

B. F. SISK COURTHOUSE – FRESNO, CALIFORNIA

The building was constructed in 1967 for the federal government, and is a reinforced concrete structure. It has five floors for office and courtroom space with a basement for utility purposes. The typical floor plate dimension is 216' x 144', the gross building area excluding the penthouse air handler space and interstitial walkways is about 186,624 sq. ft. The government is conveying title over to the State of California for superior court use.

The work would include demolishing the entire interior partitions for floors one through five, with the exception of the stairways and elevator core. Major interior renovation would include building out sixteen new courtrooms and support offices. Exterior work is limited in scope and the building façade would not change. New or major improvements would be made to the life safety, mechanical, electrical, voice-data and security systems. Structural improvements would include an incremental increase to the seismic rating based on the California DSA rating system.

The following parts of this attachment include a site plan and existing floor plans, plus preliminary floor plans at the schematic design phase.
