the time noted on Page 1 to determine if a more permanent gun violence restraining order should be issued. Failure to appear at the hearing may result in a court making an order against you that is valid for a period between one and five years. You may seek the advice of an attorney as to any matter connected with the order. The attorney should be consulted promptly so that the attorney may assist you in any matter connected with the order.

Violation of this Order is a misdemeanor. If you violate this Order, you will be prohibited from having in your custody or control, owning, purchasing, possessing, or receiving, or attempting to purchase or receive, a firearm, ammunition, or magazine for a period of five years. This Order must be enforced by any law enforcement officer in the State of California who is aware of or shown a copy of this Order. The Order remains enforceable regardless of the acts of the parties; it may be changed only by an order of the court.

This is a Court Order.

After You Have Been Served With a Temporary Order

- Obey the order by turning in all firearms, ammunition, and magazines to a law enforcement agency or selling them to or storing them with a licensed gun dealer.
- Read How Can I Respond to a Petition for Gun Violence Restraining Order? (form GV-120-INFO) to learn how to respond to this Order.
- If you do not oppose the petition, fill out Consent to Gun Violence Restraining Order and Surrender of Firearms (form GV-125) and file it with the court clerk.
- If you disagree with the petition, fill out Response to Petition for Gun Violence Restraining Order (form GV-120) and file it with the court clerk.
- You must have form GV-120 served by mail on the Petitioner or the Petitioner's attorney. You cannot do this yourself. The person who does the mailing should complete and sign Proof of Service of Response by Mail (form GV-250). File the completed proof of service with the court clerk before the hearing date or bring it with you to the hearing.
- In addition to the response, you may file and have declarations served, signed by you and other persons who have personal knowledge of the facts. You may use Declaration (form MC-030) for this purpose. It is available from the clerk's office at the court shown on page 1 of this form or at www.courts.ca.gov/forms. If you do not know how to prepare a declaration, you should see a lawyer.
- Whether or not you file a response, you should attend the hearing. If you have any witnesses, they must also go to the hearing.
- At the hearing, the judge can make a gun violence restraining order against you that lasts between one to five years. Tell the judge why you disagree with the order requested.

Instructions for Law Enforcement

Duties of Officer Serving This Order

The officer who serves this order on the Restrained Person must do the following:

- Ask if the Restrained Person is in possession of any firearms, ammunition, or magazines or has custody or control of any that they have not already turned in.
- Order the Restrained Person to immediately surrender to you all firearms, ammunition, and magazines.
- Issue a receipt to the Restrained Person for all firearms, ammunition, and magazines that have been surrendered.
- Complete a proof of personal service and file it with the court. You may use form GV-200 for this purpose.
- Within one business day of service, submit the proof of service directly into the California Restraining and Protective Order System (CARPOS), including the serving officer's name and law enforcement agency.

Duties of Agency on Surrender of Firearms, Ammunition, or Magazines

The law enforcement agency that has received surrendered firearms, ammunition, or magazines must do the following:

- Retain the firearms, ammunition, or magazines until the termination or expiration of this Order or of any other gun violence restraining order issued by the court.
- On the expiration of this Order or of any later gun violence restraining order issued by the court, return the firearms, ammunition, or magazines to the respondent as provided by chapter 2 of division 11 of title 4 of the Penal Code (commencing with section 33850). Firearms, ammunition, or magazines that are not claimed are subject to the requirements of section 34000.

This is a Court Order.

Instructions for Law Enforcement

- If someone other than the Respondent claims title to any of the firearms, ammunition, or magazines surrendered, determine whether that person is the lawful owner. If so, return the firearms, ammunition, or magazines to that person as provided by chapter 2 of division 11 of title 4 of the Penal Code (commencing with section 33850).

Enforcing This Order

The law enforcement officer should determine if the Respondent had notice of the order. Consider the Respondent "served" (given notice) if:

- The officer sees a copy of the proof of service or confirms that the proof of service is on file;
- The Respondent was informed of the order by an officer; or
- The officer sees a filed copy of form GV-125.

An officer can obtain information about the contents of the order and proof of service in CARPOS. If proof of service on the Respondent cannot be verified, the agency must advise the restrained person of the terms of the order and then enforce it (see above: Duties of Officer Serving This Order).

The provisions in this Temporary Gun Violence Restraining Order do not affect those of any other protective or restraining order in effect, including a criminal protective order. The provisions in any other another existing protective order remain in effect.

If a Temporary Gun Violence Restraining Order (form GV-110) was issued, you cannot own or possess any guns, other firearms, ammunition, or magazines. (See item 6 of form GV-110.) You must sell to or store with a licensed gun dealer, or turn in to a law enforcement agency or officer, any guns, other firearms, ammunition, or magazines in your immediate possession or control within 24 hours of being served with form GV-110. You must file a receipt with the court. You may use Proof of Firearms, Ammunition, and Magazines Turned In, Sold, or Stored (form GV-800) for the receipt.

a. ☐ I do not own or control any guns, other firearms, ammunition, or magazines.

b. ☐ I have turned in my guns, other firearms, ammunition, and magazines to a law enforcement officer or agency, or sold them to or stored them with a licensed gun dealer. A copy of the receipt ☐ is attached. ☐ has already been filed with the court.

GV-120-INFO How Can I Respond to a Petition for a Gun Violence Restraining Order?

What is a gun violence restraining order?

It is a court order that temporarily prohibits someone from having any guns, ammunition, or magazines (any ammunition feeding device). The person must surrender all guns, ammunition, and magazines that he or she currently owns.

I've been served with a Petition for Gun Violence Restraining Order. What do I do now?

Read the papers served on you very carefully. The Notice of Court Hearing (form GV-109) tells you when to appear in court. There may also be a Temporary Gun Violence Restraining Order (form GV-110) prohibiting you from having any guns, ammunition, or magazines and requiring you to surrender, sell, or store any guns, ammunition, or magazines that you currently own or possess. You must obey the order until the hearing.

Who can ask for a gun violence restraining order?

The petition must have been filed by a:

- Law enforcement officer or law enforcement agency,
- An employer,
- A coworker who has had "regular interactions" with you for at least a year,
- A teacher or employee of a school that you have attended in the last 6 months, or
- An immediate family member of yours.

Immediate family member is defined by this law to include people who are not blood relatives. The definition includes (1) your spouse or domestic partner; (2) your parents, children, siblings, grandparents, and grandchildren and their spouses, including any stepparent or stepgrandparent; (3) your spouses parents, children (your stepchildren), siblings, grandparents, and grandchildren; and (4) any other person who regularly resides in the household, or who, within the last six months, regularly resided in the household.

What if I don't obey the temporary order?

The police can arrest you. You can go to jail and pay a fine. You could lose access to firearms for a longer period of time.

What if I don't agree with what the order says?

If you disagree with the order that the Petitioner is asking for, fill out Response to Petition for Gun Violence Restraining Order (form GV-120) before your court date and file it with the court. You can get the form from legal publishers or on the Internet at www.courts.ca.gov. You also may be able to find it at your local courthouse or county law library.

What if I don't oppose the Petition?

If you agree to give up your access to firearms and your rights to own, possess, and buy guns, ammunition, and magazines for the time period requested in the petition, which is between one and five years, then you can fill out Consent to Gun Violence Restraining Order and Surrender of Firearms (form GV-125) and check the box for item 4a. Make sure you take it to the court clerk and file it, and then mail it to the person or law enforcement agency that applied for the petition. The court will issue the gun violence restraining order before the hearing and remove the hearing from the calendar. You do not have to go to your court date, and the court will mail you a copy of the order. Make sure you check with the court to see if you have to show up for your court date.

Will I have to pay a filing fee?

No.

Do I have to serve the other person with a copy of my response?

Yes. Have someone age 18 or older—not you—mail a copy of completed Response to Petition for Gun Violence Restraining Order (form GV-120) to the person who asked for the order (or that person's lawyer). (This is called "service by mail.")

The person who serves the form by mail must fill out Proof of Service by Mail (form GV-250). Have the person who did the mailing sign the original. Take the completed form back to the court clerk or bring it with you to the hearing.

GV-120-INFO How Can I Respond to a Petition for a Gun Violence Restraining Order?

Do I need a lawyer?

Having a lawyer is always a good idea, but it is not required, and you are not entitled to a free, court-appointed attorney. Ask the court clerk about free and low-cost legal services and self-help centers in your county.

How long does the order last?

If the court issued a temporary restraining order before the hearing, it will last until your hearing date. At that time, the court will decide whether to issue a gun violence restraining order that can last for one to five years.

Should I go to the court hearing?

Yes. You should go to court on the date listed on Notice of Court Hearing (form GV-109). If you do not go to the hearing, the judge can extend the order against you for a period between one and five years without hearing from you.

Will I see the person who asked for the order at the court hearing?

Assume that the person who is asking for the order will attend the hearing. It is probably best not to talk to them unless the judge or that person's attorney says that you can.

Can I bring a witness to the court hearing?

Yes. You can bring witnesses or documents that support your case to the hearing. But if possible, you should also bring the witnesses' written statements of what they saw or heard. Their statements must be made under penalty of perjury. (You can use Declaration (form MC-030) for this purpose.)

Can I agree with the protected person to terminate the order?

No. Once the order is issued, only the judge can change or terminate it. You would have to file a request with the court to terminate the order.

What if I need help to understand English?

When you file your papers, ask your courts clerk or self-help center if your court will provide an interpreter for you at no cost. If not, you will have to pay a fee for the interpreter. If an interpreter is not available for your court date, you should ask someone who is over age 18 to interpret for you.

What if I am deaf or hard of hearing?

Assistive listening systems, computer-assisted real-time captioning, or sign language interpreter services are available if you ask at least five court days before the hearing. Contact the clerk's office or go to www.courts.ca.gov/forms for Request for Accommodations by Persons with Disabilities and Response (form MC-410). (Civ. Code, § 54.8.)

3 Gun Violence Restraining Order

- By checking this box and signing this form, I agree to give up my right to own, possess, or purchase guns, magazines, and ammunition for the time requested in the petition (between one to five years) or, if no time is specified, then for one year.
- I am not contesting the petition.
- I understand that the petitioner can request to renew this order for one to five years.
- I understand that I can only request to terminate this order once per year while it is in effect.

Case Number:

4 Surrender of Guns, Ammunition, and Magazines

- After you file this form, the court will issue a Gun Violence Restraining Order After Hearing or Consent to Gun Violence Restraining Order and Surrender of Firearms (form GV-130) and send it to you and the petitioner in the mail.
- This form will be listed in the statewide California Restraining and Protective Order System, where it will be accessible to all law enforcement.
- You cannot own or possess any guns, other firearms, ammunition, or magazines. You must sell to or store with a licensed gun dealer, or turn in to a law enforcement agency, any guns, other firearms, ammunition, or magazines in your immediate possession or control within 48 hours of filing this form. You must file a receipt with the court. You may use Proof of Firearms, Ammunition, and Magazines Turned In, Sold, or Stored (form GV-800) for the receipt.

a. ☐ I do not own or control any guns, other firearms, ammunition, or magazines.

b. ☐ I have turned in my guns, other firearms, ammunition, and magazines to a law enforcement officer or agency, or sold them to or stored them with a licensed gun dealer. A copy of the receipt ☐ is attached. ☐ has already been filed with the court.

Instructions to Clerk

- On the filing Consent to Gun Violence Restraining Order and Surrender of Firearms (form GV-125), the clerk must submit the proposed order, Gun Violence Restraining Order After Hearing or Consent to Gun Violence Restraining Order and Surrender of Firearms (form GV-130) to the judicial officer, because the court must issue the order at least five court days before the scheduled hearing, or if this form is filed within five court days before the scheduled hearing, the court must issue, without any hearing, the gun violence restraining order, as soon as possible.
- Within one business day of issuance of the order, submit this form directly into the California Restraining and Protective Order System (CARPOS) or to law enforcement to enter into CARPOS within one business day of receipt from the court.

6 No Fee to Serve

If the sheriff or marshal serves this order, service will be free.

7 Order Prohibiting All Firearms, Ammunition, and Magazines

a. You cannot have in your custody or control, own, purchase, possess, or receive, or attempt to purchase or receive, any firearm, ammunition, or magazine (any ammunition feeding device).

b. You must:

(1) Surrender all firearms and ammunition, including magazines, in your custody or control or that you possess or own. If a law enforcement officer orders you to surrender all of your firearms and ammunition, including magazines, to the officer, you must do so immediately. If no order to surrender is made by a law enforcement officer, you must surrender all of your firearms and ammunition, including magazines, within 24 hours of being served with this Order. You may do so by:

a. surrendering all of your firearms and ammunition, including magazines, in a safe manner to the local law enforcement agency; or

b. selling all of your firearms and ammunition, including magazines, to a licensed gun dealer; or

c. storing all of your firearms and ammunition, including magazines, with a licensed gun dealer for as long as this Order is in effect.

(2) Within 48 hours of receiving this Order, file a receipt with the court that proves that your firearms and ammunition have been turned in, sold, or stored. (You may use Proof of Firearms, Ammunition, and Magazines Turned In, Sold, or Stored (form GV-800) for the receipt.) You must also file a copy of the receipt with the law enforcement agency that served you with this order. FAILURE TO FILE THIS RECEIPT IS A VIOLATION OF THIS ORDER.

8 Service of Order on Respondent

Warnings and Notices to the Respondent

This Order is valid until the expiration date and time noted on page 1. If you have not done so already, you must surrender all firearms, ammunition, and magazines that you own or possess in accordance with section 18120 of the Penal Code. You may not have in your custody or control, own, purchase, possess, or receive, or attempt to purchase or receive, any firearm, ammunition, or magazines while this Order is in effect. Under section 18185, you have the right to request one hearing per year to terminate this Order during its effective period. You may seek the advice of an attorney as to any matter connected with the order.

Violation of this Order is a misdemeanor punishable by a $1,000 fine or imprisonment for six months or both. (Pen. Code, §§ 19, 18205.) If you violate this Order, you will be prohibited from having in your custody or control, owning, purchasing, possessing, or receiving, or attempting to purchase or receive, any firearm, ammunition, or magazines for a period of five years. This Order must be enforced by any law enforcement officer in the State of California who is aware of or shown a copy of this Order. The Order remains enforceable regardless of the acts of the parties; it may be terminated only by an order of the court.

Instructions for Law Enforcement

Duties of Officer Serving This Order

The officer who serves this order on the Restrained Person must do the following:

- Ask if the Restrained Person is in possession of any firearms, ammunition, or magazines or has custody or control of any that they have not already turned in.
- Order the Restrained Person to immediately surrender to you all firearms, ammunition, and magazines.
- Issue a receipt to the Restrained Person for all firearms, ammunition, and magazines that have been surrendered.
- Complete a proof of personal service and file it with the court. You may use form GV-200 for this purpose.
- Within one business day of service, submit the proof of service directly into the California Restraining and Protective Order System (CARPOS), including the serving officer's name and law enforcement agency.

Duties of Agency on Surrender of Firearms and Ammunition

The law enforcement agency that has received surrendered firearms, ammunition, or magazines must do the following:

- Retain the firearms, ammunition, or magazines until the expiration of this order or of any other gun violence restraining order issued by the court.
- On the expiration of this order or of any later gun violence restraining Order issued by the court, return the firearms and ammunition to the Respondent as provided by chapter 2 of division 11 of title 4 of the Penal Code (commencing with section 33850). Firearms, ammunition, or magazines that are not claimed are subject to the requirements of section 34000.
- If someone other than the Respondent claims title to any of the firearms, ammunition, or magazines surrendered, determine whether that person is the lawful owner. If so, return the firearms, ammunition, and magazines to him or her as provided by chapter 2 of division 11 of title 4 of the Penal Code (commencing with section 33850).

This is a Court Order.

Instructions for Law Enforcement

Enforcing This Order

The law enforcement officer should determine if the Respondent had notice of the order. Consider the Respondent "served" (given notice) if:

- The officer sees a copy of the proof of service or confirms that the proof of service is on file; or
- The respondent was informed of the Order by an officer.
- Item 8a or 8c is checked.

An officer can obtain information about the contents of the order and proof of service in CARPOS. If proof of service on the respondent cannot be verified, the agency must advise the restrained person of the terms of the order and then enforce it (see above: Duties of Officer Serving This Order).

The provisions in this Gun Violence Restraining Order After Hearing or Consent to Gun Violence Restraining Order (form GV-130) do not affect those of any other protective or restraining order in effect, including a criminal protective order. The provisions in any other existing protective order(s) remain in effect.

Instructions to Clerk

This order must be served on all parties by the court, if it is made following the filing of a Consent to Gun Violence Restraining Order and Surrender of Firearms (form GV-125).

Clerk stamps date here when form is filed.

DRAFT Not approved by the Judicial Council 3.2.2020

2. TO THE RESTRAINED PERSON (also see important Warnings and Information on page 2):

You are required to surrender all firearms, ammunition, and magazines that you own or possess in accordance with section 18120 of the Penal Code and you may not have in your custody or control, own, purchase, possess, or receive, or attempt to purchase or receive, any firearm, ammunition, or magazine while this order is in effect. However a gun violence restraining order that lasts from 1 - 5 years may be obtained from the court. You may seek the advice of an attorney as to any matter connected with the order. The attorney should be consulted promptly so that the attorney may assist you in any matter connected with the order.

If you have any firearms, ammunition, and magazines, you MUST IMMEDIATELY SURRENDER THEM if asked by a police officer. If a police officer does not ask you to surrender any of the above, within 24 hours of getting this order, you must take them to a police station or a licensed gun dealer to sell or store them and must file a receipt with the court proving that this has been done. You have 48 hours to file a receipt with the court shown to the right. If you do not file a receipt within 48 hours you have violated this order and can go to jail.

WARNINGS AND INFORMATION

TO THE RESTRAINED PERSON: You are prohibited from owning, possessing, purchasing, receiving, or attempting to purchase or receive a firearm, ammunition, or a magazine. (Pen. Code, § 18125 et seq.) A violation of this order is a misdemeanor punishable by a $1,000 fine or imprisonment for six months or both. (Pen. Code, §§ 19, 18205.) Law enforcement is required to ask for your firearms. You must surrender them on request to law enforcement.

Within 24 hours of receipt of this order, you must turn in all firearms, ammunition, and magazines to a law enforcement agency or sell them to or store them with a licensed firearms dealer until the expiration of this order. (Pen. Code, § 18125 et seq.) A receipt proving surrender, sale, or storage must be filed with the court within 48 hours of receipt of this order, or on the next court business day if the 48-hour period ends on a day when the court is closed. You must also file the receipt with the law enforcement agency that served you with this Order. You may use Proof of Firearms, Ammunition, and Magazines Turned In, Sold, or Stored (form GV-800).

This Gun Violence Emergency Protective Order is effective when made. It will last until the date and time in item 3 on the front. The court will hold a hearing within 21 days to determine if a longer-term order should be issued. If the date and time are not stated in item 4 on the front, you will get a notice with the date and time of the hearing in the mail at the residential address listed on page 1 of this form. If you would like to respond to this order in writing you must use Response to Gun Violence Emergency Protective Order (form GV-020). A family member, employer, coworker, teacher, or school administrator may also seek a gun violence restraining order that lasts from 1 to 5 years from the court.

If you violate this order, you will also be prohibited from having in your custody or control, owning, purchasing, possessing, or receiving, or attempting to purchase or receive, a firearm, ammunition, or magazine for an additional five-year period, to begin on the expiration of the more permanent gun violence restraining order. (Pen. Code, § 18205.)

This protective order must be enforced by all law enforcement officers in the state of California who are aware of it or shown a copy of it. The terms and conditions of this order remain enforceable regardless of the acts or any agreement of the parties; it may be changed only by order of the court.

A LA PERSONA RESTRINGIDA: Tiene prohibido ser dueño de un arma de fuego, municiones o cargadores, o poseer, comprar, recibir, o tratar de comprar o recibir un arma de fuego, municiones o cargadores. (Código Penal, §§ 18125 y siguientes). Una violación de esta orden está sujeta a una multa de $1000 o encarcelamiento de seis meses o ambos. (Código Penal, §§ 19 y 18205.)

Dentro de las 24 horas de recibir esta orden, tiene que entregar sus armas de fuego, municiones y cargadores a una agencia del orden público o venderlos a un comerciante de armas autorizado, o almacenarlos con el mismo hasta el vencimiento de esta orden. (Código Penal, §§ 18125 y siguientes). Se tiene que presentar a la corte una prueba de haberlos entregado, vendido, o almacenado dentro de las 48 horas de recibir esta orden. Se puede usar el formulario GV-800, Prueba de entrega, venta o almacenamiento de armas de fuego, municiones y cargadores, por este propósito.

Esta orden de protección de emergencia de armas de fuego entra en vigencia en el momento en que se emite. Durará hasta la fecha y hora indicadas en el punto 3 de la primera página. Se realizará una audiencia dentro de 21 días para determinar si es necesario emitir una orden que dure por más tiempo. Si la fecha y la hora no se indican en el punto 4 de la primera página, recibirá un aviso con la fecha y la hora de la audiencia por correo a la dirección residencial indicada en la primera página. Si desea responder a esta orden por escrito, tiene que usar el formulario GV-020, Respuesta a la orden de protección de emergencia de armas de fuego. Un miembro de su familia, su empleador, un colega del trabajo, un maestro o profesor, o administrador educativo también puede solicitar al tribunal una orden de restricción más permanente.

Si contraviene esta orden de restricción, se le prohibirá tener en su posesión o control, comprar, poseer o recibir, o tratar de comprar o recibir un arma de fuego, municiones o cargadores por otro periodo de cinco años más, comenzando a partir del vencimiento de la orden de restricción de armas de fuego más permanente. (Código Penal, § 18205.)

Todo agente del orden público del estado de California que tenga conocimiento de la orden o a quien se le muestre una copia de la misma deberá hacer cumplir esta orden de protección. Los términos y condiciones de esta orden se podrán hacer cumplir independientemente de las acciones de las partes; solo la corte podrá cambiar esta orden.

To law enforcement: The Gun Violence Emergency Protective Order must be served on the restrained person by the officer if the restrained person can reasonably be located. Ask the restrained person if he or she has any firearms, ammunition, or magazines in his or her possession or under his or her custody or control. A copy must be filed with the court as soon as practicable after issuance so a hearing can be set, if one was not already scheduled. If the court did not give you a hearing date when issuing the order (to put in item 4 on the front), the court will set a hearing within 21 days and will provide you with notice of the hearing. Also, the officer must have the order entered into the computer database system for protective and restraining orders maintained by the Department of Justice.

The provisions in this temporary Gun Violence Emergency Protective Order do not affect those of any other protective or restraining order in effect, including a criminal protective order. The provisions in another existing protective order remain in effect.

Warnings and Notices to the Restrained Party

This order is valid until the expiration date and time noted on page 1. If you have not done so already, you must surrender all firearms, ammunition, and magazines that you own or possess in accordance with Section 18120 of the Penal Code. You may not have in your custody or control, own, purchase, possess, or receive, or attempt to purchase or receive, any firearms, ammunition, or magazines while this Order is in effect. Under section 18185, you have the right to request one hearing per year to terminate this Order during its effective period. You may seek the advice of an attorney as to any matter connected with the order.

This is a Court Order.

Violation of this Order is a misdemeanor punishable by a $1,000 fine or imprisonment for six months or both. (Pen. Code, §§ 19, 18205.) If you violate this Order, you will be prohibited from having in your custody or control, owning, purchasing, possessing, or receiving, or attempting to purchase or receive, any firearm, ammunition, or magazine for a period of five years. This Order must be enforced by any law enforcement officer in the State of California who is aware of or shown a copy of this Order. The Order remains enforceable regardless of the acts of the parties; it may be terminated only by an order of the court.

Instructions for Law Enforcement

Duties of Officer Serving This Order

The officer who serves this order on the Restrained Person must do the following:

- Ask if the Restrained Person is in possession of any firearms, ammunition, or magazines or has custody or control of any that they have not already turned in.
- Order the Restrained Person to immediately surrender to you all firearms, ammunition, and magazines.
- Issue a receipt to the Restrained Person for all firearms, ammunition, and magazines that have been surrendered.
- Complete a proof of personal service and file it with the court. You may use Form GV-200 for this purpose.
- Within one business day of service, submit the proof of service directly into the California Restraining and Protective Order System (CARPOS), including the serving officer's name and law enforcement agency.

Duties of Agency on Surrender of Firearms, Ammunition, and Magazines

The law enforcement agency that has received surrendered firearms, ammunition, or magazines must do the following:

- Retain the firearms, ammunition, or magazines until the expiration of this Order or of any other gun violence restraining order issued by the court.
- On the expiration of this order or of any later gun violence restraining order issued by the court, return the firearms and ammunition to the Restrained Person as provided by chapter 2 of division 11 of title 4 of the Penal Code (commencing with section 33850). Firearms, ammunition, or magazines that are not claimed are subject to the requirements of section 34000.
- If someone other than the Restrained Person claims title to any of the firearms, ammunition, or magazines surrendered, determine whether that person is the lawful owner. If so, return the firearms, ammunition, and magazines to that person as provided by chapter 2 of division 11 of title 4 of the Penal Code (commencing with section 33850).

Enforcing This Order

The law enforcement officer should determine if the Restrained Person had notice of the order. Consider the Restrained Person "served" (given notice) if:

- The officer sees a copy of the proof of service or confirms that the proof of service is on file;
- The Restrained Person was informed of the order by an officer; or
- Item 7a is checked, the Restrained Person attended the hearing.

This is a Court Order.

Instructions for Law Enforcement

An officer can obtain information about the contents of the order and proof of service in CARPOS. If proof of service on the respondent cannot be verified, the agency must advise the restrained person of the terms of the order and then enforce it (see above: Duties of Officer Serving This Order).

The provisions in this Gun Violence Restraining Order After Hearing on EPO-002 do not affect those of any other protective or restraining order in effect, including a criminal protective order. The provisions in another existing protective order remain in effect.

This Order expires at the end of the hearing scheduled for the date and time below:

Date: _____ Time: _____ ☐ a.m. ☐ p.m.

This is a Court Order.

4 Findings

☐ Having examined ☐ Petitioner ☐ and other witnesses under oath,

☐ Having considered the declarations of ☐ Petitioner ☐ and other witnesses under penalty of perjury,

a. The court finds that there is a substantial likelihood that both of the following are true:

(1) Respondent poses a significant danger in the near future of causing personal injury to themself or another person by having in their custody or control, owning, purchasing, possessing, or receiving firearms, ammunition, or magazines.

(2) A temporary gun violence restraining order is necessary to prevent personal injury to Respondent or to another person because less restrictive alternatives either have been tried and found to be ineffective, or have been determined to be inadequate or inappropriate for the current circumstances.

b. ☐ The court has received credible information that Respondent owns or possesses one or more firearms, ammunition, or magazines.

c. ☐ The facts as stated in the Petition and supporting documents, which are incorporated here by reference, establish sufficient grounds for the issuance of this Order. And for the reasons stated below.

☐ See the attached Attachment (form MC-025).

6 Order Prohibiting All Firearms, Ammunition, and Magazines

a. You cannot have in your custody or control, own, purchase, possess, or receive, or attempt to purchase or receive, any firearm or ammunition, including magazines (ammunition feeding devices).

b. The court has received credible information that you own or possess one or more firearms, ammunition, or one or more magazines that have not been surrendered or sold. You must:

(1) Surrender all firearms and ammunition, including magazines, in your custody or control or that you possess or own. If a law enforcement officer orders you to surrender all of your firearms and ammunition, including magazines, to the officer, you must do so immediately. If no order to surrender is made by a law enforcement officer, you must surrender all of your firearms and ammunition, including magazines, within 24 hours of being served with this Order. You may do so by:

a. surrendering all of your firearms and ammunition, including magazines, in a safe manner to the local law enforcement agency; or
b. selling all of your firearms and ammunition, including magazines, to a licensed gun dealer; or
c. storing all of your firearms and ammunition, including magazines, with a licensed gun dealer for as long as this Order or any more permanent order granted at the hearing in item 3 is in effect.

(2) Within 48 hours of receiving this Order, file a receipt with the court that proves that your firearms and ammunition have been turned in, sold, or stored. (You may use Proof of Firearms, Ammunition, and Magazines Turned In, Sold, or Stored (form GV-800) for the receipt.) You must also file a copy of the receipt with the law enforcement agency that served you with this order. FAILURE TO FILE THIS RECEIPT IS A VIOLATION OF THIS ORDER.

Warnings and Notices to the Respondent

To the restrained person: This Order is valid until the expiration date and time noted on page 1. You are required to surrender all firearms, ammunition, and magazines that you own or possess in accordance with section 18120 of the Penal Code and you may not have in your custody or control, own, purchase, possess, or receive, or attempt to purchase or receive, any firearm, ammunition, or magazines while this order is in effect. A hearing will be held on the date and at the time noted on Page 1 to determine if a more permanent gun violence restraining order should be issued. Failure to appear at the hearing may result in a court making an order against you that is valid for a period between one and five years. You may seek the advice of an attorney as to any matter connected with the order. The attorney should be consulted promptly so that the attorney may assist you in any matter connected with the order.

Violation of this Order is a misdemeanor. If you violate this Order, you will be prohibited from having in your custody or control, owning, purchasing, possessing, or receiving, or attempting to purchase or receive, a firearm, ammunition, or magazine for a period of five years. This Order must be enforced by any law enforcement officer in the State of California who is aware of or shown a copy of this Order. The Order remains enforceable regardless of the acts of the parties; it may be changed only by an order of the court.

This is a Court Order.

After You Have Been Served With a Temporary Order

- Obey the order by turning in all firearms, ammunition, and magazines to a law enforcement agency or selling them to or storing them with a licensed gun dealer.
- Read How Can I Respond to a Petition for Gun Violence Restraining Order? (form GV-120-INFO) to learn how to respond to this Order.
- If you do not oppose the petition, fill out Consent to Gun Violence Restraining Order and Surrender of Firearms (form GV-125) and file it with the court clerk.
- If you disagree with the petition, fill out Response to Petition for Gun Violence Restraining Order (form GV-120) and file it with the court clerk.
- You must have form GV-120 served by mail on the Petitioner or the Petitioner's attorney. You cannot do this yourself. The person who does the mailing should complete and sign Proof of Service of Response by Mail (form GV-250). File the completed proof of service with the court clerk before the hearing date or bring it with you to the hearing.
- In addition to the response, you may file and have declarations served, signed by you and other persons who have personal knowledge of the facts. You may use Declaration (form MC-030) for this purpose. It is available from the clerk's office at the court shown on page 1 of this form or at www.courts.ca.gov/forms. If you do not know how to prepare a declaration, you should see a lawyer.
- Whether or not you file a response, you should attend the hearing. If you have any witnesses, they must also go to the hearing.
- At the hearing, the judge can make a gun violence restraining order against you that lasts between one to five years. Tell the judge why you disagree with the order requested.

Instructions for Law Enforcement

Duties of Officer Serving This Order

The officer who serves this order on the Restrained Person must do the following:

- Ask if the Restrained Person is in possession of any firearms, ammunition, or magazines or has custody or control of any that they have not already turned in.
- Order the Restrained Person to immediately surrender to you all firearms, ammunition, and magazines.
- Issue a receipt to the Restrained Person for all firearms, ammunition, and magazines that have been surrendered.
- Complete a proof of personal service and file it with the court. You may use form GV-200 for this purpose.
- Within one business day of service, submit the proof of service directly into the California Restraining and Protective Order System (CARPOS), including the serving officer's name and law enforcement agency.

Duties of Agency on Surrender of Firearms, Ammunition, or Magazines

The law enforcement agency that has received surrendered firearms, ammunition, or magazines must do the following:

- Retain the firearms, ammunition, or magazines until the termination or expiration of this Order or of any other gun violence restraining order issued by the court.
- On the expiration of this Order or of any later gun violence restraining order issued by the court, return the firearms, ammunition, or magazines to the respondent as provided by chapter 2 of division 11 of title 4 of the Penal Code (commencing with section 33850). Firearms, ammunition, or magazines that are not claimed are subject to the requirements of section 34000.

This is a Court Order.

Instructions for Law Enforcement

- If someone other than the Respondent claims title to any of the firearms, ammunition, or magazines surrendered, determine whether that person is the lawful owner. If so, return the firearms, ammunition, or magazines to that person as provided by chapter 2 of division 11 of title 4 of the Penal Code (commencing with section 33850).

Enforcing This Order

The law enforcement officer should determine if the Respondent had notice of the order. Consider the Respondent "served" (given notice) if:

- The officer sees a copy of the proof of service or confirms that the proof of service is on file; or
- The Respondent was informed of the order by an officer.

An officer can obtain information about the contents of the order and proof of service in CARPOS. If proof of service on the Respondent cannot be verified, the agency must advise the restrained person of the terms of the order and then enforce it (see above: Duties of Officer Serving This Order).

The provisions in this Temporary Gun Violence Restraining Order do not affect those of any other protective or restraining order in effect, including a criminal protective order. The provisions in another existing protective order remain in effect.

Warnings and Notices to the Respondent

This Order is valid until the expiration date and time noted on page 1. If you have not done so already, you must surrender all firearms, ammunition, and magazines that you own or possess in accordance with section 18120 of the Penal Code. You may not have in your custody or control, own, purchase, possess, or receive, or attempt to purchase or receive, any firearm, ammunition, or magazines while this Order is in effect. Under section 18185, you have the right to request one hearing per year to terminate this Order during its effective period. You may seek the advice of an attorney as to any matter connected with the order.

Violation of this Order is a misdemeanor punishable by a $1,000 fine or imprisonment for six months or both. (Pen. Code, §§ 19, 18205.) If you violate this Order, you will be prohibited from having in your custody or control, owning, purchasing, possessing, or receiving, or attempting to purchase or receive, any firearm, ammunition, or magazines for a period of five years. 1.	Ruth Borenstein Individual	AM	The name of GV-125 should be changed to "Consent to GVRO Order" to avoid being overly broad.	The committee appreciates your comment and agrees with your suggestion and has incorporated it with a minor change to make the title of GV-125 "Consent to Gun Violence Restraining Order and Surrender of Firearms" to convey the impact of the form.
2.	Brady United By Mattie Scott, CA. State President	AM	SW 125, title should be changed to "Consent to Gun Violence Restraining Order" to protect women, children and families who die every day in our nation in domestic abuse situations. I lost my friend and her daughter last year in Antioch California to gun violence. Too many lives are lost to gun violence in domestic situations.	The committee appreciates your comment and agrees with your suggestion and has incorporated it with a minor change to make the title of GV-125 "Consent to Gun Violence Restraining Order and Surrender of Firearms" to convey the impact of the form.
3.	California Department of Justice By Rebekah Lee Associate Governmental Program Analyst	AM	Suggested changes to verbiage in bold. Other suggested changes in italics. 1. Epo-002 gun violence emergency protective order (p. 12) question #4 up to five years a period of time between one to five years. 2. Gv-020 response to gun violence emergency protective order (p. 15) in the box area: at the hearing, the court may make an order against you for one year a period of time change to between one to five years. 3. Gv-020-info how can i respond to a gun violence emergency protective order	The committee appreciates the comments from the Department of Justice. The committee understands that Penal Code section 18170(a) states that the time frame for a GVRO is between one to five years and will modify the GVRO forms accordingly so that there is no confusion about the time frame. The committee agrees with this suggestion and has modified its proposal.

			• GV-020 - Response to Gun Violence Emergency Protective Order o Page 15: "Use this form if you do not want the court to extend the Gun Violence Emergency Protective Order for a longer period." -- "For a longer period" is vague Please indicate that the court can make an order for 1-5 years. We suggest that universally where the forms refer to the duration of the order after hearing. o Page 15: The three points at the top under "Use this form if you do not want the court to extend the Gun Violence Emergency Protective Order for a longer period" should be numbered. Do you have to do all three? Make that clear. □ On the second point ("Fill out this form and take it to the court clerk.") --- • There is significant confusion about which clerk and where to take the forms. Consider clarifying language such as : the filing clerk or the filing window at your local court. □ On the third point ("Have someone age 18 or older - not you - mail a copy of this form and any attached pages to the law enforcement agency that applied for the EPO-002.) --- • Consider replacing "EPO-002" with the name of the form ("Gun Violence Emergency Protective Order") or including the number and the form. In some cases, two EPOs may be issued (EPO-001 and EPO-002) so additional clarification may be particularly helpful.	The committee agrees with this suggestion and has modified its proposal. The committee agrees with this suggestion and has modified its proposal. The committee discussed this suggestion and appreciates the alternate suggestions but decided to leave the language because the committee members did not see this problem in their courts and each court has a different procedure so changing the language could lead to more confusion rather than less. The committee can revise the form to include the form name and form number for clarity for EPO-002. See the answer above regarding law enforcement agency and officer.

			o Page 15: "(1.) Requesting Agency" – Confusing re: who the requesting agency is if the officer is named. Change to "Requesting officer and/or agency listed on the original order." o Page 15: "(2.) Restrained Person… (b.) Your address (If you have a lawyer, give your lawyer's information. You do not have to give telephone, fax, or e-mail address.)" --- Does that last part ("You do not have to give telephone, fax, or e-mail address) apply if they're giving their own information, or just if they're giving their lawyer's information? It's unclear.	The committee appreciates the comment but declines to make changes to this item because the protective order forms have uniform language in this section. The Protective Order Working Group, a joint working group of the Civil and Small Claims Advisory Committee and the Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee, is undertaking a redesign of the protective order series of forms. This comment will be incorporated into a future proposal. The committee agrees with this suggestion and has modified its proposal.

I do not agree that a gun violence restraining order should be issued because…" -- It's confusing that this language is different from the language at the very top of the form ("Use this form if you do not want the court to extend the Gun Violence Emergency Protective Order for a longer period"). Consider changing to something like "I do not agree that the gun violence restraining order should be extended for 1-5 years…" Also consider adding "(explain)" at the end (as in (4.)). o Page 16: Delete the checkmark box before "Denial, Justification, or Excuse."	The committee agrees with this suggestion and has modified its proposal. The committee appreciates the comment but declines to make changes to this item because this is an optional item for the respondent and the checkbox indicates that they opt to complete this section or not.

			o Page 16: Under "(5.) Consider swapping them and/or changing 3rd sentence ("You must surrender any of these items in your possession to law enforcement when they ask you to do so") to "You must surrender any of these items in your possession to law enforcement if and when they ask you to do so." Consider also deleting "immediate" from the 4th sentence. ▯ (b.) 			o What if I don't obey the emergency protective order should include the following: "You may also be prohibited for a longer period of time from having access to firearms."	The committee agrees with this suggestion and has modified its proposal.
			o What if I don't agree with what the order says? Consider changing it to "What if I don't want the order extended?" Then, "The order cannot be changed until the hearing. If you do not want the court to extend the order for 1-5 years, fill out…."	The committee agrees with this suggestion and has modified its proposal.
			o Should I go to the court hearing? Delete for up to five years and insert for 1-5 years. Same with "How long does the order last?"

			o Page 19: Consider adding a box in the Sex category of "Description of Restrained Person" for those who do not identify as male or female.	The committee does not recommend making these changes because they go beyond the scope of the legislation.

This might be confusing for those who have roommates or atypical housing arrangements. Making it its own # might fix this.	The committee appreciates the feedback but prefers to leave it in its present form because all of the steps may not be exactly the same for each person and it may create more confusion if it looks like it is mandatory in the form of a checklist.

You must file a receipt with the court. You may use form GV-800, Proof of Firearms Turned In, Sold, or Stored for the receipt.” ▯ What does “immediate possession or control” mean? ▯ “Other firearms”: What is a firearm other than a gun? ▯ Licensed gun dealer in state of filing? Which law enforcement agency? ▯ Does “may use” indicate that GV-800 is optional? If so, what suffices for an acceptable receipt? ▯ How soon must the respondent file a receipt with the court? Can the receipt be filed concurrently	The committee agrees with this suggestion and has modified its proposal. See the answer above regarding law enforcement agency and officer. The committee does not choose to adopt this edit at this time. The committee appreciates the comments and notes that the chosen language follows the language from Penal Code sections 18100 et seq. to provide the required legal warnings to the parties. Penal Code section 18120(b)(5) specifies that the person shall file a receipt within 48 hours after being served with the order.

Must the receipt be attached to this form? o Pg. 40 (check box): "I have turned in my guns, other firearms, ammunition, and magazines to a law enforcement officer or agency, or sold them to or stored them with a licensed gun dealer." ▯ This language mentions the option of turning in to a law enforcement officer--as opposed to agency--for the first time in this form. Preceding paragraph did not include this. Consider adding "officer" above.	The committee agrees with this suggestion and has modified its proposal.
			• GV-120-INFO o Pg. 41: "It is a court order that prohibits someone from having any guns, ammunition, or magazines (any ammunition feeding device). ▯ Consider defining all three terms, esp. given the potential confusion over a non-gun firearm as noted above.	The Protective Order Working Group is redesigning the information sheets for the protective order series of forms. This comment will be incorporated into a future proposal. 7.	Los Angeles City Attorney’s Office By Amanda Wong, Deputy City Attorney	A	Generally agree with changes with a few comments: GV-110 Item 6(b)(1) - recommend changing proposed language "If a law enforcement officer orders you to surrender all of your firearms and ammunition, including magazines, to the officer, you must do so immediately" to "If a law enforcement officer orders you to surrender all your firearms and ammunition, including magazines, you must immediately surrender them to the officer." The current language is slightly ambiguous and open to interpretation as law enforcement officers may interpret the language as currently phrased to permit them to: (1) serve but do not request surrender of firearms; (2) serve and request surrender, but when subject refuses, they advise them to surrender to law enforcement or firearms dealer within 24 hours; or (3) serve but never request immediate surrender of firearms and inform the subject they may surrender firearms within 24 hours to law enforcement or firearms dealer. 			GV-100 and GV-110 Items 8 and 5 - What is the legal authority for sheriff serving for free? Have had some feedback that sheriff can charge $35 service fee.	Senate Bill 1200 (Stats. 2018, ch. 898), amended Government Code section 6103.2 to add GVRO's to the list types of orders that are served without a fee. 8.	Los Angeles County Counsel By Alyssa Skolnick Deputy County Counsel	AM	On behalf of the Los Angeles Department of Children and Family Services Our only suggestion would be to modify the term "Restrained Person" to "Person to be Restrained". It's thought that some of our clients who might be applying for GVRO might find the form to be confusing. If an individual is just starting the process of applying for a GVRO, they might get confused by the term "Restrained Person" as no one has been restrained yet. As such, changing the term "Restrained Person" to "Person to be Restrained" might make it easier for an applicant to understand the form.	"Person to be Restrained" is currently used on all forms that are prior to a restraining order. After an order is issued, then the forms refer to "Restrained Person."

			As for the proposal itself, the categorization of the new forms and what assembly bill the category is addressing makes the proposal very clear and organized. Are the forms easy for users, especially self-represented litigants, to understand? Yes, the forms are at an appropriate reading level. Do you have any suggestions for improving their usability or readability? Yes. Page 3 of the GV-100-INFO shows an image of the GV-109. The line coming down across the page makes it seem like it should be disregarded. I would instead circle or draw an arrow where the date is entered for clarity. Yes, for GV-120-INFO, the included questions would indeed help a litigant or party in understanding what a restraining order is. However, there should be an additional sheet detailing the case flow of the order. Both parties (the respondent and petitioner) should know the steps of the filed protective order, and the subsequent hearings that will potentially follow. What would the implementation requirements be for courts—for example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), changing docket codes in case management systems, or modifying case management systems?	The committee appreciates this feedback. 			The implementation requirements for the court include training of courtroom clerks and case processing staff. Procedures would need to be revised to reflect the new titles. New filings would need to be added to the case management system and tested for validation prior to deployment. The approximate level of effort is estimated at 8 hours FTE by a Program Coordinator Specialist over approximately one month to test filing types, revise procedures, approve through workflow, train and implement. Implementation requirements of these new forms would be training for Legal Processing Specialists and Courtroom Clerks. Staff would need to be familiar with the new filing type (a new type would also need to be created in our case management system) and be informed of the revisions. Aside from the new filing type, courtroom staff would simply need to be notified of the minor changes regarding who are qualified petitioners/filers. Also, procedures would need to be changed reflecting the new file type and filing form names. Would two months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation? Because of the multiple forms being revised, multiple procedures would be affected. Moreover, reference sheets and informational packets to the public will need to be created. A minimum of 3 months would be needed for needed development and supervisor approval. More time would be preferable for implementation of this proposal, if that were possible.	The committee appreciates this useful information about implementation procedures. The committee appreciates the information about implementation. The timeframe from Judicial Council approval until the effective date will provide three months of time for implementation.

13.	Mrs. Kath Tsakalakis	N	The proposal for GV-125 title should be changed to "Consent to Gun Violence Restraining Order." It should not refer to "Relinquishment of Firearm Rights." The person is only consenting to a restraining order that would apply for a limited time - they are not giving up their firearm rights, this makes it sound like a sweeping statement, in perpetuity. Thank you.	The committee appreciates your comment and agrees with your suggestion and has incorporated it with a minor change to make the title of GV-125 "Consent to Gun Violence Restraining Order and Surrender of Firearms" to convey the impact of the form.

Title Protective Orders: Elder or Dependent Adult Abuse Prevention Forms	Action Requested Review and submit comments by June 9, 2020
Proposed Rules, Forms, Standards, or Statutes Revise forms EA-100, EA-120, and EA-130	Proposed Effective Date January 1, 2021
Proposed by Civil and Small Claims Advisory Committee Hon. Ann I. Jones, Chair	Contact Kristi Morioka, Attorney, 916-643-7056, kristi.morioka@jud.ca.gov

Executive Summary and Origin

Assembly Bill 1396 (Obernolte; Stats. 2019, ch. 628) provides that a court, when issuing an order for elder or dependent adult abuse prevention, may, if appropriate, also issue an order requiring the restrained party to attend mandatory clinical counseling or anger management courses. The legislation also requires the Judicial Council to revise or adopt forms to do so. The Civil and Small Claims Advisory Committee recommends revising three mandatory elder or dependent adult abuse prevention forms to implement this legislation.

Background

Elder or dependent adult abuse is a significant problem for a large portion of the population in California. In 2009, the California Senate Office of Oversight and Outcomes reported that 13 percent of all complaints to the California Office of the State Long-Term Care Ombudsman involved abuse, gross neglect, or exploitation—over twice the national rate of 5 percent.[1] A bill to create a civil action for elder or dependent adult abuse prevention was passed in 1992 (Sen. Bill 679 (Mello); Stats. 1991, ch. 774). The author of AB 1396, Assembly Member Jay Obernolte (R-Hesperia), states that elder or dependent adult abuse prevention (elder abuse) cases and domestic violence prevention cases are similar "in that almost 60% of elder and dependent adult abuse and neglect incidents, the perpetrator is a family member. However, in domestic violence cases more tools are available to prevent reoccurrence of the abuse."[2]

[1] California Senate Office of Oversight and Outcomes, California's Elder Abuse Investigators: Ombudsmen Shackled by Conflicting Laws and Duties (Nov. 3, 2009), p. 7.

[2] Jay Obernolte, Fact Sheet Assembly Bill 1396—Elder Abuse Prevention Programs (no date), p. 1.

The goal of AB 1396 is to help prevent ongoing elder and dependent adult abuse by giving judges the ability to order the restrained person to attend clinical counseling or to enroll in anger management courses.[3]

Different prevention tool provided in domestic violence restraining order cases

In domestic violence restraining order (DVRO) cases, a court may order that the restrained person complete a certified 52-week batterer intervention program that has been approved by the probation department.[4] Batterer intervention programs (BIPs) were created to address the unique challenges of domestic violence cases. Courts can order a restrained person to attend a BIP in a civil DVRO case and that person is required as a condition of probation to complete a BIP if convicted of domestic violence in criminal court. Until recently, the required length of certified programs was at least 52 weeks. Currently, there are six counties piloting alternative lengths of programming.[5]

AB 1396 does not include BIPs as a treatment option. Anger management courses generally do not address coercive behaviors and power dynamics. Instead, the focus is on preventing loss of control. AB 1396 also authorizes the court to order the restrained party to participate in clinical counseling, which could address other issues such as mental health issues or substance use disorders.

The Proposal

This proposal would add items to the elder or dependent adult abuse prevention forms to reflect the new types of orders a judge may consider under AB 1396. The following forms are proposed to be revised:

- Request for Elder or Dependent Adult Abuse Restraining Orders (form EA-100);
- Response to Request for Elder or Dependent Adult Abuse Restraining Orders (form EA-120); and
- Elder or Dependent Adult Abuse Restraining Order After Hearing (CLETS-EAR or EAF) (form EA-130).

The recommended revisions are discussed below.

Request for Elder or Dependent Adult Abuse Restraining Orders (form EA-100) would be revised to add an item that allows the protected person to request that the restrained party be ordered to attend clinical counseling or anger management courses (item 14). The statute requires specific provider types to deliver the clinical counseling or anger management courses, which are listed in the item. The description of abuse would be moved from item 10 to item 8 so the relevant information the judge considers when reviewing the petition is grouped together.

[4] Fam. Code, § 6343.

[5] Assembly Bill 372 (Stats. 2018, ch. 290) authorized the creation of alternative pilot programs.

And the items following would be renumbered accordingly. The committee also would revise the order of the items to move the description of abuse higher on the form because it is important information to have closer to the beginning of the form.

Response to Request for Elder or Dependent Adult Abuse Restraining Orders (form EA-120) would be revised to add an item with check boxes (item 7) for the party responding to the petition to respond to these orders requested by the protected person on form EA-100. This item is modeled after existing items on form EA-120 that allow the respondent to indicate whether the respondent agrees or disagrees with the orders requested or agrees to other orders that are specified.

Elder or Dependent Adult Abuse Restraining Order After Hearing (CLETS-EAR or EAF) (form EA-130) would be revised to include an option (item 9) for the judge to order clinical counseling or an anger management course and a required date of enrollment or a default of 30 days if there is no date specified. In addition, there is an option to allow a judge to order a person to submit proof of completion of clinical counseling or an anger management course or appear for a hearing on a specified date.

Alternatives Considered

The committee considered including on form EA-100 the option for the petitioner to request either clinical counseling or anger management, and to provide lines for the petitioner to explain why they made the specific request. However, the committee thought that the petitioner might not understand the distinction between clinical counseling and anger management courses or know what is appropriate in the circumstances. The committee requests comments on whether the petitioner should be able to request either clinical counseling or anger management courses, and whether there should be a line asking for more information.

The committee also considered revising two information sheets, Can a Restraining Order to Prevent Elder or Dependent Adult Abuse Help Me? (form EA-100-INFO) and How Can I Respond to a Request for Elder or Dependent Adult Abuse Restraining Orders? (form EA-120-INFO), to add information about the new types of orders, but determined that it is not necessary, as the current information on the information sheets will remain accurate without these revisions. In addition, the elder abuse forms are proposed to be redesigned next year with special attention to the information sheets. Making changes to these forms during this rule-making cycle would not be an efficient use of time or resources.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

The cost and operational impacts from this proposal would be minimal. The forms are currently in existence and there are no requirements for enforcement or additional court hearings as a result of the changes to the forms. Courts may incur minimal costs and operational impacts in training staff and adding the new forms to case management systems.

Request for Specific Comments

The advisory committee is interested in comments on the following:

- Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose?
- Should form EA-100, new item 14, include an option for the petitioner to request either clinical counseling or anger management?
- Should form EA-100, new item 14, include lines asking for the reasons why the petitioner is requesting clinical counseling or an anger management course?

The advisory committee also seeks comments from courts on the following cost and implementation matters:

- What would the implementation requirements be for courts—for example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), changing docket codes in case management systems, or modifying case management systems?
- Would three months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation?
- How well would this proposal work in courts of different sizes?

☐ Check here if there are more items. Put the items and amounts on the attached sheet of paper or form MC-025 and write "Attachment 18—Lawyer's Fees and Costs" for a title.

19 ☐ Possession and Protection of Animals

I ask the court to order the following:

a. ☐ That the person in (1) be given the sole possession, care, and control of the animals listed below, which they own, possess, lease, keep, or hold, or which reside in their household.
(Identify animals by, e.g., type, breed, name, color, sex.)

I request sole possession of the animals because (specify good cause for granting order):

☐ Check here if there is not enough space for your answer. Put your complete answer on the attached sheet of paper or form MC-025 and write "Attachment 19a—Possession of Animals" for a title.

b. ☐ That the person in (2) must stay at least _____ yards away from, and not take, sell, transfer, encumber, conceal, molest, attack, strike, threaten, harm, or otherwise dispose of, the animals listed above.

This is not a Court Order.

Case Number:

20 No Fee to Serve Orders If you want the sheriff or marshal to serve (notify) the person in (2) about the orders for free, ask the court clerk what you need to do.

21 ☐ Additional Orders Requested

I ask the court to make the following additional orders (specify):

☐ Check here if there is not enough space for your answer. Put your complete answer on the attached sheet of paper or form MC-025 and write "Attachment 21—Additional Orders Requested" for a title.

Warning and Notice to the Restrained Person in 2:

You Cannot Have Guns or Firearms

If the court grants the orders in item 10 on page 3 (unless item 10d is checked), you cannot own, have, possess, buy or try to buy, receive or try to receive, or otherwise get guns, other firearms, or ammunition while this Order is in effect. If you do, you can go to jail and pay a $1,000 fine. You must sell to or store with a licensed gun dealer, or turn in to a law enforcement agency, any guns or other firearms that you have or control as stated in item 10. The court will require you to prove that you did so.

Instructions for Law Enforcement

Enforcing the Restraining Order

This order is enforceable by any law enforcement agency that has received the order, is shown a copy of the order, or has verified its existence on the California Restraining and Protective Order System (CARPOS). If the law enforcement agency has not received proof of service on the restrained person, the agency must advise the restrained person of the terms of the order and then must enforce it. Violations of this order are subject to criminal penalties.

Start Date and End Date of Order

This order starts on the date next to the judge's signature on page 5. The order ends on the expiration date in item 4 on page 1.

Arrest Required if Order Is Violated

If an officer has probable cause to believe that the restrained person had notice of the order and has disobeyed the order, the officer must arrest the restrained person. (Pen. Code, §§ 836(c)(1), 13701(b).) A violation of the order may be a violation of Penal Code section 166 or 273.6. Agencies are encouraged to enter violation messages into CARPOS.

Notice/Proof of Service

The law enforcement agency must first determine if the restrained person had notice of the order. Consider the restrained person "served" (given notice) if (Pen. Code, § 836(c)(2)):

- The officer sees a copy of the Proof of Service or confirms that the Proof of Service is on file; or
- The restrained person was informed of the order by an officer.

An officer can obtain information about the contents of the order and proof of service in CARPOS. If proof of service on the restrained person cannot be verified, the agency must advise the restrained person of the terms of the order and then enforce it.

If the Protected Person Contacts the Restrained Person

Even if the protected person invites or consents to contact with the restrained person, this order remains in effect and must be enforced. The protected person cannot be arrested for inviting or consenting to contact with the restrained person. The order can be changed only by another court order. (Pen. Code, § 13710(b).)

This is a Court Order.

Instructions for Law Enforcement

Conflicting Orders—Priority of Enforcement

If more than one restraining order has been issued, the orders must be enforced in the following order of precedence: (See Pen. Code, § 136.2; Fam. Code, §§ 6383(h)(2), 6405(b).)

1. EPO: If one of the orders is an Emergency Protective Order (form EPO-001) and is more restrictive than other restraining or protective orders, it has precedence in enforcement over all other orders.
2. No-Contact Order: If there is no EPO, a no-contact order that is included in a restraining or protective order has precedence over any other restraining or protective order.
3. Criminal Order: If none of the orders includes a no-contact order, a domestic violence protective order issued in a criminal case takes precedence in enforcement over any conflicting civil court order. Any nonconflicting terms of the civil restraining order remain in effect and enforceable.
4. Family, Juvenile, or Civil Order: If more than one family, juvenile, or other civil restraining or protective order has been issued, the one that was issued last must be enforced.

Executive Summary and Origin

The Advisory Committee on Providing Access and Fairness recommends the revision of the Disability Accommodation Request (form MC-410) and the approval of a new information sheet titled How to Request a Disability Accommodation for Court (form MC-410-INFO) to accompany the request form. The request form would be edited for plain language, and redesigned to include visual elements, additional white space to increase readability, an increased font size, and screen reader accessibility to comply with Web Content Accessibility Guidelines 2.0. The new information sheet would include a description of the process for requesting an accommodation, instructions to accompany form MC-410 questions, and help with understanding the court's response.

Background

The Judicial Council initially set forth the process for requesting an accommodation for disability in rule 989.3 of the California Rules of Court and developed the Request for Accommodations by Persons with Disabilities and Response (form MC-410), both of which were effective on January 1, 1996. The rule was amended in 2006, amended and renumbered as rule 1.100 in 2007, and amended again in 2010 and 2017. The most recent amendments, effective July 1, 2017, removed references to the term "impairment" from the rule and the form in response to legislation (Assem. Bill 1709; (Gallagher) Stats. 2016, ch. 94). In the rule and on the form, the term "impairment" was replaced with "medical condition." In the rule, the term "hearing impaired" was replaced with "deaf or hard of hearing."

Section 508 of the federal Rehabilitation Act of 1973 sets forth requirements for digital access that federal agencies must follow in order to ensure access to online resources by those who are blind or have vision loss. One such requirement is the enabling of digital content for use with screen readers, which provide an auditory version of displayed written information. Other requirements address screen displays, the use of colors, and limits on flashing images.

The State of California has developed accessibility standards for state-controlled websites that include compliance with

- Section 508 of the Rehabilitation Act;
- Web Content Accessibility Guidelines 2.0 (WCAG 2.0) at the AA conformance level;[1] and
- Best practices recommended by the California Department of Rehabilitation.[2]

The Proposal

This proposal recommends the redesign of form MC-410, used to request accommodation for disability, and the adoption of a new information sheet, form MC-410-INFO, to accompany and explain the process to request an accommodation.

Form MC-410

Form MC-410 is proposed to be revised as follows:

- Change from standard form caption format to plain language format;
- Change the title of the form to Disability Accommodation Request;
- Remove statement across the top of the form in capital letters reading "APPLICANT'S INFORMATION TO BE KEPT CONFIDENTIAL" and add the standard "CONFIDENTIAL" statement, in accordance with plain language format;
- Use a single, sans serif font (Arial) throughout (from 14 pt. to 18 pt.);
- On the fillable version of the form, ensure that the font used in narrative answer fields is also a sans serif font of appropriate size;
- Remove the following items:
  - Judge (in the caption)
  - Type of proceeding (item 1)
  - Proceedings to be covered (item 2)

[1] The World Wide Web Consortium (W3C) provides information about conformance levels at www.w3.org/TR/UNDERSTANDING-WCAG20/conformance.html.

[2] More information about the state government's process for developing web accessibility standards can be found at https://webstandards.ca.gov/accessibility/.

    - Special requests or anticipated problems (item 6)

- Convert field for “Case Title” to “Case Name (if you know it)”;
- Convert field for “Case Number” to “Case Number (if you know it)”;
- Remove all italics from the form;
- Add calendar icon and language explaining the importance of making the request at least five court business days before the accommodation is needed;
- Remove statement requiring applicant to sign the form under penalty of perjury;
- Add name, relationship, and contact information as optional fields for someone who helped the applicant fill out the form;
- Perform plain language editing of substantive questions regarding the accommodation sought and why the accommodation is needed for the requester’s disability or limitation;
- Add check box to allow a requester to attach additional information;
- Expand the form from one to two pages;
- Add a warning with an icon at the top of page 2 asking applicants to notify the court if the date or time of their court event changes;
- Reorganize the response options for the request to be either “GRANTED” or “DENIED IN WHOLE OR IN PART”;
- Remove “Indefinite period” as an option for the duration of the accommodation; and
- Include space for the court to optionally explain the reason for denial or to include information about partial denials.

These changes have been extensively tested by both users and consumers of the form and adhere to current best practices for plain language, usability, and readability in legal content and forms.

User testing: ADA Coordinators

Court ADA Coordinators were asked to provide their feedback on the revisions to this form through a statewide webinar in August 2019, a small focus group that met several times in fall 2019 to review drafts, and by email in February 2020. The current proposed language was specifically designed to meet the needs of ADA Coordinators who regularly fill out or receive this form to process requests for accommodation.

User testing: Court users with disabilities

During December 2019, revised form MC-410 was tested by the Center for Accessible Technology. The interface was tested for plain language, readability, and usability by users with disabilities and by experts in web accessibility features. A number of changes in wording, flow, and organization were made based on the results of testing. The Center for Accessible Technology also performed some remediation work on the form to enable accessibility features and, once the revised substantive content of the form is approved, the committee will ensure that it is in compliance with WCAG 2.0 at the AA conformance level before posting to the California Courts website.

Form MC-410-INFO

The new information sheet developed to accompany form MC-410 is titled How to Request a Disability Accommodation for Court. The form begins with a brief introduction and an explicit statement that it is meant to help the applicant use form MC-410 to request an accommodation.

The form describes the process for requesting an accommodation under rule 1.100, including that the use of form MC-410 is not required and that there are other ways to make the request.

Based on ADA Coordinator feedback, the information sheet also contains a caution to litigants filing electronically that they should not electronically file the MC-410.

After this introduction, the rest of page 1 and page 2 of the information sheet carefully track each item on page 1 of form MC-410 and provide an explanation of what is expected to be included in each field, including the court name and address, applicant contact information, and information on the accommodation requested and the disability or limitation supporting the need for the accommodation.

Page 3 of the information sheet also attempts to mirror the structure of the court's response provided on form MC-410 and explains the meaning of a "grant" or "denial" of the request. There is also a reference to the link to information about a possible reconsideration of the court's decision and a link to a webpage to help litigants find their court's website and ADA coordinator if they need additional assistance.

Alternatives Considered

A redesign of the form is not statutorily required, although it is important to ensure compliance with WCAG 2.0 with respect to web accessibility of documents and content available on the internet, particularly with regard to documentation that is explicitly intended for use by court users with disabilities. The committee anticipates that the redesigned version of the form will provide a clearer path for court users with disabilities to make requests and understand the court's response to their request. The addition of an information sheet to accompany the request form is also not statutorily required but is intended to facilitate the use of form MC-410.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

This proposal will not result in the need for additional training for court personnel because there have been no substantive changes to the process or the form itself. To the contrary, it is anticipated that this streamlined and redesigned version of the form with accessibility features will make it easier for form users to request accommodations and for form consumers in the courts to process the request and make an appropriate response. Courts that maintain paper versions of the forms will incur the costs of replacing old forms with the revised forms.

Request for Specific Comments

In addition to comments on the proposal as a whole, the advisory committee is interested in comments on the following:

- Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose?
- Does the form accurately reflect the process established in California Rules of Court, rule 1.100?
- Will a two-page form create any issues with local case management systems or existing processes for receiving and responding to requests for accommodations?
- Are there any concerns about the optional collection of information about a person—either a member of court staff or a personal helper—who may have helped a court user fill out the form?

The advisory committee also seeks comments from courts on the following cost and implementation matters:

- Would the proposal provide cost savings? If so, please quantify.
- What would the implementation requirements be for courts—for example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), changing docket codes in case management systems, or modifying case management systems?
- Would three months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation?
- How well would this proposal work in courts of different sizes?

Disability Accommodation Request

MC-410-INFO How to Request a Disability Accommodation for Court

This information sheet is for the MC-410 Disability Accommodation Request.

The purpose of this information sheet is to help you:

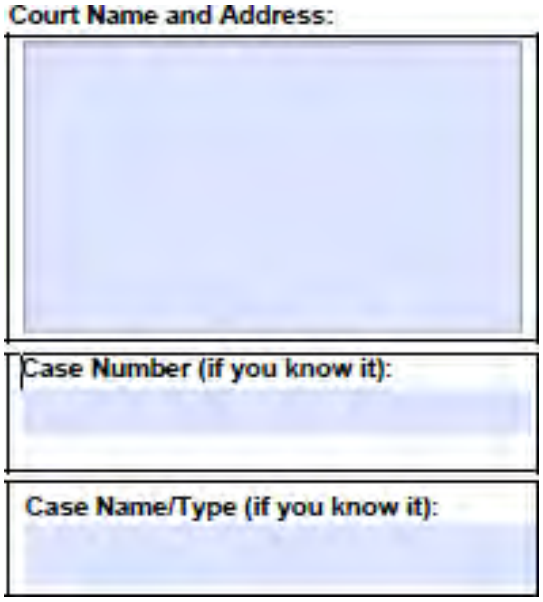
- Ask the court for an accommodation on page 1 of form MC-410.
- Understand the court's response on page 2.

If you have a disability or limitation and need an accommodation while you are at court, one way to ask for an accommodation is to fill out form MC-410 and give it to the ADA Coordinator or designated person (this could be a court clerk, a jury commissioner, or another person). Other ways to ask include calling the court or going in person to ask the ADA Coordinator or designated person for an accommodation.

Please note: If you are submitting papers to the court electronically, through electronic filing, you must not include form MC-410 with your filing. Form MC-410 is a confidential form that is not part of the case file. The form must be given to the ADA Coordinator or designated person in your court.

Deadline: If possible, make this request at least 5 days (when court is open) before you need the accommodation.

Page 1 of form MC-410 asks for the information the court needs to understand and make a decision about your request.



Court Name and Address:

Write the name and address of your court. If you do not know the court address, ask the ADA Coordinator for help.

Case Number (if you know it):

If you have a case number, write it here.

Case Name/Type (if you know it):

If you know the name of your case, write it here.

Example: Guardianship of Jane Doe

1 Your information

Write your name, address, telephone number, and email address where the court can reach you in the near future.

2 How are you involved in the case?

Check the box that describes who you are: a juror, party, witness, or lawyer. If you are someone else, mark "Other" and explain on the line.

3 When and where do you need the accommodation?

Tell the court the dates and times when you will need the accommodation in court and where in the courthouse you will be.

4 What accommodation do you need at the court?

Write down the accommodation you are requesting.
Example: ASL Interpreter

5 Why do you need this accommodation to assist you in court?

Explain to the court what you cannot do and how the accommodation you are requesting will help you participate in court.

Example: I am hard of hearing and can't hear like everybody else. I need an assistive listening device to hear what is going on in court.

There is a check box under this question that you can check if you plan to attach additional information about your request to the form.

Signatures

- Write today's date, type or print your name, and sign on the signature line next to the arrow.
- If someone helped you fill out the form and is willing to answer questions about the request, they can print their name, indicate their relationship to you, and provide a phone number and email address where the court can reach them. This is optional.

The court will respond to your request by telling you in person, calling you on the phone, or sending you a letter or an email.

Page 2 of form MC-410 is where the court responds to your request.

Important! If your case is delayed or dismissed after you make your request, please contact the court at the phone number or email address provided.

- The court will check one of two boxes. Either:

  ✓ Your Request is GRANTED

  If your request is granted, the court will tell you when the accommodation will be provided in the line below.

  -OR-

  ✓ Your Request is DENIED IN WHOLE OR IN PART

  If your request is denied in whole or in part, the court will tell you why it is being denied. If the court offers you a different accommodation, it will tell you what accommodation will be provided and when the accommodation will be provided.

- If the court provides additional information about the decision, it will check that box and attach the information to the form.

- Underneath the court's signature line, the court enters a date telling you when the court responded to the request. The court may respond by telling you in person, calling you on the phone, or by sending you a letter or an email.

- At the bottom of the page, there is a link to information about how to ask for a review of the court's decision.

INVITATION TO COMMENT

SPR20-28

Title Judicial Branch Technology: Electronic Filer Need Not Consent to Electronic Service	Action Requested Review and submit comments by June 9, 2020
Proposed Rules, Forms, Standards, or Statutes Amend Cal. Rules of Court, rule 2.255	Proposed Effective Date January 1, 2021
Proposed by Information Technology Advisory Committee Hon. Sheila F. Hanson, Chair	Contact Andrea L. Jaramillo, 916-263-0991 andrea.jaramillo@jud.ca.gov

Executive Summary and Origin

The Information Technology Advisory Committee recommends the Judicial Council amend rule 2.255 of the California Rules of Court. The purpose of the proposed amendment is to require an electronic filing service provider to allow an electronic filer to proceed with an electronic filing even if the electronic filer does not consent to receive electronic service. The proposal originated with comments received from the Superior Court of Orange County and the Joint Rules Subcommittee of the Trial Court Presiding Judges Advisory Committee and Court Executives Advisory Committee.

Background

Code of Civil Procedure section 1010.6 (§ 1010.6) provides statutory authority for electronic filing and service. Courts may (1) permit electronic service by local rule, or (2) require electronic service by local rule or court order. (§ 1010.6(b)–(d).)

In 2017, the Legislature amended section 1010.6 to state that for cases filed on or after January 1, 2019, electronic service was "not authorized unless a party or other person has expressly consented to receive electronic service in that specific action" unless electronic service was required by local rule or court order. Rule 2.251(b) of the California Rules of Court[1] had previously allowed the act of electronic filing alone to be evidence of consent to receive electronic service for represented persons, but the amendments to section 1010.6 eliminated this option. Section 1010.6 does, however, allow a person to provide express consent electronically by "manifesting affirmative consent through electronic means with the court or the court's electronic filing service provider, and concurrently providing the party's electronic address with that consent for the purpose of receiving electronic service." (§ 1010.6(a)(2)(A)(ii).)

The Legislature did not provide a definition or meaning for "manifest affirmative consent through electronic means." To fill this gap, the Judicial Council amended rule 2.251(b) to allow an electronic filer to consent by either filing a form or agreeing to a term with an electronic filing service provider (EFSP) that "clearly states that agreement constitutes consent" to receive electronic service. (Cal. Rules of Court, rule 2.251(b)(1)(B)(i).) The rules allow, but do not require, an EFSP to include such a term.

The Proposal

The proposed rule would require an EFSP that includes a term for the electronic filer's consent to electronic service to allow an electronic filer to proceed with an electronic filing even if the electronic filer does not agree to that term. For example, if an EFSP had a check box that an electronic filer could click to agree to electronic service, the proposed rule would require the EFSP to allow the electronic filer to proceed with the electronic filing even if the electronic filer did not click on the check box. The proposal may improve access to electronic filing by ensuring that filers are able to file electronically even if they choose not to receive electronic service.

The proposed rule would apply only to electronic service by express consent. Accordingly, it would not apply to electronic service required by local rule or court order.

Alternatives Considered

The committee considered the alternative of making no change, but found the proposal preferable as it may reduce barriers to electronic filing by ensuring electronic filers are able to opt out of electronic service when electronic service is not otherwise required by the court. In considering the options, the committee agreed with comments from the Superior Court of Orange County and the Joint Rules Subcommittee of the Trial Court Presiding Judges Advisory Committee and Court Executives Advisory Committee that clarification was needed on the ability of electronic filers to opt out.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

It is not expected that the proposal will have significant impact on the courts different from any impacts that may exist as a result of the statutory requirement for persons to provide express consent to electronic service. It is expected that the proposal will ensure litigants always have the option to electronically file at courts where electronic filing is permitted. EFSPs may be impacted, but they are not required to include a term allowing electronic filers to consent to electronic service through the EFSP.

Request for Specific Comments

In addition to comments on the proposal as a whole, the advisory committee is interested in comments on the following:

- Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose?
- Should electronic filers be able to opt out of electronic service? Why or why not?
- For EFSPs, is the proposal feasible?

The advisory committee also seeks comments from courts on the following cost and implementation matters:

- Would the proposal provide cost savings? If so, please quantify.
- Would there be implementation requirements for courts? If so, what would they be—for example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), or modifying case management systems?

Executive Summary and Origin

The Tribal Court–State Court Forum and the Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee recommend effective January 1, 2021, amending rule 5.514 and adopting a new mandatory form to be used to have a judge witness the consent of an Indian parent or custodian to the temporary custodial placement of an Indian child in accordance with section 1913 of title 25 of the United States Code, 25 Code of Federal Regulations parts 23.125–23.127, and Welfare and Institutions Code section 16507.4(b)(3).

Background

The Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA) sets out certain requirements for the validity of an Indian parent or custodian's consent to the foster care placement of or termination of parental rights to an Indian child.[1] Prior to the enactment of comprehensive federal ICWA regulations in 2016, it had been understood that there was no actual "foster care placement" being made for the purposes of ICWA until the court made an order granting care and custody of the child to someone other than the child's Indian parent or custodian. Thus, the voluntary consent provisions of ICWA had only been implemented in relation to the termination of parental rights in the Parent of Indian Child Agrees to End Parental Rights (form ADOPT-225). In 2018 the California Legislature adopted Assembly Bill 3176[2], which amended various provisions of the Welfare and Institutions Code to align California law with the requirements of the federal ICWA regulations. AB 3176 included various revisions to section 16507.4(b)(3) of the Welfare and Institutions Code governing voluntary out-of-home placements of a minor that have not been adjudicated by the juvenile court. In particular, AB 3176 confirmed that voluntary out-of-home placements under section 16507.4(b)(3) must comply with the consent requirements of ICWA whenever an Indian child is involved.

[1] Set out in 25 U.S.C. § 1913.

The Proposal

Due to the legal developments discussed above, there is a need to create a process and form for a judge to witness the consent of the parent of an Indian child to the child's temporary custody in accordance with the requirements of ICWA. Tribal advocates have indicated that the lack of a form for the consent of an Indian parent or custodian to the temporary custody of an Indian child—that could be used in guardianship proceedings under the Probate Code—is also a problem. Tribal advocates have been asked to draft forms that meet the ICWA requirements but are uncomfortable doing so as they are not always familiar with California law. A form that could be used across all case types governed by ICWA would be useful to litigants and the courts.

The proposal would amend rule 5.514(b) of the California Rules of Court, which requires courts to establish intake procedures in juvenile cases that include a program for informal supervision by requiring these procedures to include a process for a judge to witness the consent of an Indian parent or custodian consistent with the requirements of ICWA, and adopt a new form, Parent or Custodian of Indian Child Agrees to Temporary Custody (form ICWA-101).

Alternatives Considered

The forum and committees considered limiting the proposal only to juvenile cases governed by Welfare and Institutions Code section 16507.4(b)(3) but determined that a form applicable across all case types governed by ICWA would be useful to litigants and the courts.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

There may be some fiscal impact in implementing the new rule and form; however, it is required to comply with the law.

[2] Waldron: Stats. 2018, ch. 833

Request for Specific Comments

In addition to comments on the proposal as a whole, the advisory committees and forum are interested in comments on the following:

- Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose?
- Does the proposed form cover all of the topics that should be covered?
- In the context of a juvenile case, would the completed form be retained in the agency file or by the court? Should this be clarified in the rule itself?
- If the form is retained by the court, would it be discoverable under rule 10.500?
- How can the judge certify (as required by federal law) that the form is fully understood by the parent or Indian custodian? Does an attorney need to be appointed for the parent?
- The federal law states that the judge's certification include that the document was "executed in writing and recorded before a judge." Is the term "recorded" appropriate in the California context, or is it sufficient that the form be executed before the judge?
- Should the specific procedures of the process for taking the consent be set out in detail in the rule, or should each court retain discretion to establish its own process?

The advisory committees and forum also seek comments from courts on the following cost and implementation matters:

- Would the proposal provide cost savings? If so, please quantify.
- What would the implementation requirements be for courts—for example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), changing docket codes in case management systems, or modifying case management systems?
- Would 3 months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation?
- How well would this proposal work in courts of different sizes?

Rule 5.514 of the California Rules of Court would be amended, effective January 1, 2021, to read:

Rule 5.514. Intake; guidelines

(a) Role of juvenile court

It is the duty of the presiding judge of the juvenile court to initiate meetings and cooperate with the probation department, welfare department, prosecuting attorney, law enforcement, and other persons and agencies performing an intake function. The goal of the intake meetings is to establish and maintain a fair and efficient intake program designed to promote swift and objective evaluation of the circumstances of any referral and to pursue an appropriate course of action.

(b) Purpose of intake program

The intake program must be designed to:

(1) Provide for settlement at intake of:

(A) Matters over which the juvenile court has no jurisdiction;

(B) Matters in which there is insufficient evidence to support a petition; and

(C) Matters that are suitable for referral to a nonjudicial agency or program available in the community;

(2) Provide for a program of informal supervision of the child under sections 301 and 654;

(3) Establish a process for a judge to witness the consent of an Indian parent or custodian to a placement of an Indian child under section 16507.4(b) before a judge in accordance with section 16507.4(b)(3) that ensures that the placement is consistent with the federal Indian Child Welfare Act and corresponding state law and that all of the rights and protections of the Indian parent are respected, using Parent or Custodian of Indian Child Agrees to Temporary Custody (form ICWA-101); and

(~~3~~4) Provide for the commencement of proceedings in the juvenile court only when necessary for the welfare of the child or protection of the public.

Executive Summary and Origin

The Tribal Court–State Court Forum and the Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee recommend revising rule 5.522 of the California Rules of Court and approving a new optional form and instructions sheet for that form, effective January 1, 2021, to be used by an Indian child's tribe to provide information to the court on issues where consultation with the child's tribe is required by the Indian Child Welfare Act, and the tribe's position on these issues in cases governed by the Indian Child Welfare Act. This proposal originated with comments from tribal advocates and attorneys.

Background

Tribal Information Sheet

California is home to more people of Indian ancestry than any other state in the nation. Currently, 109 tribes are federally recognized in California, a number second only to the number of tribes in the state of Alaska. California's Indian population includes a large number of people affiliated with out-of-state tribes or tribes whose territories and primary headquarters are based in neighboring states, such as the Washoe, Fort Mojave, Chemehuevi, Colorado River, and Quechan tribes.[1] Tribes within California are often located in remote areas, often making travel to court locations burdensome. Tribal resources and staffing vary greatly, but many tribes have only one full-time staff person devoted to child welfare cases, and that individual may have active cases in multiple counties and states. Under the federal Indian Child Welfare Act and corresponding California statutes, an Indian child's tribe has a right to participate in cases governed by ICWA, and proper implementation of and compliance with ICWA involves tribal input on a number of key issues. However, as noted in ICWA Compliance Task Force: Report to the California Attorney General's Bureau of Children's Justice (2017), many tribes find it difficult to exercise their right to fully participate in ICWA cases. [2] Of particular concern are the rights of "lower-income tribes, as they often do not have resources to retain legal counsel, travel and be present at all hearings or even pay fees associated with telephonic appearances." If a tribe intervenes in a case, the tribe becomes a full party. Rule 5.534(e) recognizes various rights of a tribal representative, including the right to submit written reports and recommendations to the court even if the tribe does not intervene in the case; however, tribes located out of state or unrepresented by counsel may be unfamiliar with California court procedures, and an optional form may encourage them to exercise their right to submit information more often.

If the tribe's position on key ICWA issues is unknown as a case progresses, this lack of clarity can have negative consequences on the case. For instance, if the court is unaware of the tribe's position on permanency planning until after reunification services have been terminated, unnecessary conflicts and disruptions may occur during placement.

California has a high number of appeals related to the Indian Child Welfare Act.[3] Some of these appeals might be avoided if tribal input could be consistently obtained throughout the life of a case.

The Proposal

The proposal seeks to remedy the problem created by these barriers to tribal input on key ICWA issues by establishing the optional Tribal Information Form (form ICWA-100) and its corresponding instruction sheet for optional use by an Indian child's tribe to submit information to the court on key issues and amending rule 5.552 to authorize an Indian tribe to file this form and other documents by fax. The form is similar to the existing Caregiver Information Form (form JV-290).

[3] In 2016, California had 114 appeals related to ICWA. (Prof. Kathryn E. Fort, "2016 ICWA Appellate Cases by the Numbers" Turtle Talk [Indigenous Law and Policy Center blog], Michigan State University College of Law, Jan. 4, 2017, https://turtletalk.wordpress.com/2017/01/04/2016-icwa-appellate-cases-by-the-numbers/).

Tribes would not be required to use this form. However, by removing barriers to tribal participation in ICWA cases and facilitating tribal input on key issues, the proposal should reduce delays and appeals in ICWA cases and improve ICWA compliance.

Alternatives Considered

The committees and forum considered taking no action but determined that the creation of the optional Tribal Information Form would be of significant benefit to the courts, tribes, and justice partners. Education, training, guidelines, or best practices are not viable alternatives to the creation of an optional form because ICWA not only applies in different case types, but it often involves out-of-state tribes that may have limited familiarity with California law and practice. Tribes may be involved in cases in different counties arising in probate, family, or juvenile court. A consistent, simple form for statewide use will facilitate tribal participation in all these cases.

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

Incorporating a new form into court and justice partner systems may cause a fiscal impact. Any such impact will likely be outweighed by a reduction in delays, continuances, and appeals by improving tribal participation throughout the life of an ICWA case.

Request for Specific Comments

In addition to comments on the proposal as a whole, the advisory committees and forum are interested in comments on the following:

- Does the proposal appropriately address the stated purpose?
- Does the proposed form address all the issues that should be covered in a way that will facilitate tribal input?

The advisory committees and form also seek comments from courts on the following cost and implementation matters:

- Would the proposal provide cost savings? If so, please quantify.
- What would the implementation requirements be for courts—for example, training staff (please identify position and expected hours of training), revising processes and procedures (please describe), changing docket codes in case management systems, or modifying case management systems?
- Would three months from Judicial Council approval of this proposal until its effective date provide sufficient time for implementation?
- How well would this proposal work in courts of different sizes?

INSTRUCTION SHEET FOR TRIBAL INFORMATION FORM

Background

1. What is the Tribal Information Form? The Tribal Information Form, (form ICWA-100), is intended to provide an easily accessible way for an Indian child's tribe to provide information to the court about the case and the tribe's views on the case.
2. When does it need to be filled out and filed? The Tribal Information Form is an optional form. If you choose to use it, fill it out and file it with the court, along with eight copies, at least five calendar days before the hearing, or mail it and eight copies to the court for filing at least seven calendar days before the hearing. Follow the instructions below. Do not wait until the day of the court hearing to file the form.

How to Fill Out Form ICWA-100

1. Complete the caption. These are the boxes at the top of the page.
   - Court name, street address, and mailing address. Write the name of the county where the court is located and the street and mailing address of the court. If you do not know the name and address of the court, look on the notice of the court hearing you received in the mail or go to www.courts.ca.gov/find-my-court.htm to find the local court in your county. For branch name, write "Juvenile".
   - Child's Name. Write the child's first and last names.
   - Hearing Date and Time. Write the hearing date and time. Ask the social worker, if you do not have this information.
   - Case Number. This number is on the notice of the court hearing you received in the mail. If you do not have the number, ask the child's social worker or attorney for the number. If the case involves brothers and sisters (siblings), there may be more than one case number. Be sure to use a separate form and the correct number for each child.
2. Complete the information about the child and about the tribe and tribal representative.
   - Item 1. Fill in the child's first and last names, date of birth, and age.
   - Item 2. Complete the information about the tribe.
3. Complete items 4–9 about the case. For each question, check the box to indicate whether there is new information since the last hearing. Briefly write new information in the appropriate section of the form.
   - Item 4. Provide information on the communication between the agency/petitioner and the tribe since the last hearing.
   - Item 5. Provide information about case planning, services and active efforts.
   - Item 6. Provide information about the child's placement.
   - Item 7. Provide information about the appropriate concurrent and permanent plan for the child.
   - Item 8. Provide other information the tribe wants to convey to the court.
4. Add any attachments. Check the box in item 9 to add additional pages.
5. Sign and date the form. On the bottom of page 2, write the date, type or print your name, and sign your name.

What to Do With the Form After You Have Filled It Out

1. Make copies. Tribal representatives should make eight or more copies of completed form ICWA-100 and any attachments.
2. If you choose to file the form in person. At least five calendar days before the hearing date, bring the original form and the recommended eight copies to the court clerk's office at the courthouse where the hearing will be held. Ask the clerk to file the form for you. Keep one copy of the date-stamped form for yourself. The clerk is responsible for providing the form to all parties and completing and filing the proof of service form.
3. If you choose to file the form by mail. At least seven calendar days before the hearing date, mail the original form and all but one of the copies to the court clerk's office at the courthouse where the hearing will be held. Put two stamps on the envelope. Include a note indicating "For filing and service" and including the case number. The clerk is responsible for providing the form to all parties and completing and filing the proof of service form.
4. Confirm the hearing date, time, and place. If you plan to attend the hearing, call the social worker to confirm the hearing date, time, and courtroom.

What to Do on the Hearing Day

1. Bring extra copies of the form. If you decide to attend the hearing, it is suggested that you make additional copies of the form and any attachments to provide to anyone at the hearing who did not receive them.
2. Comments in court. If you choose to attend the hearing, any comments you make should be short, factual, and based on your own observations. You may raise your hand to let the judge know you would like to speak, or let the courtroom clerk, deputy or bailiff know before the hearing.

Executive Summary and Origin

The Tribal Court–State Court Forum and the Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee recommend that the Judicial Council amend rules 5.9, 5.482, and 5.531 of the California Rules of Court, effective January 1, 2021, to permit an Indian child's tribe to participate by telephone or other computerized remote means in any hearing in a proceeding governed by the Indian Child Welfare Act, as required by section 224.2(k) of the Welfare and Institutions Code.

Background

On October 2, 2019, Governor Newsom signed Assembly Bill No. 686.[1] This bill amended section 224.2 of the Welfare and Institutions Code by adding subdivision (k), as follows:

> (k) The Judicial Council, by July 1, 2021, shall adopt rules of court to allow for telephonic or other remote appearance options by an Indian child's tribe in proceedings where the federal Indian Child Welfare Act of 1978 (25 U.S.C. Sec.

[1] Waldron; Stats. 2019, ch. 434 available at: http://leginfo.legislature.ca.gov/faces/billNavClient.xhtml?bill_id=201920200AB686

1901 et seq.) may apply. Telephonic or other computerized remote access for court appearances established under this subdivision shall not be subject to fees.

The Proposal

The proposal would implement the requirements of AB 686 by amending rules 5.9, 5.482, and 5.531 to require courts to permit an Indian child's tribe to appear at any hearing by telephone or other computerized remote means in any proceeding governed by ICWA and further stipulating that no fee could be charged to the tribe for this remote appearance.

Specifically, the proposal would adopt new subdivision (g) of rule 5.482 and amend rules 5.9(a) and 5.531(b) (governing appearances by telephone in juvenile cases) to cross-reference rule 5.482(g).

The proposed amendments would allow courts flexibility to implement the remote appearance requirements in the manner consistent with court capacity and contractual obligations (such as court call). It does not require courts to adopt any specific technology so long as some form of remote option for effective tribal participation is provided.

Alternatives Considered

The forum and committee considered whether the requirements of new Welfare and Institutions Code section 224.2(k) applied only in juvenile cases or more broadly to all case types governed by ICWA. They concluded that broad application to all ICWA case types was appropriate. The provisions in Welfare and Institutions Code sections 224.2 through 224.6 are of general application to all ICWA case types and are incorporated by reference in the Family and Probate Codes. The forum and committee also noted that the legislative counsel's digest for AB 686 states that the bill "…would require the Judicial Council to establish a rule of court that would authorize the use of telephonic or other remote access by an Indian child's tribe in proceedings where ICWA applies."

Fiscal and Operational Impacts

There may be fiscal and operational impacts. Nevertheless, the Legislature has mandated that tribes be permitted to appear remotely at no charge in ICWA cases. The proposed language of rule 5.531 allows courts flexibility in meeting the requirements. The method of appearance may be determined by the court consistent with court capacity and contractual obligation, as long as some method of effective remote appearance and participation is provided.

Request for Specific Comments

In addition to comments on the proposal as a whole, the forum and advisory committees are interested in comments on the following:

The forum and advisory committees also seek comments from courts on the following cost and implementation matters:

- Would the proposal provide cost savings? If so, please quantify.
